Apple Tree in Bloom at Wyman

An apple tree on the farm of Mr. George Meldrum, at Wyman, appears unsatisfied with its crop for this season.

Mr. Meldrum informs The Equity that this tree, harvest variety, already bears a pretty fair crop of mature apples and some branches have recently broken out in fresh bloom.

This freak of nature is not so rare after harvest time, but just now it seems quite an exception. We hope that the growing season will be long enough to develop the fresh blooms into fruit, even though George did not bring in a sample of the apples now ready to eat.

SERIAL STORY

Murder on the Boardwalk

BY ELINORE COWAN STONE

Last week: Jaspar, hiding at Chandra's home, tries to explain how Mrs. Talbert had ordered him to deliver the bonds to Christine. Inspector. Parsons, Wilmet, and Bill arrive, trailing Christine through Lucille. Suspicion turns on Chandra. Mrs. Talbert was last seen coming out of his studio.

CHAPTER XV

"I take exception to that 'last seen,' Inspector," Chandra said coolly. "However, it is entirely true that Mrs. Talbert was with me that night for an hour or more."

"And afterwards," Inspector Parsons continued, "so far as I can learn, she was not seen until her dead body was found."

"But early this morning," the clairvoyant pointed out, "her car was also found—parked just across the Boardwalk from the 77th street dock. . . . Are you suggesting that after I had warned Miss Thorenson where to look for the bonds I, myself, had stolen, I stabbed her cousin—with a dagger that anyone in Surf City could identify as mine—and was also imbecile enough to leave her car parked just around the corner from my own studio?"

"What I'm suggesting is that you know a lot more about this business, than you found it convenient to tell me this morning."

"Now we're getting somewhere, Inspector. Because I know a lot more about this business than I did this morning."

Chandra turned to Jaspar, who stood, glancing with a white, trapped look from one to the other.

"This, my friend," he said, "is now a police affair in spite of anything you can do. You must disregard Mrs. Talbert's wishes."

"Wishes—what wishes?" Inspector Parsons snapped.

"When Mrs. Talbert began to suspect that she was in danger, she instructed Mr. Jaspar that no matter what happened he must not call the police."

"He told you that?"

"Mrs. Talbert told me that—the last time she came to consult me."

"So she came to you for advice—the night before her death—and the best you could do was to let her get herself murdered without any warning—and you supposed to be the slickest medium in the country!"

Chandra's hands moved in a gesture of defeat which, even to Christine's unsympathetic eyes, seemed starkly sincere.

"Mrs. Talbert," he said, "was a woman of several fixed ideas. One, which grew in her as she got older and more eccentric, was the belief that, single-handed, she could outwit the world and the devil."

"That's a weakness that seems to run in the family." The inspector glanced toward Christine.

"Perhaps"—Chandra's smile was enigmatic—"you are more right than you guess, Inspector. . . . Another of her peculiarities was that she thought police are all a set of clumsy bunglers. . . . I am setting forth Mrs. Talbert's viewpoint, of course, not my own. Otherwise, I shouldn't be advising Mr. Jaspar to tell you what he's told me."

"Well," the inspector's tone was uncompromising. "I'm listening. He'd better make it good."

He glanced around at the others.

"You might as well sit down, since you're all in this from the ankles up."

So they did sit down—Mr. Wilmet, obviously seething with curiosity and afraid that the inspector might change his mind, stumbling over a stool in his effort to find a chair without making himself conspicuous. And Jaspar began his story all over again.

When he came to the part about leaving the bonds in Christine's room, the inspector turned toward Christine and then toward Jaspar with frowning attention, and Chris-time recalled uncomfortably his words of that morning: "Perhaps it was even someone who counted on your keeping them safely for him."

A little later he interrupted, "If Mrs. Talbert had let the police go ahead when that young man was kidnaped, she might have got something for her money besides a headache and a crop of misleading and conflicting clues. First the boy was supposed to have been carried off and drugged in his own car; later it looked as if he had been decoyed into the swamp and drowned in a quicksand. I can't recall all the stories; but there's one thing certain; someone who knew the family well was back of that. . . . By the way, you were employed by Mrs. Talbert then, too, weren't you, Jaspar?"

"Yes, sir." Jaspar's eyes met the inspector's with the calm of desperation.

"But there's one rumor you may not have heard, Inspector," Chandra said quietly, "that Earl Talbert was not really kidnaped at all; but that he engineered the whole affair himself, and collected the ransom. I happen to know that there have been a number of checks forged on Mrs. Talbert's account that have never been run to their source. I have information that Earl Talbert, under another name, spent several years in a California prison; and I have had a feeling, from time to time, that Mrs. Talbert, herself, was sure that he was still alive."

After a musing silence, the inspector asked, "Just how old was this boy when he disappeared?"

LONDON BED TIME

Another day of robot bombs is done, but there's the long night yet ahead, so a London mother directs her children to the safety of an underground back-yard shelter. The little one makes sure her teddy-bear will be safe, too.

"He was in his first year at college," Jaspar hesitated and then went on, "I have been told that he was about to be expelled. . . . A—a matter of a forged check, sir."

"A young man of that age could have changed—perhaps beyond recognition—in 12 years," the inspector said reflectively. . . . Christine wondered if she only imagined that he glanced toward Bill. . . . "Well, go on, Jaspar."

"Well, sir, Mrs. Talbert had gone out in her car. I was always worried when she went out alone at night, because it was generally known that she often carried valuables on her person, sometimes large sums of money. She's done that ever since so many banks closed some years ago. And only the day before, she had taken those bonds I left with Miss Thorenson from the bank."

"You knew it. Does that make it general information?"

"It was well enough known that the house was entered once, and there had been attempts to hold her up. . . . And she'd had extortion notes."

"Can you put your hands on any of those notes?"

"No, sir. Mrs. Talbert always burned them."

Inspector Parsons' smothered ejaculation was eloquent.

"Did Mrs. Talbert have anything of value with her when she disappeared?" he asked.

"Mrs. Talbert," Jaspar answered after a brief hesitation, "carried in her briefcase exact facsimiles of those bonds. She had had them made by a person who was clever at that sort of work in anticipation of just some such thing as happened. It was Mrs. Talbert's idea of a joke, sir," Jaspar explained. "You see, she'd spent a lot of money trying to get Mr. Earl back. She said that if she was abducted, too, the joke was going to be on the people who collected the ransom."

Somewhere in the room someone drew a sharp, hissing breath.

The inspector did not glance up; he made no comment. Yet when he spoke, Christine knew that he felt as sure as she did that something where in that group sat Cousin Emma's murderer.

"Go on, Jaspar," he prompted.

"Well, sir, about 9 o'clock the doorbell rang. When I answered, it was a special delivery messenger. I carried the letter to the light and saw that it was addressed to me—in Mrs. Talbert's handwriting."

"So you are prepared to identify Mrs. Talbert's writing?"

"Oh, yes indeed, sir."

Inspector Parsons took an envelope from his pocket and passed it to Jaspar.

"This is addressed to Miss Thorenson, you notice, apparently by her cousin. We found it in Mrs. Talbert's purse."

As Churchill Spoke Four Years Ago

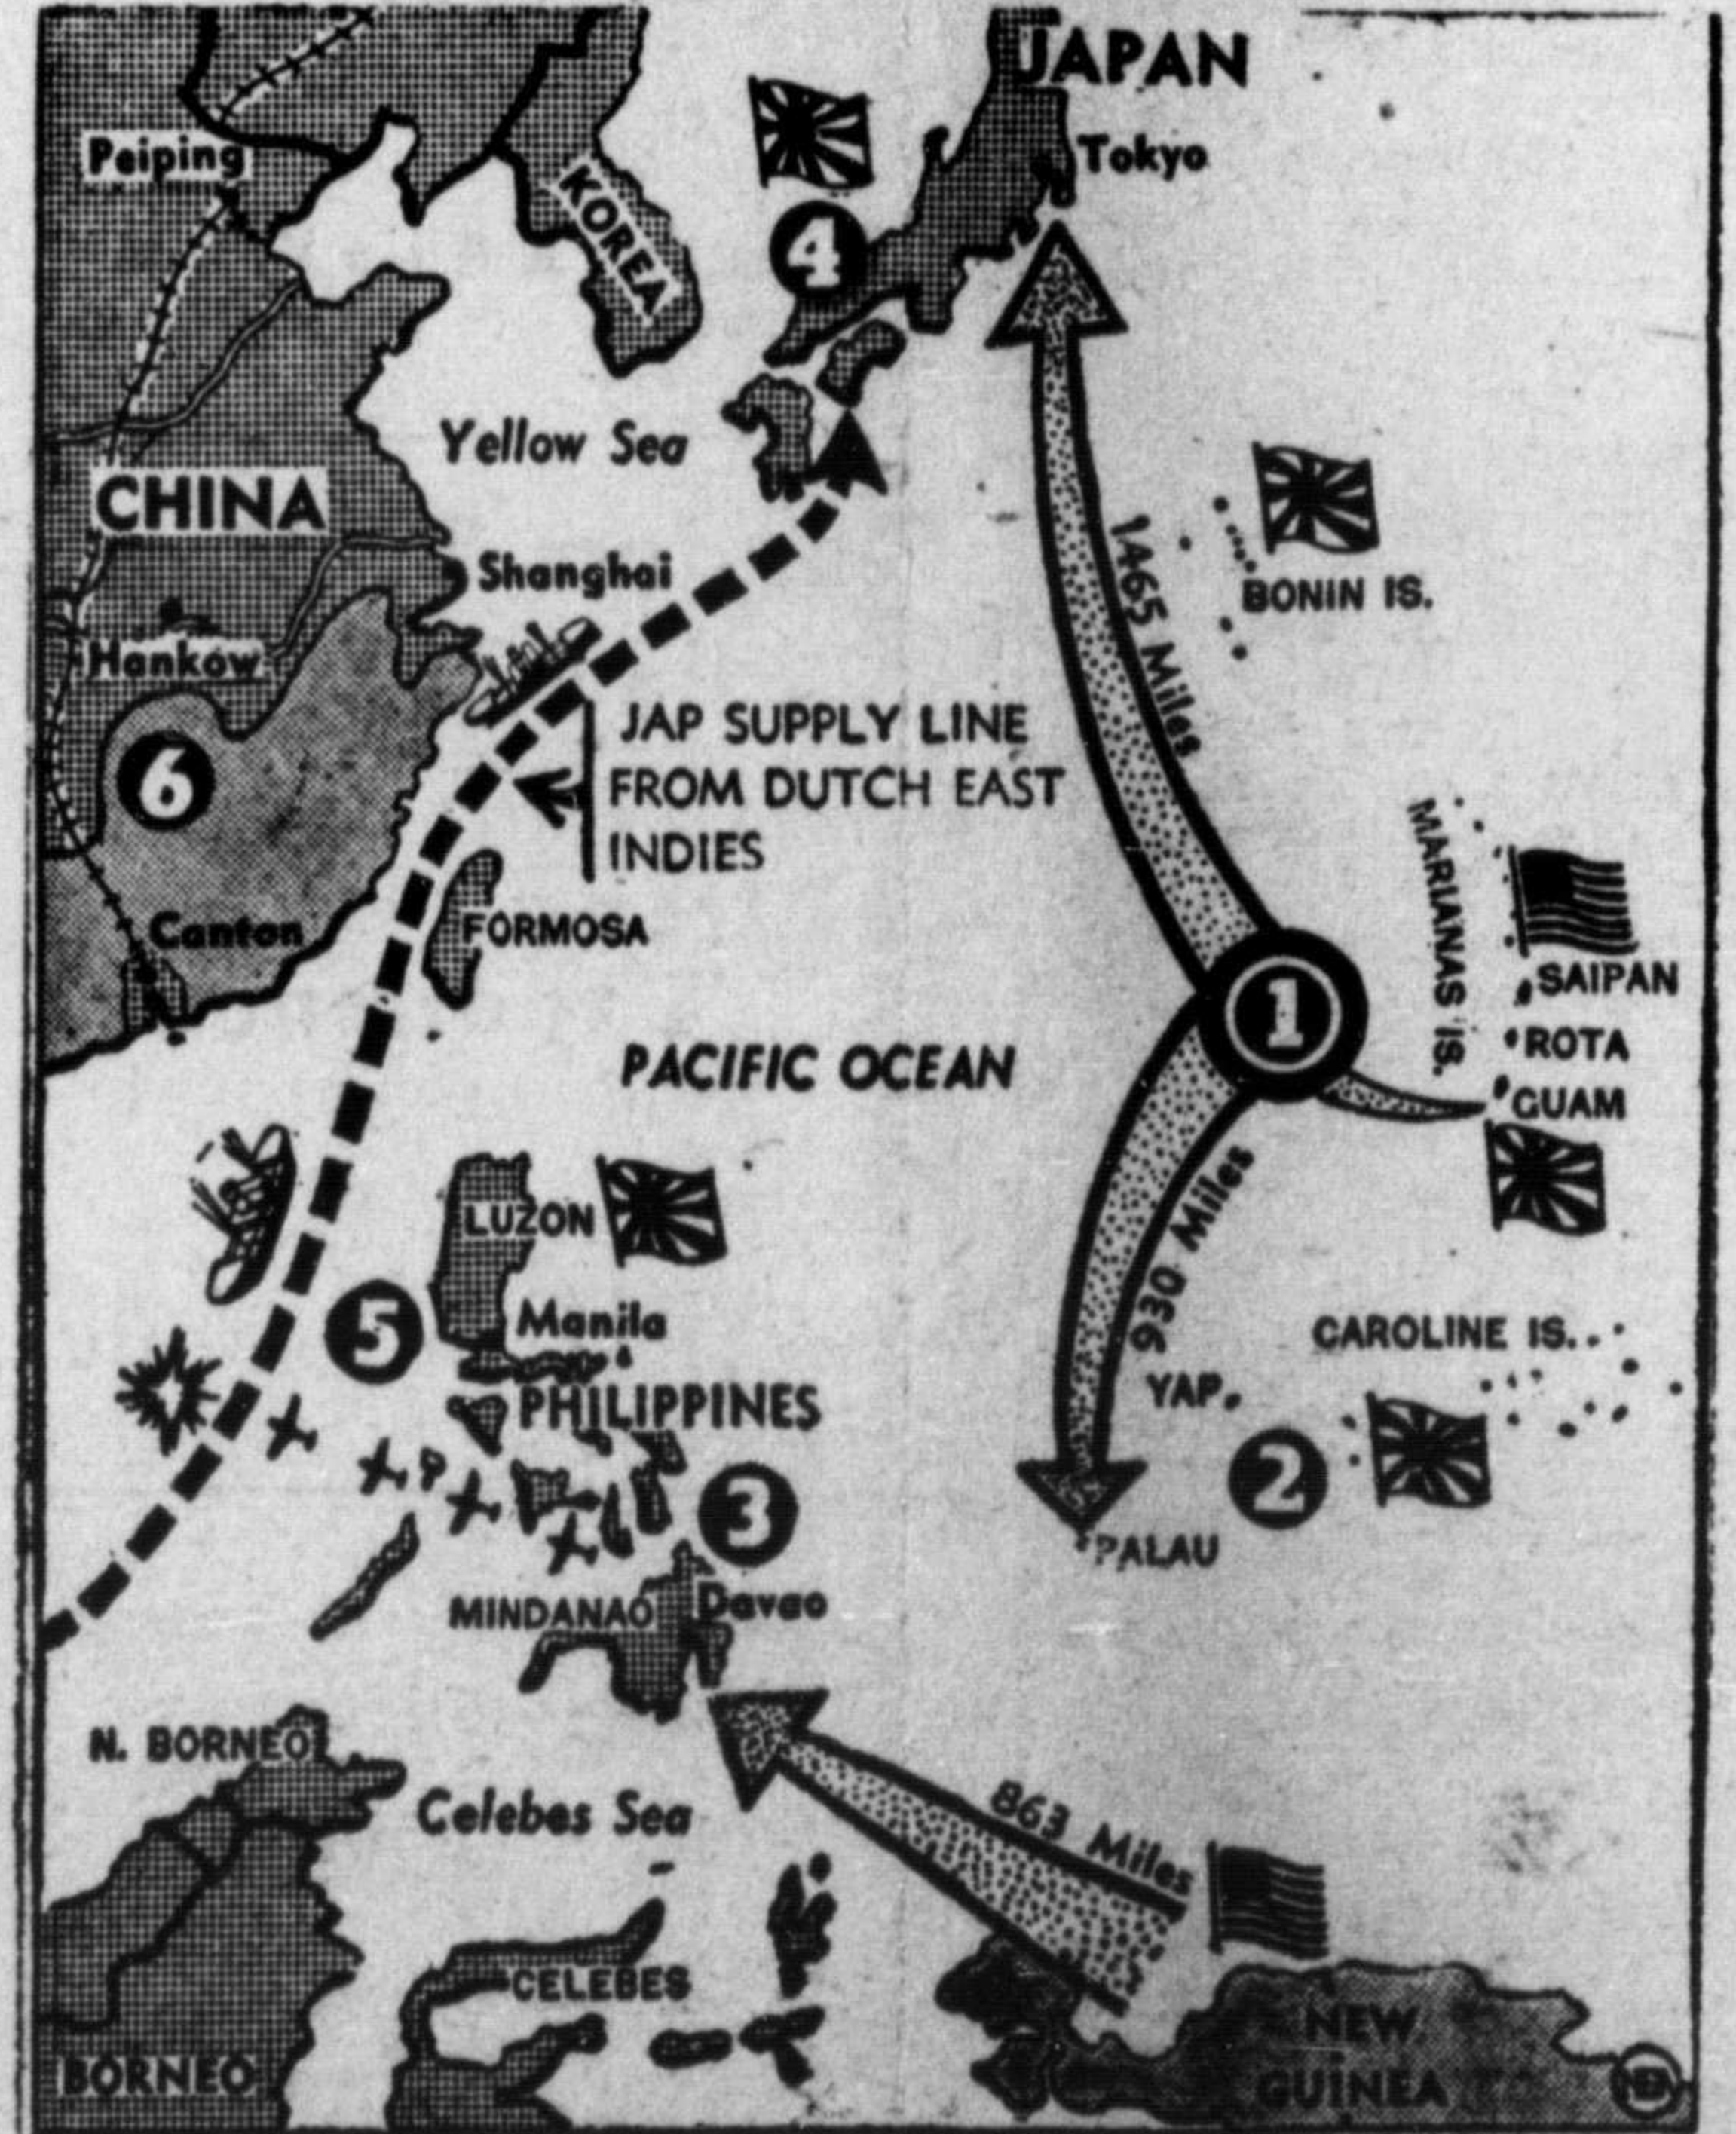

And on that grimmest of Bagin Days, July 14, 1940, Winston Churchill spoke from endangered but unconquerable Britain:

"And I proclaim my faith that some of us will live to see a 14th of July when a liberated France will once again rejoice in her greatness and her glory, and once again stand forward as a champion of the freedom and the rights of man."

"When that day dawns, as dawn it will, the soul of France will turn with comprehension and kindness to those Frenchmen and Frenchwomen, wherever they may be, who in the darkest hour did not despair of the republic."

To speak as de Gaulle and Churchill spoke, four years ago, required an act of faith, says The New York Herald Tribune. Now, although the fullness of their prophecies has not yet been accomplished, no one can doubt that they will prove true to the letter.

CHRONICLES of GINGER FARM

By Gwendoline P. Clarke

Farmers cannot afford to be sentimental and yet, sometimes, it is hard not to be. This morning for instance, the trucker came in to pick up a cow. To him she was just another cow for the stockyards, but to us she was affectionately known as "Old Cicely". We had raised her from a calf. The children had pail-fed her when she was young. They had straddled her back whenever she was in the mood to let them. She had, in fact, grown up with our children. She was the last relic of our early farming days and had helped us weather the storm through those dreadful years of depression. Yes, Old Cicely was nineteen years old, and still going strong. There wasn't a thing the matter with her other than old age, yet she hadn't a tooth in her head that wasn't worn down to the gums. To have tried keeping her another winter would have been asking for trouble, so regretfully we said good-bye to our faithful bossie. Poor old Cicely, she deserved a better fate than to end her life as bologna.

Wouldn't it be nice if there were a ranch or something, kept specially as an "Old Cows' Home." I wonder how many boarders it would have. Not many, I'm afraid. After all, farmers may have a few sentimental moments but they are mercenary minded too and the returns from even a nineteen year old cow will go a long way towards filling the coal bin for winter—supposing there's coal to be got to fill it.

What would we do without a home-town paper? It keeps us in touch with people we haven't heard of in years. But unfortunately the news we read isn't always good news. Last week, for instance, we read in our local paper of the death in action of a young sergeant in the Canadian army. Charlie was a grand boy. But I forgot, he was thirty-five, but we still think of him as the boy he used to be. Partner's youngest brother, the last time he was in England, brought Charlie back with him to work on our farm. That was nearly twenty years ago. Charlie was with us about a year. Then he started moving around and we finally got out of touch with him. We often wondered what had happened to the boy—and if it were not for our local weekly we would still be wondering. Now, as with so many others, we can only pay tribute to Charlie as a brave soldier who laid down his life in service for his adopted country.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

August 13.
THE PRIEST IN THE LIFE OF ISRAEL.

I Samuel I: 1-4:18.
PRINTED TEXT, I Samuel 2:27-30, 35; 4:1-18.
GOLDEN TEXT.—For every high priest, being taken from among men, is appointed for men in things pertaining to God. Hebrews 5:1.

Memory Verse: I will pray unto Jehovah. Jeremiah 42:4.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING
Time.—It is impossible, with the data we have, to determine exactly when Eli judged Israel. The fall of Shiloh is assigned by most recent historians as occurring about 1050 B. C., which would make the judgeship of Eli to be 1090-1050 B. C.

Place.—Almost all the events are located in the city of Shiloh, northeast of Jerusalem.

The House of Eli

And there came a man of God unto Eli, and said unto him. . . . and did I give unto the house of Thy father all the offerings of the children of Israel made by fire?"

Eli is reminded of that day when God set apart the house of Aaron to the priesthood. After such privileges had been conferred on this favored house it was indeed a crime that its leading members should bring dishonor on their invisible King and Benefactor.

"Wherefore kick ye at my sacrifice and at mine offering, which I have commanded in my habitation, and honored Thy sons above me, to make yourselves fat with the chiefest of all the offerings of Israel my people."

The house of Eli had treated the holy sacrifices with contempt. The chiefest of the offerings which should have been God's they kept for themselves.

Faithful and Unfaithful Priests
"Therefore Jehovah The God of Israel, saith. . . . and they that despise me shall be lightly esteemed." God honors those who honor Him by putting His gifts to the best possible use. They who despise God by treating His service, His word, His day lightly, irreverently, as though these are of little importance, will be lightly esteemed by God.

"And I will raise me up a faithful priest that shall do according to that which is in my heart and in my mind; and I will build him a sure house; and he shall walk before mine anointed forever."

There seems little doubt that the direct reference here is to Samuel.

The faithful priest is contrasted with unfaithful priests—the sons of Eli—upon whom is to fall the judgment of God.

Eli, The True Priest

"And there ran a man of Benjamin out of the army. . . . And he said, How went the matter, my son?" Eli never lost his deep concern for the holy things to which God had long ago ordained him. He was a true priest and, up to the time of his death he loved the things of God. Though in his weaker days, when there was sin in his own family, he did not love God enough to rebuke his sons.

Ark of God Is Lost

"And he that brought the tidings answered and said. . . . And he had judged Israel forty years." What a recital of defeat, disaster and death! But all else seemed of little account compared to the loss of the Ark. To Eli it was a sign that God had forsaken his people. If only Eli had been more concerned about the moral and spiritual life of his sons, of Israel, he would have had no need to be concerned about the safety of the Ark.

Today your Renfrew is more important than ever. If you are one of the many who have ordered Renfrews, please be patient. Production cannot keep up with demand because of shortage of raw materials. Keep in touch with the nearest Renfrew representative.

WHAT SCIENCE IS DOING
Corn Borer

More than 40,000 wasps and flies, released by the Department of Agriculture are battling in Illinois cornfields against the dreaded European corn borers attacking the crop. Another 5,000 insects will be turned loose in a few days.

The wasps and flies, gathered in New Jersey, are natural enemies of the borer and are being released in an effort to check the borer increase which already has reached alarming proportions.

The winged fighters turn the tables on the borers by doing a little boring themselves. The wasps penetrate the body of the borer and lay eggs in it. The fly deposits eggs on the outside of the borer. Both parasites crawl into the tunnel made by the borer in the corn stalk to reach their prey.

The eggs of the wasps and flies live on the body of the borer and continue to feast on it even when the borer enters the pupa stage. Then, instead of a new generation of borers emerging from the pupa, out comes a new batch of wasps and flies to continue their work.

Two different types of small wasps are being used and a fly which resembles the common house fly. These parasites have been used with moderate success in the East. Iowa also is using them this year as borers are showing up in appreciable numbers for the first time in Iowa corn fields.

British Planes Drop Surgeons

The Royal Army Medical Corps has parachute surgical teams that have already been in action with great success.

The Lancet describes one unit that established itself in a farm building, which had been seized by paratroops. It ran the building as a hospital for two days, while a battle raged around it. During that period the unit performed 35 operations. Thirty-one of the patients later reached base hospitals in good condition.

Each team consists of six men, all of whom have been trained to be able to do everyone else's job in the event of casualties among the team during landing.

Equipment is designed especially for lightness, compactness and portability, so that the unit can move swiftly through rough country, possibly under fire. The unit carries a light operating table with trestles, all presumably collapsible. They also drop with anaesthetics, plaster, dressings, fuel, plasma, primus stoves, Paraffin pressure lamps and electrical headlamps supply the surgeons with light for their work.

THE WAR - WEEK — Commentary on Current Events

An Outline Of Lord Vansittart's Twelve Points To Win The Peace

The "Win the Peace" Movement, of which Lord Vansittart has accepted the presidency, has planned a number of meetings to bring to the notice of the public the 12-point "peace charter," says the Manchester Guardian.

1. The unconditional surrender of Germany and of the other Axis and their satellite Powers.
2. The effective occupation of Germany by an Allied Army and Air Force and the establishment of an inter-Allied Council of Control, to be maintained until it is decided by the Governments concerned to be no longer necessary.
3. The arrest and trial of persons believed guilty of war crimes in the countries where they were committed. Neutral countries to be requested not to give sanctuary to any war criminals.
4. The complete demobilization and disarmament of all German armed forces, including the surrender of the German fleet and Luftwaffe; the same procedure to be applied to the other Axis Powers.
5. The police forces in Germany to be regional and free from central control and to be demilitarized.
6. The abolition in Germany of all military or semi-military training at any age in any form whatever, including the abolition of the officer's corps and training corps.
7. The evacuation of all territories invaded by the Axis Powers.
8. The restoration of, or compensation for, loot, machinery, and equipment removed or destroyed. Also the restoration of, or compensation for, commercial and industrial interests forcibly acquired or seized.
9. The effective control and where required, the closing down of Germany's war potentials, including aviation in all its forms.
10. No financial loans or assistance to be permitted to Germany or to any of the other Axis Powers without the approval of the Allied Nations.
11. The curricula of school and university studies to be under inter-Allied supervision and advice until the re-education of the German people is assured in accordance with the principles of international good-will.

12. The German radio and all propaganda to be under inter-Allied supervision for such time as may be necessary.

At the opening meeting in Manchester Lord Vansittart said it was conceivable that the end of the war might come at any time within 12 months from the coming winter, and we had therefore got to be prepared. "Whom are you going to believe," he asked — "those who know the truth about Germany or those who don't? If this country for the third time refuses to face the facts you will have a third German war upon you in 10 years."

Watch Your Step

It wouldn't have been an accident if it couldn't have been prevented... would it! So:

- Don't try acrobatics in the bath tub.
- Tack stair rugs down tight and make sure that railings are solid. Rusty nails often mean lockjaw... make certain there aren't any in your house.
- Be sure that the rungs of your ladder are sound and let some one hold the bottom when you begin to climb.
- Don't smoke in bed... the mattress burns quickly... and anyway you'll be asleep, before you know it.
- Train children to put away their toys... just as much for your sake as theirs.
- Never let children near stoves and keep hot liquids in pans safely out of reach.
- In a small kitchen, for your own sake too, turn the handles of pots on the stove in towards the stove, not out towards you.
- Keep all poison bottles carefully labeled and out of the children's reach. (Are you sure that you know what their reach is?)

'Safety First' Good Slogan For Farm

Too Many Farm Accidents, Says Collingwood Enterprise-News

The cold truth is that the ratio of preventable accidents in agriculture is higher than in any other industry. Many hundreds of farmers, members of their families and workers on farms are killed and many thousands injured every year in Canada as the result of accidents, most of which could have been prevented.

With the farm labor shortage just now so acute and when all our production of food is so essential to the war effort, the accident toll is particularly serious.

A survey has disclosed that machinery is the chief source of farm work accidents; that live stock runs a close second and that falls are in third place. The wise farmer is he who learning the cause of accidents on his farm takes steps to eliminate such causes and all possible hazards. For example, the fact that loose clothing causes one-third of all farm accidents involving machinery should make anyone avoid that particular hazard-like a plague.

And the ever-present threat of fire, which annually destroys millions of dollars' worth of rural property ought to be enough for a farmer to justify devoting at least a part of one morning per month to looking round the farm for fire hazards, too.

Prevention of accidents means avoiding making an acute farm labor shortage more acute and also means an even bigger contribution to food production.

Safety first is a good slogan for any farm.

QUEBEC PROVINCE ENJOYS THE HIGHEST RATIONS IN CANADA —A Result of Foresight and Good Administration

As a reminder to the public, these are the facts on alcoholic beverage rationing in the Province of Quebec.

Alcohol and spirituous liquors sold in the stores of the Quebec Liquor Commission are obtained by the Commission either from Canadian distilleries, or imported from overseas.

The control of these alcoholic beverage stocks rests completely with the Federal Government, since the government maintains all customs and excise rights over these products before they can be offered for sale by the provincial liquor boards.

Moreover, since whisky production has been practically discontinued in Scotland during the war, and Canadian distillers are now producing alcohol almost exclusively for war use, the Federal Government has restricted the consumption of alcoholic beverages to an amount equal to 70% of that consumed during the 12-month period ending October 31, 1942.

Further, it must be remembered that owing to increased money in circulation, the number of consumers of alcoholic beverages since the beginning of the war has increased continually.

In spite of these difficulties, the Quebec Liquor Commission can continue to supply the consuming public with reasonable rations of alcoholic beverages, owing to its policy of foresight and sane administration.

There is hardly any need to stress the fact that the rations to the public here in the Province of Quebec are relatively higher than those which exist in other provinces of the Dominion. This is none the less true.

Since 1942, the Quebec Liquor Commission has made every effort to apply the restrictions as lightly as circumstances would allow, remembering, however, that the rationing regulations imposed by the Federal Government are in every case necessary and indispensable as an aid to winning the war.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of a dear little daughter and sister, Edith, who departed this life, Aug. 11th, 1943. Remembrance is a golden chain, Death tries to break but all in vain; To have, to love, and then to part, Is the greatest sorrow of one's heart. The years may wipe out many things But this they wipe out never, The memory of those happy days When we were all together.
Sadly missed by

Some Red Cross sewing was sent in to the meeting.

Mr. N. A. Drummond attended and addressed the members. His talk was most interesting and encouraging.

The sale that was postponed in July is to be held the latter part of August.
