Mentally - deficient inmates

Will try to move 5 from jail

By ALISON SCHOENFELD
(Record Staff Reporter)

Every effort is being made to find a place in a mental institution for the mentally deficient men who have been confined in Sherbrooke's Winter Street Jail for the last five years, Charles E. Cantin, Deputy Attorney-General for the Province said in a telephone interview Wednesday afternoon.

He said that all the mental institutions in the province are overcrowded, but that the men have not been forgotten.

Mr. Cantin said that the plight of these men only came to the attention of the Attorney-General's office a few months ago and since then continual attempts have been made to find room for them in an institution where they will receive psychiatric care.

Mr. Cantin said that the men were actually the responsibility of the Department of Health since they had only been placed in the Winter Street Jail because of their mental conditions.

The men range in age from 22 to 27 and are, therefore, too old to be placed in Baie St. Paul which is a mental institution for the young.

Mr. Cantin explained that the men had first been in reform school but because they were too difficult to handle they were put in Bordeaux.

The men were then transferred to the Winter Street Jail in order to keep them out of contact with hardened criminals. Mr. Cantin said that the men could not possibly be released into society because of their mental problems and would therefore have to be kept in the Winter Street Jail until a more suitable place was found for them.

He said it certainly was "not the place where they should be" and he said he was sure the situation would be taken care of within the next few months.

A spokesman for the Ministry of Health said Wednesday that an order had been received yesterday from the Minister to have the men examined by a psychiatrist. He said that these were very unusual cases and that there were no other mental deficient persons confined to prisons in this province.

He also said that the men would be removed to a mental institution very shortly.

St. Francis District Sheriff

Donat Jacques said Wednesday that he had been in touch with the attorney-general's office about the men and had been told to wait further instructions.

He said he had not been told either that the men were to be examined by a psychiatrist or that they were to be removed to a mental institution.

The plight of these mentally deficient men was revealed when an informed source close to the prison said the men had been confined there for five years although only sentences of less than two years are served at the jail. The men were allowed some special privileges but were kept in ordinary cells and mingled with the other prisoners. They had no psychiatric treatment during their five years confinement here.

ALL QUIET ON SYRIAN FRONT

DAMASCUS (AP) — Syria remained calm today after the bloodless coup that toppled the right-wing civilian government. The frontiers were still sealed, isolating this Mediterranean republic in the heart of the Middle East. Otherwise daily life went on normally with streets ordered cleared only from 10 p.m. to 5 a.m.

Damascus radio continued to tell the 5,000,000 Syrians—long accustomed to upheavals—to prepare for a swing back toward the left from the anti-nationalization policies of deposed president, Nazem El Koudsi's regime.

The cornerstone of Wednesday's revolt was proclaimed as building "constructive Arab socialism" at home, promoting Arab unity, and "positive neutrality and non-alignment" in foreign affairs.

The army said the coup was a continuation—not a reversal—of its Sept. 28 revolution that broke the alliance with President Gamal Abdel Nasser's United Arab Republic.

Neighboring Turkey and Jordan took the word of the Syrian military that its takeover was purely an internal affair. A spokesman for the Turkish foreign ministry predicted quick diplomatic recognition of the new military regime.

Diplomatic sources in Cairo claimed the Syrian switch enhanced President Nasser's prestige because of the junta's endorsement of Arab socialism, the term Nasser uses for his program.

Israeli officials said they do not expect any change in Syrian-Israel relations, which have become increasingly bitter with recent border clashes.

Sources in Beirut, Lebanon, said there was evidence that the Syrian military not only did not like the civilian government's swing to the right during its three months in office but were also suspicious of the way it played Arab politics.

Anybody lost a big vulture?

LONDON (AP) — A man walked into the Regents Park zoo with a bird under his arm today.

"Have you lost a vulture?" he asked.

The zoo people checked up and said they hadn't.

"Well, I found this one in the street and I wish you'd take it," said the man. Handing over the bird he walked out without leaving his name.

The vulture, which has a four-foot wing span, was placed in a cage until whoever lost it comes to get it.

Discuss Algerians

OTTAWA (CP)—Immigration Minister Fairclough said Wednesday the government will give careful consideration to any request that Canada admit French Algerians. However, she said in the Commons to the best of her knowledge no such request has been received.

Steel accord reached

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Top-level negotiators are reported to have reached broad agreement on a labor contract for the steel industry.

Reliable Washington sources said the chief bargainers for the union and the major steel firms reached agreement on a two-year contract Wednesday.

The Steelworkers' International executive board and wage policy committee have been summoned to meet here next Saturday. Union law requires that contract proposals be ratified by the wage policy committee.

The union's 11 company negotiating committees will meet Sunday.

Coming three months ahead of the June 30 expiration date of existing contracts, the reported agreement would head off both a mid-year steel strike and a potentially dangerous rush to stockpile steel against the possibility of such a strike.

The agreement is said to pass up an immediate wage increase from the present average of $3.28 an hour paid to some 420,000 basic steelworkers. But it is reported to provide for about 10 cents an hour in "fringe benefits"—vacation, pension, and unemployment provisions.

The contract could be reopened, it is reported, for wage increase negotiations at the end of its first year.

Formal negotiations began Feb. 14, collapsed March 2, then resumed March 14 at the request of President Kennedy.

A short play written by a Bishop's University English professor and winner of a second prize in a university drama festival several years ago, was banned last night from broadcast over CKTS, Sherbrooke's English-language radio station, on grounds of obscenity.

The play, Poets for Lunch, by Professor A. J. Motyer was to have been part of the university's weekly student radio show, Bishop's Assignment.

Station manager Gordon Beerworth cancelled the show for the rest of the season, and students from the university said he told them; "I'll never allow Bishop's to run a program on my station again."

Mr. Beerworth told The Record this morning that the students had been upsetting the staff at the radio station for some time. He also said "they were dominating" and "they attempted to take over the station."

He said that the station had given them a great deal of publicity but that they had "overrun their rights."

Mr. Beerworth said that the students had used profanity on the program in previous broadcasts and that in his opinion the play they proposed to present last night would not have received the approval of either the audience or the Board of Broadcast Governors.

The station manager told Bishop's students that he considered phrases such as "womb in which we were conceived," "baked maternally" and "when all my passion has been spent" obscene.

Professor Motyer told students that Mr. Beerworth had taken the quotations out of the context. "Even Shakespeare can seem obscene if the right parts are lifted," he said. He said he was "stunned"

Professor Motyer also said that he had submitted the play to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. It was rejected in favor of another, but no mention of obscenity was made he said.

New bill nearly ready

Parliament to have another try at altering divorce procedure

OTTAWA (CP) —Parliament similar three readings of the bill are given.

With between 400 and 500 divorce bills before Parliament annually, this procedure occupies considerable time. And since two CCF MPs started several years ago to object to what they regard as failings in the procedure, the time has been lengthened considerably.

CCF MPs Frank Howard (Skeena) and Arnold Peters (Timiskaming) have argued evidence.

Mr. McCleave, Progressive Conservative MP for Halifax, announced to his committee Wednesday that a bill embodying the latest suggestions for a new divorce procedure is nearly ready.

The new bill would empower the upper chamber to dissolve Quebec and Newfoundland marriages by resolution.

An important difference would be provision that appeals could be made to the Senate divorce committee and, if the divorce had already been granted, a bill to set aside the divorce could be introduced into Parliament.

The new procedure is aimed at streamlining the time-consuming method in effect now. Residents of the two provinces, which have no divorce courts of their own, must obtain divorces through private bills.

Present procedure begins with hearing of evidence by the Senate divorce committee. This would be unchanged. Then the Senate committee recommends for or against dissolving the marriage. If the Senate agrees, it passes the bill and sends it to the Commons where a similar examination is made by Mr. McCleave's committee and that the Exchequer Court or some other court should handle Quebec and Newfoundland divorce cases. They have not stated specifically that no other alternative is acceptable.

The current bill is being framed with a view to covering at least some of their other aims—an appeal procedure, such as Mr. McCleave says is provided in the new bill, and an officer to oversee gathering evidence.

Huge wheat sale to Red China revealed

OTTAWA (CP) — It was strictly a farm day in the Commons Wednesday, highlighted by the announcement of another major wheat sale to Red China.

Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton reported that an additional 39,000,000 bushels of wheat worth $75,000,000 has been sold to the Communist Chinese.

Mr. Hamilton, making his first Commons appearance since he was sidelined by illness two months ago, said the latest Chinese purchase is the sixth and largest made under the long-term agreement signed a year ago.

It brings total sales to date under the cash-plus-credit agreement to 108,000,000 bushels of wheat and 26,000,000 bushels of barley. China also bought 31,700,000 bushels of wheat and 12,700,000 bushels of barley on an all-cash basis last spring.

Outside the House, it was learned that a seventh major grain deal with China is near completion.

Mr. Hamilton said the sale is covered by the $100,000,000 government guarantee given to the Canadian Wheat Board last year to cover possible defaults in the Chinese payments. China has paid $108,000,000 for $109,000,000 worth of grain received, so far meeting all instalments on time.

The agreement, for eventual total purchases of 186,700,000 bushels of wheat and 46,700,000 bushels of barley, calls for 25 per cent in cash on delivery and 75 days' credit, with interest. The interest rate has not been disclosed.

The Canadian proposal did not figure either in a four-point disarmament priority plan proposed by Russia or in a three-point counter-proposal by the U.S.

Canada's idea was only the third priority in an Indian list of seven measures to reduce international tension and pave the way for disarmament.

External Affairs Minister Green urged the conference to give his proposal immediate attention and thus save the world from the "most fearsome development of all"—the orbiting of nuclear weapons in outer space.

At the conference proper Wednesday, the U.S. and Russia differed widely on priorities for discussing disarmament. However, they were united in stepping a Canadian plea for immediate consideration of a peace guarantee for outer space.

The two week-old conference met again in plenary session today to consider a report from its three-power nuclear test ban subcommittee, which is hope-

President Frondizi is overthrown

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—Argentina's armed forces overthrew President Arturo Frondizi early today in a bloodless coup d'etat that took 24 hours to complete.

Frondizi was arrested by a naval officer at his luxurious private home in a Buenos Aires suburb and driven in a motorcade of five cars to the capital's airport.

Shortly after the 53-year-old president was arrested he was rushed aboard an Argentine Air Force plane for the Island of Martin Garcia, a military reservation 30 miles northeast of Buenos Aires in the Plate River estuary. It was on the island that the military held dictator Juan Peron after they overthrew him in 1955.

The three armed forces chiefs announced that Senate President Jose Maria Guido, next in line of presidential succession under the constitution, would succeed Frondizi.

There was no immediate announcement from Guido, however, that he would take the post. And Hector Gomez Machado, who heads Frondizi's Intransigent Radical Party in the Chamber of Deputies, said he would not. Guido is also a member of the Intransigent Radicals.

Guido had stood by Frondizi earlier in the crisis and said he would not support him. But military sources said Guido had accepted the presidency after Frondizi told him it was the best way for the country.

It was not immediately clear whether Guido, if he took over, would have full presidential power or be a figurehead for a military junta determined to crush Peronism. The general belief was that the military would be at least insist on counter-signing all decrees.

The ousting of Frondizi, whose four years in office had been beset by constant conflict with the military, was the culmination of a crisis resulting from startling and sweeping Peronist victories in congressional and provincial elections March 18.

After the outbreak the army sealed off the section and restricted the 50,000 inhabitants to their homes. In a house-to-house search they arrested about 3,000 persons and seized quantities of munitions and explosives.

3 out of 100 children affected

Problems of mental retardation said a major worry to doctors

ABOARD THE EMPRESS OF ENGLAND (CP) — Mental retardation is one of the major problems encountered by doctors treating Canadian adults and children, a Halifax specialist said today.

Dr. William Cochrane, associate professor of pediatrics at Dalhousie University, told a meeting of family doctors that three out of 100 children are affected by some form of mental retardation.

There are about 500,000 mentally retarded persons in Canada.

Dr. Cochrane delivered a paper to the College of General Practice of Canada during a medical assembly which is being combined with an eight-day cruise from New York to Bermuda and Nassau.

Three hundred and 50 general practitioners and their wives spent Wednesday ashore in Bermuda.

Dr. Cochrane said prenatal causes account for about 65 per cent of the mental retardation total. Another eight per cent can be linked with events about the time of birth, and post-natal causes are implicated in the remaining 27 per cent.

Viral infections may be a cause in prenatal mental retardation. Some congenital anomalies and cases of mental retardation may be due to the expectant mother taking drugs, Dr. Cochrane said.

Dr. F. S. Brien, head of the department of medicine at University of Western Ontario, said many potent drugs for lowering blood pressure are available, but care must be taken while medication is withdrawn.

In a paper on hypnosis, Dr. J. F. Edwards of Winnipeg urged family doctors to make more use of hypnosis.

In a demonstration before the doctors, he quickly hypnotized Dr. D. J. Hastings of Winnipeg.

Dr. Gerald Halpenny, president of the Canadian Medical Association, said the graduates of Canadian medical schools should be able to speak both English and French. He pointed out that Queen Mary Veterans Hospital in Montreal is one of the few hospitals in the world where undergraduates in medicine are taught in two languages.

NATIVE OF QUEBEC
Dr. Halpenny, a specialist in internal medicine, is a native of Quebec.

"It would be a great medical triumph if Canada, on her 100th birthday, possessed a single medical organization which embraces all the doctors of our two ethnic groups," he said.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT COMES TO END — The city's electrical department employees have been busy this week taking down Christmas decorations which were put up in early November. City council decided in a closed meeting Monday night that the city had had enough of the decorations for one year. Gerald Gosselin of the city's electrical department is shown during the task of taking down the decorations today. He said, "It is much easier taking them down than it was putting them up." City council is expected to decide at its next meeting what should be put up to replace the decorations for the 125th anniversary.

Social worker must explain her job to be accepted by physician, patient

The hospital social worker must explain her function so that her work may be accepted by the physician and then by the patient, a hospital social worker said Wednesday.

Miss M. Cornwall-Jones, head of the Medical Social Work Department, the newest department to be added to the Sherbrooke Hospital said at the annual meeting of the Victorian Order of Nurses held at the YWCA here that there were many common misapprehensions about the work of a social worker in the hospital.

Miss Cornwall-Jones joined the Sherbrooke Hospital staff in September, 1960.

"The primary object of the social work department here is to offer casework services to the patients of the doctors of the Sherbrooke Hospital," the speaker explained.

Social casework, the speaker said, is a form of therapy which is described as the interaction between two personalities, the client or patient and the social worker aiming at the full discussion of the patient's problem; consideration of the ways in which it may be solved and an attempt to solve it with the social worker's help.

"The principles of social casework are the same, whether the social worker is dealing with sick people in the hospital, prisoners in jail, multi-problem families in slums or couples with marital problems seeking the aid of a marriage guidance counselor," Miss Cornwall-Jones said.

Only the setting varies, she noted. The medical social worker does her job in the hospital instead of in the family welfare bureau, said Miss Cornwall-Jones.

In a family welfare bureau, people in need actually come to the social workers office to ask for that help, she said. But in a hospital the patients problem may be brought to the social worker's attention by a third party, the physician.

"Consequently it is necessary for the hospital social worker to try to explain her function, so that her work may be accepted by the physician and hence, by his patient," she said.

People tend to think that social workers confine their work only to people known as 'the poor.'

"Nothing could be further from the truth," she said. "We are here to help in people's personal problems. Whether one is comfortably off financially or not does not preclude one from having troubles," she said.

Miss Cornwall-Jones says both doctor and social worker work in close harmony to balance the needs of the individual patient. While the doctor can cure the patient physically it is up to the social worker to help the patient straighten out his personal problems before he returns home.

"Social workers help people to reorient their thinking about a certain problem, to learn a new way of thinking, to come to terms with a disability and even better, to be able to understand themselves," Miss Cornwall-Jones said.

Leonce Cote was re-elected president of the Sherbrooke Branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses. John Dunn was named vice-president while D. Curtis Bishop was named honorary treasurer. Mrs. B. W. Murray was re-elected secretary.

The Order ended the year with a balance of $1,699.82. Leonce Cote said this amount would be put towards a new V.O.N. car which is urgently needed.

Miss Roy, head nurse, said in her report that a total of 4,529 visits had been made by V.O.N. nurses during 1961; 4,253 in Sherbrooke and 276 in Lennoxville.

Of these, 1,232 visits were free of charge. Eighty-nine visits were paid in full; 1,621 in part and 1,587 were free of charge as they were educational visits.

Nominated Wednesday

Maurice Allard is PC candidate

By CUTHBERT JONES
(Record Staff Writer)

Maurice Allard, MP for Sherbrooke County since 1958, will be the official Progressive Conservative candidate in the approaching federal general elections.

Mr. Allard was formally nominated at a gathering of party supporters held in the Central School Wednesday night and the nomination was confirmed by Mines Minister Jacques Flynn, representing the central organization of the party for the Province of Quebec.

In his address accepting the nomination, Mr. Allard reviewed the aggressive policies pursued by the Diefenbaker Government since it assumed power in 1957 and contrasted its actions with the indifference of the Liberals towards national issues in the preceding 22 years.

On the economic front, the PC's had replaced the Liberal free trade policy with one designed to aid the development of Canadian industry; the Diefenbaker Government had taken 18 steps to aid Canadian textile plants which had been neglected by the Liberals and in the commercial field, the foreign trade deficit had been reduced and export trade diversified.

The Conservatives had followed a policy of decentralization in fiscal affairs, thus respecting the autonomy of the provinces and respecting the rights of the Province of Quebec, Mr. Allard continued.

On the political level, private members had been given liberty of speech and action, contrasting to the policy of silence and blind submission demanded by the Liberals.

To relieve unemployment, the Sherbrooke MP said, the present Government had instituted the winter works program, given aid to small industry, had assisted the province in the field of technical and profession training, had expanded the activities of Central Mortgage Corporation, had established the National Productivity Council, had provided training allowances for the unemployed and had given allowances to those taking civil defence training.

Reviewing the achievements of the Government in the field of social justice, Mr. Allard said expenditure on old age, blind and invalid pensions, hospital insurance, unemployment insurance and for health had increased 85 per cent between 1957 and 1961.

He also outlined the steps taken by the Government for the development of the country's natural resources and for advancing higher education.

Hon. Jacques Flynn, Minister of Mines and Technical Surveys, told the gathering that the future of Canada rested upon practical understanding between the two major ethnic groups.

"However," he continued, "the Liberals were content to interpret to us (the French-Canadians) the English-Canadians in a false fashion to justify their failure to give us our rights."

"We have tried to interpret the true sentiments of English-speaking Canadians towards us, and these sentiments are altogether different from what we had been told," he said.

"We have, above all, tried to interpret French-Canada to the English-speaking and to tell them why they must allow us our aspirations."

Although the Liberals had dominated the Quebec political picture for decades prior to 1957, they had done nothing to improve the position of this province, he continued.

However, with the coming of the PC's to power, relations between the two races were gradually improving.

Other speakers included Maurice Bourbonnais, MP for Val-de-France, and Roland Dugre, Q.C. president of the Sherbrooke County Progressive Conservative Association.

Mr. Allard will speak on underwater constructions and demolitions.

Choirs from St. Paul's United Church, Magog, Lennoxville United Church, Plymouth United Church, Sangster Memorial Church and Trinity Church will participate in the festival.

Numbers will be given individually and collectively by the choir. Miss Kathleen Harris will be organist and Mrs. E. Howland will be director.

Given two year sentence

Not allowed to see his bride, young groom sets fire to house

Robert Grenier, 22, of Cookshire, was sentenced to two years in the Laval Pavilion of St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary Wednesday after he pleaded guilty to setting fire to his father-in-law's home on RR 1, Cookshire.

Grenier said he started the blaze with the help of his brother, Real, when he was barred from seeing his 18-year-old bride by her father, Louis Veilleux. The fire was set on the night of Nov. 20, 1960.

His brother was given a suspended sentence by Judge Redmond Hayes when the pair appeared before him in Sherbrooke District Court. The blaze caused $10,000 damage, according to Crown Prosecutor Benoit Turmel.

Defence lawyer Dewey Zaor told the court everything was all right until the young married couple moved into the Veilleux home.

Later that night the pair thought it over and decided they

He told the court Robert's father-in-law wouldn't allow the scene. They were relieved when they saw that the fire did not catch to the house.

The next morning they were told there was a serious fire at the Veilleux home, the defence said in asking for leniency for the pair.

Judge Redmond Hayes told Robert Grenier while passing sentence he had committed a dangerous act no matter what the cause was. He still had no right to set fire to the house.

"I am taking into consideration while imposing this sentence that there was an old man in the house who couldn't very easily get out if there had been a serious fire."

"I am also taking into consideration that you led your younger brother into helping you in the act," Judge Hayes said. When someone looks for his wife's companionship, he doesn't set fire to the house she lived in, he said.

Judge Hayes said in giving a suspended sentence to Real Grenier that he was being lenient on him because he was named to help his father on his farm.

No place for the SAO in Algeria

Out of the bloody chaos that is Algeria today, the clear fact is emerging that General de Gaulle meant what he said when he emphasized that the Secret Army Organization was composed of criminals and would have to be dealt with accordingly.

Apparently, in some SAO quarters, the general's words had not been taken too seriously. Monday, heavy army fire into a crowd of European demonstrators killed 45 Europeans and wounded 120 others in the heart of Algiers.

An SAO agent is quoted in a news report as saying: "We were so stunned we cannot think of any reaction."

This was undoubtedly an overstatement. SAO reaction continues as before — terrorism and wanton killing.

Yesterday, a huge force of 60,000 French troops massed in Algiers to keep order and prevent SAO members from running wild. Earlier, it was announced that two of the Secret Army's top leaders had been captured.

General de Gaulle is beginning to

At a party it is especially fun to beat the other fellow to the punch.

Picturesque names for highways

A Liberal member of the Nova Scotia Legislature, John W. MacDonald, has come up with a suggestion that might find endorsement in many other parts of the continent. He would supplement the present drab system of numbering highways by names with some geographical or historic significance.

Quebec has adopted the idea of highway names for some sections of its more improved roads but for the most part the nomenclature is closely associated with the honoring of the particular politician who happened to be in control of the highways department.

People always want highways improved but dislike to go from ruts to tax.

Allergy to work a common complaint

A productivity expert had some things to say about work at a productivity conference in Winnipeg the other day.

He said that for every person who likes work, there are a dozen others who don't — who do it because they have to and who get all their fun out of planning what they are going to do after work.

"Most people are allergic to work," he said.

"They all want six months holiday twice a year with pay."

He said 40 per cent of each working day is lost through delays, idle time carry the fight to the rebels, and there can be no doubt that as the days go by, loyal French forces will take the initiative more and more, even if it means Frenchman against Frenchman, as it did Monday. It would not be surprising if de Gaulle's forces and nationalist authorities combined ably in an all-out effort to wipe out the SAO.

They will be spurred in their ugly but necessary task by the knowledge that in three to six months time, a referendum will be held to back up the independence agreement reached. If the referendum is to have any meaning, it will have to be held in a more peaceful atmosphere than is present in Algeria now, and certainly, it will have to be held under conditions which are free of SAO influence.

After that, there is bound to be a long and painful period of reconstruction; a period in which a large measure of peaceful unity will be necessary if Algeria is to survive as a free nation.

There is no place for the Secret Army Organization or the sentiments of its members in any of these processes.

ment at the time the section of the highway was completed.

This province is rich in historical material for road naming, while there are many geographical phenomena — lakes, mountains, etc. — that could be used to give the highways some significance to the visitor.

Obviously some system of numbering must be retained to simplify guide book and guide post directions.

But would not such names as the Memphremagog Trail, the Abenakis Drive or Mount Orford Boulevard be more intriguing to native and visitor alike than Highway One, Highway Five or Highway 22?

and improper methods.

The expert claimed that management is largely responsible for this attitude, but workers have some responsibility, too.

"They go through the same motions day after day. They never question anything for fear of rocking the boat and it never occurs to them that perhaps there is a simpler, easier shorter way to do the job."

None of this is exactly new. And most of us don't need an expert to tell us we're naturally lazy. The boss does a pretty good job of it most days.

Other papers say:

Nationalized standard of education

One of the harsher facts of modern education is its increasing cost. This has been leading, both in Canada and the United States to growing advocacy of federal aid to what is by tradition and law a provincial or state function.

In Canada the federal government already has instituted a program of grants to universities and is helping to build a number of technical training schools in various provinces.

But how far the federal government, with its superior revenue base, could or would go in helping out on the elementary and high school levels without feeling entitled to have a voice in educational policy, is a matter of doubt and some apprehension. Provinces are jealous of their rights and some, at least, would resent any suggestion of federal intervention. For a long time Quebec even refused to take the university grants.

But municipalities and provincial governments are finding themselves pressed for dollars to care for rapidly expanding school populations these days, and the federal government undoubtedly has large resources which it might seem desirable to tap for educational purposes. Certainly there are few more important national requirements than a well-run education program.

One field in which the federal government might invest some funds is the text-book field. This country relies far too much on texts written and published in the United States. Some of the material contains a national bias which is foreign to Canadian interests. There are cases, indeed, where Canadian children learn from U.S. history texts versions of historical events which simply are not in accord with the facts.

The school text-book market in Canada is not at present such as to encourage the writing or printing of the books. There appears to be no co-ordination between provinces in adopting the same text-books. Some sort of federal body might be set up to encourage more co-operation and it might be that the Canada Council could lend some financial assistance to Canadian authors capable of writing the kind of text-books which would be acceptable to the provinces in general. No greater cultural contribution could be imagined in terms of nationhood.

From many points of view, it would seem to be desirable for Canada to have a more nearly nationalized standard of education. As things stand at present it is quite complicated for young people to transfer from one province to another without serious dislocation to their school careers. And the standards of quality vary from province to province.

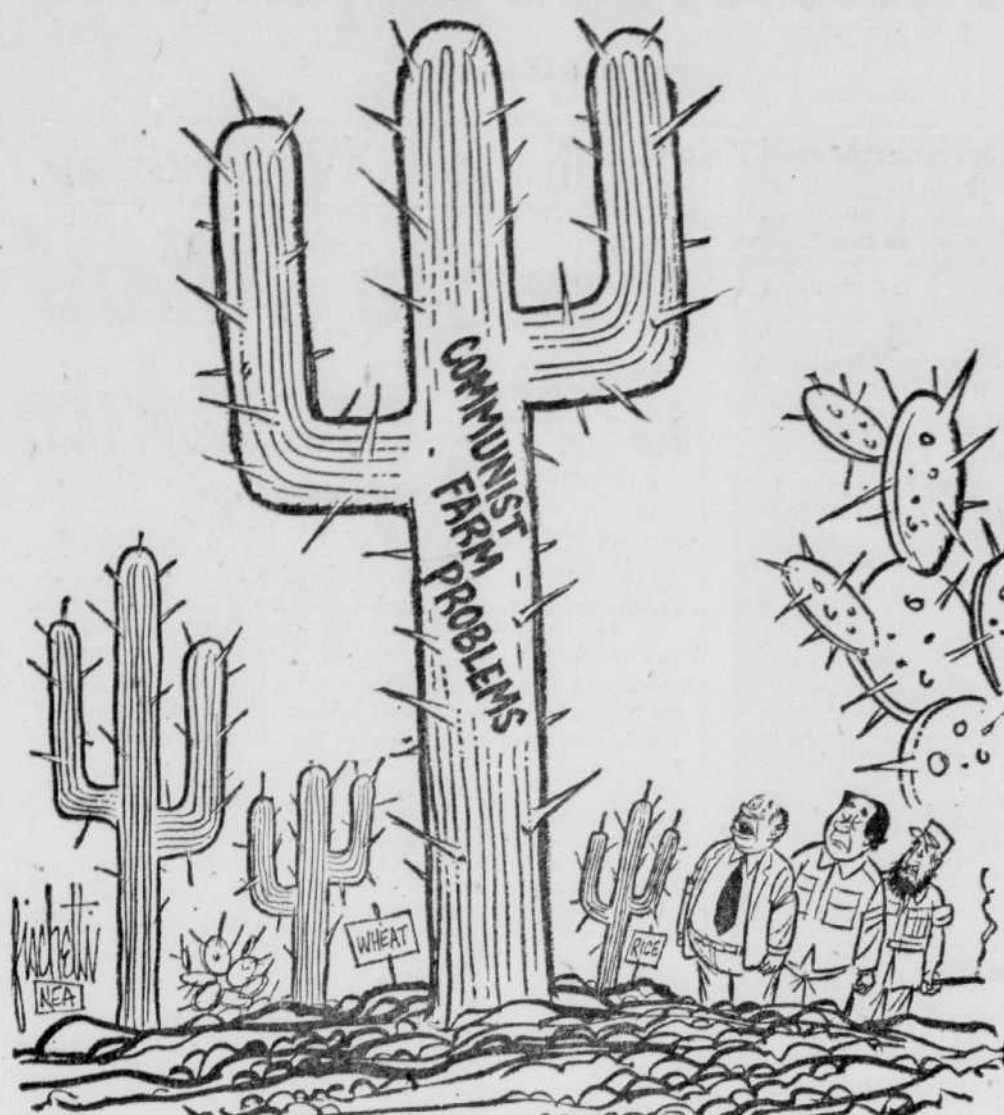

Education is the basis of enlightened citizenship and it is reasonable to assume that a healthy national citizenship can only be founded on a healthy national form of education.

Apparently educationists from the various provinces get along very well together when they hold conferences. Perhaps in time they will be able to sell the same spirit of co-operation to their political seniors back home.

Duke of Edinburgh study project

Industrial changes in spotlight at Commonwealth conference

By WALTER STEWART

Along about mid-May, if you get a sudden feeling you're being watched, you'll probably be right.

Canada is going under the microscope for the Duke of Edinburgh's Second Commonwealth Study Conference from May 13 to June 6. During that time, leaders-to-be from 31 Commonwealth countries will be swarming across the land, probing, prodding... and gabbing.

They'll be gathering information for the conference theme: the human consequences of changing industrial environment, taking up where a similar conference left off six years ago.

The first meeting, in England, was attended by 29 Canadians who were so impressed they determined another round should be held, this time in Canada.

They approached Prince Philip, who had inspired the first sessions and served as conference president. The Prince met with a provisional committee during the 1959 Royal tour and agreed to fill the same post here, and to make a keynote address in Montreal.

The session here will have some family resemblance to its English parent, and some environmental bumps of its own.

The general framework will be similar, but the emphasis will be on privacy and informality, with a few major speeches.

To get a Canadian cross-section, the conference will amble across the land from Montreal to Vancouver.

The visitors will fan out in 20 groups of 15 members each.

Success of the meeting will depend in large measure on the mammoth organization job which has been under way for the past two years.

Conference chairman is former Governor Vincent Massey, who lives in Port Hope, Ont. but the bulk of the administration work is being done in Toronto.

NERVE CENTRE

Nerve centre is a suite of rented offices in the Shell Oil building where the conference's executive director, Gordon Hawkins, and vice-chairman, Shell of Canada President W. M. V. Ash, are thrashing out daily problems.

Mr. Ash says their relationship is like that of a company vice-president and his general manager.

To an outsider, it looks more like the byplay between a good short-stop and second baseman: Tinkers to Evans and taking no chances.

The matters of fact come out swiftly.

HUNDREDS COMING

Who's coming? Three hundred delegates from 31 Commonwealth nations; two-thirds management, one-third union personnel; only nine women; most delegates between 25 and 45; chosen by national selection committees for leadership potential; 75 Canadians will include 20 group chairmen; each group will be a cross-section of nationalities and occupations.

Who's Paying? Industries, unions and individuals are putting up the necessary $750,000. No governments need apply. Delegate expenses will be paid from landing to departure including, if necessary, pocket money.

Industrialist E. P. Taylor is heading the finance drive.

"Watching Eddie Taylor on a campaign is real experience," says Mr. Ash. "Most of the money is in already."

What's On The Program? The conference theme will be developed along two main lines:

—Industrialization in its consequences for groups of people—the older worker, the family, the young adult worker, minority groups.

—Industrialization and the community—civic participation, welfare, community planning, housing, recreation.

Among the missing are labor-management relations. This is to avoid political hassles and because the planners don't feel that an Arab from Aden will benefit from a discussion of union problems at Sudbury, Ont.

Where will they go? The conference opens in Montreal, takes in Ottawa, then breaks up into study groups, each to spend a week probing human problems in an industrial community.

Late in May the conference shifts to Toronto to look into questions of transport and urban expansions. Then on to two trains—one CN, one CP, of course—for more transport talk and a look at railway communities.

At Winnipeg, more transport and a look at labor. From Saskatoon, farm industrialization will get a look and in Alberta air transport and northern development are scrutinized.

REVIEW SESSIONS

In early June the scene shifts to B.C. for review sessions. The delegates will live most of the time on university campuses, except that each will make at least four visits to private homes.

What good is the conference? As a matter of opinion, rather than fact, this got a more thorough going-over from Mr. Hawkins and Mr. Ash.

They were asked, "Isn't this just another gab session?" "The best answer to that," said Mr. Hawkins, "is the response we got from delegates to the '56 meeting, when we asked frank appraisals. Most of them called it the most distinctive experience of their lives."

Over to Mr. Ash: "Of course there'll be a lot of gab, but it will be purposeful gab. What they see and do will be a take-off point to examine problems back home."

"And they have no idols to defend or axes to grind either. They're coming strictly as individuals — even Prince Philip," Mr. Ash concluded. (TNS).

Sensational New Zealand success

Lottery brings surplus of riches

AUCKLAND (CP)—The New Zealand government is embarrassed by the sensational success of an officially-approved lottery. The profits so far exceed expectations that the government is worried about methods of disposal.

The lottery was introduced toward the end of last year as a defensive measure because New Zealanders were spending about $4,500,000 a year in overseas gambling, chiefly in Australian lotteries.

The loss of exchange, to no economic advantage, worried successive governments, which tried various devices to cut off the outflow of funds with indifferent results.

So the present government decided "if you can't beat 'em, join 'em." There had long been a small officially-approved local lottery, euphemistically called an "art union," but the prizes were not sufficient to compete with big lotteries abroad.

The government resolved to enter into full competition, despite strong opposition from the churches and anti-gambling interests. It authorized the promotion of Golden Kiwi lotteries, named after the wingless New Zealand Kiwi bird, on terms to match the major Australian lotteries.

Each lottery offers 1,800 prizes, totalling $84,000, with a first prize of $33,500. Tickets sell at the equivalent of 70 cents.

The results exceeded calculations by a wide margin.

The full 250,000 tickets in each lottery are being sold in many cases in less than a week. Customers in many districts find so much difficulty in buying tickets that a revised sales system is being studied.

Even more surprising, there has been a heavy demand for tickets from Australia and elsewhere abroad, with the result New Zealand is recouping some of its long-term losses from that source.

The former small lottery, after promotion costs and commission and prizes, left a surplus of about $600,000 a year which the government distributed to approved charities and worthy causes.

But it is expected profits from the new lottery may reach $3,000,000 a year.

Gerald Waring REPORTING

OTTAWA — Liberal and New Democrat opposition MPs spent some three hours the other day wheeling, cajoling, begging, demanding and storming to be informed what kind of armament would be provided for the CF-104.

The CF-104 is the supersonic strike-reconnaissance aircraft being manufactured by Canadair Ltd. of Montreal for eight RCAF squadrons in Europe. This is a $450 million program, of which $350 million have already been spent or allocated. The first CF-104s are tentatively scheduled for delivery next March.

"We have the right," said Liberal Leader Pearson to a defence minister sitting stolidly silent, "to find out from the government how these planes are going to be armed and equipped."

All the wheeling and storming failed to elicit the nugget of information the opposition sought, namely, that the Conservative administration intends to arm these aircraft with nuclear warheads. Defence Minister Harkness let out dribs and drabs of information, some of it not entirely correct. The 104, he said, will carry air-to-ground missiles that may be nuclear or non-nuclear; it will be equipped to take "eight different types of weapons," and it is "self-evident" that nuclear weapons are "more effective" than non-nuclear weapons.

The minister was noticeably off base in speaking loosely of the 104, instead of the specific 104 the RCAF will get, namely the CF-104. He said the US had used the 104 with non-atomic weapons. But he didn't explain that was the F-104A, a different airplane without, for example, the CF-104's automatic pilot and fire control system, and with a less powerful engine.

His statement that the 104 has been used with conventional missiles (actually heat-seeking Sidewinders) is like a statement that the color of human eyes is blue.

In fact, and despite Mr. Harkness, the CF-104 can be fitted with three types of weapons.

The one it will get is the Bull Pup. This is a US mass produced economy air-to-ground missile, powered with a rocket motor, and radio-controlled by the CF-104 pilot, who can climb, fly level or dive, although he cannot alter its direction to left or right. The Bull Pup may carry a conventional or a nuclear charge.

A weapon the CF-104 may get is an under-wing high explosive bomb.

A weapon the CF-104 won't get is General Electric's Vulcan gun. This has six revolving barrels — in principle, like the Gatling gun of Boer War days. In place of the Vulcan, our 104's will carry extra fuel.

An informed guess is that the CF-104 will go to Europe unarmed, there to be fitted with Bull Pups — nuclear or otherwise as exigencies require. As Harkness told the Commons, "securing armaments for them is not an urgent matter."

More urgent, politically and otherwise, is picking an engine for the CL-41 jet trainer.

There's a real fight over this, with Pratt & Whitney of Montreal pushing its newly designed JT-12, and Orenda Engines Ltd. of Toronto offering General Electric's J-85.

For several reasons, and perhaps not least that Ontario Tory politicians want part of this CL-41 contract for their province, it appears that the jet trainer will be equipped with the Orenda-made GE engine.

MALE MYOPIA

TORONTO (CP) — New York men's fashion editor William Ullman told the Men's Clothing Manufacturers Association of Ontario that men will have to be made more fashion-conscious if the industry is to make profits. New man-made fibres are proving to be embarrassingly durable and this is no help to business turnover, he said.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

SLAM STOLEN BY CAMERA EYE

From my standpoint anyway, the most interesting hand of the Walter Schwimmer Championship bridge series is one in which I stole a slam.

I chose to open three no trump rather than two spades since my hand was go-trump pattern. Then a little confusion set in. Mrs. Johnson responded four clubs as a Stayman major suit request. I thought she was asking for aces with a Gerber bid so responded four no-trump to show three. Then she closed the bidding at six no-trump.

East discarded the deuce of clubs somewhere along the way and otherwise all I looked at were diamond discards so that by the time I was through with spades there was only one diamond left. I cashed my king of diamonds and ace of clubs and still was missing the queen, jack and ten of hearts. I finally decided that for some reason or other East had frozen on to the queen and threw him in with it to force a club lead to dummy's king-jack.

East could have thrown the queen of hearts some seven times, but if you think it is easy to make the right play before those cameras, try it sometimes.

Animals about town

Raps sale of chicks

About this time each year we start to think about Spring and Easter with new bonnets and suits for the ladies, with leaves and flowers starting to grow and with the fluffy yellow chicks and other baby animals beginning to appear.

Each year about this time we, at the S.P.C.A. receive many letters from people asking us to do something about the fluffy little chicks that are sold or given by the stores to children whose parents make a purchase from them. We sympathize most strongly with these people but there is very little that we can do. Until there is proof of cruelty we cannot act. You will notice that any store which indulges in this cruel practice takes every great pains to see that the chicks are well cared for — well fed, give them heat by lamps and all that they require so that we can do nothing but express our disapproval. The only thing that can be done is to try to persuade your friends and neighbors NOT to buy these helpless pets for their children.

Protests from the S.P.C.A. are not as effective with these merchants as many people believe. WHY? Mostly because they expect the S.P.C.A. to protest, but letters and telephone calls of protest from customers of these stores can and often do affect their policy because if something they are doing displeases a large segment of their customers, they are not likely to continue to do so.

Now I have another plea to make. We have an adequate shelter to care for unwanted pets. But not long ago a car was seen from our shelter driving up to another road not far from the shelter and shoving out a large dog and then driving away. Naturally the dog was frightened and ran — and we have been unable to catch it. So, it runs loose, frightened, probably hungry and bewildered. It can be doing damage to property as well.

We have also been advised that some cats were thrown out not too far from our shelter. Why? Are the people ashamed to bring them where they will be cared for? If you have an animal that you cannot keep for some reason bring it to us. We will take it from you. But don't just come somewhere near the shelter and drop it. Be man (or woman) enough to leave it in the hands of a responsible person where it will be looked after and fed.

Donations are still very welcome to help us in our work which increases every year, and should be sent to P.O. Box 301 Lennoxville, Que. An official receipt for income tax purposes will be returned.

A parting thought: Rabies is spreading rapidly through this district. Protect yourself and your dog by having him get a Rabies shot from a veterinarian.

Way to lovely arms and hands

The sleeveless dresses and big bold rings of spring (left) call attention to both lower and upper arm. An effective exercise for firming the upper arm is to extend each arm at shoulder height (upper right) and trace an imaginary figure eight in the

A fashionable look for "after five" this spring is the sleeveless dress, worn with a dazzling costume ring. Naturally, with this fashion, beautiful arms and hands make all the difference in your appearance. Your elbows must be smooth, upper arms firm and nails beautifully manicured before you'll achieve the chic look you desire. Elbow beauty depends on a thorough daily scrubbing followed by lubrication. Inexpensive elbow caps, made for the purpose, so that you won't soil your bed linen.

Exercise, performed with faithful daily regularity, will firm flabby arms. One simple but effective one is to stand with one arm extended at shoulder height. Draw a figure eight in the air, pretending that your fingers are holding a pencil, and using your whole arm for the motion. Do this 10 times with each arm at first, increasing the number gradually to 20 as you become accustomed to the exercise.

Use hand lotion each time you wash your hands to prevent roughness. Massage it in carefully, as though you were fitting a glove, taking each finger separately.

The new dazzling costume rings are handsome, even though they're frankly fake. But they draw all eyes to the hands and make faithful adherence to the weekly manicure a must. If your ring has a colored stone, your polish shade should be chosen to set it off. And if you have a selection of rings, make sure you have just as big a collection of polish shades to wear with them.

Should your ring stain your finger, brush ring inside and out with warm soap or detergent suds. Then rinse and dry with a soft cloth and follow up with a thin coat of colorless polish.

When you're spotless and well groomed from shoulders to fingertips, you won't just be wearing fashion, you'll look lovely.

There's one in every crowd—the guest, who having been offered a choice of drinks by his host—asks for some outlandish concoction.

Parental action can set a minimum dating age

In line with an editorial suggesting that parents ought to get together on a minimum dating age for their children — and suggesting 15 as a reasonable age—the Memphis Press-Scimitar had a reporter ask a number of teen-agers how they felt about it.

It may surprise a lot of parents to learn that the teen-agers interviewed didn't view the suggestion with outrage or alarm.

Some of them agreed wholeheartedly with the idea, admitting freely that under-15 is just too young for boys and girls to go out alone on dates.

One 13-year-old said with considerable maturity: "I think teen-agers should be 15 before they start dating. If they're not, what would they have left to look forward to later on? When you're 18, 19 or 20 all the fun would be gone from dating if you started dating too young."

Those young people who didn't agree wholeheartedly with the idea of a no-dating-before-15 general rule still didn't uphold earlier dating for all teen-agers. They merely maintained that since some teen-agers are more mature and responsible than others—they felt the time for any teen-ager to start dating was individual matter.

So if teen-agers themselves aren't wildly rebellious about the idea of parents getting together and setting a proper age for beginning dating—why don't the parents of children in the same school or neighborhood get together and solve the problem of too early dating once and for all?

Apparently the kids aren't going to fight such allied action. In fact, many of them would probably be relieved to know they don't have to start worrying about getting

The past week was one of keen anticipation as the inter-playoffs took place. Colby House won the greater number of points in hockey and Davis House in basketball. Skating could not be completed owing to the lack of snow.

Monday afternoon the staff and prefects played a game of broomball on Border Arena ice.
It was an exciting game and the staff proved the best by a score of two to zero. Each side was cheered on by staff and student spectators.

Bishop's University Glee club,

Hutchison will be at Waterloo giving a talk at the Home and

Coach Imlach looking for better game tonight, Coach Harvey to use new strategy seeking a victory

TORONTO (CP) — Usually confident coach Punch Imlach of Toronto Maple Leafs isn't counting his chickens before they're hatched these days, at least not publicly.

The loquacious Imlach, who doubles as the club's general manager, has been willing all this season to tell reporters how his Leafs were going to win this and that.

Before the Stanley Cup semi-final series against New York Rangers started Tuesday night, Imlach became cautious, reserving comment about his club's chances. Leafs won the game 4-2, but the Toronto coach started singing songs of woe after the game and his tune hadn't changed Wednesday.

He even looked beyond tonight's game here to the third and fourth of the best-of-seven series in New York Sunday and Tuesday nights.

"If you don't fight in New York, you're dead," he said after a Toronto practice Wednesday. "You've got to check in New York or you're in trouble."

And the Leafs coach was anything but pleased with Toronto's shoddy performance Tuesday night. They were saved only by the fact that New York also had a bad night and Imlach figures his club has to—and can—play much better.

Goaltending to decide outcome of semi-finals, says Coach Pilous, key game tonight, says Toe Blake

MONTREAL (CP) — Coach Rudy Pilous figures the Stanley Cup semi-final series that pits his Chicago Black Hawks against Montreal Canadiens will be decided by goaltending.

The best-of-seven round would then boil down to a question of who turns out to be the "hot-test goalie"—Jacques Plante of Canadiens or Glenn Hall of the Black Hawks.

"Everything is equal on the defenses and along the forward lines," said Pilous Wednesday.

"So it figures that whoever comes up with the big saves will hold up his team."

Both netminders turned in superb performances in Tuesday night's series opener, which Canadiens won 2-1. The set resumes here tonight.

Pilous says the Hawks will be out to prove they are the defending world champions in tonight's battle.

Canadiens would be in the driver's seat if they win the second game. But if they lose, the Hawks would have the advantage as the scene shifts to Chicago for the third and fourth games April 1 and April 3.

If further games are necessary, they'll be played at Montreal April 5, Chicago April 8 and Montreal April 10.

Pilous concedes the Canadiens have great balance up front—seven 20-goal scorers in regular-season National Hockey League play — "but it won't mean a thing if Hall remains hot."

Pilous and other Chicago officials regard tonight's game as a key one.

Score two goals in third period, Jacques Boivin bangs in winner, meet in Richmond Friday evening

ROCK ISLAND — (Staff) — Richmond Braves hammered home two third period goals here last night to edge Rock Island Jets 3-2 and move up a notch in the best-of-seven St-Francis Valley Intermediate Hockey finals.

Richmond leads the series 3-2 and are heavy favorites to finish it Friday evening at the Richmond Coliseum. The Braves said their good-byes to the Border Arena, seemingly sure that they "wouldn't be back again this year." If the Jets pull an upset and win Friday evening a seventh game would be forced for Rock Island Sunday.

Play was wide open from the opening whistle last night with each team looking for that all important first goal. J. G. Dion, lanky Rock Island winger, drew the first blood at 10:20. Standing uncovered at the corner of the net he flipped in a Gerry Menard rebound and the Jets went ahead 1-0.

Richmond was quick to take advantage. Roger Smith scored the tying goal at 4:38 on passes from G. St. Laurent and J. Talbot. After taking the pass, Smith drifted in on the left side and let a 40-footer go. Provencher seemed weak on the shot.

Richmond continued to press and at 9:30 Jacques Boivin hammered in the winning goal. The speedy Richmond forward stole the puck from a Rock Island rearward and streaking in waited until Provencher made his move before booming his back-hander to the left side.

With less than a minute to go in the game Provencher was yanked from the nets in favor of an extra forward. Gilbert Sawyer was brilliant on two occasions in the closing minutes. Gerry Menard was alone in front of the net twice but Sawyer robbed him of almost sure goals.

Eight penalties were handed out in the game, five of them going to Rock Island. J. Beaudet, a defenseman, was slapped with minor penalties four times. Sawyer was the busier man in nets, stopping 32 shots. Provencher had 26 to handle.

Reynold Beaudoin scored the only goal of the middle period and again the Jets took a one goal lead. Beaudoin cut in sharply at the Richmond blue line. Menard laid a perfect pass on his stick, and he streaked in between the two Richmond rearwards to deke Sawyer and drill it into the upper corner.

As the third period opened, Rock Island seemed to let up.

Downs - Pender to take tests before fight

BOSTON (AP) — Terry Downs of London and Paul Pender of Brookline agreed Wednesday to take brain tests before their middleweight title bout at Boston Garden April 7.

The Massachusetts Boxing Commission ordered the tests following Benny (Kid) Pare's brain injury in a fight with Emile Griffith last Saturday night.

Benny Kid Paret has slim chance to survive

NEW YORK (AP) — Former welterweight boxing champion Benny (Kid) Paret entered his fifth day of unconsciousness today. His wife was optimistic but doctors said he still had only a slight chance to survive. Paret, from Cuba, was knocked out by Emile Grifflin in the 12th round of their title fight Saturday night.

A medical bulletin from Roosevelt Hospital Wednesday night said the 25-year-old fighter "is maintaining the slight improvement which he showed yesterday. His condition remains critical." A hospital spokesman said Paret's coma had lessened but remained deep. "There's no way of telling how long he'll be in a coma. He could come out of it in a few minutes or a year from now. And he might not come out of it at all."

While the reports were not encouraging, Paret's pregnant wife, Lucy, said "I feel a lot better than I felt about his condition before. To me he's just sleeping. I'm praying that any minute he will wake up."

Conception Bay top tuna fishing ground

NEW YORK (CP) — Newfoundland's Conception Bay, quietly building up a reputation for two years as a topnotch tuna fishing ground, established itself beyond dispute as the finest water in the world in 1961. The big bay, only half an hour's drive from St. John's, barely made it with the biggest fish but produced seven of the top 10 in Field and Stream magazine's annual angling competition.

The authoritative outdoor magazine releases the results in its April issue, out today. While Newfoundland's salt water fishing came to the fore, its many salmon streams apparently don't belong in the big leagues any more. New Brunswick rivers dominated the Atlantic salmon contest, with only slight competition from Quebec. To end any illusions—if any fishermen still have them—that angling is a man's game, the winners in all three salmon categories were women. And, fly-fishing for salmon is regarded among the most delicate and demanding of all angling skills.

The coastal rivers of British Columbia continued to provide top fly-fishing sport for western rainbow trout, but for lunkers the place to go is Idaho's Lake Pend Oreille where a world record was challenged last year. Jaime Wyatt of St. John's took the top tuna, 834 pounds compared with the 1959 record of 977 pounds from St. Ann Bay, N.S. Wedgeport, N.S., home of the world tuna tournament, gave up the No. 2 fish to Dorthea L. Dean of Palm Beach, Fla., 830 pounds.

They were followed by Ern Shue of St. John's, 765 pounds, Conception Bay; Tony Blasi, 758 pounds, Point Judith, R.I.; and James Davidson of Halifax, 732 pounds, Conception Bay.

The Atlantic salmon champ was Mrs. Jean Knox of Buffalo, N.Y., with a 40-pounder caught at Kedgwick, N.B.

Alan S. Gordon of Westmont, Que., was second with a 38½-pounder although his name does not appear in the April issue. The magazine announced it was inadvertently omitted. It came from the Grand Casapedia in Quebec's Gaspé Peninsula. Next in line are Sherburne, Prescott, Greenwich, Conn., 36 pounds, caught in New Brunswick's Restigouche River; Percy Storey, Doaktown, N.B. 36 pounds, Miramichi River; and Warren B. Stillman, Windsor, Conn., 27½ pounds, Cains River, N.B. In the rainbow fly-fishing class, it was almost all British Columbia, the top, R. E. Young, Okonogan, Wash., 20½ pounds, Skeena River.
