French-speaking teachers accept contract offer

MONTREAL (CP) — Union leaders for 61,000 French-speaking elementary and high school teachers expressed disappointment Tuesday after their members ignored a union directive and voted to accept final government contract terms.

The teachers, members of the Quebec Teachers Federation (QTF), voted more than 69 per cent to accept the offer, which the Quebec government described last Thursday as its last in the 15-month contract dispute.

Union officials estimated late Tuesday that at least 70 per cent of the QTF teachers had cast their votes.

"We thought that management offers could be improved, but our members, facing great economic pressure, thought that the result of 15 months of talks was nonetheless appreciable," said QTF president Yvon Charbonneau.

The result of Tuesday's voting means the 1976-77 school year will likely open next week as scheduled. The Federation of Catholic School Commissions of Quebec said recently it would lock out the teachers and postpone the opening of the school year until a new contract was signed.

ACCEPT TERMS
Some 2,200 English-Catholic teachers in the Montreal area, about half the membership of the Provincial Association of Catholic Teachers (PACT), also accepted the terms

Tuesday. Complete results of the PACT vote across the province will be announced late today. However, 2,500 Montreal-area Protestant teachers rejected their last contract offer while their colleagues

Professeurs, the largest QTF local, told reporters the teachers buckled to material pressures and accepted the offer, despite the fact it fell short on several major non-monetary issues. Quebec teachers have been without a contract since wage package acceptable to both sides.

However, the QTF refused to accept offers from the government and Catholic school commissions on teacher workloads, class size and maternity leave. They also insisted on a three-year agreement.

Negotiators for the English Catholics, bargaining independently from the QTF, reached a tentative agreement last week with the government and their school commissions.

Meanwhile, officials of the 6,700-member Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers (PAPT) say the Protestant teachers have received the same basic wage offer, but that the Provincial Association of Protestant School Boards has refused to match the terms given the Catholic teachers on workload and class size.

A spokesman for Montreal-area Protestant teachers said his members will report for work today as scheduled, but warned that if a contract is not signed by Sept. 15, "the teachers will meet and could go on strike by Oct. 1."

By voting to accept the government offer the French-speaking teachers will receive a wage increase of 45 per cent this year over 1974-75 salary levels.

Still to be settled are local agreements between individual school commissions and their teachers, which govern local working conditions.

No strike for BAT (Page 3)

across Quebec were expected to do the same in voting which concludes later today.

The QTF and its affiliated unions had urged members to reject the government offer last Thursday.

Pierre Lemaire, president of the Alliance des

June 30, 1975. The two sides negotiated with little success for much of the last school year, prompting a series of teacher protests which included 24-hour and 48-hour walkouts.

Construction strike off

MONTREAL (CP) — A threatened strike by Quebec's 150,000 construction workers has been averted at least temporarily, a union spokesman said Tuesday.

Que.-Lait purchases Joubert

MONTREAL (CP) — J. J. Joubert Limitee, a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Borden Co. Ltd. has been sold to Quebec-Lait Inc., it was announced Tuesday by Borden president Gerald J. Ray.

Included in the sale to the large Quebec dairy co-operative were the Joubert facilities in Montreal, Quebec City, Sherbrooke and Trois-Rivières. The price paid was not released.

Mr. Ray said the sale, which he termed an "unfortunate development," would not affect other operations of the Borden dairy division.

"We're still very much in the dairy business," he said. "We've recently launched aggressive marketing techniques in Ontario, as well as actions to improve production and distribution."

agent for the workers—decided to delay a province-wide strike pending submission of a government conciliator's report and a meeting of the employers' association.

Conciliator Pierre Dufresne is to submit his report today or Thursday, the QFL spokesman said, while the 14,500-member Association of Building Contractors of Quebec will hold a general membership meeting Thursday.

The union believes many smaller contractors at the meeting will contest the positions taken by the association's negotiating committee in talks which broke off late Monday.

"These small contractors could not survive a strike longer than 10 or 15 days," the spokesman said.

The union earlier threatened to call a general strike if weekend talks failed. An overwhelming majority of the 90,000 workers in the QFL's 37 affiliated unions in the construction industry authorized a strike last week.

Another 47,000 workers, members of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, have also rejected the contractors' latest contract offer.

But 9,000 members of the Centrale des Syndicats Démocratiques have criticized the voting procedures and said they were being forced into strike action by the QFL.

At issue are clauses concerning union security, dues checkoff and shop stewards, with the employers' group maintaining it will not give the union any further control over union-related matters than it currently has.

Vets protest slow contract

MONTREAL (CP) — Most abattoirs and meat packing plants in Quebec were inactive for the second day Tuesday, after veterinarians who inspect meat and slaughter animals called in sick.

The veterinarians, employed by the federal agriculture department, were protesting the slowness of negotiations to replace their last contract, which expired Dec. 28.

An agriculture department spokesman in Ottawa said 26 veterinarians—about 40 per cent of the total employed in Quebec—called in sick Monday, and 24 Tuesday.

He said the veterinarians have no right to strike at the moment, since a mediation board has been appointed to intervene and there is usually a two-to-three-week supply of meat in storage.

The decision to delay strike action does not affect work stoppages being conducted by member unions on their own initiative, the spokesman said.

PM asks for sweeping powers to combat Irish terrorism

DUBLIN (Reuter) — Prime Minister Liam Cosgrave asked the Irish parliament Tuesday to declare a state of emergency and to give his government sweeping new powers to combat terrorism.

Opening a debate on proposed emergency powers, Cosgrave said the new laws were needed because crimes by men of violence had brought "discredit to the name of Irishmen throughout the world."

"Let the message go out clearly from here today that the Irish people through their elected representatives, their democratic government and their security forces are pledged to break and rid our country once and for all of this conspiracy of hate and evil," he said.

The appeal for a state of emergency—opposed by the opposition Fianna Fail party—is likely to be approved by parliament. A state of emergency would give the government's proposed laws immunity from challenge on constitutional grounds.

The draft legislation includes authority for police to hold guerrilla suspects without charge for up to seven days instead of 48 hours; sweeping new powers of search and arrest for troops and police; and an increase in the maximum penalty for membership in the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA) to seven years from two years in prison.

AIMED AT IRA
The measures are primarily aimed at controlling the violent IRA campaign to unite the Irish Republic with British-ruled Northern Ireland.

Cosgrave said the government decided to act after the assassination of British ambassador Christopher Ewart-Biggs outside Dublin last month.

The 144 members of the Dail, as the Irish Parliament is called, and 60 senators were recalled from vacation for the debate, which may last for more than a week.

"It imposes a heavy duty on us here to do all in our power to ensure that this part of the country is not a base for attacks in the north or a source of arms or explosives or a haven for fugitives," Cosgrave said.

Jack Lynch, leader of the Fianna Fail, said his party will support the government in "reasonable and appropriate" steps to combat terrorism, but that the current situation does not justify a state of emergency.

"We believe it will do nothing to prevent crimes of this nature or bring about the detection and prosecution of those responsible," Lynch said.

More Mars missions mapped

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Project scientist spoke of future missions to Mars on Tuesday as Viking 2 remained poised for a landing on the red planet later this week.

Nobel Prize winning scientist Dr. Joshua Lederberg mentioned several possibilities for future missions.

They included a Son of Viking mission, using essentially the same equipment as Viking; a roving probe that could wander about the planet; and a sample-return mission, which would bring Martian soil back to Earth for study.

The Viking 2 lander, scheduled to touch down on the planet Friday, is aimed at a sand dune field in the northern latitude of Mars. The landing site is near the edge of the greatest extent of the north polar cap in winter, about 4,000 miles from where Viking 1 touched down several weeks ago.

The scientists' comments came at a forum to which a number of visiting researchers were invited.

With attention on the second spacecraft, the lander of Viking 1 enters a reduced mission status. Although it still has three biology experiments incubating, and will carry out some other tests, the first lander will be at a low level of activity during the main part of Viking 2 work on Mars.

Municipalities' financial plight spotlighted

OTTAWA (CP) — Municipal leaders will try to revive national talks with the federal and provincial governments on the financial plight of municipalities.

Mayor Dan Munroe of Glace Bay, N.S., president of the Federation of Canadian Municipalities, told reporters Tuesday that the federation's board of directors refuses to accept the provinces' "cavalier disregard for the future of municipal government in Canada."

So unhappy is he with provincial governments, the federation president said that he believes "we would be better off" if the municipality was the other level of government and not the province. Municipalities were in dire financial straits and needed help.

The federation will approach provincial governments in an attempt to reverse a recent provincial move which scuttles a planned national conference on municipal finance, Mayor Munroe said.

Provincial municipal affairs ministers, meeting in Kingston, Ont., two weeks ago, sent a telegram to the federation saying they consider the proposed national tri-level conference in Montebello, Que., Oct. 21 to be an inappropriate forum for discussion of the finance issue.

The Montebello conference was to discuss findings of a joint federal-provincial-municipal study of the finance issue. The study report, which contained no recommendations, was released last April.

WANT REGIONAL TALKS
The provincial municipal affairs ministers said they were prepared to talk about the finance report at regional meetings with municipalities.

"We will not accept the provincial governments' apparent intention to divide and conquer—to substitute regional tri-level conferences for national ones," Mayor Munroe said.

Both types of conferences are valuable, he said.

The federation president said that commitments to participate in the Montebello conference had been received last spring from the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland. Then, there had been the Kingston decision to withdraw.

"Between private individuals, this kind of irresponsibility could end in a suit for breach of contract. Surely it's equally dishonorable for one level of government to sabotage another."

There is little chance the conference can be revived in time for the original October date, Mayor Munroe said. But it was possible a meeting could be held by next spring.

SEES FEDERAL SUPPORT

Mayor Munroe said the federal government supports the national tri-level meeting but the federation had not yet been able to meet with Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson. Mr. Danson was the federal representative on the three-man organizing committee for the Montebello conference.

The meeting at Montebello was to be the third national tri-level meeting. The last meeting in Edmonton in 1973 agreed to commission the municipal finance study and discuss the results at the next conference, then expected in 1974.

The detailed 1,300-page study report described the financial condition of the three levels of government. The federation said results supported their view that there is a "municipal financial crisis."

The municipal view was disputed by Darcy McKeough, Ontario treasurer and municipal affairs minister, who said the report turned up nothing new.

Mayor Munroe said the municipal level of government is dying. "We are starving, and not very slowly, because of the lack of revenue to provide services for our people."

SAY TAX INADEQUATE
Mayor Munroe and other federation directors at the news conference said municipalities must rely on the property tax as their only direct source of revenue. But revenue from property taxes did not grow as quickly as funds from other taxes in the hands of provincial and federal governments.

The federation leaders acknowledged that they do get provincial and federal grants but said these come with strings attached.

Ald. Carol Ruddell of Scarborough, Ont., said municipalities want an assurance that they will get funds according to a formula, so they can plan ahead for municipal projects. Fluctuating grants from senior levels of government created uncertainty in municipalities.

Two British Columbia mayors, Tom Constable of Burnaby and Muni Evers of New Westminster, spoke approvingly of a B.C. government decision to give municipalities a share of resource tax revenue. Mayor Constable said the same thing should be done at the federal level.

Mayor Terry Cavanagh of Edmonton said municipalities have to sit down with the federal government to discuss some problems. Edmonton had to go ahead with rapid transit plans without getting federal funds despite promises by the federal government in the 1974 election campaign of a vast urban transit program.

The World in focus

Blacks told to cool it

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard's top policeman urged militant black youths to "cool it" Tuesday after a night of rioting at a West Indian carnival. More than 450 persons were injured, shops and houses were looted or damaged, and 60 persons were arrested.

"If I have a message to everyone involved it is: Cool it," Sir Robert Mark, metropolitan police commissioner, told a news conference. "It may seem melodramatic to say this, but when temperatures rise and bricks begin to fly, it's easy for someone to lose his life."

Mark said about 150,000 revellers at the three-day carnival and about 1,600 policemen were in the heavily West Indian Notting Hill area when the trouble erupted as police tried to arrest a pickpocket.

Basque aims described

ST. SEBASTIAN, Spain (CP) — Leaders of an underground Basque nationalist group say reconciliation with the Spanish government appears to be growing more remote.

Three cell leaders of the ETA, an outlawed guerrilla group, told The Canadian Press during a meeting at a secret location in northern Spain that the Basques can regain their autonomy only through armed struggle.

The Basques, who are spread over four provinces in the north of Spain and three in southwest France, were integrated into the Spanish nation during the 1930s, although the move was opposed by nationalists.

Labor backs Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. labor leaders promised Tuesday to support Jimmy Carter's Democratic presidential campaign with "the strongest, most effective get-out-the-vote campaign ever conducted by the labor movement."

Meanwhile, Republican vice-presidential nominee Robert Dole questioned whether the labor leaders can really speak for the American workingman.

Carter appeared before leaders of the AFL-CIO, then met with the National Council of Catholic Bishops on a fence-mending mission that did not appear to succeed.

Archbishop Joseph Bernardin, chairman of the council, said after the meeting that he was disappointed Carter only repeated his personal opposition to abortion and that he would not oppose a constitutional amendment to forbid abortions.

Ford offer rejected

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers (UAW), rejecting Ford Motor Co.'s contract offer as "an insult," says the company has "one hell of a long way" to go to avert the danger of a strike in two weeks.

UAW President Leonard Woodcock said after reviewing Tuesday's proposal that he is unsure whether the union will return to the bargaining table.

If no settlement is reached when the current pact expires at midnight Sept. 14, the UAW might call a nationwide strike by 167,000 Ford workers.

The Ford proposal included an average 52½ cents an hour in new wages during three years, continued cost-of-living protection and a new health plan in which workers would pay for some medical care.

The union said it will decide whether to resume negotiations after it assesses Ford's offer and plans its next bargaining strategy. In the meantime, the union told Ford negotiators to be on standby for a resumption of talks.

Building Walls

It was once thought that, as man and his technology evolved and improved, the world would become smaller and more accessible. The development of the aeroplane would make distance irrelevant, and the progress of internationalism would erase borders and make brothers of us all. Travel would be unrestricted and there might even be an international language — several were developed and proposed — so that everyone would talk with everyone else.

What has happened has been quite the opposite. Aeroplanes have made the world smaller, but, in a way, completely different. We can travel faster, but there are fewer places to which we can travel. Many places can be visited only under restrictions and after much paper work and bureaucratic deliberation. Borders, instead of being erased, have been raised, in some cases with walls, barbed wire and armed guards.

Along with this has come a resurgence of cultural nationalism. In Africa there has been a withdrawal into tribal heritages, and a rejection of cosmopolitanism. Albania has decreed that anyone with a name that does not conform to the government's idea of what is a good Albanian name will have to change it. It is a world-wide phenomenon; a narrowing of interests, an exclusion of outside influences, an attempt to promote national identities.

Last month the government of South Korea announced a program of cultural purification designed to purge the national culture of foreign influences. Among the measures adopted is a ban on foreigners appearing in television commercials and a ban on long hair — a symbol of alien culture. Parents who send their children to foreign schools are to be "encouraged" not to.

Imported films are discouraged. The Korean language is to be cleansed of foreign words and department store live models are to be replaced by wax mannequins that look more Korean. Summing up the policy, the minister of culture said: "I don't think there will be any role for foreign influence in our culture in the future."

Canadians may find that all of this has a familiar ring, and wonder if the Korean minister of culture has not been stealing his material from a Canadian cabinet minister or book publisher. In cultural nationalism we do not have to take a back seat to anybody. In recent years the Canadian government has driven a popular, but alien, magazine out of the country. It has imposed Canadian content requirements on television, radio, and magazines; and when it found that some unpatriotic citizens were turning to cable stations and the foreign influences they represent, it introduced legislation which created what must be a unique situation — broadcasters in one country threatening to jam their own signals so that they could not be received in another country. This is something that the Russians would dearly love to get Radio Free Europe to do but which they have never been able to accomplish.

We have in Canada a surplus of nationalists — far more than is actually needed to guard the border. In both government and the arts, we have developed techniques of cultural purification far more sophisticated than those commonly used in many countries. If these people were to be recruited by the Canadian International Development Agency, they could be sent abroad as part of a foreign-aid program in which they could use their expert knowledge in such projects as ridding Tanzania of mini-skirts or stamping out rock-and-roll in Romania. The department could be called the department of xenophobia and chauvinism and its efforts could be directed toward ensuring that Canada would be only the first island in a great archipelago of sterile cultural laboratories.

We could help to build walls all over the world.

Highlights of second volume of sectoral guidelines

OTTAWA — The Canadian International Development Agency recently published the second of a series of sectoral guidelines for Canada's development assistance program for the next five years.

Entitled "Social Development and Community Service", the Guidelines deal with education, population, housing, social communications and cooperatives. They are a follow-up to Canada's Strategy for International Development Cooperation, 1975-80 made public September 2, 1975. Some highlights follow:

HEALTH

The Guidelines are based on three considerations:

- Western curative models are inappropriate because of economic and social differences;

- Lack of measures and health services are particularly marked in Third World regions;

- The health sector cannot be isolated from other sectors.

Top priority in the health sector must be given to integrated training and curative and preventive programs in rural areas, for instance:

- Training of health auxiliaries and para-medical workers;

- Provision of clean water, environmental sanitation;

- Health education;

- Provision of simple, basic equipment for the treatment and prevention of disease;

- Construction of simple buildings suited to communal uses;

- Canadian projects must

- be a part of national or regional health programs;
- CIDA projects must be developed within the financial scope of the recipient country;

- Emphasis should be on applied research and pure research projects avoided;

- Health projects in which CIDA participated bilaterally or through an NGO should rely on available or potential local resources;

- Considerable expertise in rural health, hygiene, sanitation and water supply programs is available in Canada for use in developing countries. Former NGO volunteers with overseas experience in health projects in developing countries are available.

EDUCATION

The Guidelines identify three priorities under education:

- Gathering of basic education information by developing countries;

- The adaptation of educational institutions to social, economic and cultural needs;

- Establishment of basic first cycle education programs which would provide education for adults as well as children to enable them to evolve better and more productively in their own evolving environment.

While the first two priorities would not be neglected, the Canadian program would be largely directed to this last priority.

In line with the Strategy, CIDA will concentrate its efforts in the 25 poorest countries of the Third World.

CIDA will encourage in particular:

- The training of teacher trainers as well as teachers; the development of organizational and administrative skills; this training should be dispensed locally or in culturally similar third countries.

- Technical and vocational training, as an integral part of educational, social and economic development;

- The training of unemployed young people who have had limited access to formal education;

- Assistance to help countries to develop their own development agents and "animators."

CIDA's programs should fit in with the host country's national plan and budget so that they can be taken over without strain.

Canadian assistance must be in support of, and not a substitute for, national efforts.

Audio-visual techniques should be used only when they fit in with the general educational program.

CIDA will not normally support projects for the construction of schools or similar institutions unless they are to be used as centres for community action — that is, used to the fullest extent.

POPULATION

The Sectoral Guidelines reflect the principles of the World Plan of Action adopted at the world population conference in Bucharest, 1974. These include:

- a) Family planning policies must not become a substitute for social and economic changes, but should be integrated with such changes.

- b) Couples and individuals have the right to decide the number and spacing of their children and access to information, education and technology to modify their reproductive behavior must be available accordingly.

- c) Socio-economic measures and programs aimed at changing population growth factors such as mortality, morbidity, population distribution and international migration must have as much emphasis as fertility regulation.

Population policies should consist of a set of legal and administrative measures by which public authorities may directly or indirectly influence trends in the size, distribution and composition of a given population as these trends interact with other elements of public policy within the broad context of social, economic and technological change.

In the short run, programs in the health and education sectors appear to be the most direct way of achieving the goals set forth in the World Plan of Action for population activities.

In the long run, CIDA must assist in programs that would raise standards of living; projects and programs promoting labor-intensive technologies to achieve increased agricultural production are among them.

It is recommended in the Guidelines that Canada's financial commitments for activities linked to the World Plan of Action must be increased along with greater participation in multilateral organizations.

HOUSING

The term "housing" encompasses all forms of shelter and associated services.

It is noted in the Guidelines that a prior consideration for Canadian assistance must be a national plan in the recipient country that is based on a human settlement approach which concentrates on low-income groups.

CIDA programs must encourage research dealing with local and regional materials and construction techniques; establishment of low-cost building-materials manufacturers; creation of financial housing institutions; training of administrators and technicians of cooperatives; promotion of aided self-help housing programs for target low-income populations.

Specific projects CIDA should support would include:

- Assistance for housing policy formulation in developing countries including analytical and technical studies required for implementation;

- Establishment of regional building research institutions;

- Establishment of industries producing low-cost domestic building materials.

Coparticipation with other donors is encouraged.

Resources available in Canada for the housing sector in developing countries are limited although it is possible to mobilize Canadian technical and financial resources to support local efforts.

COOPERATIVES

Support for cooperatives is justified because they are based on participation and self-help.

A multifunctional or multipurpose cooperative is considered the most satisfactory type especially in rural areas but is complex from a management point of view. Savings and credit cooperatives are recognized for their self-help potential and their adaptability to a variety of socio-economic contexts.

Canada can respond to requests for assistance in this sector, particularly in the field of food production, handling, storing and marketing, savings and credit.

Priority should be given to training administrative personnel, creation and improvement of legal and administrative structures and support to federations, training centres, development banks, etc., which encourage cooperatives.

CIDA should encourage small village cooperatives which have a potential to expand into federations.

Assistance to cooperative projects serving a vast population of the most deprived people must also receive highest priority.

Technical assistance is more important at the start of a cooperative project than financial aid.

Under the heading of social communications, CIDA describes two categories of projects:

- Projects linked to development of the communications infrastructure such as equipment, training, production, research, etc.

- Projects related to the auxiliary role of social communications in education, community sensitization, agricultural extension services, health and other sectors.

Training and retraining in all aspects of social communications as well as research that would enable formulation of policies and projects which conform to the realities of the milieu must be a priority (knowledge of needs and resources, evaluation of the impact of the media, development of mechanisms for feed-back of information, etc.).

The accent must continue to be placed on the educative role of the mass media, mostly in rural areas.

Full support should be given to local production of films, radio and television programs. Suitable Canadian productions could also be made available, when in conformity with the local socio-cultural context.

Considering the Canadian resources available, emphasis should be put on the following media: radio, educational television, publishing and journalism. As a support to oral techniques, ancillary audio-visual materials might be used.

CIDA should play a methodological and technological support role but not interfere with program content.

The impact of radio as an important medium can be increased by use of recording tape, cassettes, movies, filmstrips, video-tape equipment which lends itself to participation and feed-back.

Canada's bilingual nature, sociocultural neutrality, professional training, knowledge of communications and financial resources put it in a favored position to answer increasing demands in the sector.

Greater Focus on Education

Canada is prepared to focus assistance to a greater extent on education in developing countries, it is stated in Sectoral Guidelines made public recently by the Canadian International Development Agency.

This is one of the key points made in a second volume of Sectoral Guidelines for Canada's international cooperation program. Others are in the sectors of health, population, housing, cooperatives and social communications.

Complementing the strategy for International Development Cooperation, 1975-80, published by the Government September 2, 1975, the Guidelines are based on a sector-by-sector examination of operations of the Canadian International Development Agency, and existing Canadian resources for international development programs. A first volume of guidelines was published April 30, 1976 on agriculture, forestry, fisheries and water development. A third volume will deal with infrastructures of developing countries.

Each sector covered by the Guidelines has been recognized as a priority in the Strategy 1975-80 and is a major concern within developing countries.

Some 60 specialists helped draft basic documents for the Guidelines. Editing was done by the Policy Analysis Branch of CIDA, which consulted 30 Canadian missions abroad and ten federal departments and research organizations.

The principles outlined are for the guidance of officers of CIDA and consultants. The Guidelines are being distributed on an information basis to Canadian and international non-government organizations, federal and provincial departments concerned, governments of developing countries and major international agencies.

The links that exist between different sectors of assistance are underlined in the Guidelines. Social communications are directly connected to the education sector. The latter sector is essential to a national or regional health plan while health is dependent on adequate housing, clean water, etc.

It is stressed in the Guidelines that assistance is but one of the tools that must serve the Third World. "Wherever, and in whatever form it may be offered, Canadian assistance must be clearly seen to be in support of, and not a substitute for, national efforts." Evaluation of programs must be a joint effort of Canada and its bilateral partners.

The poorest countries are the objects of special attention in all sectors under the Guidelines.

Finally, the choice, direction, evaluation and launching of development projects in Third World countries must take into account the availability of Canadian resources.

Justice Dept. Unjust to FBI

Jack Anderson's

Washington

WASHINGTON — We have had our brushes with the FBI which, in times past, has sometimes transgressed the law in the name of law and order. But the Justice Department is now going too far in its efforts to nail more than 30 field agents for those transgressions.

They are under investigation for allegedly breaking into private residences, tapping telephones and opening mail without legal authority.

We have established that the FBI agents, who carried out these assignments, were merely obeying orders. They were under tight discipline. In each instance, the agent received the approval of the section chief, who got his authorization from Washington.

Top FBI officials, furthermore, kept the Justice Department fully informed of these dubious and devious activities. Sources familiar with the operation say the Attorney General, himself, not only knew what the FBI was doing but gave his general authorization.

It will be interesting to see whether the Justice Department can now prosecute lowly agents for carrying out the orders of its own high muck-a-mucks.

Footnote: The targets of most of the FBI break-ins were the Socialist Workers Party and the radical Weathermen. There is evidence that the Weathermen traveled between the United States and Cuba, that they received financial support from Fidel Castro's government and that they were responsible for several bombings in the United States. Under the law, the FBI could conduct warrantless searches and wiretaps if the action was directed against people who were a threat to national security or were connected with a foreign government.

POLITICAL DEAL? The day before Tom Klepper resigned as small business chief to take over the Interior Department, he did a quiet, multi-million-dollar favor for friends in the oil business.

Klepper arbitrarily overruled his staff at the Small Business Administration to allow eight large refineries to qualify for preferential treatment. The decision gives them access to $20 million in government oil.

It was a last-minute ruling that has the sour smell of politics. For one of the eight beneficiaries, Powerline Oil, a California company, is represented in Washington by the law firm of President Ford's close friend, Robert Collier. In fact, Collier was among the few friends the President invited to his swearing-in ceremony two years ago.

Powerline had become too large to qualify as a small business under the SBA standards for refineries. Therefore, it was about to lose the opportunity to purchase cheap government oil, which is set aside for small refineries.

The government receives oil from the major oil companies as a royalty for drilling on government land. This cheap royalty oil is made available to small companies to help them compete with the giants.

After Powerline outgrew its status as a small business, it tried to get the standards changed so it would still be eligible for the royalty oil. But the SBA staff recommended strongly against it. The cheap oil should be reserved, the staff urged, for firms that refined less than 30,000 barrels per day.

"To increase the capacity standard at a time when royalty oil is in limited supply," the staff cautioned, "would severely diminish the share now going to each small business to a point where they may lose economic effectiveness."

Nevertheless, Klepper raised the standard to 45,000 barrels per day. By an interesting coincidence, Powerline refines 44,120 barrels per day. It looks almost as if the new standard was set to accommodate the company with the White House connection. However, seven other refineries also will benefit from the ruling.

The day after Klepper made this multi-million-dollar adjustment in the small business standards, he resigned from the SBA to become the new Interior Secretary. Klepper claims he made the decision simply to resolve the matter before leaving SBA. He selected the 45,000 figure, he said, as a compromise between the 30,000 his staff recommended and the 60,000 sought by the refineries.

The eight companies that will benefit from Klepper's decision are hardly small. The smallest among them does an annual $171 million worth of business. Nor was Klepper unaware of the friendship between the President and Collier. Our SBA sources say Klepper had full knowledge that his decision would benefit a presidential crony.

Footnote: Reps. John Moss, D-Calif., and John Dingell, D-Mich., asked the General Accounting Office to investigate Klepper's decision. The GAO found no contact between Klepper and oil lobbyists. But the GAO investigators noted that they didn't have access to a complete record of Klepper's contacts.

TRICKY FERDINAND: Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos has found an ingenious means of giving the appearance of respectability to his regime.

He took an advertisement in Fortune magazine, paid well over $100,000 for it, and then quoted from it as if it were an independent assessment of how he runs his country.

In releases to the captive Philippine press, a Marcos spokesman described the ad as "one of the featured articles in Fortune." Then the spokesman quoted the ad's praise for the Philippines oil reserves, economy and government.

The family

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Joseph Copping.

Copping-Humphries

Plymouth-Trinity United Church, Sherbrooke, Que., was the scene of a lovely spring wedding on June 12, when Joyce Lillian, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Humphries, Sherbrooke, Que., became the bride of Edward Joseph, only son of Mrs. Leah Copping and the late Mr. Laurence Copping of Lennoxville, Que.

The double-ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Cedric Arnold. The organist was Mr. Daniel Morel.

The church was decorated with baskets of yellow and white gladioli and white satin bows marked the pews. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white polyester satin with lace inserted bodice. Her elbow length veil was held in place by scalloped lace which also trimmed the V neck line. The flared skirt ended in a chapel length train. Her bouquet was of red sweetheart roses and white baby's breath. The bride's gown was made by a close friend of the bride, Mrs. B. Hyatt, Lennoxville, Que.

Miss Ruth Humphries, Sherbrooke, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a floor-length gown of blue polyester with raised pastel flowers. She carried a nosegay of yellow daisies with white baby's breath and purple statice.

The bridesmaids, Miss Carolyn Downes, Bishop, and Miss Hilda Heckley, Richmond, friends of the bride, wore gowns identical to the maid of honor. Miss Downes wore yellow and Miss Heckley chose pink. They each carried a nosegay of white daisies with white baby's breath and purple statice.

Joanna Grove, Granby, Mass., cousin of the groom, as flower girl, wore a long green gown similar to that of the other attendants. She carried a basket of yellow daisies with white baby's breath and purple statice.

Mr. Brian Conway, of Nova Scotia, was best man.

Miscellaneous shower

SOUTH DURHAM — Upwards of 100 guests attended the surprise miscellaneous shower, in the United Church Hall, given in honor of Miss Sandra Fee, daughter of Mrs. Winnie Fee and the late Delmer Fee of South Durham.

The hall was prettily decorated with yellow and white streamers, bells and balloons filled with confetti and rice, which hung over Sandra's head and on the front of the table.

Upon arrival, Sandra was welcomed by Mrs. Nicole Clark, who presented the bride elect with a lovely corsage of roses and daisies; a corsage was also presented to Mrs. Verna Clark and Mrs. Winnie Fee. Sandra thought she was attending a rummage sale.

She was escorted to a seat of honor at the head table, which was centred by a beautiful shower cake, decorated in yellow and white with an umbrella on top and roses at the corners, also two heart shaped cakes, one of blue and one of pink, with flowers on top. The cakes were made and decorated by Mrs. Nicole Clark.

Seated beside the bride-to-be were her mother, Mrs. Winnie Fee and Mrs. Verna Clark.

The many gifts were arranged on a long decorated table and at intervals were presented to Sandra by Mrs. Nicole Clark, Mrs. Donna Goupil assisted by Miss Sonya Goupil and Master Craig Badger.

Mrs. Nicole Clark, in a few well chosen words, expressed, on behalf of the guests, best wishes for a happy wedded life.

The gifts, after being passed around and admired by the guests, were displayed on a long decorated table.

Miss Fee voiced her appreciation for the lovely gifts and to the hostesses, who were: Mrs. Nicole Clark, Mrs. Freda Coote, Miss Cindy Coote, Mrs. Linda Lefebvre, Miss Janet Badger, Mrs. Donna Goupil, Mrs. Gary Badger, Mrs. Grace Johnston and Mrs. Leslie Doyle. Helpers were Mrs. Theresa Watt, Miss Kim Coote, Miss Sonya Goupil and Miss Stacy Lancaster.

A social hour was enjoyed, after which a delicious lunch was served.

Microwave cooking becoming the trend

Most good inventions — like the zipper — are instant successes. Others — like the microwave oven — had to wait for their time to come. Now this science fiction appliance has suddenly become one of the hottest new products on the home scene. So if you're on the verge of adding one to your kitchen, you're part of a trend.

The microwave oven cooks food in about half the time required by the conventional oven and operates with ordinary household current (110 to 120 volts). This might appear slightly miraculous to you at first, but the basic concept is really very simple.

In microwave cooking, food is cooked by microwave energy, a form of radio frequency energy originally developed for radar. The energy in these waves is normally dissipated over long distances, but in a microwave oven it's confined within the cooking cavity. Microwaves cause the molecules of water in the food to vibrate at an extremely rapid rate, producing heat. So, food is cooked from the inside out. But the oven walls, and cooking utensils, like china or glass stay relatively cool. This means you can heat and serve foods in the same dishes.

Because microwave cooking is so quick, you can plan meals at the last minute. It's also convenient for defrosting and cooking frozen foods or simply for reheating foods.

For example, one all-purpose Spartan apple will cook in about 5 to 6 minutes; 2 apples, 8 to 9 minutes; and 6 apples, in 16 to 20 minutes.

But like most of your standard everyday miracles, the microwave oven has its drawbacks too. Unless the oven contains a special browning unit, many foods like cakes, breads and meats will not brown because they cook so rapidly and uniformly. As a result, foods often appear different.

Using the microwave oven requires learning some new cooking techniques. Cooking time is related to the food's starting temperature, its volume, shape and density. Certain irregularly shaped foods don't heat evenly, so that these parts must be protected during part of the cooking period. Most manufacturers supply directions for cooking basic foods, using recommended utensils, and there are a variety of cookbooks available 50TH ANNIVERSARY — Friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. R.E. Norton are invited to an Open House in celebration of their 50th Anniversary being held at St.

Andrew's Presbyterian Church Hall, at Sherbrooke, Sat., Sept. 4 from 7 to 9 p.m. Guests are asked to bring a family picture for the golden memory tree.

25th anniversary marked

Approximately four hundred friends and relatives gathered at "La Paloma," Milby, on the evening of July 30, to honor Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Deacon of Lennoxville on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary.

Upon entering the hall, Stewart and Phyllis were met by their family and presented with a corsage and boutonniere by their eldest daughter, Jane and her husband Frank Wilson, on behalf of their children.

After receiving congratulations of all present, dancing was enjoyed, to the music of "The Countrymen".

During intermission, Mr.

Lindsay Pocock, acting as M.C. made the presentation of gifts, cards and the guest book, on behalf of all present.

Stewart and Phyllis both expressed their thanks and introduced their families to the gathering. Many pictures were taken at this happy occasion.

Delicious refreshments were served by members of the Milby W.I., including a lovely anniversary cake, made and decorated by Mrs. Jean Naylor, Mrs. Deacon's sister.

Dancing was then continued to bring the memorable evening to a close.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Sutor were in charge of the guest book.

This evening also marked a reunion of the Deacon family. With the exception of Allyn and family of 100 mile, B.C. and Miss Betty Ann Deacon, Vancouver, B.C.

Present from a distance were: Miss K. Deacon, Mr. R. Deacon, Mr. P. Ives, Montreal, Mr. E. Deacon, Waterdown, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. Fred Deacon, Clearwater, Fla., Mr. A. Deacon, Miss Patty Deacon, Mrs. B. Dalling, Moncton, N.B., Rev. and Mrs. R. A. Wood and family, Saskatoon, Sask., Mrs. Audrey Jordan, Ingersoll, Ont. and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Giroux, Wilmington, Mass.

Ann Landers says:

Tell him the truth

Dear Ann Landers: An aunt of mine is driving me crazy. I plan to be married in a few months. She thinks it is very important that I tell my fiancé I had rhinoplasty — better known as a nose job.

I don't think it's any of his business. Aunt Marcia insists that it would be unfair not to tell him. And wait till you get a load of the reason. She is afraid our children might be born with a schnozz like my old one and my husband would wonder who the father is. (I now have a little turned-up nose, and his nose is small also.)

What is your opinion of the situation? — Nobody Nose The Trouble I've Seen

Dear Trouble: The decision should be yours, but I see no reason for not telling him. After all, he fell in love with you, not your nose.

Dear Ann Landers: My problem is a 19-year-old son. He has never been in any kind of trouble, works every day and pays board and room.

Things began to change around here last October when Phil took up with a 14-year-old girl. She looks 17, is very mature physically but not mentally. Phil is at Dolly's house every night of the week. They seldom go to a movie or out with friends. Their only interest is each other.

Dolly seems like a nice girl but she forgets to wash her hands before meals and never uses a napkin. When

Phil tries to hold her chair to help her get seated, she says, "I'm not crippled. I can seat myself." (No manners whatsoever.)

Last week she asked for permission to stay here for the weekend while her parents were out of town. I said O.K. Ann, the girl didn't bring a thing with her, not even a toothbrush. She slept with my daughter who offered her a nightgown. Her reply was, "I hate those things."

Phil bought a camper and plans to take Dolly camping every weekend. I don't know what this girl's parents are thinking about. Will you please comment? — Plenty Worried

Dear P.L.: Phil has obviously gone gaga over this Dolly and there is nothing you can (or should) do about it. He is 19 — old enough to know his own mind — such as it is.

Your son should be aware, however, of the legal ramifications. In many states a 14-year-old girl is considered a child. Under certain circumstances he could get into legal trouble for contributing to her delinquency.

The girl sounds pathetically ignorant and completely without parental guidance. I hope Phil will assume the responsibility to see that his Dolly doesn't get pregnant.

Dear Ann Landers: Your column is a great escape valve for people who need to sound off. May I blow my top? Thank you.

Dear "Gentlemen" Commuters: Although you insist Women's Lib has killed chivalry, it doesn't mean good manners and common sense are also dead. How can you sit in that seat on the bus while a woman eight months pregnant stands, being jostled around for 45 minutes? Doesn't it bother you when a 60-plus, grandmotherly type faints from standing in a crowded aisle, in stifling heat, while you sit next to a breezy window?

How do you think you look shoving women and children aside in your rush to get on the bus and grab a seat? If you don't know, I can tell you in a word. Lousy. — Turned Off In D.C.

Dear D.C.: I can't improve on your one-word answer. Thank you.

Bridal Shower

BEEBE — Miss Kathy Leney of Granitville was recently invited to dinner by a small group of her girlfriends in honor of her forthcoming marriage.

After being picked up by Debi Derusha, they motored to the Mee-Ho dining room in Sherbrooke where eight of them met and enjoyed a Chinese dinner.

Returning to a friend's apartment in Lennoxville, an additional group of friends were awaiting their arrival. The apartment was decorated to suit the occasion.

Seated in her assigned chair, Kathy was presented with many lovely gifts, and upon opening and circulating the various useful and decorative articles, she voiced her appreciation. She also expressed her happiness in meeting friends whom she had not seen within the year.

The remainder of the evening was spent reminiscing, over refreshments, and home entertainment.

The evening was arranged and hosted by Joan Stafford of Ayer's Cliff and Debi Derusha, of Beebe, assisted by Judy Leney of Granitville.

Guests attended from Montreal, Chicoutimi, Sherbrooke, Lennoxville, Ayer's Cliff and Three Villages.

Miss Katherine Leney and Mr. James Cook of Ayer's Cliff will be united in marriage on September 4, 1976.

TO CONTROL SEVERE BLEEDING

● Apply hand pressure to the bleeding part, over a dressing if available. If one dressing becomes bloodsoaked, don't remove it. Place another over it. ● Lie the casualty down and elevate the injured part above the level of the heart. Cover dressing with a pad of soft material and hold dressing and pad in position with a firm bandage. ● If there is a foreign object embedded in the wound, don't remove it. Removal may cause more serious bleeding. Loosely cover the object with a light cloth to prevent infection then apply pressure around the object.

GRANBY (Special) — Coach Ghislain Delage of the Sherbrooke Beavers of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League dropped the axe once again, slicing six players to bring the squad down to 35 players in all.

The Beavers have been holding their pre-season training camp here at the Sports Palace until their quarters in Sherbrooke will be ready for them. It is expected they will return to Sherbrooke towards the weekend.

In an inter-squad tilt the Blues ran away from Whites to the tune of 14-8 with Denis Hallee and Jean-Francois Brisson, a rookie, pacing the attack each with a three-goal effort. Hallee also helped out on another goal.

Mark Semerigakis, also a newcomer, chalked up two tallies to go along with his three assists. Joe Carlevalle potted two while Jere Gillis registered a tally with three passes. Ricky Vaive, a husky newcomer, came through with a goal and two assists.

Brisson was the best for the losing side with his hat-trick while Normand Lefebvre chalked up two tallies. Mario Claude, who was with the club last year, picked up where he left off and turned in a fine performance on defence while Burton Martin, a rookie, turned in a fine job.

The Beavers will play their first pre-season game at the Sherbrooke Sports Palace Friday, Sept. 3, when they will play hosts to the Three Rivers team. On Sunday, Sept. 5, at 2:30 they will be at home to the Montreal Juniors.

Following these two tilts, the Beavers hit the road for games in Laval, Sept. 6, and Three Rivers on Tuesday, Sept. 7. On Friday, Sept. 10, they will receive last year's champions, Quebec Remparts, and then they will visit Quebec, with the game being played in Rimouski.

Their next big test will be a real tough one as they will face the rookies of the New York Rangers on Tuesday, Sept. 14. This should be a real test for Coach Delage's charges and will give the local pilot a fair idea just what, and how, his charges will face up under hard conditions.

Their final game before the season opens will be against Laval on Thursday, Sept. 16, at 8:00 and then on Sunday, Sept. 19th, they will commence the regular schedule with Quebec the visiting team.

Coach Delage must reduce his club by a few more before the season officially opens and it is expected he will do that over the coming weekend.

PHILADELPHIA (Reuter) — The tennis associations of the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia and Hungary were fined $10,000 each today for withdrawing their teams from the Federation Cup women's tennis tournament here last week.

The Philippines tennis association was fined $2,500 for withdrawing from the consolation tournament following its elimination from the main championship.

Derek Hardwick, president of the International Lawn Tennis Federation (ILTF), said the fines imposed by the ILTF management committee were made heavy because of the damage to the tournament and its gate receipts.

The Soviet Union led the pullout in protest against the presence of South Africa and Rhodesia in the tournament. Czechoslovakia was the defending champion.

Mr. Hardwick said if the fines were not paid, the countries would be excluded from all team competitions set up by the ILTF, including the Davis Cup.

International tournaments would not be sanctioned in those countries or prize money in team events paid to them. Individual players would not be affected, however.

OTTAWA (CP) — Anthony Davis and John Harvey are a backfield combination that could make any defence nervous, but the third Toronto ball carrier will not go unnoticed, at least by the fans, as the Argonauts play the Rough Riders here tonight in the Canadian Football League.

Neil Lumsden, who runs from the fullback slot mainly for blocking jobs for Toronto, starred with Ottawa University for four years, rewriting most of the national scoring and rushing records and leading the Gee-Gees to the national championship last season.

While Davis has not lived up to the expectations of his million-dollar contract, coach Russ Jackson hopes that using Harvey, on the injury list since the preseason, from the wingback spot will deflect some of the Riders' attention from Davis.

It won't be hard for the Argos to improve on their last performance—a dismal 10-8 to Montreal Alouettes which saw a total offence of 75 yards.

Ottawa defeated the Argos 27-16 in their first regular-season meeting and while Davis showed glimpses of his potential, the Riders defence kept him in line.

Harvey will play at wingback where both his running and pass-catching abilities can be exploited.

To counter the Argos, the Riders will have a couple of injured starters back in the lineup. Defensive back Wayne Tish and defensive end Jim Plaskoski have recovered from leg injuries. They have both been missed and should tighten up the Riders' spotty defence.

Ottawa has 10 points on a 5-2 won-lost record, three ahead of Montreal. Toronto is one point behind Montreal and two ahead of Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

The game will be televised on the CTV eastern network starting at 8 p.m. EDT, except here where a league blackout will prevail.

US belts Russians but lose 5-4

MONTREAL (CP) — The United States team entered in this month's Canada Cup hockey tournament is considered to be perhaps the weakest in the six-country, round-robin event.

The 12,699 fans at the Forum on Tuesday night were given an indication why the U.S. is picked to battle it out with Finland for last spot in the tournament, which also has entries from Canada, the Soviet Union, Sweden and Czechoslovakia.

The young, inexperienced Americans played well for about five minutes against the Soviets and lost 5-4, getting three goals in the last 3:10 of the third period.

The loss was the third for the Americans in as many pre-tournament games. Last week in Quebec, they were beaten 7-3 and 10-3 by Canada.

Aside from the late-game rally, the U.S. club was sloppy and ineffective offensively against a Soviet team which had a 34-21 edge in shots on goal.

SCORES WINNER

Aleksandr Golikov's powerplay goal at 1:37 of the third period, which gave the Soviets a 5-1 lead, turned out to be the winner. Vladimir Repnev with two, Vladimir Vikulov and Vladimir Kovin scored the other Soviet goals.

Alan Hangeleben with two, Curt Bennett and Gary Sargent scored for the United States.

Bennett, from the National Hockey League's Atlanta Flames and Sargent from the NHL's Los Angeles Kings, scored 23 seconds apart to cut the Soviets lead to 5-3 late in the final period and Hangeleben, of New England Whalers of the World Hockey Association, scored with 15 seconds remaining for the final goal of the night.

"That comeback is going to help us a lot," said forward Steve Jensen, who was a standout for the U.S. Olympic team earlier this year.

"This type of thing will give us a lot of confidence in that we can come back. We need that confidence, I think that's probably the biggest part of the game."

"We have a lot of young guys, many guys who haven't played against the Russians or the Czechs before," said Jensen.

The Americans lack of competition against international teams showed often during the game as goaltender Mike Curran was forced to make several spectacular stops to keep the Soviets from going into double figures by the end of the second period.

Veteran Viktor Zinger, in the Soviet net, had little to do, except in the final few minutes.

Robert Cherenov, one of the Soviet coaches, said the Russians had learned something from the Americans' late comeback and promised their tournament game against the U.S. in Philadelphia on Sept. 9 would be more physical.

Sixty-six minutes in penalties were called Tuesday night by referee Ove Dahlberg of Sweden, who missed several other infractions during a chippy, dirty first period.

The Canada Cup begins Thursday in Ottawa as Canada meets Finland.

NFL Players' Association debate over new contract

CHICAGO (AP) — Player representatives for the 28 National Football League teams considered Tuesday whether to send a new owners' contract proposal to their fellow players for ratification.

While details of the offer have not been released publicly, there is a controversy among the player representatives over the question of compensation to a team that loses a player to another club when he plays out his option.

In the past, NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle has presided over such a matter himself and the practice has become known as the Rozelle rule.

But a Minneapolis court has held the Rozelle rule to be illegal.

The new offer provides that a committee determine compensation by a set formula. The Associated Press learned. For instance, the proposal states, a team which loses a top-notch player will get two No. 1 draft choices.

While Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players' Association, withheld public comment, a source said he feared that such a provision would negate players' rights already won in the courts.

Dick Anderson, injured safety for Miami Dolphins who is player president for the NFLPA, favors acceptance.

The debate Tuesday pitted forces for Garvey against those for Anderson.

IT'S CLOSE

"I wish I knew which way it would go; it's that close," said Fred Willis of Houston Oilers, a member of the executive committee which serves as the negotiating team for the players.

"The feeling is pretty evenly split," said another source who attended Tuesday's meeting.

The players gathered in secret about 11 a.m. at a hotel on the grounds of O'Hare International Airport. More than four hours later, they were still discussing "procedural" questions, said Garvey and Anderson, who spoke briefly to reporters.

The players have been without a basic agreement since January, 1974.

The new offer covers minimum salary, post-season game salaries and other items, the AP learned.

It proposed a 43-man roster with a four-man taxi squad.

The split between opposing sides for the players was dramatized at a meeting of the executive committee that began Monday night and ran until 2:30 a.m.

Gene Upshaw of Oakland Raiders, a member of the committee, said the offer doesn't "go far enough."

"There's got to be some changes," he said.

Willis and team-mate Skip Butler, also a member of the committee, favor the proposal.

While the player representatives met, the owners' management council met in New York.

Don Beakes sets record winning Montreal Shoot

DON BEAKES

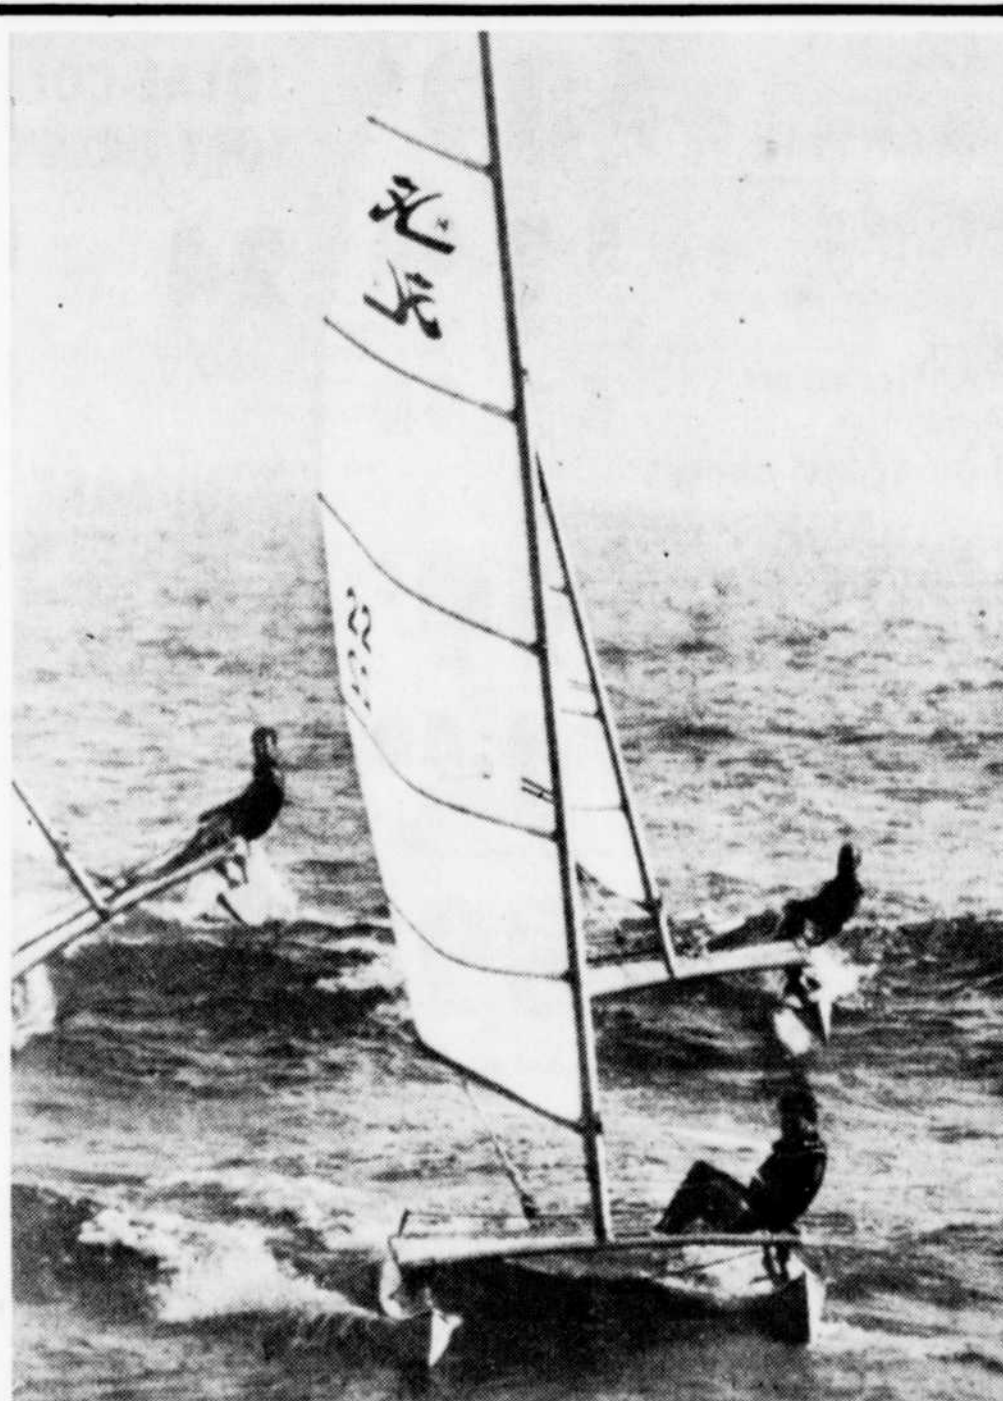

SHERBROOKE — Don Beakes, past-president and director of the Sherbrooke Skeet Club, turned in a fine effort to walk off with the City of Montreal Open championship.

It was held at the Montreal Anglers and Hunters Club, Aug. 7-8, at L'Acadie. He scored 385 out of a possible 400 in four events and then teamed up with Mike Wojciki of Dollard des Ormeaux to win the two-man team shoot in the 410 gauge.

Besides being overall champion of the meet with four guns he copped first Class A for 410-gauge with 92 birds, First Class A for 20-gauge with 96 birds and then the championship for 28-gauge with 97 birds.

Then to complete his day Beakes broke a 100 straight to win the 12-gauge championship. His closest rival for four-guns was 379 which put Beakes in a class by himself. This is no surprise to his club members as he rarely misses while he practices and has always given a good account of himself in the various Invitational Meets he takes part in.

THE CATS ARE BACK!

the exciting boat for everyone.

Argos hoping for better things tonight when they tangle with Rough Riders

OTTAWA (CP) — Anthony Davis and John Harvey are a backfield combination that could make any defence nervous, but the third Toronto ball carrier will not go unnoticed, at least by the fans, as the Argonauts play the Rough Riders here tonight in the Canadian Football League.

Neil Lumsden, who runs from the fullback slot mainly for blocking jobs for Toronto, starred with Ottawa University for four years, rewriting most of the national scoring and rushing records and leading the Gee-Gees to the national championship last season.

While Davis has not lived up to the expectations of his million-dollar contract, coach Russ Jackson hopes that using Harvey, on the injury list since the preseason, from the wingback spot will deflect some of the Riders' attention from Davis.

It won't be hard for the Argos to improve on their last performance—a dismal 10-8 to Montreal Alouettes which saw a total offence of 75 yards.

Ottawa defeated the Argos 27-16 in their first regular-season meeting and while Davis showed glimpses of his potential, the Riders defence kept him in line.

Harvey will play at wingback where both his running and pass-catching abilities can be exploited.

To counter the Argos, the Riders will have a couple of injured starters back in the lineup. Defensive back Wayne Tish and defensive end Jim Plaskoski have recovered from leg injuries. They have both been missed and should tighten up the Riders' spotty defence.

Ottawa has 10 points on a 5-2 won-lost record, three ahead of Montreal. Toronto is one point behind Montreal and two ahead of Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

The game will be televised on the CTV eastern network starting at 8 p.m. EDT, except here where a league blackout will prevail.

Swedeville integral part of Waterville story

By REV. CARL GUSTAFSON

The celebration of the 100th Anniversary of the Village of Waterville should not pass without mention of the influence of the Scandinavian community in its development.

Although the district where most of the community of which I was a member lived was called Swedeville, it was made up of both Norwegians and Swedes.

My own memories go back to the outbreak of the war of 1914-1918. At that time there were about 50 families with approximately 250 people all told. On this page are also listed the names of the ones who were living there when I was a youngster. In many cases some information is lacking. It is hoped that further information will be sent to me by interested parties.

SKILLS FROM THE OLD LAND

Many of these people were brought out through the efforts of Mr. Charles Olof Swanson who came to Waterville from Grinstead, Sweden and who became a Canadian Government Immigration agent. Others, however, like my father came out on their own and were attracted to Waterville by the community that was already forming there.

These people brought with them the trades and skills that they had learned in Norway and Sweden. Both of these countries had excellent apprenticeship systems for training workers.

Consequently among them were good carpenters, blacksmiths, furniture makers, shoe makers, tailors, stonecutters and butchers. All of these were represented by some Scandinavian establishment when I was growing up in Waterville.

I often went up to the woodworking shop of Mathias Knutson which he operated on the top floor of a barn on his place. Here he made windows, doors, tables, and all sorts of articles of wood. He also had a blacksmith shop where he forged and hardened many of his own carpenters tools.

Charles Swanson, who later became an immigration officer for the Canadian Government, operated a furniture factory which Olof Knutson tells me was called Fateralla. It was located on the opposite bank of the river from the late Eric Swanson's home. Most of the furniture made there contained some brown ash in its design.

Olof has an interesting desk that was made in this factory. It contains a great many pigeon holes as well as drawers. He also has some tables made at the same place. Apparently Peter Swanson operated the plant at one time.

The saw mill for the plant stood directly in front of the late Eric Swanson's home.

Eventually this factory closed down and was idle for some years.

The saw rig and some of the machinery was bought by John Knutson and Sons who in 1924 built a sash and door factory on the property of John Knutson. Here they had a complete woodworking operation. They had a sawmill, shingle mill and among other things made window frames, doors and flooring. The factory is still standing on the same location.

Nathaniel Bergstrand operated a stone shed where he cut granite memorial markers. This was first located at his home in Swedeville. Later he built a shed which was located on the right as you enter the village proper on the paved spur from the Stanstead highway. It has since been remodelled into a dwelling house.

Just opposite the Greenwood cemetery Carl Olof Peterson had a shoemaker shop. It was an interesting place to visit always being pleasantly warm and containing a pungent smell of leather and shoe polish. The shoemaker always had time to talk to little boys who came to get soles on their shoes.

Oscar Brodin was the tailor. He had his shop in a basement room under the town hall and kept much of the town in pants and suits.

Mr. C.O. Peterson operated a general store on the riverside by the bridge. I am not sure whether he built the place, but it was later owned successively by Mr. McAllister, Mr. Church and by Eric Swanson.

Olof Anderson, who was a bachelor and who to distinguish him from the other Andersons was called "Butcher" Anderson, operated a meat shop located at the present home of Mrs. Eric Swanson. His grave marker is made of black Swedish granite and was imported from Sweden.

A Scandinavian whom they called "Blacksmith Johnson" operated a blacksmith shop. I think this was located near the junction of Highland Avenue and Main St., but I am not sure of this and would appreciate knowing its exact site.

CANADA'S FIRST SKIERS

The youngsters in Swedeville were skiing and were engaged in ski jumping when these sports were unheard of in the rest of Canada. I have recollections of our neighbors, young and old, skiing down the hill which lies between Highland Avenue and the now paved road that leads to the Stanstead highway.

This must have begun prior to 1914. The skis were made by David Nilsson and Matthias and John Knutson... and they were all made by hand. The ones made by Mr. Nilsson were long and narrow resembling the currently popular cross country skis. The ones made by the Knutsons were wider and somewhat shorter.

Some of the people had a type of harness similar to snowshoe binding. But most of them simply had a toe strap so that when one fell the skis would shoot down the hill. In my case this meant usually in different directions!

ANNUAL PICNIC

There was an annual Scandinavian picnic held at Mill's Point on Lake Massawippi. They gathered here in large numbers from Waterville, North Hatley, Sherbrooke, Beebe, Beebe Plain, Vt., and Newport, Vt.

On these occasions many of the people would gather at North Hatley and go by boat.

The Knutsons had a double boat house in the Massawippi River. They had built two large motor launches. John Knutson's was called Viking and had a seat that ran the whole length of each side. It could carry as many as 19 passengers and was powered by a Grey marine motor.

Matthias Knutson's boat was similar and was called Funnor.

There were other boats built by the Knutson brothers patterned after the fishing boats in Norway. They were a sort of dory with lapstrake construction and had very graceful lines. They were very seaworthy and could have been used on the ocean. But I remember that they were heavy to row.

As I recall these picnics, most of the time was spent in visiting with people from other communities, swimming, fishing, and boating. The most important feature, however, was the lunch. Great quantities of food and coffee were consumed. Besides the usual sandwiches there were all kinds of cakes and cookies made with generous quantities of butter and eggs. The cakes usually had a thick layer of whipped cream for icing. In addition there was always homemade ice cream. Our modern doctors would be horrified at this diet. But many of these people survived into their eighties and nineties and regarded both doctors and hospitals as a sort of desperate last resort!

TOO MUCH TOO SOON

A phrase which came into use in the early days of the Second World War was "always too little and too late." It could be said of one of the manufacturing projects of the Scandinavians that it was always "too much and too soon!"

It must have been in the twenties that an arrangement was made between Albert Hedenbergh Sr. and Ball's factory where skis and a device called a "kicker" were to be made at Ball's factory.

The skis were made of birch and a considerable amount of white ash was used in the manufacture of the kicker. I think that the kicker originally must have been patterned after a sleigh for dog teams.

It consisted of a seat mounted on long narrow, steel-shod, ski-like runners with a bar attached to the back of the seat.

In operation one person would sit on the seat while the other person stood behind on the runners, holding the bar and pushing with one foot. Steering was accomplished by the proper combination of pulling on the bar and dragging one or the other foot, as in manoeuvring a toboggan.

Few if any of the skis and kickers were sold. I can recall a warehouse room full of these kickers remaining for years at Ball's factory. It was only many years later that I saw my good friend, Einar Helgesen with his rather stout genial wife on the seat of one of these weaving in and out through the traffic at a high speed down the main street in Scottstown, to the great consternation of the inhabitants there!

Peter Swanson, and later Carl Swanson, operated a furniture store and undertaking business in the Swanson block on the corner of Main St. and Pleasant St.

The post office which was also in this building was run by Mr. and Mrs. Herman Swanson.

GENERAL STORE — C.O. Peterson's general store was situated on the riverside by the bridge at Waterville. It

The lut fisk required a fairly long period of preparation. Dry codfish is soaked in water for one day. Then it is soaked in the following solution: 1 teaspoon of lye added to 1 gallon of water. The fish is soaked in this weak lye solution until it has swelled to a thickness of two or three inches or until it is soft enough to be punctured with a finger. Keep in a cold place. When it is soft put it in clear cold water. Change water twice a day for a week.

The fish is now of a jelly-like consistency and is placed in a cheesecloth bag and steamed briefly. It is served with a cream sauce, smothered in lots of pepper.

Inlagt sild is prepared this way:

Soak a salt herring one day. Cut it up in half inch slices. Mix with one onion sliced, 1 small handful of mixed pickling spice. Cover with vinegar. Let stand in cool place several days.

The Kallas Sild (Party herring) is a commercial canned product. It is made up of reddish slices of herring pickled in a wine or dill sauce with spices.

All of these dishes are very tasty. My wife learned to make them and continued to serve them on Christmas Eve throughout my father's lifetime and indeed still does up to the present time.

ANIMALS AND BIRDS

Another old custom that my father and mother observed recalls the birth of the Christ child in a manger. On Christmas eve all the animals in the barns received a few lumps of sugar or some special tid bit. A sheaf of grain was later owned by Mr. McAllister, Mr. Church and finally by Eric Swanson.

So it was possible when I was a youngster in Waterville, to be housed, clad, shod; to get my groceries and meat, and furniture, to ride in boats and on skis made by Scandinavians; and to receive mail from their hands.

When the time came to die, a casket could be bought from them. A Scandinavian would be the undertaker and finally Mr. Nathaniel Bergstrand would cut the stone and do the lettering that would mark the resting place!

VASA ORDEN

Most Scandinavians belonged to a fraternal organization called Vasa Orden. Both men and women were members, and it held regular meetings. I think that some of the meetings were held in the Baptist church. Olof Knutson's father told him that the organization in Waterville had over 200 members. Members came not only from Waterville but some came from Sherbrooke, the Three Villages and other places.

RELIGION

Most of the Scandinavians had been Lutherans while in Sweden. However, during that period many were not entirely happy with the rather authoritarian attitude of many Lutheran pastors.

When they came to Waterville some attended the Anglican Church for a time and this church's use of the Book of Common Prayer along with its observance of the Christian year reminded them of the Lutheran worship. But perhaps due to some local circumstances only a few became members of the Church of England.

Others joined the Baptist and Congregational churches, while a few families joined the Seventh Day Adventist Church.

CHRISTMAS

Christmas Eve was the highlight of the year in Scandinavian homes. Christmas day was not considered of much significance, although I suppose that most families, like our own, eventually ended up observing both the Scandinavian and Canadian versions. So in effect we had two Christmases.

It was always interesting to me that my father who made few Christian pretensions became quite devout on Christmas Eve.

We would have our Christmas Eve supper and when supper was finished he would read in Swedish the prescribed Psalms and lessons for Christmas eve and then from the Lutheran Prayer book all the prayers set for that day.

The Scandinavian Christmas Eve supper, originally had religious significance; but by this time it was of mainly gastronomic interest.

In the late afternoon the family would gather around the kitchen stove to "Doppa I grytan", which meant to dip in the kettle. Here rye bread would be dunked in the kettle of hot broth. I have often wondered whether this was not suggested by the breaking of bread in the Upper Room.

In any case the preparation of this dish had begun a couple of months before when a fresh ham was first laid down in brine. On the morning of Christmas eve the ham had been freshened in cold water for half a day.

In the afternoon it was boiled with a handful of mixed pickling spice until well cooked. In the afternoon the rye bread was dipped in this aromatic brew and it was altogether delicious.

After the dipping in the kettle we would join hands with any guests who happened to be present and dance around the lighted Christmas tree singing a little jingle:

Nu er det Jul igen
Nu er det Jul igen
Och Julen rekar en till Posken.
(Now it is Christmas again
Now it is Christmas again
And Christmas lasts even till Easter).

At supper time we would sit down at a candlelit table on which was laid a variety of goodies amid the fragrance of the evergreen decorations and the scent of the Christmas tree.

On the table there would be lut fisk, inlagt sild and Kallas Sild.

In the meantime the ham from the kettle would have been sliced up and put on the table.

Then there was boiled rice which was smothered with cinnamon and served with milk. Also there would be several kinds of breads and cheeses; and, of course, coffee.

was tied to the top of a post in the yard to give the winter birds a special treat.

In the evening the Christmas tree would be lit. This was before we had electric lights. The tree was covered with decorations, many of which consisted of colored paper.

Small candle holders containing a sharp spike on the bottom were pinned to the branches of the tree. It was quite a trick to keep these candles upright, all of which were lit. As I think of it now it was a really hair-raising fire hazard; but at that time I was only conscious of the peacefulness of the scene.

Another custom which made an indelible impression was the one of putting four lighted candles, two in the upper part and two in the lower section of each window. All the Scandinavians did this on Christmas eve. It was the days before electric lights had come to Swedeville and any early memory is that of pressing my nose against the frost rimed window, watching the lights flickering across the snow from all the windows of the neighbouring homes.

THE FAMILIES

Relying on my own faulty memory, but with the assistance of many friends, I am listing below the names of the people in the Scandinavian community. They are set down with husband and wife first - followed by the names in chronological order of their children. Most of these people were living in Waterville between the years 1900-1927.

Children born before 1900 and remaining in Waterville are listed among the original households. In general the names of people are listed according to the road or area where they lived.

In many cases the information is incomplete and any additions or corrections will be welcomed and will be included in a later revision. Please contact: Rev. Carl Gustafson, Box 115, Lennoxville, Que. (Phone 565-0728).

Rosemary Clooney on the road back

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Nostalgia time. Remember Rosemary Clooney? In the late '40s and through the '50s, there wasn't a girl singer around who could touch her. She could sing ballads and up-tempo tunes and the Clooney voice was like spun gold.

I'm pleased to report that she's back. And in fine fettle and fine voice, too.

"I'm going back to work, seriously," Rosie says.

It's been a hard time for her. She had a breakdown in '68, she says, and things were rough.

"I tried to sing again after that," she says, "but I just wasn't very good. But now I think I'm singing as well as I ever have and, more important, I'm enjoying it again."

She's about to leave for London, where she and Bing Crosby will share the Palladium stage. She says she likes to work in the summer, because that's when her five children are with their father, Jose Ferrer. She and Ferrer have long been divorced.

"I'm still singing the old songs," Rosie says. "I start out with 'Come On-a My House,' to get that out of the way, otherwise they'd be calling for it all through my act. But I like some of the new songs, too. I love Paul Simon's songs, and I do some of them."

She isn't red-hot about her career now. She's had success — as much as anybody — so she isn't hungry for that. Now she's working for the fun of it.

"I'm doing some talk shows, some guest shots, some personal appearances," she says. "I don't want to work too much, just in the summer."

Whenever she wants to work, I want to listen.

Barbara Cartland is the world's best-selling author of romantic novels — but not one of her books has been made into a movie.

"I'm too expensive," says the English author. "All of my stories have lavish settings — gold chairs and tables and many characters. I'm just too late for movies. Twenty years ago, they would have loved me."

It really doesn't matter. Her books sell so well and so often she doesn't need the movies. There are now 194 Barbara Cartland novels out, and they keep spewing forth, like from some gigantic writing volcano.

She turns them out, at the rate of one in seven days. That's the writing, she says the research takes longer, because each one is rooted in historical fact. She says she'll read 30 books about a period, then sit down to write.

"Sit down" is not exactly accurate. Her method of writing is unique.

"I recline on a couch," she says, "cuddling my white Pekingese, and I tell my story to my secretary, who sits behind me, where the sight of her won't disturb me."

She attributes her phenomenal sales to the increase in pornography in books and on film. A side effect of that increase, she says, is that her sales are increasing.

"My books are all pure and chaste," she says. "My characters all believe in purity and chastity and all those lovely things."

Low-Flying Missiles

The Navy and Air Force are pushing ahead to develop a new, low-flying missile that will foil enemy defenses, according to a Conference Board analysis of the new defense budget. The Navy is budgeting $183 million for this missile in fiscal 1977, up from $94 million last year. And the Air Force is requesting $79 million for this weapon.

Marshall Plan

The famed post-World War II Marshall Plan originated in a June 5, 1947 proposal by Secretary of State George C. Marshall to extend U.S. financial aid to all European countries "willing to assist in the task of recovery." During the next 3.5 years, Congress authorized the spending of some $12 billion on Marshall Plan aid, which was credited with restoring economic

Beef stabilization plan information meeting set

SHERBROOKE (BS) — An information meeting for English-speaking beef farmers is planned for tomorrow, Sept. 2 at 8:30 p.m. to discuss the provincial government beef stabilization plan.

The meeting will be held at Motel Intercity (formerly Alouette Motel) on Bourque Blvd. and will be conducted by Jean-Louis Lauziere, Union des Producteurs Agricoles secretary in charge of English-speaking farmers.

The deadline for enrolling in the voluntary plan has been extended by the government to Sept. 3. So far 15,000 cows have been entered in the program, Mr. Lauziere reports.

The five year plan is designed to carry farmers through drops in beef prices during poor years.

Farmer assistance plans outlined

(Ed. Note: The following articles are reprinted from the Quebec Agricultural English News Letter, describing various provincial government assistance plans. The newsletter is available from the Quebec Department of Agriculture, Information Service, 200 A, Chemin Sainte-Foy, Quebec, free of charge).

SUBDRAINAGE

The Department of Agriculture offers help to farmers wishing to install a subdrainage system.

This assistance consists of technical aid in planning drainage systems and financial aid for installing such systems calling for at least three thousand (3,000) linear feet of subdrainage per farm.

To promote optimum use of farm resources, the Quebec Department of Agriculture offers technical aid and financial assistance to farmers installing an artificial lake to rear fish as a complement to farming activities.

FEEDLOTS

1. Apply, using prescribed application forms for feed lot assistance.

2. Plan the installation of a feedlot for at least 300 head.

3. Use fodder corn as basic feed.

4. Provide the regional supervisor of the programme with accounting data required to determine the profitability of the enterprise.

5. Agree that the enterprise contribute to the extension services and information contemplated by the regional office.

6. Have the site approved by the General Direction of the Environment.

Seasonal Reminders

A - Now is the time (before the end of August) to fertilize leguminous fields (alfalfa, clover) and ladino clover pastures: 250 lb of 0-15-30-acre or an equivalent formula.

B - By this time, soil samples should have been taken in order to plan your crops and necessary purchases.

C - Hay and grass silage samples should be taken now for a feeding programme.

D - Cows presently grazing on the aftermath of leguminous fields should also receive dry hay.

Further information can be obtained at your local office of the Quebec Department of Agriculture where your agronomist will be on hand to help you.

SHEEP

Producers of purebred sheep who participate in performance testing of flocks on the farm or at the testing station may take advantage of an assistance programme offered by the Department of Agriculture to improve the health of sheep.

Those considered eligible for the 1976 programme will receive assistance in the form of visits from a veterinarian (average of three per year) and a $45 slaughter grant for each crossbred animal and $75 per purebred animal if it has a contagious or hereditary disease which cannot be cured, in the opinion of the Director of Veterinary Services. A farmer who has all his sheep eliminated must present a slaughtering certificate obtained from the provincially or federally supervised establishment where the slaughtering was carried out. Registration certificates for the purebred sheep must also be attached to the application form.

This programme began on April 1 for the producers whose names appear on the list obtained from the Livestock Productions Service. Others may join on March 1 of next year.

In order to participate in this assistance programme, the producer must apply to the Director of Veterinary Services and comply with the following conditions: have a necessary minimum of buildings and equipment, keep a record of all births, deaths and sales of sheep born in his establishment, allow a veterinarian to make the required inspections and follow his instructions.

SWINE

To help farmers improve the health of their pigs, the Veterinary Services of the Quebec Department of Agriculture have an assistance programme for those meeting the requirements of the Livestock Division's breeding programme.

The programme offers several benefits. From the technical standpoint, there are monthly health inspections by veterinarians employed by the Department.

Pig raisers who need to rid their herds of disease, receive a slaughter grant of $25 per swine unit

OTTAWA — Canadian consumers appear to be changing their potato-eating habits.

An Agriculture Canada economist says consumers now are favoring processed potatoes and the switch away from fresh potato consumption could affect Canadian producers, especially in the Maritimes.

"A diminishing, or even static, fresh potato market could result in low prices to producers if new crop supplies are above requirements," says Bob Anderson of the Economics Branch here.

"If this were to happen to the 1976 crop as it did with the 1974 crop, many producers would lose money. Those producers with varieties suitable only for the fresh market would have little or no marketing alternative, especially if processing supplies were adequate," Dr. Anderson says.

He suggests that Maritime growers consider contracting some of their acreage for processing next year and, where possible, grow varieties for the fresh market that are also suitable for the processing industry.

"Growers should reconsider the two markets and their dependence on each," he says.

declarer. He will say to himself that trumps have been known to break 5-0 and that when he can take out insurance against such a break he should do so. Particularly since he really doesn't have to pay a premium for that insurance.

He has to lose a diamond some time. Why not right away. So he throws a diamond on the third club and can't be beaten at his four-spade contract.

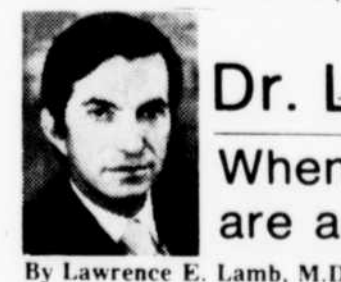

Ask the Jacobys

We receive so many questions about counting honors that we are going to repeat the answer today.

If a player in a rubber bridge game holds four of the five trump honors his side receives an honor bonus of 100 points. If he holds all five trump honors or all four aces in notrump his side receives a 150-point bonus.

The honor bonus is awarded irrespective of whether the holder is declarer dummy or a defender.

Dr. Lamb

When flu shots are advised

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My 10-year-old sister recovered from the 1918 flu. My other sister and I were exposed to it but did not get it. I am 69 years old. Would I be immune to the flu or should I accept the vaccine proposed by President Ford?

DEAR READER — Since it is not definite that you had the flu, and it has been a long time ago, I think you should take the flu shots unless you have a medical condition that your doctor thinks should prohibit it.

In general, older people or those with heart, lung or other serious illnesses should take flu shots whenever any new flu epidemic is in the offing. I think all the debate over the advisability of the crash program for this year's epidemic has obscured the point that thousands of people died with the serious epidemic just last year.

Each time we have a flu epidemic regardless of the type of flu we still lose a large number of people. It is a dangerous disease even with our modern treatment methods. That being the case, I am in favor of all those with any decrease in resistance at all, and perhaps all persons, having the protection they need. A flu shot could save your life. So my advice to everyone who has no medical problem that would rule against it, is to get your flu shots. I'm selfish and want to keep all my readers as long as possible.

To give you more information on these respiratory illnesses I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-1, The Cold, Flu group. Others who want this information can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

There are some things your dressmaker can't do for you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
You know what needs to be done today, but you'll expend only a portion of your talents in doing it. Consequently, your reward will be small.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Don't be upset with subordinates today because they're not producing as you feel they should. Possibly it will be because of your example.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Gambling on the unknown today will prove to be a costly folly. It's best to believe only what you can grasp in mind or hand.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Your spirit is willing today but the flesh is woefully weak. It's unlikely you'll exhibit the resolve to overcome a tough problem.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
You have a tendency today to start projects you're not apt to finish. A cluttered-up workroom will probably result.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Don't expect too much from people you know only as passing acquaintances today. There's no substitute for tested friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
There is apt to be friction in your household today, but don't seek to place the blame on others. It could be your ear that's troubling the waters.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Crystal gazing for trouble that might happen is the way of fortune tellers. Keep your cool. Attack problems when they occur.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Don't seek scapegoats today for foul-ups that can be directly attributed to you. Everyone will know who the real culprit is.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
The least effective weapon you could use today is intimidation of underlings. Just remember: Every dog has his day.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
If you're disturbed about something today, don't stew about it silently. The only way to get relief is to bring the matter into the open.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
Try not to badger pals over picayune issues today. It's far better to strengthen bonds of friendship than to weaken them.

Your Birthday
Sept. 2, 1976

This year should be an exciting one for you. You'll be both adventurous and enterprising. Don't let your boldness exceed your good sense, however.

Former Expo restaurateur watches dream come true

MONTREAL (CP) — A young New Delhi man who arrived at Expo 67 as manager of the Indian Pavilion's Maharani Restaurant has been watching his dreams materialize.

Now 33, Vinod Madan is one of Montreal's more successful restaurateurs and spends his 18-hour days rushing between the two restaurants he and his partners have established.

"I spent six long years working the class places in and around New Delhi," he recalled, "first as a busboy, then as a waiter and finally as part of the management."

His duties during the summer of 1967—which included many stints as cook and busboy—were less exciting than expected. "But I liked Canada nonetheless and I wanted to return."

At summer's end he flew back to India, banked his savings and added to them while managing the New Delhi restaurant where he had originally worked.

In the course of the year he had amassed enough to buy his way into a partnership at the Maharani and returned to Canada for the opening of Expo's successor, Man and His World.

FELT TRAPPED

In the summer of 1969, finding himself low on funds, he returned to the well-remembered, gruelling position as manager of the Maharani.

The following winter he managed two of Montreal's Indian restaurants.

"I began to feel trapped," he said. "I repeated an almost identical year in 1971—back at Man and His World for the fourth time—and I wanted out of this never-ending struggle."

In partnership with two Montreal businessmen he opened the Pique Assiette in the west end of downtown Montreal.

The restaurant, with wall-length windows and imitation Tiffany lamps serves a variety of Indian specialties, including tandoori chicken, lamb and beef curries and a spicy lentil soup. Frequent patronage by local Indians attests to the authenticity of the cuisine. The back room is often crowded with a boisterous blend of Marxists, anarchists and literary connoisseurs.

DREW CAPACITY CROWDS

But that was not enough. Inspired by the Spaghetti Factories in Toronto, Vancouver and San Francisco, Madan and two partners opened the Spaghetti Warehouse in the heart of Old Montreal early in 1974.

The low prices, an all-you-can-eat salad bar and the dozen pasta specials drew capacity crowds.

"I thrive on my work," says Madan, "so I expanded the Old Montreal location in 1975 by opening a second Pique Assiette."

The locale—with a combined seating capacity of 850—is decorated with grandfather clocks, discarded church pews, an antique bar, innumerable plants, a small open-air dining area, spiral staircases and even a vintage Ford.

What will Madan be doing 10 years from now? "I'm not sure," he hesitates, "maybe hotels."

Private school fees spiralling

LONDON (CP) — Because of the rising cost of keeping their children at top private schools, many British parents are selling their homes and moving into rented accommodation.

"Such cases are becoming increasingly common," said a spokesman for Eton College, where fees have risen to £1,800 ($3,040) from £860 in the last five years.

"The number of applications for bursaries has increased sharply in the last two years, particularly in respect of boys already at the school. Many parents make great sacrifices to pay school fees and a disturbing factor is the diminishing capital in many families."

Fees continue to spiral in spite of stringent economies. Tuition fees at Harrow this fall are up £150 to £1,800; at Charterhouse, £300 to £1,860 and at King's School, Canterbury, £300 to £1,782. Boarding fees, about £1,600 at the major schools, also increased about 10 per cent.

Not all parents pay the full fees. Some 20,000 pupils, seven per cent of the total, get scholarships or special grants and fees for almost five per cent of the boarders are paid by local education authorities. Students with parents serving in the armed forces also receive substantial grants.

Headmasters of leading schools met in conference recently to discuss the difficulties experienced by parents in keeping their youngsters at high-grade schools.

Said A.J.R. Doulton, a former head of Highgate School: "Good husbandry is needed to show parents that the schools themselves are determined to economize. The basic snag is that more than two-thirds of our expenses are academic and domestic costs."

A few leading schools have introduced such economies as do-it-yourself cafeterias for students, encouraging students to make their own beds and clean their own shoes and hiring out school premises during the holidays.

Opera singer reminisces

TORONTO (CP) —

"Manon by Massenet is my favorite part," says Colette Boky. "This is a complete character, full of dramatic and vocal possibilities. La Traviata is another favorite of mine. I suppose you can say I like romantic parts."

Interviewed recently when she performed with the Toronto Symphony, Miss Boky reminisced about her early life and a career which has taken her all over Europe, the United States and Canada.

Colette Boky, called a "true creature of the theatre" by the noted tenor Raoul Jobin when he heard her for the first time at the conservatory, has a curriculum vitae too lengthy to list in full.

At the Met in New York, where she was first engaged in 1967, and in other opera houses, Miss Boky has sung 20 different roles, in French, Italian and German.

DEBUT UNEXPECTED

"It's funny how things happen in life," she said. "I was with my parents at Lake l'Achigan where we spent summers at a cottage we owned. There were always regattas on the lake, followed by amateur musical contests. One summer, when I was 15, I was asked to play Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata on the piano."

"But the same day I broke a finger. My father suggested that I sing instead. So I sang, by ear and without accompaniment. The Daughters of Cadiz and I won the prize. Jean Deslauriers, the orchestra leader, happened to be there and told my father I should take music lessons."

This led to the Vincent d'Indy school of music in Montreal and then the Conservatory of Quebec.

"I was gifted but I was also a worker and determined. After graduating from the conservatory with the first-prize standing after three years instead of the normal five, I separated from my husband."

"Then it became a question of how to make a living. I had to have a career to keep myself and my young daughter out of the poorhouse."

WENT TO PARIS
Miss Boky then won a Prix d'Europe which brought her a two-year $5,000 scholarship in Paris.

Finally, after several European engagements, she was hired by the Met. She made her New York debut as the Queen of the Night in Mozart's Magic Flute, a production that was directed by the painter, Marc Chagall.

"If you ask me with whom I most prefer to work, I would say the English—that is, the English English," said Miss Boky.

"The English are very kind and at the same time very organized."

As for audiences, she has no real favorites. It depends on the particular night. A Quebecois audience is generally enthusiastic, she said.

"It's been a long time—too long a time—since my last appearance in Toronto, in 1967, when I played in the Canadian Opera productions of The Barber of Seville and The Tales of Hoffman."

"This was just at the time of my debut at the Met and I had accepted quite a few rather tiring roles then. I got laryngitis and I missed three days of rehearsals."

"That's why I'm glad to return in other circumstances."

How about skinned snake or stewed shrew for dinner?

VICTORIA (CP) — Raw seaweed or dried skunk cabbage might not go down as well as bacon and eggs, but anyone lost in the wilds of British Columbia can't be choosy.

The menu offered by the forests and beaches of B.C., however, isn't designed to tantalize only the taste buds of vegetarians. For those who normally prefer a bit of meat with their vegetables, there's always skinned snake or stewed shrew.

Wilderness Survival, a 140-page paperback published by the provincial department of recreation and travel industry, is loaded with recipes for people lost with only Mother Nature and common sense to keep them alive.

Unlike most printed information which offers advice to outdoorsmen by suggesting how to overcome hunger and thirst, Wilderness Survival lists boredom and loneliness as "two of the toughest enemies."

"When nothing happens, when something is expected and doesn't come off, when you must stay still, quiet and alone, these feelings creep up on you," the book says.

"Survival may depend more upon personality than upon danger, weather, terrain or nature of the emergency," it says while listing these abilities important to survival:

— "You can make up your mind."

— "You can improvise."

— "You can live with yourself."

— "You can take it when the going gets tough."

— "You can remain cool and calm."

— "You hope for the best but prepare for the worst."

— "You know where your special fears and worries come from."

Paul Presidente, the department's outdoor recreation safety and survival co-ordinator, said the book is designed to educate the rapidly growing number of B.C. outdoors buffs in the hopes of saving the government money on rescue operations.

During the last three years, wilderness areas of B.C. have been penetrated by campers, boaters, and hikers travelling in families, as individuals, or with newly-formed outdoors clubs.

The province's virgin forests, rugged coast and mountain lakes are becoming weekend villages, populated by city workers willing to pay for the equipment which will get them into the woods.

EQUIPMENT VARIES

Some buy inflatable speedboats, others purchase pickup trucks and campers, some charter seaplanes, and a great many are satisfied with only a light backpack and good-fitting boots.

Wilderness Survival, published in late June, had a press run of 50,000 copies, Mr. Presidente said. Almost all are gone and the department has decided to print another 50,000 to give away.

He said many inexperienced campers don't take the time to find out what they need for the particular area they wish to explore or how to use their equipment.

Besides listing the basic needs of every camper, the book explains the most efficient methods of using the equipment and how to improvise when necessary items aren't available.

For example, it shows how to use a wristwatch as a compass, the proper way to send distress signals, how to deal with poisons or hypothermia, how to snare a rabbit or squirrel or where to find water.

Mr. Presidente said the government is becoming increasingly concerned over the number of accidents resulting from ignorance of the wilderness and people must realize the danger of venturing unprepared into remote areas.

BRITISH EMPIRE is indeed shrinking. An amusement park called "The Best of Britain in Miniature" near Christchurch, England, features scaled-down replicas of British landmarks recognized throughout the world. This Lilliputian version of Big Ben not only chimes but keeps the correct time.

All about rocks 'Finds' keep rockhounds digging

By Sue Gardner

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Leading a group of 106 rockhounds on a recent field trip to Roxbury, Conn., to gather almandine garnets, Michael Walter told members and friends of the Lapidary and Gem Society of New York to listen for his whistle.

"When you hear this sound, stop whatever you are doing," he admonished. "You might just be a culprit throwing rocks and gravel down on a digger below. If you stop and wait when I blow the whistle, I can stop you before any real harm is done."

Once at the Connecticut site, the group fanned out over a hilly area where the garnets once supplied raw material to commercial producers of abrasives. They are 12-sided dark minerals which can be fashioned into a graduated necklace. However, most on the trip were just starting or adding to collections which they label and place in their homes.

This group carried food and beverages, heavy geological sledges, chisels, picks and hammers needed to break up the rocks to release the garnets. The novices chose softer areas where garnets alone, or in matrix, could be turned up with garden tools near the surfaces of the meadows. Those who chipped away rock on the site wore safety glasses and those deep in the rocky ravines were advised to wear hard hats, or safety helmets.

Everyone came back with some specimens. Even more important, no injuries occurred. Walter, who has gone on field trips for many years, had checked the area previously.

Son of Martin Walter, author of lapidary works and a teacher of stone cutting, Michael is aware of the problems of taking groups to digging sites.

Rockhounds have grown in numbers in the past decade and it is estimated that some 10 million pay admission to gem and mineral shows across the country each year. Thousands attend shows, for example, at the Hall of Gems in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., and at the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

Just what prompts a person to collect rocks is a question rockhounds find difficult answering. Most say the infinite variety of minerals caught their fancy as children. You find some starting, alone or in groups, from the age of six. Others become fascinated with crystallography and collect stones with interesting crystal formations such as the "Herkimer diamonds" which are quartz crystals found in Herkimer, N.Y. The lapidary workers, who cut stones for a hobby, often find cutting material but not necessarily in the precious gem category.

They like the variety of agates in the West, in Oregon and coastal areas. In the Southwest, "crazy lace" agates provide a wide range of unusual patterns. New Jersey is rich in quartz, such as rose or amethyst, and one area in Watchung has carnelians that come in yellow or deep red tones.

In North Carolina there are several areas where the lucky can find sapphires, rubies and emeralds. You can pay a moderate price for a bucket of gravel and pan for the stones, or, for an admission fee, you can go into a mine to search for the gem material. This country is rich in gem ore but not all areas are open to the collector. There's jade in Alaska, California and Wyoming, turquoise in New Mexico, and opal in Nevada and Wyoming.

There's a special group of "micro" collectors who search for minerals whose crystals and other properties they can study under a microscope. Another type of material, the fluorescent minerals, will turn from drab to brilliant tones under ultraviolet light.

For anyone who wants to investigate the rockhound trail, start with a group field trip sponsored by a local museum or mineral club. The local library should have additional information about minerals in its area. For more advanced hobbyists, there are trips in many regions and museums usually have such information posted for visitors. Where rock and gem shows run several days, the program often includes field trips led by an experienced person.

It is not advisable for an inexperienced person to venture out to an unknown spot to dig for minerals. Trespassing is the least problem you will encounter. Abandoned mines and quarries often have rotting planks that give under body weight and rockslides can cause serious injuries or death. Rockhounding is a fine outdoor activity if done properly.

A noted mineralogist tells of going to a site in Pennsylvania to collect epidote, a greenish mineral which can be cut and polished, and chabazite, a mineral with interesting crystals.

"I found a family of four crouched below a ledge chipping away," he recalled. "I suggested they collect at a safer spot where they would not weaken a ledge. I felt they would go back under that ledge as soon as I left, but fortunately, they never could do that. As I started my car, the ledge came thudding down with no one under it."

Chit-Chat Club

BEEBE — The August meeting of the Chit-Chat Club was held with Miss Mary Lees as hostess. Three members were unable to attend.

A short business meeting was conducted, followed by all signing a card to be sent to a member, Mrs. Madge Miller, who has recently returned from hospital. A gift was also included with the card.

Several games were played, with the marathon winners being Mrs. Mable Crawford, twice; Mrs. Erma Lepitre and Mrs. Tressa Bullock. The door prize went to Mrs. Antoinette Brault. Mrs. Elsie Bronson assisted Miss Lees at the refreshment hour. All members visited Mrs. Pocock who is confined to her room. The September 29th gathering will be held at the home of Mrs. T. Bullock.
