Success of The Since the dawn of civilization, the Agricultural Fair has been regarded as a great social asset, a factor quite apart from the facilities for trade and barter and the enlarged educational outlook consequent on new things seen and heard. In the early ages, religious festivals offered outlets for trade, and in the Code of Hammurabi, the Babylonian Emperor, B.C. 2250, the law is laid down for proper conduct of trade, based on the experience of the previous 1,000 years since the reign of Sargon of Sumeria in B.C. 3800. In China, the Emperor Fu-hi in B.C. 2852 issued orders regarding agricultural fairs which were comprehensively dealt with by his successor, the Great Agriculturist, Shunung. The festival at Delos and the Olympic games in ancient Greece were merely the opening days of gigantic fairs, and in ancient Italy the vast annual assembly at Voltumna merged itself into a famous mass meeting for social intercourse and trade. India with its great annual fair at Hurdwar on the upper Ganges, Russia with Nijni Novgorod, Germany with Leipzig and Frankfurt, England with Stowe, Burnet and Nottingham, all in turn have passed the torch westward to Canada, where at Toronto, the Canadian National Exhibition or fair, for that is what it really is, and the Royal Winter Fair stand at the present day in the direct line as among the greatest annual agricultural fairs. Modern invention may claim to have displaced many methods of an older generation, but the radio, the telegraph, the motor car, and every other modern invention seem merely to have conspired to solidify the wisdom of the ancients in providing the thrill of an ever-widening social circle and the opportunity for a generous education through personal experience in the agricultural fairs of today.

The regional exhibition at Valleyfield is now in full swing concluding on Friday. So far it has been successful in that entries have been unusually large and of a high quality. A record attendance is expected tomorrow.

The Havelock Fair prize list has been printed and distributed in preparation for the annual event, on September 10th. Huntingdon Fair date this year is September 12th, the prize list for which is now being printed. Huntingdon has an increased prize list for the 1935 show, and Secretary Small has secured a large number of specials. It is hoped that district farmers will start now to get their stock ready for showing at these two fall fairs. Attendance alone, is not sufficient. The success of a fair is in the interest exemplified, and this follows only from numerous and high quality exhibits.

Vesuvius in It is a striking coincidence that at this critical juncture of Italian affairs, when war clouds darken the European atmosphere, Vesuvius is in eruption. It serves to stress the perilous course upon which Italy has embarked in threatening hostile attack upon Ethiopia. Significant, too, is the circumstance that Italy's warlike impulse should follow closely upon the heels of the Stresa conference in which Premier Mussolini urged the need for major European powers getting together in order to cope with the prevailing unrest of nations and discuss ways and means of attaining by mutual agreement European security. It was urged that a regional pact in which Great Britain, France Germany and Italy could co-operate for the preservation of world peace would strengthen the League of Nations and smooth the way towards the reduction of armaments and help the European nations to economic recovery. What has now become of this programme? The dramatic change of front by Premier Mussolini has not only wrecked the hopes based upon these four-power parleys, but has given a vicious stimulus to the very dangers it was his professed desire to avoid.

It is easier to start a fire than to stamp it out. There is the story of a certain Nicolas who invented a salt-mill to extract this commodity from the ocean, forgot the word required to stop its action and the salt cargo sank the ship. That fable has its moral and its warning for Premier Mussolini, would he but regard its application to the crisis in Italian affairs, the responsibility for which must rest upon his shoulders. Whatever be the nature of his claims against Ethiopia or for consideration of his demands in this dispute, it assuredly has not helped matters that, instead of making some attempt to clear up difficulties and explain his position, the dictator should choose to pour out the vials of his contempt upon the League and that, presumably under his instigation, the Italian press should indulge itself in uncalled-for and bitter criticisms of British policy relative to this Ethiopian dispute. Abuse cannot be of any service to Italy or advance any reasonable settlement of this vexed problem. Mussolini may refuse to turn the cards he has in his sleeve face up on the table; but he cannot expect to force outside opinion in his favor by reiteration of his demands or by the assumption that his own dictum in this matter is sufficing and final. Still less can he hope to convince those who do not see eye to eye with him in this crisis by vituperative assaults upon Captain Anthony Eden and Sir Samuel Hoare, whose speeches have been garbled and made the subject of vitriolic attack in the columns of the Giornale d'Italia and other Fascist organs. Statements that Britain is the covert enemy of Italy, that she is jealous of Italian aspirations and influence in Africa, and that many Britons are eager to enlist under the Italian flag for war in Africa may be accounted at Fascist headquarters excellent war propaganda for stimulating the Italian people to support Mussolini in his envisaged conquest of Abyssinia; but they will lose their potency through the British Government's protest that the preservation of world peace is of a measureless greater importance than the pursuit of the hazardous and reckless course upon which Mussolini has embarked. Italy has neither foreign credits nor gold stock enough, nor raw materials enough to sustain her in a war which would be a colossal blunder and a wild gamble. Mere rhetoric will not enable Mussolini to meet the grim realities of the situation.

More Slogans To anyone who takes the trouble to think about it, our civilization—at least as represented in Europe today—is only skin deep. Ugly and primitive spectres raise their heads and hiss defiance at other ugly and primitive spectres. Nations make agreements evidently without any intention of observing them when self-interest dictates. Europe is in a state of frantic nationalism with all its accompaniments of suspicion, egotism and self-assertion.

There are two kinds of nationalism. One good and necessary, the other pernicious and fraught with all manner of baneful consequences. Every decent citizen has an attachment for his country, otherwise he would be without soul. The man without a country or the man who puts race before the country in which he has his livelihood and his privileges is rare. But this very patriotism may make us tolerant or intolerant of other countries. Love of family, which is the most normal thing in the world, should help us to understand love of family on the next street; so because of our loyalties to our own land we should the better appreciate the loyalties of other men to theirs. In this way a sane internationalistic spirit would be engendered which would make for fair play and consequent security. But alas! this ideal is far from realization because of the existence of an aboriginal type of nationalism which has at least three characteristics. First it regards itself as a self-centred unit without obligation to or consideration for any other sovereign unit. When therefore there is a conflict of interests, economic or otherwise, there may easily follow the conflict of war. It is a reversion to primitive tribalism. The second characteristic is that within this totalitarian state the citizen must subordinate all his interests to the unit, especially in time of war. And in the third place, this nationalism regards itself as superior to every other, and so is ever trying to assert its superiority or to regain a vanished supposed superiority. Here are two or three utterances of distinguished statesmen from different lands: "The greatest people the world has ever seen." "We are morally and intellectually superior to all without peers." "God has yet made nothing equal to our people and I don't think He ever will or can." And of course we have "the lesser breeds without the law" which was rhetoric but a bit complacent just the same. There is no inferiority complex in all this, but a spirit which is apt to see in every outside movement a menace to national pride or prestige, because delusions of greatness bring delusions of persecution, hence the cry of Germany in 1914, and its continual cry at the present time.

But the main feature of this insulated nationalism is that it is fatal to democracy in any true sense of that term, fatal at least to a thinking democracy; indeed the type of so-called democracy which is evident today doesn't think, it only feels and applauds. A recent writer has said very frequently that in 1914 we heard so much about a war for democracy, but democracy was one of its certain casualties. Democracy on the Continent of Europe is being displaced by despotic government. It is an old mediaeval figure dressed up in garish clothes; the difference being that the old despotism was hereditary, the new one is not.

What is the reason for all this? One answer is unreason. Democracy is born in times not only of intense feeling but of virile thinking, but when men cease to think and are controlled by their emotions or by a herd instinct, any irrational thing may happen; then government of the people, by the people and for the people—to use Lincoln's famous phrase at Gettysburg—does vanish from the earth. One explanation of present conditions in Europe is that nations emerged from a horrible war, weary, bewildered and ready for any quick change (it must be quick) or experiment that promised better days. Everywhere there was restlessness, and strange to say men who had fought and suffered for liberty began to clamor for someone who would think for them, act for them and lead them out of their difficulties by some magic way. So those who had opposed despotism to the death wanted a superman, a dictator, and symbols and slogans and various colored shirts proclaimed submission to the sovereign will. Under this colossal there is an aristocracy, only it is a political aristocracy supported by an army which is ready to purge the State of suspects and even to make races pure of blood. Minorities have no place in such a centralized state and any opinion contrary to announced policy is not tolerated. In other words free speech is denied to members of such a state, absolute submission is required. History seems to be repeating itself in this respect, because after the Napoleonic victories over Prussia, a German philosopher who roused the stricken and disheartened people from lethargy, demanded this submergence of the individual in the State. He said "the new education must completely destroy freedom of will." So the dictator speaks, and the people in a frenzy of admiration—almost of worship—acquiesce; but one wonders what will happen when these almost deified leaders die. Will it be in Italy, Germany and Russia as it was in ancient Rome—a number of warring military dictatorships which really brought about the fall of the Roman Empire.

One thing seems to have emerged from all this centralization and subordination of the rights of the individual. It is the mitigation of class jealousies, but this is a spirit which does not at all depend on political organization.

We turn from all this display and frenzy and saluting of emblems to the solid humdrum British Empire with its hereditary monarchy and its parliamentary democracy, and to those who toy with the idea of a change or a totalitarian state we say with fervor, no, thank you!

The Hazard of In this age of electricity, the latest Electric Shock hazard added to life on the farm is electrical shock. The passage of electrical current of considerable voltage through a man causes paralysis of the higher nerve centres, entailing the stoppage of breathing. The failure of the normal tests for life should not be taken as evidence of death. Persons have been resuscitated after hours of effort although ordinary signs of life were absent. In cases where the contact was of short duration and where artificial respiration has been applied without delay there is a better chance of recovery. Although, in reality resuscitation from electrical shock is a case for the medical man, or at a pinch for those men of the power and telephone companies well-trained in the art of artificial respiration, there are certain things that everybody can do. In shock accidents the victim is usually thrown clear of the live wire or apparatus, out if such is not the case the obvious thing to do is to clear him at once from contact, the greatest care being taken that the helper himself is insulated from contact. Notwithstanding the fact that success in resuscitation decreases in hot summer months, warmth is of great assistance. The patient should be wrapped in warm blankets and hot water bottles applied. A person partially shocked should be made to lie down, and it is a point to be remembered that, owing to lack of tone of the blood vessels, it may be fatal to allow a resuscitated patient to sit up or stand. Artificial respiration, of course, is of the greatest importance and should be taught in all districts. Efforts in artificial respiration should be kept up for at least four hours until the patient breathes or until the signs of the onrush of rigor mortis are definite.

Chronicle News Bits

Mexican Divorces

Threatened with prosecution for bigamy, California residents who obtained marital freedom through the convenient medium of Mexican "mail order" divorces and then remarried, have one thought—a lawyer. Superior Judge Thomas P. White tossed a legal wrench into the "mail order" divorce mill below the border and a scare into the lives of his clients in that state in a startling decree last week. He found Dow L. Harlow, Los Angeles oil man, guilty of bigamy for remarrying after having obtained a Mexican divorce. District Attorney Burton Pitts promptly warned others whose wedding ties had been snipped via the mails from Mexico that they faced a similar prosecution. A fine of $5,000 and not more than 10 years' imprisonment is possible under a bigamy conviction.

Runaway Wheel

A motorist whose car just came within a hundred yards of a fatal collision near Eichstaett, Central Bavaria, has been arrested for "causing the accident through criminal negligence." He is Hugo Walmer, whose left rear wheel suddenly came off as he was driving along a country road. Walmer stopped his car unhurt, but the runaway wheel bounded along the road and crashed through the windshield of a car coming round a corner in the opposite direction. The driver lost control, ran head-on into a tree and was instantly killed. Walmer is being held for "not taking the proper precaution of having his car thoroughly overhauled."

Shy Fireman Saves Child

Saving a baby from the wheels of an engine is one thing, but holding it while hero worshippers praise you is quite another, according to M. Hollander, a fireman on a railroad in Denmark. The child's mother was working in a field near the railroad line and the tot crawled on the tracks just before the morning train was due. The engineer and fireman saw it too late to stop. The engineers applied the brakes as Hollander ran along the footwalk at the side of the boiler, jumped from the front and pulled the babe from the tracks just in time. The train stopped and mother and passengers ran to Hollander, new blushing and trying to find a way to hold a baby. He never had done such a thing before.

"Love Court" Revived

A tribunal of 800 years ago, which sat to adjudicate on lovers' quarrels, will be revived as part of the festival of Santo Estello at Avignon, France, this month. The court will hand down decisions on the rights and duties of sweethearts toward each other. It is now busy studying precedents in the cases which came up in Provence in the eighth century.

Class in Laughter Grows

Laughter is becoming so easy for pupils of Dr. Pierre Vachet's course in "laughter therapeutics" at the Institute of Psychology in Paris that attendance at the Sunday morning classes is growing. Clerks, merchants, housewives and many old people are enrolled. In a darkened room Dr. Vachet induces his students to relax and after giving suggestions of calmness, strength and power he starts a phonograph record containing nothing but peals of boisterous laughter. Soon the entire class is exuding hilarity. That ends the lesson.

Children's Year for China

To arouse public sentiment in the promotion of a nation-wide programme of child welfare Chinese Children's Year will be observed throughout China from August 1, 1935, to July 30, 1936, according to the announcement made by the Executive Committee of the National Child Welfare Association of China. The special year was also designated by the National Government in Nanking. The national programme formulated by the Ministries of Education and Interior, has been officially approved by the Executive Yuan. It will be under the control of a National Executive Committee, consisting of appointees of the Ministries of Education, Interior and Industries, in co-operation with the National Child Welfare Association of China. Sub-committees will be organized in every hsein, city or province of the country.

Wedding Toasts at Border

Forbidden to cross the border to attend a wedding in the Polish village of Sameg, close to the German frontier, German friends suggested that the wedding feast be held at the boundary line. The guests assembled and toasted the bride pair from a table, one end of which was in Poland and the other in Germany. The merry-makers enjoyed themselves for hours under the watchful eyes of the frontier guards.

Court Calls for Gloves

A unique method of dispensing justice was resorted to at Crisfield, Maryland, recently. Algie Crippin and Louis White, two negroes, were brought before Magistrate Fred N. Holland on a charge of being intoxicated and quarrelsome. The magistrate conferred with Sheriff Luther Daugherty and they agreed it would be futile to put the county to a $30 expense for imprisoning the negroes for five days, the customary penalty. The negroes were provided with boxing gloves, a ring marked off on the water front and the negroes told to fight it out. For more than an hour all commercial activity in the neighbourhood was stopped while a crowd watched the fight. Crippin was declared winner on points.

Bad Note on Banknote

Anna Thunova wrote to an inspector of taxes in Prague, asking whether her claim for a substantial rebate could be dealt with as early as possible. The inspector glanced at the letter and went straight to the police. Shortly afterwards Anna was arrested for attempted bribery. Her letter was written lightly in pencil—on a banknote!

Double Gets Cheers

Lloyd George has a "double" in James Gray, a magistrate in Glasgow, Scotland. This the former Premier learned when he recently appeared before an audience of 3000 in Glasgow to tell about his New Deal proposals. Gray arrived at the hall first, was mistaken for Lloyd George, and received round after round of cheers. When Lloyd George arrived much of the lung power had been spent.

Ayrshire Field Day At Ormstown Proved A Successful Event

morning and noon hour and was indeed much enjoyed. The thanks of the Ayrshire Club goes to the orchestra for their valued contribution to the day's pleasure. The lunch boxes were opened and everyone had a real delightful time beneath the shade of the maples. Many guests were present from the city whilst a goodly number of friends from both Ormstown and Huntingdon joined with the Club at this annual picnic. Mr. and Mrs. McEwen supplied coffee to all whilst the Club saw to it that Purty ice cream was delivered to everyone present.

Following the luncheon President James Wallace called upon Mr. McEwen to open the afternoon programme of speeches. Mr. McEwen did so in his very able manner and brought forth ample applause in his doing. Mr. and Mrs. McEwen certainly put forth much effort towards making the necessary preparations for the event but he also wished to thank their many friends and club members for the co-operation so freely extended.

Lionel Forsyth Guest Speaker

Mr. Lionel Forsyth, K.C., of Montreal, who has on several occasions represented the Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association on legal matters was the principal guest speaker. In opening, Mr. Forsyth captioned his remarks by saying "The people on the farm abide by sound principles."

"In reading into the records of cattle breeding in this District I find that the best results achieved have been with the Ayrshire breed. They have gained more prizes and trophies than the breeders of any other section of rural districts in all Canada and on the North America continent. Secondly, the farmers here have worked co-heartedly together; thirdly, the breeders are a people who have a very substantial stake in the make-up of Canada. You have responsibilities to acknowledge and it is these responsibilities upon which I wish to speak.

"Agriculture is the principal industry in Canada. The farmer has problems to fathom and they demand special assistance. You have more real vested interests than any other industry, and your investment is in livestock, land and buildings, something that is tangible. There are those of us who are called upon to pay income taxes, but we all pay such a tax grudgingly but there is another form of giving and that form is through giving real service to the community and thereby to Canada.

"We have not collectively but individually been far too indifferent to public affairs. In the country government affairs have been left too much to politicians and city folks. The city people have also left such matters to too great an extent to politicians. This is indeed a mistake. A political party of class is detrimental to that of good citizenship.

"I feel we should insist that our members of parliament possess qualities that bespeak the truth and frankness and that the political parties would only be made up of such members. We have suffered from misrepresentation and glib promises that we right well knew would not be fulfilled. We might well relegate such representation to the past. "The sin within me is within all others also." Select the man who knows his business as your government representative. There is no such thing as a professional politician who knows his business. So-called politicians, I believe have no business, therefore they are in politics. Let representatives be men who have been a success in their business enterprises. Such men who have made a success in their own business affairs will tell the truth and be frank with us and willing to help his country as well as the people he represents.

Too Much Pull At Treasury

There has been too much pull at the treasury. Every man in Canada should, of course, get sustenance, but we have gone just plumb foolish in supplying relief. Our money given in the form of taxation was surely not intended to be spent in that manner. (Cheers).

"The railway expense problem confronts Canada. When it is known that the tearing up of rails should be done do not hesitate to endorse it. Let the business men elected to parliament do what they know is right, that is what was done in England. The railways demand the best business men and honest dealings. Insist upon men in public office that they spend money honestly and not for the benefit of a few selfish individuals.

"Truth, you know, few in my profession are credited with knowing very much about. (Laughter) Responsibilities rest upon members of parliament but the people should not be too ready to ask governments for concessions. Governments should not be continually regarded as a "Santa Claus", filling the stockings every Christmas. Let the populace of Canada stand on their own feet. The people of Canada have been aiding should now try to stand on their own feet and get along.

The Part the C. N. R. Plays in Marketing Canada's Crops.

So essential to the trade, commerce, and general welfare of Canada are the various classes of freight carried in the course of a year by Canadian National Railways that it is difficult to give pride of place to any particular one, but in their all-round importance to every section of the community, agricultural products must rank very high. They form the backbone of the nation's business activities and contribute directly and in large volume to its industry and employment everywhere.

During 1934 the C. N. R. carried over eight and a half million tons of agricultural produce, being an increase of 6.44% over 1933. In this total are included 134,700,000 bushels of wheat, 14,000,000 bushels of corn, 35,700,000 bushels of oats, and 15,500,000 bushels of barley; the aggregate of these commodities showing an increase of 4.1% when compared with the preceding year.

It is interesting to note that the average haul of each ton of wheat was approximately seven hundred and fifty miles.

Without the rail facilities of the C. N. R. no doubt some of this agricultural produce might still have reached a market, but it could only have done so at a much higher cost to the producer, and the quantity would necessarily have been negligible. For practically all the crops which enter into the figures above enumerated were placed in freight cars at points where the only rail transportation obtainable was that provided by Canadian National Railways.

These crops come from far scattered districts. In many cases from sparsely populated communities. . . but they are the result of the labours of men and women who each year create millions and millions of dollars of new wealth for Canada. In this work the C. N. R. is their partner and helper.

As is well known the crop movements of recent years have been much below normal. . . much below the standard of productivity of our prairies and agricultural areas, and much below the volume which the C. N. R. is equipped to handle. The figures quoted should, therefore, be considered in that light.

The carriage of agricultural produce is, of course, only one of the activities of the C. N. R. In every branch of rail transportation it is equipped to give the best of service. . . all the year round. . . under all conditions. . . economically, courteously, and competently. Your patronage is respectfully solicited.

During the present Summer season the C. N. R. is providing special fares and excursions between points throughout Canada. These are exceptional travel bargains. The nearest C. N. R. Agent will be glad to give full particulars.

Talk By P. N. April

Mr. P. N. April, of St. Martine Agricultural School brought greetings to the Ayrshire Club. He expressed himself as very much in favour of field days but better still he would like to see boys attending agricultural colleges such as Macdonald College for English speaking boys or even the St. Martine agricultural school for French speaking boys who cannot go to larger French agricultural colleges. The reason why Denmark takes first position in the world in regards to agriculture is that the country with 127,000 farms has 26 agricultural colleges. Their sons are indeed well educated as scientific farmers. Here in Quebec we have 125,000 farms and only five agricultural colleges. Agricultural education is the real reason for the success of agriculture in Denmark.

At this stage of the programme Mr. Fred Sweet of Covey Hill favoured the audience with one of his humorous recitations.

Dr. J. C. Moore, M.P., was called upon but he had left early in the afternoon.

Advocates Guard Against Sovietism

Mr. Martin B. Fisher, M.L.A., opened his remarks by pointing out that there are people who would wipe away the political parties of the past for something new. "I would recommend caution in this respect and let us not disturb the established institutions since Confederation. We might well advocate doing away with the constitution for Sovietism. Consider the effects Sovietism might have, would they liberate the convicts? My advice is not to be panicky. Let us hope that the times will become better. This is not the first depression that has taken place.

"Improvements have taken place of late. For instance, livestock has doubled in value, pork has trebled, whilst horses have also doubled in value. These good signs will continue and I would recommend the breeding and rearing of livestock in greater numbers. There is bound to be a good market in the near future. The great "back to the land movement" means a better market for stock. 25 years ago 65% of the Canadian population were living on farms, today it is 50%. 25 years ago surplus milk was unkind of, that was no doubt due to the fact that we had many milk factories about the country. We must also have a "back to the milk factory system" whereby such extra milk will be converted into butter and cheese and feed the by-products to young livestock. With the unlimited market for pork in England Canada is to-day only supplying one quarter of the bacon demands."

Mr. Allan C. Fraser, National Dairy Council of Canada, Ottawa, contrasted the gathering of 400 at the picnic with the 400 unhappy trekkers he saw at Ottawa after a 300 mile tramp. The trekkers passed fields that were in need of labour to be harvested. "I am sure if those trekkers could tramp 300 miles they could give the farmer a good day's work if they wanted to do so. It is indeed time you got more for your milk and when that comes about I know you will be even happier than you are to-day."

W. J. Black, of the Canadian National Railway, made reference to a recent trip he had made to the Canadian West which indicated excellent crops would be harvested but now comes the report of devastation due to rust. Wheat fields that looked excellent will not even harvest grain suitable for chicken feed. Fortunately no such devastation has ever struck the Chateaugay Valley.

The Basis of Herd Improvement

Professor A. R. Ness, Macdonald College referred to the basis of herd improvement as resting with the father and son. He intimated that he would like to see 100 boys from here attend Macdonald College for the two-year-course. The father may say he can teach the son just as much about good farming at home as he could learn at the college. At college a boy will make contacts that will teach him a whole lot in "life that begins at forty." Judgment plays a very important part in moulding the life of better men for the years to come.

Mr. J. E. Ness, past president of the Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association, reminded the dairymen of the necessity of having animals tattooed. The small expense entailed is trivial in comparison with the results that may be brought about when it comes to selling a duly registered purebred Ayrshire or any breed of cow. The price of cows has already advanced 35%, and consider the advancement that will take place in the next two or three years. "I am sorry," said Mr. Ness, "the standard of our dairy herds has been allowed to slip backwards during these years of depression. The time to start making improvements is now and at the same time have the purebred calves duly registered." The tattooing outfits in this District are in the hands of Club members as follows: A. H. Taylor, Athelstan; W. A. Churchill, Covey Hill; John Dickson, Ormstown; Burnside and Terrence Bank Farms at Howick.

Secretary Taylor informed the gathering that all members of the Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association were automatically members in good standing of the Club.

Brief remarks were also made by W. L. Carr, past president of the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada. Mr. Hugh Colson, Canadian Farmer, Toronto, and Adam L. Seilar.

The Club was very much indebted to Mr. Frank Napier, Ottawa for the assistance he extended towards making the field day the real success that it achieved. Mr. Gilbert McMillan closed the afternoon's programme by extending a word of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. McEwen, the Orchestras, $13.50; Dr. Fortin, $3; W. R.

tra, guest speakers and donors of the many prizes, etc. Special contributions are acknowledged from Dr. J. C. Moore, M.P., and Mr. M. B. Fisher, M.L.A.

Tres St. Sacrement Council

Regular meeting Council Parish Tres St. Sacrement, Monday, August 5 Mayor Andrew Bennie presiding.

Coun. Parent gave notice that at the next general meeting of this Council, Sept. 3rd, 1935, he will move the adoption of a by-law to levy on this Municipality sufficient monies to pay the County tax and to pay running expenses and interest on borrowed money for the ensuing year.

WHAT'S THE IDEA OF GIVING THE BABY A QUARTER TO PLAY WITH CHRIS? DON'T YOU KNOW MONEY HAS GERMS ON IT?

Crusty

DON'T FOOL YOURSELF. A GERM COULDN'T LIVE ON MY SALARY!

THE MAN NEXT DOOR WANTS TO SHOW ME HIS TROPHIES. HE DOES A LOT OF HUNTING AND HAS EVERYTHING STUFFED!

HE'S A PEST!

EVERYTHING HE SHOOTS HE HAS STUFFED AND MOUNTED! HE EVEN HAS A LITTLE SQUIRREL AMONG HIS TROPHIES!

I GET MY GREATEST PLEASURES FROM HUNTING I'VE KILLED THINGS ON EVERY CONTINENT! TAKE THIS PORCUPINE, FOR INSTANCE!

NO YOU TAKE IT!

I SHOT HIM WHILE HE WAS ASLEEP. HE'D HAVE GIVEN ME A TERRIFIC BATTLE IF HE'D BEEN AWAKE! IT COST ME $15 TO HAVE HIM STUFFED!

AND THIS BOAR WAS PLENTY TOUGH! I SAW SOMETHING MOVING IN THE BUSHES AND FIRED. WHEN I APPROACHED THE SPOT I STUMBLED OVER HIS DEAD BODY!

WHAT DID HE DIE OF?

HE HAD A SLUG IN HIS HEAD FROM THIS GUN! I RAISED IT CAREFULLY WHEN I SAW HIM AND ---

GEE, I DIDN'T KNOW IT WAS LOADED! THERE'S THE PHONE—WILL YOU ANSWER IT?

HA-HA—THAT'S A GOOD JOKE!

IT'S MY SISTER! SHE SAYS THAT BULLET TORE THROUGH THE SIDE OF OUR HOUSE!

ASK HER IF I HIT ANYTHING THAT I CAN HAVE STUFFED!

SHE SAYS DARNED RIGHT YOU DO—THAT BULLET RAISED CAIN WITH OUR BEST MATTRESS!

Proof of Leatherlips' Guilt

Back in 1810 the Indian Chief Leatherlips was tomahawked by his own tribesmen on a charge of practicing witchcraft. After the chief was struck on the head and lay for a while in the agonies of death, the tomahawk-wielding executioner directed the attention of those present to the drops of sweat gathering on the dying Indian's neck and face, remarking with exultation that this was conclusive proof of Leatherlips' guilt.

Rockburn

Two games were played on the local baseball diamond Saturday afternoon. The first was a game of softball between the Franklin Centre and local teams. This was the Franklin boys first match and they played a good game, losing to the local boys by only a small margin.

The second game was between the married and single men. From the start it was easily seen that the married men were much too strong an aggregation for their younger opponents, practically putting the game on ice in the first three innings. Mr. A. Pollock acquired the game in a manner satisfactory to all.

The girls softball team played at the Gore last week and won by a score of 8-4. A return match to be played on the local diamond is being arranged.

Mrs. Robb and the Misses Robb of Montreal, spent the week-end with Miss Dunsmore. On Sunday afternoon the congregation had the pleasure of hearing the latter sing during the service.

Obituary

Mrs. Joseph Chartrand
On Saturday, Aug. 3rd death claimed Alexandrine Bergevin, wife of Joseph Chartrand. The deceased was born at Athelstan, Que., a daughter of Mr. Frank Bergevin and the late Mrs. Bergevin.

The late Mrs. Chartrand was only in her forty-seventh year. Twenty years ago this Autumn she came to New Erin a bride and during these few years, won many friends and neighbors by her kind personality, who will miss her greatly. Her home and family were the chief interest of her life and there you could find her telling unceasingly for their happiness. All comforts and consolation for the sick and dying were afforded her and for her death had no terrors. She faced it as she had lived, calmly and courageously and full of trust and confidence in the goodness of God.

The funeral was held on Monday morning, August 5th at St. Joseph's Church, Huntingdon, Rev. Father Pigeon received the body and Father Poirier of Hinchinbrooke chanted the Solemn Mass of Requiem. Rev. Father Bergevin was also present in the sanctuary. The honorary pall-bearers were Messrs. Omer and Alfred Bergevin; the pall-bearers: Messrs. Euclide, Arthur, Omer, Donat, Zenophile and Oscar Chartrand.

Surviving are her husband and nine children, Ovide, Eva, Yvonne, Marie Jeanne, Elodie, Florence, Arthur, Alfred, Aldora, also her father, Mr. Frank Bergevin of Athelstan, one sister, Mrs. Bacon of Williamstown, and four brothers, Omer of Montreal, Arthur of Western Canada, Alfred and Alex. of Athelstan.

Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved family and relatives.

Mrs. F. L. M. Mills

On Saturday, August 10th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Graham, passed away after a short illness, she came here to live two years ago from Toronto, but a resident of Huntingdon and a member of St. John's Anglican Church. Mrs. Mills had reached a great age, being in her ninety-first year. She came of pioneer stock, her father having been sent over from England as a missionary early part of the last century. So the deceased lady always took a keen interest in Missions. She was also an accomplished pianist, and to the last a great writer.

Mrs. Mills is survived by two daughters out of a family of six, Mrs. H. R. Graham of Huntingdon and Mrs. G. E. Burns of Westmont, P. Q., and one grandson, Major E. L. M. Burns, M.C., O.B.E., General Staff, Ottawa, who has won distinction in Empire.

The funeral took place on Monday at St. John's Church where the service was taken by the Rev. Arthur Cowdery of Malone, in the absence of the Rector, Mr. Hatcher. The following acted as pall-bearers: Messrs. C. B. Kelly, W. A. Hunter, Wm. Hamilton, R. E. Ewart, Arthur Graham and Ward McKinnon. Masses of beautiful flowers were received.

Matrimonial

Dandurand-Laberge
The marriage of Colombe, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adela Leberge of Valleyfield, Que., to Mr. Lucien Dandurand, son of the late Joseph Dandurand and Mrs. Dandurand, was solemnized Wednesday morning, August 7th, by Monsiegnieur, at the Catholic Church of Valleyfield, which was decorated with white daisies and gladioli for the occasion. Mr. Raphael Belanger, Dr. Amyot and Mr. M. Trotter took part in the musical program. The bridegroom was accompanied by his brother, Mr. Armand Dandurand, and by Mr. Romeo Martineau, of Montreal, who acted as best man.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a Molyneux model of snow white satin, the train of which was lined with pink georgette crepe, with a veil of white illusion, her only ornament being a platinum watch, the gift of her bridesmaids. She carried a colonial bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Miss Isabelle Lalonde, of Montreal, the bride's only attendant, as bridesmaid, wore a Lelong model of rich pink printed tulle, with a large scarlet velvet hat and carried a colonial bouquet of Johanna Hill roses. Mrs. Laberge, mother of the bride, wore a black Elizabethan crepe gown, a large velvet hat and accessories to match, and a corsage bouquet of mauve orchids; Mrs. Dandurand, the mother of the groom, being in a black heavy crepe gown, with black accessories and a corsage bouquet of mauve sweet peas. Following the wedding ceremony, Mrs. Laberge entertained at the reception room of the Knights of Columbus in Valleyfield, where the decorations were composed of white gladioli. Later Mr. and Mrs. Dandurand left on board the S.S. Lady Rodney, for a cruise to Bahamas and Jamaica, the bride travelling in a gold foil woolen ensemble, with a faint fox fur trimming and brooch accessories.

On their return, they will reside in Valleyfield.

Parish Observes 50th Anniversary

The 50th anniversary of the founding of St. Clothilde parish, Chateaugay, was celebrated Sunday with High Mass, Monsiegnor, J. A. Laroche, Bishop of Valleyfield, celebrating High Mass, assisted by Canon Napoleon Preville and Canon J. E. Aubin. Among those present at the celebrations were Hon. Chapter XI

Norman jumped back and stared at Millicent Graves apprehensively. Millicent moved toward the door as though to open it.

Norman caught her arm with his right hand, at the same time pressing the forefinger of his left hand against his lips to indicate the necessity for silence. He leaned closer to her and whispered, "Don't open that door while I'm here."

She would have said something, but she darted away from her on swiftly silent feet. He opened the door of her closet, stepped inside and pulled the door shut after him.

Knuckles sounded on the panels of the door.

Millicent Graves started once more toward the door to open it, then indignation got the better of her. She raised her face so that it was perfectly audible to the person outside of the door and said, "I don't think I care to receive any more visitors tonight. Norman Happ is here and is just leaving."

At the sound of her words Happ emerged from the closet. His face was a dull red.

"What did you do that for?" he asked in a mumbled, surly voice.

"Because," she told him, "I've done nothing to be ashamed of and I don't intend to be put in an embarrassing position."

She turned the knob and opened the door.

Jarvis Happ stood on the threshold. Gravelly he surveyed the pair.

"May I ask," he inquired, "how long Norman has been here?"

Millicent Graves faced him defiantly.

"You may," she said, "ask Norman. He is the one to tell you. As for me, I'll wish you both good-night."

Jarvis Happ's eyes stared at her with that peculiar searching gaze which was so characteristic of the man.

"I think I told you," he said, "that you were to adopt a hands-off policy."

She said, defiantly, "I am telling you that if the men in this house don't quit invading my room I'm going to get a watchdog. All that I ask of you or of your son is a reasonable amount of privacy. Your son came to this room uninvited. I think perhaps his intentions were friendly. However, the fact remains that he came here uninvited."

Norman Happ said, "That's right, Dad. You can't blame her for feeling peeved. I walked in on her."

"Why?" asked the older man.

"Because I wanted to warn her."

"About what, may I ask?"

"About Bob."

"What about Bob?"

"Bob has been trying things with her."

"What sort of things?"

"I don't know. She won't tell me. But I'm the one that came to her room. I came without knocking. She resented my intrusion. We were arguing when Norman Happ backed at the door. She was asking me to leave—in fact, insisting that I leave."

For a moment the stern, searching eyes of Jarvis Happ softened somewhat. He glanced at his son, standing erect and dignified. Then he said slowly, "Well, if that's the case, Norman, you would present a much more dignified appearance if you wiped the lipstick from your mouth."

"With that?" he turned and stalked gravely down the hall.

Norman Happ, his face the color of a baked beet, wiped furiously at his mouth with a handkerchief. Millicent Graves, torn between a desire to cry and to laugh, slammed the door shut and very audibly turned the key in the lock. Then she walked to a large overstuffed chair, dropped into it and started to laugh. The whole situation was too utterly absurd, explaining to his father the unwarranted nature of his intrusion and the cool reception which he had received.

Abruptly Millicent remembered the things she had learned from Norman Happ and the laughter died from her lips.

There really was some reason back of everything Jarvis Happ had done. Jarvis Happ knew of the woman in the black ermine coat, the mysterious woman whom George Dringold had described on the night of his death, and Jarvis Happ had instructed Harry Felding, the chauffeur, to shadow this mysterious woman in black. That would mean, then, that Jarvis Happ didn't know the identity of the woman. Or, if he knew her identity, didn't know where she lived. It also meant that he was interested in finding out more about this woman.

Millicent Graves was determined that she was going to cultivate Harry Felding. If he discovered anything concerning this woman who wore a black ermine fur coat and who seemed to exert such a powerful influence upon the lives of those with whom she came in contact, Millicent Graves decided that she would be in a position to find out just what information he had uncovered.

Slowly she started disrobing and as she slipped off her outer garments and stood before her mirror applying creams to her face, she ran over the events of the day in her mind.

Suddenly she realized that the interruptions had prevented her from looking over the books which Mr. Gentry had given her in the suitcase. Her eyes turned toward the suitcase. It was brown, with brass mountings. There were two straps which entirely surrounded the suitcase. It had been made to stand hard usage, and she noticed casually that one of the corners had been badly dented so that the edge of the brass reinforcement presented a jagged appearance.

She frowned as she thought how easy it would be to snag a stocking on that bit of brass, and determined she would have it fixed. Why not ask the chauffeur to fix it? That would be a good way to lay the foundation for her campaign.

She left the stool in front of her dressing table, took a few steps toward the suitcase, then realized she was too tired to bother with books. It had been a hard day. But she did want to take a look at those books before she retired, just to see what they looked like and how they had been kept.

She dropped into the overstuffed chair, placed her finger-tips at the back of her neck and gently kneaded the taut muscles, holding her neck as completely relaxed as she could, swaying her head from side to side.

A delicious sense of languor crept over her. She slowly lowered her hands to her lap. The room was warm and cozy. She yawned, lay her head back and closed her eyes.

Millicent awoke abruptly, realizing that she had been asleep. She did not know how long she had slept, but she realized that some noise had awakened her.

She sat perfectly still, her senses alert, waiting, wondering if the noise would be repeated. A moment later she heard it again, the sound of rustling motion in the corridor just outside her door.

She remembered locking the door, wondering if someone had tried once to enter her room without knocking. Whoever it was who had paused outside the door had now started down the corridor. She could hear the sound of retreating steps. Then a door banged somewhere at the end of the corridor.

Millicent got to her feet, frowning. Who could have walked down the corridor to her door? And who would have paused to listen, or...

Her eyes lit on a slip of paper which protruded from beneath the door.

Evidently, then, someone had called to leave a note.

She got to her feet and realized from the cramped condition of her limbs that she must have been sleeping for some time. Sheer exhaustion had taken its toll.

She slid the paper from beneath the door.

It was a paper upon which appeared a typewritten, unsigned message. The message was brief and sinister.

"THE WOMAN IN THE BLACK ERMINE COAT IS HERE."

Douglas Hayter is teaching school in northern Quebec—in Paltimore, to be exact. Truly, he is one of the pioneer educators of that silent north country. He has been there three years, is re-engaged for next term and is taking a course at Queen's too.

Jean Hunter, as Irish as they make them, is at McGill enjoying the benefits which are gained by capturing the Lord Atholstan scholarship. Jean is a strong booster of a certain party, (political) and in fact of two parties, and they both originated in the West. Vernon Elder is using his fertile imagination in helping the soil bring out better crops. He would like to take a trip down around near Lacolle, sometime soon.

Grace "Patsy" Ryan, another little Irishman, is way down in Sherbrooke, Que., where she will graduate as a nurse this fall. Did somebody say they were sick? Sherbrooke Hospital? Why certainly.

Dorothy Tannahill has been attending McGill since she left school. During the summer she stays at home on the farm.

Eleanor Miller attended Macdonald College for a term and has been cooking delicacies for the meal palates of her class at Stanstead, Que., during the past year. She teaches English too—what a figure for speech.

Ronald McPherson (whose greatest virtue is Grace) while at school under the alias of "Sandy" played at hockey and two kinds of rugby—field and chesterfield. On dance floor was not so slow as in most other places.

After graduating from Huntingdon left for the wild and woolly west where he joined a Doukhobor colony, but they did too much hunger marching so he jumped a boat to renew acquaintances in the good old Province of Quebec. He was successful in obtaining a job as "snooper" for the local paper where he can usually be found on the job, except after one of his frequent wild goose chases to Montreal. At present he's visiting at home in Fort William. Ronald has quite an interest in medicine—that is, being around when someone else's dispensing—but we think she wishes he'd drop her.

A credulous guy at a hotel. Was quite charmed with a girl named Mabel.

But he nearly expired. When he found she was hired. To use up his dough at the table.

Not An Egg Broken in Crash

Loaded with eggs a horse-drawn truck was crashed by a heavy motor truck in Victoria road, Dundas, Scotland, and not a single egg was broken. The vehicle carrying the eggs, the property of John King, was scratched but the motor truck received the heavier damage.

Maxime Raymond Is Again Chosen As Candidate

public debts, increasing taxes, and the creation of deficit on deficit.

The Hon. Fernand Rinfret assured the meeting that the Liberal party fully ratified their choice of candidate in the new constituency and presaged success for him. He drew the laughter of the crowd referring to the Bennett Government's reluctance to go to the polls when he observed that no one with a toothache was in a hurry to go to the dentist. At the rate the election postponements were being made, they might expect to be in power by New Year.

Seldom had he seen such unanimity at a convention, he continued, paying tribute to Mr. Raymond. He recalled the part the candidate had played in the Bank of Canada debates and the budget discussions, when it was obvious he was a capable and competent member who was at home in economic questions.

Dealing with the general policy of the Liberal party the speaker said they had been reproached in certain quarters for saying the same thing over again. But what was true yesterday is still true today, and in this regard unemployment was still the greatest problem the country faced. In 1930 Bennett had promised to solve it or resign, but it was obvious he held to the French proverb which says "Parler c'est mourir un peu."

"Bennett has been deaf to the cries of the last five years," went on Mr. Rinfret. "In 1930 he reproached us with the unemployed but in 1935 he would not allow the same men to approach Ottawa and even called out the R.C.M.P. Unemployment has grown steadily in these years until today it is over 1,000,000. Is it not time the Bennett administration abandoned its place to others? It is not likely that a man who cannot even fix the election date can reduce unemployment."

Dealing with the reforms in unemployment administration that the Liberal party would undertake, Mr. Rinfret said that one of the greatest difficulties in the handling of relief was the waste of time between far-distant cities and Ottawa, the representatives of the provincial governments and the municipalities. The King Government would prevent these interminable delays by administering relief through an independent commission. In the past the Government had voted huge sums for unemployment relief works for the pleasure of the member for such and such—a highway here, a tunnel there. The King Government would cut this out and follow the recommendation of the independent commission. Relief camps for the concentration of single men who were kept like wild animals and which had become hotbeds of unrest would also be done away with.

Tariff revisions, the establishment of new commercial treaties with ad-

quate protection, and the opening up of world markets were also promised by the speaker as part of the Liberal programme. "Bennett's first act was to raise the tariffs and look after his manufacturing friends," said Mr. Rinfret. "Canada has lost the confidence and goodwill of other countries. Only the other day Japan imposed stringent tariffs against us and Bennett took retaliatory action. Bennett was supposed to have opened the market for Canadian lumber in England but today England is importing wood from Russia, a country not even recognized by Canada."

No Treaty With U.S.

"Mr. Cahan's French treaty opened the market for Canadian wheat in exchange for French wines. But today France is destroying her own wheat surplus and we in Canada cannot buy food, let alone French wines. When Bennett established his brother-in-law in Washington a reciprocal treaty was expected to follow, but there is still no treaty."

Turning to the situation created by the entry of new groups into the political field, Mr. Rinfret warned his hearers not to be misled by new parties fostered by discontent and personal ambition. Hinting at a liaison between the Stevens party and the Conservatives, he suggested that the Stevens group was ashamed of its real relations and disguised itself under a new name. Concluding he pointed to the Liberal success that had attended provincial elections and to the number of Liberal-governed provinces ready to co-operate with the new Federal Government.

The Hon. Honoré Mercier also congratulated the candidate in a brief address, expressing his conviction that the Liberal party would sweep the polls. Paul Mercier, M.P. for St. Henri, traced Mr. Stevens' career and declared there was no Stevens party, only a leader of that name. The group had neither authority nor recognition. Vincent Dupuis, M.P. for Laprairie-Naperville, and J. E. Charbonneau, M.L.A. for the same division, also spoke briefly. Dr. J. M. Longtin, mayor of Laprairie and Philorum Bilette, mayor of Valleyfield, presided at the rally.

Notice to Farmers

We suggest that farmers reserve as many fields as possible for the production of clover seed as our local markets can absorb three times the quantity of seed we produce.

Clover seed sold in bags having the Government seal bring higher prices and obtain easier sale due to the guarantee thereby offered.

In order that seed be classified and the government seal appended to the bags, the fields must be inspected during the summer.

Farmers desiring to have their field inspected for clover seed must make such desire known before August 15th.

The fees for inspection fixed by the Federal Government are as follows: 50c for each producer where there are at least 10 producers within a reasonable limit; producers living at a distance from any other, 10c per acre, with a minimum charge of $2.00.

supper was served, after which a social hour was spent.

It gave these gentlemen much pleasure not only to enjoy the hospitality extended them on this occasion, but also to find this beautiful spot on Lake St. Francis so splendidly equipped, after recent renovations, for entertainment for any who wish to find a quiet, refined and restful spot in which to enjoy a holiday. A good road now leads along the bank of Salmon river to the Point, and the proprietor and proprietors state they have entertained as many as 90 guests in one day during this summer.

The members of the Council Board are looking forward to a further visit which is being planned for them by their host and hostess; the ladies will be included on this coming occasion.

Rev. C. A. Haughton is now enjoying a holiday which may last two or three weeks. He expects spending most of this time at Ottawa; there will therefore be no church or Sunday school service next Sunday; the following Sundays services will be resumed, however, when a supply will be sent out from the city.

Mrs. Kerr and Miss Lois Kerr recently returned from a trip during which they were present at the Mead-Stockwell wedding in Quebec City and also visited in Stanstead at the home of Mrs. H. P. Stockwell.

"Why, lady, my brother has one of the biggest bankers in Chicago after him."

"Oh, so he's a cashier, is he?"
"No, he was."
