

Historic Events Witnessed by Nations Which Crossed Swords on American Soil During Revolutionary War

ONE OF THE PLEASURABLE INCIDENTS OF THE ROYAL VISIT TO PARIS—Their Majesties the King and Queen leaving the Hartford British Hospital—an institution that primarily exists for the purpose of caring for the British ill in Paris, although its doors are open to all. Their Majesties were tendered a remarkably enthusiastic reception at this institution, and evinced the kindest interest in the patients. In the above picture they are seen returning to their motor car after completing their tour of inspection of the building.

HEROES WHO WERE HONORED AS ADMIRALS—Seventeen youthful members of the United States Navy, who fell at Vera Cruz, were recently accorded military honors such as are only paid to deceased Admirals. In solemn processional march, with the President leading the mourners, they were escorted through New York, while bells tolled, flags fluttered at half-mast, and dense lines of humanity gazed silently and bared their heads to do them reverence. In the above picture the cortege is passing through the City Hall Plaza.

HEROES WHO WERE HONORED AS ADMIRALS—After the procession had reached the Brooklyn Navy Yard an impressive religious service was conducted, at which President Wilson delivered an oration. The bodies of the dead were then shipped to relatives for further honors in their native cities. The above picture perpetuates the funeral exercises in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, which were witnessed by 50,000 people.

HIS Majesty the King recently created a precedent by attending the Burnley-Liverpool Soccer Match at the Crystal Palace, London. It was the first occasion on which a British Sovereign had officially attended a soccer game. His Majesty's visit is illustrated on this page.

A GREAT MOMENT IN SOCCER HISTORY—The King presenting the famous English Cup to Burnley, the winners over Liverpool in the final game at the Crystal Palace on April 25th. The score was 1 to 0, and the game was made memorable by the presence of the King. This was the first occasion on which a reigning monarch had attended a Cup Final. Our picture shows part of the great gathering which witnessed the event and remained till the King presented the Cup to Burnley's captain.

PICKING OFF THE MEXICANS—United States marines at the water works at Vera Cruz, picking off Mexicans who resisted the seizure of the water plant by the United States. (Copyright International News Service.)

HOW AN ARMY MAKES TELEPHONE CONNECTIONS—Lieut. Richardson, of the United States Army, telephoning back to headquarters at Vera Cruz from the water works, (where he had held a conference with Major Sinancar of the Mexican forces), using the rails of the railway for conductors. Ulster Volunteers' Reception of British Warships--Canadian Minister of Militia on Southern Battlefields

HOW THE ULSTER VOLUNTEERS RECEIVED THE BRITISH WARSHIPS AT BELFAST—As the men-o'-war dropped anchor in Belfast Lough, the Union Jack was raised to the masthead of the signalling station of the Ulster Volunteer Force and the Volunteers on the quay sang the first verse of the National Anthem. The sailors and marines of the warships responded to the "salute" by singing the second verse of the Anthem. A little later the sailors who secured "shore leave" were fraternizing with the men whose opposition to Home Rule had resulted in the despatch of the warships to Belfast. The above picture perpetuates the raising of the Union Jack.

cleverly thrown across the deep furrow formed by the river bed, which in the early feudal times proved a natural fortification of great value. The old part of the city, occupying this striking promontory, has carefully preserved its attractive medieval features; modern Berne, however, forms an assembly of smart dwelling houses and elegant villas, charmingly framed in a mass of verdant foliage and artistically laid out gardens. A delicious old-world atmosphere greets the newcomer as soon as he emerges from the railroad station, and when he happens to have the good luck of arriving on one of those most important market days, he forgets that his first object was to visit a diplomatic city, and rejoices in the fact that he is given a chance to come into close contact with the congenial peasant folk. Not far away from the railroad station the Spitalgasse beckons to us—a typical street of old Berne with the picturesque Laubeu (arcades), which form the most distinctive feature of Bernese architecture. Chronicles of the middle ages refer to them in a special paragraph, stating that "what is especially charming, all the houses are adorned with arcades towards the street, so that one may in rain or storm walk through the streets of the town "dry-shod," and as of old, so are these cosy arcades to-day the chief means of circulation for pedestrians.

THE FOURTH DESTROYER FLOTILLA AT BELFAST—As a result of the gun-running by the Ulster Volunteers at Larne the British Admiralty despatched a flotilla of warships to Belfast Lough to preserve the peace. The above picture shows the flotilla riding at anchor in Bangor, Ireland—a short distance away from Belfast. The Ulster Volunteers gave the men of the warships a splendid welcome.

THE RECENT VISIT OF THE CANADIAN MINISTER OF MILITIA TO HISTORIC UNITED STATES BATTLEFIELDS—In the above picture the Hon. Sam Hughes and his members of his party are standing in front of the "Stonewall" Jackson Memorial at Chancellorsville, Virginia. This monument marks the site where General Jackson was mortally wounded by his own pickets on the night of May 2, 1863. At the close of the day he was reconnoitering the hostile positions when suddenly the Confederate opened fire upon his staff whom they mistook in the dark for Federal cavalry.

THE OPENING OF THE SWISS NATIONAL EXHIBITION—The Zähringer Fountain and the Ancient Clock Tower at Bern, in which city the Swiss National Exhibition is now being held. The Clock Tower is perhaps the best known landmark of Switzerland's capital. It is the oldest of Bern's ancient gateways, and dates from the fifteenth century. Its curious clock is described in the article that is published on this page.

THE RECENT VISIT OF THE CANADIAN MINISTER OF MILITIA TO HISTORIC UNITED STATES BATTLEFIELDS—The Sunken Road or "Bloody Lane" at Antietam, Maryland. Here, on September 17, 1862, the North and South struggled for supremacy and the narrow road was literally filled with the dead of both armies who had fallen in the attacks and counter attacks that took place on this section of the battlefield.

Swiss National Exhibition at Berne.

MUCH has been written about the capitals of Europe, their situation, attractions and individual charms, and those who journey abroad make it their religious duty to at least pay homage to London, Paris, Berlin and Rome. They visit Switzerland, of course, but the majority of them are totally ignorant of the fact that the "little Alpine

All the houses in this part of the city are built alike; they are simple, but solid structures of sandstone blocks, mostly three stories, high and sheltered by projecting high-gabled roofs which lend an inviting, homelike aspect to the whole. Bright geraniums and other flowers bloom in profusion before the windows, and the dainty curtains behind each and every one of them suggest the presence of a proud and energetic "Hausfrau." The floral decoration of the windows has of late been strongly advocated and encouraged by the everyday traffic. In Biblical times already we find the fountains mentioned as a meeting place, and while they are not used to the same extent in these modern days, yet we perceive that they are frequently patronized. Horses and cattle are watered here, and the children take a particular delight in making a fountain the centre of their playground. Yea, some old-fashioned women could not imagine the possibility of a successful wash day, if they were not able to avail themselves of the abundant water supply of some fountain, and republic" possesses a capital which is unique in its captivating beauty, its historic associations and quaint and picturesque corners. On his approach to the capital of the Swiss confederation—Berne—the traveller is immediately struck by the imposing position which the city occupies, high up on a rocky peninsula formed by the river Aar, winding its way 100 feet below. Bridges of ancient and modern construction are municipal authorities who have more-over undertaken to beautify the already handsome fountains in a similar manner. Berne's fountains are the pride of her citizens, and an object of admiration on the part of her visitors. The constant merry babbling of a spring brings life into the greatest solitude and the sweet monotony of the flowing water seems to soften any harsh and irritating noises caused by the so it often happens that one can enjoy the most picturesque and animated scenes at the foot of one of those fascinating, silent fountain statues. These fountain figures, which are mainly emblems of the various trade corporations, or guilds, are the most precious reminders of Renaissance art in Berne, and as they have in recent years been restored in their original gay colors, their unique beauty can again be seen to full advantage.

THE OPENING OF THE SWISS NATIONAL EXHIBITION—This event took place on Friday of last week in the presence of the President of the Swiss Republic and a large gathering, representative of almost every nation under the sun. The site of the Exhibition is on an elevated plateau on the north-west of Berne. It is open to the east and south and commands from every part a splendid view of the Bernese Oberland. The area of the Exhibition grounds measures some 500,000 square metres, of which total 135,000 metres are covered with buildings. The remainder of the site is laid out in such a way as to harmonize with the neighboring forest. The above picture shows one of the beautiful chalets in the Exhibition grounds.

The venerable clock tower in Kramgasse, where we find the Zähringer fountain, is perhaps one of the best known landmarks of Switzerland's capital. It is the oldest of Berne's ancient gateways, dating from the fifteenth century. What has rendered it particularly famous is a curious astronomical clock with a most complicated mechanism, about which the chronicle state that:

"As often as the hour strikes a troop of little bears go round in a circle, a cock crows three times

ROYAL VINOLIA TOOTH PASTE.

THE question of Good Teeth in relation to health is a most important one, for much ill-health is traceable to defective teeth. To keep the teeth sound, the regular use of a good dentifrice becomes imperative. A dentifrice to be really effective must possess a combination of qualities—it must be antiseptic and a deodoriser—it must be able to counteract the enamel-destroying acids which are always present in a greater or lesser degree. It must give tone to the gums and a pearly whiteness to the teeth. Royal Vinolia Tooth Paste meets all these requirements and is, moreover, refreshing and pleasant to the taste, so much so that children use it readily.

before and once after the clock strikes. A sitting man holding a staff in one hand and an hour-glass in the other counts the strokes by opening his mouth and striking with his stick at every stroke of the clock. Another wooden mankin rings two little bells when the hour is about top of the tower are the bells and beside them stands a figure of the Duke of Zahringen in armor, who strikes the hours on the bells with his sceptre as this was too feeble it was replaced by a hammer.)"

Friend bruin, as the heraldic animal of Berne, plays a most prominent role everywhere, and live specimens have been maintained by the city in a special pit for over 400 years.

Returning to the old part of the town, we pass the noble gothic structure of the Cathedral of St. Vincent, with its artistically decorated main portal, and its exquisitely beautiful interior. The spire is 328 feet high, and the belfry contains nine of the most beautiful bells to be heard in the whole of Switzerland.

But we must not overlook the fact that we are in the capital of Switzerland! There, glittering in the sunlight, high above the surrounding buildings, is the imposing cupola of the federal palace, the handsome and dignified seat of the Government. It is a noble edifice in Florentine Renaissance style and consists of three adjacent buildings of which the centre one—the Parliament house—is the most important. Six allegorical figures, symbolizing Agriculture, Science, Commerce, Industry, Art and below these on the frieze are the coats-of-arms of the twenty-two cantons, executed in mosaic. On the north front stands the statue of Helvetia, with two side figures representing legislature and executive power. The interior, with its different council and committee rooms, etc. is ornamented with handsome carvings and decorated ceilings.

Berne is, however, not only Switzerland's diplomatic city; it is also a prominent centre of learning, with a university and an abundant choice of excellent schools. It is a city with a fascinating charm of its own, still enhanced by a rare natural beauty, and it is therefore not to be wondered at that Swiss people, when deciding upon the site of their third National Exhibition chose their delightful capital, which is just admirably suited for such an occasion, as it is in particular easy reach from all parts of Switzerland and Europe generally.

Switzerland has only arranged two National Exhibitions so far; one at Zurich in the year 1883, and another at Geneva in 1896. While the progress and development achieved during the interval between these two exhibitions was pronounced as altogether wonderful for a country with limited resources, the reports about the present exhibition indicate that it will be a revelation even to those who know the country intimately.

The mere fact that Switzerland exports a large amount of her products, should be enough in itself to render an exhibition of Swiss industries of the utmost interest to visitors from foreign countries.

In limiting the exhibition to national products only, it naturally follows, that owing to the comparatively small area of Switzerland, the hope of organizing a national exhibition in the truest sense of the word can fully realized. While international exhibitions, or those held in larger countries, are by their very size compelled to specialize in one or more kindred departments, it will be possible in Berne to give a complete and harmonious display of the entire industrial and social life of the Swiss people, such as will not soon be seen again.

The site of the exhibition is on an elevated plateau to the north west of Berne, on the borders of the Bremgarten Forest. It is open to the east and south and commands from every part a wonderful view of the Bernese Oberland. The area of the exhibition grounds measures some 500,000 square meters, of which 135,000 are covered with the buildings.

Heroes Who Were Honored As Admirals.

GLORIOUS in death, because in the eyes of their commander-in-chief, the President of the United States, they died in Mexico for mankind, in a war of service rather than aggression, seventeen youthful members of the United States navy who fell at Vera Cruz were given the highest funeral honors in the nation recently at New York.

Before the rifles of their comrades volleyed over them and "Taps" rang out the President, gazing sorrowfully down on their fower-strown caskets, his voice breaking with emotion, evoked them their heroic end and prayed he might die as nobly and as unafraid.

Because they died for the sake of peace and to serve others, they were accorded honors far and beyond their rank. They were enlisted men—clean-cut, young bluejackets and trim marines, no different from their living comrades standing in solid ranks around their caskets—but if they had been seventeen admirals, in gold lace and the panoply of high office, no higher honors could have been given them by their country.

From the time their caskets were taken ashore from the cruiser Montana to the Battery, where swarms of gold-braided officers, whose slightest nod ten days ago was their command, were lined up to receive them, to the last bugle note over them in the navy yard the dead were the greatest of all by reason of their sacrifice.

In the solemn procession march, with the President of the United States leading the mourners, they were escorted through the city, while bells tolled, flags fluttered at half staff and dense lines of humanity gazed silently and bared their heads to do them reverence. At the Brooklyn Navy Yard funeral exercises were conducted, and President Wilson delivered an impressive oration. After the service the bodies were shipped to relatives for further honors and burial in their native cities.

WITH THE CITY BASEBALL LEAGUE—Belec of the St. Louis team slides for third and makes it safely.

A NOVEL BRIDGE PARTY—Englishmen recently experienced a "hot" spell, when a maximum temperature of 73 degrees was registered. Thousands fled to sea-side resorts, while others adopted all sorts of expedients for keeping themselves cool. At Thorpeness, in Suffolk, a water party was arranged. Several punts were requisitioned and these were fitted up with chairs and tables. In the above picture one of these punts is shown; its occupants are engaged in playing a game of bridge. A PARLIAMENTARY "RUSH"—After the recent memorable match between Burnley and Liverpool at the Crystal Palace, London, a large number of North Country enthusiasts stormed the Houses of Parliament, and eventually succeeded in gaining access to the galleries of the House of Lords and the House of Commons. At Whitehall they also succeeded in accomplishing that which Londoners would not dare to do. They scrambled to the tops of the lamp-posts and fences in order that they might witness the changing of the Guard. In the above picture they are seen outside the Houses of Parliament.

THE CHAMPION BOWLING TEAM OF CANADA—The Nationals of Quebec, winners of the Quebec and District Bowling League, and holders of the McCallum Trophy, which they won from the "Eagles" of Montreal and which is emblematic of the Bowling Championship of Canada. They have defended this Cup, which is seen in the centre of the picture, against the famous Strachan and Crescent teams of Montreal. From left to right the team is: Standing—A. O. Talbot, Jules Godin, H. Labreque, J. Laroche; sitting, H. Boivin, L. Belcourt and Wm. Learmonth.

THE MEN THAT WOMEN LOVE.

Do women love none but masterful men? Well, happily for our sense of humor, life is not run on the hard and fast lines of theory, nor is love between men and women the simple affair that we suppose it to be (perhaps in our ignorance) between a brute beast and its mate. We are not only animals, and women are attracted towards men by their spiritual as well as by their physical qualities. If the physical attraction were altogether true love would be impossible, and a union would be disastrous. But then (writes W. R. Titterton in the "London Magazine") it is so rarely lacking, for almost every woman could love almost every man. . . . Think what it would mean if the poets were right, and there was just one man in all the world to suit you, my dear lady, and just one woman in all the world to suit you, my brave sir! What a rushing about you would have, what ceaseless anxiety you would suffer in your search for that fated partner! How you would fear that you and your mate might miss the appointment, that he or she would never learn of your existence, that while you were totting up accounts in the City she was polishing cowry-shells on the shore of Ashanti—if Ashanti has a shore! No, my fair sweetheart; there are a million young fellows you might love. No, my honny boy; there are a million girls who might be the light of your eyes. Why, dear lady, though we have never met, and now I am married and done for, who knows that we should not have made a very good match? Do you think from my writings that you would like me? You don't. Well, we writers are a very deceptive lot; you might find me much more satisfactory than you imagine.
