A GENERAL ELECTION IS NOT LIKELY

Measure For Extension of the Parliamentary Term is Probability.

MAY BE EARLY SESSION OF HOUSE

Only Likelihood of Difference is Length of the Extended Term.

Special to The Montreal Star From Our Own Correspondent.

OTTAWA, Aug. 28.— Sir Robert Borden and Sir Sam Hughes will be back in Ottawa at the end of next week. It is announced that there will be no official reception by the Government to the Prime Minister and this is understood to be the wish of Sir Robert himself. In Montreal and Ottawa local Conservatives may provide some sort of a celebration.

As much of the time of the Prime Minister when abroad has been devoted to discussions in respect to the raising of troops in Canada and the output of munitions, interest will attach to any new announcement which may be made in that connection. So far there is no intimation here as to what new departure, if any, will be taken. There will be further conferences here between Sir Robrt and D. A. Thomas, the representative of the War Munitions Minister, who is about completing an exhaustive investigation in Canada.

NO GENERAL ELECTION.

There is a practical certainty that no general election will be held this autumn, but that when Parliament meets—and the time of it will probably be determined soon—a measure will be submitted providing for an extension of the parliamentary term.

Under ordinary circumstances no session will take place till New Years, but there is a possibility that this year it may be earlier than is usual.

It seems fairly understood that the Liberals will agree to the principle of extending the term. They do not favor an election. Any possible difference, therefore, would be with reference to the duration of the extra term.

CHANGE IN POLICY IS INSINCERE

Naval Experts in London Condemn German Notification Scheme

DESCRIBED AS A NEW MURDER PLAN

Will U. S. Be Satisfied with Such Base Coin, Asks Paris Paper

Special Star Cable.

LONDON, August 28.— While the Daily News insists that Count von Bernstorff's pledge that Germany will give full satisfaction to the United States for the Arabic outrage, and will not torpedo any more merchantmen without warning, is a distinct climb down by Berlin, and to that extent a victory for President Wilson, the Daily Telegraph and other morning newspapers are inclined to consider it another case of

"When the Devil was sick, the Devil a monk would be;
"When the Devil was well, the devil a monk was he."

The Daily Telegraph's naval expert, Archibald Hurd, describes Count von Bernstorff's program as merely "a new murder policy, in which the murderer gives to the victims notice that he is going to kill them and destroy their property instead of slaughtering them without warning."

ONLY SAFE SETTLEMENT.

The insists that the only settlement the United States can afford to accept is a pledge that Germany will abide by the rules of the sea, which provide among other things that merchantmen can be sunk only after the passengers and crew have been removed, with an ample supply of food and other comforts, to a place of safety, which does not mean open boats exposed to the dangers of the sea in stormy weather.

Mr. Hurd closes by declaring:

"If murder on the high seas is to continue, it is not a matter of importance whether warning be given to neutrals or not."

He and other experts agree that if Germany apologizes for the Arabic crime, that does not dispose of the Falaba case or of the wholesale murder of American men, women and children on board the Lusitania.

THINKS SUBMARINE GONE.

The Daily News in an editorial today hazards the suggestion that the submarine which sunk the steamship Arabic has itself since been sunk, and that therefore Germany's disavowal of the action of the underwater boat commander becomes comparatively easy. The editorial continues:

"If it is true that Germany is prepared to abandon or suspend her attacks, the United States has won a considerable diplomatic victory. There is not the slightest reason to suppose that Doctor von Bethmann-Hollweg (the German Imperial Chancellor) sanctioned the attack upon the Arabic or desired to acerbate the relations with America.

"The sinking of the Arabic may be assumed with some degree of certainty to have been the malignant trick of his opponents, the Tirpitzites, designed quite as much to embarrass him as to drive America into action."

The paper says that the "submission of official Germany to the United States demands is a fact of historic importance, involving at least recognition of the force of public opinion and insofar justifies President Wilson's patient diplomacy."

The editorial adds:

"If this really has been accomplished, the President has struck a shrewd blow for peace in other continents than America. If the United States can impose conditions and limitations on Germany's war methods, other nations can do the same, and Germany's claim to be her own judge in such matters is once and for all shattered."

NO BLUFF THIS TIME.

The Standard, in an editorial on the subject, expressing the opinion that there are several good reasons for supposing that Count von Bernstoff, German Ambassador to the United States, is not bluffing, but that it is not probable Germany will abandon her "submarine savagery" altogether.

"There would be fierce complaints over the relinquishment of so potent a weapon at American dictation," says the Standard. "For their own satisfaction, the Germans will adopt a pose of making important but not vital concessions out of pure friendship for the United States, and it is not likely that President Wilson, on his part, will stand for the strict letter of his demand.

"The primary reason for the concession is doubtless the conviction that Mr. Wilson's patience is nearly exhausted, and that his next step would mean business."

DISCUSSION SUSPENDED.
By Canadian Press.

WASHINGTON, August 28.—Discussion of the case of the Lusitania, sunk by a German submarine, with the loss of American lives, will not be renewed between the United States and Germany pending settlement of the Arabic incident, it was said here to-day.

Although the United States has been notified of Germany's readiness to again take up the Lusitania affair, and to offer reparation, the United States Government will not listen to such a proposal until the situation growing out of the sinking of the Arabic is finally settled.

Nothing further on the sinking of the Arabic is looked for from Germany until the submarine commander, who sank the vessel, reports.

While administration officials are much encouraged by the German Ambassador's assurances that it was Germany's intention to offer full satisfaction to the United States for the sinking of the liner, they will continue to maintain an "open mind" on the Arabic case until Germany's next communication on the subject is received.

TERSE FRENCH COMMENT.
By Canadian Press.

PARIS, August 28.—The Figaro, in an editorial today on the situation growing out of the sinking of the steamer Arabic, says:

"Germany is a universal distributor of excuses. She handed them to Denmark and Holland, and would like to hand them to the United States. The point is, will the American Government be satisfied with such base coin? For German excuses imply neither repentance nor intention to relapse.

"Wilhelmstrasse expects that she will be quiet for a platitude. But the German pitcher has gone to the American well too often; it is too badly cracked for further use; a new one is wanted.

"President Wilson and the Secretary of State, Mr. Lansing, will no longer be satisfied with empty words. Berlin is well aware of it, and is doing everything to gain at least a few days."

TO FIRE BERLIN FROM AEROPLANE IS LATEST PLAN

Allies Will Have Aero Soon Flying from Soissons to Russia, Declares American Aviator Now at Front in France

Special to The Montreal Star.

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., August 28.—By far the most vivid as well as the most satisfying description to reach this country of the way the Allies are carrying on their aerial operations has been received here by W. Starling Burgess, of the Burgess Company, from Norman Prince, son of F. H. Prince, of Pride's Crossing.

Early during the present year Mr. Prince volunteered his services as an aviator for the French Government and during the summer has played a considerable part in the offensive air operations of the French forces, particularly in the hotly-contested sector north of Arras.

Mr. Prince was a pupil of the Burgess school here, taking his certificate on a Burgess-Wright aeroplane. Writing under the date of July 8, he mentions some of the developments in aviation which have been taking place during the war, particularly the increase in engine power and consequent lift, and continues:

CAN SET FIRE TO BERLIN.

"Before the end of this war we shall have an aeroplane with at least 800 or 1,000 horsepower flying from Soissons to Russia and putting fire to the four corners of Berlin. The Boches have an appareil de chasse which has already brought down two Moranes. It has two motors with tractor screws, two fuselages and two mitrailleuses.

"The Caudrons are used for directing artillery fire, the Maurice Farmans for the same purpose and for photography. The Moranes are for long reconnaissances and 'La Chasse au Taubes', the Nieuports are used for appareil de chasse, the Voisin and Breguet for dropping bombs and the Voisin cannon, (with 37-millimetre guns), for bombarding captive balloons and Zeppelins.

ESCADRILLE AMERICAINE.

"Our plans—and we have been assured lately they would be carried out — are two of them an Escadrille Americaine as soon as eight Americans are ready. Six of them already have their brevet militaries and four of them are at the front. Two of them, (Cowdin and Thaw), have been decorated. Not so bad, is it? We shall ride the two-motored Caudron.

"It is now eleven o'clock and I must get to bed, as there is a bombardment announced, departure at half past two a.m. We are to bombard a railroad centre, twenty kilometres the other side, in Bocherie, as we call it."

MEDICAL OFFICER DEFENDS AMHERST CAMP CONDITIONS

By Canadian Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—Lieut. Ross Millar, of the Medical Corps, writes on the German report of alleged ill-treatment of prisoners of war at Amherst, Nova Scotia:

"I was medical officer in charge of this camp from its inception until August 19. I am in a position unofficially to deny these charges."

He described the house in which the Germans are imprisoned as containing good sleeping quarters, a large dining hall, hot and cold shower baths. The prisoners receive coupons with which they can buy extra rations exactly the same as those of Canadian soldiers. The American Consul visits the camp regularly.

SITUATION TODAY IN SOUTH WALES IS MORE SERIOUS

Special Star Cable by United Press.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—The South Wales strike situation grew more serious today. Despatches from Cardiff, Newport and other coal centres said the striking miners have refused to heed the advice of their executive council to return to work, pending negotiations with the Government.

More than 30,000 of the 200.000 miners represented in the South Wales Federation are now idle. Word came from Newport today that probably every miner in the Monmouthshire district will quit work tonight unless today's conferences in London show a disposition on the part of the Government to recognize the miners' claims.

Four thousand more miners quit work in Monmouthshire today.

Miners' officials arrived here today to renew their attempts to convince Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, that his arbitration award had fallen far short of the promise made by the Government.

If Mr. Runciman ignores the miners' representatives for the second time and refuses them a conference, at least half of the miners in South Wales are expected to quit work tonight.

MOUNTED RIFLES TO MAKE A LONG TREK

BROCKVILLE, Ont., August 28.—Arrangements are being completed for the trek to Brockville early in September of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, now in training at Kingston. Colonel Munro plans to make the journey cover approximately 200 miles, traversing the country roads via Joyceville and Athens.

FRENCH ARE PREPARED FOR FINAL ASSAULTS UPON FECHT DISTRICT

Vigorous Campaign Has Resulted in Steady if Slow Progress—Russia Preparing for Great Campaign in Spring—Grand Duke's Strategy Succeeds Beyond Expectations

Special Star Cable.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—The French, by sharp actions in the Vosges in which they have overcome innumerable obstacles, have straightened out their front north of Sondernach and are believed to be about ready for their final operations against Munster and the lower Fecht valley.

Outside the official communiques, little attention has been paid recently to this offensive in Alsace. The field of action is relatively far removed from the centre of the western theatre, and the picturesqueness of the campaign, which in many respects resembles the struggle between the Austrians and Italians in Tyrol and in Carnia, has been lost.

For more than two months, however, the French Alpine troops, together with large bodies of line infantry, have been engaged in a constant advance that never once has been stopped. The progress has been slow, necessarily, since every hillcrest, every mountain summit, is a strongly-fortified and strongly-held position, which is occupied only after long artillery bombardment has paved the way for assaults.

Sondernach is on a south fork of the Fecht river, less than two miles from Metzeral, which the French occupied in July. The front in this sector now extends in a shallow halfcircle around Munster from Reichackerkopf to Sondernach, with Munster under the fire of the French guns.

There is no estimate possible of the number of French engaged in this portion of Alsace, but reports from Berlin indicate they are opposed by more than a full army corps of Germans. There is reason to believe the vigor of the French offensive has caused big reinforcements to be sent into the region to prevent further progress toward Colmar.

Brest-Litovsk Was Not Captured by Hun Assault

By Canadian Press.

PETROGRAD, August 27, via London, August 28. — A Russian official statement concerning the Austro-German occupation of Brest-Litosk was given out tonight as follows:

"General Headquarters declares that the German report that Brest-Litovsk fell after an assault by Austro-German troops is inexact.

"For some time already it had been decided that to retain a garrison of one hundred thousand men in this fortress was not conformable with the Russians plans. Hence war material useful to the enemy was removed on time, and resistance was maintained on the left bank of the Bug solely to enable the army operating in this region to retire eastward.

"When this retirement was completed the fortifications and bridges were destroyed and the garrison rejoined the army in the field."

Russian Minister of War Talks of Plans for Spring

By Canadian Press.

LONDON, August 28—The Petrograd correspondent of the Times quotes General Polivanoff, Russian Minister of War, as follows:

"We are confident of our ability to safeguard Petrograd. Our armies can stand the winter without inconvenience. Everything is ready for that purpose.

"A new force of 2,000,000 men will be trained far behind the fighting line and will be ready to take the field in the spring. General Ruszky is Commander-in-Chief of the Petrograd front, with several armies at his immediate disposal.

"It is my settled purpose to do everything in my power to work in harmony with the Duma and public opinion."

General Polivanoff, says the correspondent, characterized the suggestion that the Allies were not helping Russia to the utmost of their power as "senseless gossip."

Riga Theatre Again Coming Into Prominence

Special Star Cable.

LONDON, August 28.—With the Austro-German armies in control of all the Brest-Litovsk line except the fortress of Grodno, which Petrograd intimates will be evacuated as soon as the army it is covering is well out of danger, the Riga theatre again comes into prominence as the centre of the German effort.

Battles of great intensity are in progress southeast of Mitau along the Aa and the Dvina rivers, with their issue in doubt. Two separate although closely related engagements have been in progress for two days, one near Bausk and the other around Jacobstadt.

The capture of Brest-Litovsk and the shifting of the action on the Bug river front to the forests and marshes to the east will release large numbers of the Teutonic Allies for duty elsewhere. The terrain here prevents manoeuvring on a large scale, and the forces utilized in the drive across the open plains from Warsaw and Ivangorod are expected to be diverted largely to Field Marshal von Hindenberg's command for the move through Vilna and Dvinsk to Minsk, where the Germans hope to cut the Russian avenue of retreat.

The prospects of the success of such an operation, it is confidently believed here, is very small. There is a feeling, in fact, that the Grand Duke Nicholas now has a substantial part of his armies on the new defence line which passes in the vicinity of Minsk.

By Canadian Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, via London, August 28 11:11 a.m.—An official report from the Dardanells front, under date of August 26, was given out here today as follows:

"Nothing has occurred except now and then artillery and infantry fighting at Anafarta. At Sedd-ul-Bahr, the artillery of our left wing, destroyed part of the enemy's trenches. From other points there is nothing particular to report."

GERMAN VIEW OF WHAT THE HUN INTENDED

By Canadian Press.

OAKLAND, Calif., August 28.—That Germany was the victim of a wrong system of education was the declaration made by John Mez, of Munich, Germany, at the closing session here last night of the National Educational Association. "Internationalism" was the subject of his address. He said in part:

"Those in my country who made war meant it for the world's gain. They did not mean to destroy. They are the victims of a wrong system of education. They have been taught nothing beyond an irrational conception of militarism.

"Everyone who lives in the United States and loves civilization and humanity should be grateful to the man who has kept America out of the war.

"Education in Internationalism," he continued, "means educating the old men first to change the idea that collective homicide is the proper thing.

"The first duty of a man is not to defend his country, but not to attack any other country.

"The most gratifying sight in the world is the spectacle of the college presidents of the country talking peace; for education is the one great agency which will wipe out the stupidity of militarism."

PAYS PART SALARY ALSO

To the Editor of The Montreal Star:

Sir.—We see you are publishing a list of the names of firms who are keeping positions open for men who have gone to the front. We are not only doing this, but have also been paying a proportion of salaries as well to the large number of men who have gone from our staff in Canada and England.

DR. JAEGER'S SANITARY WOOLLEN SYSTEM, LIMITED.

PROMOTION AS WELL

To the Editor of The Montreal Star:

Sir.—The R. J. Tooke Company not only assured every employe of his job on his return from the front, but also promised them promotion. One year ago George Wood, who was connected with the St. James street store, volunteered for service. He returned a few days ago, discharged from the hospital, with one leg four inches shorter than the other, and was at once promoted to be superintendent of the Uptown Store building at Peel and St. Catherine streets.

THE SOCIAL WORLD

Inglis-Peard.

A very quiet wedding took place last Wednesday evening, August 25, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Peard, 387 Mance street, when their fourth daughter, Maggie S., was married to Sergeant John Inglis, of the Composite Guard, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Inglis, of Point St. Charles. The Rev. Dr. Gibson, chaplain of the Royal Engineers, officiated. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore her travelling suit of navy blue broadcloth, with crepe de chine blouse and hat to match, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by Miss Jessie McChesney, cousin of the groom, as maid of honor, and her sister, Miss Stella Peard, as bridesmaid. The wedding march was played by Miss Annie Pearcey, and the ribbon bearers were Miss Margaret Tetford and Miss Libbie Peard. The best man was Signaller H. L. Peard, R.C.N.V.R., brother of the bride. The groom, who is on active service, wore his khaki uniform, while the best man was in naval uniform. A reception was held after the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Inglis left later for Harricanaw, where they will reside.

Engagements Announced

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. McLachlan, 310 Lansdowne avenue, Westmount, announce the engagement of their only daughter, Inez Weir, to Lieutenant Shirley Greenshields Dixon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Dixon, Weredale Park. Miss McLachlan will leave for England on September 4, where her marriage will take place about the middle of the month.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Slack announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth Florence, to Mr. Harold E. A. Dowling, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Dowling, London, England. The wedding will take place very quietly on the seventh of September.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Leveque, Dorchester street west, announce the engagement of their daughter, Hildred Cecelia, to Mr. Norman Edwin Thomas, son of Mrs. James Thomas, Shuter street. The marriage will take place quietly the latter part of September.

Mr. James M. Paterson announces the engagement of his second daughter Florence Ethel, to Mr. Harry Hawkesworth, both of Westmount. The marriage will take place on September 7, at the Church of the Good Shepherd, Westmount.

Selinsky-Hambourg Recital is Being Arranged for Montreal

Music lovers will be pleased to hear that arrangements are being made to have a Selinsky-Hambourg recital at an early date in Montreal. Mr. Selinsky will be remembered as the brilliant young Russian violinist who made such an impression when he appeared at His Majesty's theatre and the Windsor Hall last winter.

Ivan Hambourg, the noted Russian pianist, has just arrived from England, and will appear with Mr. Selinsky. Mr. Hambourg appeared with his famous nephews, Boris and Jan at the Bechstein Hall, London, England, and made quite a reputation as a pianist on that occasion.

The date of the recital will be announced later.

BROTHERHOOD DAY TO BE CELEBRATED

Brotherhood Day will be celebrated on Sunday in Fairmount Avenue Methodist Church, the arrangements for which have been in the hands of the Fairmount Chapter of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip. The various men's associations of the North End and other parts of the city are co-operating, and are sending delegations to represent them at the special services. At 9.45 a men's meeting will be held in the lecture hall of the church, at which a song service, assisted by the orchestra, will be carried out and an address given by John S. Gibb, of the American Presbyterian Church. At 11 a.m. Mr. Gibb will preach a special sermon to men in the church, and at 7 p.m. R. H. Buchanan will occupy the pulpit. At the regular Brotherhood gathering at 9:45 the Brotherhood Orchestra will render appropriate selections. J. Gordon Edwards will occupy the chair, and Geo. B. Rorke will assist at the morning service.

The war cost Japan about $50,000,000 to date and an additional $26,000,000 is to be appropriated.

SCHOOLS OPEN, BUT TEXT BOOKS ARE NO CHEAPER

Nothing Done in Last Two Years to Remedy Matters—Prices Have Increased in Some Instances—What Cost is for Different Years

ARTICLE I.

Within a few days, the public schools of Montreal will again be open. The scholar is gathering his grammars, his arithmetics and his spellers. The parent is again besieged to pay abnormal prices for text-books; and, as he recalls the discussions of the past, he wonders whether reform will ever be reached before the millennium, whether Quebec is forever doomed to wander a long way behind Ontario in the matter of text-books, whether talk will ever result in anything but talk.

For the text-book question stands this year just where it stood last year and has stood for years back. One or two changes have been made in the list of books approved by the Council of Public Instruction. The Catholic and Protestant Boards have discussed text-books at length, sometimes at great length. High prices remain. Where, in Toronto, a public school arithmetic may be obtained for ten cents, in Montreal it costs twenty cents. A fourth year reader in Toronto costs sixteen cents; in Montreal, it costs forty.

So the thing goes on year after year. Such changes as are made here are of little effect. It is merely that some new text-book meets with official sanction and finds itself on the approved list. To the pocket of the parent, there is no advantage. He scarcely knows of the change, except that it occassionally costs him more.

PROSPECT NOT BRIGHT.

This year's list of approved books to be used in the public schools controlled by the Protestant Board of School Commissioners will be viewed with some apprehension. For the workingman, scarcely now in the years of plenty, the prospect is not encouraging.

How much the text-books and materials in the first and second years cost will be seen from the following table. The list is the official one of the Protestant Board for use in public schools. The prices have been secured from retail dealers and may be taken as the average:

FIRST YEAR—SECOND HALF.

ARE BECOMING DEARER.

The above lists are illuminating in more than one sense. They show that so far from decreasing in price, text-book for the public schools tend to become dearer. Within the last two years there have been changes in the readers. In the first half of the second year of the 1913 list, Part II. of the First Book of the Quebec Reader was given as the text-book. This retailed at ten cents. This year the text-book for the same grade is Book II. of the Imperial Reader, and it costs fifteen cents. The only change has been an advance.

In the second half of the second year, in 1913, the reader used was the First Book of the Ontario Reader. It retailed at six cents. This year's reader for the same grade is the Imperial, Book II It retails at twenty cents

Text-books and accessories required in the remaining grades of the public schools this year are:

Fine Leather Goods
of British Manufacture

THE facilities the House of Mappin possess for surmounting great difficulties in the production of high class merchandise can be seen in this department in a more outstanding manner than almost any other.

Only such an establishment as Mappin's could produce, during these war times, such an array of charming wares in leather of the highest standard of workmanship. The results of our efforts can be seen in the magnificent Fall display in our showrooms.

Writing requisites, Folding Photo Frames, Hand Bags, Wallets, Card Cases, Visitors' Books, At Home Books, Address Books, etc., etc., and many other charming ideas in most fascinating designs.

You are cordially invited and you will not be importuned to purchase.

Our 1916 Catalogue is in course of compilation. It is intended to be the last word in merchandise illustrating. Out of town residents who cannot conveniently call are invited to write for their copy.

TRANSPORTATION IN GOOD SHAPE TO HANDLE BIG CROP

Blockade in Dealing with Western Grain is Not Anticipated This Year

SEASON OF ACTIVITY HAS OPENED AGAIN

Railway Facilities are Practically Double Those of Previous Harvests

Special to The Montreal Star.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., August 28.—The grain rush is on. These are the magic words which bring Port Arthur and Fort William to a realization that their season of greatest activity has opened again. The first cars of the 1915 crop have been received from the west and from now on for several months the cereals which are to feed an empire will flow in a ceaseless stream.

At these two cities, where the traffic from the west converges, and where the bulk in transfer from rail to sail during the season of navigation, the announcement that the crop has started to move finds everything in better shape for handling it than has ever been the case.

The statement that the harvest is to be the biggest ever and that there will be upwards of 175,000,000 bushels of surplus for export contains no element of fear for the railway companies nor for those concerned in the operation of a series of elevators that takes second place for the continent, being only three million bushels short of that claimed by Chicago, the premier grain shipping port, and still growing.

DESPITE RECORD CROPS.

The rush of grain from the west has caused blockades in the past. There should be none this year, in spite of the record crops. The reason is that the railway facilities are practically double those of last year. This doubling has been brought about by the completion of the Canadian Northern Railway's Port Arthur to Sudbury link, giving it a through service, and the putting into shape for full operation of the National Transcontinental, which is now under Dominion Government control, including the branch line connecting Winnipeg with the head of the lakes. Last year the Canadian Pacific Railway was the only railway capable of giving a full service past Lake Superior to the east, and most of this line is now double-tracked.

It is this eastern service which acts as a safety valve against the possibility of a blockade such as has been previously experienced at the head of the lakes and which cause considerable trouble in the marketing of Western Canada's grain.

ELEVATOR CAPACITY.

In Port Arthur and Fort William there are fifteen terminal elevators with a total capacity of 41,935,000 bushels. At the present time these are holding only about two million bushels, so that the railway will have to bring in from the west forty million bushels more than is taken out by steamers in the same time before the grain cars will begin to stand in the yards. And if it should become necessary to keep the cars standing in the yards room can be found there for something over fifteen thousand of them. An additional storage capacity of fifteen million bushels is thus provided. At Port Arthur and Fort William the three transcontinental railways have a total approximately 159 miles of terminal trackage, divided as follows: C.P.R., 103.7 miles; Canadian Northern, 36 miles; and National Transcontinental, 20 miles.

The elevators of the twin ports are so equipped that they can take grain from the cars and load it into boats at the rate of three thousand cars a day, which amounts to about one hundred million bushels a month. It is thus apparent that the railways and eleva tors arel senhmi railways and elevators are in shape to take care of the grain from the west as fast as it is offered.

SHIPPING TONNAGE LOW.

The same cannot be said of the Canadian lake shipping. The available tonnage is not as great as in other seasons. Owing to moderation in the number of cargoes offered on the lakes and the great demand for shipping on the Atlantic, the Canadian lake Lines sent thirty of their vessels to the Atlantic—the Midland Queen, one of them, was torpedoed by a German submarine. Of course, they could be returned at any time, but they are so busy that such a course is unlikely.

There are left in active service on the lakes about one hundred vessels with a total carrying capacity of twelve million bushels. The average time for a trip to Montreal is three weeks, but this trip is taken only by the Welland canal size boats, being those not more than 256 feet in length, each with a carrying capacity of about 80,000 bushels. The larger vessels must dispose of their cargoes at Buffalo, Port Colborne, Midland or some other receiving points this side of Welland. Their effect is to cut down the average time for a trip and increase the average load, so that a fair estimate for the total shipping capacity with all the Canadian tonnage in service would be something short of a million bushels a day. This falls short of the loading capacity of the elevators, and probably also short of the amount which shippers will wish to get out during the final weeks of navigation.

TO MEET DIFFICULTY.

However that is not a difficulty which cannot be overcome. It is just such as has arisen before and duly met. It is necessary only for the Ottawa Government to pass an Order-in-Council suspending the Canadian coasting laws. This would at once make available for the Canadian shipper the magnificent lake shipping of the United States which comprises between four and five hundred vessels ranging from three to twelve thousand tons a piece. This would provide for all the grain Western Canada could offer for shipment through the twin ports of Port Arthur and Fort William, which, by the way, are now considered by the Government and shipping men as one port.

THREE LARGE ELEVATORS.

The three largest elevators here are the Canadian Northern Railway with a capacity of 9,500,000 bushels, C. P. R. elevator "D" which holds 7,000,000 bushels, and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway's elevator of 6,500,000 bushels capacity. These are declared by experts to be the last word in elevator construction and the speed with which they can handle grain is marvellous. It is on record that a three-thousand ton vessel has tied up to the docks and in one hour's time has thrown off her lines with a full cargo of three thousand tons of wheat loaded and trimmed in her hold.

The twelve smaller elevators are quite as efficient. All are now in excellent shape and local shipping men expect the biggest grain shipping year in history of these two ports. The record to date was in 1913 when the enormous total of 203,377,000 bushels of grain were placed in boats from the elevators of Fort Arthur and Fort Wiliam. This year should do much better for the simple reason that the crop in the west is much larger and shipping facilities have much improved.

THE WEATHER:

Fine, stationary or a little higher temperature.

A few scattered thunderstorms occurred yesterday in Saskatchewan and Manitoba; otherwise the weather has been everywhere fine, cool from Ontario eastward, and warm in the west.

THE AEROPLANE FUND

MONTREAL TO THE FRONT

A "Montreal Flotilla" of aeroplanes is now assured. There will be five and possibly six 100-horse power Gnome-Vickers biplanes, each with its machine-gun, to represent the City of Montreal in the fleet of airships which the Overseas Club has undertaken to raise in Great Britain and the Overseas Dominions.

It is scarcely a month since the Montreal Branch of the Overseas Club announced through The Star the opening of its campaign for an aeroplane fund. Today it has received something like $36,000 in cash and the promise of the City of Montreal to give two aeroplanes as soon as the Legislature gives its sanction.

Mr. Robert Hampson and the British Empire Grain Co. each contributed £2,250, the price of the best aeroplane obtainable, and about $6,000 has been already received from other generous and patriotic subscribers. The total independent of the Board of Trade subscription is now $27,933.

Late subscriptions include one from Miss Holt of $50.00 and the following from members of the Board of Trade, bringing that body's total up to $7,228.

SERBIA READY TO SACRIFICE FOR HER IDEALS

Special Star Cable.

LONDON, August 28.—While the Serbian Parliament at its meeting two days ago voted only on the principle involved in the negotiations for concessions to Bulgaria, it seems certain the long-suffering little nation will make whatever sacrifices are necessary to satisfy her neighbor and obtain Bulgarian co-operation for the Allies.

Several days may elapse before a formal reply to the Entente Powers is sent from Nish, however. London this morning understands that conversations are in progress between Serbia, Greece and Roumania regarding the exact nature of the concessions to be made to Bulgaria.

Commenting on the vote of confidence in the Government by the Serbian National Assembly, the semi-official Samouprava says, in a leading article forwarded yesterday from Nish:

"To realize the sacred ideals of civilized humanity, still further sacrifices must be made. These sacrifices will be agreed to and suported by all the Allies, and consequently by Serbia too.

"When it is sought, by asking Serbia, Greece and Roumania to sacrifice precious gains, that they may achieve in the main their national ideals by the extensive compensation which they will receive, it would be lack of foresight and a showing of incompetence not to agree to such sacrifices."

TWO CHILDREN KILLED BY AUTOS ON CITY STREETS

Newsboys and Little Girl Run Down—Owners of Cars Acted Differently

POLICE IGNORANT OF ONE OF CASES

Body of Small Boy Drowned in River Recovered by Fishermen

Two children were killed yesterday as the result of being struck by automobiles. In one case, the owner of the car caused the victim to be picked up and rushed to the hospital and did all he could to save the boy and lessen the sorrow of the parents. In the other case the police have received no report of the accident by the driver or owner of the car and few details of how the little girl happened to be struck have been discovered.

The victims were, George Peat, aged 13, a newsboy, 618 Parthenais street and Freda Sussman, whose address is given by the hospital as 2083 Clarke street. The police last night went to Park avenue instead of Clarke street in trying to find the parents of the child, and reported that there was no such number.

The Sussman child, who is only seven years of age, was playing in the street with other children, it is understood. Nothing is known of the manner in which the accident occurred, although it is understood that the car, after striking the child, passed on without waiting to see what injuries had been given. At the Royal Victoria Hospital it was discovered that, though no bones were broken the little girl had severe internal injuries, as a result of which she passed away during the night.

NEWSBOY RUN DOWN.

George Peat was engaged as a newsboy when the accident to him occurred. He was shouting his papers on Ontario street near Wolfe street and heard a whistle across the street. Seeing an opportunity of making a sale he turned quickly and dashed immediately in front of the car of L. Hector Painchaud, 1226 Sommerville avenue, driven by the chauffeur Albert Racine and carrying as passengers the owner and Dr. Maurice.

There was no time to swerve the car from its course. An attempt was made and the lad was struck by the mud-guard as the car curved round. Constable Bastien, of the Beaudry street police station, states that the car stopped in its own length. The occupants sprang out. They found that the boy was unconscious. The policeman was called and accompanied by him, Mr. Painchaud took the child in his car to Notre Dame Hospital. There it was seen that he could not live. He had sustained a severe fracture at the base of the skull. Fifteen minutes later the end came.

Mr. Painchaud at once returned to the scene of the accident and for over an hour endeavored to find out where the parents of the child lived. No one in the vicinity knew anything of him, and it was not until his mother, that evening, alarmed at the failure of her son to return for his supper, went to the police that identification was established.

Inquests will ge held in both cases.

BOY'S BODY FOUND.

The body of Paul Emile Dufresne, son of E. Dufresne, 32 Champagne street, was found in the river at Varennes by fisherment yesterday. The child—he was only eight years of age—disappeared from his home a week ago. He was last seen in the neighborhood of the Longueil ferry, and it was assumed that he had been drowned. An inquest will be opened at Varennes today.

WAR ROMANCE HAS INTEREST FOR THE DOMINION

Special to The Montreal Star.

PHILADELPHIA, August 28.—This city is interested in a war romance which has a certain amount of mystery about it.

A few days ago the proprietors of a photographic studio in this city received this letter from J. P. Reidy, a Canadian soldier, from "somewhere in France."

"Inclosed is a photo of some Philadelphia lady and taken by you. Was carried by a soldier from Canada, believed to be in the Royal Canadian Dragoons, but who fell in the great charge while saving the Canadian Field Artillery on the blood-stained battlefield of Ypres on April 24. Now, as this gallant trooper carried it to his death—and if you can't identify the owner—kindly send it to one of the editors of the newspapers, so they can pubibish it."

CANNOT FIND HUSBAND.

The photo has been identified as that of Mrs. Delia Rayer, who died at her home here on August 16, 1913. Her husband cannot be found, but her sister said she did not know that the dead woman was acquainted with any Canadian. On the back of the photo was this inscription:

"Good-by and good luck, Harold, darling, till we meet again.—Nell."

None of Mrs. Rayer's friends or relations know any Harold, and as the dead woman's name was not "Nell," but Delia, the mystery deepens.

Where did the dead soldier get the photo of a woman who died nearly a year before the war broke out?

Was he an American who enlisted in Canada and was killed in France?

As both principals are dead, the mystery will probably never be solved.

LORD CLANRICARDE NOW LEADS LONELY LIFE AFTER LIVELY TIME IN IRELAND

His Tenants Were Among First to Join Irish Land Revolution, T. P. O'Connor Says—Loses His Property After Long and Hard Fight

Special Cable to The Montreal Star by T. P. O'Connor, M.P., (Copyright).

LONDON, August 28.—Once I had a fancy for rooms in the Albany—a queer old collection of chambers off Piccadilly which have been the home of many celebrated people; including Byron, Macauley and Gladstone. I went up there to make inquiries and suddenly, as I was passing into the chambers I saw a strange figure, a figure so strange, indeed, that nobody could have seen it passing wthout noticing it, even in a community so cosmopolitan and so variegated as the streets of London.

It was a small man who hurried along; he carried in his hand a corpulent and shabby umbrella; he wore an old and rather low-crowned hat; the trousers were shabby and of an extremely ancient pattern; the coat was wide in the frock and blue in color and very shabby. If the figure had been in the streets of Paris you would have taken it for that of the chiffonier, the queer creature that lives on picking up ends of cigars and other unconsidered trifles of the Paris streets.

RIGHT THE FIRST TIME.

It may have been from what I had heard of him; it may have been that I had heard he lived in the Albany. Whatever the reason, I suddenly suspected that I was looking at the figure of the Marquis of Clanricarde, and I asked the gilded porter if I was right. "Right the first time," he said with a grin; for the figure was so quaint and perhaps so unpopular that the usually stately reserve and cautious reticence of an English servant broke down and he seemed delighted to be able to point out such a strange habitant of his respectable and exclusive building.

It was something of a shock to me to find myself thus brought into living contact with one of the figures that had haunted my imagination and that of my countrymen for two if not thre generations, and who, when I took human nature less indulgently, had appeared to me almost diabolic in malevolence and in guilty and crushing power. And yet I was delighted with the glimpse. It seemed to fit in the man so well with the strange old world and passing tyranny of which he was the last representative. Even the shabby clothes, which might have come out of an illustration to one of Thackeray's pictures of early Victorian England, seemed to be just the right kind of raiment for this strange surviving embodiment of an age that has gone. It was almost as if I met on a Paris boulevard a survivor of the French noblesse who still regretted the days when he could amuse himself by potting at a peasant with his gun from the roof of his love-nest in the Bois de Boulogne.

GALLANT ADVENTURES.

I am old enough often to have seen his father and his brother; to neither of whom does the present Marquis bear the slightest resemblance. The old Marquis of Clanricarde ruled his estate in the county of Galway with an easy hand; was, if not loved, certainly not very much hated by his tenants. He was grand seigneur to his finger tips; loved to go down among his docile slaves several times every year, and had a good many adventures of gallantry in his early days—one of them brought him into very unpleasant notoriety and stained his name—had once been a member of a Ministry and once an Ambassador; and to the day of his death, though he had a long yellow-skinned and bony face that gave him the nickname of 'the death's head," he looked distinguished and not unamiable. The old Marquis resembled a little the same family as Thackeray's Marquis of Steyne, but he was more amiable. His elder son, Lord Dunkellin, belonged to the roysterers who gathered around the early court of the late King Edward when he was the young Prince of Wales, and set the pace to the wild generation of that time; the last of whom died the other day in the person of the Earl of Kilmorey, like Lord Clanricarde, an Irish peer; and he managed to wind up his life and his adventures at forty-two.

HEALTHY AT EIGHTY.

This Clanricarde of today has none of the faults and perhaps also none of the amiabilities that lay athwart the characters of his father and brother. He lives still in apparently strong health, though he is over eighty; he has never been mixed up in any roysterings of any kind of which the world knows. He takes his daily walk through the streets or in the suburbs of London; he is a lonely instead of a social and convivial figure. There is nothing Irish about him, except, perhaps, the oddity and the hereditary ideas of that strange Irish landlordism which crushed Ireland for centuries and now is crushed itself, and wanders penniless amid the ruins of its mansions and its fortunes.

The man who knew Lord Clanricarde best in his youth was Henry Labouchere. They were both attaches together in the British Embassy at Paris; and "Labby" used to draw amusing pictures of the young De Burgh—as he was then called—but whether they were true or false, as with every other story "Labby" told, nobody could aver. The main point of these stories was that the younger son of a great Irish family was as parsimonious in all his affairs, including his adventures, as if he were already in his youth an elderly miser. The young De Burgh might well have been careful about money than for the spendthrift father and spendthrift brother could not well have spared such money for a younger son—still without much money or any rights in this land of primogeniture.

INHERITS VAST ESTATE.

Then came the series of remarkable accidents by which this penniless young man first succeeded to the title of his brother, then to the brother's seat in the House of Commons, for men of that type could in the old days of my boyhood be returned to Parliament even by the slaves they oppressed. And then came his father's death, and with that the heritage of the vast estates of the family in the county of Galway.

The income was not as large as one might expect from the size of the estate, for the land was poor, but it amounted to something like $100,000 a year. But this was not the only fortune to which the new Lord Clanricarde was heir. His mother was the grand-daughter of the great Canning and daughter of Lord Canning, who was once an illustrious Viceroy in India, and through her he inherited a fortune of a million dollars. It is certain that he has vastly increased even this large amount, for he has lived in the Albany all these years as a careful bachelor, and probably does not spend even a few hundreds a year.

AN ART CONNOISSER.

The old man's extravagance has been to visit periodically Christie Mansions, the great auctioneers, and and there he has bought some very valuable pictures for this queer, shabby, chiffonier-like man, with the cynic heart and the penurious habits, is one of the greatest art connoisseurs in the world. It is one of the curiosities, I am told, of the chambers in which he lives, that these wonderful pictures are to be found in all kinds of strange places, just stowed away like old manuscripts. One of the greatest pictures in the world, I have heard, is nailed to the back of a door.

To the hundreds of people who occupied his land, Lord Clanricarde was unknown even by sight. He was some remote "veiled Mokanna," who was only known by his malevolent omnipotence over their fortunes and lives. For he seemed to have made a vow never to put his foot on the soil of the country in which he was born and from which he drew his income. One of the legends which added to the horror with which his name used to be whispered among the affrighted tenantry was that he had not attended the funeral of his mother in the ancestral graveyard near the family mansion. That mansion, too, I understand, was allowed to fall into decay.

BECAME HOTTEST SPOT.

The Clanricarde tenants were among the first to join in the Irish land revolution when Parnell and Davitt set the movement going in 1880, and the movement once started was never entirely abandoned. The Clanricarde estate became the hottest spot in the whole revolution; first because the tenants were so ex-

OTTAWA, Aug. 28—The following Cabinet Ministers will be in Ottawa on Monday: Sir George Foster, Hons. Cochrane, Crothers, Meighen and Burrell.

FOR RED CROSS.

The sum of $235 was raised for the Red Cross by the summer residents at Knowlton who held a garden party on the lawn around the Hon. Sydney Fisher's home—Alva Farm.

The Rev. Dr. Symonds, on behalf of the ladies, in a short speech thanked Mr. Fisher for his hospitality. Mr. Fisher suitably replied and the National Anthem brought a delightful afternoon to a close.

RUSSIANS' ATTITUDE UNCHANGED

Foreign Minister Makes Important Declaration of Policy

CRISIS IS NOW PAST FOR ARMY

Plateau on Which Napoleon's Army Perished Faces Germans

LONDON, August 28.—In a special despatch from Russia Stanley Washburn writes today:

"Russia is now facing two attacks. One is Germany's advance with her armies. The other is far more serious. It is the German publicity campaign which moves through a thousand intricate channels, and is aimed to discourage, with misinformation, the Russian public. M. Sazanoff, Foreign Minister of Russia, authorizes me to quote him as follows:

"Unwillingly the Russian Government takes note of malicious rumors which have been circulated in Petrograd and other parts of Russia to the real conditions.

"The Germans have tried every method to break the Russian strength, from attacks by dropping bombs on undefended cities and killing women and children, to starting a panic that might spread to the army, to the use of poisoned gas, which produced such hideous suffering that it was hoped our heoric soldiers would be frightened from their duty.

"The world has seen how pitifully these efforts have failed. Three months of continued effort to break our army has been unsuccessful. The Teutons are now trying a new kind of poison, which is aimed through specious and plausible reasoning of breaking the spirit of the Russian people and the Russian army by circulating reports of lack of harmony between the Allies, failures of our munition supplies and the prospect of an independent peace with Germany.

ALLIED COMMANDS AGREED.

"I am ashamed that any Russian can seriously discuss such subjects. They are the enemy's latest attempts to accomplish by intrigue results which he never yet obtained by arms. Taking these fables against the character of our people and our government in succession, I will say categorically:

"First—Never, at any time, has there been the slightest difference of opinion between the high commands of the allied arms. Absolute confidence prevails in the highest circles as to the actions taken by our Allies. Implicit faith is felt by all as to the ultimate issue of the campaign pending in the west.

"Second—Every step possible has been taken to replenish the munition supplies of our armies and so enable them to continue the campaign with a stubbornness which has characterized their actions during the whole war.

"Finally, I wish forever to disabuse the public mind of any intention whatsoever on the part of the Russian Government to make an independent peace so long as a hostile soldier remains in Russia.

FEAR NO FORCE IN WORLD.

"In our temporary reverses it behooves all patriotic Russians and friends of Russia to realize that by listening and repeating these vile reports they are directly playing into the hands of the Teutons. The heart of the Russian people is true, sound and unwavering in the defence of our native soil. Each mile the enemy advances into our territory decreases the probability of their securing peace.

"No one who has studied the campaigns of our glorious armies can doubt their stamina and determinatio to fight this war to a victorious finish, even if years elapse and our armies are obliged to retire to the heart of Russia.

"With faith in the sovereign trust of our people and our Allies, there is no force in the world that Russia need fear. This faith we have and with it ultimate victory for our arms is assured."

Allies' Confidence in the Russians

PARIS, August 28. — A joint telegram expressing entire confidence in the future has been sent to Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of the Russian army, by President Poincare, the Ministr of War, M. Millerand, and Gen. Joffre, the French commander. The text of the message follows:

"Our thoughts turn toward your troops who at the present moment merit the confidence of the whole world by reason of the struggle they are making. With complete confidence in the final victory of your armies, we beg you to accept our respectful homage and fervent good wishes, together with the assurance that more than ever before our armies are happy and proud to cooperate with Your Highness and your valiant soldiers."

The Grand Duke replied:

"The sentiments you express towards the Russian army are reciprocated. The close relations and common accord existing between the commanders of all the allied armies is a certain omen of the glorious end in which, with God's aid, we will participate."

Crisis Has Passed for Czar's Armies

LONDON, August 28. — The Daily Chronicle publishes an interview on Russia's position and Germany's real aim by Bernard Pares, professor of Russian in Liverpool University, who for six months acted as the English official eye-witness with the Russian armies. Prof. Pares writes:

"In the last few days one feels somehow that the tension of Russia's position, and therefore the whole Allied cause, has slackened perceptibly. Everyone has become more at ease. For myself, who have followed the military and political position very closely, both in Russia and here, I will go so far as to say the crisis is passed.

"From the time when the enemy began his great thrust in the south-east of Galicia I was quite certain that he was aiming at one thing; he was trying to bring Russia to separate herself from her Allies. If he could not do that he could do nothing. On the eastern side the idea of conquest of Russia or of forcing peace on Russia was always from the start ridiculous.

"Russia could never be compelled to make peace. She could only be induced to desire it. For this object there was a perfectly clear program, of which every detail soon became apparent. Of course, the Russian army had to be beaten, driven back, with as many losses as possible.

"Above all, Russia was to be persuaded that her western Allies could do nothing for her. Poland was to be won and then a liberal peace was to be offered to Russia.

GERMANS HAVE FAILED.

"The Germans have had their successes; they have made their shot. They have failed, and they know it to be the turning point of the whole project. To my mind the much more important fact of last week was the announcement made by Minister Sazanoff to all public men and writers in Petrograd. He is a very quiet man, and his simple straightforwardness is one of the greatest reasons for the immense confidence which his country places in him.

"His announcement, which had not a word that could be dispensed with, amounts to this—that the German successes have been accompanied by repeated negotiations for peace, which Russia has refused unconditionally, and that whenever they were renewed they would be refused again.

"But this meant the collapse of all that Germany had been playing for. Military success is secondary.

"We are aproaching the time when the Russian roads will break up. The country through which the Germans will have to advance is at first a marshy plain, and later on a plateau broken with innumerable cross gullies, in which the grand army of Napoleon perished."

OFFICERS ELECTED BY FIRE CHIEFS

OTTAWA, August 28.—Fire Chief John W. Graham of Ottawa was yesterday elected the first president of the new Dominion Fire Chiefs' Association, created here this week as a successor to the Provincial Fire Chiefs' Association, to widen the work of the organization.

Chief J. E. Buchanan was elected vice-president. Other officers chosen were: Board of directors — Chief Tremblay, Montreal; Chief France, Woodstock; Chief Smart, Calgary; secretary, Chief Armstrong, Kingston; treasurer, John Keyes. Auditors, Chief Heath, Guelph; Chief Smith, Saskatoon; Chief Tessier, Hull, Que. Chief Howard of Peterboro was selected as provincial vice-president of the International Fire Chiefs' Association. Windsor was selected as the place of convention in 1916.

WANT CREMATION BAN ABOLISHED

BUFFALO, N.Y., August 28.—The Cremation Association of America, at its convention here yesterday, adopted a resolution calling on the Congregation of the Inquisition of the Roman Catholic Church to abrogate the decrees of May and December, 1886, prohibiting Roman Catholics' cremation.

The convention concluded its third annual session by the election of officers and the discussion of subjects, one being presented by W. Ormiston Roy of Montreal.

SUPERTAX LEVIED IN NEW ZEALAND

WELLINGTON, N.Z., August 27, via London, August 28. — A supertax of 50 per cent on all importations from countries hostile to Great Britain was announced today by the Minister of Finance, Sir Joseph Ward, in introducing the budget in Parliament.

A number of tariff schedules are to be raised. Automobiles, chassis and bodies are to pay 10 per cent ad valorem, and kerosene and petrol 8 cents a gallon.

Mrs. Julia A. Kingman, aged 94, of Everett, Mass., celebrated her birthday by winning the first prize at a whist party at her home. The aged woman has won seven such prizes in the last year. She has presented to the Whidden Memorial Hospital three quilts of her own manufacture, each of which is composed of 3,738 pieces of silk, and all made within the last year.

DECLARES SERBIA COULD HOLD BACK TEUTONIC HOSTS

Noted Balkan Soldier Predicts Early Fall of Dardanelles

NEW YORK, August 28.—Colonel Javrem J. Popovitch, of the Royal Serbian army, who was taken from duty at the front several weeks ago, when he lost his left hand, and sent to New York on a special mission for his Government, gave out an interview today in which he said Serbia would be able to hold back the Teuton hosts from going to Turkey's aid and that the fall of Constantinople was only a matter of time. Col. Popovitch remarked that his opinions were purely individual and not official.

"Trained in previous war experience, Serbia during its recent comparative military inactivity has been preparing," he said. "She now has a much larger army than ever before in her history and the best equipped. Serbia has also established unlimited lines of fortifications.

"For these reasons, and because of the unusual bravery of the Serbian army and the mountainous nature of the country, and with consideration for other things I am not at liberty to mention, an army which wished quickly to subjugate Serbia and cut a road to Turkey would have to at least 800,000 men of German quality, or 1,200,000 of Austrian quality. We know the difference.

NO ARMY TO SPARE.

"It is not to be believed that the Teutons in the present strife in Europe can spare any such army without dangerously weakening their lines. The most important front of the war is the Teuton-Russian, for that is where the war will be decided. I, as a soldier, see being performed there two actions of exceptional strategic interest."

The Teutons, with extraordinarily rapid manoeuvring, are putting strong pressure on the Russian armies, and the Russians, in a momentarily difficult situation, are performing strategical manoeuvring with unheard-of genius. They are retreating in time. They are saving their vital power—their organized military strength.

"The war cannot be ended to Germany's advantage until that vital power is obliterated From a military standpoint, the Russians are due to become even more dangerous to Germany in the second half of the war

1,800,000 FROM BALKANS.

"From what I have said, it follows that the Teutons canont spare a large force for new operations in the Balkans. It is my opinion that the Dardanelles will fall long before any Teuton force can get through to the relief of the Turks"

Col. Popovitch said he believed that eventually Serbia, Roumania, Bulgaria and Greece would be found lined up together. That would mean a force of 1,800,000 men opposed to the Teuton forward movement toward the Dardanelles, he said:

"Of this army," he says, "1,250,000 are veterans at the Balkan wars. They would be led by officers who have completed their military training by actual war experience."

ROUMANIANS PREPARING.

BUCHAREST, via Rome, August 28.—The Roumanian consuls to Germany and Austria have been instructed to hasten the repatriation of Roumanian nationals now in the Teutonic empires.

Roumanian banks and industrial concerns are closing their branches in Transylvania, and the exodus of Roumanians from the province is now at its height.

GERMANS ALARMED AT FINANCIAL OUTLOOK

By Canadian Press.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 28, via London.—The Berlin Vorwaerts in discussing the new German war loan directs attention to what it characterizes as the alarming financial situation which Germany must face at the conclusion of the war.

"After the war," says the Vorwaerts, "the Imperial debt and pensions alone will demand an annual expenditure of at least two and a half billion marks ($625,000,000) or a little less than the united ordinary and extraordinary Imperial expenditure for 1912. In other words, the income of the empire hitherto will only suffice to pay the interest on the national debt.

"For all other expenses new sources of taxation must be created. Whoever remembers the taxation controversies of 1908 and 1909 can easily imagine into what internal political difficulties the war is leading us."

Big Recruiting Rally at Toronto Had Good Effect

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—The monster recruiting meeting held last night at Scarborough Beach Park, under the auspices of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association, resulted in the addition of between four and five hundred to Canada's overseas forces. The recruiting tents were besieged and those in charge were kept busy recording names. The procession of illuminated water-craft was a feature.

A number of speakers, among whom was the Hon. George P. Graham, stirred an immense audience to wild enthusiasm and massed bands and a chorus of picked singers kept it going. It was the biggest thing and the most successful in the recruiting line which Toronto has yet attempted.

MORE TROUBLE IN NORTH PORTUGAL

LISBON, Aug. 28, via Paris, Aug 28. —The Minister of the Interior, Dr. Silva, announced yesterday in the National Council that a monarchial movement had broken out in northern Portugal.

The barracks of a regiment of infantry at Guimaraes, twelve miles south-east of Braga, had been attacked and many persons had been wounded.

Dr. Silva said the Government had taken various precautions. Arms and bombs had been seized. The railway bridge at Trofa has been dynamited but trains are still able to cross.

The Minister, in conclusion, said that the situation in Portugal is now normal.

MAJOR W. STEWART TO HAVE COMMAND

HAMILTON, Ont., August 28.—Major Walter Stewart, of the 91st Highlanders, will have the honor of commanding the machine-gun battalion, the first of its kind raised in the British Empire. Hamilton received this honor in recognition of its gift of two hundred machine guns. The junior major will be Captain Roy Moodie, also of the Highlanders.

CZAR'S NEW ARMY TO BE 2,000,000

No Serious Loss Incurred Throughout Entire Russian Retreat

IS LEISURELY RETIREMENT

New Front Fortified and Bear Better Prepared for Fight

LONDON, Aug. 28.—Gen. Polivanoff, the Russian Minister of War, announces that Russia is raising another 2,000,000 men, and that the fate of the campaign will not be decided before some time next year, according to the Petrograd correspondent of the Times.

The Daily Mail's correspondent at Petrograd says in a despatch to his paper:

"Upon a front of 160 miles the new Russian retirement is being carried out in good order. There has been no serious loss incurred in the rearguard actions which are being fought to hold the enemy so that the retreat may be conducted without haste.

"The War Office states that the retreat is not taking place under pressure, that the resources of the commanders and the activity of the troops are unimpaired by the offensive north of Vilkomer to relieve the pressure of the enemy toward Friedrichstadt, south of Riga, and to force the Germans to send troops from the latter district to the former.

"The announcement that the new fortified line of defence is ready for occupation has quioted public opinion. Posters today call out untrained reservists between the ages of nineteen and thirty-seven belonging to the first category of the militia."

NEW FRONT FORTIFIED.

The intimation that the Russians have fortified another front pending an opportunity for a renewed offensive has received some confirmation. It is stated that the new line is being strengthened by all the latest methods known to military engineers. The Russian armies still are intact, with virtually all their guns and prospects of a more plentiful supply of ammunition.

For this reason military writers here are of the opinion that Grand Duke Nicholas now should be able to make a stand, as the Austro-German losses must have been very heavy, especially during the three weeks which intervened between the fall of Warsaw and the occupation of Brest-Litovsk.

The Russians apparently had evacuated both Brest-Litovsk and Olita before the Germans arrived, as the latter make no claim to the capture of guns or booty. The Austrian official report states that Archduke Joseph Ferdinand found the town of Kamieniec-Litovsk in flames when he arrived. There are indications, therefore, that the Russians still are carrying to the rear everything movable that might prove of use to the invaders and burning what they are unable to take with them.

GERMAN'S GENERAL PLAN.

The general plan now being develop by the Germans appears to be to secure the right flank of their main advance by reaching and resting on the vast tract of impassable marshes stretching from Brest-Litovsk almost to Smolensk and Kiev. This object the Germans are now clearly attaining, and therefore they are beginning to detach reinforcements for the accomplishment of the other objective of securing the left flank. This they evidently propose to rest on the Dvina if further efforts to secure the Baltic coast position fail.

These two immediate objects secured, the Germans will proceed further, but in what direction exactly must depend on various events as yet imperfectly indicated.

TEUTONS EXHAUSTED.

Private advices report that exhaustion prevails in the German ranks which is very probable, seeing that the Germans have been attacking incessantly for over three months and marched over hundreds of miles of railless country with bad and insufficient roads. To the actual physical exhaustion of perpetual marching and fighting must, therefore, doubtless be added weakness due to irregularities of food supply.

Not even the scientific skill and marvellous organization of the Germans can turn the roads of West Russia into efficient carrying media for the supply of both ammunition and food. The Russians have left nothing eatable or in any other way profitable to the enemy behind them. Even the growing grass has been destroyed by the device of strewing hay and unthreshed corn upon the fields and applying fire.

Over such an abomination of desolation as the Russians are purposely leaving everywhere behind them as they retire, even the German discipline will hardly be able to drive their troops much further.

Russian Campaign to Harrass Enemy

Two-thirds of the German forces pressing on the line Bialgstok-Vladava are endeavoring to envelop from the flank and pierce the Russian centre or compel the Russians to accept a decisive battle. As long as the artillery of the Germans predominates largely the Russians will refuse battle under such conditions. Yet there is no haste in their retreat. They are holding on stubbornly and gaining time.

Experts of the General Staff explain the Russian retreat as being due to the desire to harras and exhaust the enemy, on the long, bad route, lengthening and impeding his communications, on the guarding of which alone the Germans are compelled to use great forces. The transport of shells requires over fifty trains a day, with redistribution to the fighting columns. Their ammunition constitutes their heavy cargo, but their two thousand heavy guns also represent considerable weight and further transport difficulties.

Even admitting that the Germans succeed in finding plenty of food for the men and forage for the horses en route, the same cannot be said regarding food for their guns, which they must bring from afar. But their communications are particularly sensitive," compelling them to have a dense screen of troops on their secondary sectors, where they know from experience the danger of Russian cavalry raids against their transports.

PETROGRAD SAFEGUARDED.

Weighing the likelihood of a German advance on Petrograd, the Retch points out that the Russian retirement covers the approaches to the capital and that it is extremely doubtful whether the Germans, without undisputed possession of the Baltic Sea, and particularly of the Gulf of Riga, could undertake the risks attaching the operations against Petrograd this autumn.

Moreover, on the whole front from the Dvina to the Upper Bobr, it is noted, the Germans have only two armies—that of General von Below, in Courland, and that of General von Eichhorn, on the Niemen.

IN SOLEMN MOOD.

The Holy Synod has prescribed a period of fasting of three days, beginning on September 8. The minister of the Interior has been requested to forbid entertainment and the playing of music throughout that time, although work is to continue as usual. September 8 is the day of the church celebration of Russia's liberation from the invador Tamerlane, the Mongol leader who made his way at the head of his men almost to Moscow in 1395, visiting unusual cruelties upon the people.

Dogs live 15 to 25 years cattle, 25 years; the horse, 25 to 30 years; the eagle, 30 years; the stag, 35 to 40 years; heron, lion and bear, 50 years each; the raven, 80 years; elephant, turtle, parrot, pike and carp, 100 years each.

WOMEN OF CANADA DO YOUR "BIT"

Soldiers Need Home-Preserved Fruit to Maintain Health.

A movement has been made by the Canadian Clubs and Red Cross Societies to furnish the Canadian soldiers in the trenches of France and Flanders with canned fruit. The War Office supplies jam, but it does not in any way take the place of preserved fruit. Much of the sickness of our men has been found to be due to the lack of fresh and preserved fruits. In several cities an organized effort has been made to supply this need, by getting our patriotic women to do down a little more than they require for family use, and send a few jars to the Red Cross or Canadian Club. Women in other sections of the country may join in this good work. Those who wish to do so should communicate with the Secretary of the Canadian Club in Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa or London, or better still, prepare the fruit and ship it to the Red Cross. The Overseas Club will look after the distribution by an arrangement made with the Canadian Clubs. Let our Canadian women show that they are not indifferent in this matter. An extra basket of peaches or plums will not cost much and the home preserved fruit will do a great deal of good. The best peaches to use for this purpose are the St. Johns, Elbertas, Crawfords and Smocks. The best preserving late plums are Bradshaws, Gages, Lombards, Reine Claude. The city women have responded nobly. Will the women in the smaller towns do as well? The Fruit Branch Dept. at Ottawa is offering substantial prizes in all leading cities for window displays of Plums and Peaches.

CANADIAN ARMED GUARDS PROTECT THE WHEAT CROP

GRAND FORKS, N. D., August 28. —Three hundred and fifty armed Canadian guards are patrolling the international boundry along Northern Minnesota and North Dakota as the result of threats that attempts will be made to destroy the Canadian grain crop by fire.

Recently such threats came to Canadian officials from several sources, and, although they declare themselves "unconcerned" they have placed an unusually heavy guard on the border.

Threats against Canadian farmers are said to have been made principally by Austrian and Hungarian laborers.

Not only have Canadian soldiers been stationed along the boundary lines but the provincial elevators throughout Manitoba are said to be closely guarded.

A Practically Perfect Preparation.

YEARS of experience have enabled Mr. Fletcher to make Castoria a practically perfect preparation. These years of labor: the amount of money required to introduce its merits to the public: the investment in its manufacture, including the most modern machinery, mean a vast amount of invested capital. It follows that the greatest care is exercised in the selection of each ingredient, and the greatest attention is paid to every detail of its preparation. The result is the practically perfect preparation in the finished product; Fletcher's Castoria.

Herein lies the guarantee of the absolute safety in the use of Fletcher's Castoria for the baby, and the warning against irresponsible makers of imitations and counterfeits. The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher that is printed in black on the wrapper and red on the bottle is the mother's safeguard.

CASTORIA

Extracts from Letters by Grateful Parents to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Mrs. John W. Derrick, of Lexington, S. C., says: "My children cry for Castoria, I could not do without it."

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Gaines, of Ripley, Tenn., say: "We enclose our baby's picture hoping it will induce some poor tired mothers to give your Castoria a trial. We have used it since baby was two weeks old."

Mrs. J. G. Parman, of Nashville, Tenn., says: "The perfect health of my baby is due to your Castoria—the first and only medicine he has taken. He is never satisfied with one dose, he always cries for more."

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Johnson, of Stevens Point, Wis., say: "When our baby was two weeks old he cried so much we did everything for him, then got some Castoria and he is now strong and fat. We would not be without it, and are very thankful to you."

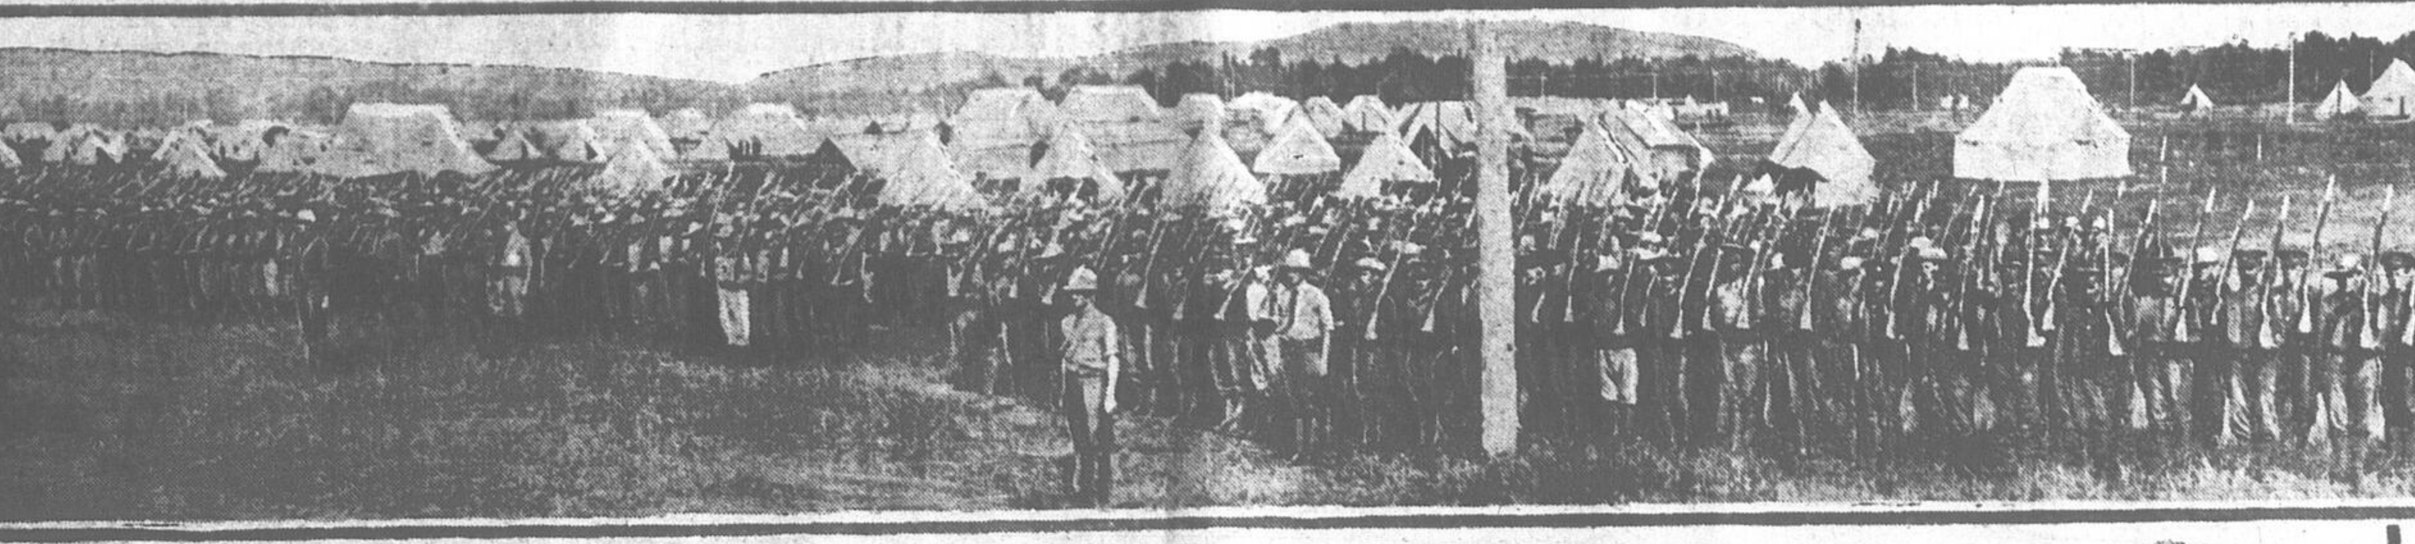
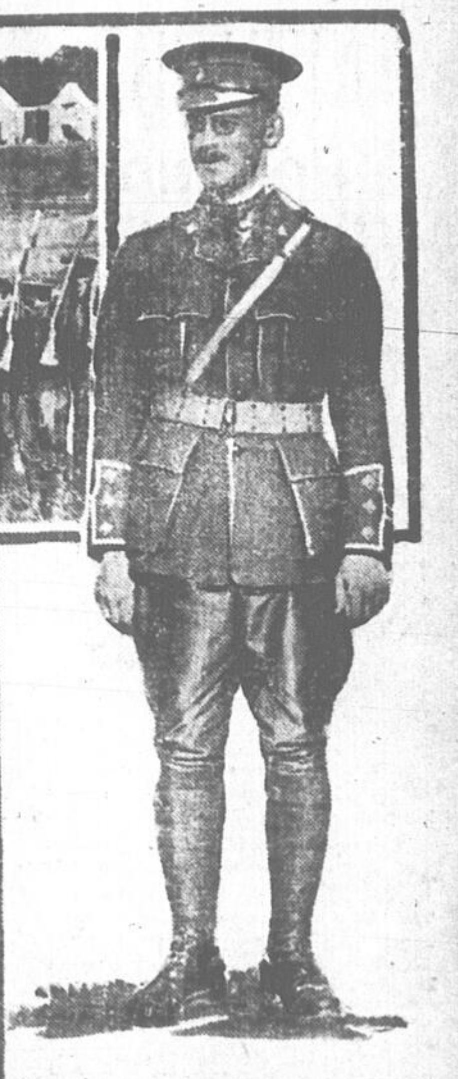
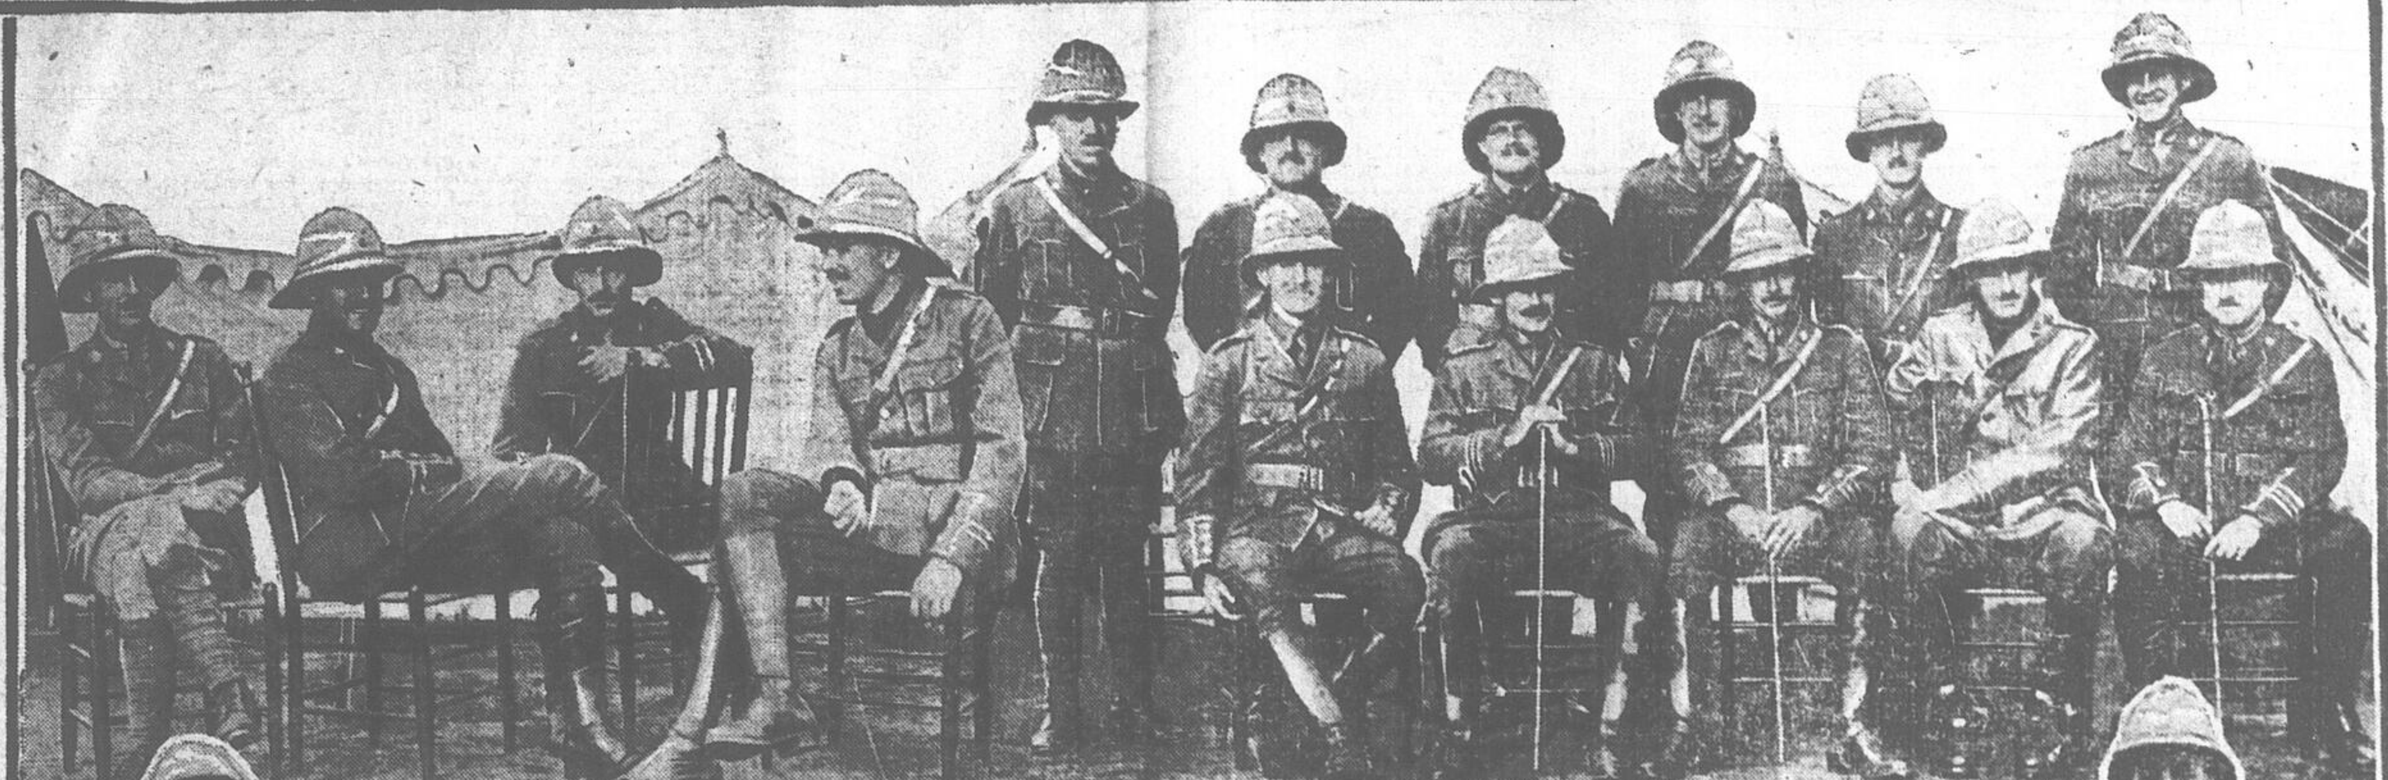
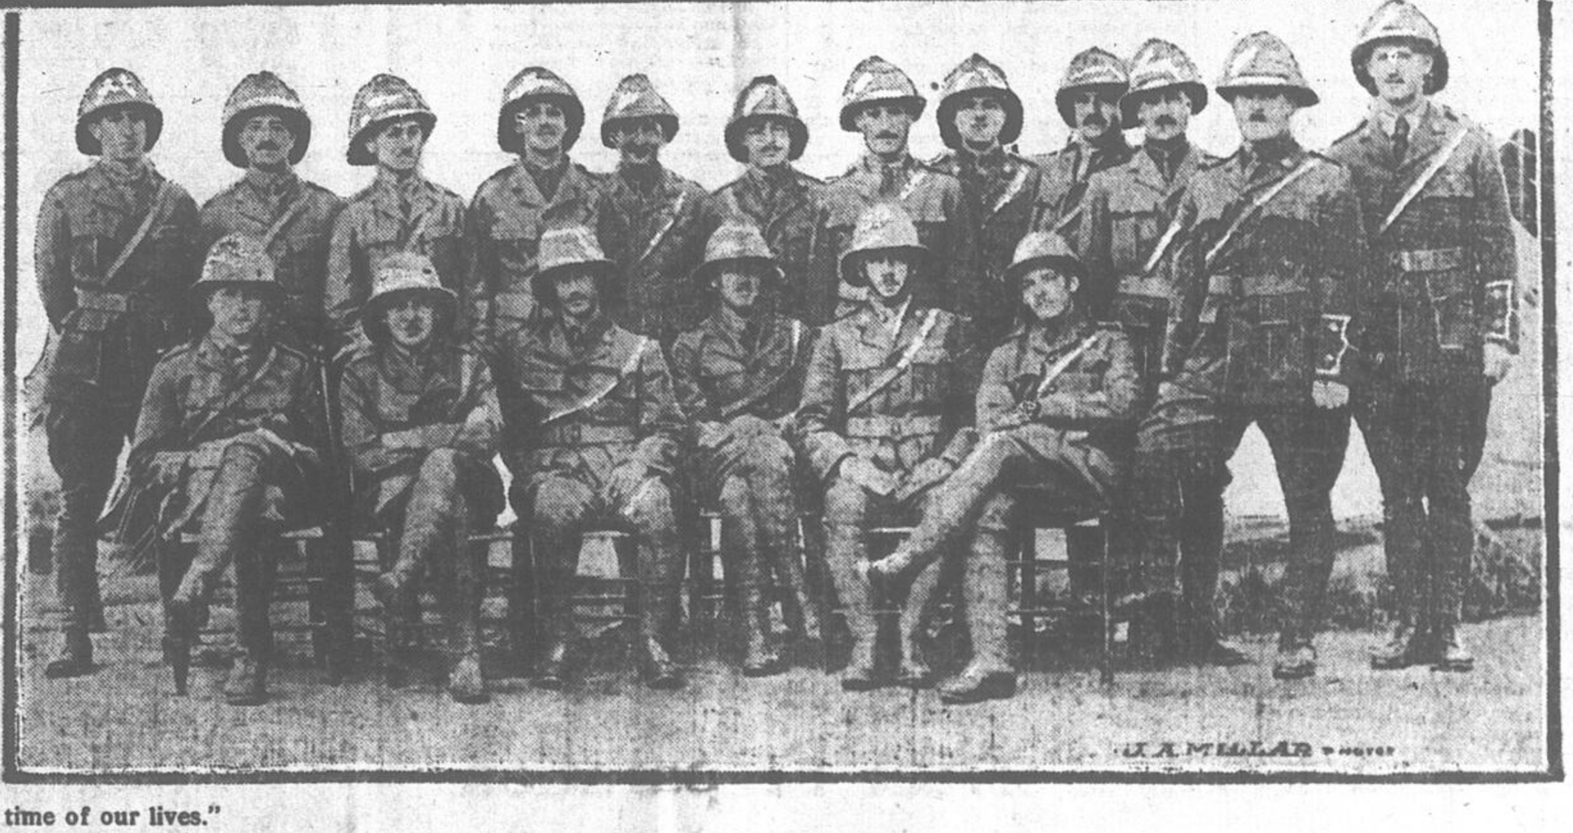
MEN OF 60TH AT VALCARTIER HAVING THE "TIME OF THEIR LIVES"









"Nothing like it. Having the time of our lives."

These, and expressions like them are the verdicts of the men of the 60th, now training at Valcartier.

"When we work, we work hard, but we have lots of time for sports, too," said one of the men. "And the work is interesting. We are learning something new every day. Our recruiting office in Montreal would have lots more applicants if the crowd of young fellows there only knew what a good life it is."

The 60th is still recruiting in Montreal. In fact, it is the only English-speaking battalion that is taking on men at present. Every day a few apply at the headquarters in the Victoria Rifles armories, and every night sees a few men leave for the camp.

The upper picture shows the battalion on parade. It will be noticed that the men are not forced to wear their heavy tunics. If they prefer them, they can shade their faces with huge straw hats. Many of them, however, seem to prefer the regulation forage cap. Shirts may be turned down at the throat and sleeves rolled up if it is so desired.

At the upper left hand corner is seen Captain A. T. Shaughnessy, officer commanding the Irish-Canadian company, one of the "livest" crowds ever gathered together in any battalion. The left corner is occupied by Captain W. R. Creighton, who will command the first company that will go across as reinforcements.

In the centre picture, the officers standing are: Captain Chaplin Burnett, Captain Hall, Lieut. McHaffie, Captain Kemp, Lieut. Phelan, and Lieut. Irving.

The nine who are seated are: Lieut. Redmond, Captain Ralston, Captain R. S. Skinner, Captain Vessey, Captain Chaplain Shires, Major Evans, Lieut.-Col. Gascoigne, officer commanding the battalion; Major O'Donahoe and Major Webb.

Those standing in the centre bottom picture are: Lieut. Baillie, Lieut. Edgar, Lieut. Macdonald, Lieut. Becket, Lieut. McGibbon, Lieut. Drew, Lieut. Walker, Lieut. [illegible] Lieut. McKenna, Lieut. Archibald, Lieut. Campbell, and Lieut. Brodie.

Those seated are: Lieut. Hingston, Lieut. Walter Miller, Lieut. Gordon, Lieut S. C. Miller, Lieut. Wiggins and Lieut. Creasor.

The officer on the left at the bottom is Lieut. D. Cowan, and on the right, Lieut. W. J. Blake.

PAY WAR DEBTS BY SELF-DENIAL OR LOSE MONEY RULE

London Financial Writer Gives Some Wholesome Advice

NATION DOES NOT REALIZE SITUATION

Britain Must Economise or Lose Financial Crown to New York

By International News.

LONDON, Aug. 12, (by mail)—With the world war in the first stage of its second year, the British public just now is mainly interested in the cost of the stuggle. It is known that the fighting is costing the nation daily a staggering sum,but the people have very vague ideas of the actual amount. The financial editor of a London newspaper recently wrote the following:

"When a nation is at war, the question of how it meets the cost of it is a double one, and a good deal of muddleheadedness arises because people who are not used to financial problems mix up the two questions involved.

First of all, there is the question of how the Government pays for the war, and secondly, there is the quite different question of how the nation pays for it. If we can answer these two questions and keep them separate and see how the answers react on one another, we shall have done something towards clearing up a certain amount of confusion.

A Government that is faced with the cost of war can meet it in three ways. It can tax its subjects, it can borrow from them, and it can borrow abroad. Of the Powers that are at present warring, we are the only one—as far as the scanty information that can be got about the others tells us—that has used the weapon of increased taxation.

Germany, in order to increase her food supply, cut off certain import duties and so actually reduced taxation, and has financed herself entirely by borrowing. We have taxed by doubling the income tax, putting 3d a pound on tea and ½d a glass on beer. By these measures we have added nearly 70 millions a year to our revenue from taxation. Some economic purists in the House of Lords contended on July 6 that this was far too small an amount to take from the pockets of the people by taxation, and there is much to be said for this view. We have also raised some £1,655,000,000 by the first war loan, £157,500,000 by Exchequer bonds, and £1,175,000,000 by Treasury bills.

FLOATING DEBT.

Treasury bills are a form of what is called floating debt; they are, in effect, promissory notes issued by the Government, and they fall due three, six, nine or twelve months from the date of issue. Obviously they are only a stoppage, because it is not possible to finance a great war by such short-lived measures. The city, in fact, was rather scandalised by the action of the Treasury in paying its way to so great an extent, as it did by this form of borrowing, which is reminiscent of the methods of Mr. Micawber. If a manufacturer built a factory and paid for it by means of promissory notes due in six or twelve months, he would be looked on as somewhat unsound in his finance. But of course, in time of war it is often necessary to go ahead along the line of least resistence, and our big issues of Treasury bills bridged us comfortably over the interval between our two big war loans.

WONDERFUL FEAT.

The first War Loan was a wonderful achievement in some respects. The rate of interest was only 3½ per cent, and it was placed at 95, allowing for the profit at 25 per cent. On redemption at par in 1928, this gave the buyer a rate of just 4 per cent. For any nation to be able to get out a loan of £1,750,000,000 on such terms while engaged on the greatest and costliest war that ever has been waged is a really remarkable feat.

Nevertheless, the first loan was not placed well. The general public was not attracted by the terms offered, and though a large number of patriotic subscribers came forward to support their country's finance at this great crisis, without any regard to the terms of the loan, the country as a whole was not stirred to any great effort. Most people, relying on our tremendous national wealth, thought that there was no need to bestir themselves, and so the loan was left chiefly to the banks and other professional financiers.

But the country was not allowed to make this mistake again. When the necessity arose for the second great war loan, nothing was left undone that could stir the patriotic feeling of every capitalist, large and small, and bring home to him the duty of putting every available shilling at the disposal of the Government in its fight for the cause of civilization.

There is no need now to descant on the terms of the loan and the attractions that it offered. They were so well hammered into us by the press and by public speakers and the Parliamentary War Savings Committee that we all knew all about them and we have all done our best, and still are doing our best, to make this loan the greatest financial triumph of history.

So far, then, the government has paid for the war by taxation and by borrowing at home. The next thing that it will have to do is to borrow abroad, because it is buying so much war material for itself and its allies in America that only by a loan in New York can these purchases be financed. This fact brings us to the second question involved.

THE SECOND QUESTION.

When a nation is appealed to by its government for money for a war, either through taxation or through loans, it can meet the call and find the money demanded in two ways. It can either save it by going without things that it used to enjoy, or it can raise it by selling securities or anything else that it can sell. By the first method, that of self-denial, it hands over its sending power to the Government, and says in effect: "You buy the shells and everything else that you want. We will go without part of the food and drink and other good things that we used to have." By this means the nation does not become any poorer, and can go on with the war till further notice.

How far have we done this? Very little so far, except in so far as we have been forced to. The comparatively small number of people who have been actually hit by the war, and so have been forced to economize, can say that they have spent less, but can hardly claim to have exercised the virtue of self-denial.

We are not travelling on the Continent much this year because it is uncomfortable and sometimes dangerous. But a large proportion of the population is enjoying the high wages and big profits that the war has brought with it, and taking full advantage of them by spending freely.

It is said that cheap American motor-cars, to give one example, are being sold very rapidly on this side among people who now find themselves in a position to enjoy this kind of luxury and do not see why they should not do so. The difficulty of making people see how by their own spending they affect the country's financial position will land us in serious trouble if it is not overcome. Anything bought from America that is not necessary to life, or necessary for the army, is a crime; for we are piling up such a debt to America that America will soon be able to dictate terms to us about finance.

So far we have met it to a certain extent out of the large sums that America owed us on floating credits at the beginning of the war. We have also sold to New York big blocks of American railroad bonds, held here by investors, and as has been said, the Government sooner or later will have to issue a loan in New York. All these expedients leave us poorer and America richer. If they go on we shall end the war a debtor country in New York's pocket. As a nation we must pay for the war by self-denial, or we shall pay for it by losing our financial supremacy.

WHO DARE DOUBT OF THE FUTURE? CANADA'S QUERY

Sir Robert Borden Says No Reverses Can Dismay or Halt Us

Speaking at a luncheon given in his honor by the Canada Club, of London, Sir Robert Borden said that the unity of this Empire was now more strikingly manifest than it ever was before. Considering the lack of organization in the ties which bound the Empire together, and the remarkable powers of self-government with which all the overseas nations had been entrusted, and which they held as of right and not of grace, he felt that the co-operation between the Dominion and the Mother Country had been successful beyond anything they could have anticipated.

QUESTION OF ORGANIZATION.

There might come a time when we should have to consider some manner of better organization between these islands and the Dominions. To those who thought such a task was impossible he would commend the example of the men who founded Canada. If ever a task seemed impossible and hopeless, theirs must at that time. Yet no one could gainsay its remarkable success. Considering that there was a sparse population of seven and a half millions, scattered over a country 4,000 miles long, they would agree that the Canadian national spirit had asserted itself in a manner and to a degree which should satisfy all. Surely the difficulties which seemed to stand in the way of better organization of the forces of the Empire could be overcome by wise counsel and the co-operation of the statesmen of all the countries concerned.

IS NOT DOWNHEARTED.

Speaking of the situation in the area of war, Sir Robert Borden said the fall of Warsaw had been foreshadowed, yet it was useless to deny the significance of the event. The Germans had achieved a success today which they attempted to achieve six or nine months ago. But it would not in the least daunt our courage; it would only inspire us to greater endeavors. The Germans had had many misconceptions about this war, and these had been strongly in our favor. Might not we, on the other hand, have had our misconceptions? Possibly in the early months of the war we failed correctly to estimate the immense military power of a nation highly disciplined and thoroughly organized for war, as well as for peace under a military autocracy. We might have failed to realize the resourcefulness of the enemy in adapting himself to conditions of warfare which must have been as unexpected by him as by us.

THE PRIMARY NECESSITY.

The idea of the people of these islands was to send across the Channel an expeditionary force not exceeding 160,000 men. No one who had not had the responsibilities of office realized what it meant to provide guns, rifles and equipment for a force ten times that number, and perhaps for another force of equal number in reserve. He knew something of such responsibility. In such a situation it was vital that the whole power of the nation should be concentrated upon the task, and he believed it was now being so concentrated.

"I have spoken to men who have been at the front, and I hold this profound conviction—that regiment for regiment, and man for man, our forces are holding their own, and more than holding their own, with the best and most efficient troops of the enemy. But this is a war in which all the uses of applied sciences are being turned to our destruction, and the most striking asseverations of the justice of our cause are of no use to meet a torrent of shells.

"What, then, is our first necessity? To place ourselves on an equal footing in this most important regard. I believe we are taking the necessary steps to do that, and that not one moment of time will be lost. If we really accept the seriousness of the situation, there can be no reasonable doubt as to our ability to accomplish this in the early future.

A NOBLE FUTURE.

"When we speak of any disappointments we had at the opening of the war, let us never forget to realize that the disappointment of the enemy must be tenfold greater, and when we are confronted by such a thing as the fall of a great fortress, let us remember that we have accomplished one great work which outweighs a thousandfold any such event as that, and that is, secured the pathways of the seas. By this our Empire is held together. More than that—it means almost as much to our allies as to ourselves.

With that great task practically accomplished, and with the assurance that so far as the uses of science are necessary we shall be placed on an equal footing with the enemy in the near future, and with the overwhelming superiority in resources and numbers which is ours, who dare doubt what the future will bring? I for one do not. And if there is any message from Canada it is this—that not for one single moment shall we be discouraged by any reverses, not for one single moment shall we relax our determination and efforts to bring this war to a triumphant and honorable conclusion, so that after the war we may march forward to a nobler and a greater future.

"Great as has been the work this Empire has done in the world, great as has been its influence over humanity and civilization, I venture to believe that this work is not yet done, and that the future opens up to us an opportunity of usefulness and influence which perhaps none of us anticipated. (Loud cheers.)"

MODEL HUSBAND TAKEN TO COURT BY ANGRY WIFE

She Wanted "Spending Money" After Taking All His Pay Envelope

PITTSBURGH, Pa., August 27. — Although he never drank, chewed, smoked nor swore in his life, and always obeyed command of his wife, gave her money, helped her to do the housework, and did all he could to make her existence blissful, Frank Bethinger was brought into court by his better half on a charge of desertion.

When asked by the court why she had caused her husband's arrest Mrs. Bethinger said he had failed to keep her in spending money for several months.

"Yet he gave you his pay envelope unopened," the court said.

"Yes," Mrs. Bethinger replied, "but I used that in the house."

Bethinger was discharged.

WILLIAM WINS CHAMPIONSHIP OF TROTTING WORLD

DORVAL, Aug. 28.—Only a handful of people journeyed out to the track yesterday to witness the last city's racing of the Grand Circuit meet. Most of these were ladies, owing to it being ladies' day.

The feature event was the second heat between William and Directum I., the world's fastest pacers. The race was really a repetition of the first heat, when William had no trouble in disposing of Directum from start to finish, making a new Canadian horse record of 2:00 1-4.

The results are as follows:

BOTH SPORTING AND RELIGIOUS LOSS TO CANADA

Special to The Montreal Star.

OTTAWA, Aug. 28.—The Rev. Father William Stanton, who for over 12 years has been professor in Latin at the University of Ottawa and director of discipline and sports there, has been removed by orders of the Provincial of the Oblate Order, the Rev. Father Charlebois, Montreal, and will be assigned to work elsewhere, probably in one of the American cities.

At present Father Stanton is in Buffalo. Several months ago he was taken seriously ill and underwent an operation at a hospital in Ogdensburg, N.Y. When he was well enough he went to Brooklyn and from there to Buffalo.

GREAT REGRET.

The news of Father Stanton's removal will be received with regret in Ottawa and throughout Ontario and Quebec, by Roman Catholics and Protestants alike, for he was particularly popular in sporting circles being for several years coach of the famous Ottawa College football team.

He was a champion of clean and manly sport and did a great deal to raise the standard of amateur sport, not only in the city, but throughout the Dominion. As a professor in the University he was held in high esteem among the students.

It is understood that official word has been sent to him that he must wait in Buffalo until he receives further instructions from the Provincial of the Oblates Order in that district. Who will succeed Father Stanton as coach of the Ottawa College football team is not known yet.

LAWN BOWLING

McGRAW PULLS FOR BRAVES AS CHAMPIONS

Is Sad and Sorry at Giants' Slump But Does Not Know the Reason—Thinks the Tigers are Done for

JOHN J. McGRAW

NEW YORK, August 28. — This season has been the toughest year of my baseball life. When I took my ball club to Marlin last spring, I thought I had a championship team or one which would be a contender right up to the wire. And I looked for much stronger opposition in the league than we have met this season. It has been my big baseball disappointment.

All along, I have thought the team would catch its stride and get going and pull through even up to this last week when the Cardinals beat us twice in one day. That double victory crowded us out of the fight for the pennant for good and I knew it that day. There is always one particular afternoon which spells the finish of a team's chances of winning the pennant, and the manager generally realizes it when it comes around. I knew after the double defeat by the Cardinals our chances were gone for good. My Club was shot to pieces, a wreck. There is no worse feeling than to think in the spring you have a champion and to find in the fall you have a tail ender perhaps. There is no worse sensation, take it from me.

The Detroit Tigers have been in the fight for the American League pennant right along and were within jumping distance of first place until the recent series with the Boston Red Sox. That, to Hugh Jennings', my old friend, and his Tigers, was the big series of the season. He knew it and his club knew it.

MEANT TIGERS FINISH.

The race depended on it. They lost the first game. There was still a chance for them to come back and pull out the three game series by winning the final two. They dropped the second in the thirteen innings. Those extra innings meant the finish of a season's efforts in my opinion.

All through the early days of the season, I had confidence in my team, and I kept predicting the Braves and the Giants would finally quarrel for the pennant in the stretch. My prophecy came only half true. The Braves are going to be there in the stretch, and they won't have much fighting to do either as I see the league today. Stallings will have the pennant sewed up by September 15.

"What is the matter with the Giant's" I'll bet I have been asked it a hundred times, and I really don't know. I have read in the paper that it is an old machine gone wrong, that I kept the men, and the team had worn out without me realizing it. But this is not true. The club is not an old one and age has not gotten it.

NOMADS' PROTEST WAS THROWN OUT

Nomads' protest in the recent Quebec Cup game, with Locos, was thrown out by the P.Q.F.A. Nomads based their protest on inefficiency of the referee, playing short time and a couple of minor offences. Not one word of the disputed goal, that has been the talk of the city, was included in the protest. Consequently the P.Q.F.A. accepting, what they termed a very flimsy protest threw it out, en bloc, and holus bolus. President Gillespie says had Nomads protested the referee for disallowing the goal, the result might have been different.

President Gillespie has secured another cup for Labor Day, for the relay race, Corby's Distillery being the donors.

LALONDE NOT IN THE BEST CONDITION FOR MATCH AGAINST SHAMROCKS

This May Give the Green Shirts a Chance to Win and Montreal to Even Up—Good Battle Expected at National Grounds

Shamrocks and Nationals, the tail-enders and league leaders, respectively, meet today on Nationals ground. After their fine showing last Saturday, when they defeated M. A. A. A., at the Westmount grounds, the Shamrocks are expected to force Nationals to go hard in order to win. The Frenchmen won a hard-fought match from Cornwall last week, and are now fit and ready, except for Lalonde, who may not play the entire match.

Should Shamrocks be successful in defeating Nationals, it will give M. A. A. A. another chance for the N. L. U. honors. The latter team will, however, have to win from Cornwall in the Factory town today. The teams for today's contest at the National grounds are as follows:

HOW MISS DERBYSHIRE SWAM FROM BROCKVILLE TO THE UNITED STATES

Senator's Granddaughter Tells of Her Feelings in the Broad Part of St. Lawrence Amongst Dangerous Cross Currents

MISS MILDRED DERBYSHIRE WHO SWAM FROM ONTARIO TO NEW YORK STATE

Senator's granddaughter tells in today's Star how she combatted cross-currents of St. Lawrence in two-mile swim.

Special to The Montreal Star.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Aug. 28.—The performance achieved by Miss Mildred Derbyshire, youngest daughter of Ex-Ald. John A. Derbyshire, of swimming across the St. Lawrence at this point is a notable one on this section of the river, a feat never before accomplished by a member of the gentler sex in the recollection of the proverbial oldest inhabitants. In fact, Miss Derbyshire is believed to be the only woman who ever turned the trick. She is quite modest in talking about her accomplishment, regarding it more in the light of a jaunty exercise rather than an undertaking frequently attempted but seldom accomplished by swimmers of more pretentious reputation.

"Idle Wyld," the handsome Derbyshire home, is situated on the bank of the River, and, having practiced the art of swimming since early childhoow, she conceived the idea of attempting the long paddle over to the American shore. Previously she had swam comparatively long distances, thinking nothing of making a try to some of the islands in the vicinity of her home and returning without pulling up on any of them for a rest.

VERY CONFIDENT.

She had full confidence in her ability to make it when she plunged in at her father's boat-house, her sister, Miss Helen Derbyshire, accompanying her in a canoe. With a steady stroke the young swimmer rapidly made her way over, only the lee of small islands affording a shield from stiff south-west winds. This advantage was more than counteracted by numerous cross currents, yet she battled on, showing no signs of exhaustion. The wide stretch of water was encountered after passing the steamboat channel. Miss Derbyshire touched the shores of Uncle Sam's domain apparently as fresh as when she started, and, jumping into the canoe, assisted her sister in paddling home. Her work with the paddle did not indicate that she had just passed through a long period of physical exertion, as she took stroke for stroke with her sister. Here the river is estimated at two miles in width, and the exact time made by Miss Derbyshire is not known further than that one hour and three-quarters were occupied from the time the young woman left home until her return.

HER OWN STORY:

"The swim was quite a surprise to my parents," said Miss Derbyshire. "They were not aware of me making the attempt until my return home. I had often taken long swims, and had thought frequently of making the attempt to cross the river, feeling that I could do it successfully. I was not the least frightened or alarmed when I reached the middle of the broad expanse of water. Indeed, I felt more concerned for my sister, who had difficulty keeping close to me owing to the cross currents, which made the canoe hard to manage. I did not mind them much. I floated on several occasions till Helen got straightened away again, and this diversion rested me. It was great fun, and I enjoyed the swim."

FINE ALLROUND ATHLETE.

Besides her abilities as swimmer, Miss Derbyshire is an adept in other lines of athletic activities, more particularly canoeing. Her prowess in this respect is shown in a fine collection of trophies won in paddling races at various regattas of the Brockville Rowing Club and other athletic events on the St. Lawrence. She has also pulled a good oar in races for fours, and can turn her hand with equal skill to the running of a motor boat, which is included in her collection of river crafts. Essentially a child of the great fresh water stream, Miss Derbyshire spends much of her vacation in sailing either a skiff, canoe or dinghy, and in the manipulation of the tiller holds her own with the best of local sailors. She is an excellent horsewoman in both driving and riding, and quite recently has added to her versatile attainments that of mastering the operation of a touring automobile. Golf and tennis, too, have come within the score of Miss Derbyshire's ardent pastimes.

The young lady has just passed her eighteenth birthday.

Notes From City Baseball League

Bob Davis, the Indians' fast little second baseman, is the latest player to leave Manager Joe Page's team. He has been transferred by the Dominion Bridge Company to the west of Winnipeg, and left last night for his new destination. The Indians will miss him greatly, as he was one of the best fielding second basemen in the City League.

Davis is also a well known hockey player, having played last season on the St. Zotique team of the Montreal Hockey League.

In Malcolm Fraser and young Wingo the Indians have certainly got a very choice battery. It would not be at all surprising if Manager Joe Page signed them both up for a tryout with the Chicago White Sox. Many are of the opinion that they have the full earmarks of future stars.

The wise ones will find it pretty hard to dope out this week-end's winners, when Mascotte and the Indians meet in the first game, and Strachans and La Casquette play in the sunset game.

In their first meetings, the Indians trimmed the "Sluggers," while the "Bakers" defeated the North Enders. Will they repeat Sunday?

SOME CITY LEAGUE "IFS."

If Mascotte and Strachans defeat the Indians and La Casquette, the standing of the leading clubs would be:

	Won.	Lost.
Strachans	6	2
Nationals	5	2
Mascotte	5	2

If, however, on the other hand, the Indians should repeat their first dose, and again trim Mascotte, and La Casquette should defeat the Bakers, the reading would appear like this:

	Won.	Lost
Nationals	5	2
Strachans	5	3
Mascotte	4	3
La Casquette	4	4

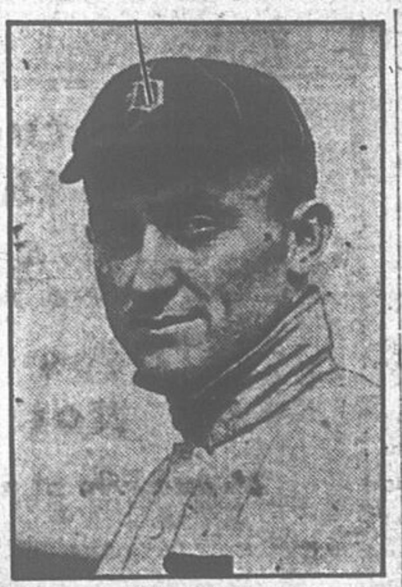
No matter which way it goes, the fans are due to witness two real live battles, and no matter which way it goes, a victory or loss means a whole lot to any of the clubs.

THE WEEK IN AMERICAN LEAGUE

By TY COBB, World's Champion All-Around Ball Player.

ONLY THREE IN FINISH IN AM. LEAGUE RACE

Ty Cobb Does Not Know, However, Whether Boston, Detroit or Chicago Will Win Honor to Fight for World Championship



TY. COBB.

NEW YORK, August 28.—Whoever wins the American League pennant race will know he has been through a fight. And whoever triumphs in the National League will appreciate the fact that it has finished a battle royal.

The American League is strictly a three club league at the present moment. Boston, Detroit and Chicago embrace the real class. The National League is the best balanced major circuit that ever played to the patrons of the game, but I do not think that Tener's circuit can boast the average strength of any of the three leading American League clubs. I am convinced that whoever wins our pennant will annex the world's championship, too.

When I first came up to the American League conditions there were much as they are now in the National. Almost every club had a good fighting chance at the start of the campaign. Four and five of these clubs usually carried their chances this far in the race. We had fights right down to the last weeks of the season. It was these conditions which established the Johnson circuit in the good graces of unbiased fandom.

ONE TOP HEAVY CLUB.

Gradually there shaped up out of this even balance one top heavy club. I refer to Connie Mack's wonderful Athletic machine. For four or five years Philadelphia was so much better than the rest of the American League field that it only had to go through the motions of winning the pennant.

Our league suffered accordingly. This condition served to breed more or less discontent in the ranks of those clubs which realized they had practically no chance against Mack's pennant trust.

Connie Mack smashed his steam roller all to pieces because Philadelphians wouldn't patronize a club that stood head and shoulders above its nearest competitor. He lost a small fortune in 1914 in spite of the fact that he figured in the World's Championship. He started out to reconstruct from low salaried players of humble origin, recruiting his exchequer from the sales of great champions and in the consequent retrenchment in salaries.

MISS FRANCES MADE TIGHT RACE AT MAISONNEUVE

Eight races were scheduled at yesterday's meet at Maisonneuve. The track was fairly hard and fast, and the events quite successful.

The feature race was the sixth, when Miss Frances finished a short head before Miss Sherwood. Curious, which gave such a promising show the other day, again came in among the last.

In the third race Leamence fell at the first turn, throwing her rider.

Toison d'Or and Dom Moran, owned by Mrs. J. Phillips and trained by Jack Howard, won the seventh and the second races respectively.

The results follow:

First race, purse $300, three year olds and up, selling, five furlongs — Eye White, 114, Pendergast, 3 to 1, even, 3 to 2, won; Rocky O'Brien, 114, Foden, 4 to 1, 2 to 1, and even, second; Miss Primity, 109, Whymark, 3 to 1, even and 1 to 2, third. Time, 1:01 3-5. Frokendale, Commack and Rye Straw also ran.

Second race, purse $300, three year olds and up, selling, six and a half furlongs—Dom Moran, 102, Pickens, 3 to 1, even and 1 to 2, won; Nino Muchacho, 115, Gargan, 5 to 1, 2 to 1, and even, second; J. L. Dempsey, 99, Whymark, 15 to 1, 5 to 1, and 3 to 1, third. Time, 1:25. Ossary Maid, Cognac Robin, Leialoha, Mimesis and Sharper Knight also ran.

Third race, purse $300, three year olds and up, selling, six and a half furlongs—Dromi, 116, Beland, 3 to 1, 3 to 2 and 2 to 3, won; Thomas Hare, 113, Saugel, 2 to 1, even and 1 to 2, second; Charley McFerran, 107, Gargan, 5 to 2, even, third. Time, 1:24. Golden Lassie, Swede Sam, Okolona, Tiger Jim and Malik also ran.

Fourth race, purse $300, for three-year-olds and up, selling, about five furlongs—Tactics, 115, Griner, even, 1 to 2 and 2 to 5, won; Indifferent, 109, Pickens, 4 to 1, 5 to 2 and 2 to 5, second; Skeets, 117, Bauer, 3 to 1, 6 to 5, and 1 to 5, third. Time, 1.00 1-5. Lady Capricious, Some Kid, Edmond Adams, Exemplar, Orimar Lad also ran.

Fifth race, purse $300, three year olds and up, five furlongs—Spirella, 107, Hinphy, 7 to 2, 3 to 2, and 2 to 3, won. Major Belt, 109, Stanford, 2 to 1, even and 1 to 2, second. Hippocrates, 103, Howard, 6 to 1, 2 to 1 and even, third. Time, 1:00 3-5. Foggety, Frosty Face, Hapsburg II., Joe Gaitens, Muskmelon and Johnny Wise also ran.

Sixth race—Six and one-half furlongs; purse $300, selling; for three-year-olds and up. Miss Frances, 100, Whymark, 4 to 1, 3 to 1, even, won. Miss Sherwood, 108, Young, 5 to 2, even, 1 to 3, second. Mud Sill, 100, Pickens, 3 to 1, 6 to 5, 3 to 5. Time, 1:23 3-5. Also ran—Tony Kock, Sarolta, Luke van Zanoff, Mazurka, Big Lumax, Paul Gaines, Curious.

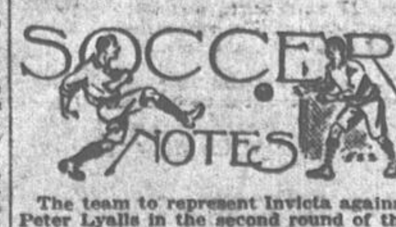
Seventh race, five furlongs; purse $300; for three year olds and up, selling—Toison d'Or, 114, Gargan, 2 to 1, 3 to 5 and out, won; Jessop Burn, 114, Howard, even and out, second. Constituent, 114, Boland, 8 to 1, 3 to 1, 3 to 2, third. Time 59 4-5. Also ran—Milo, Duquesne, The Lark.

Eighth race, five furlongs, purse $300, selling, for three year olds and up — Jim Manady, 119, Maripol, 5 to 2, even, 1 to 2, won. Odd Cross, 111, Gargan, 5 to 1, 2 to 1, even, second. Arcene, 115, Doyle, 5 to 2, even, 1 to 2, third. Time, 59 3-5. Also ran—Fawn, Jno. MacGinnis, Col. Randell, Ashocane, Delightful.

RUBE MARQUARD STILL REFUSES TO GO TO TORONTO

NEW YORK, August 27.—It was stated today that Rube Marquard, the left handed pitcher of the New York National League Club, will not report to the Toronto International League Club to which he has been released. It was also said that Marquard has no intention of joining the Federal League but believes that if he could obtain an unconditional release from the Giants he could sign with the Boston or Philadelphia clubs of the National League. Neither of these clubs, however, took advantage of the opportunity to pay the price of his waiver.

Manager McGraw of the New Yorks, was quoted as saying that he would not give Marquard an unconditional release and that if he wants to continue to draw his $8,000 salary he must report to Toronto. The situation affecting Marquard seems to be deadlocked.



The team to represent Invicta against Peter Lyalls in the second round of the Quebec Cup, on S. O. E. grounds, will be selected from the following: McBride, Clipston, Frier, A. Clark, Roe, McLean, D. Clark, Williams, Dougall, McLeod, Dykes, Wall, Hall and White.

The Richmond Baseball Club will play a match game with the Points today, Saturday, August 28, at 3 p.m., on the St. Henri Baseball Grounds. The Points line-up will be: G. McLeod, 1b; F. Barry, 2b; T. Kenny, ss.; R. Laing, 3b; K. Hughes, c.; W. Manning, l.f.; W. Hughes, c.f.; G. Shipman, p.

The Richmonds — G. Thom, ss.; L. Flanagan, 3b; A. Thompson, c.f.; Murphy, 2b; H. Cooper, 1b; S. Pittman or C. Ashton, r.f.; T. Powers or Campbell, l.f.; F. Colohan, c.; Maxwell or Downs, p.; M. McGoogan, manager.

ANOTHER HORSE GETS INSECT BITE AT CONNAUGHT PK.

Special to The Montreal Star.

OTTAWA, Aug. 28.—A card which catered to Canadian owned and foaled horses was offered by the management at Connaught Park yesterday. Of the seven races that embraced the card, three were fashioned for Canadians. Two over a distance of ground and one at a sprinting distance. The usual daily steeplechase was also decided and the sport was of a wholesome order throughout the day.

Despite the fact that several of the winners were returned by wide margins. The largest crowd of the meeting journeyed out to the course to witness the running of the card.

The fifth number, a selling affair for Canadian owned horses, resulted in a thrilling finish in which Commensa managed to get up in the closing strides to nose out Water Lily and Privet Petal. The winner was restrained off the pace and came with a rush.

PUBLIC DID WELL.

The public had a good line on the merits of the different performers, the majority of the winners being warmly supported. Lewis Garth scored his first steeplechase victory of the meeting, when Idle Michael showed a smashing performance, and led home a good band with Frog and Cynosure second and third. Fred Fox saddled two of the afternoon winners when Marion Galety accounted for her dash and Commensia in the fifth.

Jockey J. Connors, who was injured when he fell from the filly Barka in a race here a few days ago, is progressing favorably at the Water Street Hospital at Ottawa. Connors fractured his left forearm.

John F. Smyth has chosen the name of "Don't Ask Me" for the yearling Canadian foaled filly that he has at Blue Bonnets. She is the offspring of Toddington and Hurrah.

While being galloped on the roads that adjoin the track this morning Irish Heart bolted from his rider and ran away for over a mile. The boy sustained a severe shaking up.

Johnny Burtschell made the announcement today that the three-year-old Kopje suffered an attack similar to the one that visited Rose Water yesterday, Kopje was bitten at the knee presumably by a spider, the day the stable arrived.

ROYALS VICTORS IN TWO GAMES AT HARRISBURG, PA.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 28.—Irelan's triple to centre in the opening inning of the twin bill with the Indians gave Montreal a lead which Harrisburg was unable to overcome Montreal won 5-3.

Fullerton was wild and unsteady, but splendid fielding held the Redskins safe, though they crowded the bases in three innings. Irelan's triple and Whiteman's single scored Irelan in the first.

In the third Irelan was safe on a fielder's choice, stole second, was sacrificed to third and scored on Lee's wild pitch scored two in the Flynn's single. Three singles and fifth. In the sixth Howley doubled, was sacrificed and scored on a fielder's choice.

The Indians bunched hits in three innings for their runs.

Royals won the second game also.

AWARD OF MERIT FOR LIFE SAVING

George W. Ewer, secretary of the Quebec section, C.A.S.A., successfully passed all the tests and has been granted the Award of Merit of the Royal Life Saving Society. Walter Case expects to have several more members of the All Year Round Swimming Club ready for the trials soon. George Ewer was over one hour in the water, and when his heart was tested by Doctor Thomas it was found to be quite normal, and it showed no signs of the hard work he had performed. E. D. Vernot was the examiner, representing the R.L.S.S. at the Laurentian Baths where the trials were held.

At a military sports meeting held at Clarendon Park, near Watford, the brothers Neate attracted special attention owing to the fact that they are old members of the South London Harriers and that they were prominent members and that they were prominent athletes a quarter of a century ago. In a hundred yards championship for men over 40 years of age, H. A. Neate ran second to Snowden in 14 3-5 seconds, the competitors having to run in uniform and marching boots. His brother, W. C. Neate, who was hon. sec. of the meeting, won the officers' 100 years race in 13 3-5 second, and the two men were not content with their individual triumphs, carried off the three-legged race.

PLAYING for the Heathfield Cricket Club against Clapham Ramblers, Read scored 142 runs, and his side were able to declare at 245 for one wicket.

MIGNON and Goatly, whose names will be associated with Middlesex and Surrey county cricket in the order named, appeared for the Record Office R.F. (158) in a cricket match against the Essex Yeomanry (82) at Hounslow. Goatly not only took five wickets for 16, but he scored 61; while Mignon had five wickets for 20.

KINGSTON TO DO HER SHARE IN 200 MILE CANOE RACE

Special to The Montreal Star.

KINGSTON, Aug. 28.—Kingston will be represented in the 200-mile race by two of her expert canoeists—Rupert Day and Harold Singleton.

Messrs. Day and Singleton are members of the local Canoe and Motor Boat Club, and have paddled together for some five years. They understand each other perfectly, and make a team that will be hard to beat. They have a great advantage over other contestants in the fact that they are thoroughly familiar with the St. Lawrence and Rideau River routes. Both are in tip top shape, and will be able to hold their own with any other pair in the event, in the opinion of local canoeists.

Officials of the local canoe club are completing arrangements for the reception of the competitors. This point is a forced rest station, and the first flock of competitors is expected here on the night of September 2. Each pair will have to remain here for nine hours before setting out down the Rideau on the long pull to Ottawa, and Dr. Lake has arranged through the courtesy of Mr. Horsey, of the Canada Steamship Lines, for the use of Folger's wharf, where the men will disembark and their canoes will be looked after. Arrangements are also being made to convey the canoeists to their hotels, in autos provided by the club members.

The timekeepers at Kingston will be Dr. Lake and W. G. Ferguson. The physician will be Dr. Robert Hanley.

More Two Hundred Mile Canoe Race Hints for Contestants

Commodore Thomas John Craig, late of the R. & O. N. Co., who has had many years experience navigating the St. Lawrence between Prescott and Toronto, and has published some fine charts of the course, writes as follows on the course chosen for the Marathon canoe race:

"You will find it a pretty long pull from Prescott to Kingston, all against the current, for one day's work. However, it will be the first day, and it will not come so hard on the paddlers if they put in some good hard practice for some time before the race. This is what will count for most the first day, the balance of the course being in comparatively smooth water, with portages that will not handicap the paddlers.

WATCH THE CURRENT.

"Now, as to taking advantage of the current, I would recommend the following: After leaving Prescott, keep the Canadian shore well aboard so as to take advantage of the eddy. I would recommend this more particularly after leaving Brockville; shape course to north of Mile Island. When well up to the island, skirt along the east shore and pass as close as possible to the south side; hug south of Twin Isles and pass between Needless Eye and Bluff Point and hug the shore and whart at Hill crest. If optional with paddlers to take the shortest course possible, I would suggest that the paddlers strike a course straight for the north side of Squaw Island, thence between Tar Island and the mainland past Rockport. From Rockport to Gananoque you will find a pretty stiff current, and from Gananoque to Cedar Island it will be comparatively smooth water if the north channel between Howe Island and the mainland is taken. From Cedar Island to Kingston, the weather conditions will altogether depend upon the direction of the wind. If the wind is fresh from west or south-west, it will be pretty lumpy for a canoe and will require some judgment in paddling easy and keeping canoe free of water sprayed over the bow."

Mr. Graves, of Ivy Lea, reports as follows regarding distances and current: "Prescott to Brockville is twelve miles, Brockville to Rockport twenty miles, Rockport to Gananoque about twelve miles. There is a strong current in the first four miles above Brockville, a strong current two miles above Rockport, for about two miles; from that on to Kingston there is very little current."

The clubs which are expected to enter, with names given, are:

THIRTEEN CREWS.

The teams announced are:

Harp Canoe Club, St. Rose — Clarke and Filiatreault.

Rideau Aquatic Club, Ottawa—Gamble and Dandurand.

Rideau Aquatic Club, Ottawa—Tressider and Lavallee.

Grand Trunk Boating Club, Montreal—Abbey Laing and Howe.

Grand Trunk Boat Club, Montreal—Hoerner and Addy Morrison.

Kingston Canoe and Motor Club — Rupert Day and Howard Singleton.

Teams which are expected to enter, but names not yet given:

Grand Trunk Boat Club, Montreal—(Two crews).

Toronto Canoe Club.

Longueuil Canoe Club.

Ottawa - New Edinburgh Club—(Two crews).

Britannia Boating Club.

STARS WILL BE AT ST. HYACINTHE

The Star Baseball Club of the City League will play at St. Hyacinthe tomorrow afternoon. The team will leave at 12 o'clock (noon) by the Grand Trunk, Bonaventure Station. Aucoin and Buell will be the local's battery, with Henri Clement and Desjardins for the home team.

TOMORROW'S CITY LEAGUE DOUBLE-HEADER TEAMS

Mascottes vs. the Indians and Strachans vs La Casquette are the two City League games scheduled for tomorrow's double header at Delorimier Park, and with the high interest going on owing to the closeness of the standing of the first four clubs in the league race, the attendance is expected to be very large.

The batting order and lineups of Mascottes, Strachans and La Casquette are given below. Manager Joe Page, of the Indians, will not pick his team until just before their game with Mascotte, which is his extended time limit for signing up new players, owing to several of the Indians leaving some two weeks ago for bridge work near Quebec. The battery, however, is known to be Malcolm Fraser and Wingo.

ON the College Ground, Bishop's Stortford, there was a military sports meeting on a mammoth scale by the 2-2 London Division, upwards of 800 entries being received for the various events. A trophy, presented by Mr. Tresham Gilbey for competition among the units, was won by the Royal Engineers. For that contingent the famous Weybridge athlete, Lieut. A. Moncrieff (a member of the L.A.C., Surrey, A.C., and other prominent clubs, showed fine form. He won the 100 yards race in 10 1-5 secs., the 220 yards in 22 4-5 secs., the quarter-mile in 53 secs., and assisted the Royal Engineers to win the mile relay race. Private Plowman, 2-14 Battalion, won the half mile race in 2 min 7 1-5 secs.; Lieut. Monroe, 2-16 Battalion, won the officers' mile in 4 min. 50 3-5 secs.; Driver Norman (R.A.M.C.) won the other mile race in 4 min. 50 1-5 secs, and the London Scottish won the seven miles Marathon race, but were beaten by the Heavy Battery, R.G.A., in the final of the tug-of-war.

THE death took place at Tapton Court, Sheffield, of Mr. Henry Steel, who was formerly a notable figure in the racing world and a leader of the Ring in the sixties and seventies. When he retired from racing he transferred his energies to the steel trade, and was the head of Messrs. Steel, Peach and Tozer; Limited. Mr. Steel was in his 84th year.

KING'S PLATERS' LAST TRIAL FOR BLUE BONNETS

OTTAWA, August 28—The trainers who have the eligibles for the King's Plate race to be run at Blue Bonnets during the meeting of the Montreal Jockey Club from Thursday, September 2 to 9 at Connaught Park have given them a race which will be their final outing before being sent to the post for the Guineas. Lady Spendthrift, which will, no doubt, be the favorite in the fourth race, has shown some likely trials here. She has had a good rest up for the past two weeks and has rounded out and is at her best form.

Suivez Moi, which has been raced at Connaught Park this week, was worked the full mile and a quarter trip yesterday morning and did her work in an impressive manner. She will be a strong factor in the running of the plate as she has shown an ability to go over a distance of ground. Cerf Volant, which is also from the Charlevoix stable, was breezed by Ambrose, who will ride one or the other of the two horses. These horses will be shipped to Montreal probably on Saturday or Sunday, which will enable their trainer to give them a final workout at the Montreal track before racing them.

Mary Masters was also given a trial over the spring route. This filly has developed into a nice looking three year old and gives great promise of going over a distance of ground. Silk Bird, the two year old owned by W. J. Shaughnessy, was breezed, and will be given her final workout for the Nursery at Blue Bonnets. The horsemen racing at the meeting here continue to apply for stabling at Blue Bonnets.

AUTO SHOW WILL BE HELD AS USUAL, ONLY ONE IN EAST

A decision against holding a motor show in Toronto this season has been reached by the members of the Toronto Automobile Trade Association as, on account of the military activity, the Armories and the Exhibition buildings are not available, all being in use for the housing or training of troops.

The Montreal Automobile Trade Association, however, has decided to hold the 1916 show as usual, and it will be held in January. Montreal thus will hold the only motor show in Canada east of Winnipeg during 1916.

There is nothing to take the place of a motor show; it makes an appeal to the buyer that no amount of literature or personal persuasion can effect, and the holding of it as usual will give a strong stimulus to general business that will react to the benefit of the motor trade in particular. There is no room for pessimism with regard to Canada's present position.

The organization is now well under way for the Montreal Show, and Manager T. C. Kirby says success is already assured.

HOLDING A CARNIVAL

The Montreal Automobile Trade Association is holding an elaborate gymkana and carnival of automobile sports on the grounds of Castellani's at Cartierville this afternoon.

The members and their friends met at Place Viger Square, and, led by a Reo Pilot Car, driven by R. F. Girdwood, left for the grounds. Each car was decorated by two of the Auto Association's official pennants. The program of events is an interesting one.

A special orchestra has been engaged and dancing will take place this evening. Valuable prizes have been donated for the winners of the various events and the presentation will be made during the evening by Mayor Martin, assisted by the Mayor of Cartierville, F. A. Grothe.

COVERING THE GROUND.

C. M. Bennett, well known in the motor world, has just had proof of what the 1916 new model, McLaughlin Buick, can do.

A few days ago he drove a "Big Six" from Toronto to Montreal, getting an average o nineteen and a half miles out of a gallon of gasoline. There was no guessing at the amount of gasoline used, it being sworn to before and after the journey. This was a great performance for a six cylinder car, and there is no doubt that it can do even better, for the roads between Montreal and Toronto are not of the best. Several of the roads between the different towns are very bad, especially between Gananoque and Kingston.

Mr. Bennett is a director of the Montreal Automobile Trade Association.

HELPING THE FARMER.

After driving a 1912 Overland touring car more than twenty thousand miles over the rough roads of Saskatchewan, A. W. Bell, a native of Saskatoon, conceived the idea of putting it to work on his farm. His theory was that if the car could stand three years of travelling over the so-called roads of that section of the country, it could go a step better and do the practical work.

The machine has been in almost constant use throughout the summer, and no trouble has developed. It has been run as many as fourteen hours a day, drawing a set of discs and a set of sixteen fast harrows, without even needing a fresh supply of water.

Bell states that he was able to seed thirty acres a day or harrow from sixty to seventy acres with his automobile. By drawing two twelve-inch bushers, he managed to break five acres of soil a day, or the equivalent to the work done by six to eight horses.

The Overland consumed just seventy gallons of gasoline to put in the crop, while the cost of horse feed alone would have more than doubled the expenditure.

PAYS OFF OLD DEBTS.

The Consolidated Car Company, of Detroit, organized last December to take over the business, good will and other properties of the Abbott Motor Company and to assume the indebtedness of that company, has just completed payments to the Security Trust Company of Detroit, trustee of the original Abbott Company, covering a full 100 cents on the dollar to the creditors.

This procedure on the part of the Consolidated Car Company has created something of a sensation in the business world. As a matter of fact it is the first case in the history of the automobile industry in that section in which a motor car concern becoming financially involved, has worked out and paid the original creditors 100 cents on the dollar.

The action of the Consolidated Car Company has brought its officials many congratulations and words of high praise. The precedent established is significant in two respects, C. L. Lewis, president of the company, believes. It reflects the absolute stability the automobile industry has attained, and it unquestionably reflects the strength of the new organization's personnel and the merit of the company's product.

BUSINESS IS GOOD.

C. P. Henderson, general sales manager of the Cole Motor Car Company, has just returned from a week's trip through the South, and asserts that business conditions are in a more healthy state today than they have been for a number of months. Mr. Henderson is contemplating an extended journey through the West, which will take him to San Francisco, where a special exhibit of Cole motor cars is being held in connection with the Panama-Pacific exposition.

JOINS THE CHALMERS.

Frank H. Smith, formerly of the Studebaker corporation and later Northwest district manager for the Hudson Motor Car Company, has joined the sales force of the Chalmers Motor Company in the capacity of special representative. In his new work, Mr. Smith will be the link between factory and distributor. A great deal of his time will be spent on the road in cooperation with the retailer.

WOMAN'S LONG TRIP.

After driving her Maxwell from Long Beach, Cal., to Dallas, Texas, Mrs. K. L. Kent is now on her return trip. Her only companions are her ten-year-old son and "Buster," a husky bull terrior. Mrs. Kent made her eastward trip in 11 days and expects to beat this fast time on her way home.

BEATS BIRD'S SPEED.

An interesting fact in natural history was discovered by James Linville, of Greensburg, Ind., the other day. A sparrow flew up in front of his touring car. Linville increased his speed and, with the speedometer registering just 30 miles an hour, caught the bird against the front of the radiator where fan pressure held it until the car slowed down.

Test Hill is Latest Idea of Motor Builders.

Dodge Brothers, Detroit, introduce a novel idea aimed at keeping demon road-testers off street and road. The test-hill is located in the centre of the speedway-enclosure, built entirely of steel, and is 542 feet long by 30 feet wide. It has two approaches with varying grades, allowing testers to try out cars on gradual and steep ascents.

Over 215,000 feet of lumber have gone into the construction of the half-mile track. It is built on a foundation of clay and cinders, banked at the turns, and surfaced with a fine grade of pine planking, which has been creosoted to afford a dustless and smooth surface.

THE Indian students who defeated a military team at Lord's Cricket ground by 126 runs owed their superiority in no small measure to M. P. Bajana. The Somerset cricketer made 126, including seventeen 4's.

L. S. WELLS achieved an excellent performance with the ball at the Oval when he appeared for the Gentlemen of Surrey against the H.A.C. His six wickets were captured in the course of less than seven overs for 38 runs.

WAR TOLL OF SPORT

Alan Marshal, the Australian cricketer who qualified and played for Surrey, has died in hospital at Malta. He was a private in the 15th Battalion, Australian Imperial forces, and was in action at the Dardanelles. W. G. Grace at one time thought Marshal would develop into another Victor Trumper, and though he did not fulfil this high promise he was a most capable batsman.

So well did Marshal promise in his first season with London County that he scored 2,752 runs, with an average of 56, and took 118 wickets at a cost of 16.41 runs each. He was even more successful in the next year, when, with 14 centuries, he hit up 4,350 runs and captured 210 wickets.

Marshal's real successes were crowded into the season of 1908. Scoring five centuries, his aggregate amounted to 1,884, with an average of 40. He made 176 against Worcestershire, 143 against Northamptonshire, 167 against Kent, 108 against Middlesex, and 103 against the Philadelphians. But perhaps his best performance of the season was in scoring 70 against the Yorkshire bowlers on a bad wicket at the Oval.

Then Marshal had a disagreement with the Surrey County Committee, and in 1910 he returned to Australia. Born in Queensland, he was thirty-two years of age.

Capt. W. M. Parker, one of the best of army sportsmen, is reported to have been killed in action. At Winchester he proved a fine athlete, and, going up to the R.M.C., played "Soccer" for the College, and captained the eleven in 1906. He also played cricket for the R.M.C., and represented the Army against the Navy. Last winter he was appointed to the 8th Rifle Brigade, and under his direction football competitions were instituted, and when the S.C.C.C.A. came along the 8th Rifle Brigade were among their earliest and their best supporters. He also took a leading part in the arrangement of the great charity football matches at Aldershot and Queen's Club.

George Lambert, from 1871 to 1885 the professional tennis champion of the world, has died in London at the age of seventy. He lost his position as champion when beaten by the American, Thomas Pettitt. Lambert was for about twenty years the tennis professional at Lord's.

Capt. Frederick Marriner Aston, 6th Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, of Costislost, Washaway, Cornwall, who was killed in Flanders, aged forty-eight, was the youngest surviving son of the late Joseph Keech Aston, of 3, Dean's Yard, Westminster. He was educated at Shrewsbury School and Pembroke College, Cambridge, where he took an honor degree. He was a keen all-round sportsman, obtaining his Blue for Association football, 1886, and he played also for the Crusaders when they won the London Charity Cup, and successfully captained Shrewsbury Town when they won the final for the Welsh Cup; he was also in his college cricket XI. Capt. Aston commanded the Wadebridge Volunteers for five years, but had retired. At the outbreak of the war he applied to rejoin, and was given a commission in the 6th Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry. He married Florence Katharine, daughter of Lieut.-Col. Mosley, of Hulland Hall, Derby, and had one son, Lieut. R. M. Aston, 2nd Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, who has been "missing, believed killed," since March 14, 1915.

Lieut. W. P. Geen, King's Royal Rifles, is reported missing. He is the well-known Rugby three-quarter, who has played for Oxford University, Newport, and Wales. With Ronald Poulton-Palmer as his centre, who, like so many other international Rugby players, has fallen in action, he won a high reputation at his university, scoring many tries by reason of his quickness to take his passes and his fast, puzzling running. As a member of the famous Newport club, he was, in his day, one of the most brilliant wing three-quarters in Wales.

MR. GEORGE LAMBERT, the ex-champion tennis player and father of Harry Lambert, died at Tufnell Park in his seventy-fifth year.

RHEUMATISM CURED BY LIGHTNING BOLT

BERLIN, Conn., Aug. 27.—The medical faculty was put to shame by a bolt of lightning which struck the farm-house of Charles A. Burdick, on Worthington Ridge. The electric bolt destroyed articles in all the eight rooms of the house and did damage exceeding $1,000. but it cured Mrs. Burdick of rheumatism, from which she had suffered for many years.

Mrs. Burdick was about to put wood in the kitchen stove when the bolt struck her, knocking her down and rendering her unconscious. One of her feet was on zinc beneath the stove. The lightning took a nail out of the sole of her shoe and her foot was burned severely. Dr. Thomas Mulligan, of New Britain, soon revived her.

Mrs. Burdick, although suffering from the burns on her foot, is free from rheumatic pains. She does not think the price her husband must pay in repairs to the house too high, but Mr. Burdick is discreetly silent.

IF THIS IS YOUR BIRTHDAY
AUGUST 28.

Virgo children are very keen to observe and their attention must be directed to all that is beautiful and true. They are natural students. They should find their companions among those who are jovial and cheerful in disposition.

Children born on this date need special care and attention. They should not be allowed to criticise their companions and they should not be allowed to dwell upon the dark side of life.

They should not be given too much medicine nor drugs. Pure food, pure air, gentleness, kindness and firmness will impart wonderful health and strength.

NO LIMITED LIABILITY WAR FOR US.

THERE is still noticeable a tendency on the part of some writers, even in the Mother Country, to talk of Britain's participation in this war as if it were a chivalrous and optional extension of help to the Continental countries attacked by Germany. These thinkers tell us that Britain never agreed to do more than keep the seas for the Allies and send an expeditionary force of from 80,000 to 120,000 to the assistance of France. And as she has done much better than this—her casualties being several times larger than the expeditionary force she promised—she cannot now be accused of failing to "do her bit."

This school of thought takes, we imagine, an entirely erroneous view of the situation. It is quite true that, in the slothful and foolish old days when "pacifist" nonsense was rated at par, we did discuss our share in any war against Germany much in these terms. We were, indeed, compelled to discuss it in so amateur and inadequate a manner because, if we had for a moment talked of sending a real army to the Continent, we should have been met at once with the question: "Where is your army?" We were getting along with a small professional army at the time, capable of doing no more than furnishing a lean expeditionary force, and that was consequently all we had to talk about. If any man had then suggested that Britain might send an army of three millions into the fray, he would have been promptly bombarded with such epithets as "jingo," "conscriptionist" and "militarist madman."

But surely it is obvious now that this is not a limited liability war, even in the case of Britain. She is no more benevolently going to the help of France and Russia than France and Russia are coming to her help. They are all in the same boat, we quite as far into it as anybody. We can no more afford to be beaten in this war than can any of our Allies. So it is no longer a question with us of how small an expeditionary force will honorably redeem our pre-war promises, but of how large an overseas army we can possibly raise, drill, equip and send against the common enemy.

Whatever may be the consequences to any of our Continental Allies, it will be absolute and complete ruin for the British Empire to have this war end with the fact apparently established that the strongest combination that could possibly be brought against Germany is not strong enough to beat her. We might as well take our brushes, after that, and paint the "British red" off the map. For there is no manner of doubt that, whatever sections of her Continental neighbors Germany may or may not think it prudent for her to take in her hour of victory—or to keep in her hour of "stalemate"—she does covet the greater part of the British Empire. There are large sections of the German people who are sincerely opposed to incorporating any more alien elements within the sacred German Empire. They want no repetitions of Alsace-Lorraine with a deathless French hatred. But there are no Germans who are not hungry for over-seas possessions, either peopled by what they regard as inferior races or not peopled to any great extent at all.

They may not want to keep Belgium, but they will want to get Egypt. They may not want to hold their section in Northern France, but they will want Canada. They may not want Poland, but they will want South Africa. It may be only Germans for Germany within the Fatherland, but it will India for Germans to exploit abroad—it will Canada for them to colonize—it will be every British "Heligoland" from Gibraltar to Hong Kong for them to make the resting places of their new navy. If Germany comes out of this war with her military prestige in its present condition, she will be the master of the world. If the Allies cannot beat her today with all the conditions in their favor, they will not be likely to line up for a second trial. The horror of this war will hang over humanity for a generation. It is now or never with us, and the British Empire must win this time—or face a future full of a menace so deadly that we will not even debate about conscription; we will grasp at it desperately with the panic-shaken hand of the householder who hears burglars in the house and fumbles feverishly for his revolver.

THE GERMANS FOR GALLIPOLI.

THERE is every indication that, so soon as Germany shall have discovered that it is impossible for her to "obtain a decision"—to employ a sporting phrase—over Russia, she will turn her attention to the ticklish and important situation in what we were wont to call the Near East. This may be done by making a "drive" down through Serbia into Bulgarian territory, or by concentrating a great army for an attack on Italy—or by both. If Italy opens a serious offensive against Turkey on the Gallipoli Peninsula, it is obvious that Turkey may insist that Germany try to keep the formidable Italians at home by raiding their northern frontier. This would bring a declaration of war from Germany to Italy, and a German army on the Venetian borders.

The matter of most moment, however, would be to connect up the Austrian armies with the Turkish by establishing a Teuton route across Serbia and Bulgaria. That would enable the Austro-Germans to pour men and munitions into Turkey for the defence of the Dardanelles—if they had not previously fallen. In the latter case, it would be Constantinople which must be defended. It is quite in line with German policy, as shown in this war, to leave the Turks to their fate until the Dardanelles have been lost to them and their Capital put in the direst peril, and then to rush to their rescue, in dramatic fashion, crying, "Behold your saviours! You would have been crushed but for the mighty Germans!"

Germany seems to want—not merely to win this war—but to put her Allies under an unmistakable debt of gratitude to her as the Power who won it for them. She has played this game beautifully with Austria, and Vienna must now be on her knees to Berlin. So she may play it with Turkey. But if she does, she will run a great risk of losing not only that "game," but the larger game of the whole war. For once the Allies have established themselves on Gallipoli, it will surely be beyond German ability to put them out again at whatever cost, and there will be very few days' pause between the forcing of the Dardanelles and the compulsory surrender of Stamboul under the guns of the Allied fleet. Germany will thus have little or no time in which to play the belated rescuer—assuming that she will have the strength.

It seems more probable, therefore, that Germany will strive to smash her way through to the help of the Turks while they still hold Gallipoli. So it becomes a race between the Teutons and the Allies as to which will arrive at the Narrows first. The Teutons will have the power of plucky but war-worn Serbia to overcome. They are calculating on Bulgarian docility—if that is not assured, they will probably not strike at all. The Allies have command of the sea to bring up unlimited troops against Turkey's limited garrison, and they will be helped by the rumored Turkish shortage of ammunition. So we shall probably see a swift campaign—and a murderous one. And very important issues will hang upon it.

THE WORLD'S PRESS

Shoulder to Shoulder.

London Daily Telegraph:—Today the distant parts of the Empire stand shoulder to shoulder with us in the fight, never more conscious than now that our cause is theirs, and that by the issue their fate and ours will be sealed for all time.

English and French Soldiers

London Daily Chronicle:—Whatever distinction between the temperaments of the two nations there may have been in times of peace, there certainly is none in time of war. The British soldier finds in his French comrade a hard practicality in action which in his earlier insular seclusion he had imagined to be his own monopoly; the Frenchman finds the British soldier as cordial and warm-hearted as himself. The two armies have been welded together in blood and fire, and they fight as one.

The Eternal Trend

London Daily Express:—Germany prepared for war. She correctly estimated the value of organisation and munitions. In every other respect her calculations were grotesquely wrong. We, on our side, are able to accept reverses with undiminished confidence, because our faith is built upon a rock. We know we must win because we believe in "the eternal trend" towards righteousness, justice and peace. We acknowledge our shortcomings. We are alive to our deficiencies. But our confidence is unshakable.

A Curious Thing

New York Sun:—James J. Hill, the railway builder of the Northwest, has been selected by a committee of five as Minnesota's greatest living citizen to accept honors bestowed by the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Mr. Hill belongs to the nation as one of its eminent men no less than to Minnesota. It is curious thing that our foremost railroad man was born in Canada and that Canada's great railroad men, Van Horne and Shaughnessy, saw the light in the United States.

After The War

London Daily News and Leader:—The whole tenor of the time which is coming after this war will be determined by the capacity of the nation to define in thought and in act the ideals towards which it is really striving. It will cost a serious and unaccustomed effort. The people, at the parting of the ways, will have to choose for God or Mammon, and their choice will have to be a real choice supported by real sacrifices. It will be a turning point in the history of the English people, and no one can pretend to absolute confidence in the spirit in which it will be met.

Great Britain's Position

Westminster Gazette:—At the end of the first year of war Great Britain stands in the position which history recognises as uniquely hers. She has established her power on the sea and made herself and her Empire, so far as human precautions can make it, invulnerable. She has extinguished her enemy's commerce and stands possessed of his colonial empire. There is no item in the separate account between her and him which is not in her favor. But the joint-account between the Allies and the German Powers is equally her concern, and everything that she has gained and everything that she enjoys by virtue of her geographical position is and must be for the common cause. She has a fourfold contribution to make: to keep the seas, to give all the military aid possible to her Allies on land, to supply the material of war not only for herself but for her Allies, and to maintain the credit of the allied cause by keeping as much of her industry going as the state of war permits.

THE PASSING HOUR

HARD TO DAMAGE.

"Alpine scenery is very grand."

"Very durable, too. I imagine it will pull through the war all right."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

In western Georgia a jury recently met to inquire into a case of suicide. After sitting through the evidence, the twelve men retired, and after cogitating returned with the following verdict:

"The jury are all of one mind—temporarily insane!"

VACATION TIME.

"We should do a part of the world's work."

"No doubt. I also maintain that we are entitled to a share of the world's loafing."
—Louisville Courier-Journal.

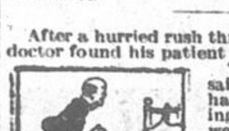
Sir Edward Carson is usually serious in demeanor, but he is a master in the art of making witty and telling retorts. During one case in which he appeared he had more than one passage at arms with the judge, who finally drew attention to a descrepancy between the evidence given by two of Sir Edward's principal witnesses, one of whom was a carpenter, and the other a tavern keeper. "That's so, my lord," instantly retorted Sir Edward. "Yet another case of difference between the bench and the bar."

DREAMING.

"Been sleeping, eh? Thought you came to fish."

"Well, I caught a big string in my sleep and that's probably more than I would have done had I kept awake."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

After a hurried rush through the night the doctor found his patient in a very bad way.



"My dear sir," he said slowly, "I have been attending you for nine weeks and have done my best, but I'm afraid that your end is near. Have you any last wish to express?"

The patient drew a long breath.

"Yes, doctor," he replied, in a faint voice, "I wish I had had another doctor!"

AN EXPERT.

Johnny—"What is an expert, pa?"

Pa—"A fellow who tells others how to do things he can't do himself."—Kansas City Star.

"Can you wait on me immediately?" demanded the richly dressed woman. "I'm in a great hurry."

"Yes. Let me have your prescription," said the busy druggist.

"I have no prescription. I want you to look up a number for me in the telephone book."

"FOR VALOR."

Neutral Correspondent—"You dropped a bomb on the hospital, eh? Wal, I guess that's nothin' to write home about."

The Hero—"Ah! But id vas der children's 'ospital."—Sydney Bulletin.

FROM THE STAR FILES

THIRTY YEARS AGO.

The Late Hon. Thomas White.

"MONO MILLS, Ont., Aug. 28.—The election for the seat in the House of Commons for Cardwell, rendered vacant by the acceptance of office by the Hon. Thomas White, was held today and resulted in a victory for that gentleman, he having at present writing a majority of 436, with three places to be heard from, which are expected to add to this."

The late Hon. Thomas White, who held the portfolio of Minister of the Interior in the Macdonald Cabinet (1885), was born in Montreal in 1830. His father, who came from Ireland, and who was a prosperous merchant, had his son educated at the Montreal High School. From there he graduated to a position on the editorial staff of the Quebec Gazette, and later he had other attachments to the profession of journalist. In 1864 he went with his brother, Richard, to Hamilton, where they published the Spectator. In 1867 he was an unsuccessful candidate for the Ontario Legislature, but eleven years later he was elected member for Cardwell in the Dominion Parliament. He was re-elected in 1882, and again, five years later. It was in 1885 that he became a member of the Macdonald Cabinet. Besides being largely connected with newspaper work, he also studied law at Cobourg. For many years he represented the Montreal Board of Trade in the Dominion Board, and for five years represented that body before the National Board of Trade of the United States.

Shortly after his appointment to the Cabinet, he went to the Northwest, where he conducted an enquiry into the origin of the Riel Rebellion. At that time he restored the operation of the Government, which had been temporarily suspended. He died in Ottawa in 1888, fifty-eight years of age.

"OTTAWA, Aug. 28.—Lord Lansdowne will be present at the Rideau ranges during the week of the Dominion Rifle Association meeting. In addition to the prizes announced, Sir Frederick Middleton offers a prize for novel competition. Whilst moving at an unknown distance from moving targets the target will rise and fall and be only visible for a few seconds."

"During the week seventy-four immigrants were received at the Province of Quebec immigration office."
—From The Star of August 28, 1885.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

"PARIS, August 28.—The Figaro this morning declares that the Waller affair is unimportant, that Waller was only an American consul through accident, that he never did well, and that his consular colleagues, in addition to the natives, shunned him. The Figaro adds: "Nothing serious can result from the negotiations regarding his condemnation, for he is not worth the 'trouble.'"

"A meeting of the friends and admirers of the late Hon. Honore Mercier has been called for Tuesday next at the Riendeau Hotel, to organize for the erection of a monument to the late ex-Premier. It is suggested to erect the statue on St. Louis square. The unveiling would take place on October 30, 1896, the second anniversary of his death."—From The Star, August 28, 1895.

FAR FROM MADDING CROWD.

There is one place in the world which has probably not yet heard of the war. This is the British Island of Tristan da Cunha, in the South Atlantic, the Secretary to the British Postmaster-General recently stating that the island has not received a mail since the outbreak of hostilities. The island is dependent on chance communications from the Cape of Good Hope, 1,500 miles away. The inhabitants number about eighty, and are mainly descendants of shipwrecked sailors. They are of mixed origin—English, Scotch, Irish, American, Dutch, Italian, Asiatic, anad negro.

With the Makers of Books

Kaiser Wilhelm as His Own Tongue Betrays Him to Us

Some few weeks ago there was noticed on this page a little book with the title "Is the Kaiser Insane?" The author of that book had made a careful study of the present ruler of Germany, both through his actions, speeches and his heredity. It will be remembered that the conclusion reached was that Wilhilm II. is mentally irresponsible, and should be under restraint.

Today another book, which might lead to the same general conclusion, may be noticed. It is entitled "The German Emperor as Shown in his Public Utterances." (New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.25), and makes interesting and very often amusing reading. The author, Christian Gauss, Professor of Modern Languages at Princeton, has been painstakingly fair in the method he has employed. He accepts as accurate no speech of the twelve or fifteen hundred speeches made by the Kaiser which has not been officially reported. Moreover, he makes no excerpts without the context. He is also studiously impartial in the comment and explanation with which he, as it were, binds these speeches together to make the book.

And what an amazing variety there is between the covers of this little volume. Professor Gauss begins with the Kaiser's first order to his troops on the day of his father's death. The Kaiser had not been speaking for one minute as ruler of Germany before he uttered the phrase: "the absolutely inviolable dependence upon the war lord (Kriegsherr) of the army," and in conclusion intimated that he would hold himself accountable to—his ancestors. As far back as 1889 we find the Kaiser declaring to a deputation of working men that he considered every Social Democrat as synonymous with an enemy of the realm, and of the Fatherland. Time flies fast, and it is curious to note that the monarch who in 1914 attempted to challenge British sea power, in 1889 declared that "we (Germans) as a young sea power follow England in order to learn from the English navy."

But it is very seldom indeed that we catch Wilhelm admitting that any German has anything to learn from anybody. The speeches, whether they concern foreign policy, accidents with reaping machines or the inauguration of a new line of statues, reflect the most complete satisfaction with German ability, culture and accomplishments. In the speech on the opening of the Siegersallee, that extraordinary conglomeration of heroic-sized marble figures typifying various dead and gone worthies of the clan Hohenzollern, Wilhelm cheerfully observes that the development of modern sculpture in Berlin is equal to that of the renaissance in Italy. This is only one example of the Kaiser's divine complacency where things German are concerned. Instances might be cited by the score from this very interesting little book.

Turning over its pages we come across all the old thunderclaps which so startled the world a few years—or was it centuries?—ago. Here is the famous address to the troops on the eve of the Chinese expedition, where there was such glorious stealing for officers and rank and file. Then comes the "our future lies upon the water" speech at Stettin, in 1898, and on the heels of that that extraordinary offer in Jerusalem of friendship to three hundred million Moslems, who apparently were in no immediate need of it.

Then there is the Brandenburg speech of February, 1899, in which Wilhelm enunciated that doctrine of divine right which, repeated and amplified at Konigsberg eleven years later, made a wondering world demand whether the clock had been turned back three centuries.

The year 1900 brings us to the Kaiser's speeches in need of a Greater Germany Navy.

"Bitterly do we need a powerful German fleet," he declared at Hamburg in that year. After an interval comes that modest declaration at Bremen, in 1905, that "we are the salt of the earth," a speech in which occurred the significant passage: "I have made a vow, as a result of what I have learned from history, never to strive for an empty world-dominion. For what became of the so-called world-Empires? Alexander the Great, Napoleon I.—all the great warriors—have swum in blood and left subjugated peoples behind them, who, at the first opportunity, have risen up again and brought the Empire to ruin."

The Daily Telegraph interview, which Professor Gauss says was the most startling incident in the Emperor's reign, is also given in extenso.

The book brings the Emperor's speeches right down to his final proclamation to the people after war had broken out. Read carefully with an eye to the development of the speaker's character, they are most interesting. Nothing quite like them would be found coming from the lips of the ruler of any other civilized country. Certain obsessions scarcely noticeable in Wilhelm's earlier utterances become more and more pronounced as the years go by. One will be materially helped in any estimate of the Kaiser's sanity by a leisurely perusal of Professor Gauss' book.

"YOUNG EARNEST" AN UNUSUAL BOOK

Gilbert Cannan, who wrote that very good novel "Old Mole," has followed it up by another book of somewhat the same character, "Young Earnest" (Toronto: the MacMillan Company of Canada, $1.25).

"Young Earnest" is an unusual book. It starts out to be very dull and ends up by being the reverse. Like the hero of it, Rene Fourmy, it develops late. Frankly, we get very sick indeed of Rene's ubiquitous soul and there are chapters that leave us wondering why Mr. Cannan expended so much good ink and paper on a matter of so little importance as this same soul. Rene is one of those elemental beings with no cuticle around their ego. "He was," we read in one place, "unbearably alive to all suffering and to his own." If he had only been able to forget his own sufferings for a page or two the reader would breathe easier.

However, it is a very interesting study in character development this book. Rene Fourmy, son of an irresponsible father and an unusual mother, is himself of the irresponsible type, a keen sufferer from an over-developed ego, without sense of obligation to God, man—or woman—or beast. He is an intellectual without the intellectual's customary coldness, a man upon whom external circumstances and conditions have an unusual influence. His life, or as much of it as is covered by the book, is an unending quest after the Blue Bird of happiness. In the course of that quest he marries, abruptly leaves his wife, goes to London, becomes a public chauffeur, "takes up with" a factory girl, leaves her before her child is born and finds happiness in the end with a boyhood sweetheart as the father of her three children and the part proprietor of a suburban garage. One rather sympathizes with Rene in his sudden flight from his commonplace wife who tries so desperately to be anything but common place and gets her emotions out of a book. The episode of Ann the Cockney flower maker is harder to stomach, with her fear of the man who sits, as she says, "with fishy eyes, staring at nothing, thinking, thinking thinking." When Ann embarks in an immigrant ship to Canada one feels that she is well out of it. together a clever, unpleasant, rather bloodless human juggernaut, who manages through uncontrolled emotionalism to smash down, run over and crush the life out of everything that happens to cross his path —and to do it all without having the least intention of so doing. There is a vast deal of sheer talk in the book; a common defect of books of its class. It is not nearly so good a story as Old Mole, but in it Mr. Cannan shows his ability as a ready hand at character development. Altogether a clever, displeasing, rather fascinating and well out-of-the-ordinary novel.

BORDERLANDS AND THOROUGHFARES

Those of us who read the poetry of the day, keeping alive the hope that, sooner or later, we will find wheat among the chaff, are occasionally rewarded for our optimism and perseverence. One such find, unheralded and unexpected, was the poetry of Wilfrid Wilson Gibson, and to the Macmillans of Toronto we owe another volume by the same writer, which is quite worthy to take its place beside "Fires" and "Daily Bread." Mr. Gibson calls his latest book "Borderlands and Thoroughfares." "Borderlands" consists of three longer pieces—"Thoroughfares" of a score or so of shorter poems.

There is about the poetry of this young writer a depth and a simplicity which verges sometimes on the really terrible. He is essentially a poet of the people and his little vignettes of life are acid-etched about the figures of the common herd. Take the little fragment, "Prometheus":

"All day beneath the black, indifferent skies,
Broken and blind, a shivering bag of bones,
He trudges over icy paving stones,
And 'Matches! Matches! Matches! Matches!' cries.

And now beneath the dismal, dripping night,
And shadowed by a deeper night, he stands:
And yet he holds within his palsied hands
Quick fire enough to set his world alight."

Gibson has an overflowing human sympathy with the whole of life. The harsh note of all human suffering and wrong predominates at times, but he can always see the color in the city mud. Read "Hampstead Heath":

"Against the green flame of the hawthorn tree,
His scarlet tunic burns;
And livelier than the green sap's mantling glee
The Spring fire tingles through him heavily
As quivering he turns.

And stammers out the old amazing tale
Of youth and April weather;
While she, with half-breathed jests that, sobbing, fail,
Sits, tight-lipped, quaking, eager-eyed and pale
Beneath her purple feather."

There are bits of his shorter poems that strongly recall parts of Henley's "London Voluntaries," and indeed much of Gibson's work recalls that of the older poet. They both know their London; they both possess the power to sketch a picture of drab city life, lit here and there by the blaze of a high light, in a few masterly strokes; they both have an ear attuned to suffering; they both are the poets of all that are desolate and oppressed. But Gibson happily lacks the undercurrent of bitterness which so often boils up above the surface and may ever be detected in Henley. The buoyancy of youth—he was born in 1874—is still his and he seems still able to believe that God's in His Heaven, all's right with the world—even of London.

The "Borderlands" are perhaps not quite so interesting as the shorter pieces, although "Hoops," the last of the three, is unusually fine. It contains, one imagines, much of Gibson's philosophy of life. It is the conversation between the scholarly hunchbacked stable man and the clean-bodied, but ageing clown of a circus. The clown has missed a hoop for the first time, and is dejected, for the sake of his children. To him speaks the hunchbacked stable man:

". . . . . If you hadn't children,
I'd find it in my heart to pity you,
Granted you 'ld let me. I don't understand!
I've seen you stripped. I've seen your children stripped.
You've never seen me naked; but you can guess
The misstitched, gnarled and crooked thing I am.
Now do you understand? I may have words;
But you; man, do you never burn with pride
That you've begotten those six limber bodies?

I've always worshipped the body, all my life—
The body, quick with the perfect health, which is beauty,
Lively, lissome and alert, taking its way
Through the world with the easy gait of the early gods.
The only moments I've lived my life to the full,
And that live again in remembrance, unfaded, are those
When I've seen life compact in some perfect body,
The living God made manifest in man.
. . . . Six strapping sons?
And I have nought but camels."

Even the educated hunchback, bound upon the wheel, feels sheer joie de vivre at times. "Bloodybush Edge" and "The Queen's Crags" are less interesting. The "Borderlands," however, demonstrates Mr. Gibson's ability to write first class blank verse, sonorous, smooth, rhythmic.

I am sorry that space will not permit more extended quotations from this little book. Gibson is not as yet very well known in America, but there is ample reason to believe that he will yet come into his own.

His work—at least, that part of it which has appeared in this country, gives great promise of a brilliant future.

The Silver Bullet Wins

LLOYD GEORGE claims that the most potent factor in this war, and the final one, will be the silver bullet. Other things being equal, the belligerent that can afford to expend the last hundred millions will win the war.

* * *

In our domestic affairs, too, the silver bullet is of supreme importance. Happy the householder who has one in reserve in his bandolier.

* * *

The day must come for every man when he becomes dependent on his reserves. The silver bullet may take many forms—savings bank account, debentures, bonds, real estate or life insurance.

* * *

The most dependable silver bullet of all is an endowment policy in The Mutual Life of Canada. Under this form of contract the family of the assured receives the money if he dies within so many years. If he survives that period the money is payable to himself. Arm yourself with this silver bullet.

NOTES & QUERIES

TAUTOLOGICAL.

Q.—Is this sentence correct: "He was drowned dead before his companions reached him."—W. M.

A.—In the sentence, "He was drowned dead before his companions reached him," the word dead is redundant, as the meaning of the verb drown is "to kill by suffocation through immersion in water or other liquid." One may say, "He was shot dead," because a person may be shot without being killed, but it is tautological to say, "He was drowned dead," because if he was drowned he was certainly dead.

PASTURING CATTLE.

Q.—Is there a law in Ontario referring to the pasturing of cattle on the road and on land that is owned by a person living abroad, but which is not cultivated? It has been fenced but people have taken down fence to allow their cattle to go in.—Enquirer.

A.—We know of no such law.

OPERATING A MINE.

Q.—If the Government of the country require a certain ore and the directors of a company refuse to operate mine, can I, as a large stockholder, operate the mine and sell the ore to cover operating expenses? Could the directors stop me from operating?—A Prospector.

A.—You cannot do anything without taking action against the company.

SCHOOL TAXES.

Q.—Must we pay taxes to the Catholic Board for school purposes in the City of Montreal, we being Protestants?—One Who Would Like to Know.

A.—No.

A VALID LEASE.

Q.—Does a lease on house hold good when property has been sold? Will it be necessary to have lease renewed?—Bunny.

A.—The lease is good.

AN OLD LINE FENCE.

Q.—If an old fence has been the line for over forty years, can my neighbor move it without letting me know?—An Old Subscriber.

A.—No.

RIVER MAY NOT HAVE CURRENTS RIGHTLY CHARTED

Reason Advanced For the Stranding of Steamer Near Cape Dog.

The inquiry into the stranding of the steamer Ramore yesterday, by Capt. Demers, the Dominion Wreck Commissioner, was productive of two suggestions for the benefit of navigators of the St. Lawrence River. The first suggestion was made by C. A. Duclos, K.C., who appeared on behalf of the pilot, Arthur Lachance and who suggested that some representation should be made to the authorities at Ottawa that the signals should be made of sufficient capacity to be of some use to sailors who were coming up the river, as at present they were not heard by those who were trying to navigate up the channel. He pointed out that at present mariners were unable to ascertain whether the signal was an echo from other signals or the foghorn from Cape Salmon.

F. E. Meredith, K.C., who represented the Shipping Federation, said that the need was to make the signal at Cape Salmon more distinctive, and suggested the advisability of having the proper authorities at Ottawa consider whether the foghorn could not be more advantageously situated so that if a ship was hugging the shore too much to the north it would catch the sound.

Mr. Meredith raised another point of great importance to navigators. He said that he was not satisfied that the arrows on the chart of the St. Lawrence correctly indicated the set of the current, and suggested that if the hydrographers of the Government investigated the matter they would find that the arrows should be placed as indicating that the current set to the north rather than down stream.

The evidence given by the pilot was that when he was abeam of Cape Dog he gauged the distance from the shore as a mile and three-quarters, and he set a course south-west a quarter west, which would carry him through all right.

Mr. Meredith argued that the cause of the stranding was that the weather was smoky and foggy and that though the ship apparently kept her compass course from White Island to Cape Dog, when she got abeam of the latter place there was no opportunity to take a full bearing, and therefore, not being able to take that bearing, safe navigation was impossible.

Discussing the point as to responsibility Mr. Meredith argued that the pilot made up his mind Cape Dog was a mile and three-quarters distant, and steered a course southwest by a quarter west, which if he had been correct, would have carried him safely past the next point The pilot ascribed the accident to the fact that the helmsman had not carried out his steering instructions, but the evidence showed that the steersman, who was placed on the ship by the British Admiralty, and who was a naval reserve man, had steered a correct course on the previous reach, and there was no reason to suppose that he had not carried out instructions on the reach from Cape Dog. That he had steered as directed was borne out by the second mate, who said that the helmsman had obeyed the orders given him during the time he was watching the compass.

Mr. Meredith did not think the excuse of the pilot was a fair one, and laid the blame for the position of the ship on the pilot whose calculation as to the distance from shore was absolutely incorrect. As to the responsibility Mr. Meredith said that in local waters where a pilot was employed the master had no right to interfere unless he was satisfied that an improper thing was being done.

Mr. Duclos, who appeared on behalf of the pilot, considered the accident one of an excusable nature. The pilot had only given it as his theory that the steering was bad when asked to explain the cause of the grounding. He was inclined to agree that the cause of the accident was a mistake as to the distance of the ship from Cape Dog, but he maintained that the master was the master of the ship, even with the pilot aboard, and that the real duty of the pilot was only in an advisory capacity. It was not the pilot's duty to take the bearing when off Cape Dog, and he should not be blamed because the master was unable to do so, and the correct position of the ship could not be ascertained. It was not the pilot's fault if careless people were burning up the forests of Canada and covering the lower reaches of the St. Lawrence with smoke. It was not his fault that a proper bearing was not taken, and that all the officers of the ship as well as himself assumed that they were at a safe distance from the land. Taking the distances guaged by all the officers, varying from a mile to a mile and three-quarters, the course they steered was a perfectly safe one. The pilot had a clean record of 28 years, and he hoped the court would not condemn him for something which was beyond his control.

The Wreck Commissioner stated that judgment would be given next Friday.

ORMSTOWN GIVES TWO MACHINE GUNS

A letter of acknowledgment and thanks has been received from the Acting Minister Senator Lougheed, by N. H. OFFICIAL SOLD HORSE TO GOVT. HE HAD PASSED

Strange Doings Revealed in War Contracts Investigation

HALIFAX, N.S., August 28. — Doctor Gough, the official veterinary surgeon for remounts secured in this district last September, sold a three and a half-year-old horse to the Government buyer and passed it himself, it was learned from his brother, John Gough, during yesterday afternoon's session of the Davidson War Contracts Commission.

This colt fetched $170. It was thoroughly broken, John Gough contended, though sometimes driven on a curb. The animal was never brought to the place where the military sales were taking place, so far as he knew.

Answering the commission counsel, John Thompson, Gough denied that he still possessed the horse, or that it was still in the country. It was shipped to Valcartier with the other remounts.

In reply to questions as to where Doctor Gough was now the witness stated that he was assisting in the purchase of British remounts in West Virginia. He heard from him last week, and the doctor then said he expected to be there for two years.

NAMES ARE DEMANDED.

A. De Witt Foster, ex-M.P., dealing with the sale of the Gough colt, said that after leaving the exhibition grounds, where the remounts were bought, they visited the veterinary's stable. He there saw a horse he was told was five years old. He made out a cheque for Gough for $170 at the request of Remount Buyer Woodworth.

A specific request for information about bad remount horses or crookedness was made by Mr. Thompson. He had been querying a witness, Harry Grant of this city, as to whether he stated that "this horse business ought to be cleaned up." Grant would not swear that he made such a statement, and upon Mr. Thompson stating that he could produce a witness on this point, he said that he might have so spoken in the course of a conversation on politics.

Mr. Thompson, with some heat, then remarked: "You can take until Monday morning to think it over; in the meantime, if you know the names of any persons who sold horses or who sold bad horses or of any crookedness, give me the names. Don't go around after we are gone saying this thing requires cleaning up. Give the information to me and I will clean it up."

James Connors, Halifax, swore that Gough would not buy from him. He turned down two of his horses because he said one was too old and the other was too young. Another horse was sold for Connors by Thomas Killen for $165. He thought it as good as the two refused, though it was larger.

He believed Gough's reason for turning down his animals was political. The horse might have been the reason. The beast Killen sold was not a good backer, because it was tender in the mouth.

James Loy, Halifax, estimated the worth of his horse at $65, which he owned it. George Harvey said that the tender horse, for which the remount buyers paid $160, cost $50 at an auction. It was a kicker.

The John Washington horse sold by Killen for $150 was bought at a sale for $41 two months before, according to Mr. Washington. The latter got from Killen $100. It was fifteen years old.

Fred Fader, Halifax, said he sold five horses for different people. He got no commission on any of them.

When Mr. Thompson suggested that he was given the work of selling the animals because he was friendly with Gough, witness said that might be so. He gave nothing to the veterinary. The horses, prices and ages were: Chestnut, $150, ten or eleven; bay, $150, eleven; dark bay, $150, ten; black, $140, twelve.

IS CITY BOUND TO BUY BLOCKS OF CERTAIN SIZE?

Argument Proceeding in Injunction Proceedings —City Replies

After a short hearing yesterday afternoon before Mr. Justice Weir, the injunction proceedings taken against the city by Webster & Sons, Limited, to prevent the granting of a contract for 1,464,930 paving blocks to the Stinson-Reeb Builders' Supply Company, Limited, were postponed for further hearing today. Gonzalve Desaulniers, K.C., acting for the Webster Company, claimed that in April last the Board of Control called for tenders for a block 9 by 3 1-2 by 4 inches, and had finally accepted one that was only 8 by 3 by 3 3-4 inches, and did not come up to other specifications imposed by the board. The Metropolitan block, offered by the company he represented, had been the one recomended by assistant city engineer Paul Mercier, and had been declared the most satisfactory by experts. The Stinson-Reeb Company's Bessemer block, on the other hand, had proved to be less durable, according to tests made, and was not even the right size. On these grounds Mr. Desaulniers asked for a temporary restraining order, pending the hearing of the case on its merits, and also asked that the mayor be forbidden to sign the contract.

City Attorney Laurendeau replied that the last part of the application was too late, for the contract had been signed tha morning.

The question, continued Mr. Laurendeau, seemed to be one of good or bad administration at the city hall, a matter not within the jurisdiction of the court, since there were no charges of graft or dishonesty of any sort. The Bessemer block had been purchased because in the opinion of the Board of Control and its experts it was the better, and because it cost only $41 a thousand as compared to the price of $44 a thousand for the Metropolitan. As far as the size of the block was concerned, Mr. Laurendeau said, it was impossible for the board to issue exact specifications.

"The fact that the size of the block was changed from the specifications might indicate fraud, if the board advertised for blocks of a certain size and then took those of another size," was the comment of Mr. Justice Weir.

"The question was purely one of administration," concluded Mr. Laurendeau.

Mr. Desaulniers in reply denied this. Should the city want to buy horses, it would buy them, not something else. It had advertised that it wanted to buy something, and had ended by buying something different.

"I can prove by witnesses," said Mr. Desaulniers, "that certain officers of the city of Montreal said months ago that the Bessemer block would be accepted."

"The Board of Control is not obliged to accept blocks of a certain size," was Mr. Laurendeau's reply. "The duty of the board is to accept what they think best in the best interests of the city."

Mr. Jusice Weir then remarked that he must be given time to read the record, and the question of adjournment was discussed. Mr. Laurendeau said that he would be unable to guarantee that the blocks would not be ordered if the case was adjourned until Monday. The case was therefore postponed until today.

RAISED $300 FOR HOSPITAL BEDS

A very enjoyable and successful Patriotic Garden Party was recently held by the ladies of Orford Lake, Que., on the grounds of the residence of G. H. Wilson, as a result of which a sum of over $300 was raised to be sent to Overseas Hospitals to purchase beds for wounded Canadian soldiers in hospitals near the front.

PROVED ALIBI

Six witnesses testified at the fire enquiry yesterday that Max Rudnicoff was attending a function in Auditorium Hall when fire broke out in his premises, 2531 Papineau avenue, on August 23. At the investigation two days ago, a witness stated he saw Rudnicoff in the store, while he was on his way home from a card party.

It was decided to get an official interpreter from the Court House, and the investigation was adjourned until next week.

CHINA TO BUY LARGE NUMBER OF SUBMARINES

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—The Chinese Government has sent to this country a commission of expert naval men to study the construction of submarine boats with the intention of making extensive purchases for the Chinese navy.

It was learned yesterday than an Admiral and thirty other officers, some of them engineers trained in submarine-boat construction, had taken a cottage near New London, Conn., and were spending their time at the Submarine Boat Company's work there or at the Fore River Shipyards.

No contract has as yet been closed, but negotiations have been entered into with the Submarine Boat Company, which was, until lately, the Electric Boat Company, fixing upon about 100 submarines as the probable amount of the order, of a total cost in the neighborhood of $75,000,000.

In banking quarters it was said that a cable to Peking a few days ago had advised the purchase of at least one hundred submarines. The visitors were able to inspect several boats in a practically finished condition. These undersea fighters are in process of construction for the British navy and will be delivered after the war is over.

News Travels Fast

An event happens to-day on the other side of the world and to-morrow the farmer, miles from press or telegraph, knows almost as much about it as does the man on the spot. When the Canada Life was young the newspaper came with the chance wayfarer, and its news was often months old.

The quick action of modern news gathering is gratifying to the man desiring to keep in touch with the world events—but the quick action of a great modern insurance company like the Canada Life in coming forward at a moment of dire distress with the assurance of comfort to the beneficiaries is more than gratifying—it is vitally important.

The highest function of life insurance is the permanent continuance of one's income throughout old age or to his dependents. That function is fulfilled to the greatest possible extent by a Guaranteed Monthly Income policy issued by the

BRITISH ENTHUSIASM RESUMED--QUICK RALLIES IN PRICES

Wildly Excited Price Movements Featured Wall St. This Week

Special to The Montreal Star.

NEW YORK, August 28.—The week in the securities markets was memorable for widely excited movements of prices with successive individual gains of two to fifteen points a day in various issues. Many new high records were established as a result of four days of advance following the three days of decline started by the news of the sinking of the Arabic.

Two developments were sensational, but only one of these was reflected in the markets: that was the sudden and almost generally unexpected change in the attitude of the German Government toward the United States which it is understood came only in time to head off measures of the utmost gravity on the part of the American Government. The acuteness of the situation appears to have been finally appreciated by Berlin.

The result naturally was a relaxation of nervous tension and a recurrence of bullish movements which gave the market a runaway appearance. As far back as a month ago expert analysis showed that at that time the advances in prices in the war stocks, real and supposed, and the issues associated with them extended to as much as 281 points in Bethlehem Steel, 120 points in General Chemical, 139 in General Motors, and from 112 to 550 points in the inactive ordnance shares, compared with the level at the same time a year ago. This reference is made to make one appreciate the full effect of the bullish movement, as there have been gains in the last few weeks of from 10 to 50 points or more additional.

Toward the end irregularity developed in the war issues, reducing the amount of net gains and the railroad issues, after advancing one to four points, became stationary.

The sensation of the midweek occurred in the copper shares, which gave evidence of the appearance of commanding interests in the market for the metal, and, following an advance in the London price of the red metal on Thursday, equivalent to about $20 a ton, active buying forced Anaconda, Utah Copper, American Smelting and Refining, Inspiration Copper, Tennessee Copper and others of this group from two to ten points higher. Some of the most powerful operators in the copper properties who are associated with large financial interests are believed to be at last actively at work after a period of repression of speculation, both in the metal and in the respective shares.

The strength of the market is attributed not only to the relaxation of tension regarding the Arabic episode, but to the phenomenally strong international trade position of the country, our huge crops and enormous surplus reserves of money, in addition to the elasticity of currency assured by the potential power of the Federal reserve system. All of these considerations are influencing a highly wrought-up speculative public. At every reaction there are floods of buying orders waiting under the market and a favorable impression has been created specifically by the leadership of the regular list by United States Steel, on rapidly succeeding favorable reports of trade conditions and prospects.

Montreal is Able to Meet All Obligations

Controller Hebert today issued an official statement respecting the city's finances. Though the revenues may have diminished in the present crisis, the city's credit is as good as it ever was and it will, as a matter of course, meet all its obligations as they fall due. The only problem is how to do this without increasing the tax rate.

Mr. Hebert's statement follows: "I regret that, in discussing the financial position of the city of Montreal, mention has been made of the need of a 'receiver,' in other words, of a liquidator.

"Nothing, absolutely nothing, justifies such an expression, especially when it is generally known by those familiar with the civic administration that the city is distributing $250,000 weekly in public works.

"It is true that the revenue of the city has diminished, as in all other cities of Canada, following the financial crisis, but the credit of the city of Montreal has not been impaired.

"As at the opening of the war, we have been able to mage loans at reasonable rates; similarly we have assurances that we shall be able to find the amounts necessary for the commpletion of the budget of 1916. For several days I have been in consultation with the mayor and the finance department, and I can say that from now on nothing exists which should cause any apprehension whatsoever in connection with next year's budget.

"The pessimists then will see that Montreal is continuing to uphold its financial status."

So far as can be ascertained the sole trouble has arisen out of the use of the word "receiver" when the business men of the city who are studying the finaancial question are concerned with the appointment of a commissioner who will administer Montreal's finances during the period of crisis

Press Opinions on N.Y. Situation

Special to The Montreal Star.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—The Sun:—There was the same heavy profit taking yesterday from speculators and groups of speculators who have made large profits on the recent break, and opposing this influence there was a continued broadening out of the public interest in stocks.

Journal of Commerce—The market for securities continued to display a firm undertone. It was, however, devoid of sensational features. The prevailing inclination in financial circles was to regard the crisis in the German situation as having been safely negotiated.

The Tribune—Commission houses were active in trading, and a large business was received from out of town. Dealings were better distributed, with sensational rises few and the movement less erratic.

The Herald—There appears to be a group of speculators persistently making "short sales" of exchange on the theory that bills against our continued enormous excess of exports must cause further depression. In view of the continued sales of securities here for foreign account and the coming of British and French commissioners to arrange a credit adequate for collection of the exchanges the bears are liable one of these days to be caught "short of the market."

The Times—All of yesterday's improvement in the list as a whole was due to the advances in the industrials. The general level of railroad stocks was lower at the close than on Thursday.

The World—The market completely ignored the international credit situation, which bankers believe has serious potentialities unless corrective measures are speedily applied. Traders had their eyes exclusively on Washington, and the announcement that Bernstorff has assured Lansing Germany would make full reparation if it finds the Arabic was torpedoed without warning, gave fresh impulse to speculative enthusiasm.

The American—Notwithstanding the heavy volume of stocks supplied on all bulges, the market displayed a strong tone, closing with gains averaging a point in the standard issues and two to three points in the specialties. Copper shares were strong throughout.

ONTARIO

TENDERS FOR PULPWOOD LIMIT.

TENDERS will be received by the undersigned up to and including Wednesday, the fifteenth day of September, 1915, for the right to cut pulpwood on a certain area situated north of the Transcontinental Railway, west of Lac Seul and south of English River in the District of Kenora.

Tenderers shall state the amount they are prepared to pay as bonus in addition to the Crown dues of 40c per cord for spruce and 20c per cord for other pulpwoods, or such other rates as may from time to time be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, for the right to operate a pulp mill and a paper mill on or near the area referred to.

Such tenderers shall be required to erect a mill or mills on or near the territory, and to manufacture the wood into paper in the Province of Ontario—the paper mill to be erected within such time and in such place as the Lieutenant-Governor in Council shall direct.

Parties making tender will be required to deposit with their endert a marked cheque payable to the Honorable the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, for ten per cent of the amount of their tender, to be forfeited in the event of their not entering into an agreement to carry out the conditions, etc.

The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

For particulars as to description of territory, capital to be invested, etc., apply to the undersigned.

N.B.—No unauthorized publication of this notice will be paid for.

COUNTRY CHEESE BOARDS

Special to The Montreal Star.

CORNWALL, Ont., August 28.—The offerings on the Cornwall Cheese Board yesterday were 1,847 colored. The price opened at 12¾c, but soon advanced to 13 3-16c, at which figure it remained for considerably over an hour before the sellers all gave way to it. P. N. Tait, buyer for A. J. Brice, appeared at the board for the first time this year. G. L. McLean, who represents G. Hodge & Co., did not appear yesterday, but the other buyers—Edwards, McLeod, Weiland, Welsh and Weeger—were in line. A year ago 1,538 colored sold at 13 9-16c.

PERTH, Ont., Aug. 28. — There were 400 boxes of white and 700 colored cheese on the board here yesterday. Prices were 12 13-16c and 12 15-16c.

PICTON, Ont., Aug. 28. — At the cheese board meeting yesterday nineteen factories boarded 1,352 boxes, all colored. All sold at 13⅛c.

IROQUOIS, Ont., Aug. 28.—At the regular meeting of the cheese board yesterday 575 boxes of colored and 40 boxes of white were boarded; 355 boxes sold at 13⅛c. Balance sold on the curb at the same price. On the corresponding date last year 443 boxes were boarded; price, 14 9-16c.

NAPANEE, Ont., Aug. 28. — There were 442 boxes of white and 1,095 colored cheese offered. All sold at 13⅛c.

MR. TAYLOR WILL RETIRE

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., August 28.—J. Frater Taylor, director and vice-president of the Lake Superior Corporation, does not intend to seek re-election to the board at the board meeting in October.

BRIDGE LED EARLY RISE, TONE STRONG

The tone of the local market continued firm around the opening Steel issues being the most active.

Bridge rose a point to 142, the best in some weeks, and Steel of Canada preferred attracted buyers on the possibility of a near resumption of the dividend.

It opened a point up at 84 1-2 and went to 85. Later it receded a fraction. Earlier in the month it had a similar movement touching 85.

Steel common was 35 to 34 3-4 against 34 1-2 at the close yesterday. Scotia was 84 1-4, and Iron 44, both small fractions easier. Laurentide was strong at 163 and Ames, 15 3-4.

IMPORTED GOOD FIRMER GROCERY TRADE ACTIVE

Bradstreet's Montreal weekly trade report says: There has not been much change in our wholesale districts during the past week. In the dry goods trade, prices are very unsettled, most of the imported goods show advance in prices, especially on woollen goods, tweeds, carpets, etc. The trade here do not look for much if any change in the price of cotton goods, on account of it being declared contraband of war.

The wholesale grocery trade advise us there has been more activity in refined sugars. The supply of molasses is light and prices rule high. Canned goods are in better demand. There has also been a better inquiry for teas. In the provision market, there has been a good demand for smoked meats, both from the local and country trade, and with a good export inquiry stocks are well cleaned up. There is a good demand for Canadian butter from England, but owing to the scarcity of ocean freight space, the shipments are confined to very limited quantities. There has been more activity in the export of cheese trade. Bids were about 1s per cent higher than a week ago. There was considerable business done in eggs this week, with the English market, for fall shipment. Prices were more in line with the views of our exporters. The flour market is quiet both for local and export trade.

The weather has been too wet this week for farmers to gather in their crops, but we understand that they succeeded in harvesting about 80 per cent before the late wet spell came on. The reports from the fruit growing districts report a big crop and prices are expected to rule low. The retail trade has been fair, the large number of visitors in the city helping to increase the sales.

Remittances continue good. City collections are, however, a little slow.

ADVANCE IN LEAD

American Smelting and Refining Company advanced price of lead from 4.60 cents to 4.70 cents.

SPECIAL NOTICE CONCERNING PASSPORTS.

The attention of intending applicants is directed to the fact that the regulations governing the issue of Passports are on the eve of amendment in the direction of increased stringency, and that it will no longer be possible to receive a passport while one waits, or by return of post.

Every application must be accompanied by two unmounted photographs of each person to be mentioned in the passport, one photograph to be certified by the person vouching for the applicant as being the latter's photograph.

Passports cannot be issued to persons already abroad. Such persons should apply to the nearest British Mission or Consulate.

Passports cannot be sent by mail to persons abroad, and in this category are included residents of Canada taking steamer at New York or any other port beyond the bounds of the Dominion.

STERLING VERSUS DOLLARS

Special to The Montreal Star.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28. — A special to the Journal of Commerce from London says: Our markets here are encouraged by the strength in New York. New York advances, however, especially in view of the bonus contained in the demoralization in American exchange, is likely to still further stimulate sales by London of American securities.

With sterling at a discount of between 4 and 5 per cent in New York, dollar prices naturally appear attractive. Holders are not unlikely to consider what they paid for their securities in sterling and turn to judge the proceeds of their sales in the sterling equivalent of the dollar.

ANOTHER SIDE TO STORY ABOUT BANK CREDITS

As an evidence of how business men in Canada feel about the manner in which the banks have treated them during a trying period, the president of a leading Canadian bank stated to The Star today that their management had received scores of letters within the past few months from prominent manufacturers, as well as other classes of business men, thanking them for the advice they had received and acted on as regards financial proposals.

This advice, the president stated, was to go slow in the creation of business commitments at such a time, owing to the uncertainties created by war conditions and the necessity of keeping both their own and their clients' positions strong

The advice of the bank was not taken in all cases, said the president, and many influential clients exercised their credit according to their own ideas. From many of these they had received letters expressing regret that they had not followed the bank's advice and expressing the wish that the bank had insisted on their attitude.

Assertions have been made of late to the effect that business was seriously hampered by the refusal of the banks to make advances to manufacturers, resulting in some cases, so it was stated, in the closing of factories. There is always two sides to a story and the banks seldom take public notice of complaints of that character.

Arabic Incident Did Not Continue Long As Factor in Market

The market has been agreeably surprised by the rapidity with which the sinking of the Arabic and the anticipated political complications have been discarded as a factor in the creation of values.

A considerable period of tension and unsettlement for sentiment was expected with the likelihood of no important advances, notwithstanding the strong bullish undercurrent which pervades the market.

The fountain source of bullish enthusiasm is, of course, in Wall Street, and the tendency which was indicated this week to take a renewed interest in Canadian war specialties gave a boost to local speculation.

Prices of most favorites have risen as high as, or very close to, former high levels created on the crest of preceding bullish waves of enthusiasm. The volume of trading has not been quite so heavy as it was on preceding occasions of that kind, but the spirit of confidence is undiminished and even such a shock as the torpedoing of the Arabic and the consequences expected to follow in its trail created but a momentary recession in prices.

One of the chief difficulties of the situation is that very few people know much about what the war specialty companies are doing in a financial way in whose shares the most active trading is going on. In a vague sort of way it is known that they are doing a splendid business, in fact some of them are working day and night, but there has been a striking lack of publicity, which, of course, the companies concerned justify on various grounds.

Dominion Iron, Steel of Canada, Nova Scotia Steel and Dominion Bridge have continued, as for a good while past, the most striking features of the trading, and efforts to broaden the list to other deserving stocks have not as yet met with striking success, probably because the greatest expectations are based on the earnings which are being derived from the war orders.

From a speculative standpoint the time seems ripe to trade in other stocks which, in the light of crop prospects, now on the verge of realization, ought to be worthy of attention.

The general business situation, while it has not undergone any striking change, continues to give hopes for further improvement, more particularly as it is felt that the moment is at hand when it can be said that Canada has safely harvested a splendid crop which will be of incalculable benefit in setting to rights the financial position of the western farmer and all that it implies to the general business of the Dominion.

The adverse exchange problem continues a factor in the situation here as well as in New York, but it is felt that steps must be taken before the heavy crop movement begins to set exchange on such an equilibrium that it will not interfere with the free movement of foodstuffs across the Atlantic. Conferences are expected to begin in New York very shortly with that object in view.

Good Tone in London, No Minimum Reduction

LONDON, August 28. — Money and discount rates were inclined to ease off today, owing to the superfluity of funds.

The stock market displayed a good tone, though the dullness in gilt edged securities was accentuated by the understanding that the committee has shelved for the time being the question of a reduction in minimum prices. Argentine rails were strong, while the shortage of stocks in the American section raised values when buyers appeared.

USE OF NARCOTICS IS RESTRICTED BY LAW IN OHIO

New Legislation Has Worked Well and Reduced Evils of the Traffic

CINCINNATI, August 27.—Less than six months ago the Government commenced the enforcement of the law regulating the handling of narcotics by druggists, physicians, dentists, vterinarians and hospital authorities. The agents placed in position to enforce the law, to investigate and arrest under it, were entirely new to its various features. Neither was it understood by those toward whom it was directed, although it had been under discussion in one form or another during six years of Congress. For a short time operations looking toward enforcement were necessarily rather tentative than actual and complete.

Of later months, however, there has been considerable progress in application of the measure to the actual restriction of the sale of the narcotics, to the end that habit-forming shall be reduced as much as possible and that those who have the habit more or less confirmed shall not continue in it.

MORPHIA VICTIMS PROTECTED.

Most of the cases brought to the bar have involved morphia; there has not yet been so much opportunity to comb the underworld in search of the cocaine traders. The use of morphia affects a more valuable portion of the community than that of cocaine. In enforcement of the law as to morphia there has been much intelligent investigation and most encouraging progress in results in Ohio, and particularly in the Cincinnati district. From merely first groping after the best methods of the business of detection and then prevention and punishment, by fine and imprisonment, some agents have become quite expert in their operations against offenders.

Enough is known now of the law and how to enforce it to indicate that it is one of the best laws ever framed. It will surely be of great benefit to the country in reducing the percentage of drug victims in the population. It would seem that about as many physicians as druggists have been detected in the illicit trade, possibly more of the former than the latter. It has developed that in many instances those who would continue to violate the law but for rigid enforcement are themselves addicted to the drug habit. This is more the case with physicians than with others. In more than one instance managers of places advertising cure of the morphine habit have been found to be habitual users of that drug.

A SOUND AND GOOD LAW.

Another fact that has come out that is interesting, that in "dry" towns there has not been that increase of this habit that had been predicted by many; that the dryer the town the freer it is from "fiends."

Observation of several victims in confinement has gone far to upset the theory that the use cannot be abruptly terminated without very serious results. One of these, for an instance in several cases, while at first suffering great nervous agony under deprivation, was in four days so relieved and changed as to acquire a strong appetite for substantial food instead of a craving for the "soothing" drug.

The law is sound and good, and in the opinion of the Enquirer will in course of time work for most beneficial results.

THE VALUE OF ONIONS.

The writer of an article published thirty years ago on onions as a prophylactic against cholera, says: "An old officer who served during the whole of the campaign in the Peninsula under the Duke of Wellington, told me that the British Army never was so healthy as at that period from eating large quantities of onions and garlic. The medicinal virtues of the onion were pointed out in the seventeenth century by Nicholas Culpeper. 'It hath been held by divers country people,' he wrote, a great preservative against infection to eat onions fasting, with bread and salt."

SIR EDWARD GREY STROVE FOR PEACE UNTIL VERY LAST

Rt. Hon. C. G. Masterman Lets in Light on Cabinet Secrets

The Rt. Hon. Charles Masterman gives some interesting glimpses in the Chronicle of those fateful Cabinet Councils at which he was present which finally declared war on August 4, 1914, against Germany. He discloses no secrets, but he does give a vivid impression of the ceaseless zeal with which Sir Edward Grey tried to maintain peace. The article is interesting to read after the German Emperor's declaration that "I did not will the war."

"Just a year ago , on Tuesday, August 4," says Mr. Masterman, "those men who were entrusted with the awful responsibility of the government of the British Empire assembled to ratify a demand which they knew must mean a declaration of war. It was a company of tired men, who for twelve hot summer nights, without rest or relaxation, had devoted all their energies to avert this thing which now had come inevitably to pass.

"No one who has been through the experience of those twelve days will ever be quite the same again. It is difficult to find a right simile for that experience. It was like a company of observers watching a little cloud in the East, appearing out of a blue sky, seeing it grow day by day until all the brightness had vanished and the sun itself had become obscured. It was like the victim of the old mediaeval torture enclosed in a chamber in which the walls, moved by some unseen mechanism, steadily closed on him day by day, until at the end he was crushed to death.

"I remember coming out from conferences, in which, within, we all realized that the end had come, to find under the hot August sunlight great crowds of silent men and women crowding Whitehall and all the way from Downing Street to Parliament; just waiting, hour after hour, in a kind of awe and expectation, to know whether the world in which they had lived and moved all their lives had ceased to exist. Iwonder how many of those today have gone out into regions where even the raging of nation against nation must count as a very little thing.

ALL WANTED PEACE.

"It will be twenty years or thirty—it may be a century—before the history of the Cabinet meetings held during those twelve days can be disclosed. But it is breaking no Cabinet secret to assert today, on the anniversary of the final apparent failure, that all the thought and passionate effort in the mind of every member of that body was the preservation of the European peace. Europe had suddenly became paralysed, like the caterpillar which is suddenly stung by the fly which desires a habitation for its children.

"The Chancelleries of Europe—as we can read in the official papers—seem simultaneously to have thrown up the sponge and simply waited for the inevitable collapse. Only Sir Edward Grey refused, without some struggle, to accept so desperate a conclusion. Every day, almost every hour, he showered proposals amongst the Ambassadors. He endeavored to mobilize the forces which still made for peace. He pleaded for time. He pleaded for a Conference of disinterested Powers. He pleaded for any alternative proposition: when refused one he proffered another. He was willing to perform almost any act, to violate even the stiff diplomatic conventions, to drop the 'formulas' of conventional communication, in order to get back to the world of reality—so long as Europe might be saved.

THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR WAR.

"He failed; but it was no inglorious failure: and the efforts remain recorded today and will be approved tomorrow with an intensity increasing with the realization of how rightly the British Cabinet apprehended the magnitude of the destruction into which, with a kind of light-heartedness and (it must be confessed) with a kind of insolence, the Germanic Powers were hurrying the civilization of the West.

"God alone can fix the ultimate responsibility of a war which, even if it were concluded today, would demand a generation for recovery; and the end is not yet. But one can surely prophecy that those who so lightly brushed aside a year ago the British Foreign Secretary's requests, even for a few hours' delay, must now, after a year of it, feel some sentiments of self-reproach and misery; that if only the inexorable course of time could be put back a year their decisions would certainly be otherwise."

HOW THE SEEDS TRAVEL.

Some seeds make journeys with wings, and others travel from place to place by attaching themselves to the clothes of men or the hair of animals; still others are transported by birds. The seeds of the maple tree are particularly interesting. They are provided with wings, and when they become detached from the parent tree a gentle breeze will carry them a considerable distance from the branch to which they were attached. There are many forms and modifications of the winged seed, as the linden, the hornbeam, the elm and the pine. These are all common trees. Some seeds are also provided with parachutes or umbrellas, not for protection from rain and storm, but for purposes of locomotion. The seeds of the thistle, the milkweed and the dandelion—in fact, the seeds of all plants which have a cottony growth—are provided with hooked appendages by which they can attach themselves to the clothing of men or the hair of animals, and so are carried from place to place.—St. Nicholas.

The Mayor of Xenia, Ohio, prohibited roller-skating in the streets. Councilman and the secretary of the Business Men's Club resolved to give the order a practical test. They did so, were arrested, found there was no ordinance behind the mayor, and were released at once. The word spread so rapidly that in less than 15 minutes the streets of the place were packed with skaters busily proving that theirs was the land of liberty.

Baby Thriving Mother Happy

EVERY mother and nurse is anxious about baby's health during the hot weather. The dread of colic is ever present, and the awful infantile mortality in summer cannot be forgotten.

Baby can only thrive during the summer if his food—being proof against contamination—is absolutely pure, is suited to his age and powers, and is wholly digestible and nourishing.

Remember—that as baby's digestive capabilities increase the "Allenburys" Foods Nos. 1, 2 & 3—the only progressive dietary for infants—provide all the essential elements in right proportions to ensure healthy growth and development.

The Milk Foods Nos. 1 & 2 need only boiling water to be added to make them ready for use; trouble is thereby saved and harmful germs avoided. The No. 3 Food is a specially prepared Malted Food that is easily digested and exceptionally nutritious for children over 6 months of age who have been weaned.

Doctors, Nurses and Parents throughout the world use and recommend these nourishing Foods.

This map, which will prove valuable as a reference map for future use, shows the approximately exact position of the Russian battle-line, with the exception that the line has been withdrawn further east at Grodno.

It will be noted that the new line possesses the double merit of being minus any dangerous salients, and of being based upon a strong network of strategic railways. The inset map shows, in shaded form, the extreme limit of Russian invasion of German and Austrian territory earlier in the war.

No. 1.—Machine gun practice in sighting and firing. Note the prone position of members of the gun crews not at the weapons.

No. 2.—Recruits of the 60th Battalion learning the manual of arms.

No. 3.—This depicts a later stage in the development of the soldier. Here is shown the men receiving instruction in sighting, from diagram and practical demonstration.

No. 4.—Learning alignment of sights. By means of the tripod mechanism, any tendency to tip the rifle is made noticeable.

No. 5.—Sub-target machine. This shows the instructor at a glance how nearly true a man's shots strike.

No. 6.—Sub-calibre practice. This and diagram 6a illustrate the method by which recruits are taught to handle the rifle before the actual use of cartridges. The iron frame containing the two targets as illustrated in diagram 6a is placed about eight inches from the muzzle of the soldier's rifle as he lies prone. The soldier aims at the upper target and fires. Thereupon a rod discharged from the rifle indicates on the lower target just how expert the man has become.

No. 7.—Soldiers at the ranges firing at No. 1 target.

No. 8.—Lieut. McDonald, of D Company, showing a novice how to set his sights at his first practice.

No. 9.—This time Lieut. McDonald is showing recruit the proper way to slip the clip of cartridges into the chamber of his rifle.

No. 10.—Well done ! The first target after the men got through with the first practice on the ranges.

No. 11.—The new kind of target used. The lower part is painted brown to represent the earth; the upper part green, to represent background. In the centre is a blotch of khaki to represent a man's head.

No. 12.—A target for snap shooting. A khaki figure representing a man in the firing position comes above the ground for five seconds and then disappears.

No. 13.—Captain J. R. Brennan, chief instructor, getting the result of the range practice by telephone.

No. 14. —After the storm of fire comes the charge. A squad at bayonet drill dashing from its trench to the assault.

No. 15.—The enemy meets cold steel. The detachment having run about forty yards, attacks with its bayonets dummies swung from a wooden frame by ropes. The dummies are bags filled with sawdust.

No. 16.—A hot moment. Realistic practice in bayonet attack and defence of a trench.

LITTLE STORIES for Bedtime

By T. W. Burgess

AT LAST THE VOICE OF STICKY-TOES IS HEARD.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

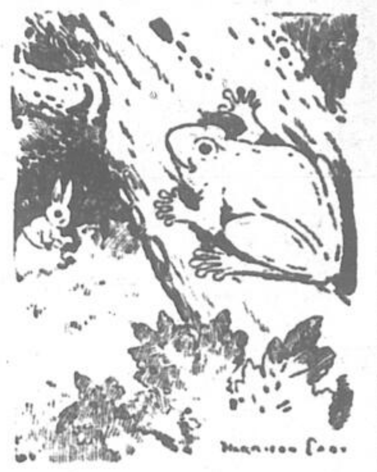
(Copyright, 1915, by J. G. Lloyd.)

A cheerful sound it is, my dear,
A voice you've waited long to hear.

It was so long since it had rained on the Green Meadows and the Green Forest, the Old Pasture, and the Old Orchard, that the little people who live there had begun to think that it never would rain again. They had given up looking for Sticky-Toes the Tree Toad in order to try to make him call rain or to do dreadful things to him if he refused. They had hunted all through the Green Forest at least through that part of it where they thought Sticky-Toes was likely to be, and through the Old Orchard, without finding him. Then because it was so dreadfully hot they gave up.

Now Sticky-Toes wanted rain quite as much as any one else. Perhaps he wanted it a little more than most of the others, for he is never so happy and comfortable as when there is dampness in the air. You see he has a skin which is very sensitive to dampness and heat. The first makes him comfortable and the other very uncomfortable. He can always feel the least tiny bit of dampness in the air and that is how he knows before his neighbors do when it is going to rain. Of course that makes him happy and cheerful and he begins to sing "It's going to rain! It's going to rain." That is why a lot of people have got it into their heads that he actually calls the rain.

Now, sooner or later all bad things come to an end. Sticky-Toes knew this, and each day he hoped would end the terrible heat that was drying up everything. At last one afternoon he felt something in the air. He couldn't have told you for the life of him just what that feeling was like. It was just a feeling, a feeling all over, that was all. But he knew what it meant. It meant that rain was coming before long. It made him glad, so glad that he opened his mouth to cry the news that all might hear and rejoice. Then he closed it again without making a sound. He looked up at the blue blue sky. Jolly Mr. Sun was smiling as broadly as ever and nowhere could Sticky-Toes see a cloud. He looked over in the next tree, and there sat Welcome Robin with wings drooping and looking very, very miserable. He looked down at Johnny Chuck's house and there on their doorstep lay Johnny and Polly Chuck panting for breath and looking very very uncomfortable.



"They'll feel better if they know that it's going to rain soon."

Once more Sticky-Toes looked anxiously at the sky. "If I cry that it is going to rain and it doesn't everybody will know just where I am, and they will be so angry that there is no knowing what will happen to me," thought he. "I believe I'll wait a little.

So he waited a little longer and all the time that glad feeling that rain was really coming kept growing. He saw Peter Rabbit come up and throw himself on the ground near Johnny and Polly Chuck, and Peter was panting as if every breath was hard work.

"They'll feel better if they know that it is going to rain soon," thought Sticky-Toes. "I—I'd like to make them feel better. Perhaps they won't believe me, but I guess I'll risk it." Once more he looked up at the sky and it seemed to him that jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun smiled broader than ever. Then he opened his mouth and began to cry:

It's going to rain! It's going to rain!
Although the day is bright and fair.
It's gong to rain! It's gong to rain!
For I can feel it in the air!

ECONOMY CORNER

MILK PUDDINGS AND MOULDS.

When making moulds remember that the starchy foods they contain must be thoroughly well cooked. Some people think that as soon as the cornflour thickens it is done, but this is not the case—it must be cooked for at least five minutes more after the thickening.

The grains that go into milk puddings must always be well washed first. as they are fairly sure to be dusty.

A baked milk pudding must be done very slowly in quite a gradual oven.

If your milk is poor put in a little chopped suet or butter in order to improve it. Skim milk with half an ounce of suet added makes quite a nice rich pudding.

IRONING AND CLEANING TABLE

In clearing off the table it will save time if a couple of large fruit baskets are used. Pick up glasses and silver first and put in baskets, then cups and saucers, and lastly plates, etc.

In ironing a large white tablecloth cover large table with several sheets and spread table cloth over these right out flat and iron centre first. If the sides become dry dampen again with cleanwhite cloth.

STEAMED BREAD PUDDING.

Grease a basin, and decorate it by sticking sultanas and cherries cut in half to the greased sides. Cut four ounces of white bread into small cubes. Pour half a pint of milk on the bread, and let the whole soak for a quarter of an hour. Then take the bits of bread out, and put them into the basin. Beat up two eggs with the milk that remains, flavor the mixture with the grated rind of half a lemon, and pour it over the bread. Cover it all over with greased paper. and steam it for one hour. Let this pudding stand for five minutes after leaving the pan before you try to turn it out of the basin.

WHY? Because it is very light, and will very likely fall to pieces. But if you let it stand a little it will steam away from the sides.

DID YOU KNOW?

Did you know that you can use the water you boiled the plain rice in for starching white things?

Or that, if your oven will not brown your pastry as well as you would like it to, you can remedy matters by placing the cakes or tarts on the upper tray, and throwing a little sugar on to the floor of the oven?

Or that mustard is best when mixed with a pinch of salt in water that has boiled and been allowed to cool?

Or that you can save your hands from getting stained if you will let your potatoes soak in cold water with a little soda in it for a few moments before you start scraping them?

Or that your blancmange will gain in both flavor and appearance if you make it with an ounce of butter as well as milk?

Or that when boiling cauliflowers, seakale and other white vegetables you should add two lumps of sugar? This keeps them a nice color.

Or that when making horse radish sauce, it should be mixed with some condensed milk? This, with the necessary addition of vinegar, makes an excellent blend.

Did you?

A NEW AND GRACEFUL SKIRT

A Sectional Model That is Simple and Adapted to Many Materials

By MAY MANTON

8762 SECTIONAL SKIRT, 24 TO 32 WAIST

Sectional skirts make an important feature of the latest fashions. This one consists of three straight pieces, each joined to the other beneath the finished edge. It flares most generously at the lower edge, yet with only moderate fulness at the belt. It is an exceedingly fashionable model and also a very practical one both for silk and for wool fabrics. Taffeta is charming so made the wool voile that is to be extensively worn is perfectly adapted to such use, all the fashionable crepes are appropriate, and, indeed, a long list of materials. Here, the skirt is plain, but if liked, each section could be trimmed with banding, or, in place of being simply hemmed, the lower edges could be scalloped.

For the medium size will be needed 7 yards of material 27 inches wide, 5¾ yards 36, 4¾ yards 44. The width at the lower edge is 3 yards and 22 ins.

The pattern No. 8762 is cut in sizes from 24 to 32 inches waist measure. It will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of 15 cents.

THE FAIRY CIRCLES.

Second Prize Story.

A small house, weather beaten and old, stood in a grove of trees by a winding river. A lonely river ran by it, and on the porch sat an old woman and a child.

"Yonder in the field I see tiny lights flitting to and fro, see what it can be, Stella; perchance the fairies and gnomes are at their play, but do not let them see you," she added cautiously.

Stella jumped up and ran softly towards the field, but not softly enough to escape the keen hearing of the bearers of the tiny lights, for in a flash it was all dark and Stella crept towards the centre of the field with no one to disturb her. The tiny circles where the grass was beaten down were still there but no fairies. Stella drew back bitterly disappointed. In all the eight years of her life she had never seen a fairy, and now she had so wished she would.

"You were surely mistaken, Grandmother," said Stella sadly, "for all there is now are the trodden circles which have been there ever since I can remember," and she sat down on the porch with a heavy sigh.

"Come to bed now," was all her grandmother said. Stella did not sleep that night, but watched the field anxiously from her window. She was growing drowsy when the faint tinkle of bells met her ears. In a moment she was pulling on her wrapper and tiptoeing downstairs. Softly opening the door she hurried into the field. As she passed through the gate something sharp stuck into her foot and, bending down in the moonlight she saw it was a tiny steel sword. She pulled it out and looked it over. A figure was carved in the wooden handle. It was a tiny man with a pointed green cap, painted green shoes, and a brown suit.

"Brownies!" gasped Stella, and as she spoke a procession wound its way towards her. The leader, a little fellow, was precisely the same as the figure carved on the handle of the sword. There were jingling bells and lighted torches with a great many fairies in the rear. The leader spoke, "Have you got my sword there?" he asked. Stella gave it to him and he asked her to watch them, so she sat down on the grass.

First they went around in rings, then they danced and soon Stella joined in their play. Before they left the leader came to her and said: "These circles have been here, and all these fairies, for centuries, and every night you want to play with us come, for when you are older you will not want to," and bidding her good-bye, the fairies trooped away leaving a light-hearted child behind them.

MARGARET'S PEN.

August 25th, 1915.
Off 48 Belvedere Road.

Dear Editor:

Thank you very much for the beautiful founten pen, you gave me, for my essay on Canadian Soldier. I am very glad that you were pleased to give me a prize. With many good wishes for the success of the Children's Page.

I am yours sincerely,
MARGARET WALKER.

SUGGESTION FOR PRIZE.

Dear Sirs:

Could not the subject for drawings and essays in The Star of September 11th, be "a battleship," or "battleships."

I am sure a number of the youthful readers of The Star would like this subject.

Hoping my suggestion may receive consideration.

I remain,
JOS. BERRIGAN, Dunedin, P. E. I.,
(age 14).

LOUISA'S WATCH.

St. Ferdinand, August, 23rd, 1915.

Dear Editor:

Please excuse my long delay in thanking you for my lovely little watch, I was absent a few days, and on my return was overjoyed at finding the "second prize" awaiting me. Once more thanking you very much.

I remain, your little friend,
LOUISA PIDGEON.

DOROTHY'S PEN.

Charlottetown, P.E.I.

Editor Montreal Star:

Dear Sir—Received your letter and fountain pen safely. Many thanks for the pen.

Yours sincerely,
DOROTHY WINCHESTER.

In the fashion

By Lillian Young

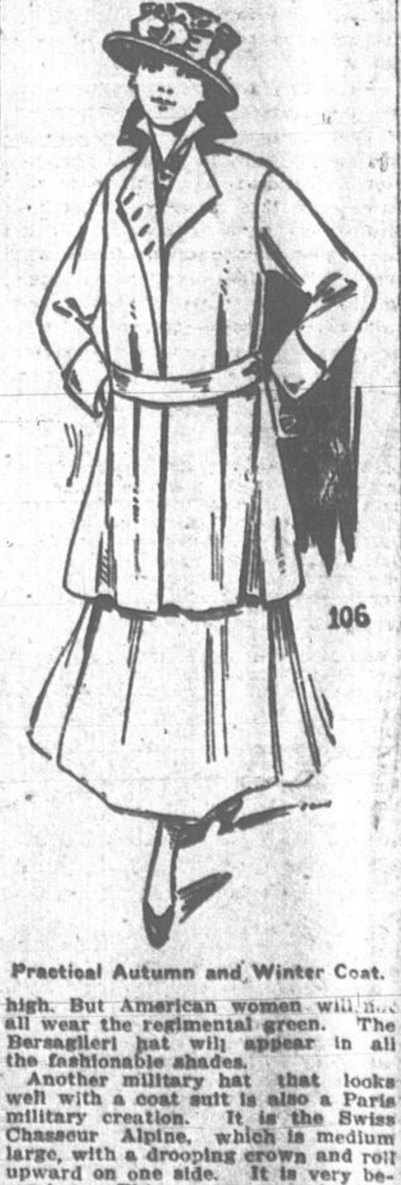
The fashion centres have decreed that to be truly chic the coat for the autumn and winter of 1915-16 shall be either long or short. Indeed long coats creep downward so fast that already Paris is showing the old redingote models, and also the full-length military coats, which are both useful and attractive.

The coat shown in this pattern may be made longer if it is to be worn as a rain cloak and made of rainproof English wools or of cravenetted cloth. The English goods are better for winter wear, as they are very warm, very durable, and always have a smart appearance. Cravenetted cloth, on the other hand, while very useful, is made with a treatment of rubber, and as this excludes air and evaporation it is not as healthful as materials so woven that only long exposure to the most severe storms could penetrate them with dampness.

The coat illustrated is of the sort that is worn both for dress and semi-dress occasions. It could be made up in broadcloth or velvet, with handsome collars and cuffs of fur or contrasting coloring, such as brocade or silk caracul or velvet, or it could be made of tweeds or any suitable wool mixture for walking and shopping purposes. In one case the coat could be worn with afternoon dresses, while in the latter case it would be most suited to morning or general wear.

Another material which will be used very much this season for coats is corduroy, and this appears in all colors and for all purposes. The nifty evening wrap and the jaunty sport coat both alike exhibit the popular corduroy rib, and most of the colors are strong, such as sulphur and orange yellow, bright pinks, reds, blues, and greens. In evening wraps the shades take on pastel tints, and a general tendency is to use grays and deep brown for hard wear on the street in towns and cities. Country coats are expected to be more brilliant in hue.

With these coats may be worn the new and stunning Italian regimental hat, the Bersaglieri, which has been brought out in Paris for general smart wear during the winter. The real Bersaglieri hat is dark green, with a medium brim and big bunch of coque feathers on the side. The brim rolls slightly, with more of a tip on one side, and the hat is worn with this dip to one side, which is more on the round order, and not high. But American women will not all wear the regimental green. The Bersaglieri hat will appear in all the fashionable shades.



Practical Autumn and Winter Coat.

Another military hat that looks well with a coat suit is also a Paris military creation. It is the Swiss Chasseur Alpine, which is medium large, with a drooping crown and roll upward on one side. It is very becoming. This, as its name implies, is the hat of the Swiss regiment of chasseurs.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENCE

All correspondence for this department should be addressed to Margaret Currie.

All communications must have name and address signed.

WOULD-BE CHAUFFEUR.

Could you please inform me if there is an automobile school in Montreal or Quebec, and if you know the fee generally charged in such schools?

Ans. — There is an automobile school at 69 Osborne street, Montreal, known at the Hill Motor Co. Write there for information regarding fees.

VIVIAN, "W," ETC.

Please read rules at head of column. No question answered unless name and address are signed to query.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARIES.

Can you please give me the names of wedding celebrations, such as wooden wedding, etc. I would like to have them in rotation, if possible.

EDITH.

Ans.—First, cotton; second, paper; third, leather; fourth, fruit and flowers; fifth, wooden; sixth, sugar; seventh, woollen; eighth, India rubber; ninth, willow; tenth, tin; eleventh, steel; twelfth, silk and fine linen; thirteenth, lace; fourteenth, ivory; fifteenth, crystal; twentieth, china; twenty-fifth, silver; thirtieth, pearl; fortieth, ruby; fiftieth, golden; seventy-fifth, diamond.

ENGLISH BULLDOGS.

Will you please tell me through the Star if a British Bull Dog should have his tail nipped. If so, at what age, and where can I have it done; and can you tell me what day of the week these dates fell on: Oct. 12, 1888; Sept. 9, 1890; Sept. 27, 1900.

BEAUTY.

Ans.—(1) The best authority on bulldogs in Montreal is responsible for the statement that English bulldogs should not have their tails nipped nor should they be cropped. Nature should not be interfered with in any way.

(2) October 12, 1888, was Friday; September 9, 1890, was Tuesday; September 27, 1900, was Thursday.

WORRIED MOTHER.

(1) It is better for two young girls to have a chaperon when going to a public dance hall.

(2) Replying to your second question, "What is the difference between a Jew and a Gentile." A Jew is described in the dictionary as a worshipper of God who follows the Mosaic ritual; a member of the Hebraic division of the Semite race; a descendant of Abraham, through Jacob. A Gentile is, among the Jews, one who is not of the Jewish faith; among the Christians, one who is neither Jew nor Christian—a pagan.

(3) I'm sorry I can't suggest a method of keeping two sisters of nineteen and twenty, from quarreling, nor can I tell you how to keep your ten-year-old son from running after his brother. You should have begun your training when they were babies. If you cannot control your children at their present ages, there is, I am afraid, nothing to be done.

(5) Your fifteen-year-old daughter should certainly go back to school.

ANOTHER JAUNDICE CURE.

I am sending this cure to inquirer for jaundice: Ten cents worth epsom salts, four ounce cream of tartar, and the juice of four lemons. Pour on a quart of boiling water. When cold, bottle and take a wine glass before breakfast every morning. This cured me when all other prescriptions failed.

NO NAME.

A. M.

(1) The list of wedding anniversaries is being published in reply to another correspondent. (2) If you will look in the Telephone Book under "Protestant," you will see the addresses of several homes for Protestant children.

LETTERS FROM RUSSIA.

Can anyone be kind enough, let me know if any letters are arriving from Monastriesch, Kieve Province, in Russia, for I am most anxious to know.

NELLIE GURMAN.

Ans.—If you will inquire at the Montreal Post Office, I am sure they will be glad to give you any information they may have at their disposal. You must remember, however, that in time of war, all mail service is necessarily very unsettled and interrupted.

BLUEBELL.

(1) If the present you received was a valuable one, I would send it back to the man with whom you have quarreled. If, on the contrary, it was just some inexpensive trifle, it is not necessary to return it.

(2) If grass stains are new, washing in naphtha soap and cold water is usually sufficient to remove them. Alcohol also removes a grass stain on white canvas. (3) Clean a white tagal straw hat as follows: Make a solution of one teaspoon oxalis acid crystals to one pint warm water. Dip an old toothbrush in this, and scrub hat vigorously after having brushed all dust out of it.

WORKING AT SIXTEEN.

Do you think it is proper for the mother of a girl of sixteen who is working to allow a boy friend to visit her at the house, or to call for her to take her to the skating rink.

(2) And what should I ask my mother, if I wanted to ask the boy to the house.

PEARL C.

Ans.:—(1) I think, if you are able to earn your living, you should be allowed to receive callers at your own house, or go to the rink.

(2) Surely you can talk it over with your mother, my dear. Ask her if she will allow you to have your boy friends come to the house.

"WAXING TICKING."

Make ticking and turn to wrong side, place on table, take a good hard piece of beeswax, about half or three-quarter pounds, warm it a little, and rub well into ticking, warming every time until all is covered.

ENGLISHMAN.

Ed. Note:—Many thanks. Another reader sent in this information, and also added that the same effect could be achieved by moistening common yellow laundry soap and rubbing on wrong side of ticking.

ENQUIRER.

Suppose you go to see the secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association, 502 Dorchester street west. There are classes in so many subjects that you can join for a small sum, and ever so many girls situated just as you are, alone in the city, that I am sure you can find a friend amongst them.

EDYTHE L.

I'm sorry, but our expert on plants says the specimen you sent in is too small for him to judge what it is.

A SCOTCHWOMAN'S LETTER.

Ever since you have undertaken the "Page" I have watched how it has grown, and rejoiced in your success. You are very plucky to stand all the undeserved rebukes so well. I should never be able to. I wish you all good things, and may you be editor of our page for many years, although I don't envy you your task. I read the letter sent in by "Christy," and could not help thinking that we "Scotch" folks had just a "wee grain ower muckle conceit." My husband is an American, very pro-English, with just a taint of Scottish blood in his veins. He evidently thinks with Dr. Johnstone, that "the only good thing in Scotland is the way out." On reading "Christy's" letter I asked him his opinion of the Scottish lassie, as a wife, and this is what he said, "Tell Miss Currie that what I think of one Scottish lassie as a wife is at times unmentionable." So far as I'm concerned, I'm very Scotch, an Edinburgh "lassie," and as I ought to represent a class, I can't pride myself on the result. I hope you can read this, as I'm rocking the baby's cradle with my foot and once in a while it jumps away. Good-night, dear Miss Currie, your name does sound so Scotchie. I'm not really Scottish, now, but British, and very proud of it.

M. W.

Ans.—Thank you so much for your charming letter. I can see you rocking the cradle with your foot and writing—on your knee? Your husband is certainly Scotch in his method of expressing himself isn't he? How the Scotch people do hate to show their real feelings! Don't worry about my feelings being hurt by letters of disapproval. When you are doing work which is in the public eye, you must expect criticism, and if it is fair and just, you welcome it. Letters of that sort are more than counterbalanced by such appreciative tributes as yours.

ECONOMY IN CLOTHES

Last week I discussed the necessity of economy in house-keeping during the war, but many women who are fairly economical housekeepers are anything but economical in buying or caring for clothes.

In all the shops for women, clothes are still expensive—a plain serge coat at $40, hats at $10 to $50, frocks at impossible prices and the moral is obvious. The shopkeeper would not charge so much for his wares if he could not get it. If no-one would buy expensive clothes, the buyers for the women's shops would soon become more moderate in their purchases.

A man who manages a large shop for men's furnishings told me that men had really become economical in their purchases since the war started, but the shops dealing in women's apparel offer no such complaint. We apparently go merrily on seeking our own personal adornment and not worrying about where the money is to come from.

One of the planks of the English Women's Economy League is to buy as few luxurious articles of clothing as possible and to resist all attempts to introduce new fashions. There is also a clause to reduce in every way possible the expenditure on imported goods, and strictly to limit the purchase of everything that comes under the category of luxuries.

The announcement of the formation and objects of the league is signed by the Duchess of Beaufort, the Duchess of Sutherland, the Marchioness of Ripon, the Marchioness of Tullibardine, Countess of Yarborough, Countess of Pembroke, Countess Mar and Kellie, Viscountess Ridley Cornelia, Lady Wimborne, Lady De Ramsay, Lady Islington, the Hon. Mrs. George Keppel, and the Hon. Mrs. Cyril Ward.

One economizes in distinguished company, these days.

A fashionable dressmaker of Bond Street, London, says:

"Women are dressing very simply. Many of my clients are doing war work that demands serviceable day frocks in greater numbers than before; practically no evening dresses are being worn, and in many cases a dainty frock serves for afternoon tea, dinner, and even for an informal dance or theatre party that may follow."

Incidentally, this is a good time to learn to make your own clothes or to at least be able to help a home dressmaker. An ability to make a simple blouse, camisole or set of underware will save you a great deal of money, and in these days of accurate patterns, almost any girl who is skilled with her needle, should be able to make simple frocks, blouses and underwear for herself.

Once your clothes are made you must learn to take proper care of them, for that prolongs the life of a frock indefinitely.

Never put a cloth suit, coat or skirt away without brushing it and recoving all stains. Always put your coat and skirt on hangers. I saw one department store advertising coat hangers, three for five cents, this week, and that is surely cheap enough to enable everyone to have a hanger for each costume.

When your suit has been spottel by rain, sponge all over with a solution of weak ammonia and water, then press with a hot iron over a damp cloth.

Don't put your clothes away torn. Keep an emergency basket with buttons, thread, hooks and eyes, etc; and at the first sign of a rip get out your thimble and mend it. Sort your laundry carefully and mend it before you put it away. Sew on all the buttons, darn all the tares and put on the patches where necessary.

Keep shoe-trees for every pair of boots and shoes and immediately you remove your shoes, put the trees into them. Take a cloth and rub off the dust and polish, if necessary before putting away.

Keep a bottle of pure alcohol on your dressing table and a piece of black velvet in your hat-box. Dip the velvet in the alcohol and go over your colored straw hat with it, if it is at all dusty.

Pull your gloves off wrong side out and then put them back into shape again. The old-fashioned woman always blows into her gloves and pats them into shape before putting them away. Use cotton thread the same color for mending them, and invest in a little glove-darner, which you can buy at the notion counter of any department store.

Never wear a stocking a minute after it showes a hole. Keep a darning-bag stocked with fine darning-wool, darning silks and cottons of all the colors of the stockings you wear and mend the hole or the "Jacob's ladder," the instant it appears.

A liberal use of the mending needle, the clothes-brush, and the pressing-iron will not only preserve your clothes much longer, but will give you an infinitely better-groomed appearance and inspire in you that feeling of being well-dressed, which is to most women a stronger support than a consciousness of moral rectitude.

WHAT GIRLS MAY DO

BY JESSIE ROBERTS

IS THERE A CHANCE IN DENTIST'S OFFICE?

I have had a number of letters from girls asking what chance there is of a good job in becoming assistant to a dentist. One of these asks if it is possible to work up into professional work through office work. Another wants to know if it is necessary to attend a dental school before you can go into an office, and these are various inquiries as to salary possibilities and whether the work is pleasant.

There is plenty of chance to get positions with dentists, for there is more demand for the right sort of girl than there is supply. The dentist wants a sweet-mannered, attractive girl, with enough intelligence to understand him at a word and enough deftness to do her work quickly and precisely.

This work is partly clerical, as she sends out announcements, bills, etc. Then she is expected to prepare the patient, hold instruments, mix pastes and cements, and in time to do a large part of the prophylatic work, though this is not permitted in some states without a license.

A girl cannot become a dentist by working up from office work. She must attend a dental school or college for her diploma. There is, I am told, no descrimination against women in these schools, and many women are already practising dentistry with success.

But any young girl with the necessary attributes who goes into an office knowing nothing of the business but able to learn and willing to work will soon command a nice weekly salary and can easily make herself indispensable. At first, while she is learning her job, she gets five or six dollars a week; later, when she can take the routine work off her employer's hands, she will get eighteen or twenty, and occasionally more.

A BATTLE OF BEAN BAGS.

This is a thrilling game and any number of players can take part. Stand round in a circle, each player about fifteen inches from the next. At a given signal each player throws his bag to his right hand neighbor, at the same time turning quickly to catch the bag which comes from the left. The quicker you throw the more exciting the game. A slow player will soon have a pile of bean-bags at his feet. Now the amusement comes in! The player will probably, in desperation, hurl his pile of bean bags at his right hand neighbor. The latter, anxious to get rid of them will send them post haste to his neighbor and so on. The game ends in wild excitement and disorder.

Of course, if you want to play the game in an orderly manner you can make rules,—for instance, you can arrange that after a player has dropped the bags a certain number of times he is out of the game, so that the player who remains "in" the longest is the winner.

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY (Registered)

A Good Reason Why You Should Buy Your Furs Now

There has been no sacrifice in the quality of the skins or any stinting in the workmanship because we are able to sell the high-class "Fairweathers" product at from 20% to 40% cheaper this season than it has been possible to all the years we have been manufacturing and selling fine furs.

¶ Trade conditions in Europe have materially curtailed the demand for furs. As a consequence, great quantities of them have either remained in or have come into Canada, and naturally enough have been sold to the manufacturers at much less prices. Less price for materials means lower price for the product.

¶ So we are justified, and our big stock bears us out, in saying that fine furs never were sold for so little money as they will be this season.

¶ Therefore, now is the time to buy furs, for when the war is over it certainly will be another story.

THE GODDESS

Written by GOUVERNEUR MORRIS
One of America's Most Famous Authors

Dramatized by CHAS. W. GODDARD
Author of "The Perils of Pauline" and
"The Exploits of Elaine"
Introducing:—Anita Stewart as "The Goddess"
Earle Williams as "Tommy Barclay"

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

After the tragic death of John Amesbury, his prostrated wife, one of America's greatest beauties, dies. At her death Prof. Stilliter, an agent of the interests, kidnaps the beautiful three-year-old baby girl and brings her up in a paradise where she sees no man but thinks she is taught by angels, who instruct her for her mission to reform the world. At the age of eighteen she is suddenly thrust into the world where agents of the interests are ready to pretend to find her.

The one to feel the loss of the little Amesbury girl most, after she has been spirited away by the interests, was Tommy. In a few days, however, he found himself living amid luxurious surroundings as the adopted son of Mr. Barclay. Time in its flight brings manhood to Tommy and great expectations to Barclay, who has planned to have Tommy marry into wealth. But Tommy's lack of interest in Barclay's business affairs changes matters. Barclay meets with success in breaking up the match he had really planned. Turned down by the girl, Tommy goes to the Adirondacks to forget the affair. While there he meets by accident, Celestia.

INSTALMENT III.

To rescue the girl who called herself Celestia from Professor Stilliter had been the work of instants and impulse. But what to do next was not to be decided without plenty of reflection. Reflection did not come easily to Tommy, however, especially in the present circumstances. For any train of logical thought upon which he tried to get started was soon interrupted, either by a stolen look at his companion, the necessity of helping her past some rough place, or by some naive question or other which she would ask from time to time.

He could not make her out at all to his satisfaction. At one moment she seemed perfectly sane, at the next completely mad. The only things of which he felt certain were that she was beautiful and good and that she was suffering from some form of amnesia by which her powers of memory had been undermined.

"How long have you known that man?" he asked, referring, of course, to Professor Stilliter.

"Not so long as I have known you, but sometimes I feel as if I had seen you both before. But I can't ever have seen you, can I? You can't ever have been in heaven and I've never been on earth."

"If you were seeing him for the first time why were you afraid of him?"

"For the same reason that I'm not afraid of you."

"And you're not—not a bit?"

"He," said she, simply, "is bad and ugly. You are good and beautiful."

As Tommy guided her through the woods toward his camping ground of the preceding night, he kept on saying to himself: "But there's got to be a show-down soon. What am I to do about her?"

He almost wished that he had not taken her away from Stilliter, but had instead stayed with them, dogged their footsteps from place to place until he was sure that the girl was in no real danger from the psychologist. Indeed he was in a state of great mental perplexity, and at the same time there was a novel and romantic quality to the episode that he could not but enjoy.

"If only," he thought, "I might play around with her for the rest of the day and then turn her over to her proper guardians and have no further responsibility, I'd ask nothing better."

They came to a black pool of rain water. Before Tommy could prevent, Celestia had stepped upon the surface, as if upon a solid pavement, and gone in above the knee.

She gave a little cry of amused astonishment.

"Why it's—it's"—she cried.

"Yes," said Tommy, "it's wet water. You appeared to think it was a boardwalk. But never mind, you'll soon dry out. Don't they have water in heaven?"

"Of course, but not black and still like that. In heaven it's all alive with rainbows in it."

"They speak English in heaven?"

"Oh, yes, and French and Italian and Spanish and German and American and all the others."

"Can you speak them all?"

"Of course. What good could I do on earth if I couldn't talk to the people?"

"Just what good are you going to do?"

"I'm going to tell the people to be better and not so foolish, and they are to do what I tell them."

"That's a splendid idea," said Tommy, feeling that it would be best to humor her, "and then what?"

Then? Why, when I've made everybody rich and happy I'll go back to heaven, of course, and be happy, too."

"Are you unhappy now?"

"No; not unhappy, but if I were back in heaven I wouldn't be all wet and muddy and hungry and thirsty, would I?"

"Of course you wouldn't, you poor child," said Tommy, "but soon we'll be at my camp and then I'll hustle around and make you comfortable."

"And I feel as if my face were on fire, too," she complained.

"Feverish," thought Tommy with dismay. And then he said:

"Stand still a moment and let me look."

He noticed for the first time the extraordinary whiteness and delicacy of her skin. It was as if she had always been veiled from the sun.

"You're getting sunburnt," he said with concern. "That's what's the matter."

"Oh, the sun!" she cried. "The sun! Do show it to me! I've heard so much about it."

"Isn't there any in heaven?"

"How you talk; why, heaven is so far off."

"Well," said Tommy, pointing, "that's it!"

"That!" exclaimed Celestia—but she could not look the sun in the face for more than a fraction of a second.

"That!" and she burst into laughing. "Do you know what I thought that was?" she said.

"What?"

"Why, I thought, of course, that that was the gate of hell. And, so that's the sun, and it's burning my face?"

She touched her face with her fingers and then looked at their tips as if expecting that the burn had come off on them.

"I've got some stuff at my camp that will take the burn out," said Tommy. "Look out for that green stuff. It's got thorns."

They began to climb the eminence on which Tommy's camp was perched, and with every step Celestia showed increasing fatigue. He walked a little behind and at one side, now helping her forward and upward with an occasional touch of the hand between her shoulders and now with a steadily maintained pressure.

"Of course I'm not used to walking," she said. "I'm sorry. I suppose I'll get used to it."

"If you are determined to push on to New York you will," said Tommy.

His quick ears caught the sudden appetising cluck of a partridge.

"Let's see if we can get that fellow!" he exclaimed. "You sit down and rest yourself, Celestia. Nobody hunts much in these woods and the birds are tame as chickens."

But Tommy's first move was really the opposite of a move, for he stood as still as he could and listened. Now a partridge or a ruffed grouse, if you give him his right name, is a born ventriloquist.

First the partridge clucked to the right of Tommy, then to the left; then in front of him, and then back of him. Tommy walked a few paces and once more stood still and listened. This time the clucking came from directly overhead, and Tommy looked upward in the dense branches of a young spruce tree, and after so looking for a few moments suddenly smiled. And although she did not know what Tommy was smiling at, Celestia smiled, too.

She sat down and leaned against the stem of a birch, her breath coming and going quickly, her great eyes following every movement that Tommy made.

Having located the partridge, Tommy "assembled" his trout rod, and, with the end of the line, made a running noose. Then he began very quietly to poke the rod up among the branches of the spruce tree. An interested clucking attested to the fact that more eyes than Celestia's were on Tommy.

Tommy, his right hand clasping the butt of the rod, his thumb breaking the reel, reached gradually higher and higher until his arm was extended to its full length. He added a few inches to his reach by standing on tiptoe. But even this was not enough. So Tommy bent his knees a little and then jumped.

Before his feet regained the earth a frightful squawking and flapping arose in the spruce tree, and then there was dragged from it what looked like a pinwheel going at top speed.

Hunger is the most cruel tyrant in the world. Tommy's thumb sought and found the base of an egg shell; there was a sharp scrunch, one last wild whistling of the pin-wheel, and then there was one cock grouse the less in the North woods.

But Celestia looked pained now and troubled.

"It has wings like an angel," she said, only darker."

Tommy was just going to say: "It's got whiter meat than an angel," but stopped himself in time, and changed to:

"Even people who come here to make the world better, Celestia, have to eat."

And he slipped the dilapidated bird into his pocket.

A few minutes later they reached Tommy's camp, and after he had given Celestia a cupful of spring water he cut fresh balsam boughs and made a thick mat for her to rest on, and rolled his coat and some other odds and ends into a pillow, so that she could watch him make the fire and do the cooking.

In the midst of this he remembered that she was suffering from sunburn, and he made her bathe her face in a lotion that smelt of camphor and niter, and which burnt a little, and then felt cool.

For lunch they had tea, biscuits (one of Tommy's most lamentable culinary failures) and the partridge. Cooked, he no longer looked like the victim of murder, but very beautiful and appetizing.

Celestia ate her full share, and then lay back on her balsam boughs and watched Tommy fill and light a pipe.

"Why do you do that?" she asked. "Wasn't the partridge cooked enough?"

Tommy narrowed his eye at her and for some moments didn't answer. Then he said: "I don't know what to make of you at all. First you say you come from heaven and act as if you did; then you talk and act like a regular girl; then you pretend that you never saw a man smoke before. And then—what are you trying to do to me, anyway? Is that really the only dress you've got in the world? Do you always wear a golden band around your hair, with stage jewels in it?"

And then suddenly a light dawned on Tommy, and he smote his thigh in applause of his own cleverness.

"I know what you are," he said. "You're the queen of the movies. You're up here staging a show, and you got bored and let me run off with you for a lark. Professor Stilliter has had something to do with the scenario. The heroine is supposed to be a little looney. That's you, Celestia—and you're practising all the time on me. Well, thank heaven, it's only acting. Why, I really thought you were mad as a hatter!"

"No," said Celestia, "I'm not in the least angry. But I'm sure I don't know what you mean, but I like you when you get excited and talk fast and your eyes smile. It rests me."

Tommy shook his head at her and smiled reprovingly.

"You can't keep on fooling me," he said. "Come, now, what's your real name?"

"Celestia," she said.

"All right, if you don't want to tell me yet; it will keep, it's bound to. But tell me, then, are you"——he hesitated and blushed. "I'd really like to know. You see I'm rather crazy about you. You're not Mrs. Somebody or other, are you?"

The embarrassed smile froze on his lips. He leaped to his feet and stood listening. Faint and clear, sounding cheerful rather than ominous, there rose to them from the valleys below a baying of dogs. Tommy had gone once with a posse of deputy sheriffs to see how a murderer is hunted down with the bloodhounds. Whole scenes of that pursuit flashed through his mind, and he knew that the baying, which now sounded in his ears, was not that of deerhounds running out of season, but of bloodhounds following a human trail.

He climbed swiftly to the top of the Hub and stood listening, his field glasses glued to his eyes.

That there would ever by any difficulty of evading such a man as Stilliter in the North woods had never occurred to him. He had pictured Stilliter a man of resource in a laboratory or in a dissecting room with an insensible guinea pig staked out on the operating table, but not out of doors. The man was fat, unhealthy white and appallingly nearsighted. That such a man could be so hot upon their trail had about it a sinister quality that brought Tommy's heart into his mouth.

A glimpse of two bloodhounds and four men, one of whom was Stilliter and another a full-blooded Indian, crossing an open space, recently crossed by Celestia and himself during their unhurried escape and in the same direction, brought Tommy down from the Hub in a great hurry.

As for Celestia—well, she couldn't be a movie actress; no movie actress playing truant would be hunted down with blood-hounds, and he felt that she must be accounted for upon some other hypothesis, but later when there was more time.

Meanwhile there was nothing to be thought of but instant getting together of such things as might prove most useful and flight.

"We've got to beat it, Celestia," he said. "I'm sorry, because you are tired, but that man" then by encircling his eyes with his hands he indicated Professor Stilliter's eye-glasses—"is after us."

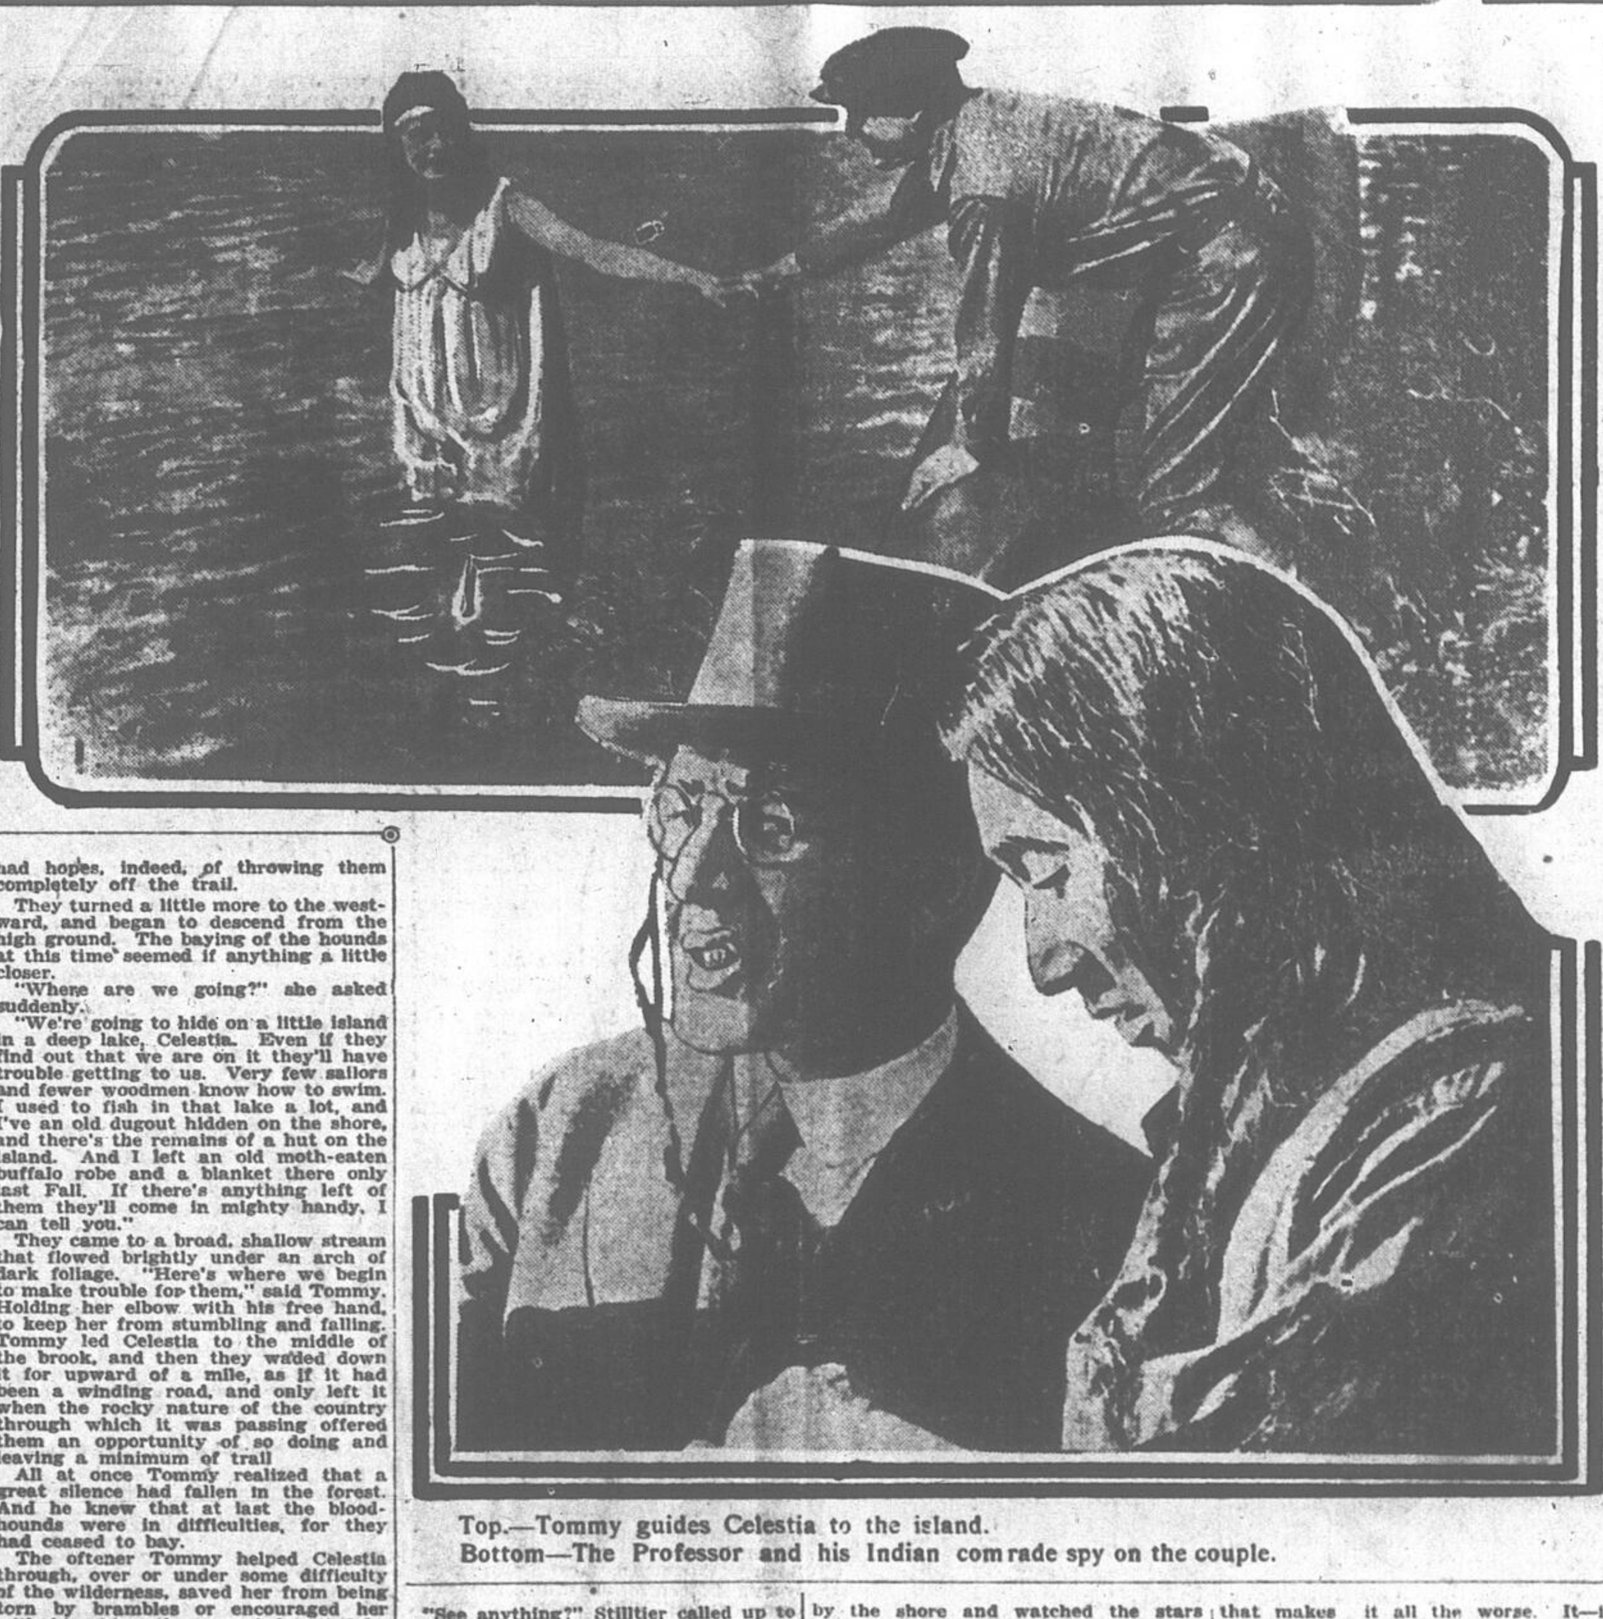
She rose obediently to her feet. "I don't know why he wants to catch you," said Tommy, "and either you don't know or you won't tell. But you dislike him, and you're afraid of him, and that's enough."

A kettle, frying pan, salt, tea and matches rolled into a blanket and strapped to his shoulders, his field glasses, axe and fishing tackle were about all that Tommy could carry and make speed under. Especially if he had to help Celestia over difficulties. His rifle he abandoned. It would be better, he thought, to be unarmed than to attempt with a light twenty-two to oppose repeating rifles of heavy calibre. And furthermore, Tommy, though prepared to stand up for Celestia's rights and to fight for them, was not prepared to kill anybody in an affair which was entirely a mystery to him.

They were soon under way, following the higher ground, where the granite outcroppings neither received any impress from their feet, nor long held the scent of the leather soles. But the crests of the ridges were not all granite, and Tommy knew very well that in places they were making what of footprints and bent and broken branches which an Indian will read as casually as a commuter reads his newspaper; and which, aided by bloodhounds, he will follow as easily as small boys follow a procession through a city street.

That broad reaches of unbroken granite would occasionally baffle their pursuers was all that Tommy could hope for. He counted on these bafflements for making up for the difference in speed between men and dogs, traveling light, and a girl already too tired and utterly unused to the woods.

He had at first only a vague idea as to just what part of the wilderness he would take her, but gradually his mind cleared up on this point and he became occupied with the problem of getting to that place by a route which their pursuers would find the most difficulty possible in following. He had hopes, indeed, of throwing them completely off the trail.



Top.—Tommy guides Celestia to the island.
Bottom—The Professor and his Indian comrade spy on the couple.

They turned a little more to the westward, and began to descend from the high ground. The baying of the hounds at this time seemed if anything a little closer.

"Where are we going?" she asked suddenly.

"We're going to hide on a little island in a deep lake, Celestia. Even if they find out that we are on it they'll have trouble getting to us. Very few sailors and fewer woodmen know how to swim. I used to fish in that lake a lot, and I've an old dugout hidden on the shore, and there's the remains of a hut on the island. And I left an old moth-eaten buffalo robe and a blanket there only last Fall. If there's anything left of them they'll come in mighty handy, I can tell you."

They came to a broad, shallow stream that flowed brightly under an arch of dark foliage. "Here's where we begin to make trouble for them," said Tommy. Holding her elbow with his free hand, to keep her from stumbling and falling, Tommy led Celestia to the middle of the brook, and then they waded down it for upward of a mile, as if it had been a winding road, and only left it when the rocky nature of the country through which it was passing offered them an opportunity of so doing and leaving a minimum of trail

All at once Tommy realized that a great silence had fallen in the forest. And he knew that at last the bloodhounds were in difficulties, for they had ceased to bay.

The oftener Tommy helped Celestia through, over or under some difficulty of the wilderness, saved her from being torn by brambles or encouraged her with his voice, the more infatuated he became with her.

Mary Blackstone's image could be recalled only by an effort of memory. And yet it was only a few days since he had fancied himself in love with her! He confessed this to himself more than once, and could but feel ashamed and sheepish. How long would it be before he fancied himself in love with Celestia, after how long a separation would he discover that he did not love her in the least? He had no stability. Was he never to have a serious purpose in life? Love? Even hate?

All of a sudden they caught glimpses of blue water between the tree stems, and in a few moments they saw before them and below them a lovely lake with densely wooded shores and in its midst a densely wooded island

"Oh!" exclaimed Celestia. "But this earth is beautiful."

"Remind you at all of Heaven?" asked Tommy, a little mischievously.

"Not in the least," said Celestia, and as if she did not wish to discuss the comparative beauties of the two places. "Is that our island?" she asked.

"We'll be hard to find," said Tommy, "and now the work is almost all over."

They descended the narrow strip of land which divided the lake from the forest, and here Tommy told Celestia to sit down and rest while he hunted for the dug out and got it into the water.

He returned in ten minutes, paddling quietly, and found Celestia playing with the sand as if she had been a little child. Her eyes were bright with animation, and she had gotten sand on her forehead and in her hair. Perceiving Tommy, she tossed a double handful of sand into the air, and as the sunlight caught the myriads of bright surfaces, she cried: "What is it? Oh, what is it?"

"Sand," said Tommy.

"Sand," cried Celestia.

"Didn't you ever play in the sand when you were little?"

"I used to play with diamonds and rubies," said Celestia. "Oh, but this is wonderful. See, you can write in it and draw pictures. Look, I am making the man Stilliter."

And, indeed, with her forefinger for pencil, she made an excellent caricature of him.

"Who taught you to do that, Celestia?"

"An angel," she said, simply.

"Well," said Tommy, "I've heard of people who could draw like angels—but—oh, Celestia, aren't you a little tired of playing this heavenly origin business on me? I don't take any stock of it."

She looked at him with a sudden grave wonder.

"When I tell you that I come from Heaven, you don't believe me?"

"Why, Celestia," he said, meeting her gaze with equal gravity, "you're just a regular girl. Why there's blood on your cheek, where a deer fly has bitten you"——

"You've got to believe me," she said, and it seemed to Tommy she was trying to master him with her eyes.

"What are you trying to do to me?" he said. "Hypnotize me?"

And then he laughed, and looked so brown and handsome and good natured that Celestia had to smile at him.

"Now, Celestia," he said, "I'm going to take you for a boat ride. But you've got to sit still—mighty still. You pretend that you're back in Heaven listening to Israfel accompanied by the Spheres."

But she spoke with a sudden sternness that made him very uncomfortable.

"Is there no reverence left on earth? No faith? It's high time that I came."

He helped her into the dugout, his eyes on the back of her head, enamored with the way her dark, strong hair met her straight, white neck, and as he paddled he kept saying, "Who the deuce is she, and what the deuce is she?"

And to these questions he could not find any answers that were altogether satisfactory.

Just as they were landing on the island there came to them once more, faintly, and from far-off the baying of the bloodhounds. Celestia gave Tommy a look full of anxious appeal.

"Don't be afraid," he said. "They are miles and miles from here."

So they were. All of them. Stilliter, the guides, the hounds, and the Indian who rejoiced in the name of Old Man Smells-good, which if it referred to anything about him except his ability to follow a trail was an inappropriate name They were all there, several miles away; but Old Man Smells-good was in the head of an exceedingly tall pine, which overtopped the rest of the forest, and from which the view was exceedingly fine and expansive. Old Man Smells-good had a pair of eyes that resembled a pair of telescopes. He could, see anything that was in sight.

"See anything?" Stillitier called up to the Indian.

"No see a damn thing," answered the Indian without changing his expression. As a matter of fact, by miracle of optics, he had just discovered Tommy helping Celestia ashore on the island.

Smells-good dismounted the tree and stood shaking his head.

"No see any damn thing," he said. "Dog no good. Smells-good he think a little. Think up where um mos' likely to go."

The old fakir. He seated himself upon his heels, filled and lighted his pipe, and closed his eyes as if in deep thought. Stilliter began to show signs of impatience, but one of the guides said:

"Better leave him alone; he's got a hunch, likely as not."

Not until he had finished his pipe did Old Man Smells-good give any signs of what had been going on in his head. When he rose to his feet, he said simply. "We find um soon," and started off in the direction of the lake.

Fifteen minutes later he knelt suddenly and appeared to bury his long, hooked nose in the ground. He rose after a moment's sniffing and said: "Me got um, sure." Then he ordered one of the guides to remain behind with the dogs.

And then he went forward, pretending to follow a trail, pointing to marks, which the other couldn't see, for the simple fact that they didn't exist, listening, pretending to hear sounds that couldn't be heard, sniffing, kneeling, and poking his long nose into the ground. Once he poked it into a ground hornets' nest, and had a narrow and undignified escape from being badly stung.

He led them to the shores of the lake, and pointed quietly across at the island. Even Stilliter could see a pale column of bluish smoke coming from among the trees.

"Bimbey, swim over," said Old Man Smells- good, "for two dollars. Fetch dug-out. Better wait till dark."

And they waited till dark. Then Old Man Smells-good, having been definitely promised an extra two dollars for the wetting, stepped forth stark naked, except for a newly filled pipe, and slipped quietly into the lake.

Meanwhile, with Tommy and Celestia all had gone well. Tommy's old camp was less dilapidated than he expected. A few balsam boughs had made the rotten roof sound above and sweet beneath. Celestia had had a long rest, and then she had followed Tommy along the shores of the island, while he fished. Finally, Tommy's long casts were rewarded. He hooked a fine trout and began to draw him strongly toward the beach. In her excitement and eagerness to help, Celestia ran into the shallow water, stepped in a deep hole, and, falling forward, was for the moment completely submerged.

Laughing and scolding, Tommy pulled her out and literally ran her back to the fire. Steam was soon rising from her wet clinging robe, but since the fire could only warm one side of her at a time, and since the chill of evening had begun to set in, she shivered, and now and then her teeth knocked together.

"Celestia," said Tommy, "you better take that dress off and let me dry it."

To the young man's horror, he had hardly finished speaking before Celestia had slipped the robe from her shoulders.

"Hold on! Don't," he cried. For he had seen quite enough to realize that underneath that robe there was nothing whatever—but Celestia. She looked at him, puzzled and wondering.

"Don't be in such a rush," he said. "You wait."

He went into the little hut and brought out the buffalo robe, which he had left there. It was very much the worse for wear, but huge and warm.

"Now," he said, "you take that off and put this on."

Then he turned his back and walked swiftly away.

"You sing out," he called back to her, "when you've changed." And he walked at a distance, frowning and laughing, until he heard her calling to him.

"Are you angry?" she said. "What did I do?"

"Nothing," said Tommy, "but, you see, on earth, young ladies don't take off their clothes when young gentlemen are looking at them. It's just the custom, that's all. It's considered very bad luck. Of course, I've never been in heaven"——

But Celestia did not encourage him to speak lightly of heaven. And he dried her theatrical white dress, and made shift to iron it with a smooth hot stone, and watched her from the corner of his eye, and thought how charming she looked, even in that bulky, clumsy buffalo robe.

After supper they sat for a long time by the shore and watched the stars grow brighter and brighter, and as the moon began to rise, dimmer and dimmer. They were happy at being together, spoke in low tones and Tommy answered many questions about the affairs of the earth.

"But, then, of course," said Celestia, "you are wicked."

"I?" exclaimed Tommy. "I like that! What do you know about it?"

"Of course, if you are not a man"——

"But I am," said Tommy. "Is that why I'm wicked?"

"There couldn't be a better reason. If you are a man you are wicked, sinful, greedy and covetous of what belongs to other people."

"That's only a judgment of men in general that has been handed to you all ready-made. But use your own judgment, not somebody else's. Since you've known me have I done one single thing to make you think I'm wicked?"

"No, you haven't," said Celestia, "but that makes it all the worse. It—it smacks so of hypocrisy."

Tommy laughed aloud, thinking that she was joking. But he ceased instantly when he saw that she was not.

"Celestia," he said, "don't for a minute think that I'm pretending to be good. But wickedness is different. If I were wicked it wouldn't be safe for you to be with me. But as things are you'd be safe as long as you wanted to be safe, and afterwards, probably. In my opinion very few men—even murderers and wife-beaters — are really wicked. For the most part they are just unintelligent."

"Exactly," said Celestia; "and there is nothing wickeder than that."

"It was more fun talking about happiness," said Tommy. "Suppose we forget the world. Now, you are not going to New York to work yourself to the bone for other people. You're just going to stay on with me in the good, clean woods, and be worked for and made much of. "We'll just go on and on through the woods, camping at night by pretty lakes and brooks"—

He looked her very earnestly in the eyes and sang in a clear, quiet voice, with a kind of gallant tenderness, those great lines of Stevenson's, beginning:

"I will make you brooches and toys for your delight.
Of bird song at morning and star shine at night,
And I will build a palace fit for you and me
Of green days in forests and blue days at sea."

"What is that?" said Celestia, when he had finished.

"That," said Tommy, "Why, don't you think it's a sort of hymn?"

After that they were silent for a little.

Then Tommy said: "Are you warm? Are you comfortable?

She nodded.

Then very softly:

"Celestia," he said. "Are you happy?"

"I don't know," she said. "Can you be happy when it isn't right for you to be happy? It isn't right for one to be happy, because other people aren't.

"I am," said Tommy. At this moment the sufferings of others don't get me. You see, I have to be shown. Suppose at this moment the entire population of China, having eaten immoderately of contaminated rice, was dying of fits. I wouldn't care. I wouldn't even know. Celestia, if you stayed long enough in the woods, don't you think maybe you'd forget all about heaven and your mission to earth, and be content to be happy? Listen. Once in my life I was really happy. I was a little boy; she was a little girl. If she'd grown up she would have looked like you. Perhaps that's why I'm so happy to be with you. She and I were always happy when we were together or looking forward to being together. Then one day she went away, Celestia. She went to heaven, they told me. And for a long time I was terribly unhappy."

"But you ought to have been happy."

He shook his head.

"If I could have gone with her, perhaps."

"But in heaven she is blissful always."

"But I haven't been. When some one you love—dies"!—

"There is no death."

"There are separations that seem to us humans to be a mighty long time, then," said Tommy.

Celestia sighed.

"But I'm happy with you," said Tommy, because I can almost imagine that you are she—grown up. I'm going to pretend that you are she. That she is my angel they've sent back to earth to make us all better." And he smiled very tenderly upon her.

"But, Celestia," said Tommy; "if you insist that this world is so unhappy, tell me this: Why am I perfectly happy? I'm not good. I'm not sensible. I've never done anything noble or self-sacrificing. And yet behold me; happy as the day is long."

"And I'm happy, too," said Celestia, smiling.

"You're happy," he said, "because you feel perfectly sure that you are going to make everybody else happy. But that's not why I'm happy. I'm happy because I'd rather be right here than anywhere else; because I've had a good supper, after plenty of exercise; because the night smells of balsam, because the moon is shining, and because I've got a delightful companion."

"All these things make me happy, too," said Celestia, "but they wouldn't keep me happy for long."

"No?" said Tommy, somewhat chagrined. "If these things are enough, why want more?"

"Why," said Celestia, "after a while I'd get thinking about people who haven't delightful companions, and for whom the moon isn't shining; I couldn't rest then until I'd gone to them and tried to make their lives easier and their hearts stronger and (here she laughed softly) their heads fuller of sense."

"It would be the opposite with me," said Tommy; the longer we stayed here the less I'd get thinking about other people and the more I'd get thinking about us. Every mortal man, I suppose, has his conception of heaven (he pulled luxuriously at his pipe), and this is mine."

After a while Celestia became sleepy, and then she slipped her hand into one of Tommy's and leaned against him and laid her head on his shoulder. It was as if she had been a little child. Tommy was deeply moved and touched, and at the same time the close physical contact began to trouble him, to frighten him. He spoke, and it seemed as if with his voice he was trying to lift a weight.

"You poor baby," he said, "you're dead tired. It's bed time."

He rose a little roughly, and helped her to her feet.

When they reached the little hut, Tommy said:

"Now, you turn in there and make yourself comfy. Good night."

Tommy stood looking at the fire. He stood for quite a long time in a deep reverie.

In his hiding place close at hand, no word or motion had been lost on Professor Stilliter.

The New Economy of the Empire: The Home and the Individual

(From the London Daily Telegraph.)

We are entering a changed world, and the sooner we adapt ourselves to the new conditions the better for our pockets, our peace of mind, and our physical comfort. What the nation really needs is a band of Missionaries of Economy, going up and down the country preaching, with knowledge, persuasion, and eloquence the virtue of saving. Something of the fiery spirit of the revivalist is required in our midst, showing us the way to economic salvation as individuals, as communities, and as a nation.

We simply cannot go on living as we have been. It is not a question of choice. Arguments for and against compulsion for this or that purpose may be bandied about, but with reference to this question of expenditure they have no bearing, for in due course unconquerable forces will apply irresistible coercion. Though we may throw some portion of the burden of the war—probably a very large one—on posterity, we cannot by any means evade our own heavy responsibility unless we are content to emulate the example of Turkey, and that means bankruptcy and ruin for all. The mere annual charge for the war debt, apart from any effort which may be made to repay part of it from year to year, will mean an addition to our present scale of taxation far more considerable than is generally understood. Our national expenditure will be higher probably by 50 per cent.

AFTER THE WAR, WHAT.

We are living today under the shadow of increased and possibly new imposts. What is the position? In the first place there will be a "slump" from the present artificial war prosperity. It may be postponed some time after the conclusion of peace, but it will come. Incomes will tend to fall. But, that is not all. Simultaneously expenditure will be in an upward direction, apart from the load of taxation which will have to be carried by each of us. All commodities will for some time to come, be costly.

When the war is over, when the guns are silent and the rifles have been laid aside, we shall be called on to face a new battle. In thousands of homes a long contest will have to be waged against waste and extravagance. A new routine must be inaugurated. The Government must set an example; the local authorities must curb their activities, and they can do so in a score of ways without injury to the community; householders in every part of the country must make economy their study, the richest setting an example to those less fortunately circumstanced.

The crisis through which we are passing has cast down many barriers. There is one misunderstanding that must be removed, and that is that everyone can spend what he likes without injury to his neighbor, and even with some advantage. In the new economic conditions, it must be recognized that thrift is imposed on all as a duty to the State. All the joy cannot be trampled out of life, if only for the sake of the children, but a wise restraint must be shown in personal and domestic expenditure. The word "must" is used advisedly, because there will be no alternative. Those who organize in advance of the economic crisis will suffer least, but on all will fall the results of the present tragic destruction of wealth. which is converting a large area of Europe into a wilderness instead of a paradise. We dare not pause to consider all that might have been done with those thousands of millions to benefit the human race: we are confronted with another picture, painted mainly by the amateur brush of one wilful man, the German Emperor, and it is useless to think of the might-have-beens.

WHERE WOMEN CAN HELP.

When the Government and local authorities have carried out programs of economy—and in this matter the pressure will be valuable,—the main saving of the nation must be effected in the homes. In this campaign goodwill and cheerfulness will count for much; otherwise little can be done without discomfort and distress of mind. Domestic expenditure is for the most part under the control of women—mistresses and servants. There is great scope for economy in most houses. It must be recognized that household economy is also national economy, and that luxury and waste are opposed to the highest interests of the race; the former because it means the diversion of labor from more fruitful channels, the latter because it leads to the destruction instead of the preservation of the limited resources of the nation. We must become more modest in our requirements, and, so far as that is possible, every day must become an "All-British Day," after the fashion which was being introduced by our traders shortly before the war burst upon us. In this movement women can assist.. They can also do much by familiarising themselves with food values. English cookery is not distinguished by its economy in the use of cheap but nourishing materials; in that respect it does not compare favorably with that of our friends in France and Italy. But the main consideration to be kept in view is that we are achieving a victory, and we must all, in our several ways, help to pay for it. We cannot afford to be defeated, so, whatever our stations, we must learn how to bear the changes which success will impose upon us as a people.

FRAE AULD SCOTIA.

Special to The Montreal Star From Our Own Correspondent Resident in Glasgow.

GLASGOW, Aug. 14. — Ye wadna think by some o' the news frae different pairts o' Scotland that there was a' war on. The Government hae said that we should save a' we can, on meat, an' claes, an' holidays, an' a'thing else; an' that public bodies shouldna gang in for big plans in the way o' improvements. Maybe public bodies are keepin' back a' their great ideas for new harbors, an' waterworks, an' sewage works, an' gas works, an' a' the rest o' the things that Toon Cooncils are aye squabblin' aboot; but I haena yet met ae man wha has cut doon his grocer's, or baker's, or butcher's or tailor's bill just because the Government asks us to save up to pay for the war. Each man thinks it's a gran' idea—for the ither man—an' then gangs awa' an' orders his usual, whatever that may be. For, ye see we hae a sublime faith in the ability o' the country, no only to beat the Germans, but to pay for the war—or mak the Germans pay for it..

Some o' the big public bodies are really doein' somethin' in the way o' savin'. Glasgow has the permission o' Parliament to mak a big new piece o' harbor, for berths for the biggest Atlantic liners that come to the port, an' a great big dry dock as weel — the biggest in the country maybe. But it isna daein' anything. Then Leith has permission to turn a' the sea atween Leith West Pier an' Newhaven into a big harbor for trawlers an' ither kinds o' fishin' craft, but, like Glasgow, it is daein' naethin'. Dundee has plans for extensions an' improvements, an' it is only makin' what alterations are needed to keep business gaun. Aberdeen is to mak new waterworks, but again the plans are held up "for the period o' the war," as the papers say.

SOME LESS SAVING.

Some o' the wee places arena sae economical — maybe because they think their little bit wadna gang far anyway in the thoosand millions that the war is to cost. Eyemouth, for example, is spendin' some £4,000 on its harbor—deepenin' an' widenin' sae as to mak room for fishin' boats. They got £3,000 frae the Government (they maun hae got the promise afore the war started) an' they expect soon to hae room for sae mony boats that Eyemouth will be the biggest fishin' place sooth o' Granton or Austruther. Sae lang as the war is on there winna be muckle fishin', but the folk o' Eyemouth are far frae bein' doonhearted. They believe the Germans will be beaten soon, an' they are gettin' ready for the time o' prosperity that—they think—will come after the war is over.

CANAL HARD HIT.

Speakin' o' the fishin', the Caledonian Canal is feelin' the war badly. The spoilin' o' the fishin' by the regulations laid doon by the Government, an' by the danger o' the boats bein' sunk by German submarines, has had a bad effect on the Canal. Fewer steam drifters an' sailin' boats passed frae east to west, an' frae west to east, an' fewer tourists did the Hielan's, and sailed frae Fort William to Inverness an' back. The income was less in the past twelve months by £306 than it was in the year afore. This disna seem muckle, but on a business like the Canal, the total income o' which last year was £9,669, it means a lot. For the Canal needs a' it can mak to help it pay its way, an' anither year o' war will hit its purse still mair.

Still speakin' o' fishin', the folk in different East Coast districts hae been at the Scottish Fishery Board aboot the watchin' o' the coasts. Their idea is that unemployed fishermen could dae war work o' this kind, an' sae relieve the regular coastguards for ither duties. No only are there coastguards actin' as sentries an' watchmen; but in some o' the districts there are Territorial soldiers. This does seem oot o' place, especially when Kitchener wants a' the men he can get for the regiments that he is trainin' to gang oot to France, an' Belgium, an' the Dardanelles. The fishermen are ower auld to enlist, but they are strong, active men, an' they've spent a' their days starin' at the sea, an' learnin' hoo to pick up ships on it by day or nicht. The ordinary person wad think they wad mak the best possible coast watchers. But the Government can only reply that they dinna need mair men just at present, but will "keep the fishermen in view if vacancies arise." Sae there we are. Meantime the fishermen hae lost their ain trade, an' want to help in the war, an' canna get anything to dae.

CAPTURING TRADE.

We are daein' a little in the way o' capturin' German trade, but no sae muckle as we were thinkin' o' daein' nearly a year ayne, when we made a great fuss over startin' new factories here an' there, an' daein' mair work than e'er we did, an' work o' a kind that Germany had made its ain. But we haena got mony new factories yet, an' we are comin' roond to the opinion thet we hae plenty on han' in the job o' fechtin' the Germans in France an' Belgium, withoot tryin' to fecht them in the way o' trade at the same time. The only really serious attempt I min' o' is the plan for startin' a toy factory at Motherwell. Lady Hamilton o' Dalzell is a director of the new company, an' amang its supporters are the Provost an' "a number of local merchants and educationalists." Lord Hamilton o' Dalzell has granted a site for the factory, an' the directors propose to employ disabled soldiers an' sailors an' the dependents o' soldiers an' sailors killed in the war.

This seems a fine idea, an' it disna clash wi' recruitin' or wi' ither trades or employment. The difficulty wi' a' ither plans is that there arena any workers to spare. A' the men are already at jobs that they canna leave or can only leave to gang on to war work, an' the weel man wha proposed the noo to start as a toymaker wad stan' a fine chance o' gettin' boycotted. Sae here's luck to the Duchess an' her toy factory; an' afore the war is over may she hae got sic a fine grip o' the trade that ilka wean in Britain will come to Motherwell for its toys; and that Germany winna hae a chance in any corner whaur English — Scottish, Irish, or Welsh—is 'spoken.

An African Dialogue Some Years Hence

African dialogue. Time, about the year 1918. Scene, a jungle village in Dahomey. Persons, an European missionary, a native chieftain.

The Missionary: And the earth stretches for thousands of miles from this village to the sea, and beyond the sea there is more land. The earth is round like a pineapple.

The Native: How do you know? Have you ever been around it?

The Missionary: No, but wise men have found it to be so

The Native: Where were you born?

The Missionary: In Little Muddlington.

The Native: Where were you brought up and educated?

The Missionary: In the same place.

The Native: Were you ever in Paris?

The Missionary: Heaven forbid.

The Native: Well, I was. I got a bullet wound through the shoulder near Arras. So they sent me down to a big hospital not far from the Moulin Rouge. The Champs Elysees is a fine thoroughfare. The Eiffel Tower is fine. When I got well they sent me to the Argonne and a Boche stuck a bayonet through the calf of my leg. So they sent me to a hospital in Lyons. It is quite a town.

The Missionary: It must be.

The Native: I was anxious about my children down here. So they let them know by wireless that I was all right. I can work the wireless myself. Have you ever been up in an aeroplane?

The Missionary: No.

The Native: I dropped bombs on the Boches near Ypres. What I'd really like to have is a Victrola with some good Caruso records—New York Post.

A SCENE FROM "THE WORLD & HIS WIFE" AT HIS MAJESTY'S

MISS AUGUSTA LANG AT THE GAYETY

MISS EDNA PRESTON AT HIS MAJESTY'S

MR RAYMOND CAPP AT HIS MAJESTY'S

STOCK GROWING POPULAR

ALTHOUGH the season is only two weeks old, there are already signs that the public is more than favorably disposed towards the idea of stock productions at the West End theatre. There have been large audiences throughout the week to see "The Misleading Lady," and the general verdict is highly favorable.

The Montreal theatre-goer has his peculiarities. In the past he has been the victim of circumstances and unscrupulous New York firms who promised the original cast and then sent a No. 2 or No. 3 company, and tried to bluff it through. This has made him cautious, even captious, and it is no longer possible to palm off theatrical productions of uncertain quality upon him.

But the Montreal theatre-goer, generally speaking, is generous in his appreciation of dramatic attractions of certain merit. There have been some remarkable instances that seemed to prove the contrary, but in nearly every case explanatory or extenuating circumstances could be found. Taking one season with another, plays worth while have not been allowed to go unpatronized.

* * *

The Montrealer likes stock productions. For five years this city has supported a Stock company at the Orpheum when it would support nothing else anywhere to an extent that made it worth while for theatres to stay open. The present unparalleled conditions, brought about largely by the war and partly by the parlous state of the theatre throughout the United States for two seasons past, have created a situation here that seems to warrant the experiment which Mr. Driscoll is engaged in testing out at His Majesty's,—whether Montreal will support a Stock company through the regular theatrical season of the autumn and winter months.

The company with which the season opened was, in part, a company made up of several members of the previous season's aggregation at His Majesty's. Mr. Driscoll has elected to make some changes and has also added several new members to his organization. With the coming of Miss Kemble and Mr. Mackay it will be very materially strengthened, and from that time on every effort will be made to build it into a cohesive and co-operative Stock company, in which the members will, by constant association in plays of widely differing type, gain further confidence in each other and in themselves.

* * *

With the object of interesting others than the theatre-goer who is out for amusement, Mr. Driscoll has a scheme for a prize play contest, of which details will be forthcoming in due course. Any amateur author within a radius of two hundred and fifty miles from Montreal will be eligible. A local committee of competent judges will read the plays, and the winning play will be produced at His Majesty's by the Stock company, and, later on, in New York, if a hearing can be obtained for it there.

The energetic producer at the Castle Square Theatre in Bosdon, Mr. Craig, secured one of the best plays of the season through just such a contest, and it is to be produced in New York in October. It was the work of a Harvard student and it ran in Boston for ten weeks.

Here is an opportunity for genius to reveal itself. We have a good many ambitious writers in Montreal and vicinity. Big things have been achieved from far less pretentious beginnings than is promised here.

NEXT WEEK'S SHOWS

AT HIS MAJESTY'S

"The World and His Wife," made famous by Martin Harvey in England and on this side of the Atlantic by William Faversham, will be Mr. Driscoll's offering at His Majesty's Theatre all next week. It is a modern society drama taken from the Spanish, and was adapted for the English-speaking stage by Charles Frederick Nirdlinger. Martin Harvey used this play in England, where he created quite a furore. While modern in treatment, it reminds one at times of the famous Sheridan classic, "The School for Scandal."

The play deals with the lives of Don Julian, a Spanish Ambassador, and his wife Thodora, who has adopted a young man named Don Ernesto the son of one of Spain's greatest financiers, who, through his devotion to his country, neglected his own interests and died a bankrupt.

Don Severo is a brother of Don Julian, and is constantly filling the ears of Don Julian with tales of gossip caused by the immediate association of Don Ernesto and Don Julian's wife. This constant hinting and intimating that all is not as platonic as Don Julian may imagine between his wife and Don Ernesto causes Don Julian to become embroiled in a cafe altercation with the Secretary of State for Spain, Don Alvereze.

A duel ensues, in which Don Julian is mortally wounded. Don Ernesto takes up the sword of Don Julian and slays Alvereze. The love that really exists between Teodora no longer remains the friendship of former days, but in defiance of the world and its talk Don Ernesto and goes out to face the world.

The role of Don Ernesto will be in Mr. Ancker's hads. Teodora, which is a five acting part, will be played by Miss Barney. Mr. Webb and Mr. Conner both have important parts, and Miss Dow will have a chance next week to do some really great work.

"The World and His Wife" is a gripping play, full of heart interest and cleverly constructed situations, and lends itself to fine scenic effects.

AT THE ORPHEUM

From every viewpoint, the Bell Family is a novelty. To begin with, the nine members of the family are genuine brothers and sisters and while families of this size are not common, it is decidedly unusual that each one should develop an artistic tendency and without exception become a talented musician. The Bell Family, who hail from Mexico, will be one of the stellar attractions of the Orpheum's vaudeville programme next week.

Minnie Allen, a clever Montreal girl, daughter of "Dan" Allen, formerly of the Canadian Pacific Railway, will make next week's programme of especial interest to Montrealers. Miss Allen is one of the most versatile and accomplished little singers on the circuit.

This season "The little volcano of mirth" is showing a very pretentious and elaborate offering. She has seven changes of costumes, and the novelty of the act consists in her making five changes in view of her audience, the dresses appearing and disappearing in a mystifying manner.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Phillips will present their unique comedy playlet, "Sweets to the sweet." They are clever performers and are ably supported. James Duffy and Mercedes Lorenz in a clever skit "Coupons" will be one of the features of the program. The Big City Quartette has been called "The Sweetest Singing Four in Vaudeville." They have proved a welcome and popular feature of the circuit. The Flying Mayos are experts on the swinging bars and the rings. Their act is a thrilling one.

On Sunday, two performances will be given, matinee and evening. The full orchestra under Mr. Bray will be in attendance, and eight first run films and Olive Briscoe, Will H. Ward and Girls, Three Vagrants, Pilcer and Douglas will make up the bill.

THE GAYETY.

With an entirely new show, the Gayety theatre will reopen for the coming season on Monday afternoon. "The Girl Trust," one of Joe Hurtig's companies, will be the attraction and the leading comedian will be Frank A. Burt.

The trend of burlesque for the past three or four years has been upward and this season, according to reports, the producers have reached a high standard.

"The Girl Trust" is in two scenes, embodying a plentitude of refreshing wit and satire, humorous situations, tuneful melodies and spontaneous fun. The scenery is all new and during the action of the musical comedy many new and startling electrical scenic effects will be seen. The chorus of thirty clever young women is a typical Hurtig chorus. All have been carefully chosen and without exception are clever dancers and good singers.

Frank A. Burt is well and favorably known to followers of burlesque as a clever Hebrew comedian. His principal support is Miss Maudie Heath, one of the cleverest and prettiest comediennes of the circuit. She is a recruit from the musical comedy stage. Miss Nellie Francis, the prima donna, Miss Edna Green, the soubrette, Arthur Putman, John Bohlman, Tom Springer and Augusta Lang are among the performers.

THEATRE FRANCAIS.

Anna Morecroft, who jumped off the Longeuil ferry boat and swam to the Maisonneuve side of the St. Lawrence through the current, on Wednesday, will appear at the Theatre Francais for another week. Miss Morecroft performs some out-of-the-way stunts in a 20,000-gallon tank, and proves herself able to stay under water for three minutes at a time.

To prove that she suffers from no discomfort she eats, sews and writes at the bottom of her tank. She is accompanied by two diving girls.

Large crowds have come to the Theatre Francais to see Miss Morecroft since they read of her swim at the beginning of the week. The St. Mary's current is very swift at the point where she crossed it, and numbers of people have been drowned there.

Sam Green and his girls have been rehearsing a new show for next week, which is sure to please the public. They are introducing several singing and dancing specialties.

The show as usual will be supplemented by pictures.

SCALA THEATRE.

Cliff Watson's "Peerless Maids" will open at the Scala Theatre for the Monday matinee. They have a new program of dances and songs which will be sure to please their audience. There will be a special picture offering for Sunday only, when John Barrymore will be shown in the "Dictator," a newly staged film. Blanche Sweet, one of the four greatest favorites of the movie world, will be seen in two films, "The Clue," and "The Country Boy."

"The Clue" will be shown at the theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and "The Country Boy" on Thursday. There will be other first-run comedy and drama films.

AT THE MOVIES

THE IMPERIAL

The newest of Kalem's "Broadway Favorites" features, "Don Caesar De Bazan," a four-act production of the famous romantic drama, comes to the Imperial on Monday and Tuesday. W. Lawson Butt, an English actor who has played the title role over three hundred times, is surrounded by a sterling cast, which includes Alice Hollister, Harry Millarde, Robert D. Walker, Helen Lindroth and others of equal popularity.

On Wednesday and Thursday two feature attractions will be offered—Chaplin as "A Woman," and "The Tide of Times." "A Woman," the latest Essanay-Chaplin release, has already swamped the booking agencies. It is two reels of something entirely different, which is going bigger than even "Work."

Knickerbocker Star Features present what is termed the most novel release of the month, entitled "The Tides of Time." Mary Nash, the versatile Broadway star, is featured with a strong support in Harmon MacGregor, who has just closed a long and successful European engagement.

At the change of program on Friday will be shown two feature pictures that will equal any shown during the week. "The Girl of the Gypsy Camp," and the third chapter of "The Goddess."

In addition to the wonderful photoplays offered, two musical specialty numbers will be provided, John Georg Lango, cellist, and the Manetta Duo.

FAMILY THEATRE.

The Family Theatre have secured the booking of the most successful of farce comedies ever produced on the screen, "Tillie's Punctured Romance." Charles Chaplin, most humorous of comedians on the movie stage; Marie Dressler and Grand Circuit meeting will be held Mabel Norman, can produce a laugh individually. Bunch them together and one has some idea of the two hours' merriment while watching the six reels of this great comedy. This attraction will be shown for the three days commencing Sept. 2.

Mr. West has just returned from New York after engaging a musical stock company which will give its first performance on Monday. The principals at the full rehearsal yesterday gave highly commendable rendering of some of the latest New York song hits.

The chorus contains a number of youthful and pretty girls, and works well together.

Quite a little attention has been given to the selection of comedians. Mr. West, who has been on the boards himself, knows a good comedian and he has been successful in engaging some versatile comic actors who have original repertoires of jokes.

Creatore Here For Three Days

Arrangements have been completed for the appearance here of Creatore, the famous Italian leader and his equally famous band of fifty musicians. shrd cmfwymh ians. But for the fact that Creatore is one of the big attractions of the Toronto Exhibition it is doubtful whether Montreal would have an opportunity of hearing. He will commence his engagement at the Arena on September 16, and continue in the evenings until September 18. The program on one of the evenings will be composed almost entirely of patriotic airs, English, Irish, Russian, French and Canadian.

The tickets will be placed on sale on September 11, and arrangements are being made to handle a large crowd.

SEPTEMBER IN ALGONQUIN PARK.

2,000 feet above sea level, Algonquin Park is one of the most delightful vacation playgrounds in America. Just the out-of-way sort of spot for a delightful holiday in the wilderness. Splendid fishing, pure air, unlimited scope for the amateur photographer, and where health and pleasure abound. Excellent hotel accommodation. September is one of the most delightful months during the whole year for an outing in Algonquin Park. Handsome descriptive literature may be had on application to any Grand Trunk Agent or Miss Jean Lindsay, Manager Highland Inn, Algonquin Park, Ont.

MONTREAL GIRL AT THE ORPHEUM IN VAUDEVILLE

Minnie Allen, a native daughter of Montreal, visits her old home on a return trip of entertainment next week, when she will be seen at The Orpheum Theatre. It will be remembered by her many friends of Montreal West that she used to be in all the amateur shows at St. Anthony Church, while at the same time pursuing her musical education at the convent of St. Ann. Her father is Dan Allen, for many years connected with the Canadian Pacific in Montreal.

Now that Sarah Bernhardt has been announced for a farewell tour this year in America, interest is aroused in Minnie Allen's imitation of the famous actress, which is considered wonderful.

While Miss Allen was studying at the convent of Saint Ann, in Montreal, she made a specialty of French, and is able to speak that language quite as well as English. Indeed she took honors as a pupil for reciting a poem by Rostand.

On several trips abroad she witnessed Madame Bernhardt play before the French populace, and gathered the material she uses in her imitation. The first thing she thought about, however, as any woman would, was the costume in which she would appear. Of course she copied the high collar and long sleeves which Bernhardt made famous, and other details of her appearance, but it was the movements of the arms and the head, and the changes of expression which she studied so many hours, and last, but not least, the expression and intonation of that wonderful voice.

LAST WEEK AT SOHMER PARK

The last week of the summer season at Sohmer Park is at hand. After next week the park will be closed except on Sundays. The program offered for the week of August 29 indicates that the management intend to leave a good memory of its attractions with the public. The Welling-Levering Trio, eccentric novelty cyclists, will present a wheel comedy called, "A Day at the County Fair." John DeLoris and company, champion star shooters, will present an act that they have shown all over the world. The Mercedes Company will appear in a sensational novelty act. John LeClair is regarded as among the best jugglers in his profession. Elliott and Emmerson will offer a singing turn with popular and classic selections. The park band will present a select program, changing daily. Wednesday and Friday are the last gala nights of the season, and from next Saturday until next May the park will only be opened on Sundays.

CURTAIN-RAISER FOR "ANDROCLES AND THE LION"

American playgoers know little of the pleasures of the "curtain-raiser," which is a regularly established thing in English theatres. In this country it would seem that almost the only opportunity for an author to get a playlet produced is in vaudeville.

But in London the one-act play as a prelude to the chief work of the evening is the generally-accented custom, except in those cases where the latter is too long to permit the production of a short play to precede it.

When Lillah McCarthy, Granville Barker and Percy Burton present Bernard Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion" in this city next winter, it will be preceded by a "curtain-raiser," Anatole France's comedy of "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife."

Until its production in New York last spring, this play had never been acted on the English-speaking stage. It is one of the only two plays written by Anatole France, the other being a short play entitled "Au Petit Bonheur." Prof. Curtis Hidden Page, of Dartmouth University, made the English translation, which is used in public performances.

Prof. Page recently wrote Mr. Barker: "I have just discovered the source of 'The Dumb Wife.' It is in Rabelais in chapter 34, Book 3. He tells how he and his fellow-students at Montpelier gave such a play, and outlines the plot in two brief paragraphs. The old play, if ever it lasted except in Rabelais' imagination, is lost now.

"Anatole France certainly did well to recreate it—we really couldn't afford to have it permanently lost. I give you an omen for the attitude of your own audience in Rabelais' closing words about it. 'I never in all my life laughed so much as at the acting of that comedy.'"

GRAND OPERA AT THE PRINCESS BY THE SAN CARLO CO

As the amusement season approaches, interest begins to centre upon the week of grand opera planned at the Princess by the San Carlo organization. Eight different productions are promised by Fortune Gallo, the impressario, who, it is announced, has gathered around him a galaxy of notable singers. A most enjoyable week of song seems assured to opera enthusiasts.

Two nights of opera are to be given under the auspices and patronage of the Baron De Hirsch Institute. The first of these will be Tuesday, Nov. 2nd; the second Thursday, Nov. 4th. It is understood that Mme. Pauline Donalda will come to Montreal and sing upon these occasions.

The eight operas to be sung in Montreal during the week of Nov. 1st will be selected from the following list, embracing the San Carlo company's repertoire: Aida, Lucia, Rigoletto, Thais, Mignon, Masked Ball, Faust, Carmen, Barber of Seville, Romeo et Juliet, La Traviata, Il Trovatore, Cavalleria Rusticana, I. Pagliacci, Zaza and La Boheme.

IS SENT TO JAIL FOR NON-SUPPORT

Because he failed to support his wife and two young children, as he promised to do last April, E. A. Allo was sent to jail yesterday for six months by Judge Leet. The case against Allo was conducted by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Women and Children, and he was convicted on the evidence of his wife. She told the court that last April he had undertaken to pay her $10 a week through the society. Counsel for Allo, who was brought here from Renfrew, Ont., announced that he would appeal the decision. Mrs. Allo admitted, in reply to questions put by her husband's lawyer, that her husband had commenced divorce proceedings against her when they were living in Detroit. But they had been dropped, she said.

GERMAN OFFICERS ENTER A PROTEST

LONDON, August 28 — The three German officers who escaped from Duffryn Camp on August 14 were tried in the military court at Chester yesterday. They complained indignantly that they had been handcuffed when recaptured and had been kept handcuffed within the sight of their comrades and British soldiers and civilians. They contended that this not only was unnecessary in view of the strength of the guard, but was a degrading indignity to German officers, especially as in Germany only the lowest criminals are handcuffed. They maintained, moreover, that it was contrary to the regulations of the British army, and pleaded that the escape of a prisoner from the enemy's country with a view of regaining his homeland was not a crime, but a duty.

The court made no comment on the protests. Judgment was deferred.

SUES ALDERMAN FOR ACCIDENT

As a sequel to an accident which took place on the Upper Lachine Road in St. Pierre aux Liens, an action for $5,000 damages has been entered against Alderman Julien Therrien by F. X. Gauthier, acting as tutor for his minor son Samuel, who was injured, it is alleged, by the alderman's car.

Following the injury to the boy, Alderman Therrien and Giroux, who were said to be in the car which struck him, were summoned before the Recorder's Court in St. Pierre aux Liens, where they were acquitted of any criminal responsibility.

PTE. J. MANSFIELD DIED IN TRENCHES

News has been received by Mrs. Mahon of 3012 Notre Dame street East that Pte. Joseph Mansfield of 29 St. Catherine street, Viauville, has been killed in action at Givenchy while in the German first line trench. She has received, as his next of kin, a letter from the adjutant of the 1st Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force, expressing sympathy and stating that Pte. Mansfield fought very bravely and wished to pursue the Germans at his last moments. His death was almost instantaneous, he died a hero doing his duty for his country, and was buried behind the British line, and the ground will be marked as a Canadian cemetery.

GREEKS READY FOR CALL TO THE COLORS

OTTAWA, August 28.—Two officers of the Greek regular army, Captain Ropis Costoveos and Captain Christ Hungis, both of Athens, are in the capital preparing the three hundred Greek reservists here for a call to the colors.

According to the officers, feeling against Germany runs high throughout their country and isolated skirmishes are even now taking place with the Turkish troops, so hard is it to restrain the Grecian soldiers.

The officers say that wherever they have visited they have found the Greeks ready and more than willing to respond to a call to fight against the Teutonic allies and Turkey.

LACHUTE MAN IS KILLED BY TRAIN

Special to Montreal Star.

LACHUTE, August 28. — Euclide Boileau, a bartender of St. Andrew's East was killed yesterday in an accident to a ballast train engaged in construction work for the new C.N.R. line between Montreal and Ottawa.

The engine was running tender first at a speed of from eighteen to twenty miles an hour. At a point between Ste. Eustache and St. Joseph the rails appear to have sunk. The tender overturned and the fireman shouted to Boileau to jump. Boileau jumped but on the wrong side, the evidence showing that the engine also overturned. Boileau's body was found between the engine and the tender.

Boileau leaves a widow and two children. A verdict of accidental death was returned.

LORD CLANRICARDE LEADS LONELY EXISTENCE NOW

asperated; and second, because the landlord was so impossible. There were several crimes; an agent was shot as he went to chapel; the job was regarded as so dangerous that no man could be got to take it unless a man who was ready to carry his life daily in his hands, and even one of these in the end got tired of the impossible matter and gave up the job. The agent had to go armed; he was everywhere accompanied y a guard of armed police; he lived almost as if he were a functionary in the old Russia, when anarchist dynamitards fought with the aristocracy.

But the weird old man in the chambers in London remained immovable, impenetrable, silent, as remote from all this world of strife and suffering and blood as if he were a malign deity in some subterranean inferno. Evictions were carried out ruthlessly, often with large bodies of police and sometimes even of soldiery, with the peasants holding cabins that had been turned into fortresses and which were defended as vigorously and bravely as the trenches of Flanders today. The Irish landlords themselves were as exasperated against this strange specimen of their class as the tenants, for they knew that he served the purpose of blackening all their characters and thereby helping to rouse public sentiment against them.

TURN POOR PEOPLE OUT.

The Tory Ministers, especially the Tory Chief Secretaries, were more exasperated against him than anybody else, for they were called upon to give him the use of their soldiers and police to carry out the loathsome work of turning poor people out on the roadside and of risking bloodshed which might make their own position impossible. Sir Michael Hicks Beach, who was not a sentimentalist, and had all the respect for property that is characteristic of the old English squire, once refused him the aid of the police to carry out evictions, and there were long discussions in Parliament over a famous dictum of his about using pressure "within the law"—a euphemism for refusing to put the law into operation—which brought down a good deal of criticism on the head of the Tory Minister. But Lord Clanricarde remained as deaf to the Tory Minister as to his tenantry.

At last Parliament had to take the scandal in hand; Lord Clanricarde had not a friend left in any party and a measure was passed which gave a modified power of appropriation; but the jealous eye of the House of Peers left some loopholes. Clanricarde fought the case in court after court up to the House of Lords; he pursued the whole enterprise with the same silent, deadly inflexible purpose; alone against all the world he fought to the end.

And now the end has come. Every court except one, English or Irish, went against him. He struggled on until at last it came to the final court in Ireland, and that court has just decided that he must give up his land. Now the land comes back to the people centuries after it had been torn away from them by the ruthless hands of the Norman conqueror; and the great and historic family of Clanricarde disappears from Irish life.

But the old man gets a quarter of a million sterling, and can look at his pictures and wander in his lonely way through suburban greens and haunts with his face white-bearded like a figure of Old Time, But he must miss the great game which he has pursued so relentlessly and so inflexibly for so many years. But Ireland rejoices at the most signal of all her victories in winning back the Irish land to the Irish people.

KING EDWARD PARK ATTRACTIVE

The attractions of King Edward Park have been appreciated by thousands of Montrealers during the summer months both as a picnic ground and a playground for children. The commodious dance hall is still proving very popular, as is also the boardwalk round the island, which is prettily illuminated.

The steamer trip to the park traverses one of the most interesting sections of the St. Lawrence, from the time it commences from the foot of Pie IX. avenue till it reaches the miniature "Coney Island" of Montreal at Boucherville. The boat trip takes three-quarters of an hour, and the fare includes admission to the park and to the picnic grounds of Isle Gros Bois. The last boat now leaves the island at ten o'clock.

BRIGHT COLORS CHEER HOSPITALS

The following extract from a letter just received from a doctor in one of the Canadian military general hospitals, now in France, will give pleasure to those who have kindly assisted towards the comforts of our wounded soldiers.

"It is rather pathetic to see them arrive. Grimy, unshaven faces, clothes covered with mud, and often in rags; but nearly all smoking. Some were so shocked by their experience that they could not answer any questions. It is a treat to see the slighter cases who can walk, when they have had a tub and get into a clean night shirt and blue dressing gown, and put their few treasures into their "comfort bag." These "comfort bags" come from Canada and contain some cigarettes, gum, etc. They are hung at the head of the bed and the Tommies keep their things in them. The wards look delightfully bright and clean. All convalescents wounded are dressed in a blue uniform with a bright scarlet tie and one sees them all over the place. It was a stroke of genius to give them bright colors to dress in"

TO RAISE $10,000

Special to The Montreal Star.

COBOURG, Ont., Aug. 28.—Campbell, Md., citizens are planing for a big patriotic effort next month. The campaign committee has decided upon $10,000 as the sum to be aimed at. A patriotic picnic will probably be held with addresses by prominent speakers.

SERGT. DOC WELLS NOW A PRISONER

The many friends of Sergt. Doc Wells will be glad to hear that when he was left in the trenches grievously wounded he was not lost, but is now a prisoner at Ohrdruf, Germany. Sergt. Wells was a Montrealer who enlisted out west in the 104th, New Westminster Fusiliers, and formed part of the 7th Battalion. Capt. Caskey of that battalion writing recently described Sergt. F. F. Wells as the life of the battalion, and said that at La Bassee when he had to retire his platoon in order to maintain alignment with others on his flank he had an arm blown away by a shell, and remained alone in the salient while he ordered his comrades to fall back. When last seen he was lying on the parapet firing with his one arm at the advancing Germans, and no one dared hope that he would come through the ordeal alive. He has, however, written to friends in Charlottetown that he is now a prisoner, and everyone who knew him wishes him a speedy recovery from his wounds and an equally speedy release from his captivity.

GIVE MACHINE GUN

Special to The Montreal Star.

HALIBURTON, Ont., Aug. 28—The citizens of the village of Haliburton have decided to give a machine-gun to the Department of Militia for the use of Canadian soldiers at the front.

HOSPITAL WORK HAS BEEN ADDED TO SINCE THE WAR

Annual Report of the General Hospital in Published Form.

Considerable growth in the useful work of the Montreal General Hospital is shown in the annual report of that institution, just off the press. The report of the Board of Management, dealing with the year ended December 31 last, says on this head:

"Since the outbreak of the war there has been an ever increasing demand on the services of the hospital, and while not specially a part of this report, we may say that since the beginning of the present year we have not been able to satisfy this demand, having been compelled to turn away many applicants for indoor treatment, our highest number of indoor patients for one day being 407, while the highest number in the Out Patient in one day was 512 treated."

Under the heading of new departments the report refers to the social service department, which has done good work during the year. F. N. Southam contributed funds for the salary of another helper in this department. Other developments in the hospital were the purchase of an electro-cardiograph for use in study of heart trouble, and the establishment of a department of masage and remedial gymnastics in the Out Patient department in co-operation with the School of Physical Education of McGill University.

DOCTORS ON SERVICE.

Attention is called in the report to the fact that a large number of the attending staff and also of the house staff have volunteered for active service, as well as many graduate nurses

"There is also a great deal of satisfaction," continues the report, "in knowing that the policy of the Medical Board of encouraging the younger men of the medical profession to become connected with the various departments of the hospital and grow up in its service is especially advantageous at this period in our history, because, although so many have answered the call of duty, others are able immediately to step in and efficiently take their places, and we are pleased to say carry on the work along established lines without a break."

The report records with regret the death during the year of two of the oldest members of the Board of Management, David Morrice and J. B. Learmont. A. D. MacTier and Robert Adair were elected to fill the vacancies. In accordance with the rules of the hospital the retirement was announced from the Medical Board of W. A. Molson, M. D., C. M., actively connected with the work of the hospital since 1877.

During the year twenty-six nurses graduated and received their diplomas, bringing the total number of graduates from the training school to 464.

RAILWAY EMPLOYE DIES SUDDENLY

Working yesterday afternoon at a plan in the land department of the Canadian Northern Railway Company 230 St. James street, E. C. Cook, one of the draughtsmen, dropped to the ground. Medical aid was procured, but life was pronounced extinct, heart failure being the cause of death. The deceased, who was about twenty-eight years of age, joined the company just over a year ago. He resided on York avenue.

QUALITY

MORE CAR PER DOLLAR

These are facts, not claims, which make the 1916 six-cylinder, 50 H. P. 7-passenger Touring Car the most remarkable automobile value ever offered in America or Europe within $500 of its price.

MORE POWER
Power increased to full 50 H. P.

MORE ROOM
Size increased to carry seven adult passengers in comfort.

HIGHER QUALITY
Wherever the material that goes into this car has been changed, better material has been used—better steels in vital parts, better leather in the upholstery, better hair in the cushion work, better paint and varnish work. Better manufacturing and inspection methods—in short, it is not possible to build an essentially better car.

LOWER PRICE
Although the size, power and quality have been increased the price has been decreased $500. The Canadian price is

TRADES AND BUSINESS CARDS

Consult the Business Cards in the following columns when you want something a little out of the ordinary—something that is outside of your usual daily requirements—something that cannot be obtained through the ordinary channels of communication. Expert workmen, tradesmen, craftsmen and mechanics can be called at short notice. Special bargains in clothing, furniture, pianos, as well as sundry articles not usually advertised in this way, appear daily in The Star's TRADES AND BUSINESS CARDS column. It's a column to read for profit and use for results.

BRITISH HOLD HEIGHTS OVER GULF OF SAROS

Notable Gains Made in Gallipoli After Most Serious Struggle

LONDON, August 28.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from the Dardanelles, dated August 19, says:

"For the moment the severe fighting has come to a stop along the front of our new positions after the week of battles which followed the landing at Suvla Bay. The most important advantage secured has been a large extension of the territory held by us on the northern shore of the peninsula. Resting upon Suvla Bay, with its left occupying the long ridge which follows the coast inland for several miles, our army holds the plain southward to where the heights of 'Anzac' look down upon it, so that we are in virtual possession from the cliffs over-looking the Gulf of Saros almost to Gaba Tepe."

Describing the charge of the Irish division on a Turkish hill to the left of the Suvla Bay position, the correspondent says:

"The Turks came out to meet them, and most exciting bayonet fighting followed on the saddle between the two crests. Bayonets were flashing and stabbing for several minutes before the Turks began to give way. Then they left the crest and ran down over the ridge, the Irishmen standing up and firing down on them, while at intervals British machine guns on the hills behind drowned the sound of the rifle fire whenever the gunners were able to get a clear view of the fleeing Turks."

VERY DESPERATE FIGHT.

The battle for Sari Bair Hill, which the Australian and New Zealanders captured but were compelled to evacuate because the troops on their left did not advance far enough, was a most desperate one, according to the correspondent, who says:

"The dead lie thick everywhere and the stench is appalling. On the ninth the Turks came down in great numbers from the ridge above and tried to swoop our men off the hill entirely. They themselves were driven back, however, with frightful losses. Being unable to bury their dead, the Turks threw their bodies down the gulley until they were stopped by the nature of the ground, while others thrown after them were stopped by the first. Consequently, the whole gulley is choked with Turkish dead.

"The Australians and New Zealanders have gained another addition to their newly-occupied territory. In their narrow position they now have elbow room and are in touch with our posts across the plain to Sulva Bay. And what is not their least important advantage, they have a supply of fresh water within their own position."

German Planted Loud Kiss on Bryan's Lips

KINGMAN, Kan., August 28.—Never in the most glorious days of the Cross of Gold and the free silver campaign did William Jennings Bryan win on the platform such a tribute of enthusiastic admiration as was paid him by a husky German-American yesterday when he had finished telling why Americans shouldn't travel on British ships.

He was kissed!

John Graber, a six-foot, be-whiskered agriculturist of German birth, who had been sitting in the front row of the local Chautauqua listening with eyes, ears and mouth open to the Bryan eloquence, fought his way to the front as soon as the speech was over, scrambled to the platform, where the ex-Secretary of State was shaking hands with all-comers, flung his arms around Mr. Bryan, and dealt him a resounding smack upon the mouth.

The report of the osculation, which rang through the Chautauqua tent, was following by a shout of applause from the 3,000 persons who had heard it. Mr. Bryan blushed deeply and backed away.

ESTATE TO WIDOW.

Probate of the will of the late William Carruthers, of Montreal, who died at Toronto on July 27 last, has been granted on the application of his widow.

The will is dated May 6, 1909, and by it the testator bequeaths all he possesses to his wife to be "her own absolute property," and constitutes her sole legatee and executrix.

ARE YOU SATISFIED?

When you go home from work at night, are you quite satisfied with your home? Is the neighborhood all that you could wish for? Is your house convenient to the car line? Have you all the conveniences you desire? Is the rent what it should be?

If your answer to any, or all, of these questions is "No," why stay in the place? You can get just what you want in every way by letting the Montreal Daily Star Want Ads find you the very house, or flat, or room, you desire.

Try the Montreal Daily Star Wants at Once and see how quickly and completely you will be suited; the expense will be a mere trifle at that.

Text-books for the second half of the year are the same.

Allowance must be made for the fact that some of the text-books are used in more than one grade, thus bringing down the total cost.

SAME TWO YEARS AGO.

Two years ago The Star pointed out that the cost of text-books in Montreal was at a ridiculously high level as compared with Toronto, higher than in Halifax, St. John or Winnipeg. There has been no improvement. Indeed, the position is, if anything, worse. Readers for the public schools controlled by the Montreal Protestant Board cost $2.30 in 1913. This year they cost $2.55. In one or two grades the cost of authorized books and accessories is slightly lower than it was two years ago; generally, it is higher.

Other phases of the text-book question will be discussed in subsequent articles.

EVERY TRICK OF MODERN WAR IS TAUGHT OUR MEN

Instruction in Musketry and Bayonet Drill at Valcartier Turns Dominion's Volunteers Into Splendid Soldiers in Remarkably Short Time.

(BY CAPT. J. R. BRENNAN)

The system of musketry training as carried on at Valcartier Camp this year is on a very thorough basis and provides a course of instruction that meets the greatly varying degree of experience found in the thousands of men undergoing training there.

Each regiment has several officers that have lately taken a course at the Dominion Musketry School, Ottawa, and a recruits' musketry training begins almost as soon as he reaches camp. Under direction of these instruction he is taught how to handle his rifle properly and carefully. One of the first principles is that the man's rifle is his best friend, in fact really part of him—being his greatest power of either offence or defence. He is taught the parts of the rifle and their uses, how to operate the mechanism, load and fire. The use of the sights and their adjustment is then taught, also the different firing positions.

The work is carried on in a systematic, progressive manner every day for some weeks until the men become familiar with his weapon and thoroughly conversant with its parts.

READY FOR SCHOOL.

He is now ready to start through the musketry school, where the theory of rifle fire, the forces acting or the bullet, its course through the air and how these different things all enlarge or lessen the effective dangerous area of his fire to an enemy on different kinds of ground and under different conditions.

He is then shown the correct alignment of sights by resting the rifle on a tripod and sand bag, and aiming at a bull's eye. The rifle is then moved and the recruit has to set it himself to the satisfaction of the instructor.

When he has secured a correct aim he is tested on the "triangle of error" system, which ensures that he take a consistent aim, the same as the instructors. From there he goes to the index practice rods, which are a very ingenious device giving excellent practice in correct positions, aiming, trigger pressure and steadiness. When the points have been mastered the recruit is thoroughly tested on the sub-target gun machine.

AN UNIQUE MACHINE.

This machine shows the instructor at once just how true a man shoots, and if there is any trouble, just where it is. This machine is a wonderful piece of mechanism; on it is mounted a regular Ross rifle in such a way as to have perfect freedom of action in any direction; this rifle is aimed at a target some sixty feet away, but the shot is registered on a small target about two inches by one and one half inches square place in the machine. Across the face of this target travels a sharp pointer and every slighest tremor made by the rifle is exactly recorded by this pointer, and when the trigger is pressed a sharp point perforates a small hole in the card exactly where the bullet would have struck the target aimed at by the man.

When a man has satisfactorily passed this test he is given a card allowing him to fire the first practice at the rifle ranges.

This range at Valcartier is the largest of any in the world. It is equipped this year with 900 targets, ideally located along the base of a mountain with a wonderful plain stretching for miles to shoot from.

ON THE RANGE.

The first range practice fired is what is known as a grouping practice and is fired at 100 yards. In this the man fires five shots with as nearly the same aim as possible the object being to place them as close together in the target as possible. If they go in a ring four inches in diameter it counts twenty-five, eight inches in diameter, twenty, and twelve inches in diameter fifteen. The score of fifteen is the lowest that will pass and the man has two chances. If he fails on the second he must return to school for further instruction and when passed from there can again try the grouping, continuing in the school work until he can "group."

The second practice is application firing, also at 100 yards. Application fire means that each shot is signaled and a mask put on the target so that any error may be corrected, the object being to strike the bull's eye. Each man must make eighteen points out of a possible twenty-eight or return to the musketry school for instruction until he can. In this way every man gets a good, firm grounding in the work, and is given as much personal instruction as his individual case requires.

From this stage the work carries on into longer ranges and varied targets, also rapid firing and snap shooting. A very interesting target is one the lower half of which is brown, to represent a wooded background, and in the centre a khaki figure representing a man's head. The target is used both for application firing and for rapid fire practice. In this practice the man has forty seconds from the time the target appears until it goes down to fire five shots, and it shows well for future work the number of times the khaki figure gets hit.

The most realistic practice of all is on the snap shooting range. Here a khaki figure, representing the head and shoulders of a man in the firing position, is raised for five seconds and then disappears. In this time the firer has to aim and fire his rifle, and there are times when the hits run from 75 to 80 per cent. These targets are used at different ranges and form a very interesting and realistic practice.

THE MACHINE GUNS.

But probably the most interesting part of the range is where the machine guns are used. These guns, that are proving so useful and effective at the front today, will fire at the rate of 500 rounds per minute, and it takes good men and much training to get the greatest value out of them.

The target fired on is arranged into a number of figures, some in straight lines, others arranged for elevation and depression of the gun, and a man is taught to fire the gun with either a straight side-to-side traverse, or for elevation and depression combined with the side traverse.

There are six men in a gun crew—one to fire, one to feed in full cartridge belts, and four to assist by observing fire, keeping the belts and cartridge boxes full and bringing loaded belts to the gun. Speed and precision are the keynote of machine gun work. Good men are picked and they seem to enjoy the work.

OFFICERS IN CHARGE.

Major Laliberte, machine gun Officer of the 41st Regiment, is senior officer of the brigaded guns of the 7th Infantry Brigade, and together with Lt. R. B. Campbell of the 55th Regiment and Lt. J. Roy of the 57th has a very efficient body of men under his command.

The musketry staff at Valcartier this year are as follows:—

The chief musketry instructor is Capt. A. R. Brennan of the 36th P. E. I. Light Horse, who has been in musketry work for some seven years.

The assistant instructors are: T. H. E. Durman of the 36th P. E. I. Light Horse, who has charge of the musketry school part of the work; Capt. N. Stapleton of the 25th County of London Regiment, London, England; Capt. A. O. Anderson of the 8th Regiment R. R.; Capt. A. Fortin of the 89th Regiment, and Lt. Ganvereau. The four last are in charge of the range practices.

There are also Q.M.S.I. J. A. Juteau, R.C.R., and Sergt. F. P. Buttler, C.B., instructors at the repeat musketry school.

SOLDIER MUST KNOW USE OF BAYONET IN THIS WAR OF WARS.

(By a Member of the McG. O. T. C.)

One sees much of soldiers these days. Detachments, battalions, regiments are constantly marching through the streets. They are to be seen on Fletcher's Field or the Mountain, forming fours, forming sections, platoons, companies, stringing out into extended order, or lying flat and pumping imaginary bullets out of imaginary cartridges at an imaginary enemy. All these things have become, to a certain extent casual incidents of the every day. This is called "soldiering."

But in reality none of these things is the essential. They are all of them, in their own peculiar ways, means to an end. These men did not enlist to form fours. Nor did they enlist to lie on their stomachs and fire real bullets at a very real enemy. They enlisted to fight, and fighting, when one goes down to rock bottom, means the old, everlasting hand-to-hand conflict that must ensue before any real victory is assured. This hand-to-hand fighting, the terrible grapple of two bodies of men, each seeking to utterly destroy the other by thrust or cut, or blow, this is the real essential.

At the end of all things, just as truly as at the end of the rifle, will be found the bayonet. Men have said that this is an artillery war, that it is a spade war, that it is half-a-dozen kinds of a war. But when all is summed up, it will be found that the bayonet was the weapon at the finish. The big guns and the spade play a part, a very big part, but in the last analysis it will be found, probably, that they merely emphasized the bayonet as a decisive weapon.

THE RIFLE'S DISGRACE.

The shrapnel and the machine gun caused the trenches and the same great factors are inevitably, it would seem, deposing the rifle from its honored place to being merely the other end of the bayonet.

In the South African War the rifle was the weapon. The bayonet was put to a thousand illegitimate uses It was regarded more as a domestic convenience, a poker for the camp fire, for instance. But woe to any man found poking a fire with his bayonet in Flanders. For as the worthy Mulvaney said, "Fire takes all the heart out av the steel, an' the next time maybe, that our little man is fighting for his life his bradawl'll break, and so you'll ha' killed him, manin' no more than to kape yourself warm, 'Tis a recruity's trick that. Pass the clanin'-rod, sorr."

MULVANEY KNEW.

Mulvaney knew. The whole British Army knows, or rather knew—for it is the British Army that was the army that a year ago was holding the line desperately and today is no more that is meant. They had had the importance of the bayonet drilled into them for years. They taught the Germans that "cold steel" is a thing to fear.

Then came the trenches, the long line that extends from Switzerland to the sea. That line still holds. Trenches have been developed enormously. The prophets who said that the next war would be fought in the air above the ground, were wrong. It is being fought under the ground.

Practically every offensive, small or great, is preceded by mining. The sap is run under the opponent's trench. The expplosive is packed in. The wires are strung. The switch is attached. The word goes down the line. Bayonets are fixed. The switch is thumbed. A trench becomes a crater and No Man's Land becomes suddenly alive with men trotting steadily across, holding a gleaming point of steel about a yard before the body. The pace increases. At a distance of about twenty yards comes the charge. Then it is get home with the bayonet, hand to hand, a furious, confused melee, every man for himself, but every man trusting in his neighbor to do his part.

The crater that was the trench of the enemy has been won—with the bayonet. Another salient has been pushed forward. The trenches are consolidated. A few insignificant yards of trench have been gained.

If it is a great offensive, such as Neuve Chappelle was to have been, the big guns are great factors in preparation for the bayonet. Hundreds are concentrated along the line. For hours they hurl shells across the miles. They smash away the barbed wire. They blow down the parapets. They make every road by which reserves might advance to the front trenches impassable. Then, when a complete superiority of fire has been gained, when the morale of the enemy must be shaken, out spring those active figures once again with the steel shining at the end of the black barrel of their rifles. It is the steel that finishes it.

The rifle still has its use, the need of musketry instruction must not be underestimated, but it is not the offensive weapon that it once was. The bayonet is to the fore once again.

THE BAYONET NEGLECTED.

Instruction in the use of the bayonet was never given much thought in Canada before the war. Few were the militia regiments which received any real training in the various guards and thrusts. To be able to present arms properly was much more important than to know how to deliver a stiff "point" with leg work behind it. There were cups for shooting and rifle associations and rifle ranges, but grants for bayonet instructors were few and far between.

Yet the climax of all engagements is the assault and the climax of the assault is the charge. The gallant soldiers may have gained a marked superiority of fire, they may have opened the way for a splendid victory. The command is given to "charge". They trot across the open. They increase their speed. They hit the opposing line, hard, and together, like a well-trained football team, and yet, if they have not had full efficient bayonet instructions they will go down like nine-pins before a "Strike" bowl.

For the opposing line, if it knows anything of warfare, and the Germans know a great deal, it will meet the bayonet charge with a counter-attack. This is not made when the line advances out of the trenches. The force that initiates the charge cannot use their rifles effectively. Remaining in their trenches, sheltered from the artillery fire that to some extent covers the advancers of the charging line, they pour bullets across the open. They have a very good target and the firing is maintained as long as is possible.

THE NEED FOR PRACTICE.

This one detail of bayonet fighting illustrates the necessity for constant practice with the bayonet. Otherwise the soldier will not know how to make use of every ounce of the twelve pounds which the rifle weighs. He will not know how to break down the defence of the enemy, he will not know how to use the butt, or how to trip his opponent, or when to bring his knee up sharply.

BETTER TRAINING.

The Battalions now being trained in Canada are getting much more work with the bayonet than those which went with the First Division. They receive their training in England. Now, as the pictures show, at Valcartier the men are being taught constantly the various moves of offense and defense. Lieut. Col. Davidson will have two officers who are qualified instructors, and a number of non-commissioned officers who have taken the course, in the 73rd.

The 11th Battalion when at Bulford on Salisbury Plain, set other units a splendid example. They clubbed together and bought spring bayonets, masks and padded suits and learned more during a few hours' actual fighting than the others did in weeks.

ABILITY TO LIE IS A GOOD ASSET DECLARES DOCTOR

Dr. William Brady, writing in the Chicago Herald, makes the daring and interesting statement that "the better liar a doctor is the more certain is he to have a large and lucrative practice."

He justifies his statement thus: If he were to tell the truth as a matter of habit his patients would and should desert him. G. B. Shaw declared that the family doctor dare not tell the truth, for fear his patients would call another doctor. That isn't the reason.

What difference would it make who does the lying, so long as it is done artistically and with finesse? The doctor dare not tell the truth because he is under oath to follow out a Hippocratic maxim. Do good if you can, but do no harm. Habitual lying is the doctor's method of doing no harm.

TWO SORTS OF MEDICAL LIES.

It must never be forgotten that there are two great classes of species of lies: lies intended to benefit the victim and lies likely to injure the victim. Certain diagnostic lies—like telling a patient he has a "weak spot" in one lung, or a "slight catarrhal condition in the right apex," when the fact is the doctor doesn't know for sure whether it is tuberculosis or not—such lies are unworthy of a self-respecting man. But when the patient already knows what is the matter with his lungs and is receiving the benefit of proper treatment for the tuberculosis, then it is fair and right for the doctor to lie to him habitually—make him out better than he is in order to keep up the courage.

Diagnostic lies may do much harm, but the therapeutic lie, the habit of lying, is a factor of health not sufficiently realized by many people.

A CASE OF ILLUSTRATION.

An elderly woman was ill with pneumonia, under the care of her niece, a graduate nurse. The progress of the disease was fairly moderate, as such cases go, until the end of the first week. Then one night about 12 o'clock the nurse hastily summoned all the members of the family and sent for the doctor.

On arriving at the house the doctor found every one in tears. The nurse met him outside of the sick room with the information that she feared it was all over. On feeling the patient's pulse the doctor realized that she was extremely weak. But he was young, optimistic and aggressive. It annoyed him, to have the family crowding round, crying and muttering halfwhispered prayers.

He turned to the nurse and issued some orders. "She'll come around all right," he declared. "Get busy, now."

"Oh, doctor, she's dying now," the nurse insisted. "She's knew it herself —she asked for the family so she could bid them good-by."

"You hurry up and get that hypodermic ready," ordered the doctor.

Having routed the nurse, he next turned his attention to the family. "Now, dear people, you must all leave the room at once. When the time comes I will call you back, but for the present we need all the air and room there is here."

He shooed them out of the room, remarking once of twice in very firm tones: "Certainly not! She'll come around in a little while I promise you. Just wait half an hour and see!"

All this time the patient lay unconscious. But one may be unconscious and still capable of receiving certain impressions—noci-association impulses as Dr. Crile has termed them. That is, although the consciousness is in abeyance, certain of the brain centers are still awake and active and these centres can still "feel" impulses from the outside world, particularly fear impulses. And, whether intentionally or not, the doctor was ministering to these subconscious or vital brain centers. He was endeavoring to change the environment from that of despair to that of hopefulness and assurance.

As a matter of fact the patient recovered and is alive today. She never knew how near death the fears of her family had brought her, nor how bravely the doctor lied in order to supply an antidote to the evil effects of those fears! Of course, this is only an incident possibly a coincidence but, nevertheless, the doctor in the case firmly believes that psychology, mental therapeutics, practical Christian Science, whatever name you please to give the treatment, was the straw that saved her.

One hears of miracles produced by the doctors' famous bread pills. A few of those stories undoubtedly are based upon facts. The most of them are very commendable lies—the doctors get into the habit of lying for patients' good and it is hard to stop it even out of office hours.

BABY FAIRMAN.

"Owes his life to Virol"

St. Clement's Maternity Home,
Fulham Palace Road, S.W.

Dear Sirs,

The Virol Babies at our Fête were beautiful specimens, and were much admired.

Baby Fairman, the splendid little fellow who tied for the first prize, owes his life to Virol. Some months ago he wasted to a skeleton; he was in hospital, but got no better, and was thought to be a hopeless case. When the mother took him home, it occurred to her to give him Virol. She sat up night and day for three weeks, putting a small quantity of Virol on his lips every now and then with a feather—and afterwards giving Virol and milk. He has taken Virol regularly since, and to-day is the picture of health and happiness.

I find babies thrive wonderfully on Virol, and in cases of wasting it is invaluable.

Cobourg Doctor For the Front

Special to The Montreal Star.

COBOURG, Ont., Aug. 28.—Dr. John R. Irwin, one of Cobourg's most popular physicians, has left to join the Royal Army Medical Corps in England for active service at the front.

Doctor Irwin is a member of the Town Council and Mayor Duncan and the members of the council and many prominent citizens were at the depot to see him off.

The doctors of the town presented Doctor Irwin with a solid gold wrist watch and the matrons and nurses at the Cobourg hospital gave him a signet ring.

It was announced at the Royal Victoria Hospital this morning that the improvement shown by Sir William Van Horne was so marked that it is unlikely that any further bulletins will be issued. He is gaining strength rapidly and his condition gives every hope for recovery.

Ald. Chartrand Still on Strike

Ald. Chartrand is on strike. He declines to sit in the City Council and is emphatic that he will not return till "I get my man back."

It is all over a little matter of a foreman. Ald. Chartrand claims that a foreman in his ward was removed without cause. The foreman had worked very hard for the ward and, when the duties became less exacting, was removed to another ward.

In connection with this affair, Ald. Chartrand a short time ago resigned his seat in the Council. His colleagues, however, declined to accept the resignation. Now, Ald. Chartrand refuses to attend Council meetings till he has his way.

CANADIAN WHEAT FOR NEW ZEALAND

Special to The Montreal Star from Our Own Correspondent.

OTTAWA, August 28 — The Government of Canada has purchased a million bushels of wheat for New Zealand, and it is now announced that the delivery has been so rapid that all of it is now in storage in Montreal.

The New Zealand Government will arrange for transportation of the wheat to its destination. Fifty thousand bushels have been shipped this month and a like quantity will go in September.

The Croton River, which furnishes to New York the greater part of the water consumed in its limits, was named for an Indian chief.

ROOSEVELT HITS AT POLICY OF THE PRESIDENT

Theodore Roosevelt, speaking on the drill plain of the United States Military Instruction Camp at Plattsburg, denounced the hyphenated American, the professional pacifist, the poltroon, the "college sissy" and the man with "a mean soul." Later he gave out for publication a statement in which he said Americans should stand by the President, but only so far as he was right, and spoke contemptuously of "elocution as a substitute for action."

Just before leaving camp Colonel Roosevelt dictated the following statement:

"I wish to make one comment on the statement so frequently made that we must stand by the President. I heartily subscribe to this on condition and only on condition that it is followed by the staement so long as the President stands by the country.

"It is defensible to state that we stand by the country, right or wrong; it is not defensible for any free man in a free republic to state that he will stand by any official right or wrong, or by any ex-official.

"Even as regards the country, while I believe that once war is on, every citizen should stand by the land, yet in any crisis which may or may not lead up to war, the prime duty of the citizen is, by criticism and advice, even against opinion of his fellow citizens, to insist that the nation take the right course of action.

"There is even a stronger reason for demanding of every loyal citizen that after the President has been given ample time to act rightly and has either not acted at all or has acted wrongly, that he shall be made to feel that the citizens whom he has been elected to serve, demand that he be loyal to the honor and to the interests of the land.

"The President has the right to have said of him nothing but what is true; he should have sufficient time to make his policy clear; but as regards supporting him in all public policy, and above all in international policy, the right of any President is only to demand public support because he does well; because he serves the public well, and not merely because he is President.

"Presidents differ, just like other folks. No man could effectively stand by President Lincoln unless he had stood against President Buchanan. If, after the firing on Sumter, President Lincoln had in a public speech announced that the believers in the Union were too proud to fight, and if instead of action there had been three months of admirable elocutionary correspondence with Jefferson Davis, by midsummer the friends of the Union would have followed Horace Greeley's advice, to let the erring sisters go in peace—for peace at that date was put above righteousness by some mistaken souls, just as it is at the present day.

"The man who believes in peace at any price or in substituting all inclusive arbitration treaties for an army and navy should instantly move to China. If he stays here, then more manly people will have to defend him, and he is not worth defending. et him get out of the country as quickly as possible. To treat elocution as a substitute for action, to rely upon high sounding words unbacked by deeds, is proof of a mind that dwells only in the realm of shadow and of sham."

HUNS' TRENCHES NORTH OF ARRAS ARE DESTROYED

Nurse Killed in Compiegne by Long-Range German Fire

ITALIANS REACH CENTRAL TRENTINO

Russians Announce Forts of Brest-Litovsk Blown Up

PARIS, August 28.—The War Office last night made public the following official communications:

"On a great many points of the front our artillery has concentrated on the German positions a very efficacious fire. To the north of Arras German trenches have been upset and a munition depot destroyed.

"Between the Somme and the Oise, German encampments have been shelled.

"The enemy fired at long range seven shells on the City of Compiegne, causing some damage and killing a nurse and seriously wounding another nurse.

"The Germans have violently shelled the village of Blenod-les-pont-a-Mousson, the City of Thann and Vieux Thann. In the region of Ammertzviller our shells started many fires."

Brest-Litovsk Garrison Safe

PETROGRAD, August 27, via London, August 28. — The following Russian official statement concerning the progress of hostilities was given out here tonight:

"The situation in the Riga region is unchanged.

"In the directions of Bausk and Birpa, towards Frederickstadt, on Wednesday and Thursday, the enemy pursued a vigorous offensive against our troops defending this region. There has been obstinate fighting during the last few days on the roads toward the south of the Taukrekalm-Neuhut Railway. In the direction of Dvinsk, north of the railway line between Dvinsk and Poniewesch, our troops on Thursday, pressed the Germans on the front Ponedli-Shopiehki.

"Towards Vilna there was no important change on Wednesday.

"On the middle Neimen, on the front between the courses of the Bobr and Pripiall the retreat of our troops, covered by rearguard, continues.

"Most energetic attempts by the Germans to take the offensive during Wednesday night and Thursday in the Bialystok region and north of Bialystok were successfully stopped by us and cost the enemy heavy losses.

In the region of Brest-Litovsk we blew up the fortifications in conformity with orders and our troops forming the garrison of these forts rejoined the army in the field.

"In Galicia there is no essential change."

The following official statement was issued today at the headquarters of the army of the Caucasus:

"In the coastal region Wednesday our scouts crossing the Arkhave River, destroyed a Turkish blockhouse by means of hand grenades.

"One of our motor-boats, sank two sailing vessels and their cargoes."

Italians Penetrate Heart of Trentino

ROME, August 28 — The Italians have penetrated nearly to the heart of Trentino and are breaking into the entrenched positions of Trent, the exterior forts of which at certain points are under fire from the Italian artillery.

Italian troops have moved forward from Monte Civaron and Torrente, where they have been solidly established for several weeks, to the still more advanced positions of Monte Armentera and Monte Salubio. As a result, Borgo, though not occupied, is well within the Italian lines.

The Italian guns now also are within range of Fort Panarotta, one of the principal strongholds barring access to the old town of Trent.

The advance along precipitate mountain tops on both sides of the Brenta was resumed ten days ago, when the Austrians opened up a furious fire from Fort Panarotta on the Italian troops as soon as the latter had occupied the positions on Monte Cona Cimonrava and Monte Civaron. The Italians, however, continued to advance and have moved several kilometres further down the valley of Sugana.

Two other forts defending the high ridge of Lavarome, on the summits of Rusa Vrie and Spitz Verle, are now also under fire of the Italian batteries. Fierce artillery actions are raging in this part of Trentino.

Heavy cannonading against the Austrians forts also continues further east in a high Alpine district.

In the occupied territory the Italians continue to advance. Also they are preparing winter quarters.

The advance on the Isonzo progresses by hundreds of metres each day. The Austrians are clinging to some points on the Isonzo and at the eastern extremity of the Carso Plateau. Although they have concentrated in their present position many fresh troops and countless guns, their position is believed to be critical.

The following official statement from main headquarters of the Italian army, dated August 27 was given out here last night:

"New and hardy operations were carried out during the day of August 25 on the rugged peaks of Adamello range. While our advancing troops made a demonstration on the small Tonale plateau and behind Monticello, mountaineer detach-Pasagna Pass, attacked the position of Lagoscuro, Pass—8,500 feet high—and Corno di Bedole—9,000 feet high—which were strongly held by the enemy. The latter opposed a desperate resistance, but was finally forced back and pursued. Our troops established themselves firmly on the peaks.

"On the evening of the same day, favored by a full moon, our seaplanes threw bombs on the fortifications of Riva (at the northern end of Lake Garda) and avoiding the fire of the enemy's anti-aerial batteries, returned unscathed to our lines.

"In Val Sugana enemy artillery bombarded Borgo, although our troops in their recent victorious advance purposely abstained from occupying that populous locality keeping on the surrounding mountains.

"On the upper Cordevole the artillery duel is becoming more fierce. Enemy artillery again bombarded the military hospital at Pieve Di Livinallongo, causing further serious damage. Our batteries then bombarded Arabba and Cherz where active movements of troops and waggons were perceptible and where artillery was reporeed in position. Arabba soon was a mass of flames.

"On the Carso yesterday the enemy, having seen that our troops had taken possession of a small wood close to the road from Sdraussina to San Martino, opened a heavy artillery fire on it and then sent troops to attack. A violent struggle followed, which ended in the flight of the enemy while our troops strengthened their hold on the conquered position."

BERLIN, Aug. 27, via London, Aug. 28.—The following official communication was issued today by the German Admiralty:

"On Wednesday evening one of our small cruisers bombarded the Russian signal station on the cape south of Ristna on Dago Island (just outside the Gulf of Riga).

"At the same time another small cruiser bombarded the signal station at Adreasburg on Dago Island. No enemy forces were sighted."

VIENNA'S LATEST CLAIM.

VIENNA, Aug. 27, via London, Aug. 28.—The Russians, who were driven back at Brest-Litovsk are retreating on both sides of the railway to Minsk, according to an official statement issued today at the Austrian War Office. The text of the communication follows:

"Russian war theatre—The enemy, beaten at Brest-Litovsk, now is in full retreat on both sides of the railway to Minsk (about 15 miles northeast of Brest-Litovsk). The troops of Archduke Joseph Ferdinand have proceeded through the burning town of Wamieniez-Litovsk.

"On the Lesva, German troops are pursuing the Russians from the west and south in the direction of Kobrin.

"At Kovel, Vladimir-Volynskyi and in eastern Galicia there has been no change.

"Italian war theatre — There were battles of some importance near Flitsch yesterday. Our troops repulsed a hostile attack against their valley positions."

A BALL OF PAPER WAS MISSING WILL

A little round ball of paper which Mrs. Charles R. Vincent dug out of the pocket of an old sweater she was washing made her heir to real estate valued at $500, says the Philadelphia North American. The paper proved to be her husband's will.

Vincent died on March 29. His widow knew he had made a will, but a five months' search failed to reveal where he had put it.

Recently she took down the sweater her husband had worn, and which had been hanging in a closet since his death. She washed it and was about to wring it out when she noticed a lump in one of the pockets.

Mrs. Vincent unrolled the paper, dried it and ironed it out. It bequeathed real estate at Pine Brook, N. J., to her. The widow took the paper down to the city hall and had it admitted to probate.

How to Lose Your Tan, Freckles or Wrinkles

A day's motoring, an afternoon on the tennis ground or golf links, a sunbath on the beach or exposure on a sea trip, often brings on a deep tan or vivid crimson, or more perplexing still, a vigorous crop of freckles. A very necessary thing then is mercolized wax, which removes tan, redness or freckles quite easily. It literally peels off the affected skin—just a little at a time, so there's no hurt or injury. As the skin comes off in almost invisible flaky particles, no trace of the treatment is shown. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at your druggist's and use this nightly as you would cold cream, washing it off mornings. In a week or so you will have an entirely new skin, beautifully clear, transparent and of a most delicate whiteness.

Wrinkles, so apt to form at this season, may be easily and quickly removed by bathing the face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pint. This is not only a valuable astringent, but has a beneficial tonic effect also. —Advertisement.

ORILLIAS THANKS HON. J. L. DECARIE

Orillians generally, we feel sure, would like the Hon. Mr. Decarie to realise how much his coming the long journey of 600 miles to attend the Champlain celebration here is appreciated. It is no exaggeration to say that the Quebec Minister's presence—the eloquence, good taste, courtesy and historic interest of his addresses—gave an added distinction to an occasion in itself memorable, which would have been much missed. Not only was it gracious of the Provincial Secretary to come; it was kindly and considerate of the Prime Minister of Quebec to commission him as the accredited representative of himself and his Government. So, in once more thanking the gentleman who came, and whose acquaintance Orillians were so happy to make, we ask Premier Gouin to accept our assurance that the quality of his colleague was appreciated by his hosts here, and that he left behind him happy memories which shall not soon fade.

SENSATIONAL SALE OF TRAVELLING GOODS

We bought up the surplus stock of one of the best trunk manufacturers in Canada at an almost ridiculous price. We are going to rush them out Monday at prices which make this the most exceptional travelling goods offering we have made for many months.

Leather Club Bags, 16 and 18 inches long, made of very heavy leather with British frame and brass mountings, swing handle, leather corners, lined with inside pockets. Now there are not very many of these and we sold exactly similar cases in regular stock before at $4.95 and $5.25 each. Monday while they last, each........... $3.75

Cowhide Leather Suit Cases, 24 and 25 inches long, and extra deep, lined with Irish linen, 1¼ inch heavy outside straps, shirt folder in cover. A suit case we'd have to sell at $8.95 in the ordinary way. Monday... $6.95

Fibre Suit Cases, similar construction, but of fibre, instead of leather. Monday........ $3.75 Instead of $5.25.

Matting Suit Cases, which we have always sold before at $1.50. Light but strongly and substantially made. Monday. $1.29
