Hold on-the-spot probe into the 'generals' revolt'

By BASIL CHAPMAN
ALGIERS (Reuters) — The French government's post-revolt crackdown continued today as a senior official opened an on-the-spot investigation of rebel activities here.

Louis Joxe, minister for Algerian affairs, was looking into both the cases of officials who supported the territory's abortive French military rebellion and those of people who offered no resistance to the rebel generals' junta, reliable sources said.

Joxe was working with Delegate-General Jean Morin and Gen. Jean Olie, chief of the national general staff, the sources added. They returned here Friday from Constantine in eastern Algeria.

A government spokesman here announced plans to disband several pro-junta paratroop outfits totalling more than 4,000 men and said disciplinary action was being taken against 200 officers, five of them generals.

SHAKEUP WAS ON

The spokesman also said there had been 400 arrests in the Algiers region. Also, a shakeup was on in the joint services staff here.

However, there still was no word on the whereabouts of three fugitive junta leaders—former generals Raoul Salan, Edmond Jouhaud and Andre Zeller.

The fourth former general, junta boss Maurice Challe, was behind bars in Paris awaiting trial on treason charges that could bring the death penalty.

Friday night—three days after the four-day generals' revolt—there was trouble of a different kind at Oran, western Algeria.

Moslems stoned Europeans' cars after learning that disturbances had broken out in Oran prison. Riot police and troops restored order quickly and no casualties were reported.

The prison disturbances, quelled quickly, were believed to have followed arguments between some prisoners and a judge reviewing their sentences.

The prison houses 2,000 Moslems, including 88 under sentence of death.

Think Eichmann trial could last until July

By RELMAN MORIN
JERUSALEM (AP)—Israel's evidence against Adolf Eichmann is so massive that indications today point to July or later as the earliest possible date for the end of the hearings.

"We hope to complete our proof by the end of June," Attorney-General Gideon Hausner told the court.

Eichmann has been indicted—and faces a possible death penalty—on 15 counts of "crimes against the Jewish people and crimes against humanity."

The former Gestapo officer's trial in Jerusalem is nearing its fourth week, and the three judges have expressed dissatisfaction over the pace of it.

Hausner told the judges the prosecution, as of today, is running a half-day ahead of its timetable.

"This isn't enough," replied Supreme Court Justice Moshe Landau, president of the three-judge tribunal.

When the prosecution completes its case, Dr. Robert Servatius, chief defence counsel, will have his turn.

Servatius has given no indication as to the character of the defence, or how long it will take to present. He won't say whether he intends to put Eichmann on the stand.

Eda Lichtmann, telling the most harrowing story yet presented by an eyewitness, is due to return to the stand later in the hearings. She was living in a village near Krakow, Poland, when the Nazis marched in during September 1939.

She testified that her father was one of a group of Jews shot to death in the first days.

She said she saw Jewish children killed when they cried. Young men, forced to simulate Polish guerrillas in action against the Germans, were slaughtered in the forest, she said.

Robeson is ill

MOSCOW (Reuters) — American Negro singer Paul Robeson, 63, has entered a Moscow hospital "for a month or two," his wife said here Friday. Mrs. Robeson declined to reveal the nature of her husband's illness. She merely said he "needed a rest."

Robeson recently cancelled a concert in London scheduled for this month.

Algerian revolt week's top news

INSURRECTION FAILS

"An odious and stupid adventure" was the way President de Gaulle described the latest right-wing uprising in Algeria.

Four dissident army generals seized control of the city before dawn last Saturday. Tough paratroopers allied with the insurgent officers controlled all the other major cities of Algeria. The aim:

To stall peace talks between the de Gaulle government and the Moslem nationalists who have been fighting the French for 6½ years.

De Gaulle warned that he would use "all means, I repeat, all means" to put down the revolt.

The armed forces in France were placed on alert. Airfields were closed and guarded at night for fear the insurgents might try to send paratroopers against Paris. Algeria was blockaded with the aim of cutting the insurgents off from food and medical supplies.

These strong measures, plus the prospect that loyal French soldiers would fight them, brought a change of heart among the paratroopers Tuesday night. They withdrew their allegiance to the mutinous generals, and loyalist troops moved back into the city.

The Week's News In Review

Algerian cities with only a few shots exchanged.

The principal figure in the mutiny, Gen. Maurice Challe, was once de Gaulle's commander-in-chief in Algeria and at de Gaulle's orders had put down the last big right-wing uprising there in January, 1960. Challe surrendered and was taken to prison in Paris to await trial. The three other generals were in hiding.

Moving swiftly, other high officers were arrested Thursday and Friday. Military units which joined the mutiny were broken up. More than 400 arrests were made among rebellious elements in the police force, civil administration, press and army.

JOBS EQUAL VOTES

Several hundred union members and unemployed people held a protest march on Parliament Hill Monday.

"We want jobs, not promises," many shouted.

A delegation conferred with Labor Minister Starr and other cabinet members. Starr told them the government recognizes it must find more jobs for Canadians before it seeks re-election.

On Wednesday Starr flew to Washington for talks with his American counterpart, Arthur Goldberg, and President Kennedy. They agreed to set up an informal working body of labor specialists to exchange ideas on fighting unemployment.

Eight men were appointed by the Quebec government Monday to survey the province's education system at all levels from primary school to university.

JFK in caucus on Laos crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy summoned the National Security Council into extraordinary Saturday session today amid a deepening anxiety here over Soviet-backed rebel military successes in Laos.

There was speculation the administration might be close to a decision for allied military intervention on the side of the pro-Western Laotian government, but officials declined to indicate what if any new steps the president might order.

Kennedy flew back to Washington early today following a speech in Chicago Friday night, where he said:

"We are the chief defender of freedom in a time of maximum danger. We have committed ourselves to the defence of dozens of nations. This we are determined to do."

State department authorities were reported still hopeful the Communist side in the Laotian civil war could be prevailed upon to carry out the British-Soviet cease-fire agreement before the military situation deteriorated further.

But there was growing concern over evidence that the rebels were stalling on final acceptance of an armistice until they had consolidated their military position.

Britain and the United States had expected that the cease-fire agreement would have been put into effect earlier this week.

Instead, the rebels continued military attacks on government forces, driving toward the royal capital of Luang Prabang and the administrative capital, Vientiane.

The cease-fire also provides for a 14-nation conference to open at Geneva May 12 to negotiate a permanent settlement for Laos.

TERMS NOT DISCLOSED

Although Mr. Hamilton would not spell out the terms of the present deal, he told a press conference his government's credit terms normally range from 30 to 180 days.

Hamilton said an "agreement of intent" already has been signed with representatives of the Red Chinese government. The first shipment under the new pact will start rolling about June 1 and will run through October, he added.

Peking authorities who startled trade circles in January with their decision to go on the world market for food, have been playing huge orders with both the Canadian and Australian governments.

The Chinese have been trying to keep the deals with the Western world quiet and official details have been scarce. But it is known Peking already has put out the equivalent of nearly $200,000,000 to buy 2,300,000 tons of Australian and Canadian wheat and flour plus large quantities of fertilizer.

Peking has turned down offers of outright aid, of rice by Japan and Chiang Kai-shek's government on Formosa, preferring to go on the market for food.

A series of natural calamities and, according to Western experts, bureaucratic bungling and popular unrest, have led to widespread food shortages on the China mainland.

Western experts have described the more than 2,000,000,000 of Canadian and Australian grain already contracted for as "a drop in the bucket" for China's 650,000,000 people.

Southend, England (Reuters) — A man was fined £10 Friday for putting the names of two pet cats on the voters register.

Douglas Mist, 51, was charged with making a false declaration that the cats, named on the form as Mr. Ginger Mist and Mr. Tiny Mist, were British subjects and entitled to vote.

He argued they were of voting age — 21 in Britain—because they actually were three years old and one year of a cat's life was equivalent to seven for a human being.

Mist was said to have told police he had made arrangements with his bank that when he died the residue of his estate would go to the cats, because they would starve otherwise.

LABOR LOSES 'RIGHTS'

Governments of Liberals and Conservatives have each year been "chipping away at the basic rights to organized labor," he said.

He criticized legislation in British Columbia which removes check-off rights from unions that support political parties and legislation in Newfoundland, which, he said, gives the provincial government arbitrary powers to decertify any union.

Utopia?

Douglas has hopes for world

By PETER REHAK

HAMILTON (CP) — A world so civilized that international disputes are settled by a world court, democracy is served by a world parliament and military conflict is nonexistent was forecast Friday by Premier Douglas, 56, of Saskatchewan.

The favored contender for the New Party leadership told the national policy convention of the United Steelworkers of America (USWA) that such a world is not a dreamer's Utopia.

He stressed the need in Canada for a third political party. The two existing parties, both representatives of big business, have been playing a game of "political baseball," he said.

One party is in, one party is out. It doesn't matter which people who hold corporate wealth are represented. We need a party to represent people who toil with sweat on their brow."

He criticized legislation in British Columbia which removes check-off rights from unions that support political parties and legislation in Newfoundland, which, he said, gives the provincial government arbitrary powers to decertify any union.

Internationally, the premier said, Canada should lead in telling the United States and Russia not to interfere in internal affairs of other nations.

Following his speech, the steelworkers unanimously reasserted their stand supporting the New Party passed at last year's policy convention.

MADE IN JAPAN

Labels lifted

OTTAWA (CP) — An Ottawa store which cut the "made in Japan" labels from a shipment of 51 ladies' sweaters was fined $100 Friday for a violation of the Customs and Tariff Act.

A spokesman for Lindor Limited, a ladies' wear outlet, said the store did not know the removal of such labels was illegal.

Locks her children in closet mother 33, will face charges

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — A mother who police said admitted locking her two children in a tiny closet for four years "because they hollered and I didn't want to be bothered with them" was held today on criminal charges.

Mrs. Elizabeth Lou Degan Blevins, 33, a waitress, was charged in court Friday with "endangering the life and health of a child." She was jailed when unable to post $3,500 bond.

Mrs. Blevins' children Charles James Jr., 12, and Amber, 8, were found huddled naked in a cramped closet by authorities who were summoned to her apartment to investigate a quarrel between the mother and her landlady.

Jimmy's legs were so underdeveloped he walked like a four-year-old, police said, and both their bodies bore rope burns.

Police said Amber had never attended school and the boy hadn't since 1957.

Mrs. Blevins said her husband deserted her four years ago.

Canadian sailor shot to death

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Canadian sailor was shot to death and his body dumped at Land's End early Friday.

Daniel J. Shaughnessy, 26, of Edmonton, Alta., was killed less than a day after his ship docked.

"It was definitely murder," Chief Homicide Inspector Ralph McDonald said.

Land's End is the northwest tip of the San Francisco peninsula looking out to sea.

Canadian navy officers said Shaughnessy, a "fine lad with a good record," went ashore about 5 p.m. Thursday with three other sailors from the Margaree, one of three Royal Canadian Navy vessels here on a goodwill visit.

Educational TV channels sought

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Dr. Andrew Stewart, chairman of Canada's Board of Broadcast Governors, said Friday the board is prepared to recommend reservation of ultra high frequency television channels for educational TV.

In an address to the United States National Association of Educational Broadcasters, he said the BBG might, under certain circumstances, reserve some of the very high frequency channels now used for commercial TV for educational purposes where these channels are available.

SWITCH TO DST — In common with most other parts of Canada, the Eastern Townships area switches to Daylight Saving Time tonight at midnight. This means that unless there is some good reason for you to stay on Standard Time, you should turn your clocks forward an hour tonight, like Cecile Bellavance is doing to the clock in the Sherbrooke CNR telegraph office. Otherwise, you may find yourself attending church an hour late tomorrow.

About Television

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—CBS Reports, in simple, understandable form, explained a lot about space and scientific progress Thursday night.

Most of the fascinating hour had a quality of fantasy, and three were serious suggestions about life in space.

One professor suggested that the human race might become slaves of intelligent species from other planets, older and much superior species than the human race.

"The best we could expect would be the sort of treatment we give domestic animals here," he said. "We're kind to them, and feed them, and when they are big enough we slaughter them. We could well be an excellent source of protein to an exceptionally advanced species."

Pretty Julie London had a big season guesting around at the various action-adventure shows. This week she was a very effective girl-of-the-week on Hong Kong.

Family, on of the early casualties of the current TV season, crawls back into NBC's Friday night lineup May 12.

HIGH TIMES
By SANDRA PICKFORD

A SCHOOL MOTTO has been chosen for Waterloo High. The students' Council felt a motto and an official crest would give distinction and individuality to their school. Putting their heads together and spending a great deal of time on this important decision for the students, they sought advice from Mrs. W. Hamilton, O. Rexford, R. Flood and S. Waye who submitted a number of mottos and gave suggestions in obtaining a suitable one. The students' Council representatives selected three to present to the pupils. The final choice by the students was "Hic Metam Certam Petite" (Seek Here a Certain Goal).

The Council is now working on a crest to combine with this motto.

TAKEN FROM A NEWSLETTER — Girls attending the Coaticook High School will not be required to wear tunics after May 1, for the balance of the year.

This was one of the main items of interest to the High School girls of Coaticook issued in the Coaticook High School April 24 newsletter by their principal Neil Cullens. However, a neat and acceptable standard of dress will still be required. The boys of grade 8 to 11 will be required to wear ties and neat, pressed trousers.

VISIT SCHOOL OF ARTS AND TRADES — Last week the Physics class of the Thetford Mines Grade XI attended a demonstration at the School of Arts and Trades in Thetford says Carol Skokoe, Thetford High correspondent. Mr. N. Fradette, the physics instructor demonstrated several laws and principles concerned in the year's work.

GRADUATING CLASS GUESTS OF H. AND S. — The graduating class of the Bedford High School will be the guests of the Bedford Home and School at their annual meeting for a closing banquet, May 9 at the United Church Hall. The debates for the D. J. Reid Shield will also be held at that time.

TWO DANCES CANCELLED — Last week in High Times I mentioned that a record hop, sponsored by the grade ten of St. Francis High School in Richmond would be held this evening, and secondly, that the Richmond-Drummondville-Arthabaska dance will be held May 5 at St. Francis with out of town schools attending. Well, a newsletter from Norma Wheeler, St. Francis correspondent reads: "The Record Hop scheduled to be held April 29 in our school is cancelled because of other dances being held in Richmond that night. Further on, 'as no date suitable to all R.D.A. schools could be found, the R.D.A. dance is not being held this year.' she said. "However, we hope one will be held early next year before schedules become too crowded.

BADMINTON TOURNAMENT — No doubt the majority of the St. Francis District students will be at the Sherbrooke High School today to watch or participate in the annual badminton tournament.

CORRESPONDENT WINS PUBLIC SPEAKING — Congratulations to our High Times correspondent from St. Patrick High School Roger Leclaire who won the Sherbrooke Optimist Public Speaking contest held this Monday evening. Roger won over one other contestant, who happened to be one of his best friends, Steve Hicks. Roger will now compete at the Annual Optimist Convention in Plattsburg New York in the latter part of May.

St. George's Players rehearse spring play

Final rehearsals are under way for the spring production of St. George's Players of Lennoxville, whose winter production of The Middle Watch proved so successful.

Their second play, to be produced on Friday and Saturday, May 12 and 13, is Noel Coward's sophisticated comedy Blithe Spirit.

A departure from previous productions is that the play will be staged in the auditorium at Bishop's College School instead of St. George's Church Hall, and it is hoped that the larger stage will do justice to the complicated staging effects required in this play.

The cast of Blithe Spirit is mainly composed of veterans of previous St. George's Players productions.

John Ferris, who played a lead in The Middle Watch, has the main role, that of the husband whose deceased wife is recalled to earth in a séance, to the dismay of both the husband and his second wife. Joyce Booth and Eileen Dollin, both stars of many previous plays, play the two wives.

Dorothy Hewson, who scored a hit as Aunt Charlotte in The Middle Watch, revels in the part of the spiritualist medium, Madame Arcati.

Minor roles are carried by Mr. and Mrs. Bob Smith of Magog and Sylvia Greene of Lennoxville.

Arthur Speid is again supervising the production, which is being stage-managed by Wendell Beattie and directed by Lewis Evans.

Time for outdoor photography

Early spring scenes provide opportunities for fine shots

With the anticipation of warmer weather, and the disappearing snow, we feel more like getting out in the open. Although the countryside is looking a bit drab, this shouldn't discourage you. On a sunny day there are many interesting pictures to be taken of children and pets, or perhaps the angler doing a little trout fishing.

Most of the lake fishing is either open or will be open by May 1.

Photographing pets outdoors will give one lots of fun. As this type of photography requires a bit of patience, because moods change rapidly a thorough knowledge of your camera is required to take advantage of the change of expressions of the animals.

It gives you the needed experience so that your camera becomes secondary.

The film should be medium to fine grain as most photographers will be using small film sizes and the new exposure index for verichrome is now A.S.A. 125. This is a medium grain film with good resolving power (resolving power means the ability of the film to record 90-100 lines or more to the square inch.) consequently it produces a sharper picture with great enlargement possibility.

With the constant change or adjustment of A.S.A. ratings, one might be a little confused although they are of great advantage, especially when dealing with an electronic flash.

The manufacturers of electronic flash units have not, as yet, agreed on a standard procedure of measuring the output of their equipment.

By DOUGLAS GERRISH

Some base their guide numbers in watt seconds BCTS (Beam Camera Power Seconds), or ECTS (Effective Candle Power Seconds). Also some list guide numbers for particular films. The most accurate number is the one you compute yourself as all these other ratings are only very approximate.

Computing your old guide numbers for the flash that

Sherbrooke court cases

Dismisses assault charge, raps defendant's arrest

A charge of common assault brought against a Stanstead Plain man by a Rock Island bailiff was dismissed by Judge Joseph Marier in Court of Sessions Friday.

Walter Simoneau, 73, Rock Island, a bailiff of the St. Francis District Superior Court, and former mayor of Rock Island charged that customs appraiser D. B. Galloway had assaulted him, causing hand lacerations and undetermined injuries to his foot as well as aggravating a heart condition.

Mr. Simoneau, represented by attorney Albert Fregeau, Q.C., Rock Island, testified that the incident occurred March 11 when he went to Mr. Galloway's home to discuss the settlement of a traffic accident in which the two men were involved March 8.

He said that he made the visit after repeatedly attempting by telephone to arrange for payment of the damages to Mr. Galloway without involving the plaintiff's insurance company.

Mr. Galloway refused to accept immediate payment, Mr. Simoneau said.

When he arrived at the Galloway home on the morning of March 11 he was stopped from entering the house by Mr. Galloway and was subsequently pushed off the steps, injuring himself in a fall, he said.

Mr. Galloway, 42, testified that he had not wanted to accept payment for damages to his car until repairs were completed. He said that Simoneau had called him at least six times between March 8 and March 11 but that he had refused to discuss the matter further.

When Simoneau went to the Galloway home, he attempted to push his way in, Mr. Galloway said. When he told the plaintiff to leave the house, the latter refused, he said.

"Then I grabbed him under the arms and elevated him back through the doorway onto the landing."

RICHMOND — (Special) — Richmond County health clinics will be held at the following places next week for immunization against diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus and polio.

Monday May 1 — Stoke School No. 10, 4th range at 2 p.m., Convent at 2:30 p.m.

Tues. May 2 — Greenlay, at the College 10 a.m.; Asbestos — St. Isaac parish, Church basement from 2 to 3:30 p.m.

Wed. May 3 — Bromptonville, College gym from 2 to 3:30 p.m.

Thurs. May 4 — St. Georges, at the Convent 2 p.m.

be in attendance and will participate in an anthem especially composed for two choirs.

The service will be conducted by the minister, Rev. Graham Barr and who will have as assistants, Miss Margaret Allen, Dan Loomis and the church school superintendent, Kenneth Halpenny.

Galloway denied that he had ever pushed Simoneau and further maintained that the elderly man had fallen when he took a step backwards. He said that Simoneau, left "when he realized that I was calling the police."

Jimmy Galloway, 12 an eyewitness to the incident, corroborated his father's testimony completely.

Later the same day, Mr. Galloway was placed under arrest and held for an hour until he furnished bail of $110.

This last fact was strongly condemned by Judge Joseph Marier when he delivered judgment. "It is unfortunate that a citizen of good standing should be arrested on Saturday evening and held until he furnished a bail out of all proportion to the nature of the incident."

"The plaintiff has not waited for the court to make a decision but has already punished the defendant by having him arrested rather than simply having a summons issued. Mr. Simoneau made a big mistake, but everyone, young or old, can make a mistake," he said.

"The complaint is dismissed and the defendant honorably acquitted," he said.

Committed to trial on charge of arson

Two brothers, who pleaded not guilty at their preliminary hearing in Court of Sessions Friday to a charge of burning down a house belonging to the father-in-law of the oldest youth, were committed by Judge Joseph Marier to stand trial at the January, 1962 Session of the St. Francis District Criminal Assizes.

Robert Grenier, 21, and his brother Real, 18, were charged with burning down a house belonging to Louis Veilleux a 50-year-old Cookshire farmer whose daughter is married to Robert.

The incident occurred last November 20 between three and four a.m.

Real, testifying first, asked for and was granted the protection of the court. As a result, testimony which he gave could not be used against him at any time in the future.

He told Judge Marier that he had accompanied his brother on the night of the fire but when his brother told him he intended to set fire to the house he warned him to do it. He did not actually see his brother set fire to the house, he said.

Robert, in his testimony, said that he had gone to the Veilleux home with the intention of burning it down but that he was confused as to what had actually happened. He said that he did not believe he had succeeded in his aim.

Mr. Veilleux testified that the value of his house, adjoining shed and contents was approximately $12,000. He had insurance amounting to $2,000, he said.

These figures were corroborated by Aurelien Cantin, 45, Cookshire, insurance agent for Mr. Veilleux.

An idea

An amazing new twist to charity drives has appeared in London Eng. It might find a warm response if adopted in many Canadian cities.

Recently the chairman of a ball being organized in the interest of the mentally handicapped sent out a circular letter pointing out that if each recipient sent in a donation the event might be avoided.

"Do please help me insure that this

Bicycle safety

Now that the streets and roads are clear of ice and snow, and warmer weather has come, youngsters everywhere will be out in hordes on their bicycles.

Anyone who ever owned a bicycle knows what great fun they are, and what an indispensable mode of transportation they can become to their riders.

But unless bicycling is approached properly — by riders, motorists and parents — it can become a tragedy. Every summer, young cyclists are maimed and killed in traffic accidents.

There have already been a number of such accidents in Sherbrooke, although so far, there have been no fatalities.

The local Optimist Club this week has been sponsoring a bicycle safety project to put the spotlight on the importance of sensible, prudent cycling.

Riding a bicycle should be much like driving a car.

The machine, first of all, should be in good mechanical condition. This is gargantuan event never takes place," he said. "Anything you can do to save all this trouble will be greatly appreciated."

Probably the organizers of many so-called charity events, on studying the minor receipts in relation to the amount of energy expended and financial risk involved on the part of the organizers, would relish the frankness of the London man.

especially important in connection with vital parts such as brakes, steering and wheels.

A bicycle should be ridden with the same respect for the rules of the road that a motorist is expected to extend. Parents should make every effort to ensure their children know these rules, and practise them.

Even with all these precautions, motorists should always be cautious of children on bicycles. Even the most prudent youngster can suddenly lose his balance and fall into the path of a car. Even the most sensible child, because he is a child, can be careless or foolhardy.

It is the motorist's responsibility to keep these things in mind and drive accordingly. Defensive driving, that credo of the good driver, should be applied to cyclists as it is to other motorists.

A twisted and smashed bicycle, a small, crumpled, broken body are pitiful compensations for "being in the right."

Friendly exchange

An indication that all the sniping in Parliament is not confined to Opposition groups attacking the Government is contained in the following exchange of courtesies between C.C.F. and Liberal chieftains — as reported by Hansard:

Hazen Argue (CCF Assiniboia): Does the Leader of the Opposition not realize that one of the main reasons he sits on this side of the House was the failure of the former Minister of Finance, Mr. Walter Harris, to do more than provide an increase of $6 a month (in the old age pension); consequently he became known as "Six-buck Walter?"

Hon. L. B. Pearson: "One of the reasons why only eight gentlemen sit in that corner is that the people of Canada saw through their wild and irresponsible statements."

125th year is marked by church

By REV. A. B. LOVEFACE

The history of the congregation of the United Church of Canada in Lennoxville goes back to the year 1836. From 1836 to 1875 the congregation belonged to the Methodist Church. It was supplied by the minister of the Methodist Church (now Trinity) in Sherbrooke.

The original wooden building was destroyed by fire in September, 1874. The present building was erected the following year at a cost of approximately $12,000. It is situated on Queen Street at Church Street.

It became a separate pastoral charge in 1875 and the first resident minister was the Rev. John Scanlon.

In 1925, at the time of Church Union in Canada, it entered Union and became part of The United Church of Canada.

The Gertrude Scott Hall, attached to the present church edifice, was built in 1939. It is used as a Christian Education Centre.

A new manse was built in 1940 at the rear of the Church lot.

A list of the Ministers who have served the Church since the Congregation became independent from the Sherbrooke Methodist Church is as follows: Reverends John Scanlon, G. H. Porter, William Timberlake, W. H. Graham, W. K. Short, Richard Robinson, William Adams, Joseph Pinel, F. A. Read, Robert Smith, H. E. Warren, A. E. Sanderson, Isaac Norman, J. B. Hicks, J. Sellar, P. Pergau, F. R. Matthews, N. D. McLeod, Leonard Outerbridge and Arthur B. Loveface.

Today the congregation consists of 750 members and 430 families. It is showing considerable growth in the Church School and through the week activities. Because of the limited physical facilities for Church Services and congregational activities the congregation recently appointed a special committee to explore ways and means to extend the church to accommodate the increased membership and activities. At present three services of worship and two Sunday Schools are held each Sunday. In addition to the regular organizations there has been added this year The Golden Age Club to meet the needs of the retired men in the Community.

On Sunday the 125th Anniversary will be observed by special services at 9:30 and 11:00 a.m. and 7:00 p.m. The Guest Preacher will be the Reverend Kenneth G. MacMillan, recently appointed Superintendent of Missions for the Montreal and Ottawa Conference of the United Church of Canada. The neighbouring United Church Congregations will unite with the Lennoxville Congregation for the Evening Service. A Social Hour will follow the Evening Service and all friends of the Congregation are invited to gather on this occasion to share in this historic event.

Why we came back from Russia: Part 4

A stake in a new life in Russia

This is the fourth in a series of articles by a Polish-born smaller worker who took his family to Russia on the strength of Soviet promises of a "better life" than they had enjoyed in Canada.

By MARIAN PAWINSKI
Distributed by Toronto Telegram News Service

A few weeks after my wife, our two children and I arrived in her childhood home in Russia—Novocherkassk—we were allotted a part of the Communist world.

It measured 14 square metres. A space roughly 12 feet by 12 for our family and our belongings.

This was our stake in a four-room apartment shared by another couple and their three children. They had two rooms to themselves. We shared a small kitchen and a tiny bathroom with them.

This was our stake in a new life in Russia.

It was an immense let-down for Larisa 15, Waldemar 10, as well as for my wife Nadiezda. We had become too accustomed to the warmth and comforts of North America.

It will be a long time before we forget the scenes of everyday life in Novocherkassk.

Strangers in our bathtub, accordions and Cossack dances in your apartment at 3 a.m. while you're trying to sleep, beer in the public baths, beggars on street corners, sidewalks and public squares.

Men who often drink to excess. Women who work a 16-hour day at the factory and at home, and never touch a drop of liquor, never fuss with cosmetics, frown at short sleeves and open-neck blouses or dresses.

The market place, "Tolkuchka", or black market, where you can buy anything available in the area at prices up to double those in the stores; where as second-hand car costs twice as much as a new one at the state store; where eggs cost a ruble each and you have to work a full day's shift to buy ing on attitude towards family among the older people.

With the younger people this isn't too much the case. Their respect for family develops directly from the family tradition of their own home, rather than religion. In Novocherkassk, although there is a fine church building, only some of the older people attend. Because the young people are taught nothing of religion, they are not interested in it. The Communist system in no way encourages religion; it merely tolerates it.

Moreover, the people are warm, hospitable, and sentimental. They live by their emotions much of the time, and the Communist Party takes advantage of this national trait to strike up patriotism for the Party and the system.

Our main complaint about life in Russia was the lack of personal ambition among the people, and the drab monotony. Our pattern never varied from day to day, from week to week.

Line up at the store for milk and bread in the morning at 7 a.m. on our way to work before 8. After work, my wife had to stand in another line to buy food for supper, get the week's supply of flour, or sugar, or some other staple, if the store hadn't run out of it by then.

It was usually about 8 or 9 p.m. at night by the time supper was finally on the table. Nadiezda tried hard to inject variety into our meals, but she faced a hopeless situation.

Bread, potatoes and borsch (beet soup with tomatoes and cabbage) were the daily menu. Noodles or a type of macaroni were other substitutes. Meat was scarce usually sausage when you could get it; vegetables, unless you knew someone with a small farm, were also scarce.

Fruits are beyond the average worker's means in this part of Russia—and even when we were in Moscow where you can buy most foods, 10 miles out of the city the same situation existed as in Novocherkassk, we were told.

When we finally did move in, it was into an apartment on the fourth floor of a fairly-new company block, facing out on an open field. The building itself fronted other company apartment blocks.

It was a 10-minute walk to the factory and within walking distance of our aunt and uncle's home. The school for the children was nearby.

There are many good things to be said for the life the average family leads in Russia. One of these is the attitude of the Russians towards family life.

Perhaps it is different in larger cities, but in this work-in-progress centre, as well as in Shakti and Rostov (the latter with over half a million population), we found the Russians thoroughly devoted to their families.

There is a public moral condemnation of divorce. If a married Party man is found romancing another woman and reported, he is castigated in no uncertain terms.

Perhaps strong religious traditions of the past have a bearing

Gerald Waring REPORTING

OTTAWA — A farmer who boarded a TCA flight at Winnipeg the other day appeared nervous as his seat mate showed him how to fasten his seat belt, and admitted that it was his first flight.

"Why didn't you go by train?" the other asked. "It's cheaper now by plane," the farmer explained. "Only $71 return, and we'll be in Toronto in two hours."

This incident illustrates the new market for air transportation being developed by the new lower fares. But it also raises the question of whether these low fares would have come about, whether this new market would have been served, if TCA had no competition on its transcontinental flights.

Two years ago the government authorized Canadian Pacific Airlines to fly one flight daily each way between Montreal and Vancouver, with compulsory traffic stops at Toronto and Winnipeg.

However, after two years of red-ink operation CPA recently notified the government that it can only continue this limited one-day operation if it is permitted the same flexibility of flight patterns that TCA enjoys.

Anyone familiar with the quality of TCA service before CPA got its foot in the transcontinental door, and the improvement that has taken place since, can hardly deny the travelling public has benefited from competition. If CPA were forced out by the requirement of a rigid flight pattern, nobody else in Canada would be likely to seek the costly privilege of competing transcontinentally with TCA, and we'd be back again to monopoly quality service.

This denouement to the Conservative government's pledge to open the airline business to private enterprise is obviously not what the former transport minister, George Hees, had in mind when he said Feb. 7, 1958, that "competition is a valuable stimulus to more efficient operation and to the provision of better service to the public."

Somewhere between Conservative promises and administrative action a monstrous perversion took place, so that instead of being permitted to compete with TCA for the estimated annual growth of air traffic, CPA was left only with that fraction of business by which TCA might underestimate traffic growth.

Did George Hees have a change of heart after TCA became "my airline" instead of "the Liberal government's airline"? Or did top civil servants interpret government policy in such a way as to frustrate the government's intentions? Officials won't tell.

What CPA wants in order to stay in business is a chance to share future traffic growth equally with TCA. It is not asking a share of TCA's present traffic.

In any quantity were refrigerators, electric irons, gas heaters, washing machines and stoves. But the refrigerator we had in our apartment, which cost a month's pay, compared to models we saw in Canada that dated back 20 years ago. The washing machines were vintage as well; you worked the wringer by hand.

Parts? Many of them "borrowed" from the state, from factories, plants and other sources — then re-oid, or passed on.

Our youngsters had to study hard, for education is demanding in the Soviet Union. Their evenings were never too free.

Our only diversion, and theirs, were the movies, concerts, and a theatrical show now and then. The latter was too expensive, and Soviet films were so full of patriotic messages that we waited for foreign films chiefly those from the U.S. Among the ones I remember seeing in Novocherkassk; The Great Caruso, Holiday in Rome.

Our chief pleasure, however, rested in visiting back and forth with friends. They had hundreds of questions about life in America and Canada. And they seemed to believe our answers. They asked about prices, about government controls, how you live, how you work.

But because of the black market, they do make ends meet. They sell what they don't need, buy the things they do need. A second-hand bicycle buys a lot of bread.

You had to wait two years to get a car, if you could ever afford one. You could buy one at the market second-hand for double the amount.

The only appliances available

It wants to get out from under the limit of one flight daily each way, and the requirement that it make traffic stops while TCA jets fly non-stop from Toronto to Vancouver.

In asking this, it simply asks the government to implement the recommendations for TCA-CPA sharing future trans-continental traffic growth that were made by Stephen Wheatcroft, a British aviation consultant who surveyed the airline situation in Canada on behalf of the government. This makes sense. And so does the concomitant, that this sharing of growth traffic would entail bringing TCA under the authority of the Air Transport Board just like every other air carrier in the country.

JACOBY On Bridge

PLAYER MAKES OWN BAD LUCK

Sometimes a player can manufacture hard luck for himself by his bidding.

East's jump to three hearts was an overbid designed to crowd North and South. His subsequent heart bids continued the crowding process, and North was delighted to be pushed to six diamonds by the five heart bid.

Then when East tried six hearts North gambled for six spades in preference to the sure thing profit a double would have brought him.

Playing at six spades South ruffed the second heart and laid down his three high trumps. East's jack dropped nicely and now all South had to do was to discard one club on dummy's fifth diamond and claim game, slam, rubber and a hundred honors.

Of course, North was lucky. Just looking at the North-South cards you would love a six diamond contract, but would rather not be in six spades. The jack of spades might be guarded against you and North's six spade bid was a poor gamble that just happened to pay off but East had no right to complain about bad luck.

East pushed North into six spades. East was looking at three spades to the jack right in front of North's spade bid and East should have gone to seven hearts and taken a 900 point penalty instead of letting North play at six spades.

Our youngsters had to study hard, for education is demanding in the Soviet Union. Their evenings were never too free.

Our only diversion, and theirs, were the movies, concerts, and a theatrical show now and then. The latter was too expensive, and Soviet films were so full of patriotic messages that we waited for foreign films chiefly those from the U.S. Among the ones I remember seeing in Novocherkassk; The Great Caruso, Holiday in Rome.

Adventures with God

Just take a look at history

by JANE SCOTT

One of the most stimulating letters to reach us in many years comes from a 16-year-old Jewish high school lad who reads this space.

It is a courteous, sincere, thought-provoking letter in which he questioned many of our theological concepts. Our correspondent wants logical answers to many questions, but not theological answers.

We regret that space does not permit publishing the complete text, but we shall quote from it and try to state our case.

He writes: "Neither you nor I will ever convince the other that he is right since both points of view are dependent upon faith. You don't actually KNOW whether God exists as you imagine Him or whether Christ is really divine, except to prove this by the Bible or on a word of faith."

"The Bible, then, is your argument. BUT THE ONLY PROOF YOU HAVE THAT THE BIBLE IS OF A DIVINE NATURE IS THAT THE BIBLE ITSELF SAYS SO."

"This is a gross error. How can you say that the Bible is inspired by God because the Bible says in a certain chapter within the Bible that it is inspired by God? If I said: 'God doesn't exist because a book on atheism says He doesn't exist,' you would be quick to point out the fallacy of my argument, just as I point out the fallacy of your blind, unfounded faith."

"Please don't come to me with quotes from the Bible. I have logically shown why the Bible can't be used. I have made logical argument arguments WITHOUT the use of the Bible. (You may disagree with my argument, but you must admit that it isn't founded on sand.)"

"If you can't make a logical argument without the use of the Bible, then I must be assumed to have won the argument."

Thanks for your letter, David. You have satisfied yourself that you have won the argument.

ment on the basis of the meagre knowledge you now possess. Fifty years ago I would have thought you a very brilliant and astute young man, because I felt exactly as you now feel about the Bible.

But half a century of seeing history unfold and adventuring with God by faith have completely changed my preconceived ideas about God, logic and the Bible.

I no longer care about winning or losing an argument with anyone who is so sure of his logic and so unsure of the content of the Bible and the power of God.

Each succeeding year piles up more evidence that the Bible IS inspired by God. It is the only book that gives a true picture of the state and the estate of man.

It reveals not only the events of the past but of the future. It is quick and powerful and can strike terror and conviction into the sinful heart of man whom it describes so well.

And it has power to impart the wisdom of God to men and women who will delve into its contents with an open mind and believe its message.

WHO BUT GOD? Who but God could, centuries ago, reveal the history of your own nation? He foresaw the dispersal of the Jews to the four corners of the earth and the rise of the Gentile nations.

He foresaw, and forewarned of, the fall of Jerusalem. He alone could impart this information to men who, like ourselves, were incapable of foretelling future events.

Yes, history convinces me that the Bible is inspired and dependable as a guide in moral and human relationships and events. Not because the Bible says so but because current events are unfolding as the Bible predicted.

Particularly noteworthy and convincing is the fact that after nearly two thousand years of dispersal and suffering the Israelites are now functioning in Palestine as a nation. Their second chance has come.

I am not asking you to consider the Bible as an inspired book but to take a look at the world in the light of your own prophetic books.

Read Isaiah 11: 10-11 and in the light of history ponder these words: "And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set His hand again THE SECOND TIME to recover the remnant of His people."

That scripture is in the process of fulfillment today. And, to me at least, it proves that THE BIBLE IS THE INSPIRED WORD OF GOD. And that its historical prophecies have been, are being and will yet be fulfilled to the letter.

Who but God could give such explicit details to men? I'm convinced that "they spoke as they were moved by the Spirit of God" Himself.

LIVES CHANGED We have the witness of millions of men and women whose lives have been changed from degradation and ignorance to wisdom, power and righteousness by simply reading the Bible without comment by any human voice.

No other book in the world has been written, compiled, preserved and circulated in such a miraculous way. And no other book of promise or prophecy has had as many startling claims verified by human experience and history.

From the basis of past performance I have no reservations in accepting the Bible for what it claims to be—The Word of God that "is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness" and a reliable guide to men and women who want an explanation regarding this crazy mixed up world.

I would advise younger readers to experiment with the Bible in the laboratory of life for at least 50 years before you finalize your estimates of this miracle book.

Remember, you haven't got all the evidence yet, so don't discard it until you have tested its precepts and promises, its historical matter and its mystical powers to refine and educate men beyond their natural endowments.

And time will prove it and it will point you to the Redeemer.

Million and a half expected at huge Hanover Fair

More than one and a half million visitors will flock to the Hanover Fair, held from April 30 to May 9, 1961. Since its inception in 1947, it has steadily grown and today is world-renowned for its scope and compactness in presenting the industrial products of the world.

Buyers and exhibitors from all parts of the globe will come by car, bus, plane and railroad.

Farsighted planning makes it possible that this huge influx of people can be handled smoothly.

For those who come by car, parking lots with a capacity of 70,000 cars have been built on the Fair Grounds, making them the largest parking facilities in Germany today.

The airlines of many countries, including the United States, have scheduled more than 300 special flights to Hanover. The German Federal Railroad will operate a score of extra trains, connecting 331 European cities directly with Hanover.

Sleeping car service will be available from France, Switzerland, Austria, Sweden and the Netherlands. Because only a limited number of hotel accommodations are available in Hanover, most of the foreign guests are staying in other towns.

For these, the German Federal Railroad will put into service their most modern equipment, trains that will allow them to visit the Fair daily.

Some trains will have telephone service and bilingual trains will be equipped with dining facilities. When arriving at Hanover's Main Station, they will be greeted in English, French and Italian.

Railroad information Booths are placed throughout, where the guests can obtain information and purchase tickets. For many connections, car-sleeper service is available.

On the international lines, multi-lingual train personnel will contribute to the comfort of the travelers. Time tables are printed in every European language as well as in Esperanto. In many cases, a 50 percent fare reduction is granted.

AMRS executives are named

Lewis Rosenbloom was named president of the Associated Master Retailers of Sherbrooke at their regular meeting this week at the Social Club.

Mr. Rosenbloom replaces the outgoing president P. Nadeau. P. McKenna was elected vice-president replacing Mr. Rosenbloom while G. Guillemette replaced Mr. McKenna as secretary-treasurer.

At the previous meeting held April 17, the eleven merchants gathered together with some 64 employees for an evening of speeches and movies.

P. Nadeau, outgoing president spoke on the co-operation that should exist between employers and employees and E. Gingras spoke on the aims of AMRS. Mr. Guillemette spoke on credit and Mr. Rosenbloom talked on the salesmen, emphasizing that he should know his merchandise well to be able to aid a customer in his purchasing.

Mr. McKenna acting as master of ceremonies, gave a short talk on the difference between an order-taker and a salesman.

A discussion period followed and two films were shown on the shopping problem and telephone courtesy Pays Off.

The next meeting of the AMRS will be held at the Social Club, May 8 at 7:30 p.m. unanimously adopted a bill providing for indemnities to car - accident victims and adopted the principle of a companion bill amending the highway code.

The first bill provides for a fund to indemnify victims of accidents caused by insolvent motorists.

The Montreal Symphony Orchestra tentatively accepted an invitation to become the first Canadian orchestra to make a tour of Russia probably next April.

Private meetings have been under way in Montreal aimed at averting a nation - wide railway strike scheduled for May 16. A 15-man negotiating committee representing unions comprising 111,000 non-operating employees has been talking with top executives of the CPR and CNR. There has been no official statement about progress of the talks, but it was learned that an acceptable basis was found for new negotiations. The non-operating employees — those not engaged in actual operation of trains — have said they will accept a 14-cent hourly wage increase recommended by a conciliation board. The companies have maintained they cannot afford to pay this increase.

Home and School at North Hatley needs officers to complete slate

NORTH HATLEY — The Home and School Association met at the High School on April 19.

The president, Mrs. C. Smith, expressed thanks to the teachers for their assistance in preparing pupils for the public speaking contest, and extended congratulations to John Rintoul who won locally in the junior division, and also at the County level.

Stewart Reed, chairman of the cafeteria committee, reported that over 14,000 meals had been served this year. To meet these expenses the Association must plan a money-raising project.

Mr. Reed made note of the fact that during the illness of Mrs. E. Nelson, who is in charge of the kitchen, the work had been ably carried on by Mrs. A. Buckland, and by Mrs. W. Sharnan. It was decided to buy material for tea towels, which members offered to make up.

Mrs. A. Greer reported on a recent meeting of the Community Club at which she represented the Home and School. She spoke of the book which the Community Club is placing in the Library in memory of Tom Andrews, and drew attention to the sewing classes to be held at Laval School, commencing May 2.

Mrs. F. Woodward spoke of the concert presented last month by the Deep Purples of Bishop's University. She extended appreciation to those who had made the posters and to the program committee.

The nominating committee was unable to find officers to fill the posts of president, vice-president and program convener, and a slate of officers could not be presented. Mrs. Smith mentioned projects needing the support of the Association to carry on, such as the school cafeteria, the UNICEF Hallowe'en collections, the public speaking contests, the Community Club, and the High School Memorial Scholarship.

S. Reed, chairman of the bicycle safety program, reported that new material has been provided, and the program will be carried out in May. He will welcome, he said, assistance from interested parents and friends.

Mrs. J. Alan Scott, of Magog, gave a talk on Operation Bootstraps, a series of studies on various aspects of education to be undertaken by the Quebec Federation of Home and Schools.

Mrs. Scott was introduced by Mrs. O. Shipway and thanked by V. Giggie.

At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served by Mrs. A. Greer, and Mrs. C. Guild.

Spotlight On Business

By JOHN BELANGER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Toronto Stock Exchange started the week with a six-point drop on the industrial index but finished strongly in heavier trading and higher prices.

Monday's drop was the result of the Algerian insurrection, an event that sent European and American markets down sharply. The Toronto exchange had almost recovered by Tuesday, and by Wednesday had pushed well over a record mark.

Other market news included the issuance of a number of favorable annual reports and a number of unfavorable quarterly reports.

Also in the news was an offer for about half the shares of National Hoisery by a syndicate headed by W. A. Glick, president of Kirkland Minerals Corporation Ltd. The group offered $3.40 a share for both the A and B issues and National Hoisery turned over a total of 184,000 shares for the week.

Rothmans, Dominion Tar and newcomer Lake Ontario Portland Cement featured well in the week's action, all showing at least ten special - sized transactions per day.

FOODS RISE
The market's food issues rose sharply and Utilities were good. Paper lines were generally lower, papers were irregular and little action was in evidence in the manufacturing issues.

Liquors were silent for the early part of the week, but on Thursday began to trade actively.

In good mining trading, new highs were hit by Ventures and International Nickel, along with Irish Copper and Copper Rand. Golds were quiet.

In western oil issues, new highs were hit by both Sapphir and National Petroleum, while a number of the gas issues traded actively.

Index changes at Toronto: Industrials up 822 at 576.00; golds down 44 at 83.11; base metals up 1.24 at 189.25 and western oils down 48 at 99.73.

Index changes at Montreal: Banks up 45 at 65.48; utilities up 2.9 at 148.2; industrials down 1 at 311.0; papers down 7.7 at 456.7 and golds up 58 at 76.08.

PROPOSED EXPRESSWAY
FREDERICTON (CP) — A proposal for an expressway across Saint John, N.B., is still in the talking stage, says Public Works Minister Richard. The expressway would remove a traffic bottleneck between the east and west approaches to Saint John.

A fascinating and grandiose epic

THE AGONY AND THE ECSTASY by Irving Stone
... Doubleday Publishers
... $5.95 — Michelangelo was one of the great geniuses of this world. Everyone knows that he excelled as painter and sculptor, but not so well known is the fact that he was also an engineer, an architect, and a poet. He lived long and worked indefatigably to create the masterpieces that were to set standards of accomplishment never since equaled.

This presentation of the story of Michelangelo's life, set during the years of transition from the Dark Ages to the Renaissance is fascinating as much for the historical background as for the achievements of the man. Irving Stone has dealt with a grandiose subject in a suitably grandiose manner. As a result the narrative style is heavy and verbose, deliberately in keeping with the grandeur of the times and of the artist. The book will be a cinematic epic comparable to Ben Hur, when and if it is made into a film. It is a natural for that medium, crying out for cinematograph and stereophonic sound!

The story begins with Michelangelo's apprenticeship to the painter Ghirlandaio at the age of 13, and having followed Michelangelo's career and witnessed his accomplishments, it comes to a close 648 pages later on the eve of his 90th birthday, as he lies on his deathbed and thinks: "Life has been good. God did not create me to abandon me. I have loved marble, yes, and paint too. I have loved architecture, and poetry too. I have loved my family and my friends. I have loved God, the forms of earth and the heavens, and people too. I have loved life to the full, and now I love death as its natural termination..."

Although Irving Stone's reputation as biographer-cum-memoirist has already been enhanced in the eyes of the general reader with the recent publication of THE AGONY AND THE ECSTASY, to serious students of history there many violations of fact and distortions of truth to choke on as they devour this vast and formidable novel.

In the years that Mr. Stone spent in Italy doing research and preparing to write this novel he unearthed information hitherto unknown concerning the life and times of Michelangelo, but with a free hand he has chosen to manipulate this information at his own discretion.

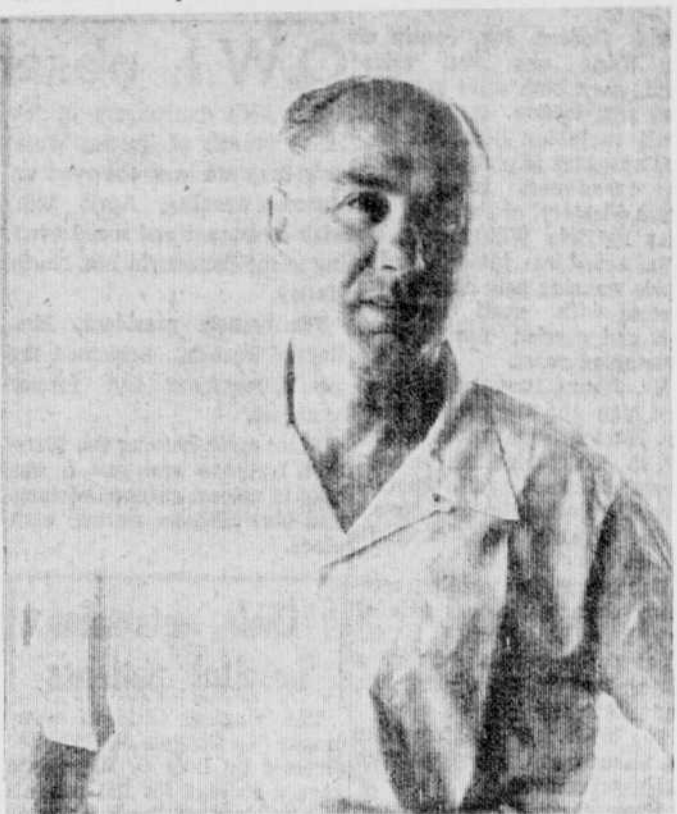

Perhaps this is acceptable in a book that is acknowledged to be a fictional biography, and justifiable because of the resultant readability of the whole. Recommended to anyone with an inquiring mind and a week to spare exclusively for reading.

An inside picture of penal institutions

JUST CALL US BANDITS — by Glenn Hjalmarson Longmans, Toronto, 190 pages—$4.00.

Having worked in both the Montreal prisons and St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary with my husband, the late Reverend Gordon Phillips, it was with considerable interest that I began to read JUST CALL US BANDITS.

GLEN HJALMARSON

Part of my work was the reading and editing of manuscripts from the penitentiary inmates, with permission from Ottawa, so I knew from first-hand experience, how much creative talent there is in our penal institutions.

JUST CALL US BANDITS is written with a light touch; but behind the humour and the amusing incidents and characters that fill the book is a glimpse of some more profound problems and emotions that are a great factor in any penal institution. Glenn Hjalmarson's story of the kittens Plato and Aristotle, for example, and the inmate's concern and affection for them has its counterpart in men who make pets of mice, pigeons or any other living creature within their reach. It gives a true picture of a vital need—the need for something to love and be loved by.

While some readers might question the "home-brew" episodes, they should not. My husband found potent mixtures in the chapel organ before he put a stop, in his own inimitable and understanding fashion, to using the chapel as part of a distillery.

Thieves and liars, says the author, are not countenanced in jail; that is, one inmate does not steal from or lie to another. He may once, but not twice. Hjalmarson shows, by anecdote, how a young inmate was cured of boastful lying by his conferees.

Glenn Hjalmarson does not write as one interested in furnishing prison reform or inmate rehabilitation; he writes an amusing and entertaining account of cons and cans and fuz and hacks (look up the meanings in the glossary in the front of the book), but perhaps some day he will turn his undoubted talent to the writing of a serious work on reform and rehabilitation from his own wide experience as an inmate.

He says a man has to keep a sense of humour if he wishes to maintain his sanity during a long stretch, and obviously he kept his, plus a keen delight in outwitting authority. Now that he has made up his mind to become a Square John, himself he could help authority and inmates by telling seriously what brought him into the world of Square Johns and what he thinks could make Squares of other cons.

Fisherman's trials

I really was after a trout

UPSTREAM, DOWNSTREAM AND OUT OF MY MIND — Syd Hoff, McClelland and Stewart Publishers, $3.50 — Syd Hoff is better known as a distinctive cartoonist whose work appears frequently in many American publications. Fortunately his cartoons also appear in this book, for in fairness, Mr. Hoff is a better cartoonist than humorous writer.

This is a far-fetched account of a novice fisherman's trials and tribulations from tackle buying to fish frying. It has its bright and amusing moments for fisherman or layman alike, but is likely to be enjoyed more by the wives of those who take their fishing more seriously than does Mr. Hoff.

Tremendous amount of living

THE BIG FAMILY — by Vina DeBmar... LONGMANS, GREEN & CO., ... $5.75, 375 pp.

This is indeed the story of a big and notable family. The heroine, aristocrat Jane Mackenzie enters on the very first page with the blunt statement, "There is a dead horse lying in the street" and she makes her exit some 273 pages later on the same line. Sandwiched between her coming and going is a tremendous amount of living. One is held by the candour and vitality of the woman.

She knows upon meeting the soap-boiler John Slidell that she wants to marry him. John, it seems, feels the same way about her. The directness of their courtship, Jane's proud acceptance of John, and his ability to step with ease and confidence into high society, make a delightful beginning to this delightful book. Then come the children.

Ellen is a figure of tragedy. John Jr., is a sometimes charming, always self-seeking snob whose actions have far-reaching effects as he climbs to high places. Young Jamie is a delight. Tom is upright and somewhat bitter. Alexander, very serious and devoted to his duty, provides the reader with some sad moments. Julia, arriving long after the others, is notable mainly because of Jane's fierce and vociferous anger upon learning that she is to become a mother again at forty-three.

Her unusual rejection and her fear of "what people will think" will bring an understanding response from many a reader.

From cover to cover this is a story of interesting people. We are given revealing glimpses of New York and New Orleans in their young days. We learn something of the proud and determined Creoles. Such names as Jackson, Rothschild and Tiffany add their lustre to the name of Slidell.

Miss Delmar manages to give us fact and fiction, love, adventure, history, philosophy and politics, blending her tale together with such fluidity that the reader hardly realizes he has been carried through nearly one hundred and fifty years.

There is a vital quality about this book. You will spend many long and pleasant hours with THE BIG FAMILY.

PEGGIE GILBERT GOATCHER

Author fond of paradoxes

JUSTICE WITHOUT POWER — Thomas Boyle, Longmans $4.50, 239 pp.

This book is well printed and carries a helpful index. The author, a Newfoundland-born, grew up and laboured in Nova Scotia, completing his career in Toronto on an assembly line.

The title of his book is from Pascal's dictum: "Justice without power is helpless... power without justice is tyrannical." Mr. Boyle is fond of paradox.

Occasionally Mr. Boyle does not take the trouble to check facts with care. He quotes approvingly and builds up a case upon a news item claiming the rejection of a candidate for appointment to the federal cabinet because at 45 he was too young! Yet the average age of the present cabinet at Ottawa is 54 and three at least of its ministers are still under the age of 45.

The book is divided into two main parts (a) Economic Action and (b) Political Action. The first chapter in Part One is the best written portion of the book. It is also the only chapter in which the author establishes any really telling case for the political action (formation and election of the New Party) which he advocates.

Whatever the strength of the case which the author feels he has established as requiring radical action, he demolishes in his closing lines, "I pay four dollars a month for union protection. Although this contribution has doubled in ten years, it is still a small price to pay for a happy climate to work in, for security rights, vacation pay and for a more efficient economy."

DON W. THOMSON

The French five franc silver piece.

La Belle France has issued a new "heavy" coinage to restore faith in the French franc.

The government of President Charles de Gaulle has technically increased the value of the franc 100 times placing the five franc piece on a par with the United States dollar.

Replacing the 500 francs is a five franc silver piece, and the 100 franc piece is being replaced with a one franc has a laurel branch and the five franc piece has laurel and oak branches with wheat and flowers. The mint mark for Paris is on either side of the date, with legend "Liberte, Egalite Fraternite" on both coins, and around the outside edge of the five franc.

New "heavy" coinage also has been introduced in denominations of 1, 5, 10, 20 and 50 centimes in place of the light aluminum bronze 10, 20 and 50 franc pieces.

Individuals are inconvenienced only to the extent of remembering the new names for the old denominations of their coins. All amounts are shown in new francs and old, so while one's pocket-book sounds 100 times poorer, it will purchase the same old items, but 100 times cheaper. So no one suffers.

During more than 20 changes in government since the end of World War II, the French franc has suffered severely. Frenchmen and foreigners alike lost faith in the coinage, and wondered how much "vin rouge" a franc would buy when the sun next rose. But today, the great increase in value has rallied confidence in a new, healthier coinage both in and out of France.

coin of copper-nickel alloy, both having the revived design "La Semeuse" by O. Roly of the French coinage between 1897 and 1920. The coins show a woman sower in graceful flowing garments with legend "Republique Francaise."

Music on Records

by Hugh Doherty

VILLA-LOBOS — FOREST OF THE AMAZON; Heitor Villa-Lobos conducting the Symphony of the Air and Chorus; Bidu Sayao, soprano (UNITED ARTISTS stereo UAS 8007) — The great South American composer's latest creation, this unusual work is based on the motion picture, Green Mansions, for which it provides background music. It represents Villa-Lobos' first venture into the film music field, and as a recording, is certainly a worthwhile venture.

It consists of 13 descriptive pieces that evoke the atmosphere of the Amazon jungles. Musical colors are laid on with a wide, bold brush, and the total effect is a brilliantly colored one. This could easily become a modern concert favorite, with its novel sounds, strong rhythms and lavish scoring.

If there are weaknesses, it would be that the music sometimes strives to hard for effect, becoming quite unsophisticated in the process. The chorus of male voices, for example, sometimes hints at a lavish nightclub spectacle rather than a serious musical effort. There is too, a rather obvious use of an echo chamber effect on soprano Sayao's voice at times. It might be excused on the grounds of unusual sound, but her singing is at its best in several natural voice love songs. All in all, though, an impressive, well engineered recording.

OPERATIC CHORUSES — Robert Shaw Chorale, RCA Victor Orchestra, Robert Shaw cond. (RCA Victor mono LM-2416) — While operatic arias are usually in the spotlight, choral singing in many of the great operas provides as fine music. In some cases, specific choruses have become more popular than other pieces of music in an opera. The Anvil Chorus from Il Trovatore and the Bridal Chorus (Here comes the bride) from Lohengrin are two of the best examples of this. They, and eight other well-known ones are included in this excellent recording. They are performed probably much better than is common in an actual operatic performance, where the chorus, too often, is simply a background for the star performers. Lovers of opera music will find this disc fills a real need for chorus work that is both expert and enthusiastic.

WAGNER — Das Rheingold, Die Walkure highlights, Kirsten Flagstad and others, Vienna Philharmonic Orch. George Solti cond. (LONDON stereo OS 25126) — A disc of tremendous power, enhanced by stereo sound, this recording features the best music from the two operas that lead off Wagner's monumental four-opera "Ring" cycle.

Both orchestra and singers nobly uphold the stentorian Wagner tradition, especially the male singers who give strong, deep-throated performances.

The recording is apparently taken from actual performances — the singing voices wander from time to time as if the singers are pacing about a stage.

ARTISTS AT WORK — Eskimo artists, Iyola, left, and Luktak, work on prints at Cape Dorset Art Centre on Baffin Island, N.W.T. The department of northern affairs has announced that art dealers will be offered cut-rate excursions to the art centre to watch the Eskimo artists at work.

Russian spaceman on stamp

On March 6, 1961, the Czechoslovakian postal authorities issued a unique set of six stamps to mark the successes of the Soviet Union in the research of cosmic space.

Of particular interest in view of the Soviet successful manned space flight on April 12, is the 2-koruna high value of the set, which has a symbolic design for the first flight of man into outer space.

On the 20-haleru stamp, printed in dark blue, purple and brick red, appears a fine illustration of a Soviet cosmic rocket at the moment of takeoff.

Of particular interest are the four jets at the base of the rocket, unlike the American rockets which generally have a single large-thrust jet.

On U. S. drawing boards is a planned four-jet super rocket called the Nova.

The 30-haleru value, in blue green and yellow, features the third Soviet "artificial" earth satellite. According to Albert Durocq, the outstanding French astronautical pioneer, in his book Victory Over Space, Sputnik III of 1958 had a useful load of 2,925 pounds with no less than 2,116 pounds of measuring instruments — a veritable flying laboratory.

The 40-haleru stamp in dark red and green appears to be repeat of the design on the 20-haleru, although it is supposed to represent a spaceship that was launched from a giant spunkit toward Venus.

Apparently no photograph of the Venus spaceship was available at the time the stamp was designed. The date of launching, 12-2-61, is at the top left hand corner.

The 60-haleru blue-violet and orange shows the Russian Lunik I which was the first object to reach the vicinity of the moon. It was fired on Jan. 2, 1959 — the date appears on the stamp—and was given sufficient speed so that when it missed the moon by about 4,000 miles it continued around the sun as a solar satellite.

As shown on the stamp, it is seen circling the sun.

Lunik II was the first man-made object to reach the moon. It hit the surface on Sept. 14, 1959. On Dec. 4 the same year, Lunik III was fired.

Called by the Russians an "automatic interplanetary station," it is featured on the 1.60-koruna stamp, printed in gray-blue and light green. It is shown photographing the far side of the moon for the first time.

The 2-koruna value, in red, blue and mauve, shows an astronaut in a Russian space suit speeding through space—a symbolic figure at the time it was designed. It now could represent Major Yuri Gagarin, the 27-year-old world's first spaceman.

Collecting in the E.T.

By IVOR WHITEHOUSE

A collector has asked about "hairlines" and the so-called "hairline" varieties of Canadian stamps. It pays to know something about these varieties because it can make the difference between a value of two or three cents and a dollar in some instances. The cause of the "hairlines" is not definitely known, and several theories are in existence. It is thought that they are caused through the hardening of the surface of the printing plate. The curving of the plate is a definite factor although not the cause. The lines are horizontal in most instances since the plates are curved on a horizontal axis. Should you find a vertical hairline it will be from a booklet pane made from plates curved on a vertical axis. The lines should not be confused with "plate cracks" and can be distinguished because they pass through the design as well as the margin. You should check your one and two cent Quebec Tercentary stamps. You may find some lines on them. The "hairlines" appear in the margins of stamps as very narrow coloured lines and are best found with a magnifying glass. Good luck to you variety hunters.

Stamp collectors with duplicates and old albums are reminded that there are many collectors who would welcome your surplus stamps and accessories. I have sent along a box or two of unwanted material to the Children's Memorial Hospital several times in the past. If you do have stamps you don't need and other items, why not contact some member of the Eastern Townships Stamp Club. I am sure they will advise you of some worthwhile place to dispose of them. Remember, every stamp, no matter how common, has a value.

I must thank all of you who have sent along information about postal services in days gone by and other historical data. This information will be assembled into some sort of a "paper" for use at a Club meeting and will appear in this column in weeks to come. I am saving some of it simply because it will make better reading when so assembled. I still need information about your local post office and the mail service. Send it along. I'll refund your postage in my letter of thanks, send it to me at Dixville, Quebec.

STAMPS

To introduce one of the best approval services in Canada I will send you a set of giant stamps, a set picturing birds in natural colours, action sports set, gorilla and antelope stamps from the troubled Congo, plus 100 different, a total of 111 stamps, all for only a five cent stamp or coin for postage. Approval selections of Canada, British Colonies or General Foreign available. Return postage always paid. Write at once — supply limited.

One offer only to each individual.

This seems to be the big for writers of juveniles. With the annual LITTLE BROWN AWARD for the best children's book firmly established and W. J. GAGE LTD. recently announcing a "Writing For Young Canada" contest, the list of prizes for children's books has now been added to by the MACMILLAN OF CANADA announcement of $5,000 in prizes for the winning manuscripts in a new series of children's fiction to be launched in the autumn of 1962. First prize will be $2500, second $1500 and third $1000. The title of the new series is CANADIAN ADVENTURE BOOKS and the publishers are looking for lively stories of about ten to twelve thousand words, containing plenty of action and dialogue to appeal to young readers aged eight to ten years. Emphasis will be on a good story but the purpose of this series according to Macmillan, is to encourage awareness of the Canadian heritage and to awaken pride in its moments of courage, truth, loyalty and humanity. Anyone resident in Canada may take part and entries for the contest must be postmarked not later than midnight, Friday, November 30th, 1961. Entry forms may be obtained from the MACMILLAN OF CANADA CO., 70 Bond St., Toronto.

Still on the subject of prizes we are happy to announce that Mrs. Eileen Warren, Vancouver, has been named the top Canadian winner of the 1961 CUTTS HALLMARK TELEPLAY WRITING AWARDS, a contest which was mentioned in this column a few months ago. Her play "Cut Is The Branch" was chosen as the best of the more than 80 scripts submitted by Canadian writers in this international contest. The award carries a $500 cash prize. The international competition drew 1,578 scripts in all and the three top money winners were American writers.

This new award is Mrs. Warren's fourth and biggest prize. Other plays of hers have won prizes in the Vancouver Regional Drama Festival of the Dominion Playwriting contest and the Ottawa Little Theatre Workshop competition. Mrs. Warren was born in Alberta and now lives in British Columbia.

A new book on nutrition has just been written by Mary C. Hiltz, visiting professor of nutrition at the school of Home Economics at Mount Allison University and formerly professor of Foods and Nutrition at the University of Manitoba. The book is being published by MACMILLAN and is called "Fundamental Nutrition in Health and Disease." Professor Hiltz has been associated with the Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations in Rome and before returning to Nova Scotia was at the Women's Christian College at Madras, India.

A CANDLE TO LIGHT THE SUN, the novel by the late Patricia Blondel of Montreal which was published by McCLELLAND & Stewart will be released this fall in the United States by Appleton-Century-Crofts Inc.

Edmonton's Creative Writing classes continued to attract aspiring writers this year with 91 registered. The teacher of this enthusiastic group is Margaret Coleman Johnson and the $25.00 award for the best piece of work submitted during the course was won by Nancy Clegg Murdoch.

other elections were Mrs. A. H. Askanasy, vice-president; Raymond Hull, secretary and H. Griffin, treasurer. Immediate plans in the group are underway for a membership drive and a broadening of services to Vancouver and district writers.

NEW STAMP — A special five-cent stamp will be issued in June to mark the 10th Anniversary of the Colombo Plan. The design, blue on a background of light brown, shows two men looking towards a hydro dam. One is in Western garb and the other is in a turban and tropical clothing and holding a blueprint.

ST. FRANCIS - MASSAWIPPI
BIRD CLUB NOTES

Four items to report this edition: an afterlook at the Annual Revue, the Annual Meeting, a weekend account of wildlife locally in late April and a preview of Field Trips in April-May.

First of all, the Executive took satisfaction from many aspects of the Revue. Public opinion of the show was very high, the seating problem appears to be solved, and the screen displayed the superb colour of the films even better than expected. The high standard of previous revues was maintained.

The Annual Meeting will be held in Bishop Williams Hall, Bishop's University, Friday, May 5th, at 8:15. There promises to be a very strong slate of officers nominated for 1961-62, a sound and encouraging treasurer's report, and an excellent film. Members will do well to bring along interested persons to give them a broader conception of the Club's activities.

The Club greatly appreciates the letters to the Editor which have reported a widening interest in the spring arrival of migrant birds. It has been a great season so far, and a brief report on the observations of three parties on Saturday and Sunday will support that opinion. Look at this! One observer noted the following water birds: 40 Greater Scaup Ducks, 15 Ring-necked, 1 Bufflehead, 40 Common Goldeneye, numerous Mergansers, 2 Common Scoters and 8 Brant, the latter being the first reported appearance of this small goose in this region. All these birds were seen within a few miles of Lennoxville.

The second observer picked out 5 Mallards, 14 Wood Ducks, 3 Ring-necked Ducks and two Kingfishers along the flooded waterways, then, in a swing over drier land, identified, among many other species, 14 Tree and 12 Savannah Sparrows. Just before this was written, this same observer turned in another for the record — a positive identification of a Pintail Duck, April 25th.

The third report came from two experienced birders who took along a novice for her first identification of Sparrow Hawks and Meadowlarks. She can now look forward to a first sight of scores more varieties; when your correspondent saw his first Scarlet Tanager after 15 years, of futile search, it was memorable!

Field trips this season will be weather permitting, numerous varied and more interesting than ever. To open the official season, it is planned to visit the Eutis section around the Massawippi River, down below the old Eutis Mine's slag pile. Meeting point will be the Archway of Bishop's University, at 6:30 a.m., Sunday, April 30th. Water birds should be numerous, as well as interesting, seldom-seen varieties, such as Brown Creepers and Whip-poor-wills. (Better wear rubber footwear.) Wednesday, May 3rd, will be the first evening trip. Meet at the Lennoxville gravel pit, Huntingville Road, at 6:00 p.m. Snipe, Redwings; from there, Bishop's woods is always good for upland species.

Next week, the rest of the schedule. Meanwhile, good birding!

National Baby Week, April 29 to May 6

How to photograph your child

If you're like most people, the majority of your pictures are of the small fry. Children top the popularity poll when it comes to having their pictures taken. Yet, how many family snapshot albums are filled with pictures of the children looking their Sunday best while posing "stiff as a board".

It's a fact, that all good snapshots of children having one thing in common — naturalness. There are a few simple rules for taking good pictures but today's cameras do most of the thinking for you. This leaves you free to concentrate on the picture.

You don't really need an expensive camera and fancy equipment to get natural snaps of your children. A simple box camera can take very good pictures— provided you keep it handy when things start happening in their small worlds.

However, there are a few more things to check off before you squeeze the shutter button get down on his level. You'll be surprised at how the world looks down there at about three feet or lower.

Lighting is important if you're outdoors. Many appealing child shots have lost their appeal due to a youngster squinting into the sun.

Turn your posing child away from the sun, but be sure and check how his face is lighted. Possibly you'll have to resort to flash to fill in shadows.

Keep the backgrounds simple when snapping children indoors or out. A cluttered background can steal the limelight from your little Indian or cowboy and ruin the picture completely.

That's all there is to it. Be ready with your camera, catch the child in action or doing something natural, get down to his level, judge the lighting right, and keep an eye out for the background.

A PERFECT PORTRAIT — This young lady has learned the art of coquetry young and the photographer knew how to take advantage of the fact.

AN IDEAL COMBINATION — Take a baby and combine with water and numerous picture possibilities result. The addition of a ball is another aid in acquiring good expression and natural reactions.

Being a copycat sometimes an advantage

Children are great "copycats" often to the consternation of grownups. A child quickly imitates bad habits, bad speech, however his talent as an actor can be channeled into constructive habits, with a little watchfulness from those he is modeling.

"Establishing Good Food Habits" sounds almost too complicated to be associated with that cute little tyke who can hardly stand on his own two wobbly feet. Yet, that same little rascal is watching and listening, and memorizing — if you say "thank you" when you hand him a toy, he'll remember that, too!

Edna Mae McIntosh, Gerber Nutritionist, suggests one very simple yet important step for the family in setting a good example for the little folks. That is, through hand-washing before meals or other food handling. Baby too, gets accustomed to the regular "mopping" of face and hands with a moist cloth before he is fed, and gradually this ritual of washing before meals becomes associated in his mind with the business of eating.

Helps for children in this cleanliness campaign are low peps in the bathroom, where their own towels and washcloths may be easily reached and identified.

Take the baby
to the doctor regularly

Suppose every baby and toddler in the land went with mother to the Doctor for a check-up on the same day. Picture the traffic jam of thousands of lively little folk plus thousands of mothers plus thousands of schedules and formulas.

Happily for the Doctor, the baby visits are spread out over the month, although many a baby may go for that special inventory or shot during the coming Baby Week, the word "reminder" is most often associated with Baby Week, for the widespread attention to babies at this time points up the need for continuing those regular trips to the Doctor.

"Keep the well baby well" is a happy ounce-of-precaution slogan aimed at preventing trouble before it can become serious.

LEN O'DONNELL'S

Sport Shots
and Pot Shots

Baseball fans of Sherbrooke and Coaticook came close to being deprived of their favorite sport at a special meeting of the Provincial Eastern Townships Baseball League on Thursday evening.

In fact, if it hadn't been for League President J. D. Loignon the old ball game might have been over for this summer at least.

Sherbrooke and Coaticook, new to the league this year, had requested permission to sign American players as part of their seven-man import quotas.

Their arguments were clearly presented by Dr. Gilbert Germain and Yvon Ellyson. Simply put, they were finding it too costly to sign suitable players in Montreal. Salaries and travelling costs were too high there.

But other teams in the league seemed to fear that American imports would make the new teams too strong for them. They argued the issue for a full two-and-a-half hours.

Waterloo finally broke the ice with a motion to allow the two teams to sign three American players each. In the vote, Granby, Acton Vale and Drummondville opposed the motion, with Waterloo, Coaticook and Sherbrooke in favor.

President Loignon cast the tiebreaker. So the two teams will get their imports and the fans will get their baseball.

Commencing next week The Record will carry a special series on golf — Bye Bye Bogies, by Bob Rosenberg. It will appear every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday throughout the summer months. It should help all golfers.

Received an interesting note from Granby the other day. Sportsmen down that way are searching for the 'Brown Cup', donated for hockey competition in that area by the late F.E.T. Brown just prior to the first Great War. At the time there were three teams in the league, Cowansville Canadians, a C.P.R. team and one from Farnham. Mr. Brown was a jeweler in Farnham and a hockey enthusiast.

Anyone knowing of the location of the cup should contact Mrs. Jean Babbitt of Granby. We'd be interested in hearing of it as well.

Harry Blue tells us that his driving range on Brompton Road is open. So here is a chance to get in a little early practice before trying your luck on your favorite course. His new nine-hole, par three layout won't be ready until the end of May. He has started on the clubhouse and should commence on the course very shortly.

It seems that members of the Thetford delegation, who journeyed to Quebec to meet representatives of the government regarding their new arena, were well received. They met M. G. Poisson, deputy minister of the Youth Department.

Mayor Arthur Ouellet and his group, consisting of several aldermen, with Emilien Maheux, member for Mégantic County, who arranged the meeting, and Emile Couture, Ray Sellakwe, of the newly formed arena committee, were told to forward plans as soon as possible and that the government would do their share in the community effort.

So it seems after waiting for years that Thetford will at last get an arena. Work has already started and we are sure it will be a nice one.

When the Hon. Gerard Levesque was made minister of game and fisheries for Quebec he made a promise that was hailed by sportsmen — no longer would politics be a consideration in the running of the department.

But recently three game wardens from this area were fired for political activity.

We wonder how the minister will deal with the arguments of one special group that is going to intervene on behalf of one of the men.

Canada Stands Fair Chance Of Staging Olympic Games But Must Be Prepared To Spend Greenbacks

By JACK SULLIVAN

Canada has a reasonable chance of staging the 1968 Winter Olympic Games and if this happens the organizers must be prepared for a bundle of beefs. Squawking and finding fault is an old Olympic custom.

Historians needn't go further back for proof than the 1960 Winter Games at Squaw Valley, Calif. They were born in rhabarbs, grew up in squabbles. Problems galore sprung up over finances and personnel. The location in the high Sierra of California eventually became known as Squaw Valley.

Canadian officials were there and they got a pretty good idea of what to expect if the Games ever come to this country. Banff in the Canadian Rockies is a 1968 contender and a decision by the International Olympic Committee is scheduled for early 1963.

Just like the Squaw Valley people, Canadians have been unrealistic about finances.

For instance, the California organizers figured on about $4,500,000 to stage the Games. Total costs were more than $18,000,000.

Sponsors of the Banff site thought $4,000,000 could take care of the 1968 costs. And Garibaldi Park in British Columbia, which made an unsuccessful bid, came up with a figure of $10,800,000.

An engineering company surveyed the sites and estimated costs of administration, buildings and so on, at much higher figures. The Banff site, it said, would cost about $10,000,000 and Garibaldi $20,900,000.

That's just the cost alone. Consider the petty complaints, governing bodies and some athletes can dream up. Here are a few that came out of Squaw Valley, although many disappeared with the running of the events:

A Canadian hockey official, manager Ernie Goman of the Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen, called the one outdoor rink reserved for practice for the nine teams a "barnyard."

Other hockey officials were more outspoken. They threatened to pull out of the Games and stage a world tournament in Los Angeles if the organizers didn't do something about the ice in the main arena that was bathed in sunlight and if the organizers would not schedule night games.

Olympic officials put up a curtain of rope that kept out the sunlight and stuck to their original schedule that called for day games. The hockey people cooled out.

A speed skater contended a faulty course caused her to fall during the 1,000 - metre race costing her a gold medal. Officials ruled her fall had nothing to do with ice conditions.

Before the Games, there was much discussion over whether the men's downhill ski run would be an adequate test. The complaints disappeared when the event got under way.

Jacques Palardy, Rod Pelletier Sign With Alouettes

Brings Fold To Six; Team Holding
Workouts At Stadium; Season Opens
With Locals At Acton Vale May 7

Jacques Palardy and Rod Pelletier, both of Sherbrooke, reached terms with Manager Yvon Ellyson of the Alouettes yesterday and signed their cards with the local club.

This brings the number of signed players to six as Claude Prud'homme and Jean-Guy Mathieu, both pitchers, Jacques Normand and Paul-Emile Ruel are the others in the fold of the club. The Alouettes are trying to build a club mixing young players with some veterans in order to secure balance.

Palardy is still of junior age and for the past few years has performed in junior and intermediate leagues. He commenced to play in the OTJ Juvenile League and last year was one of the pillars of Claude "Piton" Ruel's hurling staff in the local junior league.

He stands close to six feet and possesses a good curve with a fast ball. He is also an outstanding junior hockey player and last season was with the Indians in the Sherbrooke Junior Hockey League where he performed on the blue line.

Rod Pelletier is another player from junior ranks and is noted for his hitting ability in driving out the long ball. He is fast and can play first base or the outfield and since the start of the training has been going all out to try and cop a berth on the club.

Last winter Rod Pelletier was a member of Pat Murphy's Beavers who went the whole way to reach the finals of the Provincial Hockey Junior B. He just quit the juvenile ranks and the experience he has acquired will help him. Jean-Paul and Gaston Pepin, coaches of the Alouettes have been more than satisfied with his work during training camp and they didn't hesitate in signing him to a contract.

Oil Kings' Coach Brayshaw Is Confident That His Team Can Beat
St. Mike's Tonight Who Lead 2-0

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Oil Kings coach Buster Brayshaw had a lot on his mind Friday, but found time to come up with a victory prediction for his boys over the high-flying Toronto St. Michael's College Majors in the third game of the best-of-seven Memorial Cup series tonight.

St. Mike's stretched their series lead to 2-0 with a 4-1 win Thursday night.

"I expect to win and with any sort of breaks at all we're going to make this a rough series yet," Brayshaw said.

The Oil Kings ran through a practice session Friday night when Dave Richardson of Winnipeg Rangers had his first chance to skate with the club. Other replacements, Bryan Hextall from Brandon Wheat Kings and Ken Stephanson from Winnipeg Braves were in the Kings lineup Thursday night and Brayshaw said all three would dress tonight.

He said he hadn't decided who would sit out to make room for the newcomers. He added: "I never make up my mind until the last minute."

The one-time Chicago Black Hawks is banking on a big improvement from his Kings and the feeling that Majors' netminder Jerry Cheevers can't be as good as he was Thursday when he brought off 31 saves some bordering the impossible.

St. Mike's too have a reinforcement available. Rev. David Bauer said after Thursday's game he would send Sonny Osborne into the lineup, but didn't say who he would bench. Osborne played for St. Mike's in the playoffs but was delayed in Toronto for examinations.

Arnold Palmer Comes Up His With Usual Finish By Posting 63 To Take
Lead In Texas Open With 130

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Arnold Palmer, noted for his clutch finishes, started his move in the second round of the $30,000 Texas Open Friday, shooting an eight-under-par 63, highlighted by an eagle, to take the lead at 36 holes with 130.

Palmer overtook and passed Don Whitte of Borrego Springs, Calif., the first round leader, like the Texas wind over the 6,616-yard Oak Hills County Club course.

Palmer, second leading money-winner of the year behind Gary Player, the man from South Africa who isn't doing too well here—he had 138 for 36 holes—got his eagle on the tenth when he chipped 30 feet from a bunker. That put the icing on Palmer's lowest round of the year during which he has won three tournaments.

Whitte wound up with a three-over par 74 for 137 and just about shot himself out of contention for the $4,300 first money.

For most of the day Al Geiberger, the 23-year-old sophomore from Santa Barbara, Calif., held the lead. Geiberger came in about noon with a six-under-par 65 to make his 36-hole total 133, good for second place. Palmer finished five hours later.

Jack Burke of Houston matched Geiberger's 65 and pulled into a tie for third place at 134 with Al Balding, the tall Torontonian who had a 70. Montreal's Al Johnston also carded a 70 for a 138 total.

It was cutoff time, with the low 70 pros and ties and 10 amateurs going into today's third round. A 143 was required to make the cutoff.

Today the field will be cut to the 60 low pros and ties plus the 10 amateurs.

Banff Recommended As Site
For 1968 Winter Olympic Games But Must Get Approval From Senior Body

By JACK SULLIVAN

TORONTO (CP) — The International Ski Federation (FIS) holds the key to Canada's bid for the 1968 Winter Olympic Games. If this powerful organization says no, the odds are that the International Olympic Committee, which has the final word, will go along with it.

The test is scheduled for next year when an international competition will be held at Banff, the recommended Canadian venue for the world's largest winter sports meet. If the courses, particularly the men's downhill, meet with the approval of the FIS, Banff organizers can pull out all the stops in an effort to bring the games to Canada for the first time in history.

This was the situation today after the Canadian Olympic Association gave its okay to the Alberta vacation spot's application to present Canada's case to the IOC in 1963. The COA Saturday agreed at its annual meeting with the findings of an engineering company that studied six possible Canadian venues, five of them in British Columbia.

MUST IMPROVE COURSE
The 42-page report, provided by the Foundation of Canada

Engineering Corporation Limited, favored Banff but said it must improve the men's downhill course on Mount Torquay to meet FIS standards if it expected to be a serious contender for the '68 games. Now in the running are Norway, Japan and Germany and other possibilities are Switzerland and Russia.

Other proposed Canadian venues studied were Garibaldi, Manning Park, Fernie, Rossland and Revelstoke.

The report said that only three—Manning Park, Banff and Garibaldi—met the requirements considered necessary to stage an Olympic. Company engineers finally narrowed the field down to Banff and Garibaldi. It estimated cost of staging the games at Banff would be $10,000,000, half the estimated cost of holding them at Garibaldi.

REMEMBER WHEN

For the first time in a registered Canadian skeet shoot, a possible score of 100 was made at a team competition held in Toronto 21 years ago today. The marksman was Dr. G. D. Beierl of Toronto.

Stan Matthews, Britain's Famous
Soccer Star, Arrives Next Week
To Play For Toronto In Pro Loop

LONDON (CP) — Stanley Matthews reverts to his familiar role as Britain's soccer ambassador when he flies to Canada next Tuesday to play for Toronto City in the Eastern Professional League.

The 46-year-old Blackpool winger has played alongside barefooted Arabs in Zanzibar and the soccer elite of South America in his 30-year career. In Britain he's a household name.

At an age when most athletes have retired to their armchairs, Matthews can still pull at least an extra 5,000 to the soccer stands.

His tricks are well known—but still baffling. He shows the ball to the defender, feints, shuffles, then spurts, leaving his unfortunate opponent with a back view of the famous bow-legs and hunched shoulders.

Off the field he is just as elusive. His public speeches are made in a slow northern accent. It seems as though he hasn't got used to being famous.

Born in Burslem, Staffordshire, he joined his local club, Stoke City, in 1930. Four years later his slender 154-pound physique was casting a powerful shadow in international arenas.

In 1947 he staggered Stoke fans by requesting a transfer. His popularity was so great that the town hall was hired for an unsuccessful protest meeting.

Blackpool paid Stoke an £11,500 transfer fee for his services. He played 84 matches for England before his international career ended in 1957. His replacement was Bryan Douglas of Blackburn, who wasn't born when Matthews made his international debut.

He chooses the 1953 Football Association Cup final between Blackpool and Bolton as his finest game. With 15 minutes to go Blackpool was 3-1 down. Matthews transformed the game.

Three times he scattered the Bolton defence, three times centre forward Stan Mortensen found the net. The 100,000 crowd went wild with joy.

Two years ago Matthews' career was threatened by a knee injury. Even Blackpool had its doubts about his future and invested in a replacement, Arthur Kaye of Barnsley.

But this didn't stop the veteran winger. He fought his way back to fitness and Kaye had to move elsewhere to find a first team place.

In the 1957 honors list, Matthews was made a Commander of the Order of British Empire, the first professional soccer player to get such an award.

REMEMBER WHEN . . .

Boston Red Sox refused an offer of $100,000 for pitcher and home-run hitter Babe Ruth 33 years ago today. Ruth, a giant in baseball those days, became a member of New York Yankees two years later and made baseball history with them for the next 15 years.

Engine Trouble
Forces Crackers
To Postpone

ATLANTA (AP) — A new wrinkle in baseball postponements turned up in the Southern Association Friday when plane engine trouble grounded the Atlanta Crackers who had hoped to open a series Friday night at Shreveport, La.

The Crackers, class AA farm of Los Angeles Dodgers, got as far as Birmingham when the trouble developed. They returned to Atlanta where mechanics were still tinkering with the balky engine hours later.

Lowery Kirk, Star Forward With
Memphis State, Took Two Minutes
To Make Biggest Decision Of Life

MEMPHIS (AP) — Tall, quiet, spoken Lowery Kirk was never tempted by a $1,000 offer to "shave" points in a basketball game.

"You've got the wrong man," he firmly told the unidentified man on the phone.

Two minutes later, he reported the attempted bribe to Memphis state basketball coach Bob Vanatta.

In those two minutes Lowery Kirk, star forward, probably made the most momentous decision of his young life.

The fix offer was for Memphis State's game with Villanova in which State was a five-point favorite. He was to "mess around" and see that his team didn't win by five points, he said.

"It was a friendly voice," Kirk recalled. "At first I misunderstood him. Then he dropped his bomb on me. I told him I didn't want to have anything to do with it. He said 'look, don't mention this to anybody,' and I hung up."

Seven Countries To Compete In 4,098 Car Rally, Opens Sunday
At Montreal And Ends In Vancouver

MONTREAL (CP) — Drivers from seven countries will compete in one of the world's longest car rallies — a 4,098-mile jaunt beginning here Sunday morning and ending in Vancouver a week later.

The event, which has attracted 107 entries, is designed not as a race but as a precision drive. A total of 71 trophies and more than $5,000 in cash prizes are at stake.

It is being sponsored by the British Columbia International Trade Fair and an oil company.

Officials say it is the largest rally ever organized in the western hemisphere. There are entries from Sweden, France, Germany, Norway, England, the United States and from all of Canada's 10 provinces.

Everything from driving skill to navigation and endurance will be tested in the contest with a high emphasis placed on safety, officials say.

Eddie Yost Lost To Angels For Three Weeks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Baseball's hard luck Angels lost third baseman Eddie Yost Friday for at least three weeks.

X-Rays disclosed a fracture of a bone in the middle finger of Yost's right hand.

The hand will be in a cast for three weeks. How much longer it will be before the veteran leadoff player returns to action was speculative.

Yost was hurt in the ninth inning in New York April 20 by a pitch by Yankee hurler Bill Stafford. At first it was believed he had suffered only a hairline fracture.
