KEEPING AN EYE ON MOVES MADE BY SOVIETS Candidates Are Busy Preparing For Political Battle

Chiefs Continue Their Tours In Lower Provinces

Premier King, Following Mass Meeting at Halifax Last Night, Left This Morning for Annapolis Valley, and After Speaking at Kentville Will Journey to Charlottetown, Where He Is Scheduled to Appear Tomorrow Night—Mr. Meighen Took Part Yesterday in Ceremonies at Rexton, N.B., Where a Memorial Cairn Was Unveiled in Honor of Late Hon. Bonar Law—Last Night He Addressed a Meeting at Chatham, N.B., and This Morning Proceeded to Prince Edward Island.

(Associated Press Despatch)

PREMIER JOHN OLIVER CRITICIZES MR. MEIGHEN

(Special To The Record)

VICTORIA, B.C., Sept. 18.—Premier John Oliver criticizes Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader, who is reported to have said in Halifax on Monday that the freight rate reductions secured by the west on grain and flour are "utterly indefensible."

"If the Conservative leader and his following really believed that the recent legislation was discriminatory in its effect," said Mr. Oliver, "why did they not seek to amend the legislation during the course of its passage through parliament."

"The plain fact is that either with or without investigation and to the extent that any words of his could affect the electors of western Canada, Mr. Meighen has sacrificed his western supporters in an effort to win favor in the Maritime Provinces."

"I think Mr. Meighen's utterances were simply trying to square himself with the position taken by the Montreal Board of Trade and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company in their application for rescinding the recent order of the Board of Railway Commissioners applying Crow's Next Pass rates to the west-bound movement of grain and flour. It would appear to me that if the extending rates on grain and flour discriminated against the Maritime Provinces or any other part of Canada, that the proper course of action for the complainant was to make application to the Board of Railway Commissioners for an order to remove that discrimination, that is, the lawful course of procedure, the course followed by the government of British Columbia and that course is open to the Maritime Provinces."

Peaceful Development Of China Absolute Certainty Unless Development Deflected By Some Foreign Agency Into Militarism

Chinese Minister to United States Declares that Whole of Chinese Culture Rests in Belief in Power and Appeal of Moral Force—Explains Present Situation in China.

(Associated Press Despatch)

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 18.—Dr. Sao Ke Alfred Sze, Chinese Minister to the United States, told the opening session of an unofficial conference on Chinese-American relations here last night that "fortunately for the peace and security of the world, the peaceful development of China and her millions is an absolute certainty unless that development is deflected by foreign agency into channels of militarism."

The whole of Chinese culture rests in the belief in power and appeal of moral force, he said. The Chinese minister explained that due to domestic conditions, which in large measure have been the outcome of her attempt to establish a republican form of government, China is in a state of political transition, and that while working out the best course to pursue, she is watching the politics of other and stronger powers with regard to herself.

Dr. Sze expressed the crux of the situation in China, so far as foreign powers are directly concerned, as hinging principally on two facts: The first of these facts is that by means of treaties exacted of China and various extensions beyond treaty sanction, the nationals of these powers, living in China having a status which in a large measure removes them from control of the laws and judicial tribunals of China. The second of these facts is that the government of China is denied the right to determine its own tariff policies.

WILL SHORTLY REGARD COAL AS A RAW MATERIAL

Claims that Fuel Produced Will Be Smokeless and Cheaper Than Coal.

(Associated Press Despatch)

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18.—Householders as well as industrial plants will be using the residue from coal, after the gases and oils have been distilled for fuel, in a few years; John G. Worker, assistant to the president of the American Engineering Company, told the Association of Iron and Steel Electrical Engineers today. "Only a few years hence," said Mr. Worker, in addressing the convention, "we will regard coal as a raw material or ore from which to manufacture benzol and oils, chemical for fertilizers, gas and solid fuel. The iron and steel industry, using as it does around 75,000,000 tons of coal a year, may find it profitable to add 'fuel manufacture' to its activities."

Mr. Worker said extensive experiments had been made in the distillation of coal and that fuel produced in this way for domestic and factory consumption would be smokeless and cheaper than coal. He added that the oils obtained would insure an adequate supply of fuel for motor vehicles.

A SUCCESSFUL FAIR CLOSED AT COOKSHIRE

Horse and Cattle Parades Repeated—Boys' Judging Competitions Held—Free-for-All and One Other Race Run.

(Special to the Record)

COOKSHIRE, QUE., Sept. 18.—The annual Fair of Compton County Agricultural Society, Number One, came to an end last evening, after a very successful three days. Weather conditions throughout the fair could not be called ideal, as it was somewhat cold and damp. However, little rain fell in the afternoon, a fact which went far towards making the exhibition a success. The whole result of the show this year was far above those of the several previous years, when wet weather tended to make a failure of proceedings, and officials have every reason to be congratulated on the program put on in 1925.

A large crowd was on hand again yesterday, including a number of directors, honorary officers and distinguished guests. The important work of judging which was begun on Tuesday and continued throughout Wednesday, was concluded, classes being judged yesterday consisting of horses and poultry. Entries in both these were large and of a high order, many fine horses being especially commented on. An important part of yesterday's work was the judging of the boys' calf feeding and beef contests. Clubs of Compton County, a work which everyone is unanimous in declaring to be perhaps the greatest and most useful part of fairs held in this province.

The midway was in full swing soon after noon and was a popular part of the fair. At night moving pictures were shown before the grand stand, as was the case the two previous evenings.

The town band of Cookshire was again in attendance on the grand stand in the afternoon, and an interesting couple of hours provided for the spectators, events consisting of two races of several heats each, horse and cattle parades, repetition of Wednesday's parade of "horribles" and various contests and races. The live stock parade was an event of interest as well as value, serving as the outstanding feature of the fair, as is the rule in all country fairs. The march-past of comical "get-ups" forming "horribles," was an amusing part.

Results of Judging. The ladies' department of the main building was divided into two sections, cooking and fancy work, both being excellent in the number and quality of entries. Amongst the chief prize-winners in fancy work were Miss E. Rudd, Mrs. L.H. Martin and Mrs. W. Aulis, of Bury; Miss Nellie Birch and Miss E.M. Pocock, of Hillhurst; Mrs. E.M. Rolfe and Miss A. French, of Eaton Corner; and Mrs. E. Roy, Mrs. H. S. Osgood, Mrs. C. McCrea, Mrs. H. B. Worby, Miss P. French, Miss E. Sherman, Miss A. Verrette, Miss A. Noble, Miss A. Jackson, Miss P. Stevenson, Mrs. W. G. Frizzle, Mrs. G. Hodge, Miss G. Cromwell and Mrs. G. Locke, of Cookshire.

Mrs. C. Sawyer, of Cookshire, won Ogilvie's special prize in the cooking section. Other prize-winners were: Mrs. B. E. Trombly, of Sawyerville; Mrs. A. E. French, of Flanders; Mrs. A. E. Day, of Compton, and Mrs. H. E. Chaddock, of Cookshire.

In the children's department the principal prize-winners were Miss Grace Martin, Miss Nellie Bailey and Miss Helen Noonan. Those who won first prizes in horticulture included Mrs. J. G. Hough, G. Halliday and Mrs. B. E. Trombly, of Sawyerville; E. E. Taylor, E. A. Labonte, W. Hodgman, G. E. Picard, Mrs. H. A. Smith, C. Lefebvre and G. Chaddock, of Birchton; A. H. W. Bailey, C. C. Fraser, M. Kirby, Mrs. G. Hodge, Mrs. MacLean, R. E. French, M. C. P. Fraser, Mrs. W. Edwards, A. W. Pratt, Mrs. W. Trux, Mrs. G. Learned, Mrs. H. A. Stevenson, J. A. M. Rankin and A. H. Goff of Cookshire; P. Pierce, of Bulwer; A. W. Day, of Compton; Mrs. H. H. Rogers and C. McGilton, of Eaton Corner, and Mrs. L. H. Martin, of Bury.

Yesterday's Racing. The harness racing card yesterday furnished quite keen competition. The feature event was the free-for-all, run for the largest purse, $200 at the three days' races, while considerable interest was taken in the farmers' buggy race over a distance.

CLAIM OWNERS NOT LIVING UP TO AGREEMENT

Dispute Between Miners and Operators Again Referred to Downing Street for Mediation.

(Associated Press Despatch)

LONDON, Sept. 18.—The wage dispute between the coal mine operators and the miners which only a few weeks ago threatened to culminate in a nation wide strike again has been referred to Downing Street for mediation. During the last crisis Premier Baldwin averted trouble by guaranteeing a subsidy to the mine-owners to enable them to continue paying the present wage of their workers for another nine months.

Now a different interpretation of this settlement has caused another disagreement. A meeting between government representatives and the operators and miners is deadlocked over an understanding of the terms of the agreement, and the miners have decided to take the matter to government headquarters. It is understood that the miners allege that the owners are infringing on their agreement not to cut the wages of the men.

NEWSPAPER SPACE AND POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS

(Extract from address by E. H. Macklin, publisher of Winnipeg Free Press, before the Western Daily Newspaper Convention.)

"Advertising has proven itself to be the most honest and effective method of disseminating those opinions which form the basis of political campaigns. There was a time when every newspaper was the life-blood organ of one political faction or another. When a campaign or an election came around the newspapers were expected to give, and would give, columns upon columns of space to the speeches, statements and claims of those who favored the party to which the newspaper was friendly, whereas the speakers on the other side of the fence could get little or no recognition."

"Today, the management of any self-respecting newspaper can offer any set of protagonists a much better method of campaign."

"To those people the publisher of today says: 'Buy a page of space, print your own arguments and sign your name to them.' This offer can be made with the confidence born of experience, that the publicity thus gained will carry more weight, be more favorably received and be far more effective than the use of any less direct method."

"The possibilities of this kind of advertising have never been fully explored; governments, Federal, Provincial and Municipal, could advantageously employ newspaper space to present the figures and reports of their administrations, to keep their constituencies informed as to the progress and policies of the government, and for the dissemination of information in the public welfare."

URGE STATE OWNERSHIP OF BRITISH LANDS

Recommend State Credit and State Guaranteed Security for Those Who Use Land.

(Associated Press Despatch)

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Opening the Liberal land campaign at Exeter yesterday, David Lloyd George said that the unofficial committee of enquiry over which he presided, and which had been sitting for about two years, had concluded that it was useless to attempt to develop agriculture as long as the existing system of agricultural tenure was preserved. Landlordism, he declared, had broken down, he declared, and the committee's report, which will not be published until the middle of October, proposed that the state should resume ownership of the land for the purpose of giving the cultivator the necessary security. The landlord should be compensated on the basis of present building value by annual payments. There should be state credit and state guaranteed security for those who owned the land. The annuities to be paid to the present owners must allow of a living wage for the workers and an adequate return for the good cultivator.

USTER'S GREAT DISAPPOINTMENT

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The selfish still more selfish grow.

I don't know why, but it is so.

—Old Mother Nature.

Buster Bear is a great hand to bowl around at night, but the night after his feast on honey from the tree which had been split open by lightning, Buster didn't roam about. He slept. There is nothing like a full stomach to make one sleep, unless that stomach happens to be too full. Buster did a lot of dreaming, but he slept just the same. When he awoke the next morning, jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun was already high up in the blue, blue sky. Some how Buster didn't feel hungry. He didn't feel hungry enough to get up. He just lay there on his comfortable bed and dreamed day dreams instead of night dreams.

It was afternoon before Buster felt his appetite returning. "I'll go finish that honey," said Buster. "My, two feasts of honey! Never was I so lucky before. Those bees must have been using that tree for years."

Buster yawned and stretched and stretched and yawned, licked his chops, and finally started off through the Green Forest. He headed straight for that tree which had been struck by lightning. When he got there he stopped and sniffed at the piece on the ground from which he had taken all the honey the day before. Then, with his mouth once more beginning to water, he started up that tree. His appetite was back now. The nearer he got to that opening in the tree the greater his appetite became. He was quite ready to stuff himself as greedily as he had done the day before.

But when he reached the place where he had feasted so heartily the day before a sad surprise awaited him. The honey was gone. Oh, there was some there, but only enough to aggravate him. He plunged his arm way down expecting to bring up a paw full of dripping comb. He got some comb, but it wasn't dripping. It was quite empty. There was only enough to give him a taste and make him want more.

"Someone has stolen my honey," growled Buster in his deepest most rumbling, grumbly growl. "Someone has dared to steal my honey."

"Buzz-z-z-z-z-z," said a voice right in Buster's ear, "buzz-z-z-z-z-z. Who's honey did you say it was?"

"I said it was mine," snapped Buster.

"Why not tell the truth, Buster Bear?" buzzed that voice in his ear again. "You know it wasn't your honey. You know it was my honey, and the honey of my relatives. You know very well it was ours, for you know that we made it and hid it here. When you took it you took what didn't belong to you. It was our honey and what you left we have taken away."

Y.W.C.A. CAMPAIGN

The committee on the Y.W.C.A. Campaign for funds are hard at work and doing all possible to reach the objective. This objective, $3,000 has been termed as "too modest," but it is the amount the Board calculated that the Y. W. must have and if it can be reached then the Y.W. will be enabled to go on meeting its running expenses, otherwise retrenchments in some ways will have to be made.

Several cheques of $100 each have been received and the committee hopes that every one will do their best to make this campaign a success.

IMPORTANT THEFT ARREST HAS BEEN MADE

Alfred Sigorium, of No Special Address, Was Arrested Yesterday Following Investigation Made by Local Police—Hearing May Bring Out Important Information.

An arrest which is considered by the local police department to be an important one, and possibly having some bearing on the house robberies which have recently been carried out in the city during the past few weeks, was made yesterday when Alfred Sigorium, forty-three years of age, of no special address, was taken to police headquarters on a charge of theft.

The police were immediately informed and the investigation showed that the rug had been sold to the storekeeper by Sigorium. He was thereupon immediately located and placed under arrest.

WIFE REQUESTS $60,000 A YEAR AS ALIMONY

Attorney States It Would Strain Ordinary Man's Imagination to Grasp Extreme Luxury in Which Couple Lived.

(Associated Press Despatch)
NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Arguing for alimony of $60,000 a year for Mrs. Ida May Symington, whose husband, Thomas H. Symington, sued her unsuccessfully for divorce, Max D. Steur, attorney for Mrs. Symington, yesterday said in Supreme Court that the couple during the five years of their marriage life spent a total of $990,000. He maintained that Mrs. Symington, having become accustomed to such luxuries, required sixty thousand dollars a year for reasonable expenses.

"It would strain the ordinary man's imagination to grasp the extreme luxury in which the couple lived," said the lawyer.

He told how they maintained a $800,000 home at Morristown, N. J., a Florida houseboat which cost $200,000, a sumptuous home at Palm Beach, and in addition had an apartment in the most expensive apartment hotel in the world. Flocks of servants were employed, he said.

Justice Wasservogel reserved his decision.

SIR H. THORNTON GAVE ADDRESS AT CHICOUTIMI

He and Several Other Canadian National Officials Were Guests at Dinner Given by Citizens—Claimed There Is "Ground for Courageous Feeling of Optimism" Regarding Present Situation.

CHICOUTIMI, Que., Sept. 18.—You live in a fortunate and happy country, close to an almost inexhaustible water power supply, a country good to look at, and I venture to predict that with all your natural resources, your country will be in a few years a hive of industry," said Sir Henry Thornton, president and chairman of the Canadian National Railways, speaking at a dinner offered to him by the citizens of Chicoutimi last night. "You are also fortunate to live in Quebec," continued Sir Henry, "this province has been of the most progressive in Canada for many reasons. She has almost unlimited natural resources in water power, waterways, forests, mines and fertile soil. Besides, she has influence of a tranquillizing population, a thrifty and peaceful loving population, that would rather look forward than backward, and who, when faced with difficulties, will go out to meet them rather than stop and weep at the street corner."

Dealing with the present situation, Sir Henry said that though there might not be ground for a crazy optimism, there was ground for a courageous feeling of optimism, as the credit of Canada is good, in fact as good as the credit of any country in the world. "The harvest this year will yield at least 100,000,000 more bushels of grain than last year, which, at $1.00 a bushel, represents a sum of a hundred million dollars, a conservative estimate of the extra money that will be spent in the country next year. A good crop has a buoyant effect on the country, and all the people benefit by it."

Sir Henry reviewed the progress made to date by the Canadian National system, which, he said, was now getting into its full stride. "Gross earnings," he said, "are now on the up grade, and there is every reason to expect that the results of operation for the year will show material improvement over those of last year."

Sir Henry Thornton was introduced by Mayor Desbriens, of Chicoutimi, who made known to him the needs of the region, and who was followed by Messrs. J. A. Dubuc, J. Levesque and J. E. Bergeron, prominent citizens of the Chicoutimi-Saguenay district, who all emphasized the necessity of an extension of the Canadian National

PRESBYTERY OF UNITED CHURCH OF CANADA WILL MEET HERE NEXT WEEK

A Very Large Number of Lay and Clerical Representatives of Various Pastoral Charges Are Expected to Attend.

The first meeting of Sherbrooke Presbytery of the United Church of Canada will be held in Plymouth Church on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. The Presbytery will convene on Tuesday, September 22nd at 3 p.m. This section of the new Church embraces all the former Methodist and Congregational fields south of the St. Lawrence, from Waterloo to the borders of New Brunswick, and all the Unionist Presbyterian charges in this wide territory. A very large number of lay and clerical representatives of the various pastoral charges are expected to attend, and the pastors of the two local United Churches are busy at the task of billeting them in the homes of their congregations. The ladies of the two churches are also busy preparing for the meals which are to be served in the churches.

It is expected that a representative from the United Church's headquarters in Toronto will be present at the meetings of the Presbytery. Some very interesting matters will be dealt with during the sessions, but the one of greatest significance is the Presbytery's co-operation in the spiritual effort to which the United Church has consecrated itself throughout Canada during the month of October. The financial objectives for the church year will also be set by the Presbytery. The meeting has been called by special conveners for the three denominational units now included in the United Church, but one of the first acts of the Presbytery when it convenes will be to elect its presiding officer, who will bear the title of Chairman of the Presbytery. The recording officer will be known as Secretary of the Presbytery.

CITY BRIEFLETS

WILL SPEAK ON "THE BIBLE AND LIFE"

The sermon will be a prelude to the celebration of "Rally Day" in the church school on the following Sunday. The evening subject will be "Heresy and Evidence," and will raise the question of the value of much that passes for religion in the profession of a great many people in the church and out of it.

Before coming to Chicoutimi, Sir Henry Thornton visited St. Feli and Roberval. He was accompanied by Colonel O. E. Talbot, director of the system, J. E. Morazin, general superintendent of the Quebec Division, and other officers.

On Wednesday evening the teachers of the High School entertained at a bridge in her honor. The affair was held in the library of the school, and the decorations were yellow and mauve. The bride-elect was presented with a silver bread tray. Miss H. Balfour and Miss Lillian Bayne won the prizes. Besides the bride-elect, the guests included her mother, Mrs. A. M. Sangster, her sister, Miss Muriel Sangster, and Mrs. H. G. Hatcher, Mrs. W. D. Kipp and Misses E. Horton, C. Hyndman, N. Peabody, L. Bayne, E. Palmer, R. Genge, E. Bryce, E. Skinner and E. Simons. Last evening Miss Olive Brichard, Quebec Street, gave a kitchen shower for Miss Sangster. The decorations were carried out in McGill and Macdonald College colors, both of which colleges the bride-elect attended. On Saturday Miss Grace MacKinnon, Portland Avenue, will be hostess at a luncheon, and on Monday Miss Ruth Skinner is entertaining for Miss Sangster.

Miss Martha Cooke, who has been the guest of Miss Audrey McKechie for some days, has returned home to New York.

Mrs. E. B. Worthington, Montreal Street, is in Montreal, where she attended the wedding of her niece, Miss Margaret Molson.

Mrs. W. S. McCutcheon will be the hostess tomorrow afternoon at the tea to be held at the St. Francis Golf Club.

Mr. Jos. Sheridan, of Thetford Mines, is visiting his sister, Mrs. J. Cronin, Galt Street, after having spent the past three weeks at Three Rivers and Montreal.

Mrs. A. H. Foss, Bellevue Avenue, entertained at a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Frances Armitage and Miss Emma Joslin, who are both to be married early in October. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion with a profusion of gladioli and hydrangeas and other autumn flowers. Miss Virginia Loomis contributed to the enjoyment of the evening by singing a number of songs. Mrs. Foss and Mrs. Charles B. Howard presented the gifts to the bride-elect. About twenty guests were present, all intimate friends. In the dining room, where refreshments were served, the table was very attractive with a bowl of pink and white sweet peas in the centre and pink candles. Mrs. F. N. McCrea poured coffee, Mrs. B. C. Howard cut the ices and Miss Virginia Loomis, Miss Marion Parker and Mrs. D. C. MacRae assisted in serving.

THE BURGLARIES.

The frequency of house breaking and burglaries in Sherbrooke during the past few months has been a matter of much discussion and no little concern among householders of the city. The depredations have not the earmarks of professional crooks, but seem to be the work of a gang of young delinquents.

Surprise has been expressed that they have not been long since apprehended. Crimes of this nature, where the perpetrators are not detected in the act, are not always easy of solution, though the removal of many household articles should help in the work of running them to earth.

It is presumed the police authorities are leaving no stone unturned in their efforts to bring the young criminals to justice. Continual burglary operations in a community could not be tolerated, even if an extra staff of trained sleuths is required to detect them.

LORD ASHBURTON VINDICATED

Ever since Lord Ashburton and Daniel Webster sat at a conference table and arranged the boundary that separates the Province of Quebec and the State of Maine there have been reports, and rumors and traditions to explain how it happened. The map shows the northward curve of the main boundary as it extends almost to the river St. Lawrence. "The conference was long, the room close and wine strong" is the common tradition which seeks to suggest that Webster outmaneuvered Ashburton with the spirits' aid.

A cable despatch from the London correspondent of the Montreal Gazette seeks to dispose of these legends and gives as authority Dr. Chas. W. Colby, McGill professor, student of history, and native of the border county of Stanstead. The correspondent quotes E. W. MacBride, former professor of McGill, who writing to the London Times says:

"This legend was thoroughly investigated by a former colleague of mine, Professor Colby, who was himself a descendant of the United Empire Loyalist stock. Dr. Colby, who held the chair of history at McGill, showed this legend was baseless and that, so far from Canada having been robbed, it was the United States who were 'done in the eye,' for the agreement between Britain and the United States stipulated that the frontier should follow the watershed between the rivers flowing into the St. Lawrence and those flowing south, and the Ashburton line deviated from this frontier by passing to the south of it."

ELECTION PROPHECY.

On the eve of battle, confidence in the outcome is a great asset. Fear begets defeat. This probably explains why political leaders, whatever may be their knowledge of actual situations among the electorate, preach and predict victory until the last ballot has been cast.

The New York Times referring to this says: "What is it that prompts political managers to cling to the old policy of 'claiming everything?' It is somehow expected to cheer up party followers, but proof that it does has never been forthcoming. It might even be argued that it runs the risk of inspiring in them that dangerous thing, 'over-confidence.' If their side is sure to win, why take the trouble to go to the polls? This hazard is, indeed, often in the minds of the political claim-it-alls, as they frequently qualify their rosy predictions by admitting that all depends upon the way in which the good and the virtuous do their civic duty. But the habit of prophesying just before an election a sweeping success is hard to kill. Men indulge in it whom you would hardly suspect of such by-play."

A NEW "SOCIAL CREED."

(Philadelphia Public Ledger)

The Social Service Commission of the National Council of Congregational Churches announces completion of a new social creed which is to be submitted first to the Congregationalists and then to the other evangelical denominations of the country. The Federal Council of Churches in America has had a similar creed since 1908. The new creed has had the collaboration of many liberal and professional laymen and women, some of whom are notably advanced thinkers. Among others there are William Allen White, representing the press; Miss Jane Addams, for the social worker viewpoint; Professor Walter Dill, of Kansas, and Jerome Davis, of Yale, who speak for college economics. Altogether, the joint effort illustrates the growing desire among the churches for some cohesive and general program of social belief and aspiration conceived more especially from the Christian standpoint.

THE STEAMSHIP COMBINE.

(Toronto Globe)

Sir William Peterson has not labored or fought in vain. Canada owes him a debt of gratitude for giving a powerful impulse to the movement for the removal of the overcharges which have so greatly injured the trade of Canada with Great Britain and retarded immigration. The fight for justice ought not to cease with his death. Of what avail is it for Great Britain to give Canada tariff preferences if the North Atlantic combine gobbles up all the benefit and is so short-sighted that it even kills business from which it might have received a fair profit?

Canadian manufacturers as well as farmers are deeply interested in this question and Conservatives ought to be as much concerned as Liberals or Progressives. Nagging at Mr. Preston because he was once a Liberal organizer is foolish. This is a case where all parties ought to work together for the object of enlarging Imperial trade. Transportation is at least as important as tariffs, and control over our own railways is not enough. Control of ocean rates is more difficult, but we ought not to give up hope or relax our efforts.

THE FARMER PAYS FOR ALL STRIKES.

(Farm Journal)

There are several points in connection with the strike of the hard coal miners that our folks should understand clearly.

The first is that hard-coal prices are already too high. Unless miners' wages are reduced or costs cut down in some other way, users of anthracite should turn to wood, oil, coke or semi-bituminous.

The second is that the railroad unions are planning to strike for higher wages, as soon as the public gets nervous and excited enough over the coal situation.

The third and most important is that every increase in costs in the mines or on the railroads comes chiefly out of the pockets of the farmers. Do not think for a moment that the mine owners, the railroads, or city people in general, pay these higher wages. They do not have to.

The method is complex, and its operation is sometimes slow. Nevertheless, it is true that when the city man has to pay a dollar more for coal or a railroad ticket, he gets that dollar either by adding it to the price of the merchandise he sells to farmers, or by taking it out of what he pays for bread, milk, apples or potatoes.

In the long run the farmer pays every union-labor wage increase out of his own standard of living. He has to, because he is not sufficiently organized.

NEW SUPPLIES OF GOLD AND WARS.

(Christian Science Monitor)

A writer in a recent issue of the Atlantic Monthly makes a plea for the theory that the discovery of new supplies of gold causes profound economic disturbances, which ultimately result in war between the nations that are most affected by the inflation due to an increased volume of basic money. The process of arriving at this remarkable conclusion is by the familiar post hoc, propter hoc, fallacy, that assumes that because one event follows another, the first must have caused the second. By the same method of reasoning, it would be only necessary to change the starting points in history a little in order to prove that wars have at intervals been followed by new gold discoveries, and to argue, therefore, that wars are the cause of an increased supply of gold.

Many readers of the Atlantic article may see in it merely an attempt to satirize popular explanations of wars as being due to economic forces that impel the people of one region to seek dominion over those in another territory, in order to gain through the exploitation of natural resources or of cheap labor. The author, however, is treating what to him appears to be a serious subject, as can be seen by this summary of the deduction he has drawn from the sequences of increased gold production and outbreak of war. "It is fair, then, to conclude that in the recurring peaks of money-metal production we have found the cause of the recurring war-cycles, and hence the economic cause of war itself."

CUPIDITY AND CURIOSITY.

(Hartford Courant)

Stories coming from that section of rural Ohio where the Shenandoah crashed indicate what could have been expected, that men, women and children, filled with curiosity, have made it look like parts of the war front in 1918. We can imagine that crops have been ruined, and fences have been wrecked, but it appears that the farmers have saved something.

At least one did. When he realized the situation early in the day, he exacted a fee of one dollar for each automobile entering his property, and one of fifty cents for each person on foot; further than that he charged ten cents for each glass of water taken from his well. Business was good. By noon, though, some one told him that he was liable to arrest by the Federal authorities, and he disappeared until night, by which time he had learned that his income was legal.

On the following day he reduced his tariff, cutting that in half for vehicles and pedestrians, and giving the water without charge. Even with this discount, and the fact that the Federal visitors must be free, he is likely to reap more from this accident than from his farm produce for the year.

One wonders why. Why should one desire a splinter from a wrecked airship, or a wrecked railroad train, or any like souvenir of a great disaster? Still the desire for such relics is obvious, and always has been. Almost any person past sixty treasurer, and occasionally displays, such relics. At one time they came from battlefields in the South; at a very recent date they came from overseas, the same urge which saved those in 1862 being in good working order throughout the World War. Sometimes they find a snug harbor in museums; more often they are preserved from one generation and then disappear. But a desire to secure them continues, and occasionally crops out in ways almost unholy.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor Sherbrooke Record:

Sir:—As a private citizen having the welfare of Canada at heart I want to urge upon the voters of this country in the forthcoming election the desirability of securing the very best men available as candidates to represent them in parliament. If this country is to prosper it must derive the full benefits from its remaining natural resources and this can only be brought about by a parliament composed of both honest and competent men. The ills from which Canada is suffering today are nearly all directly traceable to dishonesty and incompetence on the part of its governments.

If a man is not absolutely honest it will not do to send him to Ottawa as the temptations that he will encounter there are many and varied and difficult to withstand. On the other hand, if he has not made a success in handling his own affairs how can he be expected to make a success in managing the affairs of a great country?

It is a very serious matter this selection of a body of men to manage this Dominion for the long period of five years for in that length of time a government can bring ruin and despair to any country. The situation is so critical today that the Canadian people cannot afford to indulge in any further political experiments. Personally I feel that five is too long a period in which to entrust the affairs of the country to any government. I favor pledging each member to place his resignation in the hands of the executive to take effect in one year from the date of his election provided his constituents are dissatisfied with his stewardship. Any man who really intends to do his duty honestly and unselfishly by his country should only be too willing to do the same thing.

One of the most noteworthy comments on the Canadian political situation was made not long ago by a publication which bears a high and authoritative reputation in world affairs. It asked its readers to note two things of remarkable interest to the political student in Canada: The first was the extraordinary apathy and lethargy of the Canadian taxpayer; the second, the inferior intelligence of Canadian members of parliament to that of the people who put them in office.

Briefly, the safety of Canada's future can only come from the active intervention of the Canadian citizen. Hence, I say, Canadians on guard!

ADVICE ON THE WINTERING OF BEES OUTDOORS

Winter Supply Should Be Given Not Later Than First Week in October.

"To winter bees successfully three things are necessary: (1) strong colonies of young bees; (2) an abundance of wholesome stores and (3) adequate protection. To neglect any one of these is to invite disaster. Weak colonies should be united in the fall. The winter supply of stores should be given not later than the first week in October. The time that protection is given will depend upon the method used," states C. B. Gooderham, Dominion apiarist.

"Outdoor wintering is rapidly gaining in favor, and bees are now being wintered in packing cases where once it was thought they could not survive. Bees may be wintered in single, double or four-colony cases. The latter are more economical as less material is required for each hive. Whichever case is used it should be made large enough to allow four to six inches of insulating material between the hives and wall of case on the bottom and all four sides, and from six to eight inches on top, with at least one inch of air space between top packing and case cover. The colonies should stand close together in the cases with no packing between them. A tunnel must also be provided between the hive entrance and flight hole in the case. Colonies to be wintered outside should be placed in the cases during the latter end of September or early October and the bottom and side packing given. The hive covers should be removed to allow the hives to come together closely. As soon as the colonies are in the cases, give them all the food they will take down. The feeding should be done as rapidly as possible, and as soon as it is finished a quilt or bag spread over the hives and the top packing put on. These bees will require no further attention until next spring.

Outdoor-wintered bees should be protected from prevailing winds by a good windbreak. For full information on the subject write to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture or the Bee Division, Experimental Farm, Ottawa for free Pamphlet No. 22 on "Wintering Bees in Canada," states Mr. Gooderham.

RECENT INVENTIONS OF INTEREST TO EASTERN TOWNSHIPS FARMERS

(By C. J. Lynde, Macdonald College, Que.)

GATE

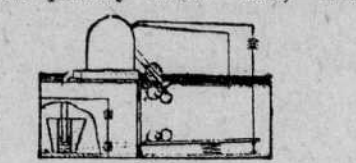

This gate combines the advantages of a swinging gate and of an overhead-carried one. It is in two sections, hinged together at their inner ends. When it is opened the two parts fold against each other, so that the gate may be opened wide even if its hinge post is against a fence or wall.

POULTRY-DUSTING DEVICE

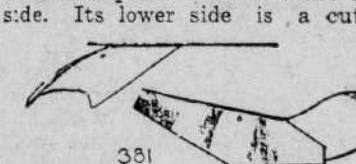

This device has a tunnel shaped chamber which is placed against the poultry house door, and the fowls compelled to pass through it. A fowl's weight depresses the platform and starts a motor blower, which ruffles up the feathers and blows the insecticide under them and on to the skin.

PLOW

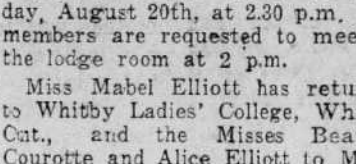

The novelty here consists of an extension plate rivetted to the land-side. Its lower side is a cutting edge, which cuts the sod in advance of the plow and also rides over obstructions, preventing injury to the plow.

STRAW GUIDER

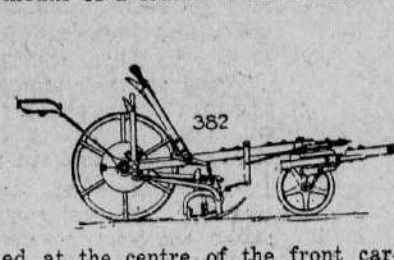

This attachment clamps on the blower pipe and may be revolved on the pipe by means of cables.

Dust is blown through the times while the straw is deflected by them in any direction desired. (Address Inquiries to the Inventions Editor.)

MOWER

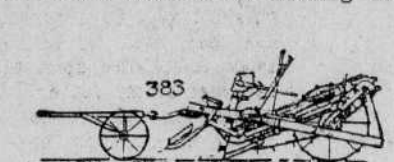

The front carriage of this mower is connected to the main frame by means of a crank which is connected at the centre of the front carriage axle and pivoted in the stub tongue and the main frame. This design carries the draft direct to the main frame and the team is not disturbed by the oscillations of the front carriage.

BEET AND POTATO DIGGER

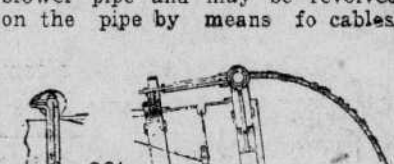

A new draft device is incorporated in this machine for altering the working depth and inclination of the digger. The tongue is pivoted in two arms on the frame, and is connected by a series of links to a hand lever, movement of which raises or lowers the tongue, altering the line of draft and therefore the inclination of the digger.

STRAW GUIDER

This attachment clamps on the blower pipe and may be revolved on the pipe by means of cables.

Dust is blown through the times while the straw is deflected by them in any direction desired. (Address Inquiries to the Inventions Editor.)

TREATMENT OF TOBACCO SEED BEDS IN FALL

Has Been Proved that Tobacco Seed Beds Prepared and Sterilized in Fall Are as Efficient as Those Prepared and Sterilized in Spring.

"In order to overcome the effects of an unfavorable spring and to reduce the work which is generally done at that time, tobacco growers will find it very helpful to prepare and sterilize all, or at least a portion, of the tobacco seed-beds in the fall," states H. A. Freeman, tobacco specialist employed by the Federal Government.

"It has been determined by results obtained at the Harrow Experimental Station that tobacco seed-beds prepared and sterilized in the fall proved as efficient as those prepared and sterilized in the spring.

"The same care is required in the fall preparation of the tobacco seed-bed as is required in the spring preparation. The soil should be fairly moist, loose, and finely pulverized. When in this condition the bed should be sterilized for thirty minutes with steam at a pressure of about 100 pounds.

"The frames and glass sash should be sterilized by washing them thoroughly with a formalin solution of one part formalin to 50 parts of water. As soon as the frames are sterilized they should be put into place around the beds and the sterilized glass sash placed on the frames, thus covering the beds and preventing the possibility of weed seeds and unsterilized soil being blown into them. "In sterilizing the bed it should be remembered that high pressure steam is desirable, as it is hotter, dryer, and more penetrating, and also raises the seed-bed soil to a higher temperature in a shorter time than is the case with low pressure steam.

"While any kind of refuse, such as corn stalks, tobacco stalks, etc., may be used with satisfactory results in the bottom of the semi-hotbed prepared in the spring, it is strongly recommended that straw be used for those prepared in the fall. Straw, well packed, eliminates the danger of the bed sinking and caving in before the plants are pulled. When prepared with straw the fall-made semi-hotbed will prove just as satisfactory as the spring prepared bed.

"The best time for preparing the seed-bed is usually about the latter part of October after the fall rains, or before the weather becomes too wintry. By delaying the preparation of the beds until then, the risk of contamination by weed seed will be greatly reduced," says Mr. Freeman.

Instantly, then its soothing influence heals the wound. Egyptian Liniment is an all-around remedy that every household should have for the prompt treatment of Cuts, Scalds, Burns, Frost Bites, Chilblains, Sore Throat and Chest, Neuralgia, etc.

BE A LAWYER? NOT HE IT WAS MUCH TOO EASY

Col. George Ham Decided on Newspaper Work Instead—Celebrates His 78th Anniversary

COLONEL GEORGE H. HAM, veteran official of the C.P.R., celebrated his 78th birthday at his home in Montreal on Sunday, August 28. Few Canadians have more friends than Col. Ham. He is noted for his ready wit and ability to tell a good story.

In speaking of his choice of a profession he says that law was proposed for him, but he balked and went into newspaper work instead. He says: "One reason for this was my previous experience. When I was a mere lad and visiting grandfather's old home at South Fredericksburg, opposite the upper gap of the Bay of Quinte, that venerable ancestor of mine confided in me that he wished to make his will without the knowledge of the rest of the family and suggested that I should draw up the document."

"In schoolboy hand the will was drawn up, and while it suited grandfather all right enough, I wasn't so cocksure it was the right form of phrasology. So I commandeered a horse the next day, stole off to Napanee, eighteen miles away, and called upon Mr. Wilkinson, whom I had met at my father's house in Whitby. He pronounced the will to be perfectly legal, and having all of $2 in my pocket, I rather ostentatiously asked him his fee."

"Nothing," he smilingly replied. "Nothing at all—I never charge the profession anything, never."

"And thus I was able to get an elaborate twenty-five cent dinner at the hotel."

"So when the question of my future came up I thought if it was so blamed easy to be a lawyer I wanted something harder."

20-Year-Old Song May Make Him City's Mayor

"Jimmy" Walker, New York Candidate Being Welcomed by Hit He Once Wrote

WILL you love me in December as you do in May?
Will you love me in the good old way?

All readers of over twenty years of age will remember this popular song of a generation ago. It is just possible that it may decide who will be next mayor of New York city. For it was written by "Jimmy" Walker, state senator, who is Tammany's choice to run in the coming election against the present holder of the office, John F. Hyland.

James J. Walker was a bard of Tin Pan Alley as a youth. He made $10,000 by writing the "Mar and December" thing as he called it recently in an interview. It was away back in an age when songs of a semi-sentimental type won fame before jazz became the rage.

It is not too much to say that this song may win the fight, or lose it. Some people are inclined to think that the fact that he wrote popular songs of a somewhat saccharine type may militate against Walker in the minds of red-blooded voters. On the other hand, crowds at his meetings are reviving Walker's popular ballad and singing it with gusto in a pre-election enthusiasm.

It must not be forgotten that the old-timer, "Al" Smith governor of New York State, and Walker, like Smith, is a product of these same sidewalks.

Premiership No Cinch Mr. Meighen Declares

The Higher You Are, the Harder It Is
Must Be a General Rule

BEFORE 1922, when Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen was prime minister of Canada, his political friends in Toronto arranged a reception for him there. Mr. Meighen was feted and felicitated on his high office, and one would have thought from all the kind things that were said that to be prime minister of Canada was an easy and delightful task. Mr. Meighen did not think so, and proceeded to make the facts known to his admirers.

In acknowledging the many compliments paid to him during the course of the day, he said it reminded him of a collector who went to a book shop to pick up a few rare volumes. He wandered around the stacks for a short while, apparently without finding what he wanted, and then approached a boy clerk who was behind the counter.

"Have you the 'Life of the Poets' here?" he asked.

"No," responded the boy. "I haven't the life of a dog, and I am getting out next Saturday night."

MOUNTBATTEN'S BATH LIKE BOTTOM OF SEA

LORD LOUIS MOUNTBATTEN, who married Miss Edwina Ashley, granddaughter and heiress of the late Sir Ernest Cassel, has succumbed to London Society's latest craze for unusual bathrooms.

At his famous mansion, Brook House, in Park lane, a bath has recently been completed for him in which the walls around the tub are painted to represent the bottom of the sea and the denizens thereof.

Lord Louis is a Lieutenant in the British navy. His father, the late Marquis of Milford Haven, who until the war was known as Prince Louis of Battenberg, was a British admiral.

Carrying his love for the sea even further than his submarine bath, Lord Louis has had his study in Brook House converted into the closest possible representation of a ship's cabin.

Is That Child Going to Guide Us? Timid Tourists Got a Severe Shock

But Diminutive Ed. Barrow, Youngest Guide in the Rockies, Was No Child in the Saddle—He Has Been Riding Horses Since He Was Three

By MADGE MACBETH

AT the vast age of three he left the Alberta ranch and went to visit his grandfather in Pennsylvania. Part of the tangible welcome that awaited him was a richly-caparisoned rocking horse.

"Ned is his name," said grandfather proudly. "He loves little boys."

But the little boy behaved very badly. Nothing would induce him to mount Ned of his own free will, and when grandfather lifted him up, he kicked and screamed vigorously.

"What the devil is the matter with the child?" his grandfather demanded testily.

"I'm afraid he misses his own pony," replied the boy's mother, as she stifled a longing, herself, for that far-away Claresholm ranch.

Grandfather whistled. "Does this scrap of humanity ride a real horse?"

"Oh, yes," said mother. "He rode before he could walk."

In telling me the story—balanced in one stirrup and facing the horse's tail, as he "guided" me up the O'Hara trail to peerless Lake McArthur—Ed Fraser asked no indulgence for his conduct.

"I should have had the end of a quilt," he said, "for rarin' up, that way. But somehow, I seem to remember I couldn't get any kick out of that wooden horse."

Ed looks fourteen, swears he is seventeen and talks like a man of seventy. He was a jockey in his younger days, riding sure-enough races in and about his home, and in Pincher Creek. Extraordinary as the things sounds, he rode a winning horse at the age of five years.

When asked the obvious question, he grinned. "Sure I've been pilled, but not often." "Pilled" is the cowboy's picturesque term for being thrown.

Of course, his mother didn't want him to do all these daring and spectacular "stunts." But his father, to whom he always appealed with a child's uncanny shrewdness, voiced the comfortless and masculine phrase, "Oh, he'll be all right!" So the mother gave way. By the same token, she was a wonderful shot, being known throughout the district by some such colorful title as "Dead Shot Susie." When her brother was accidentally killed while handling a rifle, Mrs. Fraser put her gun away, and has never used it since the tragedy.

After Ed was badly hurt in a race, his mother overruled the easy philosophy of her husband and forbade the boy to enter the lists again. Certainly, the track lost a good jockey, but the high school gained a good student. Although his love of horses impelled him to "guide" at the age of thirteen, thereby keeping him out of school until well on in the autumn, young Fraser has never failed in an examination, and has just recently fitted himself for entrance into the university. He places great importance upon education and wants to acquire a B. A.

If he is not, now, he was when he undertook the work the youngest guide in the Rockies and one has only to see him, to hear him talk, to understand the courage necessary for him to have persevered. About four feet ten, weighing less than one hundred pounds, little Ed Fraser did not inspire the timid tourist with much confidence when he appeared on the scene.

"Are you going to send us out with that child?" was the question invariably asked; and more than one "party" has refused his leadership.

"That child," however, can hold his own with any man. He has saddled horses since the time it was necessary for him to stand on a fence in order to reach the animal's back, and when he outgrew that ignominy, he held the saddle upside down on his head, and flipped it—in a manner of speaking—on the horse. Where he derives sufficient strength for tightening cinches, I don't know. But I do know that on the most precipitous hill, his saddles never slip. He is an economical and a neat packer. He can cook. Indeed, he can help you forget the distance between your camp and a good steam laundry!

When, in appreciation of these sterling qualities, an English lady of timorous disposition and rheumatic joints presented Ed with a tip of twenty-five dollars, his embarrassment was agonizing.

"I can't take all that for a two-day's trip," he protested. "Indeed, I'm not worth so much money to anybody!"

He was persuaded to keep the gift for the purchase of school books and his "parties" as well as his friends are very grateful to the lady.

Ed neither drinks nor uses tobacco. "There's no taste for liquor in my family," he will tell you, soberly, "and my smoking days are over! We fellows had a smoking club when I was nine, meeting every evening in the fire hole of the threshing machine! We smoked tea leaves, corn silk, dried weeds and anything that would burn. Our mothers," he added, "couldn't understand why that season was so unhealthy for us!"

One day as we were riding down the noisy Kicking Horse Canyon Ed seemed less happy than usual.

"This horse has three gaiters," he told me by way of explanation.... "walk, stumble and fall. I wish I had my Sandy."

Sandy is his own beloved friend, a handsome chestnut who astonishes the chance acquaintance by rising on his hind legs and executing a dizzy waltz, for no apparent reason, whatever.

Ed is quick with his quirt when he rides a "mean" horse. "Wrap it around him, good," is his advice to a tourist whose mount is behaving badly. "You've got to light fire with fire."

At the same time, there is no one more gentle with a sick horse, a tired horse or one that has been abused, than this little gentleman-guide.

"The way some dudes ride ought to be made a criminal offense," he said to me, bitterly. "They've got no more feeling for a horse than I've got for a nest of scorpions. I try not to say much, but it sure does rile me. Of course, some of 'em can't help it."

"How do you mean—they can't help it?" I wanted to know.

"Well, look at that man, there," said Ed. "By his own admission, he weighs two hundred and seventy-five pounds. That likely means three hundred. I told him we didn't have a horse heavy enough to carry him over this trail, but he would go, so we gave him that good black mare. She's doing the best she can, and he hasn't sense enough to know it. Gosh, look at him wrap that quirt around her! Do you mind pushing ahead a little? I can't stand seeing him act that way."

We moved off into the cathedral silence of the trees, considerably ahead of the other party. "Why, say...." the storm of his wrath gathered and exploded in a few hard-bitten words.... "that dude's so fat the only thing he can buy ready-made is a pocket handkerchief!"

King Alfonso Finds Business Not So Good

Unconventional Spanish Monarch Confides in Laborer

BIARRITZ has been much amused recently by the unconventional manner and habits of King Alfonso of Spain, who has been living just over the border at San Sebastian and frequently crossing to Biarritz to visit friends and play golf. Sometimes he loses both his chauffeur and his car; in which case he takes a train or a tram back.

The other day a Biarritz tram conductor saw a tall thin man running like mad after the car. Eventually the runner caught it and breathlessly jumped aboard, remaining on the outside of the second-class compartment.

Rolling a cigarette, he asked a workman next to him for a light and then got into a conversation on the high cost of living.

"I suppose monsieur is a manufacturer?" the workman hazarded.

"No," the other answered, "I've got an old business house which has been handed down from father to son for a long time."

"And how do you find trade?"

"Oh, things might be a good deal better!"

It was King Alfonso confiding his troubles to a sympathetic French workman.

THE MATTER WAS SETTLED

THE famous French aviator, Louis Blériot, who made history in July, 1909, by flying across the English channel in his aeroplane, was one of the earliest to foresee the possibilities of the heavier-than-air machine.

Once, while watching an aviator make a trial flight of a few hundred yards in one of the first aeroplanes to be built in this country, a spectator standing by said to him:

"Of what use are these power-driven box-kites, anyway?"

The query was in a sense not altogether unjustified, for these pioneer machines were mere contraptions of wood and canvas. But Blériot was equal to the occasion.

Turning on his interrogator like a flash, he retorted quickly: "Of what use is a new-born baby?"

Crowned Queen of Corned Beef and Cabbage In Sporting Contest to Find the Best Cooks

Mrs. Todd Had Been Practising
25 Years On Her Husband
—Five Best Cooks of New York All Married

THE best five amateur cooks in New York city were selected recently in a stirring, sizzling, boiling hot contest, a unique and in a way, a thrilling event in the annals of sports.

For two hours fifteen "finalists" in the prize recipe contest conducted by the United Restaurant Owners' Association fussed, seasoned, burned and cried over various dishes ranging from old-fashioned corned beef to filet of sole. When the smoke in the kitchen of the Todd Inn, No. 2549 Broadway, cleared, three judges sat down at a table, tucked napkins under their chins and started in to taste fifteen dishes.

The judges, headed by United States Senator Royal S. Copeland, all of whom had gone without anything to eat since 7 o'clock in the morning in preparation for the event, pronounced the following winners:

Best Plate of Corned Beef and Cabbage—Mrs. Stewart Todd.
Vegetable Dinner—Mrs. Alice Dopler.
Chicken Fricassee—Mrs. Ralph Trautmann.
Hash—Mrs. Hadwick Marchfeld.

Darrow Is Likened to Jesus and Abe Lincoln

New York Clergyman Extols Agnostic and Declares His Spiritual Victory Over Bryan

AS an echo of the famous Tennessee evolution trial comes the statement from the Rev. Charles Francis Potter, a prominent Unitarian clergyman of New York, that he would welcome Clarence Darrow even in his pulpit.

This clergyman, who was present at the trial, has conceived a tremendous admiration for the tolerant agnostic, and Mr. Potter's pleasant words, as quoted in an interview, come as an antidote to some of the passionate utterances of that recent event.

"Looking back," he said, "to the Scopes trial, I find Clarence Darrow standing out as far and away the most human and winning figure in Dayton. I find him reminding me of two great historical characters—Jesus of Nazareth and Abraham Lincoln. Of course, he is not nearly as great a man as either—he himself would laugh at any comparison—but he shows the essential spirit of both. Ungainly, awkward, uncouth, he has a warm light in his eyes of sympathy and understanding, together with the humor which Lincoln had and Jesus lacked."

"He shed serenity and kindness around him. He refused to become excited or angry."

"I talked with him a little about his philosophy of life. 'Well,' he told me, 'I suppose I'm what they call an agnostic, because I confess I don't know some things that some ignorant men say they do know.' Softening his scorn for the ignorance of his opponents and his contempt for their bigotry was a kindly human tolerance."

"The unhappy man at that trial was Darrow's chief opponent. I honestly believe that Mr. Bryan died of chagrin. I shall never forget the angry malice in his eyes as he glared at Darrow. The agony of a tortured soul and breaking heart was visible in the commoner's face as he retreated from one ditch to another under Darrow's courteous but relentless questioning until the supreme moment of admitted doubt when he confessed that the 'days of creation' might have been more than twenty-four hours long."

That contrast may have been still in Mr. Potter's mind, the clergyman admitted, when he told his congregation that he would admit the agnostic to membership in a Christian church of which he was minister.

"Why not?" he asked his interviewer. "You recall that passage in Matthew's gospel, 'As Jesus sat at meat in the house, behold, many publicans and sinners came and sat down with him and his disciples.'"

"Darrow has been called 'the defender of sinners,' which reminds us of the opprobrium which Jesus suffered in this respect, the motives in both cases being entirely misrepresented by their enemies."

"It is well known," Mr. Potter continued, "that Darrow has defended many a case without money and without price. In this evolution trial he refused the remuneration offered him by the American Civil Liberties Union and even went so far as to refuse to accept reimbursement of his legitimate traveling and living expenses at the trial."

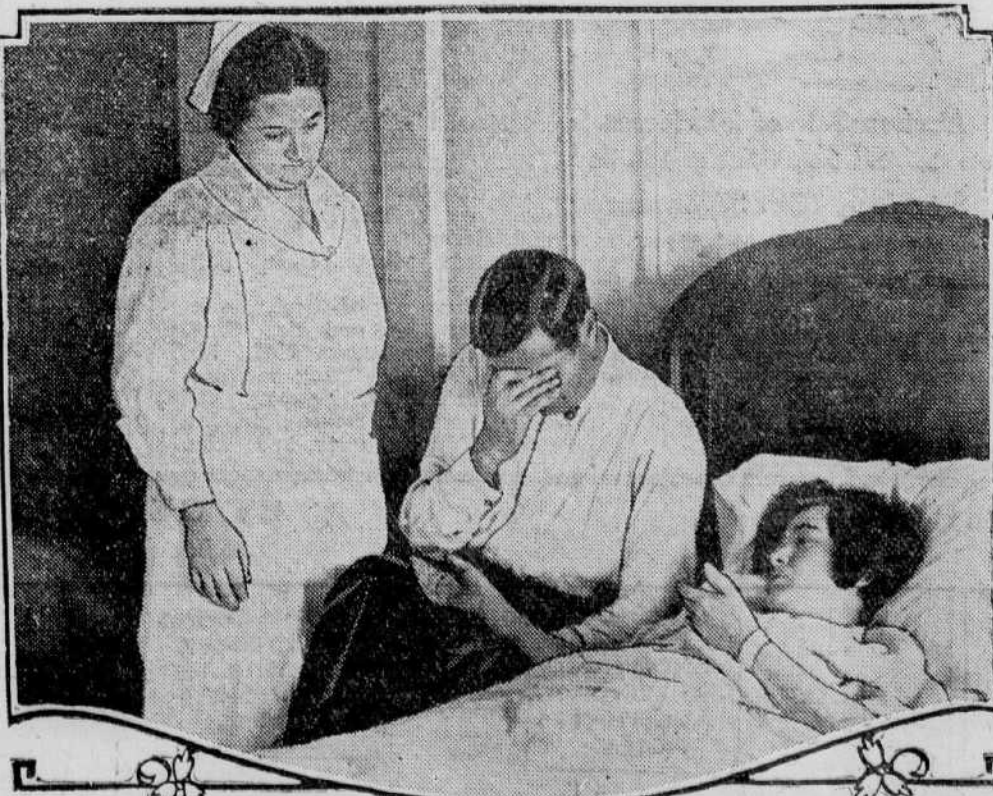

Clarence Darrow's service to his fellows has been an example of best Samaritan service. It has gone, or tried to go, to the roots of evil. He has tried to discover the motives of criminals, and his social service has been of the highest type.

"About the time of the Scopes trial, the Rev. Daniel M. Welch, minister of the First Unitarian Church of Knoxville, Tenn., took Clarence Darrow as the theme of his sermon, and pictured the lawyer arriving in heaven. Darrow seemed decidedly surprised to find himself in such surroundings, but finally mustered assurance to ask Jesus what it all meant. 'When I was down on earth you were good to me,' Jesus explained. 'I was hungry and you gave me meat; I was a stranger and you took me in; I was sick, and you visited me; I was in prison, and you came to see me.'"

"Well," said Darrow, "I certainly don't remember seeing you before, whereupon Jesus replied, 'Inasmuch as you did it unto the least of these, my brethren, Darrow, you did it unto me.'"

LORD CHANCELLOR'S JOKE

AT a dinner at which I was present the other evening, Lord Birkenhead told this story, the subject of it being Lord Westbury, the great lord chancellor. On one occasion Lord Westbury's horses ran away. "Drive into something cheap," was the lord chancellor's calm injunction to the coachman!

This is the most moving picture ever filmed. Look at it—and weep. It might well be titled "The Little Lad's Return" or "Sorrows of a Prodigal." My, oh my, but it's sad. Hearken to the sobs as the great frame of Babe Ruth is wracked with tears which trickle through his fingers and drip down on his half-smoked cigar. Here is the great Babe at his wife's bedside in their cheap little apartment, to which he has returned in sad sorrow from the great open spaces after being suspended indefinitely and fined $5,000 for being a big, bad boy. Even the nurse looks sad. It's an awfully sad picture, isn't it? By the way, the caption on the photo says it's the first time the great King of Swat has ever been photographed in tears. It's certainly terrible. Perhaps somebody will give the little boy a stick of candy and please him. Smith, Smith!

The Joys of an Open Fireplace

Leigh Hunt has a delightful essay with this suggestive title: "Autumnal commencement of fires. To many of us it merely converts the idea of stoves and furnaces and dust, and the misery that lies behind six months' carting of ashes up steep and awkward cellar stairs. But to many of us again it is a little fragrant with the memories of fires softly glowing on open hearths, or crackling merrily in friendly little grates."

We offer an attractive residence for sale or to let at 23 High St., and among its many attractions is a large fireplace in the living room. The sale price is $5,500, or will rent it for $50 per month. Immediate possession.

SOUTHERN CANADA POWER'S
TWELFTH ANNUAL REPORT
WILL INDICATE AD-VANCEMENT

Southern Canada Power Company, Limited, will complete its twelfth fiscal year on September 30 and it is generally expected that the annual report will be the finest showing yet made by this enterprising public utility. Steady progress has been made during the year in increasing the scope of its business, as has been indicated by the monthly reports of earnings and expenses, indicating steady gain in net results.

The completion of the Hemmings Falls plant was the chief event of the year, and this will have a far-reaching effect on the future showing of the company. The forthcoming annual report will not fully reflect this event, owing to the fact that the plant was only completed a

Before the Hemmings Falls plant was completed the company's business had extended at such a rapid pace that it was necessary to purchase from other companies a large quantity of power to meet its contracts. This purchased power cost the company much more than the equivalent amount of its own generation, so that elimination of this will mean a marked saving in operating expenses.

The sale of 10,000 horse power

Company will also find reflection in the report and assist in the making of a better showing in earnings. This block of power entails no extra expense in the handling other than the original plant investment and will add materially to the profitable operation of the new plant, which has

PIRATES CLOUT

Sensors Split a Double-Header
With Tigers—Covey Registered
His Eighteenth Victory.

(Associated Press Despatch)
NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The Pirates are now leading the National League by seven games and the Senators are in front in the American League scramble by seven and one half contests.

Kremer limited the Braves to seven bingles, while his team mates rolled up thirteen hits for an 11 to 2 Pittsburgh verdict yesterday. The Pirates gained half a game, as the Giants were not scheduled.

The Phillies met with a 5 to 2 defeat in opening a series at Red-town. After Walter Johnson fell victim to the Tigers in the first part of a double header by 12 to 9, Stanley Coveleskie twirled the Senators to a 1 to 0 victory in the after-piece, which was called on account of darkness in the sixth inning. It was Johnson's seventh defeat and Covey's eighteenth victory of the season.

The Red Sox weekend the Browns' hold on third place by handing them a double shut down 2 to 0 and 4 to 0. As the Bengals drew an even break with the Griffins, Detroit edged to within one and one half games of the third rung.

Quinn held the White Sox to seven hits, while the Mackmen turned out a 6 to 3 victory in the final line up of the clubs this season. In their series with Chicago the Athletics have won fourteen games and lost eight.

The Yankees won the final game of a series from the Indians by 5 to 0.

Other Outstanding Contest Billed for Saturday in English Football League Is Cardiff vs. Anderland.

(Associated Press Despatch)
LONDON, Sept. 18.—The feature game of the English Football League on Saturday will be staged in the metropolis, where Tottenham Hotspur will entertain Huddersfield Town. Second only to this will be the contest at Cardiff, where the Welshmen play Sunderland. Outside of these two encounters the rest of the first division tournaments are invested with no more than passing interest.

With regard to the first game, it might have been thought prior to last Monday that a certain advantage lay on the side of the Spurs, inasmuch as the contest is slated for their grounds. But any such advantage was shown to be purely imaginary at the beginning of the week when Cardiff City visited the metropolis and took the Spurs into camp by two to one. This marked the first trimming handed out to Tottenham this season, and following as it did a meagre draw with Everton last Saturday, it served to depress Tottenham's stock clearly.

Huddersfield have been sagging in uncertain fashion through the League since the season opened, although they have not yet struck the bitter draught.

Cardiff having shown some indication of returning to the form they displayed a couple of years back, are now set the task of checking the winning stride of Sunderland. The Welshmen worked badly around the opening of the season, but since then they have been able to pick up a couple of wins and one draw, to offset somewhat the three defeats they sustained. Sunderland's game has been a sensation so far. They ran into a quartet of victories right off and while earning them they rang up twenty goals to six scored against them. Their aim is nothing if not aggressive, while their defense is sound. They were able to defeat West Bromwich away from home and thoroughly crushed the cup holders, Sheffield United, last week, consequently in form they will be a hard proposition for any team in the first division. With Sunderland going strong and Cardiff displaying all the earmarks of staging a come back, the game in Wales will be a tid-bit of the day.

Other scheduled games are:—Notts County at Birmingham; Astonville at Bolton; Manchester United at Liverpool; Everton at Manchester City; Leicester City at Newcastle; Blackburn Rovers at Sheffield; Bury at West Brom-

Grabowski and Niebergall.

SCOTTISH LEAGUE GAMES

(Associated Press Despatch)

GLASGOW, Sept. 18.—Scheduled engagements in the first division of the Scottish League tomorrow include an interesting contest when the Rangers, who are at the moment trying to figure out how they managed to have a couple of defeats stacked up against them thus early in the season, confront St. Mirren, the locals, at Ibrox Park. The Paisley Club is one of the two undefeated teams in the division, the other combination being Celtic. Rangers fell badly from grace last week when they dropped their game to Aberdeen, coming so soon after their initial trimming at the hands of Airdrieonians, the Sunday previous. These two beatings came as a thunderbolt to their fans, unaccustomed as they are to anything but the sight of Rangers piling up goals at their own sweet will. They will not have it all their own way with St. Mirren, for the latter, having placed themselves into a comfortable position in the League battle, will be little inclined to yield much, even to such redoubtable foes. Creditable indeed is the Paisley club's record, with victories over Falkirk, Clydebank and Queen's Park, together with a draw between them and Airdrieonians in the opener and one with Dundee.

Heart, of Midlothian, who broke into the win column in no uncertain fashion last Saturday by vanquishing Clydebank 7 goals to nothing, may embrace another opportunity of lifting themselves out of the rut the day after tomorrow when they play Queen's Park. The game is at Hampden Park, which, however, means little, for the amateurs already have been licked there, losing to Aberdeen two weeks ago.

PRINN CUP WILL GO TO TOMORROW'S VICTORS

In the opinion of the majority of football fans, all that now remains to make tomorrow's match between Quebec Central and Elesco, who are scheduled to face each other on the Parade Grounds tomorrow afternoon at half past three o'clock in the second annual Prinn contest, one of the best games witnessed between these two local squads this season, is ideal weather. From appearances today things do not look so very promising, and it is hoped by those in charge that the weather will clear up sufficiently to allow the grounds to be in good condition for the match.

Feeling always runs high when two local teams meet, and it is expected that there will be a record attendance at the game tomorrow. It is hoped so, anyway, as Major Prinn has advised the officials to allow the proceeds received during the game to be applied to the Davidson testimonial.

The game will be handled by Mr. R. Havard with Messrs. Croft and Southgate on the sidelines. Quebec Central will line up as follows: McGinty; Jarvis and Webb; Twyman, Scott and Loach; Hawley, McClean, Wootton, Shand and Milnes.

SHERBROOKE AND EAST
ANGUS JUNIORS TO PLAY.

On Saturday afternoon a match is scheduled to take place between the Sherbrooke and East Angus juniors, the game to be played at the latter place.

The following players will represent the local juniors, and are requested to meet at the Albion Hotel corner not later than 2.30 o'clock: Stoyles, Phillips brothers, Gelinas, Twyman, Walker, Grimes, Dwyer, White, Pearson and Joiner.

A return game will be played on the Parade Grounds on Saturday afternoon, September 26, at 3.30 o'clock.

The wet weather consolation with a purse of $2,000 completes the card.
