'A bunch of bananas' - Allard

Allard backs historians; raps modern statue

FIRST PUBLICATION OF SKETCH OF PROPOSED GALT MONUMENT IN MITCHELL PARK

Sherbrooke Member of Parliament Maurice Allard last night threw his support behind the Eastern Townships Historical Society and the city council in urging the rejection of an abstract design for a memorial monument to the city's Father of Confederation Sir Alexander Galt.

Mr. Allard, who obtained a sketch of the proposed monument to be erected in the North Ward's Mitchell Park, agreed that the monument "looks like a bunch of bananas."

His prepared statement, given to The Record last night, read:

"Mr. Desmond McKeon (vice-president of the ET Historical Society) was right. It looks like a bunch of bananas. I don't recognize Sir Alexander Galt, who was another Conservative independent of Sherbrooke a long time ago. It seems that the present Liberal government prefers to make fantasy out of this Father of Confederation."

"I still support the historical society of the Eastern Townships and the city council of Sherbrooke, who both request a monument with a bust of Sir Alexander Galt."

The controversy over the design blew up at an Oct. 30 meeting of city council at which a letter from Mr. McKeon was tabled, protesting the proposed design, and asking for council support of a traditional bust.

Council agreed to support the Society's position at that time, only members of the society had seen sketches and a model of the proposed monument. No members of city council knew what the proposed design looked like.

On Nov. 1, Patrick Asselin, MP for Richmond-Wolfe, who has been involved in the Galt project, said the Society's protest came too late. He said the design, by Montreal sculptress Suzanne Guite is final, and soil tests were to be undertaken shortly in the city-owned park as a preliminary to erection of the monument.

Mr. Asselin would not release a copy of the sketch. He said he wanted to be sure it was presented in the newspaper "in the proper manner."

It is understood that the base of the abstract statue is to contain a likeness of Sir Alexander Galt.

The monument was commissioned by the Historic Sites Department of the federal government after attempts to preserve the former home of Galt on Moore Street failed.

The home, which was to have been moved a few feet from its site on property belonging to an order of nuns, fell apart as it was being jacked up in preparation for moving.

Meeting scheduled to discuss HARP

NORTHFIELD — (AP) — A meeting has been scheduled for today at Norwich University here to discuss the controversial "HARP" project.

The project is the High Altitude Research Project now being conducted under the supervision of McGill University of Montreal, Canada. Until this past summer, the program had the joint support of the U.S. Defense Department and the Canadian government. But the Canadian government, reportedly upset over use of the project to develop weapons systems, withdrew its financial aid and ordered the control of the project removed from Canadian soil.

The project includes a test and research site at Highwater, Que., just north of the Vermont-Quebec border.

Since that time, Vermont Development Department officials have been trying to find a suitable sponsor for the project in Vermont.

The University of Vermont at Burlington was first approached in late summer, but after several months of deliberations, decided against it because it could not get guarantees of continued financial support from the federal government.

Since that time, development ing soon.

As for financial aid, the research project has received several contracts in recent weeks from subcontractors for the national Aeronautics and Space Administration. In addition, reports say several Vermont industries have expressed an interest in providing funds to bring the multi-million dollar program to Vermont.

The HARP project is currently involved in testing projects in the upper atmosphere. Much of the scientific data collected to date has been in the field of meteorology and long-range weather forecasting as well as aero-space ballistics.

Closer to moon

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (Reuters) — U.S. spacemen stood a giant step closer to the moon today after the successful test of an unmanned Apollo spacecraft and a perfect lunar landing by Surveyor VI. The unmanned Surveyor touched down gently on the moon's surface at 8:01 p.m. EST Thursday and within an hour was sending pictures of a cliff which scientists described as "the most rugged feature we have yet seen on the moon."

Life changed

LONDON (AP) — Britain's new don't-drive-after-drinking law is changing things after being in force a month.

Trade has slumped by more than 20 per cent at Vincent Parsons' pub, The Swan, in the London suburb of West Drayton.

It's splitting up old friendships, it's going to leave a gap in people's lives," Parsons says.

Out of action

MONROE, Mich. (CP) — A $120,000,000 nuclear reactor near this community downriver from Detroit is out of action because somebody dropped a piece of metal in it.

The reactor will remain idle for several months as a result of that small item.

There have been published reports that the metal is, of all things, a beer can. The general plant manager, Walter J. McCarthy, denied this.

Wants troops

BANGKOK (Reuters) — Informal Thai sources said today the United States has agreed to give Thailand ground-to-air missiles and other modern weapons in exchange for an additional 10,000 Thai troops in South Vietnam.

U.S. embassy officials here confirmed that negotiations with Thailand included the supply of ground-to-air missiles and other weapons but could not disclose the exact amount of military aid until talks are complete.

Lasting peace

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The United Nations Security Council adjourned its Middle East debate early today amid new hope that private discussions could bring lasting peace to the area.

The council agreed to defer its public debate on the matter until Monday after a protracted session, called at the request of Egypt which began Thursday.

Government pleas for end to hangman

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor General Pennell pleaded with MPs Thursday to abolish at least partially the death penalty and authorize its use only for murderers of prison guards and police officers for a five-year trial period.

He directed a special plea to those who would do away with hanging in all cases:

"I believe that this bill will only be defeated in principle if there is an unhappy coalition between those who feel that the bill has not gone far enough and those who feel that it has gone too far."

He spoke as the Commons opened debate on his bill to limit the death penalty. Voting on the measure is to be free of party lines.

CONSIDER CHANGES
After second reading—approval in principle—Mr. Pennell said he would listen with "great interest and deep respect" to any amendments that might be moved.

An attentive Commons listened to 10 speeches—five favoring the bill, four against it and one undecided. The debate continues today with Prime Minister Pearson expected to be one of the speakers.

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) joined Mr. Pennell in pleading with total abolitionists to get behind the bill.

"There is an ancient expression... that half a loaf is better than no break," said the Toronto lawyer. "It might be said by those who favor abolition that the present bill provides for 99-100 of the loaf and that it would be wrong to reject it."

Those who spoke against the bill laid heavy emphasis on the fact that Parliament, only 18 months ago, voted to retain hanging for all convicted murderers.

They also drew attention to the 27 commutations ordered by the cabinet since the Liberals took office in 1963. There have been no hangings in Canada since 1962 and so the country in effect already had done away with the death penalty, they argued.

Two speakers called on the cabinet to obey the will of Parliament and to hang those sentenced by the courts.

Mr. Pennell pointed to results of a study by a British royal commission that led to a U.S. bill ending hanging for a trial period.

He said most murderers are either insane, in the throes of violent passion or emotion or else calculating planners. In each case, the death penalty would not be a deterrent.

He quoted the British case of Timothy Evans, executed in 1950 for a killing later found to be the work of a prosecution witness, to point out possible miscarriages of justice.

He promised there would be no automatic parole of convicted Elgin.

given life imprisonment in lieu of the death penalty.

Backing the minister with speeches were Mr. Brewin, John Matheson, parliamentary assistant to Mr. Pearson, Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East) and Harold Stafford (L—Elgin).

Confederation good for Que.

NEW YORK (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec said Thursday night that Quebec had derived "great benefits" from Confederation but added that it is time to start working for a new constitution for a modern state.

The conference of provincial governments in Toronto later this month might "turn out to be the turning point of Confederation, a starting point for new constitutional arrangements in Canada."

But the Toronto meeting was "only the beginning" and it would be "a long task," he said, adding that Quebec was not the only province that disagreed with points in the Confederation agreements.

But "with modern communications and good will Canada can solve its problems," he said in an address to the Canadian Society of New York.

RESOLVE CONFLICTS

The premier, who arrived here Tuesday night to fill the speaking engagement, also has met with private groups and held talks with Wall Street financiers.

The premier himself had stressed before leaving Quebec that the visit arose from the invitation of the Canadian Society but said he would utilize the trip to urge greater investment in the province.

He also planned visits with

Leger to serve Africa's lepers

MONTREAL (CP) — Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger is turning his back on the comforts of city life to face the harsh challenges of the leper colonies of Africa.

The Roman Catholic Archbishop of Montreal told a press conference Thursday that he was giving up "the position of command to become a simple missionary priest."

The press conference followed an announcement from the Vatican that Pope Paul had accepted the cardinal's resignation as archbishop and acceded to his request to work among the lepers.

Elected to the Sacred College of Cardinals in 1963, three years after being named Archbishop of Montreal, Cardinal Leger described the church as essentially "a missionary body," adding:

"The day when she ceases to go towards those who have not yet received the Gospel, she will have turned in on herself, she will have become a ghetto, and will have been unfaithful to her mission."

"But if the Gospel must be proclaimed to all men, it is directed first of all to the humble, to the poor in spirit for whom our Lord always showed a particular concern."

Cardinal Leger, 63, who plans to leave for Africa in mid-December, said he has "reached the age where a certain sclerosis of soul and body might set in."

"The spirit must be used to get out of the rut... The confrontation with paganism may stimulate faith. Furthermore, it is good to return to the practice of obedience after having been placed in authority."

Regarded as one of the leading progressives in the hierarchy, the cardinal has been outspoken in his requests that the church shed some of its pomp, ceremony and aloofness and get closer to the people, with laity playing a greater and greater role.

He spoke on such things as birth control and urged a more liberal view by the church, saying marital love should be placed on an equal plane of importance with child-bearing.

Cardinal Leger's decision to leave his post in Montreal met a flood of regrets.

Maurice Cardinal Roy, Archbishop of Quebec City, said it will be painful not to see "in our midst any more someone who has been for so many years such a worthy adviser and very dear friend."

The administrative council of the Canadian Catholic Conference—which includes all the Roman Catholic cardinals, archbishops and bishops in the country—said in Ottawa it was "amazed" to learn of the cardinal's move.

This was a "missionary and in a sense also a direct and specific vocation which matured in the mind of the bishop who for 17 years governed the archdiocese of Montreal, even though afflicted by occasional ill health, and in spite of his age."

Cardinal Leger is 63.

HE'S 104 AND STILL SWINGING — Cesar Paul, an Algonquin Indian from Fort Coulonge, Que., raises his glass to beauty as he celebrates his 104th birthday at a party attended by 500 people at Fort Coulonge recently. Mr. Paul, who speaks both English and French, has practiced a number of occupations in his lifetime including surveyor, farmer, hunting guide and trapper and raised eight children. His admirer is a grand, grand niece, Ruth Ouellet of Aymer, Que. Fort Coulonge is on the Ottawa River, about 60 miles northwest of Ottawa.

MAIL SERVICE CURTAILED FOR ARMISTICE DAY

Tomorrow, Nov. 11, mail service will be curtailed in some areas of the Eastern Townships because of the Armistice Day holiday. Mail subscribers to The Record will be affected.

While in most cases, mail trucks will be moving some mail, two areas will not be receiving any mail at all tomorrow afternoon. They are:

1. East Angus, Bishopton, Marlinton, Theford Mines;
2. Johnville, Bulwer, Birchton, Eaton, Sawyerville, East Clifton and East Hereford.

Quakers to deliver Vietnam funds at Border tomorrow

The Amherst Area Quaker Action Committee will make a second trip to Canada to deliver funds for victims of the Vietnam War on November 11, crossing the border at Derby Line, Vt.

The Committee, members of the religious Society of Friends (Quakers) and others, has been collecting funds to give to the Canadian Friends Service Committee.

This Canadian Committee will use the funds to purchase medical supplies to send to the Red Cross of North Viet Nam, South Viet Nam, and the National Liberation Front.

Last May 27, 80 Quakers and friends from the Amherst area crossed into Canada with cash gifts of $3,000 to be used in aid, in the form of medical supplies, to all victims of the Vietnam War.

The United States Treasury Department considers it illegal to give this medical aid under the provisions of the Trading with Enemy Act.

Members of the Committee will cross into Canada at the bridge at Derby Line on Route 5. The crossing will take place at approximately 3 p.m.

Members of the group will be met on the bridge by Canadian friends and a representative of the Canadian Friends Service Committee who will receive the funds for the medical supplies.

Members of the Committee will accept technical responsibility for the crossing. No specific identification is needed to pass through the Customs except for foreign-born persons who should carry naturalization papers.

For those who expect to stay overnight, or to go on into Canada, there will probably be accommodations at the homes of friends. The majority of the group expects to return to the Amherst area around 11 p.m. November 11.

Management club studies computers

Thirty-five Sherbrooke men in various industries and from different companies are studying data processing and computers in a course being taught by members of the Canadian Ingersoll-Rand of Sherbrooke.

Last night, the fourth of the five lesson courses was held in the training room at the local C.I.R.

The five lessons or classes, one held each week, concern: the unit record equipment, computer concepts, computer programming, systems development and new computer devices.

The last lesson is playing a business game simulating a supermarket on a computer with four competitive teams.

Bob Miller, co-ordinator of the manufacturing systems at the Rand in Sherbrooke, is one of the three course instructors, and he said the course is being given strictly for the interest and benefit of the pupils.

He said the idea was conceived by a member of the Sherbrooke branch of Industrial Management Club of Canada, which is sponsoring the course. Paul Rajotte of Bruck Mills is the president of the I.M.C.C. in Sherbrooke.

The computer system at the Sherbrooke branch of the Rand is the largest in this city used for industrial purposes.

The two instructors from the Rand, other than Mr. Miller, are Bill Petryniak, manager of systems development and Frank Perrault, manager of programming.

The course classes are split into two, one class studying on each Wednesday evening and the other meeting Thursday nights.

Wifred Gagne, 24, of Sherbrooke, pleaded guilty with explanations to a charge of theft of a car worth $300 and will be sentenced in two weeks.

Judge Turmel gave Gagne's lawyer, Arcadius Denis, two weeks to study the circumstances of the case.

When lawyer Denis asked for two extra weeks, Gagne reprimanded him and said he wanted an immediate sentence.

Judge Turmel told Denis that no argument could alter the sentence he was about to pronounce.

Gagne explained that he was at a dance hall in Cookshire and got a ride with a friend who had said the car belonged to his brother.

Gagne said he didn't know the car was stolen and when Judge Turmel asked him why then, he pleaded guilty, Gagne said he was seen in the car and that the QPP officers who arrested him had knocked him around and told him to plead guilty if he knew what was good for him.

Judge Turmel told Gagne that two weeks ago when Gagne appeared in court, he gave him a chance and sentenced him to the time he had spent in jail awaiting trial.

He told Gagne that he had told him then that he did not want to see him in court again and Gagne had said he wouldn't be.

Prosecutor Langlais informed the court that the youths involved in the theft with Gagne were young and had no records and Judge Turmel said, "He is always involving youths."

This is not the first time Gagne has been involved with boys younger than he in criminal offences.

Gagne told his lawyer that he would accept the postponing of the sentence if the police would not threaten him again.

Sherbrooke courts

Obtains money falsely, is jailed for two years

A 24-year-old Sherbrooke man was sentenced to two years in prison yesterday by Judge Benoit Turmel in the court of sessions.

Jacques Andre Royer pleaded guilty to numerous charges of obtaining money under false pretences and the court recommended that he be given a mental examination and that he be given training at Pavilion Laval.

Pavilion Laval is a training institute which is an extension of St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary in Montreal.

Royer obtained illegally amounts totalling $2,029 in one case, plus amounts of $45, $20 twice, $385, $53, $375, $23, $175, and $135.

When prosecuting attorney Langlais completed reading the above list of amounts, he said that under these circumstances, Royer could be called unstable.

Royer's lawyer, Arcadius Denis, said that Royer needed special help because he was convinced the accused did not realize the consequences of cashing a false check.

Denis asked the clemency of the court for his client.

Judge Turmel said that he had studied Royer's record, his case and obtained much information concerning the accused, and he came to the conclusion that no one wanted Royer or could help him and therefore he stole to exist.

Judge Turmel told Royer that he could not go on living as he has previously and that he should learn a trade while he is in the penitentiary.

Wifred Gagne, 24, of Sherbrooke, pleaded guilty with explanations to a charge of theft of a car worth $300 and will be sentenced in two weeks.

Church action reflects new needs

The Christian Church, like any other organization, must revise its operating practices from time to time if it is to continue to function as an instrument of good to the people it hopes to serve.

Systems that were effective 50 years, or even 25 years, ago are no longer appropriate.

Shifts in population, developments in transportation and communications and the growth of a greater spirit of tolerance and co-operation between the sects have removed the need for certain methods of operation and have created new demands and problems.

Probably nowhere have these changes been more pronounced than in the Province of Quebec, where the population set-up, particularly among the Protestant denominations, today bears little relation to that of half-a-century ago.

Realization of the tremendous changes which have been taking place in the life of the people is the reason behind the survey now being conducted by the Quebec-Sherbrooke Presbytery of the United Church.

Only by obtaining the most complete data on the problems and opportunities in the area it serves can any religious group hope to adapt its operations to the changing needs.

Without such information any efforts to improve service and efficiency must be made on a piecemeal and often unsatisfactory basis.

The significant aspects of the United Church operation is that it indicates the leaders of the church — clerical and lay — have a true appreciation of the extent of the difficulties facing them and hope to do something about it.

After a quick check of prices, why do some still call 'em "dime" stores?

Gilles Gregoire should get out—now

Only one objection can be taken against the decision of Gilles Gregoire, MP, not to contest the next federal general election.

That is that he is taking too long to quit the House of Commons.

Basically, Mr. Gregoire should have resigned his House seat when he left the Creditiste party to espouse the cause of separatism.

No valid exception can be taken to a man changing his political allegiance once he is elected. There have been frequent examples in the past of a man crossing the floor or shifting from one opposition group to another and there has been no serious demand for his resignation.

But Mr. Gregoire's case does not come within this category.

When he entered the House of Commons, Mr. Gregoire took certain oaths of office, including one of loyalty to the Queen and another pledging himself to work for the interests of Canada and Canadians.

His oath of service to the country contained no reservations which might have restricted its application to working for the interests of any particular section of the people.

By carrying on a campaign for withdrawing Quebec from confederation, Mr. Gregoire is working against the interests of Canada and by doing so is breaking the oath he took after his election.

This, alone, could be considered reason for his ejection from Parliament even if he lacked the common decency to get out by his own accord.

For a drastic reducing diet, try selling door-to-door on a commission.

Other papers say:

Optimism, and a warning, on future

It is encouraging to hear an enthusiastic and optimistic assessment of Canada's economic position from someone as highly placed in the councils of the nation as Arthur J. R. Smith, chairman of the Economic Council of Canada.

Mr. Smith, in a speech in Vancouver, said he was surprised at the widespread lack of confidence in our economic future, which he described as "both large and exciting".

"We have already in the 1960s achieved an advance which is unprecedented in our history... moreover we can look forward, for many years ahead, to rapidly expanding economic potentials, to future potential of truly extraordinary dimensions."

Perhaps this is our century after all. Certainly, the standard of living of most Canadians and especially those who live in Ontario, is the envy of the world.

Mr. Smith's address reflects the tone of the council's fourth annual report, published last month, which was optimistic yet cautioned at the problems to be surmounted in the next decade.

Toronto Telegram

Mr. Smith singles out price increases, which he said would be especially difficult to contain under the high employment and high-demand conditions which go hand-in-hand with economic progress. Yet Mr. Smith rejects the price and wage guidelines which Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp has called for.

Mr. Sharp earlier this year rejected price and wage guidelines as a means of combating inflation. Later he said they wouldn't work anyway. Then a few weeks ago, he asked industry and labor to use restraint in pricing and wage demands.

Mr. Smith rightly points out that price stability is dependent to a large extent in Canada on international price developments. Guidelines alone are not enough. The attack on inflation must involve also fiscal and monetary policy, international exchange rates and commercial policy.

Specifically, Mr. Smith says governments should attempt to stabilize construction expenditures, announce their long-term spending programs, co-ordinate spending and fiscal policy among the various levels of government and develop a sound wage policy in government.

What this boils down to is a plea for the government to show the kind of leadership in battling inflation that it has neglected so far. Mr. Sharp, in part, a victim of the long, inflationary spiral which is unprecedented in our history. Orthodox remedies such as cyclical budgeting and increasing interest rates do not apply.

Now the country is bracing for a new round of tax increases. At the same time, Mr. Sharp could do a great deal to restore confidence in his policies by boldly attacking the dragon of government spending.

An administration that has escalated expenditures to their present level must not only be prepared to postpone programs, but attack the waste and inefficiency which has been so glaringly obvious since the Glassco Commission report five years ago.

French Canada says:

Bennett cries 'national disgrace' about the high deficit of Expo

Montreal La Presse—W. A. C. Bennett, premier of British Columbia, is crying "national disgrace" about the Expo deficit which is several times higher than originally foreseen. He takes advantage of the situation to criticize the federal government, responsible, in his eyes, for all the financial ailments from which we are suffering. One can, without crying "national disgrace," regret that the estimates made at the start concerning the cost of Expo were so far removed from the final results. Despite all the ponderables which had to be taken into account, it seems that with a little more realism the gap would have been much less pronounced.

This does not mean that it would not have been large in any case. It is important to remember that this was the first experience of the kind in North America. The Universal and International Exhibition held in Brussels in 1958 was the only point of reference on which one could lean.

It must be admitted that between the Belgium of 1958 and the Canada of 1967, the differences are many and considerable. Those who had the ungrateful and very difficult task of drafting Expo's first budgets thus moved ahead... in the dark, on unknown ground.

Be that as it may... it is necessary to look above and beyond the figures, even if they are impressive.

After being a great construction site, Expo 67 was an enormous tourist enterprise which attracted millions of foreign visitors here. Tens of thousands of them travelled to British Columbia. Our balance of payments this year will surely be better than in 1966. As to the reputation of our country abroad, it grew in a proportion scarcely comparable with the millions which Expo cost.

—Cyrille Felteau (Nov. 7)

mends that taxes be applied on all sources of income, including capital.

Mr. Thatcher minced no words in expressing his opinion. He said if the federal government adopts the Carter report it will face "real problems" among the Liberals of Western Canada. They agree to collaborate with the federal government, but they do not intend to let the problems of the Prairies fall into second place.

Mr. Thatcher does not condemn all of the Carter report. But there are few of its recommendations which he does not reject. He is particularly opposed to a Carter commission recommendation calling for the elimination of tax concessions aimed at encouraging the development of new mineral deposits. It is important that the Liberal government in Ottawa take a stand without delay. In our opinion, this proposal would not hasten the bringing about of an agreement since no policy on salary has yet been established.

What would prevent plunging the province into the conflict that is feared would be a more conciliatory attitude by the unions, an agreement to delay the negotiation of their contracts with the state.

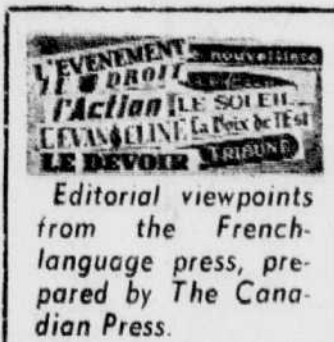

But it appears there can be no question of that, judging from their present attitude.

The union of liquor board employees has already submitted its collective labor agreement, and the 50,000 hospital employees, the 30,000 provincial civil servants and the thousands of teachers employed by the province are all preparing to enter the scene. The 60,000 teachers whose agreements are renewed in June are watching the situation closely. Finally, the 9,000 employees of Hydro-Quebec are studying the working conditions and the salary demands of their next contract.

This means that the government will soon have to face the demands of some 150,000 organized workers. The problem is a big one. It is all the more complex because the unions, to win their point, will not hesitate to paralyze government services if necessary.

The amount of the increase they will seek has not yet been disclosed, but one can be sure they will take advantage of the situation to demand a basic salary comparable to that of private enterprise.

—Roland Gagne (Nov. 4)

so that mining companies may know what is in store for them. Until then, they are marking time.

Mr. Thatcher took advantage of his visit to Ottawa to suggest that the federal government reduce its expenditures. Could not the federal government temporarily do what Mr. Thatcher has done in his province—freeze the size of the civil service?

The Saskatchewan premier is concerned about federal budgetary deficits. "We are of the opinion," he said, "that the Liberals will not gain ground in the West until the federal government has balanced its budget."

—Hector Heroux (Nov. 2)

Granby La Voix de l'Est—On the occasion of his recent cabinet shuffle, Premier Johnson said he intends to establish a public service department at the next session of the legislature. Under the direction of Marcel Massé, now minister without portfolio attached to the education department, the new ministry will be assigned the task of establishing a salary policy for the public service, in order to ensure better relations between the state and the civil service.

It is clear, however, that this new ministry will not be in a position to play a dominant role in talks soon to begin on the negotiation of labor contracts. To act in a concrete way, the ministry should first of all establish solid and effective structures. But to do that, it will need time, particularly to find competent personnel.

Recently, unions asked for the immediate calling of a special session to deal with the creation of the ministry of the Ways and Means committee, was assisted in the kitchen by Mrs. M. King, Mrs. A. Rowat, Mrs. S. Snow, Mrs. M. MacLean, Mrs. J. Mitchell and Mrs. R. Sterling.

Candles and torches

Soviets celebrate 50th anniversary

By PETER BUCKLEY

LENINGRAD (CP) — Gas-fired torches light up the night sky now above the massive stone walls of 260-year-old Peter and Paul Fortress, the oldest building in Leningrad.

There are 50 torches, one for each year since the Bolshevik Revolution, and the glare can be seen from almost all of the historic sites connected with the fateful days of 1917.

Directly across the Neva River, the flames are plainly visible at the opulent Hermitage Museum, once the Winter Palace of the czars and later a refuge for Alexander Kerensky's short-lived provisional government until the Bolsheviks overran its defences and seized power.

A mile or so down the Neva, the glare can be seen from the spot where the powerful cruiser Aurora, under the control of revolutionary crew members, fired a single blank shell the night of Oct. 24, 1917—Nov. 6 by today's calendar—as a signal for the Bolsheviks to begin a concerted revolt against Kerensky's supporters.

Twice as far away on the other side of the city, at the Smolny Institute, the blaze from the fortress is still faintly visible. It was from Smolny that Vladimir Ilyich Lenin directed the seizure of power.

The torches at Peter and Paul, flickering in the chilly winds of early winter, are only part of the decorations assembled in this classically beautiful city to commemorate the golden jubilee of the world's first Communist government.

Dozens of the graceful baroque and neo-classical buildings along the Neva River and inland—the Winter Palace, the Admiralty, the former aristocratic mansions and homes—have been repainted in warm pastel shades of gold and green and tan.

Nevsky Prospekt, which probably boasts more neon than any other street in the Soviet Union, has been hung with additional strings of lights and bright red banners. Its miles of stores display an unusual assortment of consumer treasures in tribute to the holidays.

To the glittering baroque glories of the Kirov and Maly Theatres has just been added a handsome 2,000-seat October Theatre for the city's first-rate Philharmonic Orchestra. A third subway line, as efficient as Moscow's but with less pretentious stations, was opened in time for Nov. 7.

Everywhere—from the sides of buildings, in parks, in show windows, even on pastries—the figures "50" have been emblazoned in revolutionary red, like some incantation to commemorate the anniversary.

OVERSHADOWS MOSCOW The city founded by Peter the Great in 1703 as his window on Europe, capital of czarist Russia for 215 years, seems determined to uphold its title of Cradle of the Revolution despite the current preoccupation of Moscow on the Soviet scene.

All year, the historic heart of Leningrad has been gradually transformed by paint and whitewash and cement until now, at the height of the anniversary celebrations, it looks paradoxically as if it must once have looked when the Romanovs held sway.

Known originally as St. Petersburg, it became Petrograd in the anti-German fever of 1914 and was given its present name after Lenin's death in 1924.

Although it should have been condemned to provincial anonymity when the Soviet capital was moved to Moscow in 1918, Leningrad has survived and prospered on its traditional wits. Its population, decimated by starvation and bombing during the Second World War, has again climbed to more than 3,500,000 and it is secure in its position as the second most important city of the Soviet Union.

It is also among the most European cities in the nation. Because it is one of the largest seaports in the world, it still gathers in foreign influences denied to the rest of the Soviet Union. Its few night spots, operated by Intourist hotels for "hard" currency, are crowded with Finns and other tourists while its restaurants come closer to international standards of service and cuisine than any others in Russia.

DRAWS TOURISTS Probably as a result of the greater number of tourists, Leningrad also seems to have more of those nervous-looking young people who risk a long jail term in the hope of separating visitors from their nylon shirts, ball-point pens or foreign currency.

St. Petersburg was once a cultural center rivaling Vienna and Paris. Tchaikovsky, Glinka, Stravinsky and other composers, dancers like Pavlova and Nijinsky, writers such as Pushkin and Dostoyevsky, all flourished here.

Today the city retains a sense of cultural superiority over drab Moscow.

Even the fact that Alexei Kosygin has become the first Leningrad-born premier is seen by some residents as a reason for the Soviet Union to be more sensibly and sensitively ruled now than in the past.

Despite its vaguely old-world sophistication, however, Leningrad is unquestionably a Soviet city. And because of its dominant role in the 1917 revolution, it has probably had to do more backing and filling than most cities to keep up with variations in party line.

Bad year for disarmament

Arms race has become bigger

WASHINGTON (CP) — It's been a bad period for critics of the international arms race.

The Soviet Union, traditionally defensively inclined, is building an aircraft carrier, which suggests more capacity for far-from-home adventures to go with its rising influence in the Mediterranean.

The U.S. has renewed arms shipments to the Middle East, despite further serious fighting between Israel and Egypt that has set back United Nations peace efforts.

Israel is getting light jet bombers. Five pro-U.S. Arab states are also on the list. Libya and Morocco will get the lightweight F-5 jet fighters, which Canada manufactures as the CF-5.

Lebanon, Saudi Arabia and Tunisia are involved, too.

Most depressing of all to congressional critics of the arms race, who two months ago had mounted a major attack on mixing arms and foreign aid, is a breakthrough in Latin America.

The U.S. has been telling the military-mind governments there—where generals are on or right behind the seat of power—that the F-5 will be available in 1969.

But Peru, which has just devalued its currency and has one of the lowest standards of living even for a depressed region, couldn't wait.

BOUGHT FROM FRANCE

It says it has purchased supersonic jet fighters from France, spurning a list-minute U.S. offer. The assumption is that President Belaunde Terry had to buy continued support from the military with the new aircraft, which France was only too happy to sell.

To Democratic Senator Frank Church of Idaho, leading critic of military aid, Peru should have been given the option of having to go to France for its foreign aid as a result.

But there is evidence that this threat was made and didn't work. Peru would rather have the planes and gamble that the U.S., in the interest of hemisphere self-security, will continue to dole out economic assistance through the Alliance for Progress to head off any threat from the left.

Now, Brazil—another militarily-operated government—wants its aircraft, too. Substantial other orders are expected which the U.S. will strive to corner.

The U.S. sales of arms to less-developed countries has risen considerably in recent years and approached $900,000,000 worth for the year ended last June 30.

The Soviet Union, in the race to influence the less-developed nations, distributes about $600,000,000 worth. The U.S. figures do not include NATO allies such as Greece or Turkey, or South Korea or South Vietnam.

Railways to lower freight rates

OTTAWA (CP) — The railways intend to lower their freight rates on less-than-carload shipment in the Atlantic Provinces, and the federal government is willing to help them with bigger subsidies, Transport Minister Hellyer said Thursday.

He told the Commons the Majority

SUTTON — In the Sutton Municipal elections for Seat 5, Lyndon Royce won by a majority of 138 votes over his opponent, J. W. Westover, and not by 38 votes as the Record had reported. The final totals showed Lyndon Royce with 283 votes and J. W. Westover with 145 votes.

already allotted this year for subsidies under the Maritime Freight Rates Act.

These moves by the railways and the government resulted from a storm of protest by the Atlantic provincial governments, MPs and shippers about regional rate increases on non-carload lots.

Before the revised rates can take effect, the Canadian Transport Commission has to give its approval, and it may call a public hearing or hearings.

ST. MARGARET'S GUILD

The regular monthly meeting of St. Margaret's Guild, was held at the home of Mrs. R. M. Loughheed, with Mrs. W. Rolfe as hostess.

The meeting was opened with the Guild prayers, minutes of previous meeting were read and adopted and the financial report given indicating that the chicken party tea and food sale held recently was successful. Money was turned in for the Harvest Thanksgiving collection. Since the year is drawing to a close, no activities were planned.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. A. Carrier, 10th Avenue, on Dec. 5.

Refreshments were served.

VALLEY WEAVERS' GUILD

The Valley Weavers' Guild were entertained at the home of Mrs. Royce Gale in Sherbrooke where they held the regular meeting.

Mrs. Gale was in charge of the program and spoke on stenciling. She noted that it was an ancient craft and in the beginning Greeks stenciled vases, Chinese stenciled twenty-two religious silks and manuscripts as early as 618.

Stenciling was widely used in decorating the interior of the early cathedrals of Europe and England, she said.

The first decorated furniture to come from Japan was lacquered woodware with ornate Oriental figures and motifs. Later imitation lacquered furniture was made all over Europe, said the speaker.

Said Mrs. Gale: "Records found in Oxford of the year 1668 showed the art of Japaning was considered a fashionable pastime for young ladies; as wood was not very durable, metal was substituted as a base and later papier-mache."

The metal tray was first developed in Pontipool, Wales. The early trays were decorated with simple geometric design in several colors on black backgrounds, said the speaker.

Later decorations included flowers, foliage fruits and exotic birds. She said designs were often entirely of colored bronze powders and gold leaf. Flowers were popular throughout the entire period of tray painting.

In America various types of trays and metal articles were made and decorated, said Mrs. Gale, such as document boxes, milk warmers, canisters, coffee pots and others.

Stenciling was found to be an easy way to produce large numbers at a popular price, she added.

Mrs. Gale also told how this art was used in decorating window frames, fire places, wall panels and the many types of chairs explaining the different methods but noting the use of pumpkin yellow, India red, gray and brown.

The early stenciling done between 1817-1835 on both chairs and tin show great skill and craftsmanship, she said. Each unit was a separate stencil and the designers were built-up to give a three dimensional effect, she said. After 1835 when the pressure was on to mass produce a simple stencil was used and the effect became rather crude and flat. Colored washes were frequently applied over the bronze powders to give depth.

"Today this craft is being renewed and much research is being done to uncover old patterns and record them. In some parts guilds have been formed to promote early American decoration."

Mrs. Gale who does much of this art herself demonstrated the making of stencils and explained the procedure from the cutting, to the completed bronze powder design.

Mrs. J. Edward Perry, vice-president, conducted a short business session and plans were made to meet with Mrs. Helen Hyatt, Huntingville in December. All members were asked to bring a piece of weaving or other interesting items being made for Christmas giving or otherwise.

Mrs. William Van Horn and Mrs. Helen Hyatt were named to prepare a slate of officers for the coming year to be presented at the next meeting.

Best wishes were extended to Mrs. Ernest Johnston, past president, who due to her husband's retirement is leaving on an extended holiday. A small token of appreciation was presented by Mrs. Van Horn on behalf of the guild members.

At the close, lunch was served by the hostess.

BELVIDERE W.I.

The members of Belvidere Women's Institute met at the home of Miss Edna Smith on Nov. 4.

The President, Mrs. K. Smart, opened the meeting with the singing of a hymn, the Salute to the Flag and repeating the motto.

The motto for the day was, Let Us Forget. A sale of poppies took place for the benefit of the Canadian Legion.

The Citizenship Convener, Mrs. Chas. Drummond was in charge of the program. She told of a visit to Dundur Castle in Hamilton, Ont. This castle, built in the early days of Confederation by Sir Allan Napier McNab, a former Prime Minister of Canada, is now used as a museum.

A jumbled word contest was conducted by Mrs. Drummond; the first prize going to Mrs. Smart; second, Miss M. Kinkead and third, Mrs. Sterling Parker. The roll call, wear a poppy and bring a gift for a cancer patient was responded to by 10 members. Several visitors were present.

Correspondents included a letter from Mrs. J. Ossington, QWI president, accompanied by a sheet of questions and answers on parliamentary procedure as well as copies of resolutions which were put through at FWIC convention in Guelph, Ont. These are matters for study in the branches.

A copy of the ACWW Countrywoman was received to be passed among the members.

Miss Hazel McGee, convener of Agriculture read an item on winter care of house plants.

Home Economics, Miss E. Smith reported on attending a meeting of the CAC in Lennoxville where a demonstration on cutting of meat took place.

Welfare and Health, Mrs. J. Tarte read a report of the meeting of the Social Welfare Society.

Sunshine, Miss E. Beaton reported a plant and cards sent out.

Publicity, Mrs. C. Pitman read from the ACWW Countrywoman of a visit made to institutes in Alaska and the Yukon.

Ways and Means, Mrs. A. E. McGee thanked all who had assisted with the recent rummage sale.

After discussion the members decided in favor of carrying on with the fair booth and school fair for another year.

A motion was made to place a wreath at the Cenotaph on Remembrance Day. The ACWW Countrywoman is to be renewed. Orders were taken for UNICEF cards.

Plans are under way to cater to a supper on Nov. 18.

Four pairs of mitts and pot holders were turned in on the work calendar and the monthly drawing was won by Mrs. Sterling Parker.

Announcement was made that the county meeting will be held at the Brompton Road Community Hall on Nov. 15.

The next meeting will be held at the Town Hall in Lennoxville, Dec. 2, with Mrs. J. Tarte and Miss M. Kinkead hostesses.

There will be Christmas carols and exchange of gifts. The roll call is, bring a dozen Christmas cookies for Grace Christian Home.

Love is rare for immigrant girls in Australia one in five never mixes with opposite sex

MELBOURNE (CP) — Love is a rare thing for many girls in Australia.

They are the immigrant girls from Europe, mainly Italy and Greece. When they get off the ship that brought them to their new homeland they feel strangers in a foreign land where the language and the customs are so different.

One in five immigrant girls rarely or never mixes with the opposite sex, an Australian immigration department investigation has discovered.

In the evenings, they watch television, visit relatives or do housework. Compared with Australian-born girls, the immigrants spend twice as much of their spare time doing household chores.

The survey concluded that they would make wonderful wives, but, because of their shyness and social inhibitions, they never get around to meeting a partner.

The immigration officials who carried out the survey have much more in mind than matchmaking. Too many discontented immigrants are leaving Australia and returning to their European homelands. During the last year, 20,000 have quit.

This is alarming to the Australian government, which believes this vast continent must populate or perish. It must fill its wide open spaces with immigrants from Europe or the time may come when the Asian masses to the north will leave their overcrowded lands and head for Australia.

All kinds of experts—psychiatrists, sociologists and welfare workers—are being asked by the immigration authorities to find out why so many immigrants from Europe are going home.

Most prevalent reason given so far is: Loneliness. This particularly affects women who don't get as many chances as their menfolk to meet Australianians.

Polly's pointers

DEAR POLLY—I am an invalid confined to a wheel chair and I make my living by sewing. I do hope someone can tell me how to take care of the needle holes left in a pure silk garment after it has been altered. I need this information badly.—MRS. W. B. F.

DEAR POLLY—In my opinion a fireplace adds more to a home than any other luxury. If the damper in the chimney is used correctly there is no reason for smoke in the house. As for dust, the ashes can be removed easily and without spreading all over the room.

I use a large grocery bag, sprinkled the inside with water, then use a short-handled shovel to put the ashes in the bag. Set the bag as close under the chimney opening as possible so the dust will go up the chimney.

Of course, the paper bag is only used when there are no live coals. I remove the ashes in the morning after the fire is out, then put more kindling and logs in place so they are ready to light in the evening when my husband and children are at home. There is nothing more homey and beautiful than an open fire.—Mrs. M. A. C.

DEAR POLLY — We move a lot and have lived in a dozen towns during 14 years of marriage. I have found that subscribing to a local newspaper, by mail, prior to moving gives you a great edge in getting settled. You learn where the best schools are, what is happening in local politics, what is available in the field of recreation and entertainment. The children are happy to learn about scout troops, swimming places, Little League baseball and so on. It is also amazing how much you can tell about the stores from their ads, not to mention the value of reading the section devoted to real estate and housing. — DAVEY

DEAR POLLY—I have tried many ways of doing housework so as to make the most of my time and the following works best for me: I allow myself just so many minutes for each bedroom, the bathroom, kitchen and so on. This helps overcome the temptation to take a coffee break when in the middle of a job. Also it keeps me from wandering aimlessly or from looking through a book I might pick up while dusting. It is a bit exciting to race with time and takes much of the boredom out of doing those same old jobs each day. When the work is done (and it is finished quicker) I have time for that book I wanted to look through or do other things which we are sometimes denied because we stretch our work through the 24 hours of the day.—EMMA

An organization called the Good Neighbor Council has staged a campaign to help migrants pass through the loneliness barrier. One woman social welfare worker said: "A little bit of romance in these migrant girls' lives could make a big difference. I'm sure they would settle down and be happy in Australia then."

Snedden warned his countrymen: "Australians must get it into their heads that it is their duty to make these people welcome. Migration is not something that just benefits the migrant. It's a benefit to Australians, too."

MARRIAGE RATE HIGH
There were 1,844,000 marriages in the U.S. last year—a number surpassed only in 1946 and 1947.

But there also is a reluctance by native Australians to accept the newcomers.

Immigration Minister Billy Snedden is concerned at what he says is the "malicious attitude of some Australian children to migrant children." Too often, he says, Australian children unwittingly mirror the bad habits and prejudices of their parents. They take to school with them the hate they have learned at home—and many migrant children suffer terribly.

Snedden warned his countrymen: "Australians must get it into their heads that it is their duty to make these people welcome. Migration is not something that just benefits the migrant. It's a benefit to Australians, too."

Speed nuclear power plant

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP) — The four-foot thick concrete walls of Quebec's first nuclear reactor station, looking like a gigantic farm silo, loom over the St. Lawrence River near here.

They mark the first stage of the $100,000,000 project being carried out jointly by Hydro-Quebec and the Atomic Energy Commission of Canada.

In the beginning it will produce 250,000 kilowatts of electricity. In time, there may be five nuclear reactors producing 2,000,000 kilowatts.

Spokesmen for the project say Quebec's power demands are doubling every decade. Hydro-Quebec's 67 generating stations now have a capacity of slightly more than 8,000,000 kilowatts and by 1975 the province will need an estimated 14,000,000 kilowatts.

They add that underdeveloped rivers for hydro-electric power are getting further away and more expensive to use. The province will eventually turn to nuclear power.

Quebec is trying to acquire experience now for use when the need is greater.

Blames Lemay

MONTREAL (CP) — Jacques LaJoie, convicted for his part in a $633,605 bank robbery July 1, 1961, described in court Thursday how the robbery was carried out.

LaJoie, who had pleaded guilty to a charge of participating in the burglary and served a one-day sentence after two years in jail awaiting trial, took the stand to testify against Georges Lemay, alleged mastermind of the robbery.

Lemay, 42, is charged with burglary and conspiracy. LaJoie identified three men brought into court who also have been convicted for the robbery — Andre Lemieux, sentenced to seven years, his brother Yvon Lemieux, who got four years, and Roland Primeau who got 13 years.

Drowned loot

MONTREAL (CP) — Rene Morin, a mechanic who testified earlier at the Georges Lemay trial that he was instructed to throw a gold medallion and a diamond ring from Lemay's boat into the ocean near Miami Beach, Fla., Thursday contradicted his previous testimony.

Lemay, 42, is on trial for burglary and conspiracy in the theft July 3, 1961, of $630,605 from a Montreal branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Sent to trial

MONTREAL (CP) — Bail of $500 was granted Thursday for a 23-year-old Montreal jail guard charged with conspiring with a number of prisoners to obtain "goofballs" for prisoners.

More efficient Secret Service protects President Johnson

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four years after President Kennedy was assassinated at Dallas, a bigger U.S. secret service with a more efficient look faces the challenge of protecting a president campaigning in an atmosphere of war-and-protest demonstrations.

But several politicians questioned about the subject say they don't foresee that security problems will restrict President Johnson's—or his opponent's—ability to campaign in the usual open, hand-shaking style in 1968, assuming Johnson seeks re-election.

Before the assassination, the service had about 100 names in its file of persons considered to be a sufficient threat to be checked when a presidential trip is planned. Now the file has 1,800 names.

A computer the service leased a year ago has revolutionized protective security.

If the president plans a trip to Chicago, for example, the computer will within moments spew out a report on persons in the Chicago area who might be of concern in protecting the president.

These people will be checked. Those of serious concern to the service will be put under surveillance or perhaps brought in for questioning until the president leaves.

LONDON (CP) — English-speaking Canada needs to be liberated from self-interest and self-satisfaction if Canada is to survive, the dean of Atkinson College, York University in Toronto, said Thursday.

"Too many English-speaking Canadians have never taken the needs and problems of their fellow Canadians whose mother tongue is not English," said Dean D. McCormack Smyth.

KIGALI, Rwanda (AP) — Aid and food arrived from the United States Thursday for the 130 white mercenaries and 900 Katanga troops driven from the eastern Congo Sunday.

he had no lawyer, the trial was set for next week. His bail was set at $200.

Robert Chouvette, 47, of East Angus, changed his plea from not guilty to guilty yesterday on a charge of being in possession of burglary tools and was sentenced to six months in jail.

The six-month sentence will be served concurrently with a six-month sentence Chouvette received when he pleaded guilty in a previous charge for being in possession of a revolver.

Jacques Gagnon, 22, of Sherbrooke, changed his plea from not guilty to guilty on a charge of stealing a sewing machine and was sentenced to one month in jail.

The one-month sentence will be served concurrently with another sentence of one month which he was given last week for stealing another sewing machine.

Gagnon's lawyer told the court that he stole one of the machines for his wife and the other for his sister.

He will also be sentenced by Judge Hayes December 18 for having pleaded guilty to four charges of obtaining money illegally under false pretenses.

Jean-Guy Tardif, 23, of Sherbrooke, chose a trial by judge and jury and pleaded not guilty to charges of complicity before and after a crime.

He is accused of furnishing the guns to a group of men who robbed a bank in Racine last week and harboring one of the fugitives after the robbery.

He has no previous record and trial was set for a later date.

Two brothers from St. Elie d'Orford, Michel Lessard, 20, and Gerard Lessard, 18, changed their plea from not guilty on charges of theft and damaging private property, and were given suspended sentences.

They pleaded guilty to stealing three go-carts, a total value of $1,125, and causing $250 damage to one of them.

They were ordered to post a $500 bond to keep the peace for two years and each was told to pay $125 to the owner of the stolen go-carts to compensate for the damages they caused and were given one month to do so.

They had no previous record and had been incarcerated for two weeks before their sentence.

Richard Therrien, 24, of Sherbrooke, changed his plea from not guilty to guilty with explanations on two theft charges and will be sentenced Nov. 20.

He pleaded guilty to stealing a car worth $300 and a television set worth $250.

He started to give his explanations yesterday but was told to keep them until the day of sentencing.

Macdonald College

Peter White from Brome County didn't pull many of his punches when he addressed the annual meeting of the Quebec Farmers' Association a few days ago.

Speaking to the fifty members present, he said, "Your organization appears to be looking around for a reason to justify its existence. Since Radio Farm Forum ended, judging by external symptoms, it has suffered a steady decline. Your membership is down, your effort is devoted to administration, and you have had difficulty keeping secretarial staff."

"Your difficulties, though, are symptomatic," he said. "Leadership, at least in the English sector, is lacking through the whole field of agriculture, and education as well."

Although Mr. White seemed to feel that the Quebec Farmers' Association was at a crossroads, he at no time suggested the situation was hopeless. But he did say the members would have to stop, search for answers to some basic questions, face squarely the choice of roads ahead, and then energetically act on their decisions.

"First of all," he asked, "do we want the Q.F.A. to continue? Do the three thousand or four thousand English-speaking farmers in Quebec need an organization of their own? Can we overcome the communication problem of distance between zones? Do we know we need an organization, or are we even sure we want one?"

"If the answer to these is 'yes,' then we must ask what we want it for," Mr. White said he offered four possible reasons: "As a pressure group" to encourage government, industry, and the university to change their policies; as an educational arm for its own members; as a public relations outlet to speak for the English-language farmer; and lastly, as a medium for social contact among English-speaking farm families in Quebec.

Mr. White then questioned whether the organization in its present form could do this job, and he challenged the meeting to consider if there was any better way to meet any or all of these objectives. While no definite answers and no decisions came out of the group discussions which followed, it is certain we haven't heard the last of it. Nothing is more sure than that change must come. What form it will take is the question.

It is said that organizations exist for one reason only to accomplish something that individuals working alone cannot do. To conclude that any organization is no longer needed is to conclude that there is nothing left to accomplish.

This past week, I found out how the Annual Recommendations for Chemical Weed Control came into being. And I am impressed. Never have I seen a better example of industry, government and universities working together for the good of agriculture than at the annual meeting of the National Weed Committee, Eastern Section, last Wednesday and Thursday.

The setting was one of the magnificent new lecture theatres in Laval University's Faculty of Agriculture building. The one hundred and ten participants represented just about every man engaged in any sort of weed control work in research, in the manufacture of herbicides, or in extension in the six provinces of Eastern Canada.

The real hard work had been done by a dozen committees during the past month. To them, fell the job of evaluating all the herbicide trials that had been done in Eastern Canada during the past summer. On the basis of proven success, they changed old recommendations and added new ones.

And when you consider that 105 herbicides are registered for use in Canada, with another 20 or so in the development stage, this was no small job.

The final stage was the meeting I attended. Each of the proposed recommendations, and each of the recommendations in the "not yet, but maybe next year" category, was read, line by line page by page, fifty-nine pages in all, and approved.

Corn, cereals, carrots, strawberries, beans, grapes, gladioli, blueberries — you name the crop, and there were half-a-dozen possible ways to put these chemical weed control tools to work. The good ones went to the top of the list. The doubtful ones were thrown out.

Most exciting of all, is the "hot tip" section. It is like a secret peek into the future. Can you imagine doing your spraying with a gallon tank mounted on the planter? Or de-weeding your alfalfa as it is seeded?

These recommendations have a limited circulation. They go out to provincial committees who are responsible for modifying them for local needs, and making a bulletin out of them. And it is this bulletin that you can pick up for little or no cost from your agronomist or from the Colleges. You can question the value of some things because they are cheap. But these Weed Control Recommendations are not among them.

Early November best time to plant trees

In the first four or five years of establishing a garden we are concerned with creating lawns, flower borders, hedges, foundation beds and setting out two or three basic shade trees. Once this has been completed, gardening can become much more fun by adding some of the rarer and more unusual trees.

The first two weeks of November is one of the best times for planting trees. The tops of the trees are dormant now and will stay that way for a much longer period than for spring-planted ones. Water losses at this time of the year are not nearly as heavy or as important as in the spring.

There are a few trees such as cherries, peaches, birches, dogwoods and magnolias, which can only be planted in the spring. They're not moved now because they're unable to quickly heal the damage to their roots which unavoidably takes place during digging at the nursery. Their roots are covered with a "slip bark" that peels readily when bruised during moving.

The Turkish filbert (Corylus colurna) makes an unusual and exciting tree for any garden, large or small. In some books you may find it listed as a hazel but botanists have recently decided it's correctly called a filbert. It still grows wild in a large area from China on the east to the Balkans and southern Hungary on the west.

Cistus, the famous botanist of the 1600s, received seeds in 1582 and in four years had fine specimens growing in his Vienna gardens. In Amsterdam Zoo last year I saw a Turkish filbert that is at least 150 years old.

I like its graceful pyramidal habit of growth. Attractive catkins appear in southern Ontario during March and are followed by masses of circular leaves which have a sharp point and double-toothed edges.

The height at maturity is 20 feet which makes the tree ideal for gardens surrounding the modern ranch style home. Turkish filberts grow well in most garden soils but are particularly at home in the dry sandy ones.

Another worthwhile tree for southern Ontario gardens is the Katsura (Cercidiphyllum japonicum). It was discovered growing in Japan and China and the first specimens came to North America in 1865.

In the garden you have a choice of growing it with several stems as you would a birch, or in a single narrow form. This tree is almost free from insect pests and disease. The first three or four years after planting it grows in a bush form but soon develops into a fine tree with a short trunk. It is excellent for locating near patios, pools and living-out areas.

The Katsura tree is one of the first to leaf out in the spring. At that time the foliage has a brownish shade which is most attractive in the early spring sunshine. The medium sized leaves turn to a splendid yellow to scarlet color in the fall. Small fruit clings to the branches in the winter for added interest.

One of our loveliest flowering trees is the Pagoda (Sophora japonica) which, despite its name did not originally come from Japan. A French Jesuit missionary found it on one of his Chinese travels and sent seeds to Paris in 1747. From there it found its way to the Temple Gardens of Japan where it is still to be found in large numbers.

Ancient Chinese literature tells us that the Sophora was cultivated before the time of Christ and there was even a law requiring it to be planted near the graves of persons of note.

MOST POPULAR CANADIAN IN CUBA — International Black Velvet, living in air-conditioned luxury near Havana, cost the Cuban government $100,000 in precious Canadian currency when he was purchased from Bolton, Ont., earlier this year. The 3,000-pound immigrant is loved by Cubans who regard him as part of their answer for increased dairy production.

tion, Black Velvet and about 1,600 other bulls are part of a rapidly-expanding program under which 1,200,000 cows were bred artificially last year. (CP Photo)

One of Cuba's top celebrities, Black Velvet, a $100,000 bull

A celebrity in Cuba is a Canadian bull which cost Cuba $100,000. In this article Canadian Press reporter Carman Cumming describes the role the bull is playing in improving the quality of the country's livestock.

By CARMAN CUMMING

HAVANA (CP)—The most popular Canadian in Cuba is a 3,000-pound immigrant from Bolton, Ont., who seldom stirs from his luxurious air-conditioned quarters near Havana. Cuba paid $100,000 in precious Canadian dollars earlier this year for International Black Velvet, a grand champion Holstein bull.

His keepers aim to see that he stays in good health, and they have housed him in isolated splendor in a special stall at one end of the clinic at Rosale Signet insemination station, just outside Havana.

There he is regularly visited by Premier Castro and other Cuban leaders as they show prominent visitors highlights of revolutionary development.

On occasion Black Velvet has been photographed with the bearded, hefty premier—eyeing the other with apparent respect—and as a result the big bull is known and loved throughout Cuba.

The eyes of Cuban men light up at mention of his name. They regard him as a symbol of virility, it seems, and also possibly as a symbol of milk and butter they may be eating in years to come.

NEW DYNASTIES RISE

The insemination station, coincidentally, is named for another great Canadian bull whose progeny now are grazing from Oriente to Pinar del Rio.

Rosale Signet was bought for $28,000 in 1961 and founded an impressive dynasty before he died two years ago.

Several hundred of his sons now are being used in the artificial insemination project, each in turn founding his own dynasty.

But while Rosale Signet will go down as the patriarch of Cuba's new cattle age, Black Velvet, purchased from the R. J. Stewart farm at Bolton, is unquestionably the reigning monarch.

Approaching his presence is properly awesome. Director Jesus Cuatara of the station led the way first through a spotless clinic, equipped with Canadian and French veterinary instruments, and then into a closed-off section where Black Velvet lives behind baby blue bars in a controlled 64-degree temperature.

Cuatara explained that his Highness takes an early-morning stroll in the first sunlight of the day and returns to his quarters as the air warms. FACES CHALLENGER

He is then weighed and his temperature, heartbeat and respiration rate also are recorded on a wall chart. Breakfast is then served—100 pounds of green hay and concentrates.

Cuatara said air-conditioning is to be provided soon for 10 other bulls in an experiment to see whether it will counteract loss of potency in summer. If the test is successful—and first indications from Black Velvet's experience are favorable—all the bulls may get air-conditioned quarters.

The director, one of the first group of revolutionaries to be trained as technicians after the Castro rebels triumphed in 1959, clearly has a special regard for the Cuban-born crown prince.

He is Taurus, 1,796-pound son of Rosale and a bull that Cuatara feels will eventually outclass Black Velvet.

He says Cuban buyers in Canada report that they haven't seen any bulls of Taurus' age to rival him, and that he could follow in Black Velvet's steps as Royal Winter Fair champion.

Whether or not the Cubans will actually take their previous charges out of the country for showing abroad still is uncertain, however.

PRODUCE HYBRIDS

The bulls are part of a rapidly-expanding program under which 1,200,000 cows were bred artificially last year. More than 1,600 bulls are used in the program and more are being bought regularly. This year nearly 2,000,000 cows are to be bred.

The Holstein bulls are being crossed with native Cuban cows, producing a hybrid called F-1s which combine some of the Holstein milk-producing quality with the hardness of the natives.

By the end of this year there will be about 500,000 F-1s on the island, but so far only about 200 of them are milking. Cuatara says they are producing about half as much milk as purebred Holsteins but show higher, butterfat content and better beef potential.

Cuba will continue to buy breeding stock from Canada for some time, the director said. Twenty-four bulls were purchased recently and buyers are looking for more.

Relations with the Canadian industry are excellent, he added, although Cuba's buyers "know very well" that the Americans try to interfere with Cuba's purchases in Canada.

Some semen from Cuban bulls has been requested from Canada, he said, giving an indication that the Cuban industry is getting on its feet.

Tomorrow: Young Cubans take over former prison island.

DO-IT-YOURSELF

Sagging fences fixed through careful work

A sagging fence serves no useful purpose, even failing to satisfy its purely esthetic function—appearance. Fences hastily or improperly assembled begin to fall apart first, though all fences are subject to the wear and tear of wind and weather.

Lack of wood preservative on post ends leads to rotting. Ordinary nails will rust through in time. Pickets or side rails set too close to the ground will show the effect of rotting. A post not set deeply enough will sway and lean. Posts set too far apart will not support the weight of the fence.

If posts have started to rot or were not set deeply enough in the ground, the first big wind that comes along will blow the fence over. Even a short post should be set fairly deep. Though not high enough to blow over, it still may be affected by frost action which then leaves it subject to the wind.

If not neglected too long, most fences can be repaired. Don't try patching. A bad section should be dismantled. Good wood can be salvaged and the rest thrown away.

Sometimes a post that has rotted at ground level can be patched by cutting off the rotted portion and nailing or screwing one-inch-thick lumber to each side of the post end and extending the post to its original length. By notching the post the extension will be flush with the surface of the post.

If you can, however, it is best to replace the post. This means dismantling everything attached to it. Most posts are 4-by-4 lumber. Fir or pine is the material you are likely to find, but cypress and redwood (more expensive) will withstand weather better.

The cheaper post can be used, though, if you soak the end in a good wood preservative. Soak it, don't brush on.

Post holes should be 18 to 24 inches deep. They should be no more than 8 feet apart, 6 feet if the fence is a high one.

Use a post-hole digger and wet the ground if it is dry. This will keep it from crumbling and you will not dig a hole that is too wide. That compacted earth around the post will help to support it.

Put a flat stone in the bottom of the hole and set the post on that. In heavy clay, concrete may not be necessary.

Eagles edge Beavers 3-1 as Gordie Hawthorth pots two, Granby upsets Tigers 3-1

Drummondville Eagles, paced by their veteran pivotman Andre Laguerre and Gordie Hawthorth, posted a 3-1 win over the Sherbrooke Beavers last evening in the Civic Centre to increase their lead to five points in the Quebec Provincial Senior Hockey League.

In the other tilt on the agenda the Granby Vics pulled an upset by knocking over the Tigers of Victoriaville 3-1. The Vics late yesterday afternoon were granted permission by the league to use Andre Dubuc for the balance of the season.

At the league meeting last Monday the team refused permission to the Vics but then after considerable study and explanation by Jean-Pierre Bernier, president of the Granby club, who contacted the clubs to present his views and it was after this the decision, taken earlier, was changed.

The game in Drummondville was a wide-open affair the whole way with only six minor penalties being called but three goals were tallied when the team had the advantage. The teams were more interested in playing than trying any other antics.

Yvan Houle and Andre Gagnon both turned in fine jobs. Gagnon was at his best and the three goals which got by him couldn't be charged completely to him. Houle pulled off two key saves on Bill Dupre in the opening frame. The Sherbrooke Centre was in alone twice but failed to beat Houle.

The Eagles tallied the first marker in the opening frame with Pierre Gagne in the cooler. This gave the Cline squad more drive and they commenced to roll. They peppered Gagnon but he managed to hold on.

In the middle period the Eagles took advantage of a break when their defenseman LePage was in the cooler. They caught the Sherbrooke club off balance to break in on Gagnon and tallied their second goal. It was poor work by the Sherbrooke team who failed to have a man back just in case.

Just before the halfway mark of the final frame Jeff Bugar of the Beavers let go with a hard drive from the left wing which beat Houle and Sherbrooke's newcomer potted his first league tally. It was his initial appearance with the club.

Can Therrien went off a minute later and the Beavers opened up, with more caution, but the Eagles held on until their mate returned. Following this play kept moving back and forth with both sides getting close but the goalies turned them back.

In the final minute of play Coach Roy decided to yank his goalie when they had a face-off in the Drummondville end but this backfired as veteran Gordie Hawthorth got the faceoff and lifted it down the ice into the open net to settle the issue.

The Beavers next game is Sunday evening when they travel to Granby to take on the Vics. The Nationals and Drummondville play back-to-back games while in the other tilt Victoriaville moves into St. Hyacinthe to clash with the Gauls.

Bishop's Gaiters to present new lineup as they prepare to defend their basketball crown

The regular basketball league season is only a week away and the question the fans are asking at Bishop's is whether the basketball Gaiters can repeat their heady success of last year, when they won the Ontario St. Lawrence Athletic Association title for the first time in their history.

Do the Gaiters still have the same depth of talent that led them to their dominance of the league last year and their third place finish in the national finals last March? After two exhibition games this question still remains partially unanswered.

Those who followed the Gaiters to the championship last year will have little trouble recognizing the nucleus of this year's team. There is Peter Munzar, leading scorer in the league last year and the outstanding player in the playoffs.

With him on the forward line is Ken Flewelling, who scored 22 points in the team's second exhibition game against the University Settlement Orphans from Montreal. Flewelling was the leading player for the Gaiters in this game which Bishop's won 79-67.

Back are guards Nick Busing, whom Coach Garth Smith seems to have picked as his anchor man this season, Rich Purcell, the smallest member of the team at 5'7" but a very capable dribbler and floor leader, Doug Mackenzie, who scored 10 points in Sunday's game and Brad Jones, who has the distinction of playing on three OSLAA championship teams, two years for Carleton and last year for Bishop's.

Rounding out the roster are forwards Lindsay Black, Don Cumming, and Bill Savage. Also new to the team this year is Ray Pronto, a guard whose ball-handling ability and slick pass should insure of plenty of game-time this season.

One important fact missing, though, is that of the tall, slightly stooped "Giraffe" Oldfield, whose talent as an offensive centre and defensive rebounder Coach Garth Smith has not been able to replace yet. This has forced him to change his lineup and his tactics and herein lies the question mark concerning the Gaiters potential this year.

In this weekend's regular season start Coach Smith will be using only two tall men, Munzar and Flewelling, and three guards, probably Busing, Purcell and either Jones or Mackenzie as starters.

Thus the onus will be on Munzar and Flewelling, both offensively and under their own basket. On defence, Munzar will be playing close to the basket to receive passes and take rebounds. His tremendous strength and his jumping ability should result in many points for the Gaiters from him again this season.

Further out from the basket will be Ken Flewelling, whose position will allow him either to drive in with the ball, set up other drives or pick up "garbage" as the team members refer to loose balls and tipped passes.

Defensively these two men will be covering the inside key area against the opposition's tallest men. Covering the outside men will be three of the quickest and most experienced Nick Busing Rich Purcell and defensive guards in the league, Brad Jones.

The accurate outside shooting of Busing (24 points in two exhibitions) and Purcell (14 points in two games) plus the offensive potential of Mackenzie (10 points in Sunday's game) and the ball-handling ability of Pronto and Jones will add considerable strength to the Gaiters' offence as well.

However, with Munzar and Flewelling charged with covering the big opposition men under their own basket, the possibility looms large that one of them might foul out before the game is over (something which happened to chief defensive tall man Oldfield last year fairly often).

The removal of one or both of these players through fouls would seriously hamper the team not only defensively, but offensively as well. The solution to this dilemma may lie in the improving defensive play of forward Lindsay Black, whose 3 defensive rebounds in Sunday's game against the Orphans was second only to Peter Munzar's 11.

In summary then, the question remains as to whether the Gaiters can carry on their winning ways with only two big men and three guards. Only league action will tell, and this Saturday's league opener in Montreal against the Loyola Warriors will be as good a test as any the Gaiters will face this season.

They will face a fair indication of season. This Saturday will certainly be a test of the Gaiters' ability to carry the OSLAA championship.

King's Wayne Rutledge stops Leafs 4-1, Red Wings rally to post 5-1 win over Pittsburgh

A talented array of minor leaguers staged one of the National Hockey League's early season upsets Thursday night while Detroit Red Wings, supported by rookie goalie Roy Edwards netting and with veritable Gordie Howe setting them up, snopped a three-game losing streak.

Los Angeles Kings, whose only established NHLer in the June draft was goalie Terry Sawchuk, smothered Toronto Maple Leafs 4-1 at Los Angeles to hand the defending Stanley Cup champions their first loss in five games.

And at Detroit, Edwards allowed only a first-period goal to get by him while Howe took over the league scoring leadership with two assists as the Wings romped to a 5-1 win over Pittsburgh Penguins.

The Leafs-Kings encounter was billed as a meeting of the division leaders with Toronto holding first place in the established Eastern Division and the Kings atop the expanded Western Division.

That was last year.

Snowmobiling has changed. And this new Snow Cruiser has changed it.

Take starting, for instance. Snow Cruiser's exclusive Cruis-o-Matic control makes starting a breeze. It automatically retards the spark, opens the throttle, relieves compression on both cylinders, and puts the machine in neutral. Just turn the key, give a gentle pull on the starting cord, and you're away. And with Snow Cruiser's new reverse gear, you can back out of a garage or off a trailer with automotive ease.

Lighter, faster, more powerful than ever, Snow Cruiser also sets a new standard of quietness. Engineered quiet, achieved by a dual tuned exhaust system and a completely enclosed power plant. Snow Cruiser '68 is the quietest snowmobile ever built.

Its efficient, trouble-free 16 horse-power Canadian-made engine has a moulded one-piece cab that tilts up for engine inspection. A handsome, automotive type instrument panel puts all controls at your fingertips. There's also a built-in hi-lo beam headlight, head high protective windshield, and removable seat that conceals a roomy storage compartment.

There's lots more we could tell you about Snow Cruiser '68, but you'll want to see it all for yourself at your Snow Cruiser dealer's. He's listed under 'snowmobiles' in the yellow pages.

you would expect the "toughest car in the world" to look...like a tank!

Sure we make Peugeots tough. Last year six 204 Peugeots entered the East African Safari and finished ONE...TWO...THREE...FOUR...FIVE...SIX...in its class, besides taking first overall with a Peugeot 404 Fuel Injection.

Veteran rally drivers call the African rally the most punishing in the world. Ninety-one cars from the U.S.A., Europe, and U.K. started — only 38 finished...all 18 Peugeots entered, crossed the finish line. This win came hot on the heels of the Canadian Winter Rally where Peugeot took the team trophy. For this and other reasons, American Rodding Magazine called it "The world's toughest car".

Here are some of the features that make it so popular: front wheel drive • overhead camshaft • light alloy engine block • independent four wheel suspension • power assisted brakes, with discs in front, drums at the rear and safety compensator unit — but all this is not at the expense of its elegance. The 204 Peugeot was awarded the gold medal for body style and design at the European grand Prix des Arts et de l'Industrie.
