Turner, Chrétien both claim Quebec delegate victory

MONTREAL (CP)—Organizers for Liberal leadership candidates John Turner and Jean Chrétien are both claiming victory as Quebec Liberals wrapped up their three-week long delegate selection process Sunday.

"Our candidate is ahead by a good margin," said Chrétien organizer Marcel Angrignon.

But a Turner official retorted: "We're way ahead."

"It wasn't a very tough battle," said Denise Duhaime. "We didn't get the 60 per cent support we hoped for but we came close and we're way ahead of Chrétien."

Although riding association figures are unofficial and are being disputed by both sides, they indicate Turner has the support of 375 of the province's 880 delegates compared to Chrétien's 300 delegates. Donald Johnston has 26 delegates and there are 109 uncommitted. The remaining 70 delegates are unaccounted for.

In the 11 delegate selections that took place during the weekend, Turner garnered fewer delegates than Chrétien largely due to a Chrétien-Johnston alliance by some youth delegates.

At the Youth Commission of the Quebec wing of the Liberal party that met in Quebec City, a Chrétien-Johnston coalition succeeded in practically shutting out Turner. Chrétien took 21 youth delegates, Johnston 5 and Turner 1.

Johnston also swept Laurier, the riding of his supporter MP David Berger, taking all nine delegates at the Sunday meeting. Youth delegate John Mavridis said that if Johnston doesn't make it to the second ballot at the convention of 3,500 voting Liberals, "a majority of Johnston supporters will go to Chrétien."

Chrétien and Johnston are from Quebec.

But overall, in the seven riding associations to elect delegates Sunday, the two leading candidates appear to have taken an equal number of delegates, 26 each.

The final figures touted by the two candidates are the inverse of each other. Turner organizers claim 375 delegates for their man and 212 for Chrétien. On the other side, Chrétien's organizers claim 344 for their candidate and 282 for his adversary.

Chrétien organizer Angrignon said his organization has "very good tabulations" prepared by Marcel Dube

Hussars change Honorary Colonels

The Sherbrooke Hussars held a Change of Honoraries parade Saturday as former Honorary Colonel, Brigadier John H. Price, turned over command of the regiment to Colonel D.H. Bradley. Pictured at the signing ceremony are Lieutenant-General C.H. Belzile, Commander of Mobile Command; Colonel Bradley (seated); Brigadier Price, regimental commanding officer; Lieutenant-Colonel A.H. Marshall and incoming honorary Lieutenant-Colonel, D.A. Ross.

Arafat, Deng confer on Palestine question

PEKING (Reuter) — PLO chief Yasser Arafat said he and China's leader, Deng Xiaoping, today discussed the movement for an international conference on Palestine and U.S. President Reagan's trip to Peking.

He told a news conference after meetings with Deng and Prime Minister Zhao Ziyang that they backed the proposed conference. Asked whether the Chinese indicated how far they would go to help bring about such a meeting, Arafat said: "It is under discussion."

The Palestine Liberation Organization and Jordan have suggested a meeting under United Nations auspices of all concerned parties, including Israel and the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council.

China is on the council with the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France. Peking supports the suggestion, but Israel has rejected it and Washington has expressed reservations.

Arafat said the PLO is ready to join an international conference under a UN umbrella, "through which all parties concerned would participate, including the permanent members of the Security Council."

Asked whether this included Israel, he replied: "I said all parties concerned."

Israel has refused to talk with the PLO, which it calls a terrorist organization.

Arafat and Deng met for more than an hour in the Great Hall of the People. He said they discussed last week's visit to China by President Reagan, when Reagan rejected a Chinese suggestion that Washington talk with the PLO.

A senior U.S. official, in briefing reporters on the China trip, said: "The president made clear his view that as long as Arafat continues to boast of his role in bombing innocent people and rejects Israel's right to exist, it is hard to take the view that he is someone to negotiate with."

Arafat said China's insistence during meetings with Reagan that Washington open talks with the PLO underlines Peking's support at all levels for the Palestinian cause.

He would not say whether he discussed arms supplies during his meetings in Peking. On Sunday, Arafat inspected Chinese weapons and watched an armored division on training exercises near Peking.

China is one of the PLO's longest backers, and Arafat first visited the Chinese capital 20 years ago. Peking, which has no diplomatic ties with Israel, has regularly given the PLO medical help, military training and arms, including light artillery. PLO officials had said before Arafat's arrival that he would seek more military supplies.

Arafat, who is to visit North Korea after China, appears to be trying to build up prestige before a meeting in Algiers this month designed to heal a split among PLO factions.

Escaped 'day tripper' killer recaptured

MONTREAL (CP) — Solicitor General Robert Kaplan says he is upset that Wayne Clifford Boden, convicted of killing four women, was given a day pass during the weekend and escaped for 36 hours.

Boden, 36, described as "extremely dangerous," was on a pass from the nearby Laval maximum security prison when he slipped out from the downtown Kon-Tiki restaurant in the Mount Royal Hotel on Friday afternoon after telling his guard he was going to the washroom. He was recaptured Saturday night in a nearby bar.

Kaplan said he will meet today with Laval penitentiary officials to find out why Boden was given the pass.

"I'm very upset about it," Kaplan said, in Montreal for an Israel Bonds dinner Sunday night. "But I want to be sure that Correctional Services has a satisfactory answer before I make any other comments."

Three Montreal police officers arrested Boden without incident in a Mackay Street bar called Cheers. Police refused to confirm reports Boden had an American Express card in his name and $300 cash.

However, police were angry at having to recapture an extremely dangerous criminal. "Why are people like that let out?" asked Lieut. Raymond Trudeau of Montreal police.

STRANGLED FOUR

Boden was sentenced in 1972 to three life terms after admitting in court that he strangled three Montreal women in separate incidents in 1969 and 1970. The victims were Jean Way, 24, Marielle Archambault, 20, and Shirley Audette, 20. Boden was already serving a life term for an Alberta conviction for the 1971 strangling murder of Calgary school teacher Elizabeth Anne Porteous, 33.

Two of Boden's victims were murdered blocks from where he was recaptured Saturday.

Boden's escape upset female bar employees working in the popular nightclub district.

"I was planning to do my laundry tonight (Saturday) but with a maniac running loose, I'm afraid to go to the laundry room," said Caroline Gerbech, a waitress.

Boden was taken to Parthenais detention centre and is expected to be charged today with escaping custody.

Gary Hart won't quit despite suffering big loss in Texas

Walter Mondale is looking to Tuesday's next big round of primaries and offering himself as a latter-day Harry Truman. Meanwhile, Gary Hart insists he is not about to pull out of the Democratic presidential race despite his latest two defeats.

Hart expects to pick up a victory today in his home state of Colorado, where Democrats hold local caucuses and 43 national convention delegates are at stake.

Mondale is conceding Colorado to campaign today in all four of the states holding primaries on Tuesday — Indiana, Maryland, North Carolina and Ohio. A total of 368 convention delegates are at stake on that day.

Hart, trailing Mondale nearly two-to-one in delegates, was a loser twice Saturday. He finished second in Louisiana's primary behind Jesse Jackson and in Texas caucuses behind Mondale.

"The issue is not who wins states but who wins delegates," Hart said Sunday, contending that Mondale would score a net gain of only 30 delegates in Texas and Louisiana.

At a news conference in Washington before starting a campaign swing through Ohio and Indiana, Hart insisted he would win the nomination on the first ballot at the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco this July.

Asked if, in light of the Texas loss, there were any circumstances under which he would quit the race before the convention, Hart answered: "None."

MONDALE CHALLENGED

"I am still waiting for someone to ask Mr. Mondale when he is going to demonstrate that he represents the real majority of this party," he said.

But his Texas campaign manager, Representative Martin Frost, acknowledged winning the nomination will be difficult now. "He needed to win this state in my judgment," said Frost. "He didn't do so."

The Texas results were still being counted today. But with 61 per cent of the vote counted, Mondale had 21,407 votes or 50 per cent, to Hart's 11,572 or 27 per cent and Jackson's 7,014 or 16.4 per cent.

In Louisiana, final unofficial returns had Jackson with 136,794 votes, or 43 per cent. Hart had 79,387 or 25 per cent, and Mondale 70,543 or 22 per cent. The News Election Service projected that Jackson would pick up 25 delegates to 18 for Hart, 13 for Mondale and one uncommitted.

Mondale was in Ohio on Sunday and likened himself to Truman, the former Democratic president who won election in 1948 against long odds.

"That's why I'm going to win this election," Mondale said. "I'm a man of the people and I'm going to win it the same way."

Meanwhile, Jackson said that he and Hart "collectively" have the power to deny Mondale the nomination and hope the Colorado senator will stay in the race.

A total of 1,967 delegates are needed to secure the nomination, and Mondale now has 1,252.05. Hart has 694.75 and Jackson 235.2. Those figures include Louisiana delegates but not those of Texas.

Johnston policy pitch falling on deaf ears

HALIFAX (?P) — Economic Development Minister Donald Johnston challenged fellow Liberal leadership candidates to get specific Sunday in a sarcastic attack that made him stick out like a sore thumb.

Johnston had asked the other six candidates to put their cards on the table during a day-long policy conference that gave about 800 Atlantic Liberals a look at the contenders.

Later, Johnston summed up his opponents' cards in a recital that included the excellence promised by John Turner, the compassion promised by Energy Minister Jean Chrétien and the caring promised by Justice Minister Mark MacGuigan.

These general goals amounted to "a good Liberal speech," said Johnston, but he warned the party should not be too confident about winning the next federal election.

"We have to demonstrate not only that we have vision, but that we have policies. The people of Canada want to know what tough choices we're prepared to make. This has not happened today."

Johnston's no-nonsense focus on policy seemed to fit the billing of the conference, the second of a series of five leading up to the June 14-17 leadership convention in Ottawa. About 3,500 delegates will attend the convention, including about 600 from Atlantic Canada.

But the crowd pleasers had more to do with personality and style than policy. The audience was cool to criticism of other Liberals and came to life when candidates attacked Progressive Conservatives.

"I'm going to fight Tories, not Liberals," said Turner, loosening up after a flat policy speech earlier in the day. "I'm going to bring a united party into a general election."

Chrétien, who has the next largest share of the committed delegates from the four Atlantic provinces, ignored Johnston's call, suggesting in an emotional speech that the views expressed during the day were not enough anyway.

"What we need is a leader who will put all that together and at the same time inspire the country."

Again, the warmest response was reserved for Chrétien's shots at Tories and their leader, Brian Mulroney.

"I have a dream — Give me Brian Mulroney for seven weeks (in an election campaign) and we of the Liberal party will show how empty he and his party is."

Employment Minister John Roberts, who frequently applauded Chrétien, repeated his warning against cutting social programs to reduce Canada's $30-billion deficit.

The party must stick to the "vital centre," he said. "We've never abandoned Liberalism before. ... It's time for the courage to stand for a strong (central) government."

All of the candidates advocated cooperation and consultation with the provinces, but said the interests of the country as a whole came first in a disagreement.

Indian Affairs Minister John Munro said he would tell provinces such as Quebec, Alberta and Newfoundland that Ottawa was prepared to discuss things "but we're not going to accept your blackmail."

MacGuigan, now a member of Parliament from Windsor, Ont., called himself "the Atlantic candidate" and stressed his roots in Prince Edward Island.

"My cards are spades and hearts — spades for work and hearts for caring. That's what Atlantic Liberalism is all about."

Eugene Whelan applied his experience as agriculture minister to problems of the Atlantic fishery, which he said needed better marketing, perhaps with the help of the Pope.

"Some of us once thought we would go to hell if we didn't eat fish on Fridays. But it was for marketing. That's what it was for."

Official 'Pope-corn' turned down

WINNIPEG (CP) — "Pope-on-a-rope" and "Pope-corn" were among more than 1,700 souvenir ideas rejected by Manitoba organizers of Pope John Paul's Sept. 16 visit to Winnipeg.

"They were turned down because they were distasteful," Frank Wellink, of the papal planning secretariat, said Friday as the official souvenirs commemorating John Paul's tour were unveiled.

Organizers expect to raise between $500,000 and $1 million from the sale of church-endorsed souvenirs which will be available in about 576 outlets by Monday.

While the faithful may not be able to scrub down with "Pope-on-a-rope" soap or munch "Pope-corn", they will be able to choose between 70 authorized trinkets, ranging from 50-cent bumper stickers to $800 gold medallions.

Starting Monday, souvenir hunters will be able to hit the links clad in $19.95 papal golf shirts, keep the sun from their eyes with $7 papal baseball caps and toast each other from $9 papal wineglasses.

SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE
 Other official souvenirs include: $7 porcelain papal dinner bells; $8 stoneware papal mugs; $32 nylon papal jackets; $25 porcelain papal cake plates; 95-cent Pope buttons; $3 papal totebags; and $2.50 folding papal binoculars.

He said the church-endorsed souvenirs bear the official logo of the 1984 papal visit, unlike the unauthorized Pope-related memorabilia which has flooded Winnipeg.

Wellink said imitation papal souvenirs, which Roman Catholics have been urged to boycott, have already hindered fundraising efforts by as much as $60,000.

Wellink said Manitobans would have been easy prey for get-rich-quick hucksters with shoddy merchandise if the church had not decided to make reasonably-priced souvenirs available.

"I've seen (unauthorized) statues up to $250 and all we have is $35 (busts and figurines)," he said.

SOME IDEAS DISTASTEFUL

He said the souvenir committee refused several submissions because of their distastefulness. Although the "Pope-on-a-rope" soap was nixed officially, the Winnipeg businessman who came up with the idea still plans to market the product.

The idea of an edible souvenir called "Pope-corn" was submitted by a firm in Kitchener, Ont.

Msr. Ward Jamieson, planning co-ordinator, told a news conference Friday that reports the church was considering selling portions of the altar from which the Pope will say a huge open-air mass at Bird's Hill Park were ridiculous.

Conference witness to deep split in native Canadian organizations

NEW PALTZ, N.Y. (CP) — Mary Flying Fist — that, she assured the troublesome young Cree from Alberta, is how her Mohawk name translates into English — was clearly having problems keeping him from delivering a statement to the panel she was presiding over on Indian treaties in Canada.

Ron LameMan, of the Coalition of First Nations, had not been invited to speak at this first American conference on native people in Canada — an apparent oversight by its organizers. But after a little wrangling, and despite Mary Flying Fist's determination to keep her panel discussion on schedule, LameMan was allowed to take part. He explained why he believes Ottawa's recent promises of self-government for natives are as worthless as treaties proved to be for his ancestors.

American Indians and scholars earlier heard opposing views from native leaders such as lawyer Roberta Jamieson of the Six Nations reserve, Inuit MP Peter Ittinuar and Micmac chief Alphonse Metallic. They thus got a taste of the debate currently raging among their brethren north of the border. The Canadian government is expected to move soon on demands for Indian self-determination.

Indian Affairs Minister John Munro has promised the Assembly of First Nations, the organization of the chiefs of most of Canada's 300,000 status Indians, introduction of a bill this spring establishing a legal framework in which bands could finally assume management of their own affairs.

Munro's pledge forms part of the government's response to the recommendations of a commission of inquiry presided over by Liberal MP Keith Penner. The commission has proposed far-reaching changes in Canada's relations with its aboriginal population. Ottawa now is promoting the legislation as an alternative to constitutional entrenchment of native self-government, which was rejected by the provinces in March.

The Penner report's recommendations include elimination of the Indian Affairs Department and guaranteed annual financial transfers to native government. It also proposes entrenchment in the Constitution of a level of native government in Canada, alongside Ottawa and the provinces.

Native people, as Walpole Island Chief William Tooshkenig put it, would "finally negotiate their way into Confederation," after being excluded from Canadian nation-building in 1867.

SERVED ON GROUP
Jamieson, who toured the country as the assembly's representative on the Penner commission, told the conference the report's recommendations are "both radical and sweeping." But they do not represent demands for more power from the federal and provincial governments.

"The report only asks for recognition of what we already have, of our legitimate right to govern our own affairs," she told the audience at the State University of New York.

Important differences continue to divide members of the Assembly of First Nations, who are to meet in several weeks in Edmonton in an attempt to reach a common position to put to Munro. Evidence of the clash of identities was ample at the conference. Examples included the politicization of Jamieson and Ittinuar and the quiet anger of Simon Fobister at the tragedy of his Grassy Narrows reserve, or the militancy of LameMan and the uneasiness of Metallic. Metallic's Restigouche band battled with the Quebec government over salmon fishing and he read from a history textbook when he was called upon to recount his people's past.

LameMan's group, the Council of First Nations, which claims to represent 75,000 Indians, completely rejects Munro's proposals, arguing they constitute further interference in the affairs of native people.

Brutality state organized says Cuban ex-prisoner

MONTREAL (CP) — The only difference between torture in countries with right-wing dictatorships and torture in Communist countries is that the practice is entrenched in the constitutions of Communist countries, says a former Cuban prisoner of conscience.

"In Communist countries, the constitution states that everything and anything must be done to maintain the socialist state," Armando Valladares said in an interview during a weekend conference organized by Amnesty International.

"And everything and anything usually means brutal torture and the stripping of a human being's dignity," he said through a translator.

Valladares served almost 22 years of a 30-year prison sentence in Cuba for criticizing the government of President Fidel Castro. He was released in 1982 through the intervention of the French government.

Valladares, who was an official in the Cuban government prior to the 1959 revolution, said he was tortured repeatedly during his imprisonment for refusing to participate in programs to "rehabilitate" him into a proper communist.

Letting a reporter feel deep ridges on his skull where he said he had been beaten with a lead pipe, Valladares said he was once left without food for 46 days and spent nine years in solitary confinement without seeing another person.

Valladares now lives in Madrid and attends anti-torture conferences around the world. He said about 250 other pre-revolutionary government officials are still being held in similar prison conditions in Cuba.

London-based Amnesty International works for the release of prisoners of conscience — people held for non-violently expressing their opinions — and opposes torture and the death penalty for all prisoners.

The two-day weekend symposium, organized by the French-Canadian section of the organization, ended with an appeal by participants for the creation of an international tribunal to judge torturers, and a suggestion that the Pope denounce torture during his visits to countries where it is practiced.

Peace march cancelled because of militia threat

BEIRUT (AP) — Lebanon's first major peace march was cancelled Sunday by Christian and Moslem organizers who feared attacks by militiamen. Instead of the thousands expected to rally, a solitary teenage boy stood in the combat zone with a misspelled sign reading "Peace Now."

Despite the setback to the peace movement, a compromise reportedly was developing to break a deadlock over forming a coalition cabinet to seek an end to the civil war.

An aide to Nabih Berri said Sunday the Shiite Moslem leader "responded positively" to talks with Prime Minister Rashid Karami and might agree to join the new government.

Berri has refused to take a post Karami offered him in the 10-member cabinet announced last week. Druse chieftain Walid Jumblatt, the other key opposition militia leader, reportedly has said he won't join without Berri.

The marchers intended to gather

Sunday at the "green line" which separates Christian East Beirut from the mostly Moslem West. They planned to uncover a marble plaque saying "No to War: Yes to Life," and release some white doves.

22 KILLED
But the heaviest fighting in almost a month forced organizers to reconsider. Police said 22 people were killed on Saturday and more than 130 wounded.

Many Lebanese said the fighting was a signal for people not to go to the march.

The new cabinet is designed to end the nine-year civil war by including the major political and militia leaders within the government. Karami offered cabinet seats to representatives of all six major Lebanese religious groups.

The aide to Berri, who declined to be identified, told The Associated Press that Karami has offered compromise proposals in response to Berri's demands for control of cabinet ministries dealing with two Shiite-populated regions, Israeli-occupied south Lebanon and Beirut's southern suburbs.

The aide said the Berri camp "responded positively" to the proposals, but would not disclose them. He said doing so could sabotage the agreement.

The state radio, which has its headquarters in West Beirut and now has ties to Berri's Amal militia, quoted political sources as saying Karami had proposed a special office for south Lebanon to be put at Berri's disposal.

Beirut Radio said Karami met Sunday with President Amin Gemayel, a Christian, and both conferred with Berri by telephone.

News-in-brief

Man crushed by bus

MONTREAL (CP) — Police said an 18-year-old man was accidentally crushed to death by the rear wheels of a city transit bus after an altercation with a bus driver Saturday night. The driver told police that after the argument, the man left the bus and began kicking and hitting the bus. The next thing the driver heard were noises coming from the rear wheels of the vehicle.

Bus drivers picket restaurant

MONTREAL (CP) — Striking school bus drivers, who are depriving 17,000 suburban students of daily transportation, have begun picketing a restaurant and the owner is seeking an injunction to have them stop.

Richard Lapointe, president of the company which owns L'Anctre restaurant in the South Shore suburb of St. Hubert, says his business is suffering because the strikers mistakenly believe a group of investors who own Autobus St. Hubert Inc. have a financial interest in the restaurant.

Lapointe said one of the investors has a minority interest in the company that owns the restaurant, but is not directly involved in running it.

PQ minister blasts Bourassa

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Liberal Leader Robert Bourassa lacks the conviction to protect the interests of Quebec and is afraid to run in coming byelections, Justice Minister Pierre-Marc Johnson said in an angry speech Sunday.

Bourassa is a "timid man," and if he is elected premier again, Quebecers will be "a people without an identity," Johnson said at a Parti Quebecois nomination meeting to pick a candidate for one of three June 18 byelections.

The justice minister grew so angry as he lambasted Bourassa he had to pause and apologize, whispering "I don't want to say anything too hard." He fell off his chair trying to sit down after he spoke.

Bikers show soft side

MONTREAL (CP) — About 300 leather- and denim-clad motorcycle riders rolled up to a world-famous Roman Catholic shrine Sunday morning, bearing offerings of stuffed animals and other toys.

It was their way of showing the public that "bikers are people too," said Luc Blais, a member of the Quebec chapter of the Bikers' Rights Organization, which seeks to counter the bad image of motorcycle clubs.

For the third consecutive year, the motorcyclists congregated in the parking lot of St. Joseph's Oratory to donate toys they had collected for a local hospital.

Judge torturers says symposium

MONTREAL (CP) — A symposium on Power and Torture, organized by the French-Canadian section of Amnesty International, ended Saturday with an appeal by participants for the creation of an international tribunal to judge torturers.

The appeal was one of 30 formulated at the two-day meeting, intended to educate the public about the widespread use of torture by governments around the world.

The participants also suggested that the Pope denounce torture during his visits to countries where it is used.

Taxi firm may get new contracts

MONTREAL (CP) — A taxi company which faces legal action for threatening to fire its 24 black drivers because it is losing money to competitors who hire only whites, may be awarded some contracts by the Montreal Urban Community Transit Commission.

Justice Minister Pierre Marc Johnson told reporters Sunday that MUCTC Chairman Lawrence Hanigan said Taxi Moderne, which has threatened to fire its black drivers by June 1, "can expect some contracts by the end of the month."

Baby suffocates in parked car

MONTREAL (CP) — An 11-month-old baby died of asphyxiation Saturday after its mother and another woman fell asleep in a car parked at the side of a highway. The car's motor had been left running.

The women were pulled unconscious from the 1974 Dodge and revived by Quebec provincial police. The baby was dead on arrival at hospital in St-Eustache, 25 km north of Montreal.

The name of the victim has not been released.

Spray victims ready for court

FREDERICTON (CP) — A group complaining of a wide variety of health problems have taken the first concrete steps towards taking the New Brunswick Electric Power Commission and Dow Chemical Canada Ltd. to court.

About 40 members of the Sprayers of Dioxin Association, which represents workers who sprayed herbicides for the province in the late 1950s and early 1960s gathered here Saturday to work out a plan of action for their suit against the provincially-owned utility and the chemical company.

The men raised about $20,000 in cash and pledges to put legal machinery in motion.

Turner defends deficit plan

HALIFAX (CP) — John Turner defended his plan to slash the deficit Saturday, saying even Finance Minister Marc Lalonde agreed Turner's target was not unrealistic.

Turner, in Halifax to attend a policy conference today with the six other major Liberal leadership candidates, refused to give details on the scheme that would see the country's $30-billion deficit reduced by half in three to seven years. He said it would not necessarily involve increased taxes.

In previous speeches, he had hinted that increased taxes and decreased spending are necessary to achieve his aim.

Gay not filtered out in Melita

MELITA, Man. (CP) — There is no reason for excluding practising homosexuals from ordination as ministers of the United Church of Canada, say members of the church's Manitoba-Northwestern Ontario conference.

The emotional issue arose at the annual meeting of the regional conference when motions were advanced to keep active gays out of the ministry.

The motions were snubbed by a wide margin in a show-of-hands vote as more than 500 delegates rejected the view that homosexuality is forbidden by the Bible.

Hero to make future plans known

CALGARY (CP) — Ken Taylor, the Canadian diplomat who became an international hero and has since been rumored to have political ambitions, said Saturday he will make his future plans known in one week.

"The position in Rome (as ambassador to Italy) is still being talked about, but the longer I wait the less likely it is that I will be going to Rome," said Taylor, who was in Calgary to address a Toastmasters International convention.

"I'm looking at a number of alternatives, some of which are in the private sector, others of which would be pursuing a career in government. One way or the other, I'll make my plans known in one week."

Drunks get help into cars

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Two journalism students, pretending to be intoxicated, found that 44 out of 100 people helped them into their cars — despite their apparent drunken condition.

University of Central Florida students Mike Griffin and Lee Lerner conducted the study, as their final class project. About a month ago in nearby Winter Park, the two students took turns posing as drunks and stopping pedestrians on a busy street.

Griffin and Lerner, who had both doused their faces and hands with gin then rinsed their mouths out with the liquor, told passers-by they were too drunk to unlock their car doors.

Polls have Reagan looking good

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan would defeat either Walter Mondale or Senator Gary Hart by about the same margin if the presidential election were held now, a Los Angeles Times poll published today said.

Reagan would defeat Mondale 53 to 41 per cent, said the survey of 2,700 voting-age people across the United States, including 1,898 registered voters.

Hart, who has claimed he would run better than Mondale in the fall, gathered 41 per cent to Reagan's 52 per cent. Jesse Jackson would be defeated by Reagan by a margin of 63 to 19 per cent, the survey said.

U.S. pounded by storms

Violent thunderstorms moved eastward today from the Mississippi Valley to the Atlantic coast after producing tornadoes, high winds, hail and drenching rains that left two people dead, including a woman who drowned when her car was swamped in downtown Nashville, Tenn.

The sweeping line of thundershowers spun off funnel clouds that prompted the National Weather Service to post tornado watches in Arkansas, Missouri, Louisiana, Tennessee and Kentucky.

Alaska founding father dies

ANCHORAGE (AP) — William Allen Egan, who helped guide Alaska to statehood and became the state's first elected governor, died Sunday. He was 69.

Egan was admitted Friday to a hospital where he had been receiving outpatient therapy following radiation treatment for lung cancer, a hospital spokesman said. He died at 2:05 a.m. Sunday.

After President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed the statehood bill in the summer of 1958, Egan won the new state's first election for governor, taking office Jan. 3, 1959. It was the first of his three terms as the state's chief executive.

And the hotel gets off clean

GREEN RIVER, Wyo. (AP) — A man who chopped up a motel's registration desk with a power saw and exchanged gunshots with a security guard after being denied a room has been fined $1,000 and ordered to make restitution.

John Paul Rayburn, 33, of Green River, also received a suspended prison sentence. Rayburn was refused a room at the motel on April 4.

Police search for rafters' bodies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police harbor patrols searched the muddy Potomac River on Sunday for four people missing and presumed dead in a rafting accident just north of the capital.

Six off-duty soldiers and a woman companion were tossed into the river Saturday when their rubber raft careened over a small dam and overturned.

One body was recovered Saturday by a police helicopter, which also rescued two other men from the fast-rushing water.

Graham preaches despite illness

LONDON (AP) — Rev. Billy Graham was temporarily released from a London hospital to preach Sunday night at Westminster Chapel.

The 65-year-old American evangelist entered hospital Saturday for an operation to clear what was described as a serious sinus condition. He was to return to the Royal Masonic Hospital after the service.

Graham begins a three-month-long crusade, named Mission England, beginning in Bristol on May 12. He will preach at some 40 prayer meetings in six cities.

No intervention, says Thatcher

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has ruled out government intervention in a coal strike which has paralyzed more than three-quarters of the British state industry.

She said in a radio interview it would be wrong for the government to intervene.

The strike is over plans to shut unprofitable pits and axe 20,000 jobs.

The Ministry of Silly Suggestions

LONDON (AP) — Margaret Thatcher says it was silly to suggest, as have some opposition politicians, that inviting South Africa's prime minister to visit Britain means she condones that country's racial policies.

Prime Minister Thatcher announced Friday that she has invited Pieter Botha for talks in Britain on June 2.

"It's very silly" to claim that the invitation indicated tacit support for race segregation in South Africa, she said in a BBC interview Sunday.

Pusher running in election

ROME (Reuters) — An Italian television personality held since last summer on charges of drug-trafficking will stand for election to the European Parliament next month as a candidate for Italy's Radical party.

Enzo Tortora, one of Italy's most popular television personalities, was arrested in Naples after two jailed criminals associated with the Camorra, the Naples Mafia, testified against him.

Indian ship sunk by missile

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — Shipping and Transport Minister Vijay Reddy told the Indian parliament that an Indian ship was sunk in the Khor Musa channel at the head of the Persian Gulf after being struck by a missile in March.

Reddy told parliament Saturday that the cargo ship APJ Ambika was covered by war insurance and the crew will receive compensation. He did not identify the source of the attack.

The owners of the 16,600-ton vessel had previously announced the ship was damaged in an Iraqi attack on a convoy heading for the Iranian port of Bandar Khomeini March 1.

Long-lost lovers reunite

SAINT ANGELO IN POTOMANO, Italy (AP) — Ukrainian Lida Titorenko, 65, and Italian Primo Grasselli, 75, were married Sunday after a 40-year separation since they exchanged their first kiss in a German work camp.

Hundreds of townspeople crowded into the church of this central Italian village to watch the bride exchange her vows with her sweetheart of 1944.

Grasselli was working in a factory, and the young Lida was a deportee when they met in Germany. The two lost track of each other until 1981, when Grasselli traced her to the Ukraine, now part of the Soviet Union.

Dysentery epidemic in India

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — A total of 1,399 people in the eastern Indian state of West Bengal have died of dysentery and other intestinal diseases since March, the Press Trust of India reported Sunday.

It quoted state Health Minister Ambarish Mukherjee as saying 38,329 people had caught the disease, caused by polluted drinking water, since a statewide epidemic broke out in March.

Man killed in Indian violence

AMRITSAR (AP) — One person was killed and four wounded late Sunday in a two-hour gun battle between Sikh militants and paramilitary soldiers in this Sikh holy city.

In New Delhi, more than 2,000 opposition party workers offered themselves for arrest to protest continuing religious violence, police said.

Authorities in Amritsar said the slain man was attacking the gun battle which followed a grenade attack by Sikhs on a police patrol.

Ex-MP sees Diefenbaker parallel in 1984 Canadian political scene

By Peter Scowen

COWANSVILLE — "Conservatives have a right to live as well" is the motto of a Liberal who was right there the last time the Tory party came to life in Canada.

Joe Deslières, 90, won three elections in under six years in Brome-Missisquoi during the 1950s before resigning in 1958 after John Diefenbaker dissolved Parliament in a move to increase his Conservative majority in the house.

"In 1958 everything was against the Liberals," Deslières recalled at the Brome-Missisquoi delegate selection meeting Sunday. "The Conservatives had this 'time for a change' thing going. And (Liberal prime minister) Louis St. Laurent made a mistake in 1957. He was too sure of himself."

And now the retired wholesaler from Sutton sees the same thing happening in Canada. "That Mulroney is going to be a tough man to beat," he said. "(Pierre) Trudeau was a good man but he stayed perhaps a bit too long."

Deslières was first elected to Parliament in 1952 in a byelection and was re-elected in general election the next year. He remembers working the "100-mile-a-cross" riding, being driven from town to town by his chauffeur.

In 1957 when Diefenbaker squeaked by the Liberal party to win a four-seat majority in the House, Deslières was again re-elected, this time defeating a young Tory candidate named Heward Grafftey by 700 votes.

The next year, though, Diefenbaker dissolved Parliament, called another election and swept Québec and Canada. Deslières resigned when the House closed down. "I wasn't in a position to carry on," he said. "My chief organizer had just passed away and my chauffeur joined the army. In those days you had to do most of the work yourself. I was completely alone to do it. My majority was reduced. Things looked bad."

Deslières' successor, Maurice

Hallé, was defeated by Grafftey, who went on to represent the riding in Ottawa for most of the next 20 years until his defeat by Liberal André Bachand in 1980.

"Maurice asked me to come down and nominate him for the job," the still-spry 90-year-old said. "I said 'Maurice, I'll do it if you want but I don't think it will do any good.'"

TORIES WON'T WIN IN B.M.

Despite the strength of the Conservatives across Canada today, Deslières doesn't think they will do as well in Québec as they hope to. "They won't win in Brome," he said. "The Liberals have done a lot in Québec."

He feels John Turner is the best man for the leadership job as well.

"He is the one the most able to win support in the West."

Deslières still fondly remembers the great politicians of his day such as Liberal Finance Minister Douglas Abbott and the man who beat Diefenbaker, Lester Pearson. "He was a bull of a man," he said. "He scared people when he hunched his shoulders and leaned forward to speak."

Deslières now lives with his daughter in Sutton, and he is looking forward to his 91st birthday in June. Is he the oldest Liberal in Brome-Missisquoi?

"No," he said. "My neighbor's older than me and he's a Liberal."

They plan to get together for a drink in June.

B-M Liberals pick Turner

By Peter Scowen

COWANSVILLE — It was 'John Turner' day in Brome-Missisquoi Sunday as Liberal MP André Bachand delivered his riding to the Turner camp as promised, sending six out of seven delegates to the June convention firmly committed to the leadership race's frontrunner.

In what Bachand called an "average" turnout, some 130 local Liberal militants selected a slate of six delegates backing John Turner, and one uncommitted delegate. Bachand has been supporting Turner since the leadership race began.

And despite the mediocre turnout — just one year ago over 500 Tory militants from the same riding turned out to select delegates for their own leadership convention — Bachand is confident he can beat even Brian Mulroney when an election is called.

"I am very positive I could beat Mulroney," said the MP, who as a delegate to the Liberal leadership convention in 1968 voted for Pierre Trudeau.

Bachand feels he holds an advantage over the Tory party leader, who for a long time has been rumored as planning to run in Brome-Missisquoi in the next federal election, because he knows the huge riding better, and has more time to spend there.

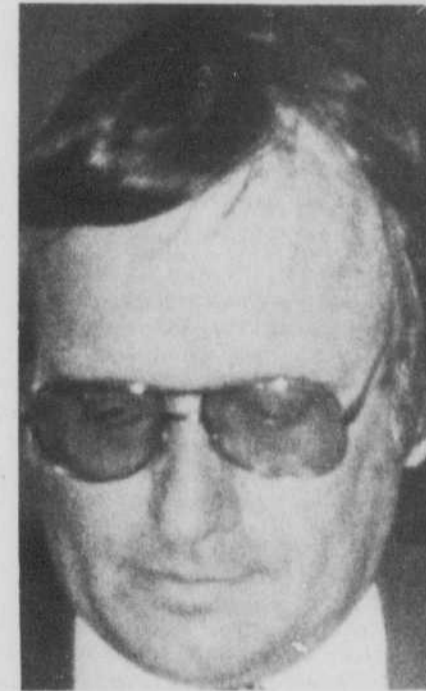

"Mulroney won't run here because of me," Bachand said confidently. "He will stick to Central Nova because English Canada doesn't want another prime minister from Québec."

The MP said polls in the West show voters there would rather go with Turner than Mulroney for that reason.

CHAIRMAN LATE

Sunday's delegate selection meeting in Cowansville started one-and-a-half hours late because Liberal Party headquarters forgot to tell the lawyer supposed to run the election that it was taking place that day. Maitre Gilson Lachance was working in his yard in St. Jean at 2 p.m. — the scheduled starting time for the meeting — when he got the call telling him 130 Liberals were waiting for him in a school gymnasium over 40 miles away.

were Marcel Desautels, Ronald Annett, Marie-Paul Marotte, Hannah Zowall, Jean Charpentier and Joanne Allard — all committed to Turner. Cowansville lawyer Peter Turner was the one uncommitted delegate.

Representatives from the United States joined members of the Canadian Federation of University Women in Compton for a seminar Saturday. Present were (l-r) Eileen Clark, 4th vice-president of the International Federation of University Women; Diane Sanders, president of the Maine Division of the American Federation of University Women; Margaret Strongitharm, president of the CFUW; Linda Souter, vice-president of the CFUW for Ontario; Rhoda Matson, vice-president of the CFUW for Quebec; and Molly Brown, president-elect of the Maine Division.

Local chapter hosts university women's conference: Recognizing a definite role

By Timothy Belford

COMPTON — Over fifty women from throughout Quebec gathered here Saturday to attend a Canadian Federation of University Women's seminar.

The women, all members of provincial chapters of the CFUW, were joined by National President Margaret S. Strongitharm, Ontario vice-president, Linda Souter and two observers from Maine.

The theme of the day-long seminar dealt with the future of women's groups in Canada and the world in general, now that the United Nations decade for women is coming to an end.

According to Strongitharm, the delegates dealt in particular with "a very lengthy, very detailed," United Nations questionnaire. The questionnaire had been sent to women's organizations around the world and covered all aspects of women's rights.

The CFUW is one branch of a worldwide organization that includes women in 52 countries. The various national organizations act in turn as 'lobbyists' in the area of women's rights consulting with local, provincial and federal government departments.

'VERY DEFINITE ROLE'

Stringitharm, who is from Nanaimo, British Columbia, says that the CFUW is not only active but successful in its efforts to improve the lot of women in Canada. "I think university women are recognizing they have a very definite role in providing incentive for all women... We certainly are being consulted, even if our advice isn't always being taken."

As an example of the organization's recent success, Strongitharm points to the leading role the Quebec chapter of the CFUW played in organizing women's resistance to pornography. "We presented briefs (to the government task force on pornography) across the country," she says, adding that the CFUW is becoming "a voice that is heard and respected as that of educated women."

Rhoda Matson, President of the Provincial Council of University Women's Clubs and a member of the national executive, also outlined the extensive prize and scholarship programs carried out by the various provincial chapters. These awards are designed to encourage young women in the pursuit of academic excellence and to encourage women to better their educational level.

Matson also pointed out that the seminar was hosting visitors from the Knowlton-Cowansville area where it is hoped another chapter of the CFUW will be organized. Anyone in the region wishing to take part is encouraged to contact Matson at (819) 567-1310 or by writing to her at 55 Clough Street, Lennoxville, Quebec, J1M 1W5.

Sewer construction closes Sherbrooke roads

SHERBROOKE (LL) — Due to sewer construction on Conseil Str. et Monday through Wednesday this week, drivers will be required to take St-Jean-Baptiste, Chalifoux, Murray, Bowen and King. Conseil Street will be closed between Bowen and St-Jean-Baptiste.

Construction on

Queen Street North will begin Monday and continue to the end of the month. Drivers are asked to follow detour signs.

During the first week of construction May 7-11, traffic will be directed toward the downtown area via Des Sables, Ontario, and Elgin streets. Later in the month, traffic will be detoured by Elgin, Hyatt and Queen.

To minimize traffic jams a stop light will be installed at the top of Ecossais and auto-route 55.

C'ville man killed in collision

ST-ALPHONSE DE GRANBY (JM) — Jean-Marie Goyette was declared dead at the Granby Medical Centre Thursday evening following a head-on collision on route 139 near the Yamaska River.

Goyette, a Cowansville businessman, was driving south toward Cowansville when the collision occurred. The driver of the second car, Yvan Bricault, age unknown, of Farnham, was not injured, although police said both cars were write-offs.

Granby PPF are conducting the investigation into the accident, which may have involved a third vehicle, and the results will be turned over to

District of Bedford coroner Suzanne Mireault who will determine whether an inquest will be held.

Ego

Considering the almost inhuman demands placed upon the leader of the most powerful country in the western world, it is difficult to conceive why anyone would want to be president of the United States. Yet — as Stanley Knowles noted about the position of MP — there never seems to be a shortage of candidates.

It is not surprising then to find that a brief analysis of those individuals who have possessed this power in the past would seem to indicate only one common thread. Ego.

To believe that one possesses the requisite talents and intelligence to adequately guide the fate of 250 million people must surely take a faith in oneself of colossal proportion.

No where is this more clearly demonstrated than in the present leader of the United States — Ronald Reagan. Mr. Reagan is no specialist in economics. His grasp of world history has repeatedly proven to be barely adequate and his past experience — with the exception of a brief term as governor of California — would seem to have offered no real background for the job he has taken on.

The 'ego' factor has also raised its fascinating head in the case of Senator Gary Hart who hopes to win the Democratic presidential nomination later this year. Unlike Reagan, Hart does have considerable national experience as both a politician and an organizer. Once again however, he lacks any particular expertise that would enable him to govern wisely or with insight into the many problems facing the nation.

In Hart's case, belief in himself — a belief unduly fostered by the national news media — has, it would appear, succeeded in divorcing him from reality. Trailing Walter Mondale in committed convention delegates by a two to one margin, Gary Hart incredibly called on Mondale to demonstrate "that he represents the majority of this party" — as if the two to one lead was not sufficient evidence.

To compound the absurdity, Hart told members of the press that "The issue is not who wins states but who wins delegates." Which is exactly what Mondale supporters have been saying since Hart swept the New England states and still found himself behind in the delegate race.

Having ultimate faith in his own ability is probably necessary if Gary Hart wants to run the world but when belief in himself isolates Hart so easily from reality we should all be worried.

Brush Uncle Max off home plate

Hmmmm. Can it be that there's an idea here applicable to Canada?

From Liverpool comes word that fanatical soccer fans are making provision for their ashes to be buried on the playing field they loved so much.

"We will inter your ashes on the pitch if requested," says Bert Johnson, stadium manager at Anfield, home of the champion Liverpool Football Club. There is no mention of charge.

So far, some 750 such requests have been honored. No sooner was the word out than the telephone rang in the special-projects office of a certain Canadian baseball team.

"My name is Smithwick and my husband has just passed beyond."

"I'm terribly sorry."

"I'm not surprised. Six months out of every year you saw more of him than I did."

"What may we do for you, Widow Smithwick?"

"I would like to have his ashes spaded in somewhere on the field. Along the first-base line, if possible. He would have liked that."

"I'm sure he would have, madam, but I'm afraid it is not possible."

"Why not?"

"Ours is artificial turf. Anyone attempting to dig through that stuff would bounce into centre field on one hop."

"What about that little hill of dirt in the middle, then?"

"You mean the pitcher's mound?"

"Whatever."

HILL DISPOSED OF

"Not feasible. We dispose of that little hill come football season. Football players detest running uphill."

The widow was not to be denied.

"One of the base positions, then? Perhaps home plate? What do you charge?"

"Charge, madam? Why, I don't know — I'll have to get back to you..."

It is with delight that the special-projects office connects with the general manager.

"Boss? I've just had the most magnificent idea for a new concession. I mean, we're already milking the beer concession — and the parking concession is carrying everything the traffic will bear..."

"Get to the point."

"Graves."

"Graves?"

"Think of the possibilities, boss. Ashes interred at home, first, second and third. We could institute a sliding scale of rates."

The GM was a tad dubious.

"We'd have to touch base with the players' association — to say nothing of the officials... Can you imagine the consternation should the ump bend over and brush somebody's Uncle Max off home plate? And who wouldn't hesitate to steal second if he thought he might accidentally disinter someone's Cousin Charley with his slide?"

"Sound idea, but it needs a little work."

There was gloom in the special-projects office. Do you suppose they had all these problems in Liverpool?

Pioneering 'cures' haunt ghost of Ewan Cameron

By Dennis Bueckert

MONTREAL (CP) — At the time of his death in 1967, Dr. Ewan Cameron was one of the most widely-respected psychiatrists in the world. Today, his career is the subject of bitter debate and million-dollar lawsuits.

Director of Montreal's Allan Memorial psychiatric hospital for 21 years, he openly experimented on his patients, subjecting them to sensory deprivation, electroshock, LSD and chemical "sleep" for up to 65 days.

Cameron, who described his unorthodox treatments in more than 130 candid essays in leading scholarly journals, aroused little public criticism during his lifetime and the Allan received substantial Canadian government funding.

When it was later revealed that he was funded by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, nine of his ex-patients sued, alleging they had been used as guinea pigs to test methods of interrogation, behavior control and brainwashing. So far, only Velma Orlikov, wife of New Democratic MP David Orlikov, has won her case — a $50,000 out-of-court settlement.

Even today, Cameron has his supporters. Doctors L.D. Goldman and K. Arvanitakis wrote in the Canadian Journal of Psychiatry that he pioneered the concept of the day hospital, where only voluntary patients are admitted and where they are not treated as "wild beasts who need to be caged."

IMPROVED PATIENTS

Dr. Brian Robertson, current director of the Allan, denies Cameron's theory of "psychic driving" had anything to do with brainwashing because "Dr. Cameron's intention was that the patient's condition be improved."

Both Robertson and Dr. James Farquhar, a staff psychiatrist at the Allan, contend there was "no doubt that Dr. Cameron and those who worked with him, informed their patients of the nature of their treatment..."

Cameron considered traditional psychotherapy as time-consuming and ineffective. After numerous experiments, he concluded that "psychic driving," or repetition, was "an exceedingly (more) powerful tool."

In ordinary psychoanalysis, he explained, "the patient tends to move away quite rapidly from a painful area. By a series of often quite subtle moves, he talks himself out of a particular topic."

"In the (psychic) driving situation, however, he is unable to do so — as the endless repetition... confines him to continuous... concepts." In other words, the patient was captive to the treatment being administered to him by the psychiatrist.

It was on a "hot and sticky" day in Montreal when Cameron discovered the principle of "psychic driving," he wrote in an article titled Adventures With Repetition: The Search for its Possibilities.

"The patient was a blonde and sultry girl from Bermuda whom I roundly suspected of incestuous... feelings for her father." Eventually, she hinted at this, but would not come out and say it.

"The recorder was on and with great satisfaction, I played it back to her." Still, she would not confirm Cameron's suspicions. He ran the tape rapidly back and forth, playing the same few sentences.

Finally, she angrily jumped from the couch, fled, and was "retrieved with some difficulty" by Cameron. By her actions, he wrote, she confirmed his contention and was ready to start dealing with her real problems.

Cameron gave another example of a statement he used in the "psychic driving" of a patient named Madeleine. His statement to her was: "You let your mother and father treat you like a child..."

"Now that you have two children (of your own), you don't seem to be able to manage them and keep a good relationship with your husband. You are drifting apart. You don't go out together. You have not been able to keep him interested sexually..."

The statement was repeated 16 hours a day for a week or more. Then, it was replaced by a "positive" cue.

When this procedure failed to produce desired changes in behavior, Cameron concluded his patient was shielding herself from the effects of repetition, and embarked on a stubborn effort to "penetrate" her defence mechanisms.

"Psychic driving" took place while the patient was in an induced deep "chemical sleep." While awake, the patient was under the influence of hallucinogens.

Other times, patients were "driven" under hypnosis or after electroshock. When Cameron did not succeed, he moved on to "depatterning," or powerful shock treatments — as many as 50 or 60 per patient — meant to produce "complete amnesia."

Cameron theorized the patient would later recover "healthy" memories, but not his or her schizophrenic symptoms. Thus, "the damaged areas of the personality are put out of operation and the patient is able to get along... much in the same way one can get along on two thirds of one's liver." But even then, Cameron could not explain how the memory loss caused by depatterning could be limited to only those tendencies considered undesirable. He admitted that often after treatment, the unwanted symptoms were "apt to show themselves again."

Some of his patients confirmed this, alleging in their lawsuit that they never recovered memories of large portions of their lives after undergoing such treatment.

Mounties tried to sell lawyer's friend cocaine

WINNIPEG (CP) — Police undercover agents are like human bugs who will go to almost any length to entrap and arrest people for petty crimes, says a Winnipeg lawyer who wants the practice formally reviewed.

D'Arcy McCaffrey called for a judicial review of such agents after he defended Winnipeg lawyer Sheldon Pinx on a simple-possession drug charge stemming from an operation in which Pinx was nabbed by an undercover RCMP officer he'd befriended.

Pinx, who frequently defends people facing drug charges, was ultimately given an absolute discharge by a judge who said the lawyer as a first-time offender should be dealt with no more harshly than any other citizen.

"These guys are like human bugs," McCaffrey said of the undercover agents in an interview after the judge's ruling on Thursday. "They're even more dangerous than those electronic surveillance (devices)."

"They dress up, they practise lying and deceiving and they move around in society."

McCaffrey said in Pinx's case, the undercover cop spent several weeks befriending the 36-year-old lawyer, his family and a family friend, Susan Stern. Pinx and Stern were arrested and charged with possession after less than a gram of hashish was produced in Pinx's home as the lawyer and his RCMP "buddy" were about to go off to a hockey game together.

RECORD IS CLEAN

The case wound up in court this week, with Pinx pleading guilty and getting the absolute discharge which means his record remains clear.

Stern received a one-month conditional discharge, and if she stays out of trouble for a month this discharge also becomes absolute.

"Sheldon Pinx was befriended, had some nice dinners with the fellow, takes him to hockey games and here's the guy sitting there waiting for him to make a mistake," said McCaffrey.

Stern's lawyer, David Margolis, said the undercover officer also dated Stern, and the Winnipeg Free Press quotes unnamed sources as saying the agent tried to persuade her to buy cocaine.

Margolis said he thinks undercover officers should be forced to use greater discretion, adding the officer in this case should have stayed away from Pinx and Stern once he realized they weren't worth investigating.

"I can't approve of his approach of seeking out basically innocent people and then trying to draw them into a situation."

McCaffrey said the agent, who posed as a wealthy marketing man from Eastern Canada, met Pinx through one of the lawyer's clients.

Throughout the operation, McCaffrey said Pinx was taken to fine restaurants and several Winnipeg Jets hockey games, with the government-financed agent always picking up the tab.

OFFERS JOINT

Crown prosecutor Peter Kremer said the undercover officer and Pinx were preparing to go to a game when Stern offered the men a hashish cigarette or joint. Both Pinx and Stern took some puffs from the cigarette but the undercover officer did not, Kremer said.

Pinx later passed the drug to the officer to take to the game, and that led to the possession charge.

"It's a very depressing thing to think that there are a number of people running around out there in suits and ties with government money buying drinks and befriending us with the hope, I suppose, of entrapping us," McCaffrey said.

However, Staff Sgt. Cliff Tessier of the RCMP's Winnipeg drug squad said undercover operations are necessary to enforce drug laws.

Tessier said each case is launched because the RCMP have reason to believe they will catch a major drug dealer and he said all undercover operators are required to follow certain rules.

Peckford's gamble: No payoff for the losers

By Warren Caragata

OTTAWA (CP) — If wishes were horses, then beggars would ride. If wishes were horses, then Newfoundland would be Alberta.

Under Premier Brian Peckford, Canada's newest province has been engaged in a long and lonesome battle to win control over resources it views as its own.

The riches of the offshore oil fields and the Churchill Falls power development could spell an end to the province's dependency on Ottawa for the money it needs to stay afloat. In unemployment insurance benefits and equalization payments alone, the federal government gives Newfoundland about $1 billion a year.

But in March, the judges of the Supreme Court of Canada ruled that Ottawa, not Newfoundland, has the right to direct development of the offshore, where 1.5-billion barrels of oil lie under the Grand Banks awaiting development.

And on Thursday, Newfoundland went 0 for 2 when the high court said the province had to abide by a contract with Hydro-Quebec that gives the utility the lion's share of the hydro power and the lion's share of the profits from the Churchill Falls hydro-electric works in the Labrador hinterland.

The two decisions effectively closed Newfoundland's legal options and diminished its clout should bargaining resume.

Consequently, Newfoundland now is forced to rely on the charity of other governments to rescue it from a legacy of misfortune.

But federal Employment Minister John

Roberts, a contender for the Liberal leadership, says Newfoundland is largely the author of its own misfortunes, that it preferred to pursue unilateral avenues to win control of its resources rather than negotiations with Ottawa over the offshore and with Quebec over Churchill Falls.

"I think it's incumbent on the Newfoundland government to show more good sense and moderation in its dealings and to work out reasonable deals where reasonable deals can be done," Roberts said following the Churchill Falls decision.

External Relations Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said Peckford is a gambler.

"He takes his gamble and sometimes, presumably, he loses and in this, as in the previous instance on the continental shelf, he lost."

Except that Peckford was gambling with the birthright of Newfoundlanders and the card hands he held were probably not all that good.

Leo Barry was energy minister in Peckford's Conservative cabinet when the government decided to try its takeover of Churchill Falls. Now a born-again Liberal, Barry says he warned Peckford the move was a major gamble.

If Newfoundland's legal position on Churchill Falls was weak, its position on offshore ownership was weaker, especially given that the Supreme Court had already ruled the federal government owned the British Columbia continental margin. It was certainly no surprise in Ottawa on that day in March when the offshore verdict came in.

A senior Newfoundland government official said Newfoundlanders have developed what almost amounts to resignation to their fate that things will not go well.

After all, he said, "We haven't had too much good news in 450 years."

It's enough sometimes to engender sympathy even among the antagonists Newfoundland has faced. "It's a bit sad for our friends in Newfoundland," Quebec Premier René Lévesque said in reaction to the Churchill decision.

POSITION WEAKENED

Newfoundland's legal position on the offshore was weakened somewhat by the fact that while it remained an independent dominion, it never got around to staking a claim to the continental margin. Newfoundland's independence ended in 1934 when, in an attempt to stave off bankruptcy, it agreed to put its affairs in the hands of a British trustee.

In the late 1950s and early 1960s, then-premier Joey Smallwood was anxiously looking for investors to help Newfoundland harness the Upper Churchill.

Smallwood turned to Hydro-Quebec, which agreed to help build and finance the development and take most of the power.

In 1969, the long-term contract with Hydro-Quebec that provided for no price increases over its 65-year term might have looked good. It was, after all, in the days before the world had heard of OPEC.

In retrospect, with Hydro-Quebec earning about $800 million a year and Newfoundland earning about $8 million, it looks awful.

"In Newfoundland, when we look out our window, we see water," the senior official said. "That is where we make our livelihood."

But now, when Newfoundlanders look out their window, all they see is red. The waters of the continental shelf are controlled by Ottawa, the offshore fishery is controlled by Ottawa, the waters of the Upper Churchill are effectively controlled by Quebec.

What Newfoundland wants is a constitutional amendment that would yield it the offshore, in much the same way that the Prairie provinces received control over natural resources from the federal government.

Newfoundland already has the same rights over its natural resources as Alberta — resources on land. British Columbia has the same rights over its offshore as Newfoundland — none.

But, the official said, Newfoundland's case is different. "Water is to Newfoundland what the Prairies are to westerners. We're a coastal province and our resources are under the water."

"If you took the potash, the oil and gas, the land from Saskatchewan, how would you expect the people of Saskatchewan to be full citizens?"

The question now is whether Peckford's gambles have left Newfoundland any bargaining chips with which to redress its grievances.

And equally, whether the Churchill defeat will turn resignation to anger. Peckford says his faith in Confederation is unshaken but he warns that separatist sentiment might swell like the incoming tide against a rocky coast.

Victoriaville Holstein show attracts hundreds to see best of breed

By Claudia Villemare

VICTORIAVILLE — Nearly 500 head of Québec's finest Holsteins shown by 196 exhibitors turned out last Wednesday to break all previous records for both quantity and quality at the annual Québec Holstein Spring Exhibition.

The exhibition which draws from every corner of the province is a sort of classic coming-out ritual for new exhibitors. Breeders feel that placing anywhere in the top twenty or even being allowed to stay in the show ring for the class is like a re-evaluation of their herd, bringing their personal herd name into the eye of a public that comes from every province, several states in the U.S. and many countries.

"This is by the far the best show we've had here so far," provincial president of the Québec Holstein Breeders Association Leo Jacob commented during the judging. "We have seen the greatest strides taken in quality appearing in the ring this year, and nothing could be nicer when it happens during our 100th anniversary celebrations."

Jacob, a breeder from Cap Santé also complimented the judging which was made more difficult by the great number of entries in each class. "First of all there's no finer judge of Holsteins in Québec than John Beerwort and he has managed nearly five hundred head of top quality cattle with speed and finesse," Jacob added.

The spring classic brings people representing clubs and associations from across Canada. Roy Snyder, secretary of the Canadian Association of Purebred Cattle Breeders, in town for the Association's annual meeting, spoke of the impact artificial insemination has had on quality improvement both in type and production.

"Holsteins are by far the most popular breed of dairy animal, claiming 90 per cent of the total dairy population," he said. "Artificial insemination has allowed the small family farm to upgrade its herd constantly by making the best possible sires available. The proof is in front of us today as these Québec Holsteins being shown here will walk confidently into show rings across Canada and the U.S."

EXPORT THOUSANDS

"We exported nearly 25,000 animals from Québec alone last year," President Jacobs declared. "and even though payment for milk will probably be based on protein content rather than fat, the dairy producer will not be affected much and export to countries where this system is already in use will be much easier."

Showing at this type of sale is serious business. Just being there is a compliment to a breeder and his herd. But when the last class is placed and the final go-round for the championship starts, in a crowded arena, one could here a pin drop. Milk production potential and excellence in Holstein type are the key points for this class which brings together the first and second place winners in each milking age group from 2 year old to mature cow. This event is like skimming the whipping cream from the cream, and the honor of the red, white and blue ribbon lives on from generation to generation in both the cow family and the exhibitor's family.

Of course, a junior champion must be chosen first and this award went to Houdale Tempo Chanel owned by Ferme Houde et Fils, Bromptonville. Reserve ribbon won by Arwijk Mark Antonelle is the property of Arnold Van Wijk of St. Valentin.

But, by far the big winner of the day was the Tourigny family of Victoriaville. Winners of the Grand Champion Female award, they also took home both the Premier Breeder and Premier Exhibitor banners. Antonio Tourigny and his family are well known in showings across the province and Canada and are a fine example of family farming at its best.

A rare sight: When every inch of space of an arena floor is filled with animals whose value can run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The 3 B Farm, Cowansville gave the Tourigny animals a run for their money as well, placing first in two classes and winning the Reserve Champion Female. This farm is relatively new to the ring, with just a few years of exhibiting under their belts. Excellent quality in this herd as well gave the judge a difficult time.

The scene of this affair, the Victoriaville coliseum brought hundreds of townfolk out for the show. Classes of over 65 head filled the ring completely, and even the uninitiated could marvel at the scene of a hockey arena literally filled with black and white cattle, handlers dressed in white and all the color that is part and parcel of this type of affair.

Pierre Leonard, provincial secretary of the Holstein Club, claimed the show a great success, his only comment being "we couldn't have asked for more."

First place winner in the five-year-old class, and later Grand Champion of the show, Deslacs Johanna Berthe, owned by Ferme des Lacs, Antonio Tourigny and Sons, Victoriaville.

Japan's automakers to vote for Brian Mulroney

OTTAWA (CP) — Japanese auto dealers are more optimistic they can win their battle to have import quotas dropped if the Progressive Conservatives win the next federal election.

Representatives of the Canadian Association of Japanese Automobile Dealers put their pitch to several Tory MPs earlier this week, arguing that restrictions discriminate unfairly against the Japanese, risk retaliation and are unpopular with lightly better than half the population.

They also maintained that the quotas, which restricted imports to 153,000 cars in the year ending March 31 and are currently being renegotiated, have made "second-class citizens" out of ordinary Canadians who need the price and maintenance advantages of Japanese cars.

"By the response that we got, it would appear to us that we would fare better under a Conservative government," association president Robert Attrell told reporters Thursday.

But he stopped short of claiming victory, admitting that while the MPs, including Conservative industry critic Michael Wilson, gave the association a sympathetic hearing, they made no promises.

On the other hand, Attrell and other members of the association — all sporting colorful buttons bearing the slogan Free Trade Makes Jobs for Canadians — told a news conference they have had virtually no response to their appeals from the seven Liberal leadership candidates.

Letters to the candidates asking them to state their position on the import issue drew a response from only one — John Turner.

"He put both feet on both sides of the fence," Attrell said, adding that the association is trying to arrange meetings with each of the candidates.

The association later refused to release Turner's response, although Bill Cannell, a vice-president, said the former Liberal cabinet minister indicated it is an issue which requires further study.

Conservative MPs attending the Wednesday session with association representatives could not be reached for comment.

At the heart of the dealers' stepped-up campaign is a recently released national survey, commissioned by the association, which indicated 52 per cent of Canadians believe restrictions are unfair to people selling and servicing Japanese cars.

The telephone survey, conducted by CRT Telephone Interviewing Systems of Toronto, contacted 1,070 heads of households across the country.

The survey also showed 48 per cent believe restrictions should be removed or relaxed, while 41 per cent thought Japanese cars are being used as a "scapegoat" so the North American industry can record higher profits.

Cannell said the association knows that both the "Liberals and Conservatives are only interested in winning votes" in an expected election year and the only way to bring either party on side is to prove a majority of Canadians oppose the quotas.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers:

An 18-year-old relative died recently of a gunshot wound. He didn't die instantly but survived several hours. In the hospital, his parents were approached about donating his kidneys. They agreed to do so. Later they received a bill for $7,500 for the removal of those organs.

For many years I have carried a donor card because you have encouraged your readers to make this final contribution to a fellow human. After this experience I'm considering tearing my card up. I don't want to burden my children with a $7,500 debt.

I have attempted to discuss this matter with the hospital personnel but can get no clear answers. You are my one reliable source. Please help me understand this.

I'm signing my name and address but ask that you not use it in the column.

Withheld On Request

Dear Friend:

I have tried repeatedly to reach you by telephone. No answer. I have also written a letter but received no response.

Because for years I have been urging my readers to send for donor cards, I feel a responsibility to get to the bottom of this. I am just as eager as you to learn why the family was presented with that bill for $7,500. I consulted with some of the most distinguished people in the field. This is what they told me:

Mr. John P. Merrill of Harvard Medical School, member of the team that performed the first successful kidney transplant in 1954, said, "I'll check with Dr. Charles B. Carpenter, who heads the tissue typing laboratory of the Northeastern Organ Bank, and get back to you." Within the hour, Dr. Merrill called to say, "No hospital that we know of charges the patient's family for removing organs to be used in transplantation. In this case, perhaps the surgeon performed a complicated procedure in an effort to save the boy's life. The bill may have been the fee for that operation."

"Under ordinary circumstances, let's assume the patient is an accident victim and declared brain-dead. If the family gives permission, the organs are harvested and the bill goes to the hospital. The hospital works it out with Uncle Sam, who reimburses the hospital through Medicare."

Dr. John Najarian, Chairman of the Department of Surgery, University of Minnesota Medical School, said, "In Minnesota the donor's family is never charged for the harvesting of organs, nor should they be charged anywhere else. The government spends $2 billion a year to support this program through Medicare." (The government, folks, is you and me. The $2 billion comes out of our taxes.)

Dr. Chase Peterson, president of the University of Utah, Salt Lake City, and coordinator of the Barney Clark artificial heart project, said, "There are two categories of expense: (1) hospital care, life-support systems and medical care, for which someone must be responsible, and (2) surgery for harvesting organs, for which there is no charge."

You now have the facts, my friend. If you want Dr. Peterson to contact the hospital and pursue the matter, he has graciously offered to do so. I await your response.

Dear Ann Landers:

I am a 16-year-old boy who will be getting a driver's license in a few weeks. My parents have been on my case about reckless teenage drivers every since I can remember. Somebody ought to set the record straight.

I don't do dope and I hate booze. Even a beer makes me sick. Nobody in my crowd has ever had a serious accident, but several of our grandparents have been in wrecks. I believe it's the old gaffers who are the biggest hazards on the road, especially at night.

A safety expert who spoke at school last year pointed out that driving too slow can be just as dangerous as driving too fast. This is what the old folks do.

How about printing some facts to clear up the myths, Ann?

John In Evansville

Dear John:

If it's facts you want, here they are: According to the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, nearly 80 per cent of the fatal crashes between 9 p.m. and 5 a.m. involve teenage male drivers. Teenage girls are involved in 48 per cent as many fatal accidents as teenage boys.

While it is true that some older drivers cause accidents because they drive too slowly, the Geritol set has a much better record on the streets and highways than teenagers.

Dear Ann Landers:

This question certainly is not of earthshaking importance, but I'll bet a lot of people would like to know the answer.

Dental hygienists say we should brush our teeth after each meal. Is it considered good manners to do this in public restrooms, stores, offices, in schools, airports and on planes?

Pearly White In Bakersfield, Calif.

Dear Pearly:

I carry a folding toothbrush with me at all times and brush after each meal — wherever I can find a sink. I always clean the bowl thoroughly after I've finished. This is a must.

CACSW study warns of women's financial slide

OTTAWA (CP) — Without political will and female determination, women will continue to be the financial losers in the unequal partnership of marriage, a study by the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women says.

The report, released late last week, notes that "although it is true that marriage once provided women with economic security, that proposition is no longer valid."

Women are "definitely unequal within marriage and the family but the means exist to correct the situation," says the study, written by Ottawa lawyer Louise Dulude.

"All that is needed is a little political will and a great deal of female determination," says the report, which will be sent to governments and women's organizations.

In its 71-page study, the council, appointed by the federal government to advise it on issues affecting women, predicts marriage as an institution will not disappear but the many women unhappy with the current situation will force it to undergo significant changes.

Independent young women are being imposed to restrictions imposed by married life and they're letting their husbands and governments know that if the situation does not improve, they "might simply decide not to have children any more," the study warns.

Among other things, those women are tired of working "double days for half the pay."

STILL UNWILLING

"Contrary to popular belief, most husbands and fathers are still unwilling to share domestic and child care tasks with their wives."

Research has shown men work on average 55 hours a week inside and outside the house, compared with 63 hours for women. This figure increases by two to three hours a week for each young child the woman has in the home.

While young girls were traditionally encouraged by their parents, religion or other social pressures to some day tie the knot, they "may become less enthusiastic about marriage and motherhood as they become better informed about the risks these institutions involve."

The study cites National Council of Welfare figures which estimate that although more than 90 per cent of women marry, three-quarters of them will eventually be forced to look after their own and their children's needs.

Only five per cent of all ex-wives and 18 per cent of those with young children are awarded alimony payments and only about one-third of the ordered amounts are paid on time and in full, the report says.

But studies have shown that while marriage breakdown usually means "financial disaster" for women, it frequently gives the ex-husband a substantial increase in living standard.

In her report, Dulude analyses existing laws and customs governing marriage and divorce and gives opinions on their effectiveness or fairness.

Border villages prepare to kick off annual Red Cross campaign Wed.

By Ivy Hatch

The annual Canadian Red Cross campaign will kick off here in the border villages on May 9 under the chairmanship of President Denis Parent and his committee of Maxime Doyon and Douglas Putney.

This year the Red Cross is observing its 75th anniversary and it is hoped the campaign will meet and go over its objective. History tells us that here in Canada the Red Cross flag first flew its cross of red on white in 1885 but it was not until 1909 that the Parliament of Canada passed a law permitting establishment of a Red Cross branch here.

Since then the Red Cross had been outstanding in volunteer work during two Great World Wars, depression, good and bad times. They are "Johnny on the spot" in times of disaster be it large or small, and in world countries.

Here at the border volunteers work for the campaigns, the blood clinics, they have a sick loan room and each year hospital beds, crutches, walking canes, wheel chairs and many more items are loaned out so that people can have home care assistance.

If there is a fire in the area they are with the fire victims offering immediate assistance in the form of emergency food, blankets, and purchase clothing. Although through the generosity of local people we have been able to clothe many from the clothing pool, presently from the Christ Anglican Church Thrift Shop and no charge to the Red Cross or the victims in need.

Many people over the years have given thousands of hours volunteering and this applies to border people. During World War One the good ladies of the communities raised funds by having a tea room operating in the warm weather months on the Plain, their hands were always busy during both great wars with knitting needles and sewing machine. Unfortunately some of these items in the First World War that went overseas got into the wrong hands and soldiers were asked payment. This was never the intention of the Red Cross but as the old saying goes, "There are always bad apples in a barrel!"

The youngsters are taught Red Cross Water Safety and what to do in emergencies. These are only a few Red Cross functions.

The Chapters work among refugees and the underprivileged. To keep up this work, a great deal of which is done on a voluntary basis money is needed and it is hoped the people here at the Boundary Villages of Rock Island, Stanstead, Beebe Plain, Ayer's Cliff and the Municipalities of Ogden, Stanstead East, Township of Stanstead will be as generous in donations as in the past and if anyone has any spare time in the rural areas the committee would appreciate assistance of volunteer canvassers. Just phone Denis, Maxime or Douglas.

You need the Red Cross and the Red Cross needs you, be a volunteer there is great satisfaction in this type of work just knowing some one in trouble has been given a helping hand.

Save your life... and those you love

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Young spent the weekend in Enfield, Conn. where they attended a wedding on Saturday.

Obituary

MRS. ROBERT KERR

Formerly of Kingsbury, Quebec

The death of Mrs. Irene Kerr occurred suddenly at the Sherbrooke Hospital on April 18, 1984, at the age of 95.

Mrs. Kerr had been hospitalized for only nine days after falling and suffering a broken hip. She had undergone successful surgery but succumbed two days later of a heart attack.

Irene Alice Wilson was born in Montreal on August 22, 1888, daughter of the late George Wilson and his wife the late Priscilla Jones. She received her education in Montreal and worked in the Bank of Commerce for several years.

While in Montreal she attended the Baptist Church and professed her salvation and was baptized at the age of seventeen.

In June 1923 she married Robert Stanley Kerr who had purchased the Arthur Crack farm and there she started her married life as the wife of a farmer. Of this union one son was born.

During her years in Kingsbury, she attended the United Church and was a choir member for many years. She was a long-time member of the Women's Missionary Society, Women's Auxiliary and a member for over 50 years of the Melbourne Ridge WI from which she received her 50-year pin.

She and her husband spent many years on the farm, when they decided to sell their animals and spend the winter months with Mr. Kerr's sister in Melbourne, returning to their home on the farm for the summer months.

After her husband passed away she continued to spend the summers in Kingsbury but returning to Melbourne for the winter months.

About six years ago, due to her advancing years, she sold the farm and spent the next two or three years in Melbourne with her sister-in-law. She attended Chalmers United Church in Richmond.

Four years ago she became a resident of the Wales Home and was there when she fell and fractured her hip.

She is survived by a son John Wilson Kerr and wife Stella of Fredericton, N.B., a granddaughter Karen Kerr of Thunder Bay, Ontario, a sister Katie Wilson of Montreal, her nephew Angus Smyth and wife Trudy, her great-niece Kimberly Davidman and husband Michael and children of Montreal, also her great-nephew Bill Smyth, wife and family of Edmonton, Alberta. She also leaves four nieces, Jean Brodeur, Margaret Kerr, Marion Calderwood, Betty Sponaule and a nephew James Kerr, all by marriage.

She was predeceased by her husband Robert, father, George Wilson, mother, Priscilla Jones Wilson, sisters Lily Smyth and Harriet MacGillivray and her brother George Wilson.

Her remains rested at the J.H. Fleury Funeral Home, Adam St., Richmond, where many friends and neighbours visited and offered their sympathy.

The funeral service was held at Chalmers United Church, Richmond, on Saturday, April 21 at 3:30 p.m., Reverend Peter Hartgerink officiating. Two hymns, favorites of the deceased were sung. The Old Rugged Cross and Nearer My God to Thee.

The ladies of the Melbourne Ridge Institute formed a guard of honour at the church.

After the service she was taken to her final resting place in St. Andrew's Cemetery in Melbourne and was laid to rest beside her husband Robert.

The bearers were her nephew James Kerr, Sherbrooke, Ian McMorine and Elmer Crack, Richmond, Gordon Irwin, Kingsbury, Tommy Gilchrist and Walter Arnott, Melbourne, all five former neighbours and friends of the deceased.

Those attending from a distance were her niece, Jean Brodeur, nephew James Kerr and wife Eileen and Marcel Grenier, all of Sherbrooke. Also attending was her great-niece Mrs. Michael Davidman (Kim) and two daughters Katie and Jessica of Montreal, as well as many friends and neighbours from the surrounding district.

She was a kind and loving wife and mother and a good friend and neighbour to all who knew her. She also took a great interest in the young people and they were always welcome in her home. She will be sadly missed, not only by her relatives, but by her many friends she made throughout the years.

The ladies of the Melbourne Ridge Women's Institute served a lovely lunch at the church hall after the funeral which was very much appreciated.

The following poem was written as a tribute to Irene Kerr by her very dear friend Mrs. Jennie Beers of the Wales Home.

Dear Irene you are now at rest
To your heavenly home you were called to rest,
Angels took you by the hand
And led you into a fair land
You were hospitable, kind and true
That is how I remember you
Now in heaven you will take a place
Filled with God's redeeming grace
Old friends who have gone before
Will welcome you at the open door
We miss you in the Home today
Your smiling face and winning way.

"I manage fairly well in choosing my investments, but when it comes to maintaining records, it just becomes too complex!"

For sound portfolio management, complete, precise record-keeping is as important as choosing the right investment.

When records are in order, it is much easier to keep track of a variety of maturity dates, to follow the portfolio's progress, to measure its performance, and to make the necessary decisions.

It is not only important for you to be aware of the status of your portfolio, but you must be able to account for every detail to the taxman! Incidentally, that's why it is important to keep your records intact for several years.

Sherbrooke Trust's portfolio management services can relieve you of all these tedious tasks. When you entrust the management of your portfolio to Sherbrooke Trust, you receive a monthly cash statement and a quarterly statement of assets. You will also receive a statement of any capital gains and losses, and our recommendations for near to year-end transactions aimed at lightening the tax load.

Sherbrooke Trust will prepare all the required tax reports for the Federal and Provincial Departments of revenue. We will also pay your quarterly tax installments and fill the necessary T5 and 3 (TP5) forms for tax purposes. At your request, Sherbrooke Trust will also be happy to prepare your personal income tax declarations.

All these services are offered by Sherbrooke Trust's portfolio management team, who also provide financial analysis, research and management consulting services.

To find out more about our securities safekeeping and portfolio management services, or to make an appointment, contact an adviser at Sherbrooke Trust.

Expos drop twinbill to Braves as relievers, starters, hitters all choke

By Terry Scott

MONTREAL (CP) — When it was over, Mike Jorgensen shook his head and called it "a strange game." It was probably just as well that Montreal Expos manager Bill Virdon, who was ejected for arguing with home-plate umpire Randy Marsh in the first inning, wasn't around to witness its conclusion.

When Virdon left, the Expos, after losing the opener 2-0, trailed 6-0 in the second game of their National League doubleheader Sunday against Atlanta Braves. But they pulled into a 7-6 lead on Tim Raines's two-run home run in the sixth, only to have Jorgensen send Atlanta ahead with a two-run, pinch-hit single in the eighth.

The Braves Dale Murphy, with an inside-the-park-blow, and Montreal's Tim Wallach exchanged solo homers, their sixth, in the ninth, giving the Braves a 9-8 triumph and a doubleheader sweep.

"That should be a lesson to us," said Jorgensen. "We've been struggling all year to score runs, then when we got ahead 6-0 in the first inning, I guess we got a little complacent."

The Braves pounced on Montreal starter David Palmer after his three walks filled the bases in the first. Chris Chambliss and Glenn Hubbard delivered a two-run single and double respectively.

JOINED BY MARSH

As he went to the mound to yank Palmer, Virdon was joined by Marsh, and moments later, Virdon was ejected.

"I told him I thought Palmer had every right to complain that he was being squeezed by some of his (Marsh's) calls," said Virdon, explaining why he received the thumb.

The Braves scored two more runs off Breining, the reliever, but the Expos chipped away at the 6-0 deficit, scoring once in both the first and second.

Run-scoring singles by Tim Raines and Terry Francona, who was 5-for-8 in the doubleheader, made it 6-4 in the third, and Tim Wallach's RBI single closed the gap to one in the fifth.

Raines then launched his third homer of the season off Jeff Dedmon, 1-0, for a 7-6 lead that stood until the Braves tagged reliever Bob James, 1-3, in the eighth.

After Randy Johnson and Alex Trevino singled and doubled respectively with one out, Jorgensen lined an 0-2 fastball into centre field.

INFIELD IN

"The infield was playing in, and I managed to sneak one over it," said

Jorgensen.

Murphy's sixth homer, an inside-the-parker in the ninth, gave Atlanta some breathing room, which was much needed when Wallach greeted reliever Terry Forster with his sixth homer leading off the Expos' ninth.

Steve Bedrosian then relieved and allowed a pinch-hit single by Jim Wohlford before walking Bobby Ramos. But with a 2-2 count on Derral Thomas, the next batter, Trevino, the Atlanta catcher, picked Wohlford off second base.

"It was a mental mistake on my part," said Wohlford. "I thought it was ball four to Thomas."

Bedrosian promptly recorded the next two outs for his fifth save, and second in the doubleheader.

"It's the first time in my career I've ever saved both games," said Bedrosian.

In the first game, Bedrosian relieved Craig McMurtry, 3-3, who yielded six hits over 7 1-3 innings.

The Braves only runs against Charlie Lea, 4-2, came in the fourth inning when Gerald Perry tripled home a run before scoring on Murphy's groundout.

The Expos had two runners in scoring position with only one out in the first against McMurtry, but failed to score.

It's a hit

Over 400 spectators turned up for the home-opener of Sherbrooke's new entry in the Québec major junior box-lacrosse league Sunday. The Asterix, under coach André Bergeron, looked impressive even in defeat as they bowed 15-8 to Montreal Eperviers. "We gave up eight goals while we had the power play," said Asterix president Donald Demers, "because we haven't had time to practise it yet."

Demers says box-lacrosse is a hit in Sherbrooke even though only a single game has been played. "I talked to a lot of fans after the game," he said, "and they all seemed to like it a lot. It's a hit."

Oilers look for revenge against Smith

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Oilers have often said during this playoff year that they didn't care whom they played in the Stanley Cup final. Winning the Cup, they maintained, was all that mattered.

In the back of their minds, however, were memories of last spring's National Hockey League championship series, a four-game sweep by four-time champion New York Islanders.

It was a bitter, frustrating time for the young Edmonton club. The run-and-gun offensive style that made them the most potent scoring machine in NHL history was methodically dismantled by the Islanders' defensive strategy and the brilliance of goaltender Billy Smith.

While becoming the Conn Smythe Trophy winner as the most valuable player in the playoffs, Smith also became probably the most hated player of Edmonton fans.

And he touched off a verbal battle between the clubs.

If the Oiler players didn't care if they met the Islanders this year, the fans certainly did. Revenge would be so sweet.

On Saturday night, the Islanders defeated a stubborn Montreal Canadiens club to advance to the Stanley Cup final for the fifth straight year.

On Sunday, the Oilers, idle since last Tuesday when they completed a four-game sweep of Minnesota North Stars to win the Campbell Conference, began in earnest to prepare for the Islanders in the best-of-seven Cup final beginning Thursday night in Long Island, N.Y.

STRIVE FOR FIVE

In terms of their themes this year, it will be Edmonton's Gun for One Stanley Cup versus New York's Strive for Five, an ambitious drive to equal Montreal's NHL record of five straight Cup victories.

If Gun for One is to succeed, there will have to be many changes from a year ago when the Islanders held Wayne Gretzky scoreless and checked the Oilers' power play into impotency.

What, specifically, will have to change?

"Just about everything," said Gretzky. "When you lose 15 times in a row you have to change." Actually, the Oilers have lost 11 straight games to the Islanders. The last time Edmonton beat New York was Dec. 13, 1981.

"We have to change our power play, our penalty killing, our forechecking. We've got to move the puck out of our own zone with short passes, not by passing long. On the power play, we've got to move the puck quicker. There are little things we have to do."

Last spring the Oilers carried much of the play from zone to zone. But the Islanders did the "little things" that made them champions.

They took away the centre of the ice, forced the Oilers to the boards and then won most of the battles in the corners and along the boards.

This year the Islanders will also have the home-ice advantage because the Wales Conference had the better record in games against the Campbell Conference. The playoff format this year has been changed to a 2-3-2—the first two games in Long Island, then three, if necessary, in Edmonton and, if still needed, two in Long Island.

67's new champs

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Ottawa 67s bounced back from a three-goal deficit to beat Kitchener Rangers 9-7 Sunday and win their first Ontario Hockey League championship since 1977.

The 67s, who won the final series 8-2 on three wins and two ties, now advance to the Memorial Cup tournament starting Saturday in Kitchener. The Rangers will also be in the tournament because they finished first overall in regular-season play, just four points ahead of Ottawa.

Lemieux leads Laval to junior title

MONTREAL (CP) — Mario Lemieux led the Laval Voisins to a stinging 17-1 victory over the Longueuil Chevaliers Sunday night, clinching the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League championship four games to two and propelling the team on to the Memorial Cup Tournament, which begins Saturday in Kitchener, Ont.

Lemieux, expected to be the first junior player selected at next month's NHL entry draft, racked up six goals and two assists in a game that was all over for the demoralized Chevaliers in the first period.

"Six goals?" the six-foot centre asked a reporter after the game. "I thought it was only five. But no matter — the title is more important. We worked for this all year."

The Voisins, who pushed the smaller Longueuil team around at will before 7,939 fans at the Forum, scored five unanswered goals against goaltender Daniel Savoie in the first period, peppering him with 16 shots in the process. Lemieux and his wing Jacques Goyette dominated the play.

Savoie, mercifully, was pulled following the period and replaced with Martin Plante. Savoie returned at 13:33 of the third period, with the score 15-1. The two Chevaliers goaltenders faced 58 shots during the game.

GET TWO EACH

Yves Courteau scored two goals and six assists for the Voisins. Vincent Damphousse, Joe Cerone and Sylvain Boutin each added two goals, with singles from Goyette, Tommy Paradis and Francois Sills. Goyette added five assists.

Santino Pellegrino scored the lone Chevaliers goal.

"I never thought we'd win so easily tonight," said Laval coach Jean Bégin. "But Longueuil was tired emotionally because of the way they lost Friday. Had they won that game, I think they would have won tonight."

Although the QMJHL final began and ended with one-sided games — Laval won the opener 9-3 — two of the remaining four games were decided by one goal. Laval's 3-1 win last Friday wasn't clinched until the last minute of regulation time.

Surprisingly — for many Laval fans at least — Lemieux was not a unanimous choice as the most valuable player in the playoffs. Two journalists voted for Laval goaltender Tony Haladuk. A third selected Longueuil centre Franco Iammatteo, who did his best to cover Lemieux.

Lemieux scored 14 goals and 11 assists in the finals, pushing his season total to 29 goals and 23 assists, for 52 points.

Laval takes home the QMJHL President's Cup for the first time since joining the league 13 years ago.

Laval's opposition in the Memorial Cup Tournament will consist of the Ottawa 67's and Kitchener Rangers, from the Ontario Hockey League, and either the Regina Pats or Kamloops Junior Oilers from the Western Hockey League.

Spanish soccer game marred by brawl

MADRID (Reuter) — About 60 people, including several players, were treated for cuts and bruises after an explosive Spanish Cup soccer final Saturday night in which violence erupted both on and off the field seconds after the final whistle.

Basque side Athletic Bilbao beat Barcelona 1-0 in a tense and scrappy game to clinch the League and Cup double.

But pandemonium broke out when referee Angel Franco Martinez blew for time.

After an opening round of insults, players from both sides exchanged vicious kicks and blows. Fans joined in and cans and bottles rained down from every corner of the ground.

An unsmiling King Juan Carlos, accompanied by Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez and visiting Argentine Foreign Minister Dante Caputo, witnessed the violence.

Barcelona's Argentine striker Diego Maradona, after an uninspiring match performance, had a prominent role in the incidents, head-butting one Bilbao player who approached him and felling another before being attacked by several players.

"It was a pitched battle, nothing more and nothing less," Barcelona vice-president Josep Mussons said.

ACT OF VENGEANCE

Maradona received two stitches in his left leg for a cut caused by a kick. Two Bilbao players also received stitches.

The Argentinian alleged he was kicked during the game by Bilbao defender Andoni Goikoetxea, who was suspended earlier this season for a foul which injured Maradona and put the striker out of action for several months.

Bilbao manager Javier Clemente said: "We've demonstrated two things. First, that we're better than they are and second, that they don't know how to lose."

Barcelona manager Cesar Luis Menotti said the match was a disgrace to soccer but did not comment on the incidents.

"The occasion deserved a better match," he said. "My team came to play football and the other team scored a goal and didn't want to play any more, so no football was played."

A coach accident earlier in the day in which six Barcelona supporters were killed had already cast a shadow over the match. A minute's silence was observed before the start.

After their team's victory, hundreds of jubilant Bilbao supporters celebrated in the streets of Madrid. Police said one was arrested when it was alleged he tried to set fire to a police van.

IMOLA, Italy (AP) — The Toleman Grand Prix race team and Italian tire maker Pirelli have agreed to end their three-year association in Formula One auto racing after Sunday's Grand Prix of San Marino.

In an official statement Toleman said it was "an amicable" parting.

However, the two sides were reported split about a higher financial contribution demanded by Toleman from Pirelli.

WRESTLERS TO TRIAL
WAUKESHA, Wis. (AP) — Two professional wrestlers have been bound over for circuit court trial on charges resulting from a scuffle in which authorities say it required 13 policemen and Waukesha County deputy sheriffs to subdue the pair.

Ken Patera, 40, is charged with two counts of battery to a policeman and a misdemeanor of property damage. Masanori Saito, 40, is charged with three counts of aggravated battery and a count of battery to a policeman.

The defendants, both of Minneapolis, were freed Friday on $7,500 bond each. The two men are to wrestle in a tournament in Japan prior to their July 2 arraignment, the court was told.

Policeman John Dillon said that he and other officers, investigating the breaking of a restaurant window on April 6, went to a nearby motel in search of Patera.

Canadiens pick New York to go all the way in its Drive For Five

By John MacKinnon

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (CP)—The Canadiens slowed them down for a couple of games but once the Islanders got in gear there was no way Montreal was going to stop New York's drive for five.

Paced by Mike Bossy's two goals, New York beat Montreal 4-1 on Saturday night to win the Prince of Wales Conference final 4-2 and advance for a rematch against Edmonton Oilers in the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup final which opens here Thursday.

It was the 19th straight playoff series victory for the Islanders who seek a fifth straight Stanley Cup — something only the Canadiens have accomplished.

The current edition of the Canadiens think they'll do it.

"I think the Islanders will win because right now they are the best hockey team in America," said Canadiens coach Jacques Lemaire. "They're good offensively, defensively and in the net.

The Islanders proved they were better than the Canadiens even though they lost the first two games of the conference final in Montreal. They solved Lemaire's 1-2-2 checking system and gradually turned up the intensity despite a spate of injuries that would stall an ordinary club.

Defencemen Dave Langevin and Stefan Persson and forwards Bob Bourne, Bob Nystrom, Mats Hallin and Pat LaFontaine all missed games with injuries but it didn't seem to matter.

TRIES EVERYTHING

"In this series we tried everything we could to put them on their heels and keep them there but they bounced back," said Montreal captain Bob Gainey, who suffered a dislocated right shoulder during the Quebec series and a separated left one in Game 4 against New York.

"They were just a little better than us and wore us down over each game."

Veteran defenceman Larry Robinson said there was nothing surprising about the Islanders' four-game sweep after falling behind 2-0.

"They were starting the series on the road and we were coming off a very emotional series (against the Nordiques) so we were pretty high," said Robinson. "We came in here (in Game 3) and played badly, lost our composure.

Goals by Clark Gillies and Mike Bossy, his first of two, gave the Islanders a 2-0 first-period lead on Saturday night and rookie Pat Flatley made it 3-0 when he scored his eighth goal of the playoffs 30 seconds into the third period.

Mario Tremblay spoiled Billy Smith's shutout bid by scoring his sixth goal of the playoffs at 2:47 of the third period but Bossy beat rookie goaltender Steve Penney at 15:36 of the period during a New York power play.

New York captain Denis Potvin drew two assists for a playoff career record of 98, surpassing former Canadiens great Jean Beliveau.

The Islanders hope to establish another solid defensive wall in front of goaltender Billy Smith when they meet Edmonton Oilers in the Stanley Cup final starting Tuesday.

United Church Women members hold regular meetings

MELBOURNE (KA) — The April meeting of the Melbourne Unit was held in the Church parlour with 12 members present. The leader, Mrs. Rita Hughes welcomed everyone and opened the meeting with the U.C.W. Purpose. Mrs. H. Dubuc conducted the devotions, starting with a hymn, with Mrs. Hope Reed at the piano. This was followed by a reading titled "One Hour that fills my day" and closed with prayer.

The offering was received by Allison Lynn and Vesta Armstrong and dedicated by Bernice Beattie, and the devotional period was concluded with another Easter hymn - "When I survey the wondrous Cross" and a prayer.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Several notes of thanks were read for sympathy cards and also a note from Mrs. Gertrude Day thanking the members for good wishes received on her 95th birthday recently.

The treasurer's report was read and showed a favorable balance.

Bernice reported that two teapots had been purchased for donation to the Wales Home Auxiliary and eight bibles for the communicants class - six for Richmond and two for Melbourne Ridge to be presented on Easter Sunday. Bernice also noted that there would be a different order of Service for Communion on Easter Sunday and the individual wine glasses would not be used.

Bernice asked Thelma Westman for a report on the U.C.W. Presbyterian annual meeting at Cowansville on April 10, which was attended by several of our members. There was a total attendance of more than 80 at this meeting and a very interesting day was enjoyed. Marion and Peter Hartgerink presented a program on the theme for the day - "The Earth is the Lord's" They illustrated their commentary with appropriate slides and music. The presentation was very well received and appreciated by all the groups. Several ladies from Richmond and Melbourne Ridge presented a short skit in keeping with the theme of the day and Ann Clark was congratulated on being elected President of the Presbyterial for the coming term.

The dates for Summer Event this year are July 6, 7 and 8 at Kemptville, Ontario.

The Evening Unit had a Rummage sale in March and realized about $155.00. At their next meeting on Thursday, May 3 they would be having a video program and other Units are invited to attend this meeting. Our general meeting will be held on Wednesday, May 2 at 1:00 p.m. as this is our visiting day to shut-ins, and a brief business meeting will be held prior to preparing plates of cookies and visiting shut-ins around the vicinity. All Units are requested to supply cookies for this occasion.

We were reminded that the Wales Home Residents Tea and Craft Sale will be held on Saturday, June 9.

Bernice suggested that we have a Summer Tea or Strawberry Social in the near future, but no definite plans were made at this time.

The meeting was then turned over to Diane and Rick Spies who presented a series of beautiful and interesting slides on Zambia with a commentary on their work and experiences while teaching there for a number of years. A question period was held after the slides and many questions and comments were discussed.

Bernice thanked Diane and Rick for presenting this interesting program for us, then tea was served and a social time enjoyed.

BEEBE — The April 10th meeting of Unit Two, U.C.W. was held in the parlour of Wesley United Church, with eleven members attending. Hostess Gladys Chartier, president, called the meeting to order by extending a welcome to all members. The Purpose and Function was repeated in unison. Gladys Chartier, president, called the meeting to order by extending a welcome to all members. The Purpose and Function was repeated in unison. Gladys Chartier also led the devotions. She read an article from the Upper Room booklet with an Easter theme. The Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison.

Corrections were made in the March meeting report.

Della Goodsell was thanked for shopping for articles to be given Mrs. Ross Carson-Hobbs at a baby shower. Mrs. Carson-Hobbs is the wife of the pastor of the Three Steeple.

The sunshine convenor, Arlene Ewan, stated she had sent sympathy, birthday and get-well cards. The ill of the communities were mentioned including Irene Sevigny and Sally Hutchins.

final plans were completed for the Spring tea and sale to be held on May 5 at Wesley United Church, Beebe.

On May 13, Mother's Day, the unit decided to buy flowers to be put in the church and then the flowers will be given to shut-ins and the homes will be given plants. It is felt that double pleasure will be enjoyed by many.

It was mentioned that the unit with all other organizations in the area should take more interest in the welfare of the elderly in homes. Just a short visit occasionally would be a great moral support or other simple ways of adding to their happiness.

Volunteers are needed by the policemen's group. It was suggested that a spokesman be present at these meetings to see what is being done.

The May meeting (the last meeting before the summer recess) is to be a pot-luck supper and white elephant sale. Members of Unit One and Graniteville will be invited guests. Head hostess for this meeting is Alice Rediker.

All were reminded of the Women's Rally held on April 11.

Following adjournment, lunch was served and a time of fellowship enjoyed.

ULVERTON — The U.C.W. held their meeting at the home of Mrs. John Harrison on Thursday, April 19, with five members attending.

Mrs. W. Potts opened the meeting with a poem entitled, "I Am The Light". The motto was repeated in unison. 31 calls were made.

Mrs. F. Smith read the minutes which were approved as read. A paper drive will be held in May. A thank-you was received for a get-well card, also one for a sympathy card.

The offering, plus a donation, is to be sent to Zaire for seeds.

A teapot has been bought for the Wales Home.

Members were asked to bring in good used clothing to the September meeting and Campbell's Soup labels and used stamps to the June meeting.

Three members would go to the Wales

Home to serve tea April 27.

The U.C.W. will attend the A.C.W. meeting at the home of Mrs. Paul Babineau on May 2 to make plans for the June 2 supper to be held in the Ulverton United Church Hall.

The meeting closed and an enjoyable pot luck lunch was served with two members of the A.C.W. joining the U.C.W. members. A service was held with all present taking part. The meeting closed with prayer.

SURROUNDING BEAUTY

There's Beauty all around us,
There's food for thought, as well -
Whether high upon a mountain
Or in snugly-sheltered dell.

Purple shadows cloak the mountain,
Frosty diamonds in the snow,
Crystal beads in sun-struck raindrops,
Ruby richness in fireplace glow.

There's beauty for observant eyes
All around us, day by day -
Beauty, for careful ears that listen
As we travel on life's winding way.

A bird, a song, an old church bell,
Splash of water, in rocky stream -
Children's laughter when they're playing
Beauty, in a half-remembered dream.

Beauty, in a fragrant rose,
In sight and touch and scent,
A think exquisite in itself -
Threefold, it's beauty, innocent.

Beauty in a cherished friendship
A warmth and caring, ever dear,
Knowing someone shares our joy or burden -
Ah yes, there's Beauty, through the years....

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

To an expert, this hand looks like a cinch. It's so easy that if it were played in the last round of the Blue Ribbon Pairs, every declarer would wrap up 12 tricks without lifting an eyebrow.

The key to the whole play is based on the king of hearts lead. Unless you are playing against a real desperado, who may also be slightly drunk, that king lead marks West with the queen.
Now for the whole procedure. Take the heart, draw trumps, cash four diamonds, and on the fourth one chuck your baby club in preparation for the end play. Then lead the jack of hearts. West is in with the queen, but he is also a dead duck. A heart lead will allow a ruff in dummy and a discard of the club queen, while a club lead runs up to South's A-Q.
This hand was played many years ago. Modern bidding would get to the same spade slam, but the opening bid would be two clubs by South. North would respond two diamonds, saying, "I have nothing I want to bid." Then two spades by South, three spades by North, whereupon South would go into the Blackwood routine and reach the same slam.
Why wouldn't a modernist North jump to four spades? Because modernists use that jump to four to show the same hand without the ace of spades.

Mrs. Marguerite Ommerli has returned home after spending two weeks visiting her son Hermann (Mandy) Ommerli and his wife Claire and family in Portage La Prairie, Manitoba. Mrs. Ommerli stopped en route both ways to visit with her daughter, Silvia Ulmann, husband Emil and daughter Nancy, on Nun's Island, Montreal.

A speedy recovery is wished for Mrs. Lillian Wilson at the Stanley Clarks. Mrs. Wilson unfortunately fell, breaking a bone.

Sutton

Mable Boyce
538-2946
Sympathy is extended to the Dennis Ashby family on the death of Mrs. Ashby, a former Sutton resident, who passed away in Mississauga, Ont. Funeral services were held in Verdun, Que., with burial at Sutton. Mrs. Larry Dyer and son David of Pincher Creek, Ont., were called here by the death of the former's mother Mrs. Ashby. David is spending ten days with his grandmother Mrs. Violet Dyer before returning home.

Several from here attended the double shower held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Whitehead, Echo Road, Knowlton in the evening of April 18, for the Woodard sisters, Cathy and Wanda who are both being married, Wanda in May and Cathy in June. The girls received many beautiful and useful gifts for which they thanked everyone. Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Whitehead and daughter. A lovely shower cake made and decorated by Mrs. Whitehead completed the refreshments. Mr. and Mrs. A. Kirby and Mrs. Harold Boyce were afternoon tea guests of Mrs. May Young and family in Mansonville one afternoon recently. Friends of Reg (Junior) Tracey of West Brome will be glad to hear he is home after surgery in the Notre Dame Hospital, Montreal and feeling much better.

Get-well wishes to Mrs. Ellen Rumsby who is recovering from a bout of the flu at her home on Western Ave. Mr. and Mrs. Larry Smith of Ottawa have returned home after visiting his mother Mrs. Annie Smith, Smith Road, Sutton. Get-well wishes to Edgar Lawrence of Sutton Jet, who is at present a patient in the B.M.P. Hospital. Mrs. Madeline Darrah and daughter Janice visited Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cass (Nancy Darrah) and family in Chicago recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Miltimore and family of Ottawa and Mr. and Mrs. D. Miltimore of Brossard were Easter guests of their mother and grandmother Mrs. Edith Miltimore, Academy Street. Sympathy is extended to the Tomuschat family of Mansonville in the death of Rudolf at the B.M.P. Hospital on April 28. Mrs. Myrtle Needham spent Easter Sunday with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Murray Davis in Waterloo, a family gathering enabled her to be with many of her immediate family for Easter Sunday. Recent callers at the Boyce home were Mr. and Mrs. Tony Badham of Mansonville and Miss Cathy Orr of Peterborough, Ont. Funeral service for the late Wallace Aiken was held in Mansonville Baptist Church on Sunday, April 29. Condolence to his sister Kate Newall, his son-in-law Gerard Cabana and other relatives. Word has been received of the death in Montreal of the late Thomas Tubicek, formerly of Tibbitis Hill Road, Knowlton. Funeral service on May 4, St. Ignatius Church, West Broadway, Montreal. Mr. and Mrs. Schuck of England were guests at the Fischl home for the past week, leaving on Monday for a tour of the Gaspé area and other points of interest in Canada and the U.S.A. before returning home.

Elden and Evelyn Judd motored to St. Jacobs, Ontario where they spent a week with Linda, Gerry and Maria Kraak. While there, Easter dinner guests from London, Ont., were Evelyn's friends, Rena Clements and her daughter Debbie. The community is saddened to learn of the death of two long-time residents, Wallace Aiken and Rodolf Tomuschat. Sincere sympathies are extended to the members of both families.

Several interesting proposals for joint ventures may be brought to you this coming year. Their chances for success will depend upon the caliber of persons involved. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try to be unbiased when dealing with persons of whom you're not too fond. Spiteful actions on your part will boomerang. The Matchmaker wheel reveals your compatibility to all signs, as well as showing you to which signs you are best suited romantically. Get yours by mailing $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Tasks you usually handle rather easily could prove difficult today, especially if you're working in conjunction with ineffective aides.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Spending to impress acquaintances is foolish today. Don't rush to pick up the check, if everyone has already agreed to pay for his or her share.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Although your motives are laudable regarding your objectives for today, you must be careful that the tactics you use aren't self-defeating.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be careful today that you don't say things out of anger that you shouldn't. If you do, you could have great difficulty removing your foot from your mouth.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be both prudent and guarded in money matters today, especially if you're doing business with persons in whom you don't have complete faith.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your pride is your Achilles' heel today. Don't treat situations where others only mildly disagree with you as serious affronts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're the type who usually shows an eagerness to help others. Today, uncharacteristically, you could turn your back on those who need you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Beware of tendencies to split hairs today for others, as well as for yourself. This could cause serious complications if something of value is at stake.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) To be effective today, you must be single-minded. If you attempt one thing while your thoughts are on another, you're apt to fail.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're not likely to be an efficient worker today if you have persons peering over your shoulder. Try to do your job free from supervision.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be patient in your financial and commercial affairs today. If you take erratic action to spur things, it could be more detrimental than helpful.
