ET enrolment drop refutes Laurin study

By JAMES DUFF

SHERBROOKE — Student enrolment within the three Townships school boards has dropped about 20 per cent since 1977, according to statistics released yesterday by the boards.

The numbers appear to contradict those released Monday in a report by the office of Cultural Development Minister Camille Laurin. The report, entitled Future Outlook for Quebec Anglophones, says the number of students in public and private English schools has fallen by only 6.9 per cent per year since 1977.

Release of the report, compiled with statistics gathered in part by former Bishop's sociology professor Gary Caldwell, appears to have been timed to refute a study to the contrary commissioned by the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal. The PSBGM survey was presented to their board, last Wednesday and is still at the printer's, a PSBGM spokesperson said yesterday.

The PSBGM report points to a 10.4 per cent annual drop in Protestant enrolment on the Island of Montreal since 1977 and places most of the blame on the French Language Charter and its effect on the English job market in Quebec.

The numbers released for just the PSBGM yesterday back their contention that enrolment has dropped off more than 23 per cent since 1977, when the charter was passed.

Landslide for Reagan

Record Perry Beaton

Vincent Illuzzi watches Reagan's victory statement from the floor as losing state senate incumbent Melvin Mandigo, on the bed, takes in the bleak news.

WASHINGTON (CP) — American voters swept Republican Ronald Reagan to power Tuesday as the 40th president of the United States and shifted the Congress and many state governments sharply to the political right.

Responding to Reagan's conservative and patriotic appeal to "make America great again," a silent majority largely undetected by pre-election pollsters turned Democrat Jimmy Carter out of the White House after four years in which the country suffered economic ills at home and frustrating affronts abroad.

The disgruntled electorate also bundled out of Congress and the state governments a liberal rearguard of Democrat senators and representatives, including senators George McGovern of South Dakota, Birch Bayh of Indiana, Frank Church of Idaho and sometime liberal Warren Magnuson of Washington state. New York picked conservative Alfonse D'Amato as veteran Republican Jacob Javits and Democrat Liz Holtzman split the liberal vote.

"There has never been a more humbling moment in my life," said winner Reagan, who nevertheless appeared less humble than composed and happy before a shouting throng of supporters in a Los Angeles hotel.

NOT FRIGHTENED

"I am not frightened by what lies ahead and I don't believe the American people are frightened by what lies ahead. . . . Together, we're going to do what has to be done: We're going to put America back to work again."

President Carter, who remains in office until noon Jan. 20, showed no more facial emotion than when he won the White House four years ago in conceding defeat just before 10 p.m. EST. But he told applauding supporters in a Washington hotel:

"I promised you four years ago that I would never lie to you, so I can't stand here tonight and say it doesn't hurt."

While Reagan won only slightly more than half the votes cast, he trounced Carter by about nine percentage points — far more than advance poll samples had predicted. Independent John Anderson and others picked up the rest.

But in the state-by-state contest for presidential electoral votes, Reagan rolled to victory in big states and small, Democrat Northeast, Republican West and even in Carter's supposed southern base.

Carter was left with a handful of the 50 states and a small minority of the electoral votes — Reagan winning in 43 states with 475 electoral votes with the count almost complete.

Border captures Reagan mood

By ANTHONY ROSS

NEWPORT, Vt. — Carter didn't hurt the United States over the last four years, but he didn't help it much, either.

So went the sentiments of the vast majority of the people Record Photographer Perry Beaton and myself talked to in the course of a memorable tour through Northeast Kingdom voterland last night.

Almost everyone we talked to was surprised at the degree of the Carter landslide. "I thought we would be here until after midnight at least, waiting for a decision," said Mike Derick, the bartender at The Landing restaurant.

Vermont voted for Reagan overall and most of the people we talked to were glad he had won -- with a few exceptions. "Reagan is a stupid jackass," said a man known as Joe. "We are all headed for war if Reagan becomes President. I might as well go home and polish up the .303," added Guy Gaudreau.

The majority of people felt it was time for a change. They believed Carter had his chance and he didn't do a good enough job so why not let Reagan take a shot. "Carter didn't do the job and we can't keep letting countries walk all over us," commented Chris, a Landing patron. "Everyone wants a change. We might as well give Reagan a chance," added Mike.

The main issue on the minds of the border voters was the hostages. Most of those who voted for Reagan blamed Carter for not getting the hostages out and added it was their main reason for voting against Carter -- although the question of the economy ran a close second in their minds.

"Carter was one of the most honest Presidents we have had but he didn't run the country properly," said Dave Campbell. "I blame him for not getting the hostages out of Iran a long time ago."

"There is no question I voted against Carter because we still have 52 Americans being held hostage in Iran and it is the president's fault," chimed in Judy, during our conversation at the Anchor.

Almost everyone had an opinion about some aspect of the election although there were a few exceptions one of whom was Ramona Nault.

"I didn't vote because I don't like

Senators seethe over committee choices

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's forced march to constitutional change tripped again Tuesday night on a group of furious senators.

Liberal and opposition members of the upper chamber, who stalled debate on the issue last week, were furious Tuesday when the government unveiled its nominees for a committee of senators and MPs that is supposed to study Prime Minister Trudeau's constitutional package and report back to Parliament with any changes by Dec. 9.

Senators reacted with indignation when the list of 10 senators presented by Senator Royce Frith of Ontario, deputy government leader in the upper chamber, included Saskatchewan Senator Hazen Argue.

As the cabinet minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, Argue is bound by cabinet solidarity and won't have a free voice on the committee, they said.

They were equally incensed that there were no senators from the Atlantic provinces on the list.

Faced with a cantankerous upper house, including several rebels from his own party's ranks, Frith adjourned the whole question until today.

Justice Minister Jean Chretien, who is piloting Trudeau's package through Parliament so it can be presented to the British Parliament next year, shrugged off the delay.

He said if the Senate didn't want to name its members to the committee Tuesday night, it would do it today. The Commons has 15 members on the committee, the Senate 10.

In the Senate, the opposition balked when the government tried to force a vote on that subject last week.

Quebec Senator Jacques Flynn, leader of the opposition in the upper chamber, staged procedural delays until the government was convinced the vote could be held Monday.

Grits survive votes

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberal government easily defeated two opposition non-confidence motions Tuesday condemning the budget and energy policies it introduced last week.

New Democrats hooted as the Progressive Conservatives, who have mocked the NDP for weeks for supporting Prime Minister Trudeau's constitutional package, joined with the government to reject their motion condemning "LiberalConservative policies that have brought Canada to its most serious recession since 1954."

The only real sign of the bitterness which has dominated the fall sitting of Parliament came Tuesday afternoon when Employment Minister Lloyd Axworthy accused the Tories of using dangerous tactics to inflame the West and divide the country.

Patriation debate heads Assembly list

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec government's constitutional war with Ottawa will probably be high on the list of priorities that Premier Rene Levesque will outline today in his speech opening the sixth session of the 31st legislature.

But political battles at home also figure to be on the minds of legislators.

The first of these takes place Nov. 17 when four byelections are scheduled to fill vacant seats in Montreal and the Eastern Townships. The ruling Parti Quebecois has lost all seven byelections to the Liberals since it took power nearly four years ago.

Once the byelections are finished, the question of the timing of the next full provincial election will become crucial.

Levesque's government celebrates its fourth birthday on Nov. 15 and he is defying the Quebec tradition of a general election every four years.

LEVESQUE TO WAIT?

The premier is likely to wait until the spring before holding an election. The key reason is the plan by Prime Minister Trudeau to unilaterally patriate the constitution and modify it with a charter of civil and linguistic rights.

The rights package would render part of Quebec's controversial language legislation unconstitutional.

Aside from constitutional issues, the session promises few fireworks. Major legislative initiatives are unlikely since the PQ has nearly exhausted its list of election promises and proposed reforms.

The government has indicated that this fall's legislative package will be aimed mainly at improving existing laws — that on class action suits — and studying such areas as a new highway code.

Also expected are revisions to Quebec's Civil Code, especially in the area of women's rights and family law.

Release: US won't reply via media

The United States rejected Iran's demand for a speedy response via the media to its terms for release of the 52 U.S. hostages and sought clarification of the conditions set Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and the Majlis, Iran's parliament.

"We are not negotiating through the newspapers," state department spokesman John Trattner said Tuesday after Algeria's ambassador in Washington delivered Iran's request that the U.S. government "speedily announce" its reply to the Iranian parliament's conditions for the hostages' release and "notify the peoples of the world through the mass media of this matter."

Trattner said the United States is seeking clarification of the terms and gave no indication when there will be a formal U.S. response to them.

"We will move forward expeditiously," he said, "but we will do it deliberately and with care."

SWISS GO-BETWEEN

President Carter sent a message to Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai through the Swiss ambassador in Tehran Monday, the day after the Majlis vote, but Rajai said it was a "statement concerning some generalities which did not address the issue of our conditions."

He said if the United States does not accept the conditions, "we will firmly stand by our position."

The terms set by Khomeini, the leader of Iran's revolutionary regime, and the Majlis are a pledge from the United States not to interfere in Iranian affairs, cancellation of all U.S. lawsuits and other legal claims against Iran, release the billions of dollars in Iranian assets frozen in U.S. banks and the return to Iran of the assets of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and his closes relatives.

Today was the hostages' 368th day in captivity, the second day of the second year.

Republicans capture Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans captured control of the U.S. Senate early today, ousting seven liberal Democrats and ending a generation of Democratic majorities.

The size of the Republican majority remained to be fixed with races still undecided in North Carolina and Arizona, where Senator Barry Goldwater, the party's 1964 standard-bearer, was trailing narrowly in his re-election bid.

But the returns, which reflected the presidential landslide piled up by Ronald Reagan, guaranteed the Republicans a net gain of nine seats, ensuring a 50-50 tie.

Vice-President-elect George Bush, as president of the Senate, would cast the deciding vote, enabling the GOP to organize the new Senate for business.

The victims of the political massacre include leading liberals George McGovern, Frank Church, Birch Bayh and Warren Magnuson.

The new Senate will be the most conservative since 1956, when the Republican party lost the control of the chamber it had won two years earlier.

The Republicans held 41 seats to the Democrats' 58 in the outgoing Senate.

The Republican triumph was clinched with the victory in Alaska of Fairbanks banker Frank Murkowski over Clark Gruening, who had defeated incumbent Mike Gravel in the state's primary.

Republican control of the Senate would put into limbo one of the most cherished projects of the Liberal government in Ottawa, a treaty covering East Coast fisheries which had been effectively stalled in the Senate foreign relations committee.

The most vigorous opponent has been Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, who becomes most senior Democrat on the committee.

Japan cheers Reagan victory

Conservative foreign governments welcomed Ronald Reagan's election as president, predicting a stronger U.S. stance against the Soviet Union.

In Japan, investors snapped up defence industry stocks, pushing the Tokyo index to a record level, but shunned auto stocks in the belief Reagan would cut imports.

The U.S. election result pushed the price of gold up $11.44 an ounce in Hong Kong, and gold stocks opened sharply higher in South Africa, the world's largest gold producer.

A member of Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai's staff said Reagan's victory would make "no difference" in Iran's relations with the United States and would have no effect on Iran's terms for the release of the 52 American hostages.

Egypt's foreign ministry said Reagan's victory would bolster U.S. strength in the Middle East.

EXPRESSES HOPE

China, which feared Reagan might restore official ties with Taiwan, expressed hope he would adhere to agreements that committed the U.S. to only unofficial relations with the island.

Taiwan's foreign ministry said it anticipated renewed ties with the U.S. which it said would provide the basis for "mutual benefits and for maintaining peace and security in Northeast Asia."

The Soviet Union, which was believed to favor President Carter's re-election because he supported the second strategic arms limitation treaty, withheld immediate comment on the election outcome. But the state radio of Soviet-Bloc member Czechoslovakia said: "Even Western press agencies describe Reagan as distinctly right-wing with anti-Communist orientation."

Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki in a congratulatory telegram to Reagan expressed confidence that he would "demonstrate outstanding leadership, courage and determination in guiding your country, the leader of the free world, in today's difficult environment."

A spokesman for Thailand's military leadership welcomed Reagan's pledges to strengthen America's armed forces and hope that the United States would display stronger leadership for non-Communist Southeast Asian states which oppose growing Soviet influence in the region.

South Korea's military regime also hailed Reagan's election as a boon to national security.

Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos cabled his congratulations to Reagan and said he believes the United States will be a stronger and more united country under his leadership.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of India said she hoped U.S.-Indian relations "will continue to deepen and diversify for the mutual benefit of our two peoples and the objectives of peace and security in the world."

But Democrats keep House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democrats are keeping control of the U.S. House of Representatives, but the voter mutiny against Jimmy Carter has cut deeply into their ranks and may mean Ronald Reagan will find relations with the chamber more cordial than Carter did.

Several of the most prominent, and liberal, House Democrats were defeated Tuesday by more conservative candidates. Republicans picked up at least 30 seats, narrowing the 276-to-159 margin the Democrats had enjoyed.

Those additions, coupled with the size of Reagan's landslide and substantial Republican gains in the Senate, are sure to put the House on a more conservative course.

Even House Speaker Thomas O'Neill (Dem. Mass.) called the election results a disaster for the Democrats and said "the president collapsed in the last few days."

Carter has frequently been engaged in squabbles with the House as liberal Democrats and conservative Republicans joined forces against his proposals.

Probably his most crushing defeat came when the House passed legislation forbidding him from imposing an oil-import fee and then decisively crushed his veto of its prohibition.

McGovern by Richard Nixon in 1972 and the crushing of Barry Goldwater by Lyndon Johnson in 1964 were only slightly more lopsided results in modern U.S. politics.

Republicans also defied every prediction by seizing control of the U.S. Senate for the first time in 25 years and slicing down the Democrat domination of the House of Representatives.

The conservative shift promised an easy ride in the 97th Congress, which covenes in January, for Reagan's plans to chop income taxes, trim federal programs, abolish the Carter-instituted departments of education and energy, reinforce the armed forces and their weaponry and scrap the unratified arms limitation treaty signed last year with the Soviet Union. Reagan says he will try to negotiate a new pact on the ground the previous one is weighted against the West.

The result also renders unlikely Carter's avowed hopes of getting promised tax and spending measures, plus the arms limitation treaty, through a post-election sitting of the 96th Congress.

Another likely victim of the election are two treaties signed with Canada last year to delineate East Coast ocean boundaries and fishing rights, which is lodged in the Senate foreign relations committee. With the defeat of committee chairman Frank Church of Idaho, the ranking Democrat there will be Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, a vociferous opponent of the pacts.

SEES UNREST

External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan said in Ottawa the U.S. election result will mean "a certain amount of unrest in Canada-U.S. relations" but it is too early to predict specific effects.

From the outset of Reagan's current drive to the presidency — he tried in vain for the Republican nomination in 1968 and 1976 — he has repeatedly proposed what he calls a North American Accord, an idea never spelled out.

His advisers turn vague when questioned and seem unaware that Prime Minister Trudeau and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo rejected any idea of a three-sided pact in an Ottawa communique last May.

Canadian grain farmers may find more to cheer because Reagan opposes Carter's partial grain-sales embargo against the Soviet Union, which has been supported by Canada.

Reagan won in the grain-growing states and almost everywhere else in his sweep.

The country thus put into office the oldest man ever elected to the White House, at 69, the first who was an actor by trade and the only victorious candidate who has been divorced — from actress Jane Wyman in favor of actress Nancy Davis Reagan, the nation's First Lady-designate.

News in brief

Child-killer's shadow haunts Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — As police threw up roadblocks near the riverbank where an 11th child's body was found, religious leaders called for a moment of silence at noon today in this frightened city.

The Interfaith Association of Greater Atlanta asked everyone in the city to observe a moment of silence in respect for the 15 black children killed or missing. And a group of about 25 clergymen set up a prayer rally, also at noon, at a park in the central business district.

Oil execs are evangelists

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's oilmen are the most evangelical group of businessmen in the country, veteran broadcaster Patrick Watson told Canadian Club Members here Tuesday.

"More than any other business or industry group in this country, the oil men are evangelical about what they do," said Watson, host of the CBC's recent series The Canadian Establishment.

War vet program coming

OTTAWA (CP) — A new program to provide better health care for war veterans will be announced later this week, an assistant to Gilles Lamontagne, acting veterans affairs minister, said Tuesday.

Lamontagne mentioned the new program in the Commons after a Progressive Conservative MP said increased energy costs introduced by the "cruel and devastating" Liberal budget last Tuesday wipe out improved benefits given to some veterans this summer.

Drop aid terms, Head urges

OTTAWA (CP) — Ivan Head, once Prime Minister Trudeau's top foreign policy aide, says he recommends dropping conditions on foreign aid that force poor countries to buy Canadian goods and services.

That puts Head, now president of the International Development Research Centre, in conflict with the Canadian International Development Agency, some other powerful government agencies and business interests.

Iraq offers peace terms

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, whose troops have captured a large chunk of southwestern Iran in six weeks of war, offered Tuesday to withdraw the invasion force if the Iranians recognize Iraqi "rights" to control of the Shatt al-Arab river.

If the Iranians do not accede, Iraq will fight on and its demands may increase, Hussein said in a speech to the Iraqi national assembly in Baghdad.

Has NDP infiltrated CBC?

OTTAWA (CP) — Is the CBC infiltrated by the New Democratic Party? Is the national network bringing in persons to give background to the news who are Maoists?

MPs sitting on the parliamentary committee on communications and culture during its Tuesday session asked CBC president Al Johnson about it.

Mackasey's mom dies

Hamilton, Ont. — Annie Maddox, 83, mother of Liberal MP Bryce Mackasey, in hospital Monday.

Horizons, Omnis recalled

DETROIT (Reuter) — Chrysler Corp. on Tuesday announced it is recalling about 660,000 of its 1978-1980 Omni and Horizon cars to correct possible battery charging and fuel hose defects.

Chrysler did not estimate the potential cost of the recall.

It said one minor accident due to the battery charging defect and a fire resulting from a leaking fuel hose have been reported. There were no injuries in either case.

Chrysler said engine vibration in its 1978 and 1979 models could loosen electrical wiring connections to the alternator, resulting in battery charging problems.

National moved to 10 p.m.

OTTAWA (CP) — Starting in September next year, the CBC televison national news will be broadcast at 10 p.m. local times — an hour earlier than has been the practice — Mike Daigneault, director of news and current affairs, said Tuesday.

The earlier format will consist of 25 minutes of the National with Knowlton Nash and 35 minutes of a yet unnamed public affairs program capped by a five-minute capsule of the news.

Translators' strike hampers MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — The strike by 1,100 federal government translators and interpreters is hampering the way politicians perform their duties, breaching their parliamentary privileges and posing a potential violation of the Official Languages Act, several MPs said Tuesday.

The strike could bring the work of parliamentary committees to a virtual halt, Walter Baker, Progressive Conservative House leader, told the Commons as mediation aimed at getting a negotiated contract settlement to end the strike, now in its third week, appeared to be off-again-on-again throughout the day.

Native leader: PM has forked tongue

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau's promise of a better life for Canada's Indian people has been undermined by proposed constitutional reforms, a national Indian leader said Tuesday.

Del Riley, president of the National Indian Brotherhood, said Trudeau's proposed charter of rights makes a mockery of his promises after his election last April to secure Indian rights and status.

Cross shot three times

MONTREAL (CP) — A young Mohawk Indian shot dead last year during an altercation with police at a nearby reserve was shot twice, and possibly three times, a forensic pathologist testified Tuesday on the first day of the trial of the policeman charged with killing him.

Dr. Jean Hould also told Quebec Superior Court Justice Jean-Paul Bergeron that David Cross's blood contained an alcohol level of .71 millilitres per 100 cubic centimetres but this level could have been diminished by blood transfusions he received in hospital before he died.

N.S. natives protest to Queen

HALIFAX (CP) — The Union of Nova Scotia Indians is asking the Queen, the World Court and the United Nations to take action against the Trudeau government's proposed patriation of the British North America Act.

Townships enrolment down 20% since 1977

The PSBGM alone has seen a 23 per cent decline in enrolment since 1977, 22 per cent among high-school students and 25 per cent among elementary students, averaging about 10 per cent a year.

The situation is even more pronounced among Townships boards, which together have seen a 20 per cent absolute decline in student enrolment over the last four years.

Worst hit are the elementary schools; the Lennoxville District School Board is losing about 9 per cent of its total enrolment figure annually. Their three-year total loss of just under 25 per cent is based on an enrolment drop from 1,873 in 1977 to 1,405 this year.

The Eastern Townships Regional School Board, which takes in Alexander Galt Regional High School, has seen total enrolment decline less than 15 per cent since 1977, from 3,240 to 2,770. The Saint Francis board, representing the enrolment of Richmond Regional, has dropped 23 per cent since 1977 -- 552 to 425.

The unified District of Bedford Regional School Board student body has dropped about 20 per cent in size since 1977 -- from 4,084 to 3,236, averaging an annual drop of about seven per cent.

Board officials were quick to point out Bill 101 isn't the only cause of declining enrolment; the outmigration of Quebecers is continuing among both francophones and anglophones and most agree similar -- if lower -- figures can be found among French Catholic boards throughout the province. Monday's Cultural Development study doesn't give any figures for the French sector, but a brief survey of the Sherbrooke Catholic School Commission and the Commission Scolaire Catholique de l'Estrie indicate an average five-per-cent drop in annual enrolment since 1977.

Several factors work to blur statistical surveys like these whatever their conclusion. One is that several boards included in the analyses were unified with both French and English-speaking Catholic and Protestant pupils.

Another factor, referred to in the government study, is that there were 16,000 more students in Island Protestant schools last year than were reported. PSBGM officials deny this vigorously. A spokesman for the Quebec Association of Protestant School Boards says there may well have been several thousand more students enrolled in Island schools than were recorded in past years, but that this year's head-count crackdown following a $500 million education ministry shortfall would tend to make enrolment tallies more exact.

politics and I really don't understand them. There isn't much I can say because I really don't care all that much," she said.

After leaving the landing at a fairly early hour we ventured into the Border Motel where we discovered two candidates for senate seats in the state legislature, Vincent Illuzzi and Melvin Mandigo, nervously watching and listening to the returns in the same room.

Illuzzi was running for the first time while Mandigo, an old pro, had been in the state senate for 16 years. The race was very close and both men were nervous waiting for the returns of large centres such as Derby and Newport, which could make or break either candidate.

While we were listening and waiting, Mandigo offered his views on the election of Reagan.

"At long last there is a glimmer of hope for some common sense in the area of foreign policy in this country. I think this election has spelled an end to the liberal thoughts of the past and people are ready to throw big government off their backs."

Chuck Thomas and John Wheelock, two of his supporters, echoed Mandigo's views and added a few of their own. "The results of this election is just wonderful. I have been waiting for this to happen for the last sixteen years," said Thomas.

"People have finally voted against big government," added Wheelock.

"We just want to be left alone by government to live our lives without them always telling us what to do. The only thing we want government for is to ensure national defence."

Meanwhile the returns were seeping in from the counties which would decide the electoral fates of Illuzzi and Mandigo. Early on the pair were running one-two in the race for the two senate seats. Illuzzi was winning most of the districts and Mandigo was running a close second with Kermit Smith only a hair back in third position.

The crucial counts in both Derby and Newport were still to come as well as Troy, which was a Smith stronghold.

A little after midnight we left to continue sampling public opinion at another famous night spot, The Anchor, but not before bidding our two gracious hosts good luck in their final hours.

Upon leaving the Anchor we searched the radio dial desperately for some news on the fate of both Mandigo and Illuzzi. Very shortly we located the station in time to hear an interview with the winning and losing candidates.

The last two districts had been crucial for Mandigo. He lost in his bid for re-election to Smith, but all was not lost since Illuzzi had taken the other seat.

Before we departed the Border Motel, Mandigo had been told if he won Newport he would be laughing. "I'll be laughing either way," he replied.

Retiring at 65 ... rotting away

When Stephen Leacock was 65 and at the height of his popularity, the administrators of McGill University told him that he must resign his professorship. The university policy, so he was told, was that it was mandatory for anyone in the faculty to retire when he or she became 65 years of age.

Leacock never forgave those lesser men at McGill for insisting that he give up his post and spend the rest of his days "rotting in his socks." He let it be known in language that only Leacock could manage, that he was the "best damned teacher McGill ever had" and inferred pretty bluntly that of all the larger universities in America, none was in such dire need of distinguished men as McGill was.

"The most remarkable feature of McGill," he once said, "it its moss. It covers buildings and teachers alike."

Nevertheless the school's retirement decree could not be swayed and Leacock retired to his home town of Orillia and McGill lost the most famous man who ever knew its halls - a man who could make millions think as well as laugh.

But Leacock had at least one advantage over the thousands of other men who, for the last quarter century or more, have also been forced to retire at 65, even though they felt themselves to be at the neight of their powers and usefulness. He could put his feelings about the injustice of it all into stinging articles that would be read around the world.

There are of course, many men who are very happy to be pensioned off at 65. They have worked long enough, they think, and they believe they deserve a few years to relax and travel and do the hundred odd things they have never before had the time for. The trouble is that a mandatory retirement at 65 doesn't give a man any choice, and thousands of men are still physically young at 65 and still in love with what they are doing. And to retire such men is not only unfair to those men but it also means that the nation must lose the services of some of those it needs most.

Have we forgotten that Churchill was an old man of 65 when Britain stood alone against the German war machine and he thundered his historic "We shall never surrender!"?

Lord Bertrand Russell was 70 when he wrote his "History of Western Philosophy" and over 90 when he published his greatest work - his three-volume autobiography. Incidentally at 87 Russell was still physically strong enough to lead a demonstration urging nuclear disarmament and he got thrown into jail for it.

George Bernard Shaw won the Nobel Prize for Literature when he was well past 70 and continued to write plays till he was 93. And his friend Henrik Ibsen was 63 when he struck up an affair with not one, but with two young women 45 years his junior; and out of his adventures of that time came two of his greatest plays.

Immanuel Kant was 74 before he wrote his greatest philosophical works, Tennyson was 83 when he wrote "Crossing the Bar"; Goethe was 80 when he completed "Faust."

Our Parliament is presently putting the finishing touches on a new Human Rights Bill (Bill C-25) and it is hoped that his new legislation will go farther than ever before to end all kinds of unfair discrimination. Let's hope that Bill C-25 ends discrimination because of age. It is as wasteful as it is unfair.

Ryan talk shocks Yamaska voters

By MERRITT CLIFTON

FARNHAM — Local Liberal leaders scrambled for telephones seeking explanations Tuesday evening after an exhausted Claude Ryan inadvertently reversed the party's strong position on the Farnham water crisis. Concluding an exclusive interview on CBC's Home Run radio program, Ryan apparently agreed with the PQ government that Farnham voters are unqualified to choose their own drinking water source.

"This kind of decision must be made after consultation with the experts in the provincial environment ministry," Ryan told questioner Peter Downey. "The people of Farnham are not necessarily able to properly consider all factors."

English listeners throughout the Yamaska River basin reacted with disbelief, since both local Liberal MNA candidates have vehemently supported Farnham's right to choose a water source. While PQ environment minister Marcel Leger has stated repeatedly the town will get water piped from the south fork of the Yamaska, like it or not, a major Chamber of Commerce poll organized by Liberal press attache Marc Turcot and others showed 86 per cent of registered voters favoring artesian wells instead.

Iberville County Liberal candidate Jean Guite launched his campaign two weeks ago by blasting the government's pipeline plan at a Farnham press conference. Brome-Missisquoi Liberal candidate Pierre Paradis continues criticizing a related government plan to expropriate Cowansville's dams. The environment minister hopes that by taking over the dams they can assure a stronger flow to Farnham than the south fork of the Yamaska could normally provide.

Unofficial explanations for the Ryan faux-pas suggest that he erred from basic unfamiliarity with local environmental issues. Prepared to speak on the economy and constitutional debate, Ryan admitted to Downey he lacked the facts he needed to discuss Farnham in depth. Earlier in the interview, Ryan had urged that more environmental decisions be made at the local level, instead of by remote planners in Quebec City.

Grenier slams Creditiste

SHERBROOKE (JD) — At least a dozen of the 64 people supposed to have signed the nomination papers of Megantic-Compton Creditiste candidate Jean-Paul Poulin have denied they ever backed him, Poulin's Union Nationale opponent Fernand Grenier charged yesterday.

Speaking at a press conference here, Grenier demanded that the province's chief returning officer, Pierre Cote, investigate the 'flagrant irregularity' of Poulin's candidacy. Poulin, said Grenier, was being parachuted into the riding by the Liberals for all sorts of obscure reasons.

Peter Blaikie was in town yesterday to lend his support to Grenier, and the vice-president of the Quebec Progressive Conservative Association was critical of the polarizing trend in Quebec.

A UN victory in the byelections would hurt neither the Parti Quebecois nor the Liberals and would provide a third view of the situation in the assembly, Blaikie added.

Lenn citizens form charter

LENNOXVILLE (PT) — A Lennoxville Citizens group formed in September to organize health and social services in the area hopes to become incorporated within the next few weeks, it was announced at a regular meeting Monday night.

The group will call itself Community Aid Lennoxville and District. A logo for the committee, a charter and the proposal for the group's name were sent to the provincial government yesterday for final approval.

Margaret Owens, interim vice-president of the group, says the incorporation is just a formality and she forsees no problems in having their proposals accepted.

The Lennoxville citizens are now planning to send out a questionnaire to those who would be under its jurisdiction to determine what community services do exist and what residents' priorities are. The organization covers Lennoxville and a 10-mile radius excluding the greater Sherbrooke area, which is served by a CLSC.

A brief has been sent to Centraide requesting financial help with a survey they are hoping to conduct by mail. If the request is granted, the group will be asking for volunteers to help with the survey, and, after the survey is completed, volunteers to help carry out the projects.

A group of Champlain College students were at Monday's meeting to learn about how an organization is formed from scratch. They will be observing the progress of the Lennoxville citizens and helping out with various projects as part of a class requirement.

The interim executive of the Lennoxville citizens is: Gerald Frost, president; Margaret Owens, vice-president; Debbie Pelletier, secretary; Sylvia Wilding, Treasurer and directors Bennie Carruthers, Dave Donnachie, Judy Green, Janice Ransehousan, Liz Schilling, June Wells and Muriel Wilson. The next meeting will be held at the Lennoxville elementary school library on November 19 at 7 p.m.

Townships talk

SHERBROOKE — A walkout by nine specialized-transit employees of the Sherbrooke Municipal Transit Commission almost shut down the entire system yesterday.

The employees, former drivers for Transport Liberte, are members of a different union than the majority of CMTS drivers, who hesitated yesterday in crossing a picket line set up by the group.

After discussions between the larger union and the CMTS, Sherbrooke buses rolled once more. The specialized-transit drivers, serving the handicapped, are seeking parity with their CMTS confreres.

BROMONT (MC) — Mayor Jean Jacob has finally signed a sewage treatment protocol with the Quebec environment ministry, six months and three days after ministry spokesman Claude Vallee prematurely called the agreement final.

The Bromont protocol, worth $1.5 million, is substantially identical to those previously signed by a dozen other Yamaska River basin municipalities. The province will pay 90 per cent of sewage treatment plant construction costs, while the town will cover the remainder. The plant is scheduled to be in operation by 1983.

GRANBY (MR) — Granbyites could face a municipal tax hike of up to 10 per cent next year, according to Mayor Paul-O. Trepanier.

Continuing inflation in the city's costs is the reason the mayor gave for the prediction. This year, the mayor added the city expects a $250,000 surplus.

Ottawa's to blame

Jean-Jacques Blais, the federal minister of Supply and Services, appears to have a very useful talent. Speaking recently to the annual convention of the Air Transportation Association of America, he made it sound like Ottawa is responsible for whatever success the Canadian aerospace industry is having, that the federal government is working to ensure continued growth in the industry and that the closure of several of the few remaining companies specializing in aerospace and related technologies is a healthy thing.

Even taken with a pound of salt, this is stretching the truth to the breaking point.

Supply and Services must bear the brunt of the blame for Space Research Corporation's bankruptcy. Promises, vows, undertakings and agreements were made and never honored. Mr. Blais personally guaranteed work which never materialized. Attempts by SRC to sign legitimate export agreements were stalled by government inaction which has yet to be explained. White lies were told to SRC executives, lies about it being a matter of weeks for a deal to be approved when in fact, the deal had never even been put through normal channels.

There was an Ottawa conspiracy against SRC which extended to Shefford Electronics, now reopened and hiring again with no thanks to Ottawa. Mr. Blais says the key to survival is in exports, but the federal government has done just about everything to ensure problems in obtaining permission to export.

Is this wilful obstructionism or sheer incompetence? Is the same true throughout Canada or are the Townships' experiences with Mr. Blais' department isolated? We'll never know.

Slim hope

The chances of Quebec's calling a Royal Commission to probe the health and safety of workers in the asbestos industry are practically nonexistent. But by putting such an enquiry into motion, Ontario has set a powerful example.

Asbestos fibres in the air kill people. A single fibre is enough, according to some researchers; others say it takes a heavier dose. Asbestos fibres in water and other liquids may be harmless or they may be lethal; nobody's sure.

One thing's certain: whatever the outcome of these hearings and studies going on around the world, the market for the mineral has gone deadly soft. European buyers attempt to eradicate any mention of the mineral from product descriptions. Researchers are working overtime to find substitutes and safe ways to use the fibre.

Of all the world's asbestos producers, Quebec stands to gain or lose the most. Now isn't the time for a public relations job; the consciousness of the world market has long since ceased to believe. They want to know the truth, while Quebec is so afraid of what that truth would be, it is doing everything short of cooking the results of the studies.

Open up the research. Let's see cancer and mesethelioma death statistics for the Townships. How many widows have no Workmen's Compensation because their old man died of lung cancer after 20 years in the mines and had the misfortune to develop the disease too late in life?

Of course Quebec won't. After all, they want to get into the business themselves.

Montreal sculptress doing well abroad

Fonda Fortnightly

BY NICK FONDA

I don't know of anyone better with whom to visit the National Gallery in London than Esther Wertheimer.

"Esther Who?" you ask.

Esther Wertheimer is not a household name in Canada, at least not yet. As often seems to be the case with Canadian artists, the Polish-born, Montreal-bred sculptress is probably better known abroad than she is at home.

Which isn't to say she is unknown in Canada. Far from it: she has exhibited her work in most of the major galleries, she has earned numerous Canada Council grants, she has won several prizes for her work, and, over the years, she has had her fair share of newspaper ink. However, in terms of financial success and critical acclaim, it is probably fair to say that Esther Wertheimer has done better in the United States and Italy than in Canada.

As a youngster, Esther was very drawn to athletics and especially ballet, which she often calls her first love. A career in ballet was unfortunately not in the stars and she turned her attention to painting and entered the School of Fine Art in Montreal in 1958.

Several years after graduation, in 1967, she made the pilgrimage almost every serious painter makes and went to Italy where she enrolled at the Academy of Fine Art in Florence. It was here that she discovered her talent with bronze and she has never looked back.

For the last dozen years, Wertheimer has made sculpture her life. Her Montreal home is crowded with her work; the basement is a very functional studio; in the back yard bronze sculptures, some as high as ten feet, compete with her tomato plants for sunshine. Yet, she's in Montreal for only half the year, spending most of winter in Pietra Santa, near Pisa. It's not the warm Italian sunshine which draws her but rather the small foundry where her work is cast.

The Italians, she explains, are marvellous craftsmen. Using tricks and formulae passed down from generation to generation they take Wertheimer's wax models, transform them into bronze, and either shine them 'til they glisten almost like gold, or coat them in patinas that give the metal a dark tone, or a verdant hue, or any number of shades in between. The foundry workers of Pietra Santa have secrets she'd dearly love to learn.

As is the case with any successful artist, Wertheimer squeezes a lot of working hours out of every day. "I'm lucky," she says. "I love my work. There's nothing I'd rather do than work, and so I work. Time doesn't really come into it. When I start a sculpture I take the attitude that I have a lifetime to finish it. Sometimes a piece will take weeks, even months to complete; other times it will only take a couple of hours."

Wertheimer was in London for the opening of her first British exhibition, an event sponsored by the Canadian High Commission. The show was at the Embankment Gallery, a rather unique gallery in that it is aboard the Tattershall Castle, an old paddle steamer permanently docked at the Victoria Embankment, just a stone's throw from Canada House.

What does all this have to do with the National Gallery? Well, we zipped down to London for the weekend to take in Wertheimer's show and, as luck would have it, Saturday just happened to be Thamesday 80 — a celebration in honour of the Queen Mum, replete with regattas and kayaks.

The Tattershall Castle, by virtue of being afloat, was involved in the celebrations and the Wetheimer show had to be dismantled for the day. She was kind enough to take a few hours out of her day to point out some of the more interesting pieces in the National Gallery. The next day we saw her again at her own exhibition, a matter of hours before she left for Pietra Santa.

Her sculptures, however, are on their way to Canada. They'll be exhibited in Ottawa in early October and then at the Dominion Gallery in Montreal from October 25 to November 15. I'd suggest it as a good excuse to go to Montreal.

Cohen: Story 'Good' but not factual

Editor:

I read with interest and some dismay the report on the Money Management Effectiveness Training Course Inger Slater and I are giving in the Townships.

Your reporter chose - as many do - to write a "good" story as opposed to a factual one.

Yes, there was some initial confusion with the first batch of literature which was distributed in August by the Eastern Townships Regional School Board. The second batch included both instructors' names.

The first half hour of the first session was devoted to clarification of the situation, and quite frankly if your reporter was still confused at the end of that discussion, she-he really is in the wrong profession. All she-he had to do was ask questions. Neither Inger nor I are threatened by such behavior. Neither were the women present, as they felt free enough to do so.

The suggestion that either we or the E.T.R.S.B. were trying to sneak something by in the small print is wildly creative of your reporter. So badly did the E.T.R.S.B. feel about the initial misunderstanding, they offered every one two free evenings to make up their minds about the course. At any point they could have had their money refunded in full. Can you suggest anything fairer?

I must also tell you now that four weeks have passed, that the level of satisfaction is enormously high amongst the women taking the course - and, contrary to the implications of the report, several women have joined the course since its inception of the word of friends who had already registered.

Perhaps your reporter might do well to search out an effectiveness training course to take, or even one in basic listening skills. Both attributes are woefully lacking in the story you published.

DIAN COHEN,
Montreal

Industrial safety hardly a priority

Editor:

I never met Merritt Clifton, a journalist with The Record, but I have read several of his articles. Many good citizens in a managerial position are strongly antagonized when Clifton's name is mentioned. They resent his writings on security.

I understand those people but I can't sympathize with them. This is because, with few exceptions I must confess that I agree with Clifton.

In matters of security, too many administrators take things lightly. Until a disaster occurs, they take it for granted that it will not happen to them.

For instance, I am aware of a company which claims that every human effort possible is made to prevent accidents. Yet their maintenance foreman was told of a dangerous situation where water lines were illegally attached to natural gas pipes for support and to large water pipes leading to steam boilers. Of course the work has been performed without a permit. Disaster may strike anytime because of frequent severe vibrations.

Besides the foreman, the president of the company was informed and the matter was mentioned at a meeting of the Safety and Health Committee the company is very proud of.

This committee placed the item on its list of matters to tend to. Nine months after the first mention and six months after the other two mentions, nothing has been done yet.

And from what I can see, it's like this everywhere. Safety is a thing to tend to when we don't know of anything else to do and when we don't know what else to spend our precious dollars on.

Safety-minded people are a breed of men and women still to be developed.

Carter officials suspected in high-level energy probe

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — The recent exposure of former CIA agent David Barnett's sellout to the Soviet Union is only one chapter in a story of treachery that has shaken the American intelligence community in the past four years. And more revelations can be expected in coming months.

Besides Barnett, the public has already learned about three other Americans who sold secret documents to Soviet intelligence: William Kampiles, Andre Lee and Christopher Boyce. The public has also been told about the reported death of the top American spy in the Kremlin -- code-named Trigon -- whose cover may have been blown by a White House official's careless remark at a Washington diplomatic party.

But what the public doesn't know is that a major spy scandal may be developing, its proportions unmatched since the exposes that rocked the country after World War II. The Justice Department is investigating several cases involving leaks of sensitive information to the Soviets by U.S. officials and private individuals.

Because more positive proof is needed, it would be unfair to name actual names. But here are the details, given to my associate Dale Van Atta by sources in the White House, the Justice Department and the intelligence agencies:

—Some Carter administration officials are under investigation by the Justice Department for suspected espionage on behalf of the Soviet Union. One source said there are files on "at least three" such cases, and there may be as many as half a dozen.

—Intelligence sources charge that a high-level White House official recently blew the cover of a CIA agent who travels in an East European country. So far, the agent has not been warned that he has been compromised and that officials of the country he spies upon now know who and what he is.

—A ranking Romanian diplomat who defected last February has given CIA debriefers the details of a wide-ranging Soviet espionage operation based in the Romanian Embassy in Washington. Code-named "Liberty," the network was designed to penetrate the federal government at various levels. Each target had a code name: Congress was "Oregon," the White House was "Amazon" and the State Department, with sardonic Russian humor, was "Iowa."

The Romanian diplomat had easy access to half a dozen Democratic senators and at least two Republican senators. More alarming, though, was the Romanian's identification of a former Senate staff member as a purveyor of intelligence to Romania. He was employed by a senior Democratic senator.

—Finally -- and potentially most dangerous -- is the Defense Intelligence Agency's concern that a Soviet "mole" may have penetrated to the highest levels of the U.S. government, and now has access to closely held White House information.

A top-secret DIA report recently concluded that "a definite change in the Soviet underground nuclear test program occurred in 1978 toward testing increasingly higher-yield devices." The significance of this change lies in the fact that it occurred shortly after the United States secretly changed its method of measuring the strength of Soviet nuclear tests in such a way that the Russians could explode bigger bombs without violating existing treaties. The DIA analysts decided this was "more than coincidence," and pointed to the hair-raising possibility that information about the new measuring system had been leaked to the Kremlin by one of the very few high U.S. officials who knew about it.

Added to the cases already made public in recent years, the investigations currently being pursued paint a grim picture of our nation's intelligence security. The Russians apparently have experienced little difficulty recruiting greedy or gullible Americans to provide military secrets the Kremlin wants.

And while Barnett was well paid for his treachery -- $92,000 -- and Lee and Boyce collected more than $80,000, the KGB doesn't spend more than it has to. It paid young Kampiles, for example, only $3,100 for priceless data on the CIA's most advanced satellite surveillance system.

Footnote: The White House was panic-stricken at the thought that the Barnett scandal would hit the front pages -- and stay there -- during the presidential campaign. The Justice Department, therefore, sat on the case for several months after the FBI obtained a confession from Barnett.

But I got wind of the story, and called CIA Director Stansfield Turner, Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., and William G. Miller, staff director of the Senate Intelligence Committee. Realizing the story was about to blow up in their faces, the Carter people handed it to The New York Times in a version carefully calculated to make the Justice Department look good.

Justice, meanwhile, struck a plea bargain with Barnett. The damage-control mission worked: Unlike Alger Hiss, whose case dragged on for years, Barnett was quickly consigned to the back pages without embarrassing second thoughts -- at least, not before Election Day.

WATCH ON WASTE: In its hopeful campaign to get more Americans riding trains, the Federal Railroad Administration isn't doing anything so obvious as improving service and punctuality. But it's spending $750,000 to appeal to the public's artistic nature. That's the budget for grants to artists under the Northeast Corridor Improvement Project. One $50,000 award has gone for some fancy glass artwork in the Baltimore depot.

Bruce Whitestone

According to the news media the issue of legalized use of marijuana is one that touches a very large number of people. The amount of literature on this subject has increased along with the illegal usage. To help determine what the collective view should be, it is worth examining the economic effects of continuing the legal ban on its use.

In many cases economics is limited in what it can say about a particular issue: economics cannot say whether or not an activity should be made legal. Economic analysis can only come up with predictions and estimates of the costs and benefits of various courses of action.

Obviously people have different values. For example, some may prefer not to smoke or drink yet believe that everyone should have the right to do so. The late Prime Minister John Diefenbaker put it succinctly when he said that, while he personally was opposed to drinking alcoholic beverages, he did not object if others did so.

Many are now convinced that the cost of banning the legal use of drugs is less than the benefit to be derived from permitting their consumption. Economics has little to say about the morality of such a move but it can present the costs associated with such legislation.

Legislation legalizing the use or dealing in marijuana would change certain aspects of the supply of that product. For now, the risks of usage and selling are high and the penalties stiff for being caught. It is to be expected, therefore, that the amount of profit that each particular seller demands is extremely high compared to the markups on goods at grocery stores. The price is many times the wholesale cost. Inasmuch as the penalties are most severe for those caught in large scale activities, the markups are highest at the bottom of the sales ladder. The big importers charge the most, the retail vendors the least, percentage over cost.

The fact that, for example, marijuana is illegal means that manufacturers-growers do not openly advertise their products, so there is no quality control, no brand identification. The seller is spared that cost but loses those benefits. Also, there probably are few middleman costs, such as packaging, financing, and the like. Imperfect market information means that the price and quality vary enormously.

What can an economist predict if the sale and use of marijuana were legalized? First, the quantity supplied would increase because the cost of doing business would fall. There would be fewer risks involved. There would also be some economics of scale in both the production and distribution. Advertising would be much in evidence just as it is with alcoholic beverages.

The quantity demanded probably would increase because the cost of consumption would decrease. The forces tending to lower costs would mean that selling prices would be lower.

Legal production undoubtedly would mean that open competition would force prices down even further. However, legalized marijuana could be saddled with high government taxes as is the case with tobacco and liquor, so that could be a source of government revenue.

It appears then that increased availability and the reduction in price would lead to increased consumption, just as occurred in the United States with repeal of their constitutional prohibition of the sale of alcohol. The removal of the illegal stigma would be another factor contributing to increased consumption. Those who operate beyond the law would no longer be so involved in this activity.

It is up to the electorate and political leadership to decide whether or not these are desirable goals. The other aspects are matters of subjective judgement.

Loans keep farms alive

HALIFAX (CP) — Young people, carrying on the tradition of dawn-to-dusk toil in farming, are using loans and business acumen to keep the family farm alive, say representatives of the agriculture industry.

And they say the key to the strength and perpetuation of the small farm in Canada is freeflowing credit for the qualified person.

Bruce Blacklock bought 200 hectares of Pictou County, N.S. land in 1974 at age 30, went "head over heels in debt," and only now is beginning to see the fruits of his labor and investment.

But even before that, he accumulated 12 years of experience and education, and says he had to drain his savings, borrow from his family, draw on his wife's salary and assign his farm to a lifetime of debt.

He says those are the kind of sacrifices required to unlock the credit needed for investments of up to $150,000 to revive a dormant farm or get a new one going.

As a result, he says, he can borrow from a bank with more ease than a dentist making $50,000, and can have a comparable income — eventually.

"Generally speaking, family farms are alive and well in Canada," says Arnold Rovers, director of the Nova Scotia Farm Loan Board. With a "tremendous amount of credit available to the right person, I don't think it's much harder to go into farming now than it was 30 years ago."

OFFERS LOANS

Rovers' board granted 75 loans last year to people under age 35 who were entering farming. Another 75 successful, first-time applicants were more than 35 or had farmed before.

The provincial government gives the loans for start-up capital, including land and building acquisition, and the banks, in many sectors of the industry, become the primary source from then on.

Rovers and Don Gunn, president of the Nova Scotia Federation of Agriculture, say they are seeing farms started virtually from scratch as well as those being revived or handed down from father to son.

"Farming is still a way of life," Gunn said. "But it's sheer economics too."

He says farmers have got the message that while the lifestyle is steeped in tradition, the profitable farm is the result of modern technology and keen business sense which has little room for the old ways.

"You can't do it anymore with five or six cows," says Gunn. "You just can't make a living on some of the older methods."

"Farmers are not resistant to change," he said. "Anything that will increase efficiency — we will use it."

But some things have not changed. The working week still stretches to 70 or 80 hours, and income remains marginal at least in the first few years in the industry, they say.

And there are still failures.

"You can lose your shirt in no time flat if you don't know what you're doing."

She's a flying, farming photog

TORONTO (CP) — Karen Smith is determined to combine flying, farming and photography into a full-time business.

The 33-year-old former sales manager of a truck leasing company is head of Aerocamera Services Inc., a one-pilot operation.

Her work involves taking aerial photographs of factories, stores and industrial real estate sites on assignment from major corporations, a job which has taken her across Ontario and into Quebec.

"Right now I am doing it all myself," she said.

Her base is a 100-acre (40-hectare) farm she purchased early this year northwest of Toronto on which she built a 460-metre air strip running past her front door and hangars for two airplanes.

She literally takes off for work from the doorstep of her 100-year-old farmhouse, which she says beats commuting by car.

She recently completed a major assignment photographing stores and store sites for Toronto-based food distributor Oshawa Group Ltd. in Ontario and Quebec. Other clients include Gulf Canada Ltd. and BP Canada Inc., both of Toronto, and Ontario Development Corp.

"I have been in love with flying ever since I took my first airplane ride at Buttonville (north of Toronto) when I was 20. I have been flying ever since as a hobby.

"I sold aircraft for a while. But I always dreamed of owning a farm with an airstrip on it from which I could fly my private plane."

A canoe trip down the Nahanni River in the Northwest Territories in 1974 started her on the road to photography.

In 1976, she flew over the western Arctic on a holiday journey, which included a 500-kilometre canoe trip along the Yukon River between Whitehorse and Dawson City and backpacking over the Chilkoot Pass from Skagway, Alaska taking pictures all the way.

WATERLOO LIBRARY FETES 80 YEARS

WATERLOO — The Waterloo Public Library is celebrating its 80th anniversary with a vigorous face lift outside and a rigorous shake-up of the book collection inside.

Under the direction of Rene Vallieres, President and Yvon Labrecque, Treasurer, the old building on Court Street is being spruced up and painted; new shelves are to be built, new curtains have been hung, and the library made bright and welcoming. Inside, thanks to the successful campaign mounted this spring by the Townshippers under Lawrence Purdy, and the generosity of the many Waterloo residents who contributed books over the summer, more than 300 interesting new titles have been added to the library's English collection; of these about 75 to the children's section. These include, in the fiction:

Richard Adams' The girl in a swing; Margaret Drabble's The Waterfall; Mavis Gallants' From the fifteenth district; Dane Giguere's Wings in the Wind; Judith Guest's Ordinary People; Mordecai Richler's Joshua then and now; and John Le Carre's Smiley's people.

Among new non-fiction titles are Peter Foster's The blue-eyed Sheiks; Antonia Fraser's King Charles II; Cynthia Cooke's The MS guide to a woman's health; Marilyn Lithgow's Quiltmaking and quiltmakers and Terence Shortt's Wild birds of Canada and the Americas.

In order to make room for these new titles many older and less popular books will be removed from the shelves to be sold, or given to another library. This will result in a more balanced collection, smaller, but with greater over-all interest, and will make room for our growing collection of French books. Volunteers would be most welcome - call Christina Richards (514) 539-1309.

The Waterloo Public Library is now open: Monday, 3-4:30 p.m.; Wednesday, 7-8:30 p.m.; Friday, 7-8:30 p.m.; Saturday 10:30-12:00 (noon).

Marguerite Vary is there to help you. If finances permit, hours of service may be extended and Saturday morning story hour for the children will be introduced.

Membership cost are: Family, $10 a year; adult, $5 a year; adolescent and child, $2 a year.

ADVANCE POLLING

Advance polling stations shall be open on Sunday and Monday of the week preceding polling day, that is, November 9th and 10th.

These stations shall be open to permit any persons, unable to vote on polling day, November 17th, to exercise his or her right to vote.

All advance polling stations are accessible to handicapped persons

Persons admitted to vote in these advance polling stations, under the Election Act, are the following:

- election officers
- handicapped persons
- any person who has any reason to believe he or she will be absent from the polling subdivision, or
- any person who has reason to believe he or she will be unable to vote in his or her polling subdivision on polling day.

These persons must go to the advance polling station in the polling subdivision in which they are domiciled, and to which their polling station is attached.

However, any person, who has reason to believe he or she will be absent from the assigned station on polling day, must sign an affidavit to that effect, indicating his or her surname, given name, address and age, and take the oath.

These advance polling stations shall be open from 2.00 p.m. to 10.00 p.m., Sunday, November 9th and Monday, November 10th.

Please remember that you may vote only at the advance polling station to which your polling station is attached.

Meals minus fuss and bother

Eating in

BY JUDITH KELLOCK-HEWARD AND PAT TRACY

"I don't mind cooking," said one, "but I hate making meals.' Every day, the breakfast, the brown bags, the coming-for-lunch crowd, and just when you're most tired, dinner.

Here's some food to stoke the inner stove, all in a dish meals, minus fuss and bother with a minimum of washing up. Hurray. You can go curling tonight with the best of them.

BEEF GOULASH
(to feed six hungry people)
4 pounds stewing beef
1 pound mushrooms
2 onions
1 tablespoon Worcestershire Sauce
Pinch curry powder, pinch freshly ground black pepper and pinch salt.
1 bottle DRINKABLE dry red wine. (Take a slurp yourself)

Brown your cubes of meat under the broiler or in a buttery pan. Brown your sliced mushrooms in butter or sear them 3 minutes in a hot, dry pan. Melt the chopped onion in 1 tablespoon butter or margarine. Cook all together slowly in a pot, adding half the wine and a bay leaf, until the meat is meltingly tender.

At this point you can turn it off and go and have a rest.

When your family shows signs of appearing, and heads start popping around the kitchen door, start it to heat again and add the rest of the wine. Let it bubble along for another 20 minutes and serve with broad noodles and a giant dollop of sour cream for each person. Rye rolls with this, and a cabbage slaw. Dinner's ready.

The following recipe was used by a senator, so it must be good enough for the likes of you and me. That is, if all you read about cats and kings is true. It is called:

UNUSUAL MEAT PIE

Cut up a half pound each of veal and lean pork and brown in 2 tablespoons of butter. Add 2 teaspoons salt, pinch of pepper and a clove of garlic. Then pour on three cups of water. Into this mixture put 4 small whole onions and a bay leaf and simmer 30 minutes.

Add 1 cup of dried bread crumbs and one cup of cut up green beans. Add one and a half cups of raw diced potatoes. Cook these until tender. Thicken the mixture if you wish, or not.

Turn into a casserole and top with a nippy cheese pastry made with old Cheddar.

Or, grab a package of ready made rolls to brown and serve and roll out the dough into a pastry crust. Bake at 400 until crust is cooked and mouths start to water.

For the next recipe you need to lay your hands on some veal minute steaks. If your butcher has none, you could ask him to bone some shoulder veal which you will pound yourself. If veal is not within comfy pocketbook range, do as the French do and use slices cut from a raw whole turkey breast. Even supermarkets have these nowadays.

ROLLATEN

Pound and shape the steaks and rub with dry mustard, pepper and salt. Make two flat omelets of 2 eggs mixed with a teaspoon of water. Cover meat with omelet. Put a strip of bacon and a strip of gherkin and carrot on the omelet-covered meat. Roll meat and secure with toothpicks.

Brown in a trifle of butter in a 400-degree F. oven for 15 minutes. Cover and let cook at 325 degrees F. for another 20 minutes.

This gives you time to make a rice pilaff and a salad, and there's room in the oven to put an apple crisp.

...try preparing them ahead

Kay's kitchen korner

BY KAY TAYLOR

Sometimes it is a help if part of a meal can be prepared ahead of time. This may be made 12 to 24 hours ahead and refrigerated until ready to heat.

DUCHESS POTATO
4-6 potatoes
3 tablespoons butter
2 egg yolks
2 tablespoons cream
1 teaspoon salt
pinch nutmeg
pepper to taste

Boil the potatoes, drain and dry. Add butter and mash over low heat. Remove from heat and add egg yolk, cream, salt, nutmeg and pepper. Beat creamy and smooth. Put in baking dish.

Bake in 400 deg. F. oven for 10 to 15 minutes 'til top is lightly brown.

BROWN BEAN SOUP

Soak 2 cups beans overnight.

Drain and then cover with 2 quarts cold water. Add 1 tablespoon salt and bring to a boil. Cover and let simmer for two hours. Put through strainer to puree.

Fry ½ lb. bacon in small pieces. Remove and add to bacon fat one medium onion, minced, 1 clove garlic minced fine. Stir 'til light brown and add all to soup.

If clearer soup is wanted add water or consomme. Salt and pepper to taste.

Both recipes were brought home from the west, but I believe originate from Madame Benoit's Cook Book — for which we thank Madame Benoit for the courtesy.

Learning about the herbs (we grew in our garden).

SAVOURY

-For hash, a MUST. Use also in bean and lentil dishes, with roast pork chops, meat balls, scrambled eggs, mashed potatoes, pea soup, beef stew, fresh green peas and meat loaf.

Ann Landers

Warts worry young Landers reader

Dear Ann Landers:

I am a 24-year-old female with a baffling intimate problem.

I began having sex when I was 18. Two years ago I managed to get a severe case of venereal warts. I had never heard of them before. Apparently they are highly contagious and difficult to get rid of. I have been applying chemicals and have had electro-cauterization, but the warts keep coming back.

Please perform a valuable service to your readers and write something in the column about venereal warts. I need to know how to get rid of mine — permanently.

Too Green In Greenville

Dear Green:

The two procedures you have described, applying chemicals and electro-cauterization, are the best techniques for getting rid of venereal warts. Obviously you had the good sense to see a doctor.

I consulted with a knowledgeable dermatologist, and he said electro-cauterization, if properly done, should solve the problem permanently. He pointed out that warts are caused by viruses, and a woman whose venereal warts keep coming back is probably getting them from the same partner who has not gotten rid of his.

Dear Ann Landers:

I'm 40, divorced, better-than-average-looking and I still get whistles. I have a very good job and am able to support myself. My ex-husband also insists on paying alimony (guilt) because he left me to marry another woman. I tell you this so you will know I do not need a meal ticket.

I have been dating an interesting widower for nearly a year. I don't see anyone else, and we have talked seriously about getting married. Several months ago it became apparent that he was never available on Friday evenings. Finally, I asked why. He said, "Fridays are reserved for my secretary. We always have dinner and finish up the week's work." He asked me to be patient because "next year" her husband retires and they will be moving to Nevada.

Shall I go along with this, or tell him to take his choice? (P.S. The secretary is 50-plus, nothing to look at, but — as you know — that doesn't mean anything.;

Anonymous in Charlottesville

Dear Char:

If you really care for the man, relax. Tell him those Friday night dinners are OK with you and now that you know why he's not available, you will accept invitations from other men on Friday. Then do it. If he is sincere about wanting to marry you, he'll knock off those Friday dinners and quit fooling around.

Dear Ann Landers:

This could hardly be considered a problem, but my girl and I would like your opinion on a matter that we've been arguing about for a long time.

When olives are served, Freddie puts the whole olive in his mouth and then spits it out on the plate. Sometimes it goes "ping". This is embarrassing.

I say it is improper to touch either the olive or the pit with one's fingers. The olive should be pierced with a fork (or speared, if you will). Then the pit should be removed from the mouth with a spoon and put on the plate.

Please tell us who is right and who is wrong.

Mt. Holyoke Argument

Dear Holyoke:

Neither of you is 100 per cent right. If there's an olive fork on the tray, it should be used for "spearing". If not, fingers are OK. The meat should be nibbled off the olive and the pit can be removed from the mouth with a spoon, it it's handy, or by hand. (Pinging is definitely a no-no!)

Dunham artists show wares

The semi-annual craft in the parish hall show is becoming a tradition in Dunham.

Held every June and November, last weekend's show was the 10th such event. Although the show has moved locations since the first one, it has not lost its local flavor.

Most of the up to 40 artists are from Dunham, Brigham, Sutton, Cowansville, Waterloo and Granby areas. Last weekend's event had displays of weaving, ceramics, knitting, patchwork and other handmade materials. The craft show is organized by Mrs. Pearl Higginbotham.

Social notes

Cancer Society holds social

The Canadian Cancer Society held a social meeting September 3 at the Waterloo parish hall. The cheese and wine served to the group was graciously supplied by local merchants Paul-Andre Roy Fruits et Legumes, IGA Beaulac, Ouellette Fruits et Legumes, J.P. Beaulac Epicerie, Metro Lussier. Mrs. Lucille Milaenen, president of the Waterloo section thanked everyone for their participation in the financing campaign.

The itinerant secretary of the Canadian Cancer Society, Mr. Raymond Rouleau received a cheque of $1,835.55 -- results of the campaign. This was not counting contributions, directly sent to the society for the amount of $1,190.00.

Mrs. Marguerite Fortin, ex-president of the Waterloo section, was honored at this gathering; she was presented a testimonial plate for her loyal services to the society. Mrs. Fortin is still an active member of the Waterloo section.

In Quebec only the Canadian Cancer Society will spend $2,302,186. this year. The objective of the educational program of the society is to save human lives by informing the public on this disease. Brochures, films are available to associations or anyone interested by contacting their local section.

The president's objective is to form a welfare committee whose members will be elected at a public meeting that will be held in a few months.

Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Martin of Pigeon Hill announce the marriage of their youngest daughter, Linda Lois to Mr. David Peter Chartrand of Stanbridge East, only son of Mr. Hector Chartrand of Sutton and Mrs. Keith Darbyson of Stanbridge East. The wedding took place at the United Church, Bedford on Nov. 1, 1980 at 11 a.m.

80th birthday

Congratulations are extended to Mrs. Jennie Sutherland on the occasion of her 80th birthday, November 15. Mrs. Sutherland, formerly a resident of Lennoxville now resides at the Grace Christian Home.

Golden Age Club meets

WATERLOO — Members of the Golden Age Club met at the Legion Hall on Oct. 27 with players of 500 at eleven tables and one table with the game board.

Prizes for highest scores were taken by Carlton Ladd, Don Kavanagh, Dorothy Byers and Gladys Chapman.

Door prizes went to Valentine Vintinner, Elvia Johnson, Ruth Lefebvre, Juliette Morin, Myrtle Hilliker, Afton McCutcheon, Eva Carrarra, Mabel Healey, John Gibbon, Ebba Parks, Dorothy Fredricks, Anna Giroux, Herb Foster, Annie Ladd, Glenna Maynes, Irene Boyce, Lena Fortin, Hazel Spencer, Mary Emmett, Loys Heatherington, Emma Marshall, Donald Spencer, Helen Mizener, Alice Kavanagh and Earl McCutcheon.

Tickets were sold on a lamp, which was drawn for and won by Lena Fortin.

Refreshments were served and the group will meet again on Nov. 10.

DEAR POLLY — When preparing fresh string beans for dinner I use my kitchen scissors to snip off the ends. I find this works faster than using a knife. — M.E.

DEAR POLLY — After buying some bed linens I left them in their plastic wrapping when I put them away in the closet. After several months when I opened them these linens had a terrible chemical odor so I put them in the washer with a cup of vinegar. But after the washing cycle had finished they still smelled so I added one-fourth cup of baking soda to the rinse water and the odor was gone. The combination of vinegar and soda was great. — EVELYN

Unsociable Carlton wins third Cy Young award

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Carlton, to the surprise of no one, is the National League Cy Young award winner for a record-tying third time.

And normally there would be comments from the 35-year-old Philadelphia Phillies left-hander about how it feels to be honored again as the league's best pitcher.

But, Carlton, who played a key role in leading the Phillies to their first World Series championship, was unavailable.

He was voted the honor Tuesday by a Baseball Writers Association of America panel, and joined Tom Seaver and Sandy Koufax as the only three-time winners of the award.

The fiercely private Carlton has refused to talk to the media for the past several seasons. That policy continued through the playoffs and the World Series and he was not available to be notified that he had won the award.

WENT HUNTING

He had been expected to go to Japan this week to conduct some baseball clinics with team-mates Mike Schmidt and Pete Rose, but the trip was cancelled he went hunting instead.

"It (the Cy Young award) was a very clear cut choice," said Bob Boone, his catcher. "He was just outstanding, especially considering the number of innings he worked and his strikeout total."

The Phillie southpaw was 24-9 with a 2.34 earned run average during the regular season, leading the majors with 286 strikeouts.

Carlton previously won the award in 1972 and 1977.

In the voting, Carlton drew 118 points, with 23 of 24 firstplace votes and one secondplace ballot. Jerry Reuss of Los Angeles Dodgers got the other first-place vote and wound up a distant second with 55 points. Jim Bibby of Pittsburgh Pirates was third with 28, followed by Joe Niekro of Houston Astros with 11 and Tug McGraw of Philadelphia, Steve Rogers of Montreal Expos, Joe Sambito of Houston and Mario Soto of Cincinnati Reds with one point apiece.

Plattsburgh whips BU 5-2

LENNOXVILLE (AR) — Bishop's hockey Gaiters lost an exhibition game 5-2 to Plattsburgh State last night in Lennoxville. The Gaiters also lost the services of defenceman Mike Sweeney for two months with torn knee ligaments.

Plattsburgh outshot the Gaiters 38-28 in a game that saw the home side take nine minor penalties against five for the visitors.

Plattsburgh goals were scored by Marc Lalonde, Gaetan Anjou, Kevin Kelly, Brent Reed and Denis Poulin — all Quebecers. Bishop's two goals were scored by Carl Graham and Peter Ormond.

Habs out-skate Nordiques

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec played like gangbusters but came away empty, as it has so many times this season, as Montreal Canadiens edged the Nordiques 5-4 in one of two National Hockey League games Tuesday night.

At Uniondale, N.Y., defenceman Denis Potvin registered five points and Bob Nystrom and Butch Goring fired first-period goals 17 seconds apart to lead the Islanders to a 6-4 triumph over Detroit Red Wings.

Montreal trailed the Nordiques 2-1 in the first period and 4-3 in the third before Yvon Lambert deflected Guy Lapointe's blast from the blue line at 10:46 of the final session to earn the Canadiens their fifth victory in 12 starts.

Montreal head coach Claude Ruel breathed a sigh of relief following the game.

The Nordiques, with a 1-8-4 won-lost-tied record, had Montreal on the ropes early in the third period before Guy Lafleur tied the contest 4-4 at 3:35.

"Don't let their record fool you," Ruel said. "They have a well-balanced offensive team and will start to win their share of games very soon."

Lambert sat half-clothed in the dressing room and shook his head. "They always play very inspired hockey against us," he said.

"You look at that team tonight and wonder how they can have only one win," Lambert added.

Mark Napier staked Montreal to a 1-0 first-period lead at 1:56, but Peter Stastny and Jamie Hislop supplied the Nordiques with a 2-1 lead before the period ended.

Stastny's goal, at 9:02, was Quebec's first shot at Michel Larocque, while Hislop's go-ahead goal at 11:43 was the third Nordiques shot on goal.

Steve Shutt and Rejean Houle put Montreal ahead late in the second session, but Michel Goulet scored the equalizer for the Nordiques with 33 seconds left to play in the period.

Anton Stastny put Quebec ahead 4-3 at 1:48 of the final period.

"They're a very dangerous club if you're not careful," said Houle, whose second-period goal was his first of the season.

"They pass very well and the Stastny brothers have added quite a bit to their offence," he added.

Former Canadiens netminder Michel Plasse was bombarded with 36 Montreal drives, while Michel Larocque turned away 20 of the 24 shots he faced.

NBA: Pistons catch Bucks

Everything looked bleak Tuesday night for the slumping Detroit Pistons who, with a 1-10 record, were playing on the home court of the 11-2 Milwaukee Bucks and trailing 81-70 after three quarters.

But it all turned around in that final quarter for the Pistons as they beat the Bucks 98-96 to snap their 10-game winning streak.

John Long scored 33 points for Detroit, including 12 in the decisive fourth quarter.

In other National Basketball Association games, Washington Bullets smashed Atlanta Hawks 122-98, Utah Jazz nipped Kansas City Kings 107-104, San Diego Clippers defeated Dallas Mavericks 116-102, Phoenix Suns edged Indiana Pacers 109-108 and Los Angeles Lakers beat Portland Trail Blazers 119-118.

Meanwhile, Magic Johnson, who led Los Angeles Lakers to nine victories in 11 games, was named Tuesday the NBA player of the month for October. Johnson, who was the most valuable player in the NBA playoffs when the Lakers won the championship, averaged 23.2 points, 9.2 rebounds, 8.5 assists and four steals per game during the month.

Alouettes work on special teams

MONTREAL (CP) — The performance of Montreal Alouettes' special teams could spell the difference in the Canadian Football League Eastern Conference semifinal against Ottawa Rough Riders on Saturday.

Montreal's special teams have raised a few eyebrows this season, particularly against the Rough Riders, but for all the wrong reasons.

In their 49-14 loss to Ottawa on Oct. 5, the special teams were appalling.

"They were just terrible," said Montreal head coach Joe Scannella.

"(Bruce) Walker returned a punt for a touchdown and they (Ottawa) blocked a (Wally Buono) punt and recovered it on our five-yard line," he added. "In the game before that our special teams really hurt us."

Former Alouette coach Marv Levy stressed the importance of special teams during his stay with Montreal and Scannella, former special teams coach with Oakland Raiders of the National Football League, has continued the tradition.

Scannella said Gerry McGrath, who replaced Don Sweet earlier this season after the latter was released with three other veterans, will be his kicker in the crucial contest.

Special teams coach Art Asselta believes the kicking teams have been unjustly criticized.

Scannella said he plans to replace several less-experienced special teams players with veterans against Ottawa.

Meanwhile, The Canadian Football League reported attendance took a nosedive during the past season and Montreal was one of the most significant victims.

Figures obtained from the nine CFL clubs on Tuesday showed that 125,218 fewer people paid to watch the 72 regular-season games this year compared with 1979.

The Eastern Conference drew 116,996 fewer spectators while the Western Conference dropped by 8,222. The greatest loss occurred in Montreal where the Alouettes' attendance sagged by 97,311.

The Alouettes, who finished at 8-8, recorded their biggest crowd of the season last Saturday in their final regular-season date against Edmonton Eskimos with an attendance of 42,234.

"We've sat down several times and tried to figure out our problems with attendance," said Fred Roberts, Montreal's public relations director. "We've attributed our problems mainly to the success of the (Montreal) Expos right in the middle of our season.

"Because of their success, CBC picked up their away games the same time as our home games were played. Also, we had several rainy day games, five or six of them, and that prevented a lot of people from coming."

The drop in attendance at Toronto and Vancouver was not as severe. A total of 17,505 fewer fans watched the Argos while the Lions sold 36,933 fewer tickets.

"It's a fair chunk to lose," said Gord Oliver, the Argonauts' comptroller. "Roughly, it represents about a $90,000 loss, but it's hard to say exactly because we increased our prices this year."

In Vancouver, the Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League outdrew the Lions by attracting 464,100 fans in 17 games. The Lions drew just 171,642 fans in eight games.

Tottenham advances in Brit soccer

LONDON (Reuter) — A goal by Argentine World Cup star Osvaldo Ardiles carried Tottenham Hotspur into the quarterfinals of the English League Cup soccer competition with a 1-0 victory over Arsenal on Tuesday.

The goal by Ardiles — his first of the season — came midway though the opening half when he slammed home the rebound of a shot by team-mate Ricardo Villa.

The match had been postponed until Tuesday because Irish players on both teams had been needed for a World Cup qualifying match.

Jock hearts healthier — MD

TORONTO (CP) — Athletes have heathier hearts than most people because exercise enlarges that muscle, making it more efficient, says an authority on sports medicine.

Dr. Ernest Jokl, a hurdler on the German Olympic team in 1928, told an international symposium on fitness that the 1928 Games in Amsterdam were the first at which athletes were x-rayed during physical examinations.

And when it was found that highly trained athletes had large hearts it led to fears that this enlargement was similar to the grosssly enlarged heart seen in disease.

But Jokl, now professor of medicine emeritus at the University of Kentucky, Lexington, and a professor of sports medicine at the University of Berlin, said there is no similarity.

The enlargement of athletes' hearts is a result of their training, enabling the heart to put out larger volumes of blood more rapidly with less effort.

LIVERS ENLARGE

Athletes' livers also become larger and more efficient, he said.

Sedentary people, on the other hand, have small, inefficient hearts, which he calls loafer's heart.

WATERVILLE UNBEATEN IN ETHL PLAY

LENNOXVILLE (ME) — Waterville maintained its dominance of the Eastern Townships Hockey League on Sunday evening. Bertrand Roy and Gilles Tremblay scored two goals apiece as Waterville routed Bell Canada 8-1. Also scoring for the winners were Pierre Prevost, Jean Gauthier, Dave Perras and Gilles Ribaux. Bruno Veilleux replied for Bell.

In the other game, the Lumber Kings chalked up their first win of the season over Hodge Auto, an easy 7-2 victory. Melvin Nadeau had two goals for the Kings while Jim Harrison, John Laberee, Herbie Armour, Bryan Perrault and Brian Trussler added others. Harvey Stevens and Andy Galichon replied for second-place Hodge Auto.

ASBESTOS: KILLER OR MERE HAZARD?

Inquiry compares fibre shape, toxicity

The relationship between asbestos fibre and various cancers of the lungs and gastrointestinal tract are like the link between many other products and cancer — 50 per cent proven, 50 per cent suspected.

It is known that asbestos fibres cause mesethelioma and asbestosis; some of the largest settlements in U.S. jurisprudence have gone to the families of shipyard workers who contracted these diseases and died.

The asbestos industry has worked overtime with the lethality problem. The Asbestos Research Institute at the University of Sherbrooke worked on methods to screen potential mineworkers for susceptibility to the fibre. Recently they announced a breakthrough in the treatment of fibres with other minerals to render them less harmful without destroying the fibre's fireproofing properties.

Even the maximum permissible two - fibre - per - cubic - centimetre - of - air standard is now under challenge, with some scientists arguing even .00001 fibre is enough to trigger cancer in some individuals. But few researchers agree on the lethal level, nor are there many who agree on the hottest new question — whether asbestos in liquids has the same carcinogenic effect on the gastrointestinal tract.

The Record's Judith Kellock-Heward attended the information session held Friday by the Royal Commission on matters of health and safety relating to asbestos use in Ontario and files two reports.

Two others, concerning the politics of asbestos and environmental issues in Quebec, are by Merritt Clifton, whose work describing the use of asbestos tailings as ballast on at least two CPR lines in the Townships made headlines across Canada.

By JUDITH KELLOCK-HEWARD

TORONTO — The $64 question arose during the information session of the Royal Commission: What is the relationship between toxicity of fibres and their shape?

The question, posed by John Sullivan of the University of Western Ontario's Occupational Health and Safety Resource Centre reopens the matter of hazardous materials used in building sites for the purpose of fireproofing, well after the cleanup already begun by Ontario schools at an expected eventual (10 years) cost of $50 million.

Dr. Gordon Atherley of the Centre for Occupational Health and Safety replied that the shape and size of asbestos fibres were thought to determine their behavior in the body. Scientists believe that straight ampibole fibres are caught in the lining of the abdomen if they happen to be large and in the lung lining if they are small.

Such a critical size range might mean that all fibres in the critical dimension range might come under suspicion. Joked Bill O'Keith, head of the Waterloo-Northumberland School Board, "Our cleanup is complete unless we have to rip out the fibreglass asbestos replacement."

Atherley supplied answers to nine questions about asbestos from his assessment of reports prepared in Britain, the U.S., Canada and the European Economic Community. A separate report from the centre itself was forthcoming, he said.

In listing the adverse effects of asbestos exposure on health, Atherley included asbestosis, mesethelioma and lung cancer.

Bodily changes associated with exposure he names as asbestos bodies, asbestos warts and pleural plaques.

He explained how asbestos fibres tear away the delicate pleural lining of the lung, causing progressive scarring or fibrosis. "What we don't know," he said, "is how much dust causes how much disease."

Another malady linked to exposure is mesethelioma, a cancer of the pleural lining of the lung which kills in a matter of months after a long dormant period.

The presence of asbestos bodies in the lungs, said Atherley, may denote the beginning of asbestosis. He described how the fibre spears the hagosite "like a brochette spearing a kebob" and kills it.

Plaques are areas of calcification in the back wall of the chest which are believed to be evidence of exposure.

Atherley outlined the controversy among scientists over the toxicity of the two asbestos types: the white chrysotile asbestos which has a curly fibre and the blue and brown crysitolite and amacite fibres which are straight.

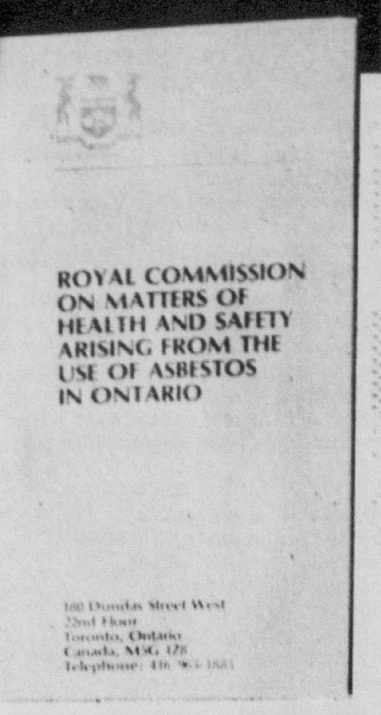
Atherley referred to some aspects of the controversy as political rather than scientific but said the judgment of the North American scientific community was that both types of fibres were equally toxic.

Atherley showed slides to illustrate carelessness in handling and disposal of asbestos in the past. Other glimpses were of studied workers removing asbestos from an Ontario school this year, equipped with their own air supply.

Crucial to the question of "Is there a safe level of exposure?" Atherley said all reports opted for a linear dose-response curve, which left no alternative to believing there are no safe levels. He promised the COHS report shortly on the subject.

None of the four reports showed age as related to the health risk, although smoking appears to result in increased risk of lung cancer.

Atherley's thumbnail history left no doubt that while discoveries of links between disease and asbestos exposure were discovered as early as 1906, it was not until 1960 that the face of research increased sufficiently to explore these in any detail.



At the conclusion of the Atherley summary, Lionel Piuze, head of the Quebec Asbestos Mining Association, rose to read a prepared statement on the value of the asbestos industry to the Quebec economy during the last 40 years. Piuze claimed the Association considers two-fibre-per-cubic-centimetre of air limit too high and the safe limit now observed was 1 fibre per cubic centimetre.

The association's medical adviser, Michel Lesage, stated that although lung cancer, asbestosis and mesethelioma were related to exposure, no studies prove that gastrointestinal cancer is caused by exposure. "The case of GI cancer remains controversial," he said.

Lesage disagreed with the Atherley assessment on the shape of dose-response relationships, which in his view are S-shaped, allowing for safe levels of asbestos, which he said existed at 2 fibres per cubic centimetre, and allowed adequate protection for the worker.

To this Neilson replied that the speaker made his stomach turn. "Everyone should ship all their asbestos to Quebec," he suggested.

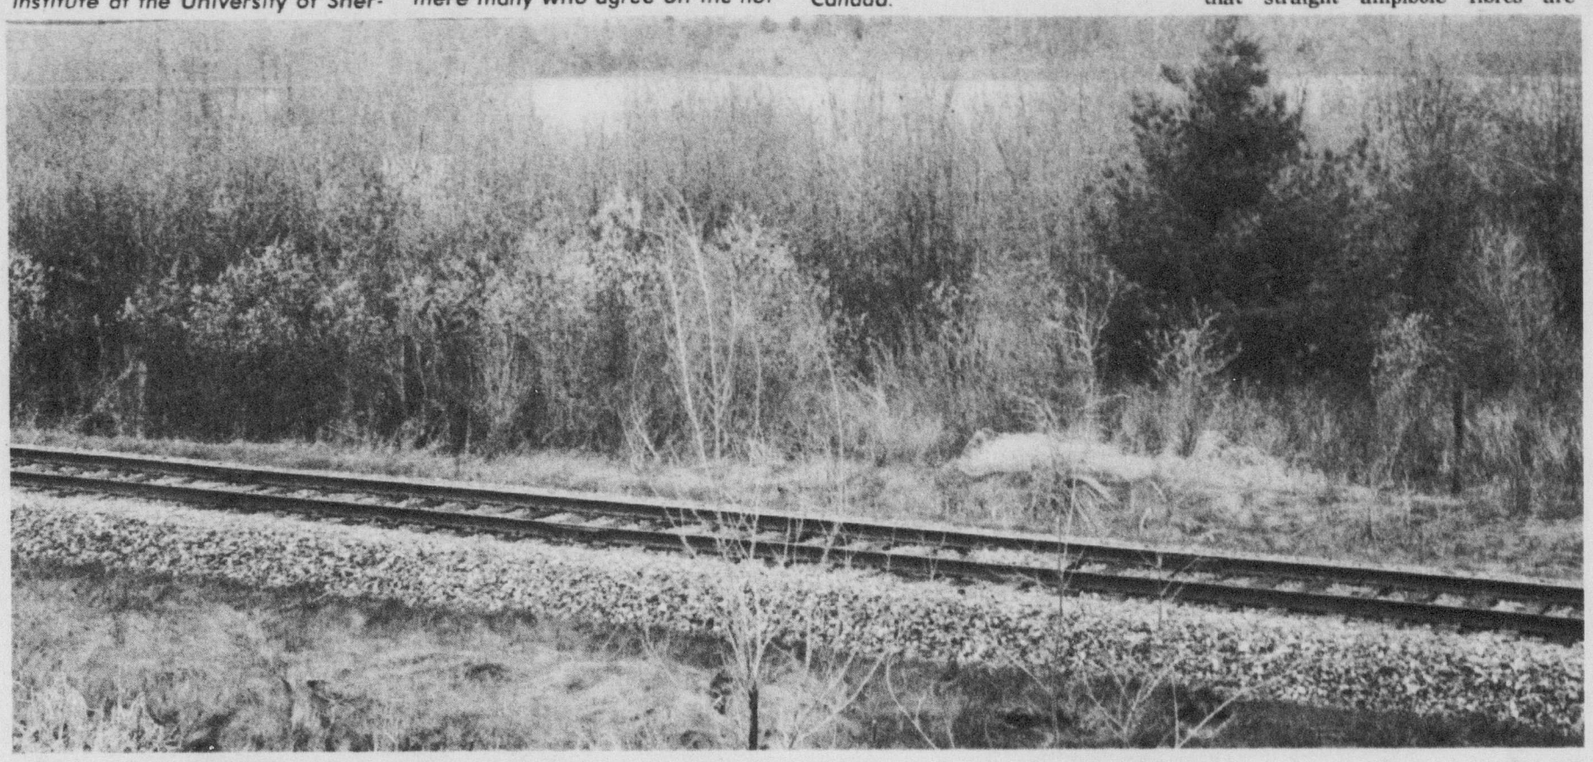
Dave Brennan of McMaster University's Occupational Health Department asked the Commission if it had set any priorities in attacking the asbestos as a workplace substance or in its widespread use as insulation for building and brake-drum linings.

Dupre replied that as yet no priorities had been set but that the question of civil liability would be addressed at some point during the Commission's research.

An Alberta Teachers' Federation representative urged the Commission to furnish expenses for groups calling witnesses from outside Ontario with a fund set aside for such a purpose.

"Unless the Commission provides funding for witnesses to appear, the expense of bringing them in will have a limiting effect on the hearings," he said.

According to Dupre the Commission is not authorized to give financial help to those wishing to present briefs. It can, however, apply for an amendment to the order in council which would enable it to do so. The Commission will perform its own research under director Donald Dewees.



Environment Quebec says asbestos content is lower near the railway tracks, but an investigator was seen taking samples 12 feet upstream from the line.

Provincial study's early finds

Yamaska stats confirm pollution

By MERRITT CLIFTON

BROME-MISSISQUOI — Environment Quebec's full report on water pollution from the Canadian Pacific Railroad asbestos line is not in yet, but preliminary finds tend to confirm those of previous reports.

The Yamaska River still contains anywhere from 2.4 million fibres per litre up to over 50 million fibres per litre, depending upon weather conditions at time of sampling.

Yamaska River statistics were leaked over the weekend to the Front de Depollution de la Yamaska and confirmed by field inspector Gerard Begin Monday morning. Of nine samples Environment Quebec took during the first week in September, results have been released for six.

The remaining counts were 2.4 million fibres per litre, 2.8 million, 3.4 million 11 million and 14 million.

The lower figures are consistent with Health and Welfare Canada findings during September 1979. Both September samplings came during extended dry periods, with minimal recent runoff.

The highest Environment Quebec figures are approximately halfway between the Health and Welfare findings and those of Environment Canada who tested at similar locations in May, 1979 during both wet and dry weather.

The F.D.Y. believe most of the new results come from between Farnham and Cowansville. Begin of Environment Quebec would not specify exact testing sites but said the lowest samples came from spots closest to the Canadian Pacific Railroad tracks. But Tom and Lori Bickerdike of Abercorn, however, spotted an Environment Quebec investigator taking such a sample 12 feet upstream from the tracks. High asbestos concentrations from ballast runoff would tend to be downstream.

Begin added that results are not yet available for samples taken from Elizabeth Page's well in Sutton Junction. The Page well is only four feet deep, located about 20 feet down the slope from the railroad tracks. Page campaigned for two years to get her water tested, starting almost as soon as the asbestos ballast was laid, in summer, 1978.,

"People hear about the samples they took from my well and call me, asking if I can help them get their water tested," Page says.

"But I didn't have any special contacts. It was just me with my little pen, sending out letters."

Environment Quebec samples are analyzed by the Ontario Research Foundation, since Quebec lacks, asbestos water pollution testing facilities and private tests cost approximately $400 apiece. No results are available from independent testing conducted by E.B. Henson at the University of Vermont.

Regardless of current findings, Begin reports that Environment Quebec will take similar samples in the Missisquoi River basin before contemplating any action.

...we drink it all the time

DR. GYAN RAHJANS
...one of many studies

By JUDITH KELLOCK-HEWARD

Dr Gyan Rahjans, author of Engineering Aspects of Asbestos Dust Control, says causes of GI cancer remained controversial insofar as its presence in drinking water supplies is concerned.

"You must remember the Zanarek study is only one among hundreds," he said.

Rahjans went on to discuss the difficulty of measuring asbestos present in the atmosphere far from industrial sites.

"It's present in nature itself. Almost anywhere you can find asbestos in soil, in air and in water. I don't think you'll find any place where they don't contain at least a little. But in the countryside, away from highways the amounts can be infinitesimal and measurement is nearly impossible."

Rahjans continued, "There will never be safe level established for water; the difficulties are too great. But that doesn't mean you can't have guidelines drawn from industrial contamination."

Rahjans' book supplies some levels of asbestos occurrence:

Beer (Canadian), 4.3 million fibres per litre.

Ginger ale, 12.2 million fibres per litre.

Tapwater, Ottawa, 2.0 million fibres per litre.

Tapwater, Montreal, 2.4 million fibres per litre.

Tapwater, Toronto, 4.4 million of fibres per litre.

Tapwater, Drummondville, 2.9 millions of fibres per litre.

Asbestos, 5.9 millions of fibres per litre.

Thetford Mines, Trout lake, 172.7 millions of fibres per litre.

Melted snow, Ottawa to 30 centimeters during three weeks' precipitation, 33.5 millions of fibres per litre.

Environment is hot issue in B-M campaign

By MERRITT CLIFTON

COWANSVILLE — Environmental issues are a focus in the Brome-Missisquoi election campaign this week.

MNA candidates Pierre Paul Ravenelle of the Union Nationale and Girard Comptois of the Parti Quebecois square off Thursday night in a forum sponsored jointly by End Of The Line and the Singer Mountain Association, while Liberal candidate Pierre Paradis has promised to counter with a written position paper.

End Of The Line has already received informal assurances from all three candidates that they will work to remove the Canadian Pacific Railroad's controversial 'asbestos' line', 90 miles of which lie within Brome and Missisquoi counties. Members are now pressing the candidates to produce detailed plans for action. Union Nationale campaign manager Jean Frechette has given the asbestos line a top priority, meeting four times in three days with End Of The Line leaders and also visiting some of the families most affected by asbestos runoff. Union Nationale researchers in Quebec City are reportedly investigating the entire asbestos line dossier to discover just why the CPR used a known carcinogen as track ballast and why nothing has been done yet to remove it, despite at least two government studies confirming the potential dangers.

The Parti Quebecois had initially intended to skip the environmental forum, but then rescheduled other planned events, including a meeting with premier Rene Levesque, as environmental issues became more prominent. In addition to the asbestos line, candidates will discuss Domtar's clear-cutting on Singer Mountain, including the environmental impact report the government has been asked for by concerned residents and strategies for cleaning up the Yamaska River. The Front Depollution De La Yamaska was originally among the environmental forum sponsors, but withdrew when Paradis refused to attend. Unofficially, members and sympathizers still support the forum.

Paradis refused, according to press secretary Mark Turcot, "because we are the front runners. We do not need to take three or four hours out of our schedule and draw a crowd for Ravenelle and Comptois."

Turcot further charged that the Front Depollution De La Yamaska consists chiefly of P.Q. sympathizers, who would be unreceptive to Paradis no matter what he says. "Now, if you ask us to give you a written statement on the asbestos line, the Yamaska, or the clear-cutting," Turcot stated, "we will be happy to oblige".

Paradis and Turcot have been heavily critical of government actions on the Yamaska, including the pipeline now under construction to supply Farnham with drinking water from the south fork. Both Yamaska forks are heavily polluted, and Turcot embarrassed the government in September with a poll showing 86 per cent of Farnham residents opposed to the pipeline scheme and in favor of artesian wells.

Union Nationale representative Fabian Cordeau has also criticized government action on the Yamaska, and has compiled an extensive file on pollution sources and remedies. This will supply source material for Ravenelle's expected attack on both the P.Q. and Liberal environmental record. "I think the Liberals are making a big mistake in passing up this forum," Frechette states, "because our man is going to get elected. He's going to be a county man, rather than a party man who only works as part of a larger entity." Both Frechette and Parti Quebecois organizers believe the environmentalist vote could swing the November 17 election. The margin of victory in past Brome-Missisquoi elections is traditionally smaller than the number of signatures on either the End Of The Line petitions opposing use of asbestos ballast, or the Singer Mountain petitions opposing clear-cutting.

The environmental forum will be held at the St. Leon Community Centre, 131 Brown Street, in Cowansville on Thursday, November 6th, at 7:30 p.m.

A PRAYER FOR PEACE

Prayers have been offered for world peace,
Songs have been sung, for wars to cease,
Yet, ammunitions are being made.
Have we forgotten where our loved ones lay,
Were their lives given in vain,
Too, look on those, that came back blind and maim,
As a child I saw some horrors of war,
Still memories and a heart left sore,
Pray that our heroes died not in vain,
Pray no more wars follow to come again,
Remember our loved ones in Flander's graves,
Where crosses stand, that we may be saved,
Down with those that have lust and greed,
May our generations be kept free,
From war's horrors, we have lived to see,
Grant us peace, Lord, and may wars cease.

JUST WORDS

An unkind word was spoken,
Making the eyes glisten with tears,
A treasured vase was broken,
A memory of bygone years,
A mother's heart is seared,
By a child's thoughtless tongue,
A kind word would have cheered,
Spoken by that selfsame one,
So sad hearts are broken,
By thoughtless cruel words,
Words need never have been spoken,
If our tempers had been curbed,
If we would only stop to think,
The heartaches that we cause,
Words cannot be recalled, now a broken link,
Of life, surely we would pause.

LIFE'S PATHWAY

Life is not a pathway paved with gold,
It's a challenge to reach and hold,
There will be drawbacks, some days will look blue,
Some tasks may be difficult, it's true,
However, be not downhearted. The way is not far,
So look up to the sky; glimpse a star.
Often we need a friend's cheery smile,
Or to chat briefly for awhile,
Life's pathway is not paved with gold,
Often we need a friendly hand to hold,
Sometimes we falter. Often we stumble,
We get discouraged and we grumble,
Pitfalls are many, temptations a hassle,
The road is difficult for some to travel,
Throughout this life we live today,
So much stress along the way,
It takes perseverance, patience too,
So take courage, it will see you through.

WINIFRED DEWING,

I'M SORRY

I never meant to hurt you,
that was not my intent.
I never meant you to feel,
the pain of hearing
a thoughtless, uncaring word.

I never wanted to see the pain in your eyes and be so aware,
that I put it there
The pain,
reflected in your eyes.

My life is devoted to pleasing you
You are first in my life.
Everything that I strive to accomplish is done for your approval
I live for your praise.

I never meant to hurt you,
or defy you in any way.
I never meant to say
those thoughtless, uncaring words.

Please forgive me,
For I can't bear to see you hurt.
Please forgive me,
and let me try,
to erase the pain from your eyes.

ONE AND ONE, MAKE ONE
(A Wedding Song)

You are one and I am one
And one and one make two.
But in the case of you and I
This factor is now true.
We have made our wedding vows
A new life has begun
So in the case of you and I
One and one, make one.

You have left your home, my dear
And I have left mine too,
We will build one all of our own
And live as one not two.
We will be together dear
Until this life is done
So in the case of you and I
One and one, make one.

ACW meeting

NORTH HATLEY — The regular meeting of the Anglican Church Women of St. Barnabas Church was held at the Community Centre with an attendance of 14 members, and was chaired by Miss H. Ireland.

The devotional period was taken by Mrs. A. Eke, and a poem on Thanksgiving was read by Mrs. L. Parry.

Minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. C. Coleman. The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. E. Detchon.

Thankoffering boxes were received by Mrs. A. Styan.

Final plans were made for the Christmas Tea and Sale to be held at the Community Centre on November 13.

Tea hostesses at the Connaught Home for November will be Mrs. G. LeBaron, Mrs. D. Spice and Miss M. Riley.

Tea was served by the hostesses, Mrs. Coleman and Miss Ireland.

\+ + +

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Little of Lexington, Mass., were recent weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Moulton, River Street. Their daughter, Marcia, and friend, Kathy Brickey of Nashua were also guests.

While here, the Littles and Moultons attended the Sparkes - Little wedding at Huntingville.

Guild meets

SOUTH STUKELY — St. Matthews Ladies Guild was held at the home of Mrs. Leonard Wright on Wednesday evening with a good attendance.

Mrs. Clifford Wright, President, opened the meeting by all repeating the Prayer.

Mrs. Myrtle McLellan Secretary, read the minutes of the July meeting. Celia Gamache, Treasurer, gave her report and all was accepted as read.

Mrs. Clifford Wright offered her home for the November meeting, when plans will be made for Christmas baskets.

Church calendars were sold.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by other members and enjoyable social hour was spent.

Legion hosts senior citizens

SUTTON (MB) — On Saturday, October 25 at 12 noon, the members of the Royal Canadian Legion No. 158 of Sutton, assisted by the members of the Women's Auxiliary, served turkey dinner with all the trimmings, to the senior citizens. Over 150 dinners were served in the hall and 25 dinners taken to seniors who were unable to come to the hall.

Before partaking of this bountiful meal, Grace was said by Mrs. Winnifred Long and Father Real Lareau.

Lucky tickets were drawn for the Armistice dinner taking place on November 8 at the l'Horizon. Winners were Ernest Haynes, Mrs. Margaret Paul, Mrs. Alice Hawley, and Mrs. Bernice Russell. Mrs. Russell, on behalf of the senior citizens, thanked the Legion members and their helpers for this delicious meal, with Mrs. Joseph Drouin following with a thank-you in French.

The President Jan Chayer welcomed all to this dinner which is one of the Legion's yearly projects. Our Legion hall on Pleasant St. has been sold, and, starting in April, a new hall will be built on the Legion grounds on Curley St.

Our best wishes go out to the Legion members, a special thank-you was given to Edward Wentworth who donated the potatoes for the dinner.

Golden Star Chapter 48

STANSTEAD (DB) — Golden Star Chapter No. 48 met in regular session Oct. 15, in the Masonic Temple, Stanstead. The Worthy Matron, Sister Millicent Adam and the Worthy Patron, Brother Lloyd Selby presided in the East.

The meeting opened in short form with flag presentations. Sister Mildred Wheelock, Past Grand Matron was presented and given Grand Honors.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. Correspondance and a number of invitations received from other chapters to visit them on special occasions. All bills were voted to be paid. Thank-you notes were read and a number of sick and shut-ins reported on.

The Worthy Patron Brother Lloyd Selby presided over the election of officers with Brother Burton Hill and Sisters Doris Morrison and Ethel Whiteman acting as secretaries.

Plans were made to serve the Past Matrons' supper on Oct. 21 at 6 p.m., in the Masonic Temple.

The meeting closed and all retired to the lower hall for a social hour. The Worthy Matron Sister Millicent Adam gave a very interesting report of the Grand Chapter Proceedings.

Delicious refreshments were served by Sisters Doris McKelvey, Violet Moranville, Susan Cooper and Brother Ralph Rogers, assisted by other members.

Open installation of officers will be held on November 19.

St. Andrew's tea & sale

WINDSOR — The ladies of St. Andrew's United Church held a most successful Hallowe'en tea and sale on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 25, in the Church hall. Despite the non-cooperation of the weather man a good number of visitors turned out to lend their support.

The sales table was laden with a good variety of novelties, Christmas decorations, hand-knitted articles, food, cards and books for early Christmas shoppers to choose from. By closing time a good number of articles had been bought up and a tidy sum had been realized.

It was an afternoon when old friends came by to reminisce and join others over a cup of tea and refreshments consisting of sweet breads, muffins, doughnuts, cheese and pickles.

Pumpkins, centerpieces in keeping with Hallowe'en and candles decorated the linen-covered tea tables. Looking after the tables were Mrs. Wm. Jandron, Mrs. D. Morey and Mrs. R. Macdonald. Kitchen duties were carried out by Mrs. H. Dubuc and Mrs. M. Thomas, while the sales table was in charge of Mrs. P. Morey and Mrs. F. Harper.

Out-of-town visitors were from Montreal, Toronto, Sherbrooke, Richmond, Melbourne and surrounding areas.

Mrs. Edna Ward, of Georgia, Mrs. Charlotte Payeur, of Montreal, Mrs. Jos Canning, Thetford Mines, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Marshall, of Henderson Vale were recent guests of Mrs. Dora Henderson and son, Delbert.

Mr. and Mrs. Weston Graham and Mrs. Katherine Cox visited Mrs. Barbara Seale in a nursing home in Sterling, Ont., who is now 97 years old and looks much younger. Barbara, who is well acquainted in this area, is the eldest of the family of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Graham, of Glen Murray. In 1912 she became the bride of Mr. Ben Seale of the Craig's Road, and when failing health compelled them to give up farming operations there, they moved to Roslin, Ont., to be near their only daughter, Dorothy, Mrs. John Fargey, of that place, now of Tweed, Ont.

Mr. Sidney McKee with Mr. Roger Lowry, and family, of Kinnear's Mills spent Thanksgiving weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Earl Marsh in Tweed, Ont.

Recent guests of Mrs. Ethel Longmoore were Mrs. Blanche Rothney, of Danville and Mr. Elliott of St. Johnsbury, Vt.

We tender sincere sympathy to the family of the late Mrs. Marjorie Houle (the former Miss Marjorie Longmoore, of Nelson) who passed away in Huntingville recently. Interment took place in the family plot, beside her late husband, in the Boutelle Cemetery.

Guests of Mrs. Cora Mimnaugh included Mrs. Olive Batley, Mr. Charles Little, Huntingville, Mr. and Mrs. Cuyler MacGillvray, of Irvine, Alberta, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Henderson, Ayer's Cliff, Mr. Murray Kelso, Fort Frances, Ont., Mrs. Marjorie Wright, Danville, Mrs. Helen Crawford, Adderly, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Labay, Paris, Maine, Bobby Bullard, Andy Bullard, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Marshall, Belcher Range.

Mrs. Katherine Cox, Mrs. Alice Muir and Mrs. Cora Mimnaugh were Thanksgiving Day guests of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Cox, and family, on the Keough Range.

Mr. and Mrs. John Evans, of Sherbrooke, Mrs. Eileen Nugent, of Lennoxville visited their mother, Mrs. Dora Henderson and brother, Delbert who, later, returned with their guests for a short holiday.

The monthly meeting of St. Andrew's Auxiliary was held at the home of Mrs. Russell Marshall.

Mrs. Edna Ward, the former Miss Edna Marshall, of Savannah, Georgia, and Mrs. Charlotte Payeur, of Montreal were recent supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Marshall. Other guests at the Marshall home included Mr. and Mrs. John Gallagher, of Plymouth, N.H., Mrs. Carmen Fleming of the Wales Home, Richmond, Mrs. Harry Marshall, and Mrs. Joe Canning, of Thetford Mines.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Little, Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Wright, with Mr. and Mrs. John Fletcher were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Little in East Angus. In the afternoon, all attended the Open House in honor of the 40th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Little at the home of their daughter Mrs. Ronald Belden and Mr. Belden.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Weston Graham were Mrs. Herbert Henderson of Thetford Mines, Mrs. June Morrison, of Bury, Mrs. Rita Bernard, and son, of Danville and Mrs. Evelyn Richmond, of South Durham.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Nugent, of Scarborough, Ont., were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Little.

Lloyd Wright, of Macdonald College spent Thanksgiving weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Wright.

Mrs. Cora Mimnaugh and Miss Adeline Gingras were dinner guests at Reedsdale.

Mr. Winston Moore of Woodbury, Vt., and the McVettys visited their friends, Mr. and Mrs. K.D. Tree of Stanbridge East, recently. We were pleased to find Mrs. Tree quite well and as busy as a bee, but we were deeply concerned about the health of Mr. Tree who suffers severely at times from an infection in his feet. We sincerely hope that the health of that fine gentleman, at the time of our next call, will have reached the point that it will be satisfactory to us.

Miss Judy Kelso, of Kittimat, B.C., was a guest at the Little home.

Mr. and Mrs. John Fletcher have returned to Goffstown, N.H., after spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. Allan Little. Other callers at the Little home were Mr. and Mrs. John Gallagher of Plymouth, N.H., Mrs. Carmen Fleming of The Wales Home and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Froy of Lachine.

Mrs. Ann Little of Lennoxville was a weekend guest of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Little.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Little, with their guests, Mr. and Mrs. John Fletcher, visited The Wales Home one day.

Mr. Sidney McKee is spending a few days in Brome with his son Robert and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Little, with Mr. and Mrs. John Fletcher, were supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Wright and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan McKee spent a weekend in Bulwer with Mrs. McKee's mother, Mrs. Irvine McElravey and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Bennett and family of Greenfield Park were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Cook, and while here, visited the former's mother, Mrs. Florence Bennett at the Jeffrey Hales Hospital, Quebec City.

MILAN
Mrs. R. Nicholson

It was with regret we heard Herbert Mayhew, of Lennoxville, passed away on October 20 at the Sherbrooke Hospital. The sincere sympathy of the community is extended to his families.

Duncan McLeod and Mr. and Mrs. David Nicholson paid their respects to Mr. Herbert Mayhew at the R.L. Bishop Funeral Home, Lennoxville. Mr. McLeod and Mrs. Nicholson attended the funeral in St. George's Anglican Church, Lennoxville, and interment in Malvern Cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. David Nicholson stayed with Mr. and Mrs. Dale Farrell while in Lennoxville. Mrs. Joyce Rankin, Montreal, is spending a few days with her parents. Mrs. Murdo E. Morrison was an overnight guest at the same home.

Mrs. Murdo E. Morrison has sold her home in Dell to Louise La Plante and has taken up residence in Montreal. Her many friends are sorry for her leaving and hope she will often come back to visit.

EASTMAN
Mrs. Eric Hallam
297-2616

Misses Leslie and Kim Boode and friend of Greenfield Park spent the weekend with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Richardson.

Mr. and Mrs. John Gibbons have returned after spending the holiday week with their son and family in New Brunswick.

Mr. and Mrs. Drouin have returned after spending several days in Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Shepard of Kamloops, B.C., accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. N. Williams of Waterloo visited Mr. Guy Booth one afternoon while here visiting relatives in the Townships.

Mr. J. MacMillan and nephew George of Dorval spent the long weekend at his home here.

Faith festival inspires

By KEITH DICKERSON

My son, Michael, came from a Youth Festival of Faith held in Montreal last weekend radiant with happiness. He came home from Galt Regional High School the next day with the same glow. He spent part of his lunch hour in the cafeteria with Claudette, his girlfriend, talking about God with a Gideon New Testament in hand. "The kids took it as normal," Michael said. Claudette also attended the festival along with over 100 teenagers from the Townships, Montreal and points in Ontario. It was a regional program organized by leaders in the United Church with the Rev. Ron Coughlin of Magog and Mary Hatfield of Georgeville responsible.

Producing pages of festival literature, Michael briefed me on what happened over the weekend. Far from being rational he kept up an effusion of comments: 'wow', 'it was great', 'everybody loved each other'. Later during the Muppet show, I looked across at my wife and said, "I hope he channels some of the overflow into his homework."

To my surprise, that night he got out his books and got on with some work. Someone at the festival must have taught him the New Testament caution, 'Faith without works is dead."

At the start of the rally the participants were put into 20 groups of six with facilitator. Michael's group leader was Pat Warren, the wife of Rev. Douglas Warren of the United Church in Lennoxville. These little families remained close together throughout the weekend.

The warm-up period at the start of the rally was designed to turn strangers into friends and create a sense of belonging. This was done by group Bible studies, listening to testimonies, and singing. No one preached or solicited 'decisions for Christ' but the fruit of such approaches was there. The spiritual renewal of my son is proof of this. Personal work in counselling and encouraging the young people went on throughout the weekend. Nothing musty blew through their adventure into the dynamics of the Christian faith. The key Bible verse of the festival focused on the Christian service.

"The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he has anointed me to preach good news to the poor, He has sent me to proclaim release to the captives and recovering of sight to blind, to set at liberty those who are oppressed to proclaim the acceptable year of the lord."

Centering their thoughts on this text kept the faithful moving outward in their feelings of love for each other, sharing their concerns for the future of the world.

Mary Hatfield told me a number of the participants were poor, oppressed and hurting. Some came from broken homes, areas where there are few youth in the neighborhood. Some were there with little association with a local church. Though all went home fortified in faith the struggle to keep it and freedom to share it with others would vary greatly.

I don't think Michael found more faith in God than he had before the rally. The conditions were right for him to wake up to what was already a part of him. He rediscovered himself, he gained confidence in loving, sharing and caring. But the climax of his joy was to find the events of the weekend crowded with a growing awareness of the presence of God. Unlike Michael others at the rally may have only been "strangely warmed". They would return home with a hunger for more and perhaps would stay that way if there was no similar fellowship to welcome them home.

But even if the home fires are not burning with love for God, youth can find what they are looking for through the chaplaincy work at our regional schools. At Galt, lunch time affords 10 or 20 minutes when believers can gather at the chaplain's center and have a good time of praise and talking about God and the Christian way of life. Heather Thomson, the Anglican chaplain at Galt was at the festival so the faith fellowship link between a number of youth who go to Galt goes on under her leadership.

The Reverend Ron Coughlin explained that United Church of Canada has been sponsoring similar festivals of faith right across Canada some involving young people and adults. "Five years ago young people were in outright rebellion against the church. But today there is a growing interest in religion. Young people are more willing to face the questions of faith and are reaching for answers."

Rev. Coughlin admits Christian young people do have a problem relating to the traditional expression in their local churches. The old parodox remains: It was the traditional church, at the national level, that initiated a program that has given birth to religious awakening among their young members. The young people may not understand the church of their elders, but they cannot but be grateful for the faith it is transmitting to them.

The Synod of Montreal and Ottawa met recently in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church for a two-day session. Pictured above at the head table are from left to right, Rev. Blake Walker, minister of St. Andrew's, Mrs. Walker, Mrs. T.J. Matthews, Rev. Earl Johnson, Plattsburg, N.Y., guest speaker, Rev. Donald Neil of Montreal, newly elected Moderator of the Synod, Mr. Camille Fortier representing Mayor Jacques O'Bready, Bishop T.J. Matthews, retired Bishop of the Diocese of Quebec, Rev. P. Lyle Sams of Quebec and Mr. Douglas Fulford, clerk of Synod from Ottawa.

Fifty Plus Club enjoy trip

AYER'S CLIFF — On Monday, Oct. 20, 46 members and friends of the Unity Fifty Plus Club of Ayer's Cliff and area enjoyed a bus trip to New Hampshire and through Vermont.

Although it was cloudy with a bit of rain when the bus left the Legion Hall in Ayer's Cliff, as the day progressed, the weather improved and was very enjoyable. The foliage was over the peak but when we arrived at Indian Head where we stopped for lunch, it was like a small haven of beautiful colours. While our driver Mr. Dearden made arrangements for lunch, some strolled about and saw the "Old Man of the Mountains" and "Indian Head" and even some snow on the ski trails.

We all enjoyed a delicious meal at the restaurant there, along with many other travelers, including three other bus loads. After reloading, we journeyed on through Whitefield, Lancaster and St. Johnsbury, where a stop was made to do a bit of shopping, etc. We then continued on to Island Pond, Vt. and home through Coaticook.

Mrs. Pelley, Club President, expressed thanks, especially to Doris Sutton, for help in arranging the trip, as it was a new venture for both these ladies. She also thanked the driver and presented him with a gift. It was late in the season but a most enjoyable trip and the fellowship of being together means a great deal. Mrs. Pelley and Mrs. Sutton were given a hearty clap for their efforts in arranging this trip so quickly. All were pleased that Mr. Dearden returned from another trip in time to drive for this trip. Friends of Mr. L.R. Thompson who had been on a trip abroad were glad he arrived home in time to make the trip and do his "bit" too, in helping with information on places along the way.

Ladies Aid annual sale

WINDSOR — Lower Windsor Ladies Aid held their annual sale on Saturday evening, Oct. 25, at the Langlois Hall. A good turn out of supporters, both English and French, were on hand. Proceeds for the evening were very encouraging.

Lloyd McCourt acted as bilingual auctioneer and as usual was able to get the crowd warmed up and bidding was keen. Hand knitted heavy socks and mitts were popular items, reminding all of the cold weather ahead.

As usual the home-baking sold well and many families had expensive bread, pies and other goodies for Sunday's dinner. Perhaps the "best" buy of the evening was a huge green cabbage that brought in a bid of five dollars. A brass cow-bell and a well-used school bell, donated by an interested friend, brought in a tidy sum. Bidding was keen on the colourful large quilts, encouraging the group to get busy and make some more.

A white elephant table of used articles, priced to sell, was featured prior to the auction and brought in a good amount. Cathy Watson, and Peggy McCourt, were busy getting prices on, as eager buyers, both young and old, pushed forward. Good work, girls.

Diane McCourt acted as "delivery girl" for the articles sold by auction and was kept busy, as well as on her toes all evening. Thank you, Diane.

A drawing was held on three articles with Dot McCourt and Joan Farquhar looking after the selling of tickets. A gingham tablecloth, embroidered by Carol Nixon, was claimed by Cathy Watson, a macrame plant hanger, made and donated by Joan Farquhar, was won by Malcolm Wheeler; and a crocheted novelty doll and chair set, donated by Mrs. Upton, was won by Jason Wheeler.

A buffet lunch was served at the close of a busy evening.

The group would like to thank our auctioneer for a job well done, all those who donated articles and came out that night to lend their support.

Church thrives in China

By KEITH DICKERSON

To Canadians, China is a remote continent. Her political affairs surface now and again in our newspapers amid the torrent of our domestic news items but we never hear any religious news. You have to pick that up in little-known magazines such as East Asia Millions that we receive monthly.

Our latest copy contains both a review of Christianity in China and an eye-witness account of Christian activity today. The Church is thriving in many provinces largely without clergy and real estate. We who give allegiance to God in Christ Jesus should be prepared to carry on being faithful with or without organized religion, with or without persecution as a forerunner of simpler arrangements.

Christian missionary work in China has always fascinated me. I had a geography master who grew up in China in a missionary compound. A woman who has helped me in my spiritual life was also raised in China and has written books about the people. A Chinese apostle and twentieth century martyr, Watchman Nee, has influenced my thinking greatly. Finally, the staggering example of an Englishman, Hudson Taylor, who went out to China and founded the China Inland Mission still challenges me to believe in the impossible.

So often the impossible becomes possible in the hands of the pioneer or in the remnant of an old social order. They find themselves left with little to work with but a dream or conviction that God has called them to do something beyond their power.

In the pre-Communist days Christianity in China was plagued with misunderstanding and persecution. The coastal treaty ports with their strong colonial settlements constituted the network for merchants trafficking in opium. They embodied the paternalism of Western churches and the beginnings of indigenous Chinese congregations which met in homes.

The Nationalist revolution, the 1914-18 war and the spread of communism eventually cleared China of all western influence and foreign missions. Chinese Christians found themselves isolated and scattered throughout every province. In the course of the cultural revolution of the sixties the Red Guards left the Chinese Christians without buildings, without Bibles, without organizational structure. Then came the all-out attempt to destroy the Christians themselves. They suffered severely. Many died in prison.

The purge was through and was followed by six years of complete silence. No one in the west could tell if Christianity had survived let alone the ancient religions of China. To make up for it, the Christian book market was flooded with the edited writings and lectures of Watchman Nee, who was thought still to be alive but languishing in prison.

Now we know that Christianity has survived. We think Chinese Christians are more numerous than ever before. Just in January of this year an early pioneer received a personal letter from the northern province of Gansu along the Mongolian border. The long-awaited news came: "The Lord's work here is flourishing," -- The first word from that quarter since 1949. In the province of Honan is one city where Christians meet in 30 homes. In one commune of 48,000 people two-thirds are Christians.

In the coastal province of Chekiang, where Hudson Taylor began his missionary work over a hundred years ago, Christians are numbered in tens of thousands.

Obviously, the years of persecution have not been in vain. A vigorous contemporary Chinese Church is emerging publicly but the burden of spreading the Gospel remains solely upon indigenous shoulders. Christian aliens are not welcome in China, whose population numbers close to a thousand million.

A freelance Christian writer, Leona Choy has taken four trips to China and has reported her findings in a book called On Your Mark. Writing in a style borrowed from the King James version of the Bible the author writes about the people she finds present at Christian meetings:

"There were present at some of the meetings those who had been in prison, lo, these many years and who had suffered unspeakable hardships and persecution. Notwithstanding they wished not to speak of their sufferings, though scars were upon many, visible even to those standing by. Rather, they desired to give glory to God for their deliverance, holding their peace against their accusers. 'We desire not vengeance,' said they gently, 'God, who hath shown mercy unto us, will deal justly with unrighteous men'."

The same author in an interview made a number of things clear about the present climate in China. Foreigners must join structured tours. Christian tourists must not seek out Chinese Christians because that might endanger them while Chinese policies are vacillating. Christians in China are not allowed to propagate their faith publicly. China's present stance toward the west is a pragmatic one to obtain the help she needs from the outside world. China's ordinary citizens, half of them under the age of thirty, have little interest in pushing Communist ideology. He simply wants to get on with the business of life.

China admits to the existence of 40,000,000 Buddists and Muslims and a considerable number of Christians. In a dozen cities the state decided to open some churches with state-appointed pastors.

As many as 2,000 worshippers have been seen in such churches but it is part of China's showcase strategy. In the large churches most of the Christians present are youth.

In response to the question, of whether the teachings of the house churches are evangelical Leona Choy replied: "Definitely so. Delivered in the power of the Holy Spirit, teaching is quality, and preaching is fervent. Healings, the casting out of demons, visions and prophesies -- these are normal within the church in China, evidenced because Christians simply believe the Word of God at face value. Denominational labels no longer exist."

Card Party

WATERLOO — The card party sponsored by the Waterloo-Warden W.I. members and held at the Masonic Temple on Oct. 22, was a success and pleasant evening.

500 was played at eleven tables with prizes going to Alice Bowker, Linnie Benoit, Geraldine Barbeau, Mrs. Robert Denault, Glenna Maynes and Georgette Duranleau.

Door prizes were won by Juliette Morin, Lou Bowker, Regina Latour, Hazel Chapman, Yvonne Ouellette, Raymond Streeter, Mrs. P. Denault, Muriel Whitehead, Clifford Wright, Lucy Wright, Anita Hanna, Orval Quilliams, Lawrence Page, Margaret Wright, Afton McCutcheon, Isabel Tryhorn, Rachel Cody, Martha Dudley, Audrey Marcotte, Georgette Long, Eva Page, May George, Myrtle Hilliker, Yvonne D'Arcy, Adrian Whitehead, Myrtle McLellan, Hildred Gibbon and Mary Sicard.

Tickets had been sold on five articles and when these were drawn, they were won as follows: Afghan - Hildred Gibbon; crochet doily - Margaret Neil; Cushion - Jean Ann Whitehead; Doll - Myrtle Hilliker; Avon soap - Isabel Tryhorn.

Refreshments were served. The members wish to thank all who made the evening a success.

Little Helpers Party

STANSTEAD (DB) — The Little Helpers of Christ Church, Stanstead, with their teacher and leader, Mrs. Sally Perreault held their annual party on Thursday, October 23.

A short service by Rev. Ron Smith was held in the church and the children sang two hymns. Each child took their offering to the altar to be blessed and Rev. Smith explained to the children that their pennies helped a little girl in Jamaica become a christian and be educated. This money is sent to Mrs. McCulloch in Danville to be forwarded to the missionaries in Jamaica.

Following the service, the 15 children and ten mothers went to the Guild Hall, where games were played and lunch of Kool-aid and cookies served the children and tea to the mothers.

Mrs. Perreault was assisted in serving by Mrs. Miriam Osborne and Mrs. Helena McLeod.

Before the children left for home, Mrs. Perreault gave each one, balloons, a box of raisins and McDonald cookies.

Georgeville: Winter silence reigns

By KEITH DICKERSON

Not its history, not its community but its natural setting – that's the great appeal of Georgeville: woodlands, water, open fields, trails, back roads, hills, dales, grand views, secluded corners lots of space and real fresh air. As well as livestock kept by residents, horses, cattle, sheep and chickens there's plenty of fish, fowl and wild animals. There's is no industry and pollution is all but a thing of the past thanks to the sewage system installed this summer through the accumulative efforts of the Memphremagog Conservation Society.

Our home is here, our heart is here and the family memories get sweeter all the time. We swell with pride a little as visiting friends, impressed, invariably remark, "What a lovely place." World travellers have said of Georgeville, and indeed of its larger setting in the Mount Orford quarter of the Townships, "There's not much in all the places I've been to compare with the scenic beauty you have around here."

Georgeville is just a little village tucked in the trees beside Sargent's Bay. She is located about halfway down the 20 mile stretch of lake that lies between Newport, Vermont and Magog, Quebec. Approaching it by any of the three roads that converge near one of the two villate stores one gets a good westward view of the hills and mountain peaks across the lake. All at once this ridge elevation drops and there's Georgeville, suddenly upon you at the foot of the steep hill. One complete swing around the village green takes you past the two stores, one garage, a handsome wharf and a fisherman's inn. There are a few houses around the green and that's it -- downtown Georgeville. In summer this area can be as busy as a popular seaside resort but in winter, silence reigns month after month. The rest of the resident's homes, the local churches and fine community hall, once the village school, are to be found by enquiring at the stores.

Directions to one place or another take the visitor uphill. The fact that there are no street signs or house numbers is an invitation to drive carefully, look for landmarks and a house that fits the description given. Discovering Georgeville as a tourist is delightful but crossing the threshhold of one home here or another there brings you face to face with families that have never left the land. Many have retired to it and work at it like the rest.

Turning from work to leisure, the Georgevillians, who don't seem to number more than 100 men, women and children in winter, all have their favorite walks through the fields and the woods. It forms an aspect of private life that gives everybody room to be alone and be themselves. Some walk, some ride and some might roam in a truck or jeep. What they do is their business but they will be there without a mask and probably being quite prayerful and mystical.

You just cannot remain untouched by nature or by God and continue to live in such a peaceful setting. We may have cause to give ourselves praise for advancing in good order on our various estates but it's inherent in us all to give God the glory for all the good gifts around us that are there under His care.

On a Sunday morning this fall, after the tourists had gone and summer residents disappeared, I walked to church and found myself in a mood to spend the day rediscovering the surroundings which in summer I am all too busy to enjoy.

After a late breakfast with some warmth in the day I strolled aro' my garden just to enjoy wnat was there. I found my bees in a festive mood. They swarmed around the hives and took turns to join in an overhead flight that was every bit a bee dance. Their winter stores of honey were in good supply and here was their festival of thanksgiving.

After lunch, still in a nostalgic mood, my middle son took me for a spin around Georgeville on his motorcycle. We climbed to the brow of Murray's hill and there stopped awhile just to behold the view, a panorama of unequalled Township beauty. The field before you drops downhill to a plain that reaches the nearer shore of lake Memphremagog edged with treetops. One can gaze just at this portion of the landscape and feel content enough but the eye moves on to regard a spot on the lake dotted with boats afar off under sail.

On the horizon away to the right stands Mount Orford. The outline of smaller hills leads to the central view of Mount Elephant and then off to the left is the distinctive shape of Owl's Head mountain.

The towering edifice of the Abbaye St. Benoit is the only architectural landmark to catch the eye. Before all this we lingered in companionable silence, purposefully letting the moment become a vivid memory.

Then we followed the gravel road that loops around the south side of Georgeville and marvelled that such a beautiful rural area was still unspoiled and sparsely populated. I hoped it would remain so.

As we swung back towards Georgeville, the lake and mountains came into view again but the perspective was not so appealing, not even from the ridge where the two roads from Fitch Bay and Beebe meet.

For a change of scenery, we drove up the road which I am told, used to be an old track to Fitch Bay. In disuse for so long, the overgrown way between two fence lines is now a pleasant foot-path through the woods. My son parked his motorcycle and we took a walk.

Our tour took up only half the afternoon and we travelled only ten miles. I don't believe we passed a single vehicle on the way round. The moon was shining soon after dusk. After supper my wife and I went for a walk and the dog followed. By day, one can still feel close to civilization, the bustle of Magog and Sherbrooke seem but a short distance away. But by night, to those of us who live uphill, where there are no street lights, the depths of the forest seems to press in at the back door. Dogs bark at the stealthy movement of wild animals somewhere close by. The silence brings the sense of a brooding presence there to preserve us through the night.

As we walked up the path to our back door I could see through a window that the television was on. The picture showed some crowded place in a foreign land where things were in turmoil. With a jolt, I knew that along with the privilege of living in a place far from the battlefronts of other societies must go a willingness to give it all up to help some stranger find a little peace in the midst of so much madness.

Que.-Sherbrooke Presbyterial UCW

The fall meeting of the Executive of Quebec-Sherbrooke Presbyterial United Church Women was held in Beebe United Church with the new president, Mrs. Zen Judson, presiding, and eighteen members present. After new members were introduced and a brief get-acquainted session, Muriel Prescott conducted the worship period, using as her theme, Concerns of the Eighties.

Reports of Fall Rallies were presented by Marion Laberee, Joyce Nugent and Faith Fanous, with Mildred Miller filling in for Marion Williams. Marion Perkins gave a brief preview of Waterloo Rally, which had not yet taken place. Some of the Concerns of the Eighties covered by the Rallies were Concerns for the Handicapped, Concerns for our Youth and Concerns of our Native Peoples.

After some discussion, it was moved and carried that half the offerings from the Rallies be donated to the General Fund for the Handicapped and half to the Mission and Service Fund, to be allotted to World Development and Relief. It was also decided that, in addition to travel expenses, each guest speaker in future be given a small honorarium to be donated to a charity of his or her choice. In view of rising costs, each Area Vice-President was voted an increase in allowance for expenses. The sum of $300.00 has been sent as our allotment to M. and S., and $292.70 to Seeds for Zaire.

Reports on their activities were presented by Executive members Hannah Mallalieu, Mae Cunnington, Muriel Prescott, Lexie Rogers, Phillis Smith and Ileana Burns. Mildred Miller also reported on the work being done by Presbytery Youth Worker Mary Hatfield.

Some tentative dates and locations for the two January Events were January 21, or January 28 in case of inclement weather, at Plymouth-Trinity United Church, Sherbrooke, for the Sherbrooke area, and February 2 or 9 at Granby United Church for the Waterloo area. The theme for January Events is to be Compatability in the Eighties.

The isolation of U.C.W. Groups in northern areas of the province such as Seven Islands, Schefferville and Harrington Harbour has always been a problem of much concern, and it was agreed that Presbyterial endeavour to raise funds to send a member of Presbyterial Executive to visit the northern area in the summer of 1981.

The next meeting of the Executive will be held at Lennoxville United Church on February 6, 1981.

Marion Laberee expressed the thanks of the group to the ladies of Beebe U.C.W., who not only welcomed the members with hot coffee and muffins on arrival, but augmented their box lunches with hot soup at the lunch break.

School Committee meeting

COOKSHIRE — The October meeting of the School Committee was held on October 28, with ten present, including Mr. R. Fitzsimmons, and Mrs. D. Sparkes, teacher representative.

The minutes of the September meeting were approved. Old business was further discussed and decisions were made regarding the School Calendar, the library and volunteer supervision for Mrs. Dawson's music class. The cafeteria will be opening on November 10, with Mrs. Nutbrown as cook again.

The benefit dance for the school cafeteria was discussed, and the Cookshire School Committee would like to thank the following companies for their donations: Genepak, Cookshire - six piece setting melmac won by Mark Sylvester, and four piece canister set, Ginger Batley. The Addition, two coffee mugs, J. Deadman. Baton's two-$5 gift certificates, Reiner Lowry and Cathy Coates; McDonald's - six Big Mac certificates, Byron Thorneloe and S. Merrill. Centre de Renovation Rouleau, Cookshire - $10 gift certificate, D. Walker. Alimentation Cookshire Inc. - four cans maple syrup, Lynn Rothney and Judy Morrison. Hurd's Cookshire, jar of coffee, Wes Herring, and Disco Jeans - $10 gift certificate, Betty Telford. Special thanks to the 'Ramblin Fever' for such an enjoyable evening, and to all those who helped to make the evening a success.

It was agreed that we order 20 class pins for this year's graduating class. An afghan has been kindly donated, and will be raffled after Christmas with the proceeds going toward the cafeteria.

Mrs. D. Sparkes, teacher representative, expressed the teachers' appreciation for help with the library, and the Christmas turkey dinner. They requested help with costumes for the Spring concert, and also help from the parents with the children's reading.

The Principal, Mr. R. Fitzsimmons, reported that the Christmas play will be on December 16.

The walkathon was a great success. The reports will be going out November 5 and parent-teacher interviews will be on November 6, during the afternoon and evening. UNICEF boxes are in the school for those children wishing to use them.

After Mrs. Ward read a report from Dr. Tali on the French program in the schools, the meeting was adjourned.

The next meeting will take place on November 25.

Golden Rule Rebekah Lodge

SUTTON (MB) — On Tuesday evening, October 21, the regular meeting of Golden Rule Rebekah Lodge No. 20, was held in the Fraternal Hall on Depot Street. We welcomed six Sisters and one Brother from Granby who were present to install the officers of Golden Rule Lodge.

Opened in form, the flag was presented, minutes were read and general business arising, was attended to. For the order of new business, Sister Doris Candy, D.D.P. and her team were called upon, Sister Candy was introduced by her marshal Sister Sheila Bernard and welcomed. Brother Ralph Bernard was also welcomed. He is Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Quebec. Sister Candy then installed the officers of Golden Lodge into their respective chairs;

Jr. Past Noble Grand, Sister Pauline Wilkins; Noble Grand, Sister Marion Robertson; Vice-grand, Sister Hazel Foster; Secretary, Sister Hilda Howard; Treasurer, Sister Bernice Russell; Warden, Sister Melda Mireault;

A hearty vote of thanks was given Sister Doris and her team for the good work put on. A few remarks were given by Sister Doris, also Brother Ralph spoke briefly on the work of the Order. Sister Helen Bresee P.N.G. presented Sister Doris with a gift from the Lodge, which she thanked them very graciously for. Sister Bernice Russell P.D.D.P. presented Sister Pauline with her Past Noble Grand pin, also a gift from her daughter Glenroy and son-in-law Andre. Pauline, although taken by surprise, arose to the occasion and thanked the members for her gift, she also thanked the officers of the past year for all of their help and wished the new officers of 1980-81 a most successful year.

The new password was received and the Lodge closed in Ritual form, after which all went to the diningroom, where delicious refreshments were served, prepared by the lunch convenor Lois Day and her helpers. After Grace was sung, all enjoyed a social hour, being ready to start another year's work for our Order.

Ladies Aid meets

ROCK ISLAND (DB) — Twelve members of the Stanstead South Ladies Aid met in the church hall, Rock Island, on Tuesday, October 28.

The meeting was conducted by the president of the month. Mrs. Geneva Lyons, and final plans were made for the Christmas Tea and Sale held on November 1st in the church hall.

A gift was donated to the Memorial fund for a late member.

The menu was planned for the Nov. 13th senior citizens' luncheon.

Mrs. Ivy Hatch will be president for the November meeting to be held in the church hall.

Grey Cup:

Where they'll be and what they'll wear

"East is east and west is west . . .," wrote Rudyard Kipling.

But Rudyard never kippled in the Canadian Football League, or he would have added "sort of."

Because, when the twain meet in the Grey Cup championship game at 1:30 p.m. EST on Nov. 23 in Exhibition Stadium, Toronto, East will be south and West will be north and the squad that travel the farthest will be the home team.

Under the CFL's rotation system, the Westerners — Edmonton Eskimos, Calgary Stampeders or Winnipeg Blue Bombers — will wear the fetching white ensemble of the home team and occupy the sideline nearest the main stand.

The Easterners — Montreal Alouettes, Hamilton Tiger-Cats or Ottawa Rough Riders — will be in simple, basic dark hue and will hold sway across the way on the chilly benches backing upon Lake Ontario.

Once upon a time, he whose credentials were inscribed "East Bench" was sentenced to a painful afternoon squatting on his hams in invariably foul weather alongside those bloodied gladiators who were his particular concern.

There was danger in it. Stand to ease the cramp or scoop the snow from the neck and you were in danger of collecting a varied assortment of drink containers shied from the stands by those whose paid view you were obstructing.

And there was always the possibility of a sudden — and violent — introduction to the defensive front four and the immediate object of their affection, i.e., the ball carrier.

Insurance premiums being what they are, editors don't send their unionized scribes down into the pit much anymore. However, this does not excuse the endangered from the other — and equally horrifying — aspect of their duties.

It is the lot of the benchjockies to accompany the team in question into the dressing-room after the final gun.

Now, it isn't so bad if your assigned team has won, provided you enjoy champagne ingested via the nostril from a foaming bottle. (It is advisable to take notes in pencil at such times, until someone invents a ball-point that will operate under a Niagara of Pol Roger '53.)

Should your team have lost, however, it is your lot to seek out Moose Hammerschlag, who dropped what would have been the game-winning touchdown pass while all alone in the end zone with no time left on the clock.

Moose, at this point, is in the shower covered in steam — and he hasn't even turned on the water yet.

Your best bet is to wait until he is somewhere in the vicinity of the quarterback, then ask him the searching question of "what happened?"

Moose will claim that the pass was overthrown, a base canard that will be stoutly denied by he who threw it.

If you're lucky, you should be able to escape in the ensuing carnage.

Presentation at St. Andrew's Church

WINDSOR — On Sunday, Oct. 26, Mr. Elvyn Baldwin, lay reader, conducted the morning service at St. Andrew's United Church with a good attendance. The service was planned as a farewell tribute to Mrs. Madeline Thomas, our popular and much-loved organist, who was at the organ for the last time. The choir and congregation joined in singing Madeline's favorite hymn, Take Time to be Holy.

Following the sermon, Mr. Baldwin announced the special part of the service when a presentation would be made. Mrs. Henry Dubuc and Mrs. Robert MacDonald went to the front of the church and Mrs. Dubuc proceeded to remark that it was with great pleasure they were honoring two U.C.W. members at this time, and called for Mrs. S.M. Paige and Mrs. Madeline Thomas to come forward. Each of these ladies had been told that the presentation was to be made to the other one, so that it was a surprise for each.

Mrs. Dubuc continued that Winnie Paige has been a member since coming to Windsor as a bride, 52 years ago. An active and hard-working member, first of the Women's Association and later of the U.C.W., Winnie continues to make many articles for the group's bazaar as well as being in charge of the linens and communion vessels.

Madeline Thomas, born Dubuc, has been connected with, first the Methodist Church, and later here at St. Andrew's, since a little girl. Following the death of her husband, Madeline came back to live in Windsor six years ago, and has been our organist since that time, a duty she dearly loved to perform. Also Madeline leaves a large gap in the U.C.W., having served as president since returning to Windsor. This position she held until now when she is leaving to reside in Ottawa where she will be near her daughter, son-in-law and grandchildren.

In a very touching ceremony, Mrs. MacDonald presented U.C.W. life membership certificates and pins to these two ladies, who in turn were congratulated by Mrs. Dubuc.

The congregation joined in singing a most fitting closing hymn, Blest be the Tie That Binds.

Following the service, all gathered in the church hall for a social hour with coffee and refreshments.

At this time, S.M. Paige, senior elder and clerk of the session, presented Madeline with a card and gift of currency on behalf of the congregation. Mr. Paige, who has known Madeline since childhood, reminisced humorously of days gone by and extended best wishes for happiness and good health for many years to come.

Mrs. Thomas feelingly expressed thanks and appreciation to all, for this unexpected kind gesture, and said it would be a time in her life that she would always remember. All present autographed her card before sad farewells and good wishes were extended.

Compton County WI semi-annual meeting

By ALICE WILSON

The Compton County Women's Institute held their Semi-annual meeting in the Cultural Centre, East Angus, on Monday afternoon Oct. 20. Mrs. Douglas Mackay, County President presided and opened the meeting with O Canada, Flag Salute, Opening Ode and Club Women's Creed. A moment's silence was observed in memory of departed members.

Miss Marion Ord welcomed the members to East Angus and hoped they would have a pleasant and profitable afternoon. Mrs. Fay Coleman responded and thanked East Angus members for hosting the meeting. Mrs. Mackay thanked all for coming, also the committee that worked at the Fair Booth at Cookshire Fair. She also drew attention to the Handicraft Competitions for next year and urged the members to participate.

Roll Call - Brookbury 8, Bury 2, Canterbury 8, East Angus 7, East Clifton 1, Sawyerville 7.

A resume of the minutes of the Annual and Interim meetings was read and accepted. The treasurer reported $206.20 realized from the Fish Pond at Cookshire Fair, this goes into the Bursary Fund and there is a satisfactory balance on hand. Several County convenors were absent but those present reported that they are not receiving reports from the branches. Mrs. D. Twyman reported for the Compton County Museum, they were open from May to October and had a very successful summer, with over 2,500 signing the Guest Book.

Mrs. Fitzsimmons gave the Bursary report. Three bursaries were given this year, Claude Charpentier of Sawyerville won the C.D. French Memorial Bursary, and Daphne Barter and Barbara Morrison of Bury were winners of the Compton County W.I. Bursaries. Cheques have been sent to the three recipients.

Correspondence was read and dealt with. Mrs. Flora McIntyre reported on the bus trip. We could not go to Canadiana Village this Fall because of a film crew making a film there so they were not taking any reservations. Plans are being made to go the latter part of June and those wishing to go are to notify Mrs. McIntyre by Nov. 16 and pay for their ticket.

They would like the histories of the Pioneer Women for the Board meeting Nov. 19 and 20.

Because of lack of interest it was decided to give up trying to have the Children's program at the Fair. The Fish Pond will be continued, members to donate six articles each and $30.00 extra to be taken from the County Funds to buy extra gifts, Mrs. A. Fowler to buy these.

Four ideas were suggested for the Theme for the Cookshire Fair Booth, names of Bursary winners, History of Cookshire Fair, Year of the Handicapped, Metric system. These ideas to be discussed in the Branches and a decision will be made at the executive or annual meeting. Citizenship convenors to be in charge with Mrs. G. Rowell, County convenor at the head. It was moved by Mrs. Aulis, seconded by Mrs. Joyce, that we continue with the Musical evening, and possibly have it in Bury next spring. Three items from each branch.

The Annual meeting will be hosted by Canterbury and the semi-annual by Brookbury. The nominating will be the Agricultural convenors of Brookbury and Bury.

Mrs. Chapman thanked East Angus members for the pleasant afternoon and for the refreshments. The President closed the meeting and wished each one a safe trip home.

OES Grand Chapter of Quebec

MANSONVILLE (BN) — The "Love in the Heart" Session of the Grand Chapter of Quebec, O.E.S., took place at the Sheraton-Mount Royal Hotel, Montreal on October 8, 9, and 10. This was the 58th annual session. Presiding over the session was the Worthy Grand Matron, Mrs. Eileen Eldridge of Highwater, Que., and the Worthy Grand Patron, Fred Burns, of Island Brook, Que.

The informal opening of the Grand Chapter took place on Wednesday evening with the presentation of distinguished guests. The evening continued with the presentation of several awards to those training in religious leadership from various denominations, including the Anglican, United and Presbyterian Colleges, as well as donations to McMaster University and the Rabbinical College. Substantial donations were given to Cancer research and the Dixville Home Foundation, Dixville, Que., which was the special project of the W.G.M. and W.G.P.

Opening ceremonies took place Thursday morning. During the morning, the reports of the W.G.M., W.G.P., Grand Secretary and Grand Treasurer were heard. At the noon hour, a get-together luncheon of past and present Secretaries and Treasurers was held. Thursday afternoon was given over to reports of Committees and a memorial service. A report of considerable interest was given by Mrs. Mary Lou Burns, Grand Marshal, as she presented a sizeable cheque to the W.G.M. for general funds. This amount had been raised by Mrs. Burns who solicited over 700 signatures of members from all chapters in the jurisdiction. These she had combined into a most beautiful quilt, handquilted in a design of hearts. This she had given to the W.G.M.

Friday morning was taken up with general business. A luncheon of the Grand Representatives' Association was held during the noon break. In the afternoon, Fred Burns, W.G.P., presided over the election of officers for the coming year. In the evening, following final reports, farewell addresses by the W.G.M. and W.G.P., and presentation of gifts to the outgoing presiding officers; the Grand Officers of 1979-80 retired. The Installation of the Grand Officers for 1980-81 then took place. Mrs. Annis Bunting and Geoffrey Pickering, the newly installed W.G.M. and W.G.P., began their duties with the presentation of jewels to the outgoing W.G.M. and W.G.P. After addresses and presentation of gifts, the session was formally closed.

Canusa Unit meets

DERBY LINE (IH) — The October meeting of Stanstead South church Canusa Unit was held at the home of Mrs. Velma Curtis in Derby Line. Mrs. Curtis conducted the devotional opening ceremony and Mrs. Alice Beadle, the president, presided.

The secretary, Mrs. Curtis gave her report and read a thank-you note from a bereaved family in Derby Line. Due to the absence of the treasurer, no financial report was given.

A sum of $40.00 was voted for the birthday and Christmas gift for the Unit's adopted foster child.

A great deal of the meeting was given to finalizing the Canusa Unit participation in the Christmas sale and luncheon held in the Fellowship Hall on November 1. The Unit would take charge of the dining room, the Helping Circle, the kitchen details, and on October 29 the Unit gathered in the hall to decorate and set the tables to receive the guests and their sale table.

Mrs. Patricia Walsh will hostess the November 18 meeting at her home in Derby Line at 8:00 p.m. The Christmas meeting and tentative plans were also discussed.

Refreshments were served during the social period.

Opening lead: ♦ 10

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Here is yesterday's hand with our guess at the bidding at the other table. North's two-club bid was artificial as was South's response which showed an ace or two kings and had nothing to do with spades.

North's two notrump was to show balanced distribution. South's three clubs was Stayman, North's three spades was the Stayman response, South showed his four spades and since North knew that South did not hold the missing king he simply bid six.

Dummy won the diamond lead and took the second trick with the king of spades. A spade to the ace and a second diamond came next. East had shown singletons in both those suits, so West would hold exactly three cards in hearts and clubs.

Sally Sowter who sat South now worked out a beautiful criss-cross squeeze based on the assumption that East would hold the king of hearts and at least six clubs.

She cashed all the trumps, the ace of clubs and the last diamond to wind up with A 9 6 5 of hearts and king of clubs in dummy and Q 7 2 of hearts and 9 6 of clubs in her own hand.

East had to let a heart go in order to keep Q J of clubs. Now Sally simply led the five of hearts from dummy. There was no way for East to keep her from collecting three heart tricks and the king of clubs.
