TALK OF THE TOWNSHIPS

Tagging a fascinating facet of philately

In mid-1962, the post office introduced a new sorting system that went by the name of SEFACAN.

Automatic Segregator — Facer — Cancellor.

These were the three basic parts the equipment was comprised of. Mail was fed through the segregator by conveyor belt and all mail not in letter form or letters to thick to go through the canceller were removed automatically. The letters were then run through the facer-cancellor and an ultra-violet light excited the phosphorescent bars on the stamps enabling the machine to locate the position of the stamp on the envelope, cancel it and stack the mail face up in an orderly fashion.

In preparation for the project, it was necessary to have phosphor bars printed on the vertical edges of stamps. The 1954 Wilding Portrait of the Queen Elizabeth II definitive issue was used. On January 13, 1962, the first issues of tagged stamps were released in Winnipeg, where the SEFACAN equipment was located. The area under the Winnipeg jurisdiction was virtually saturated and these phosphor tagged stamps became known as Winnipeg tags.

I mentioned that the tagging was applied to the vertical edge of a stamp. There was an exception. The four-cent denomination of the Wilding definitive had a single bar applied down the center of the stamp. The six-cent denomination was never considered for tagging purposes.

Except for a few dealers, such as Kasimir Bileski of Winnipeg, and the odd collector, little interest was shown in tagged stamps until a person by the name of Ken Rose came on the scene and began writing a column for Canadian Stamp News that was called "Tagging Along". The initial lack of interest was due in part to the expense of an ultra-violet lamp needed to discover the tags and the lack of mail bearing such stamps in Eastern Canada. However, when Rose began reporting the discovery of varieties and explaining fluorescent paper types, the interest soared.

During the period from 1962 to the end of 1966, the only stamps to have phosphor bars applied were definitive and Christmas stamps. The first tagged commemorative stamp was the Centennial of Confederation issue released January 11, 1967. It was three years before another commemorative stamp received Winnipeg tags.

In the meantime, the Centennial definitive issue made its appearance in 1967 and the fun began. Canada Post was experimenting with different inks, papers and fluorescent tags that made the issue a nightmare for philatelists.

In 1972, a new fluorescent tagging was introduced that became known as Ottawa or General Tagging. Unlike the phosphor bars that left an afterglow when the ultra-violet was turned off, the fluorescent tagging showed up immediately under the ultra-violet light but left no afterglow.

By the end of 1972 the phosphor method of tagging was replaced by the fluorescent system and beginning with the January 31, 1973, stamp commemorating Bishop Laval, all Canadian stamps to this day have General Tagging 2 (GT2).

During the transition period from phosphor to fluorescent tagging, Canada Post issued a "Landscape" definitive series. These were the last stamps to receive the Winnipeg tags. They were also among the first stamps to receive the new General Tagging that proved to be migratory and known as OP4. It very much resembles Winnipeg tagging except there's no afterglow. By the end of 1972 a new OP2 variation of the fluorescent tagging was introduced and it made the Landscape definitives the only issue to have been printed using all three varieties of tagging.

By 1985, Ken Rose finally got a handle on the Winnipeg tags and was able to make a chart of all the error types. At a later date, the Landscape series will be reviewed in order to try and explain the tagging and the various fluorescents used in paper. Meanwhile, if you are interested in pursuing this interesting facet of philately, you will definitely need an ultra-violet lamp and to facilitate matters, you should be in possession of Rose's book on tagged errors available from Saskatoon Stamp Centre. The address is P.O. Box 1870, Saskatoon, SK S7K 3S2. With Christmas just around the corner this will make a great gift.

Kay, a Bishop's coed, paints with such exuberance, such pleasure in a line, a shape or a color that the viewer is also cheered. At the exhibition opening on Thursday, November 16, a crowd of people stood around an overheated room staring at the walls — and every last one of them was smiling!

with an "artistic statement" — usually the most pretentious rubbish. Kay's says, typically, that she has no philosophy and paints for the fun of it.

Some time ago, I suggested that a Kay Kinsman watercolor on your wall would save electricity. When I mentioned that to Kay, she got angry, or pretended to (you are never quite sure with her). Now I see where I was wrong. Hanging a Kay Kinsman watercolor on your wall will not only brighten your home but brighten your life.

The gallery is open Thursdays through Sundays 1 to 4:30. Stop by and cheer yourself up.

TALK OF THE TOWNSHIPS

'We're doing just fine, thank you'

Bandsman Barry knocks blues clichés

By Sunil Mahtani

SHERBROOKE — Bluesman Stephen Barry was adamant — he wants to clear up a stereotype that has been plaguing his chosen musical style for quite some time.

"The cliché of the sad blues man is false," Barry said pointedly. "We've met bluesmen from Chicago, from Louisiana, these guys are party guys. They dress well, they smile."

"The image of the down-and-out blues artist playing the blues, paying their dues, it's wrong," said the Montreal native. "We're doing just fine, thank you. We all have a car. If we don't have a girlfriend, we just had one."

Barry is seated with an interviewer in a Sherbrooke café, enjoying lunch and eyeing the girls who waft by. Bassist Barry and guitarist Michael Browne were in town this week to promote the latest album by The Stephen Barry Band, aptly titled Happy Man. Its Eastern Townships launch is Saturday night at Centennial Theatre in Lennoxville.

The two are annoyed with the prevailing image of blues musicians. None of the members of the band, which also includes guitarist Andrew Cowan and drummer John McColgan, fall into the bluesman cliché.

They've married, fathered children, divorced — and are making a living with music. Though Barry, who has two teenaged children, hasn't left Quebec with his band much; he has toured the province from top to bottom and The Stephen Barry Band has found its niche.

After 20 years of honing his craft, Barry is one of the foremost bluesmen in Canada. He has played with legends such as John Lee Hooker, Bo Diddley, Buddy Guy, Big Mama Thornton and Johnnie Johnson.

The band hasn't achieved the wild success of many pop-rock acts, but its third album, Here On The Highway (1994) — recorded live at the Vieux Clocher in Magog — garnered the biggest response.

"We feel upbeat about the whole thing. Here On The Highway paid for itself and paid for this one," said Browne.

"Wouldn't it be funny if this album sold tens of thousands of records," mused Barry. "We'd be called an overnight success by the media."

The album, featuring 15 songs including original Barry compositions as well as blues standards, was recorded in a five-day whirlwind at the end of August at the Ruiter Valley Centre, a retreat in Dunkin, near Mansonville, with Sherbrooke engineer Larry O'Malley at the board.

The band enjoyed recording among the crickets and the cows in the country.

"You're stuck there in this place, you got nothing to do but record this album," explained

Browne. "You're sleeping there. You get up in the morning and you get to work. We were eating and sleeping the album."

In fact, as the tune "Act Like You Love Me" fades out, crickets can be heard in the background.

One hundred takes were recorded of 23 different songs before the final 15 were chosen. The CD was recorded in less than a week and is out just two months later.

"That's the value of 20 years," said Barry proudly. "This band is well-oiled. We don't have off days."

Barry is known for composing non-traditional blues, and his songs on Happy Man are true to form. The title track is an ironic tune about a breakup, and "Winding River" speaks of commitment in a relationship.

"I'm not a tunesmith," Barry said. "I write songs when something bothers me or when there's a need for it. I don't just write about anything or everything."

Even if his lyrics — or those in some traditional blues songs — have a sad touch, Barry said the songs are not meant to wallow in.

"The songs might have sad content but in the music there's a redemption. The whole purpose of music is to make you feel better."

Sideman Browne agreed.

"It's not just about sad things. It's about anything. It's a dance music as well, entertainment music for dancing, for pleasure," he said. "It's just the place where it came from, black people in the South, living through misery, it's going to come out in the songs. But that doesn't exclude the good times."

Stephen Barry... 'The whole purpose of music is to make you feel better.'

Browne, who's been with the band for 11 years, said he's been playing since he was nine.

"That was what I loved to do as a teenager, sit at home and play guitar. By the time I was 19, I realized I could make money doing this, playing the Métro," he said. "I never wanted to grow up and get a job like most people. I still play with Stephen on the street."

Surely these are eccentric bluesmen busking for fun. They're not doing it just for the money, are they?

Barry is quick to respond: "Yes sir, we do it for the money."

The Stephen Barry Band plays Bishop's University's Centennial Theatre on Saturday, November 25, at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are on sale at all Admission outlets and by calling (819) 822-9692.

Quincy Jones' latest one of the best of '95

QUINCY JONES: Q's Jook Joint (Warner)

Quincy Jones' musical mission has been to make it clear that blues, rap, gospel, r&b and jazz are not strict musical forms, but cousins within a family.

His establishment of Vibe magazine reaffirmed his commitment to the hip hop generation, as did 1989's Back On The Block, an album that brought together artists from various musical backgrounds.

Jones always had a flare for the grandiose. Some tracks on Back On The Block were reminiscent of the larger-than-life "We Are The World," making it evident that some songs are just to big for their own good.

Although Q's Jook Joint boasts 51 artists, Jones has learned that packing a song with artists doesn't necessarily translate into more musical pleasure.

Using songs that have become jazz standards, as well as r&b classics, Q's Jook Joint becomes a formula for showcasing the best in contemporary r&b. Due to superior production, careful song selection and some pairings made in musical heaven, the album succeeds from beginning to end.

It's sweet delight to hear Brian McKnight, Rachele Ferrell and Take 6 on James Moody's "Moody's Mood For Love." Having Moody himself end the track with a sax solo is musical euphoria.

Similarly, who would have thought that Queen Latifah, Nancy Wilson and Tone Loc(!) could sound so good on the largely instrumental "Cool Joe, Mean Joe (Killer Joe)."

And as good as the original version of "Stuff Like That" was, the combination of Brandy, Chaka Khan, Ray Charles, Ashford & Simpson and Charlie Wilson may be better.

In fact, any track on this album could be used as a selling point.

Taken as a whole, Jones has finally succeeded in delivering an album that represents his vision of a musical continuum. He's also succeeded in producing one of the best R&B albums of '95.

Gerard Dee

PEBBLES: Straight From My Heart (MCA)

Poor Pebbles has had her share of problems recently: separation from her producer-husband L.A. Reid, and financial difficulties with her protégés-turned-superstars TLC.

Whatever her tribulations, it doesn't seem to have affected her musical energy. Or maybe it's these same problems that have forced a musical maturation of her sound.

There's no "Girlfriend" on this set. In fact, Pebbles has gone the route of other 80s songbirds (Jody Watley, Karen White, etc.) who stormed on to the charts with big beat sounds: she's toned down.

But this ain't no elevator

The Record Spins

music. Rather it's intelligent, adult-oriented contemporary soul. The change in musical direction sounds good on her.

The production here is seamless, a large part of that being due to some very savvy contributors: producers Organized Noize and Sean "Puffy" Combs and r&b outfit Society of Soul.

The results make for some very satisfying musical moments. Midtempo grooves like "One More Try" and "Happy" are irresistible, while "Soul Replacement" and "Long Way To Travel" infuse social commentary without missing a beat.

But Pebbles biggest stumbling block has been that her live shows simply don't live up to their studio potential. Her ability to pull off credible live performances may be crucial to the success of this set since Straight From My Heart doesn't have the feel of a commercial album, quality notwithstanding.

While detractors (and TLC fans) may be ready to dis her, this album is pretty solid and could do quite well. In Pebbles' case, any measure of success may also be the sweetest revenge.

Gerard Dee

D'ANGELO: Brown Sugar (EM/Capital)

It's clear from D'Angelo's debut set that this musician has potential. Ripe with jazzy inflections, cut-up beats and a sound that's a mixture of early 70s soul and acid jazz, this is R&B that hasn't forgotten its innovative roots.

Like so many contemporary artists, D'Angelo is fighting to stand out from the pack. He attacks the standard r&b crooner mold with challenging lyrics and interesting vocal constructions. Even so, the early Prince comparisons are inevitable (though back in the days when The Artist Formerly Known As Prince was more funk than roll).

Like first single "Brown Sugar", much of this album has that just-dropped-by-and-decided-to-jam feel to it. It's almost casual when D'Angelo slinks through "Jonz In My Bonz" or shuffles through a reading of the Smokey Robinson classic "Cruisin'".

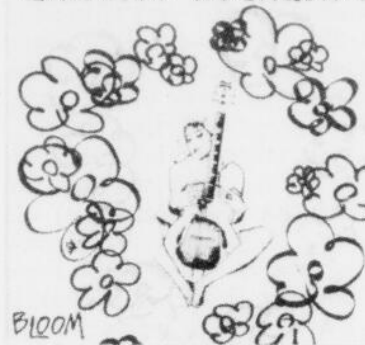

In fact, what separates D'Angelo from the purple one is the constant cool blue persona that surrounds his music. He never gives way to Prince's shrieking ecstasy. He comes close on the gospel-like "Higher," but even then he prefers musical control to all out euphoria.

Which makes Brown Sugar the kind of album that you want to throw on when friends drop by for no particular reason. It's a great atmosphere set that'll get people bopping without overpowering the conversation.

Gerard Dee

ANNETTE DUCHARME: Bloom (Reprise)

If the whole of Bloom lived up to the level of its best cuts, this album would be a winner indeed.

There's no doubt Ducharme proves she can write tunes that rock and lyrics that illuminate a story from within. In a fairer world, songs like "Talk to the Waves" and "Polarize", with Ducharme's almost childlike voice and penchant for loud guitars, would find an immediate home on radio.

But despite a good, chunky guitar line here or an arresting image there, Ducharme doesn't quite manage to put it all together for much of the album. And a pair of Tom Cochrane covers from his most recent album are win-some, lose-some — "Best Waste of Time" gets an angry, acoustic reading that works well, but "Flowers In the Concrete" is so like the original that one wonders, what was the point?

Bob Weber (CP)

Trio Matthieu to play Lennoxville on Friday

LENNOXVILLE — The Trio Matthieu will play a recital in the intimate setting of Bishop's University's Banded Hall on Friday, November 25.

Violinist Sophie Dugas, cellist Sylvie Lambert, and pianist Réjean Coallier are scheduled to perform works by J.J. Quantz, Joseph Haydn, W.A. Mozart, Suzanne Hébert-Tremblay and Edward B. Manning.

The Trio Matthieu was formed in 1992 and has performed many times throughout Quebec and for Société Radio-Canada, which presents Friday's show along with the university's music department as part of its Musique Chez Nous concert series.

Last March, the ensemble recorded Trio by Sherbrooke composer Isabelle Panneton under the Radio-Canada International label.

Dugas, who has studied at Montreal's McGill University and the Royal College of Music in London, counts touring in Sweden with the Parsons Piano Quartet and participating in the concert project "Live Music Now!" in London under the patronage of Yehudi Menuhin among her accomplishments. She has been a member of the Montreal Symphony Orchestra since 1990.

Lambert studied at the Quebec Conservatory of Music in Trois-Rivières where, in 1979, she was awarded the Premier Prix by unanimous decision. That same year she became a member of the Montreal Symphony Orchestra.

Coallier earned a Master's degree in performance from the Vincent d'Indy School of Music. After pursuing further studies in Paris, he returned to Quebec and has been working with Yuli Turovsky. Coallier, rehearsal pianist for the voice classes at Montreal University, has also toured frequently in Europe.

Tickets for Friday's concert, which begins at 8 p.m., are available through the Centennial Theatre box office (819-822-9692) or the Department of Music (819-822-9642). Admission prices for adults and seniors are $8 and $6 respectively. Admission is free for students.

Humor, human interest keep Kinsman painting

By Sunil Mahtani

LENNOXVILLE — "I'm tired of being a celebrity," whispers an exasperated Kay Kinsman. "I just want to go my quiet nun-like way."

The Lennoxville painter, relaxing on a couch in her apartment on Belvidere St., is exhausted. A recent bout of double pneumonia while on a trip to Czechoslovakia has taken its toll on the 86-year-old. Add to that the surge of interest that is currently surrounding a major retrospective exhibition of her work at the Bishop's University Artists' Centre and this is one lady that needs to take it easy.

She should be used to the attention by now. A Lennoxville fixture for over a decade, the good-natured Kinsman is a magnet that attracts the creative and the curious. People simply follow her wherever she goes, and it is clear why: she is a first-class cut-up who speaks her mind.

NO-NONSENSE

Now, no one who's ever met the no-nonsense octogenarian would compare her to a nun, but it's exactly this kind of self-deprecating humor that gives her opinions strength and her watercolors warmth.

Humor is also often a determining factor when Kinsman sets out to capture a subject in her paintings.

"I look at something and if I think it's funny, particularly if it's funny, or if it has human interest or if it's got drama, then I just paint it," she said earlier at the gallery. "I never work it out philosophically."

The Spontaneous Visions on display are culled from a lifetime of experiences. There are over 50 bright and breezy works — from a 1931 gouache of her late husband Ronny "burning the midnight oil" to a 1995 crayon and watercolor painting of the gazebo at Bishop's University.

THEMES

The paintings and drawings are divided into subjects to help viewers travel through the themes that have preoccupied the California-born artist over the past 50 years. A zest for life and people are evidenced in these works. Children, street scenes, still lifes, heritage architecture, travels to Spain, Provence, Moscow, England, Ireland, the Gaspé Coast are all represented.

The wide-ranging exhibit, guest curated by Monique Nadeau-Saumier, includes work borrowed from corporate collections such as Alcan that haven't been seen before around these parts.

Looking around the gallery, Kinsman was asked to reflect on her work. As usual, what followed was a one-liner.

"I feel as though I've used up an awful lot of paper," she said

Kay Kinsman... "I never thought of myself as a painter or anything that sounds pompous. I just keep myself from being bored."

RECORD/PERRY BEATON

with a straight face that soon gave way to a broad smile. "And you can tell how long ago they are by the quality of the paper. I used to have to stretch the paper and it was a whole business. Now today, you just go down to the Bishop's arts centre and buy a pad and that's it."

DOCTOR KAY

Kinsman has bought quite a few art supplies at Bishop's. From continually taking courses there to receiving an honorary doctorate in 1990, she has remained a campus coed since she arrived in Lennoxville.

The exhibit includes the beautifully illustrated covers of term papers Kinsman handed in for courses she took at Bishop's such as English, Fine Arts and Music. As well, hanging from the ceiling are a few puppets Kinsman created in England and which she refurbished here. She plans to present a storytelling hour for kids one Saturday in December, when she will read a story based on her puppets, which are decked out in Medieval costumes.

Kinsman is certainly well-loved in the university community, and for that matter, all around Lennoxville. The town means much to her as well.

"I've made lots of friends, many beloved friends," she said back at her home with her cat Tackaberry by her side. She adopted him on Halloween some six years ago and is a constant companion.

She's raised a family and keeps in touch with her children (Jocelyn lives in England, and Jeremy, the Canadian ambassador to Russia, resides in Moscow), is well-travelled, has painted, exhibited and lived around the world, but Kinsman makes sure not to take herself too seriously.

"I never thought of myself as a painter or anything that sounds pompous," she said. "I just keep myself from being bored."

AL CAPONE

She might downplay her own celebrity, but she's certainly hobnobbed with enough of them. One of favorite meetings occurred during her stint as a journalist in Havana, Cuba. One day she was bemoaning the lack of excitement and wishing out loud for somebody interesting to interview.

"They said as a joke, 'Well Al Capone is staying at the Biltmore, so why don't you interview him?' I took it for real," recalled Kinsman, adding she soon set out in search of the feared gangster.

"When I got to the hotel, Al Capone was stepping out of the elevator with three of his hoods. I said, 'Can you give me an interview?' He was so startled. I didn't look like a gangster or a moll. He said, 'Okay, let's have a drink.'"

Kinsman said when they sat down, she froze.

"I couldn't think of anything to ask him, except 'Have you bumped anybody off lately, so I asked him a dumb question: 'Do you like Havana Mr. Capone?'"

When Kinsman raced back to the paper with what she thought was a scoop, her editor said she was a fool, but not because she didn't ask any probing questions.

"If people know Al Capone is in town, we'll lose customers," Kinsman remembered was his reply. "He ripped my interview into shreds."

DEVILISH STREAK

Kinsman has always had a devilish streak running through her. It found its way into her art as early as four years old, when her first drawing was a depiction of a parish priest on a toilet. Today, she said she still enjoys tormenting people with off-beat depictions of themselves. It makes sense. If she's not going to take herself too seriously, then others shouldn't either.

Kinsman's already met a 1930s gangster, now she's looking for a 12th-century songwriter. Kinsman's latest project is a book.

"It's on a hero of the 12th-century. He's famous. He wrote the first pop song that was ever written, 'Summer Is A Comin' In'."

She's still in the midst of proving her hypothesis, so everything is under wraps for now.

The woman who says she finds life interesting still paints as often as she can.

"I paint as often as I can find paper to cover. So it depends on the paper supply," she teased.

How does painting make her feel?

"Happy. I enjoy it. It's fun," Kinsman said, adding mischievously, "Is that what you wanted me to say?"

Kay Kinsman's Spontaneous Visions are on display at the Bishop's University Artists' Centre in Lennoxville through December 21.

Black publishes mail

By Linda Turk

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — Arthur Black is quick to admit he's a packrat. When that inability to throw anything away leads to a good book, though, it's hard to criticize.

Black's been receiving — and saving — letters from listeners who enjoy his Basic Black show on CBC Radio, and over the years, those letters started to get out of control.

"People write me such great letters and I just can't throw away a personal letter. First there was a file drawer full of them, then a cabinet, then they filled up a room, then another room."

He might have kept on filling up rooms with letters if he hadn't decided to move from Fergus, Ont., to Salt Spring Island off the B.C. coast.

It was obvious the letters couldn't all be packed and moved, so he and partner Lynne Raymond started sorting through them, re-reading and remembering and choosing the best to keep — and then realized the best letters should be in book for everyone to enjoy.

"We sorted them into piles according to topic and all the piles looked about the same size, so we thought that was a good plan. Lynne did most of the work after that, I wrote chapter introductions, and Lynne thought up the title."

The title?

Blackmail! (Stoddart, $16.95)

Having a home on Salt Spring Island and a job in Vancouver means Black commutes twice a week for his three-day stint in the studio. This is a very B.C. kind of commute, though — three hours on a ferry.

He uses the time to answer his mail, write his weekly column, and, thanks to modern technology, if he's stuck for a name or a reference, he can call the public library.

"They have everything you need on the ferry, restaurant, nice chairs, phones, a place to work. If they had a bar and a bingo hall, some of us would never see land again."

Six hours each week on the ferry lets him answer a lot of letters.

"We never have fewer than 20 in a week," he says, "and about three dozen is a weekly average. If we're running any kind of contest, the letters can number in the hundreds."

Blackmail! relies on letters from people who love trains, who fell in love on a train, and people who believe that once you've ridden the train from one end of the country to the other, you love Canada.

There are also letters about hardy houseplants, about encounters with wild animals, and about the use of mustard plasters and other home remedies.

Little Lulu's back

TORONTO (CP) — Born out of the Depression, she was for generations the plucky and lovable black-eyed moppet with the corkscrew curls who proved a worthy equal to the neighborhood boys.

Now Little Lulu is back, recast as a feminist role model for the grade-school crowd of the '90s.

The Little Lulu Show, produced entirely by Montreal's Cinar Film Productions, is a half-hour series of "lulutoons" premiering Nov. 30 on CTV.

"She's my favorite gal," says executive producer Ronald Weinburg. "Her biggest charm is her determination, her spunky personality and her surprisingly honest take on life, whether it's how she sees boys or love or other critical issues of a young person's daily life."

This is a new Lulu, although the plots are rooted in the original 1930s comic strips and the graphic animation is pure Sunday-funnies retro, all basic colors and strong, black outlines.

In a typical plot, Lulu and pal Tubby try to visit each other's house but pass unawares during a driving rainstorm. That's pretty well it.

But the series does enjoy one modern twist.

With a nod to another successful TV series, each episode begins and ends with a pretend standup monologue, a la Seinfeld. As voiced by saucy Tracey Ullman, Lulu takes the microphone and expounds on such social issues as why girls are as good as boys.

"Actually girls can do everything better than boys," she tells her audience. "Climb trees, catch fish, throw snowballs. Girls can even eat more grilled-cheese sandwiches than boys if they feel like it."

This sort of gentle, basic feminism is at the root of the Lulu character. Weinburg insists that's not the show's motivation but says it's what drew him to Lulu.

Casino — terrific soundtrack, thin plot

By Dolores A. Barclay (AP)

A Martin Scorsese movie is always anticipated because he remains one of today's the most compelling filmmakers. Why, then is Casino such a disappointment?

With Scorsese at the helm, a cast headed by Robert De Niro, a mob-Las Vegas theme and writing by Nicholas Pileggi, it should be a winner. Instead, it's a bloated celebration of violence with only the thinnest of plots.

Casino opens with a bang.

For the Record

Literally. Sam (Ace) Rothstein (De Niro), who has grown from bookie to casino entrepreneur, leaves his house, gets into his car and, BANG. The car blows up and Ace goes flying.

The explosion sets the stage for a crash course in 1970s Las Vegas. Vegas, Ace says in a voiceover, is like "a morality carwash — Las Vegas does for us what Lourdes does for humpbacks and cripples." But by the end of the decade, Vegas begins to change: the mob paradise for gamblers and hustlers is slowly becoming a Disneyland of sorts — a vacation spot for families.

Ace is chosen by Midwestern mob bosses to front a casino operation in Las Vegas. He quickly makes a bundle for the mob and becomes something of a kingpin, a man of principle who isn't easily swayed.

Meanwhile, his old pal from the streets, Nicky Santoro (Joe Pesci), arrives with his own agenda. He gets his first taste of real power in Vegas and it is his undoing.

Ace takes up with Ginger

McKenna (Sharon Stone), a hooker who remains forever under the thumb of a two-bit pimp named Lester (James Woods). She and Ace are married after a whirlwind courtship.

For a savvy man, Ace turns up dumb when it comes to Ginger. Shortly after they wed, he deposits $2 million in a safe deposit box, puts the account in her name and has only one key made! It is to be his emergency money in case things ever go wrong.

Ginger, meanwhile, has been giving Lester tens of thousands of dollars and still sees him. Ace discovers her deception but remains married to her. Lester gets beat up, of course, but is allowed to live.

As Ace's relationship with Ginger ends, so does his alliance with Nicky, who has double crossed the mob bosses.

The score is settled in a climactic mass murder scene, played out to the Animals' "Rising Sun".

Scorsese has a terrific soundtrack throughout Casino. But the music takes over. The plot is so uninvolved you easily begin listening to the great songs — Stones, Cream, early rhythm and blues and top 40 from the '70s — that you ignore what's happening on the screen.

De Niro seems to be the centre of the movie. He keeps it, and everyone else, on an even keel, and he's just great — pink socks and all!

But Stone is out of her league. Still, Ginger might just be her best performance to date, because she is well directed.

Casino certainly isn't the masterpiece GoodFellas was, and it may be unfair to make the comparison because GoodFellas was driven by a strong script. Casino was based on the book by Pileggi, who based it on a real-life story.

Seven Hollywood studios sued for bookkeeping practices

By John Horn

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An author's estate is suing seven major movie studios, charging that Hollywood's arcane accounting methods amount to collusion and price fixing.

The class-action antitrust lawsuit was filed Friday by the heirs of Jim Garrison, whose book On the Trail of the Assassin was the foundation of the 1991 movie JFK.

According to the lawsuit, the Kennedy assassination conspiracy film has worldwide grosses in excess of $150 million, but Warner Bros. says the movie has not earned any money under its "net profits" accounting formula, and Garrison's estate has not received a dollar of net profits income.

The lawsuit was filed on behalf of anyone who entered into a net profits contract with the studios after January 1988. It names Warner Bros. and six other studios as defendants, claiming they all use the same accounting methods and nearly identical contracts.

The accounting method, which varies little from studio to studio, allows a film company to assign costs to a film including distribution, advertising and overhead fees, which often have no real bearing on actual expenses. These costs are deducted from gross receipts before there is any net profit.

Only a handful of top stars, including Tom Hanks and Arnold Schwarzenegger, are able to negotiate "gross profit" contracts in which they earn a share of each dollar a film generates before any studio deductions.
