Town Council Encounters Heavy Expenses In Sept.

More Than $3,000 Paid For Repairs on Hunter, Lake street, etc.—Materials For New Sewers Laid—Bicycle Drivers To Be More Cautious In Future.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Huntingdon Town Council on Monday evening, most of the time was taken up by reading of accounts which were presented for payment. More than $3,000 will be paid on accounts. Huntingdon has been kept busy of late in extending Hunter street and Lake street to the town limits. The fact that an extensive work program is actually being carried out by the Town of Huntingdon in co-operation with the Provincial government has brought about these heavy expenses. The Town is also purchasing material in preparation for the construction of a new sewer along Chateauguay street.

Bicycle drivers will have to be more cautious in the future, as stated at the meeting. It is apparent that many of these drivers are often seen with two or more on one bicycle and driving recklessly about the streets of the town. Mayor Faubert asked the secretary of the town to see if there was a By-law passed in recent years pertaining to this question, and if such is the case, the local police will be asked to have same closely observed. This question will be re-discussed at an adjourned meeting of the council in the near future.

Charles Reid came before the Council and asked them to build a culvert along Lake street, near the head-line to accommodate the water which passes through this section. The question was left in the hands of the water committee for investigation.

The restaurant-owners will have permission to keep their business place open till one a.m., instead of midnight. However, if these persons abuse the privilege granted, the By-law will again be put into force and these places will have to close at midnight.

Construction permits were granted to Napoleon Barr and Alphege Deland. The Town Council will ask the Health Unit to investigate Mrs. Deschamps residence on Lake Street in regard to sanitation.

Mr. Charles Reid informed the Council that he was willing to give them seven feet of land along Lake Street, to widen this road, provided the Town will build the fence. Mayor Faubert was authorized to sign the deal for same.

A letter from H. T. Cunningham of Huntingdon, was read in which he asked the town of Huntingdon the proper drainage of the water in this part. The question was left on the table for further study.

The Fire Commission asked the Council to co-operate with them during the Fire Prevention Week which will start on October 9th and end on October 15th.

The following accounts were ordered paid:—

Labor, Lake St., $193.25; trucks, Lake St., $80.00; E. C. McCo, $39.47; labor, Lake St., $10; Brathwaite Bros., $75.65; Employers Liability Ass'n., $28.37; Pringle Stark & Co., $309.72; Sun Oil Co., $2.85; Shawinigan Water & Power Co., $213.54; Adrien Lefebvre, $5; J. ## Valleyfield Opposes A Resolution

St. Catharines, Ont., Asks That Canada Stand By England In Event Of European Conflict.

The City of St. Catharines, Ont., prepared a copy of a resolution, which will be forwarded to the Prime Minister of Canada, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, to the members of the Valleyfield Council, in which it asked the Valleyfield members to insist upon the head of our country to show England that Canada would stand behind the Mother Country in the event of an European conflict. Aid Mallette protested openly against this attitude, claiming that our Canadians had nothing to do in European matters. Mr. Mallette suggested that a negative answer be sent to the secretary of St. Catharines Council.

Ligouri Poirier was appointed inspector of the City in replacement of Philip Dore.

A letter was read from the president of the "Cercle Dramatique des Jeunes" asking permission to sponsor a dance at the Chateau Salaberry, in the near future, and the main item that evening would be an amateur program.

Omer Gari asked sewer for his new residence. The chairman of the water committee was asked to have this work done.

A letter from L. McGillis, of the Shawinigan Water & Power Co., informed the Council that they are employing local men in the construction of their new building on Victoria street.

A petition asking that no changes be made in the evaluation roll for five years, and that an exemption of taxes be given all new buildings constructed, was tabled for further study.

St. Louis Resident Loses Life In Car Accident At Trout River Lines, Sunday

Blood Transfusion Fails To Save Aldeo Bougie's Life After Victim Had Leg Severed From Body Verdict Of Accidental Death Rendered.

Aldeo Bougie, aged 34 years, of St. Louis de Gonzague, lineman with the Shawinigan Water and Power Co., died at the Hotel Dieu Hospital in Valleyfield early Monday morning, a few hours after his admission there, following an automobile accident which occurred near the residence of Joseph Plante, two miles from the Canadian Customs at Trout River.

According to reports, Bougie, accompanied by other friends were returning to St. Louis after spending the day in Malone, N.Y. It was between twelve and one o'clock a.m. Monday when the tragic accident happened. Two St. Louis cars were following one another when the leading car came to a stop when one of its occupants took sick. The occupants in both cars got out of the cars with Bougie getting out on the left hand side of the last car. A Ford sedan, driven by Donald Kemp, of Malone, N.Y., was traveling in opposite direction, towards Malone, when Bougie, who was standing near the running board of the Laberge car was struck by Kemp's Ford. Exactly how this happened, could not be ascertained by other parties.

Bougie fell and when picked up by his companions, they noticed that his left leg had been completely severed from his body, six inches below the knee. The victim did not lose consciousness and passers-by ran to a nearby neighbor to summon aid.

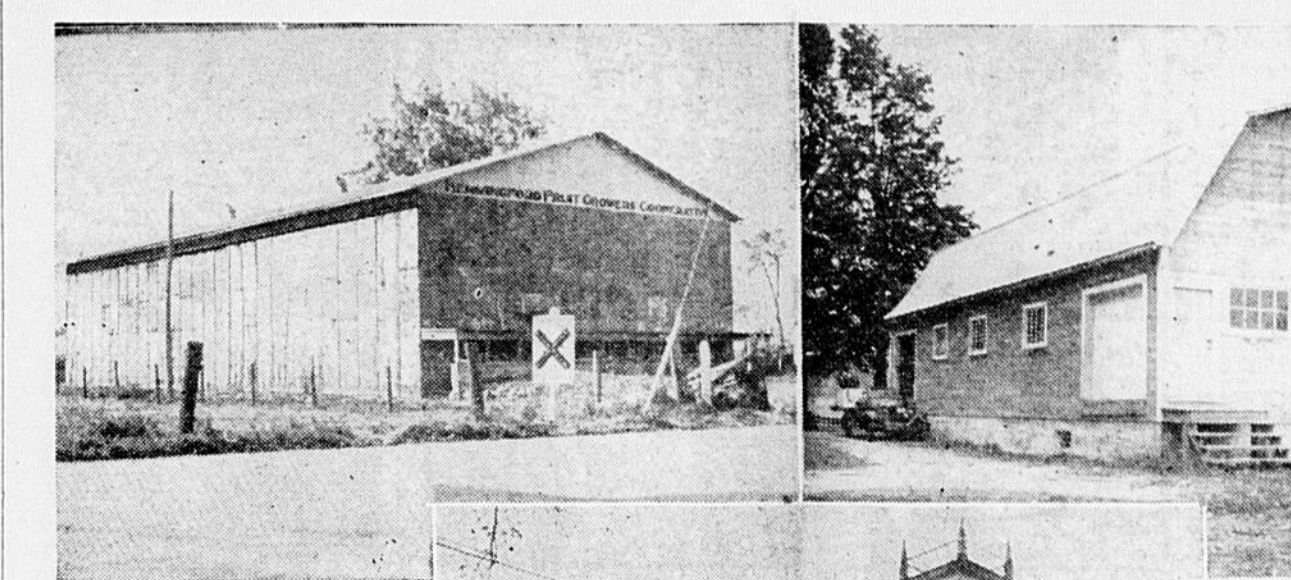

Dr. Claude St-Onge, of Huntingdon, was soon on the scene of the accident and immediately sent for Kelly's ambulance from Huntingdon. Rushed to Valleyfield, Bougie was given a blood transfusion on arrival but gradually lapsed, to finally pass away between four thirty and five o'clock the same morning.

An inquest was held on Monday afternoon and a verdict of accidental death rendered.

Dr. O. E. Caza, at the Valleyfield Hospital, stated that Bougie was always conscious until a few minutes before his death. In his examination Dr. Caza disclosed that Bougie, besides his severed leg, also suffered a fracture of the right leg.

The Chevrolet in which the victim was riding and where he was standing at the time of the accident, was slightly damaged with both doors on the left hand side caved in, apparently with the pressure of the Ford on Bougie's body. The Ford driven by Kemp had a damaged left front fender with the headlight on the same side broken.

Eastern Section of Huntingdon County Has Flourishing Apple Industry

Hemingford Fruit Growers' Co-operative Cold Storage Plant was at one time the most active grading plant in the Chateauguay Valley. It is the largest in the County, and many farmers in that vicinity still pack their apples in this spacious building which is situated in the Village of Hemmingford.

Gilwell Badge Presented To C. F. Fitton

Proficiency Badge Awarded Scoutmaster For Successful Course In Scoutcraft And Woodcraft

At a ceremony held at the troop headquarters in Valleyfield, on Tuesday evening last, Mr. C. F. Fitton, Scoutmaster of the 1st Valleyfield Troop of Boy Scouts was formally invested by Mr. E. Russell Paterson, the Executive Director from Provincial Headquarters, Montreal, with the Canadian Gilwell or Wood badge and made a member of the Gilwell Troop.

The badge, which consists of two of the beads forming the necklace originally belonging to Chief Dini-zulu which was captured by the Chief Scout, Lord Robert Baden-Powell of Gilwell during the Zulu war, is the proficiency badge awarded to Scoutmasters at the successful conclusion of an extensive course consisting of lectures and practical training in scoutcraft and woodcraft. The course must be completed by the running of a troop for a period of at least six months on the lines laid down in the course before the badge can be awarded.

On Saturday morning the Gleaner had the opportunity of visiting the Franklin Fruit Growers Co-operative and the Covey Hill Fruit Growers Co-operative and all hands were busy grading the millions of apples strewn about the premises.

It was thought along these centres that the tail-end of the hurricane, which passed through this section of the country a fortnight ago, had done considerable damage. After investigation, however, it was found that such was not the case as most of the apple growers along that part of the County of Huntingdon had practically completed picking and only a few reported damages.

The fact that Havelock, Franklin Centre and Covey Hill are situated in a hilly region probably accounts for the light damages which were done to the apple crop when this hurricane caused so much damage in other centres south and south-east of the United States.

Although Havelock, Covey Hill and Franklin Centre had a most prosperous apple crop, such is not the case at Hemmingford. Apparently, the "blow" did not take at this place in the spring as it had done in other localities nearby. The exact causes of the poor crop at Hemmingford could not be ascertained. At Franklin the apple growers have been kept busy doing one thing and another to their crop and preparing for grading and shipping of their most important produce since the first week in August. At Covey Hill work was started a few weeks later. The numerous hands which are employed at these two grading plants will complete grading this week.

These centres have often been struck by hail and heavy rain storms but this year was an exception, save the light damage caused by the hurricane.

The east end of the County of Huntingdon, where Havelock, Franklin Centre and Covey Hill are situated, was formerly a dairy country. The farmers there have concentrated their efforts on producing apples of Extra Fancy quality and they have been successful in each instance. Young orchards are in abundance in these localities and this has been a great factor in the excellence of 1938's apple crop. More than 9,000 trees were planted eight, nine and ten years ago, and the result of the crops from these young trees have increased the quality and production of the crop to a maximum.

The apples from these places are shipped to Montreal by the express and if they are not sold in advance they are stored in a cold storage plant for the later use. Wholesalers purchase these apples for their customers gradually during the winter and when spring time rolls around the crop has all been sold.

Among the better known apples which are commonly known at Havelock, Franklin Centre and Covey Hill, are McIntosh, Pameche, Duchess, Molba, Red Astrachan, Peach, Maiden's Blush, Transparents, Weller, Wolf River, Alexander, Baxter, Baldwin and Spy, etc.

Young Peoples' Unions Meet In Huntingdon United Church In Annual Convention

Forty Churches In Montreal Conference Represented — Two Hundred Young People In Attendance—Prominent Church Dignitaries Assist In Leading Conferences

The Young People's Unions of the Montreal Presbytery, United Church of Canada, held a largely attended Annual Convention at the Huntingdon United Church on Saturday and Sunday.

About 150 strong, representing approximately 40 churches throughout the Montreal Conference, the delegates arrived in Huntingdon by Bus Saturday afternoon. Representatives from local districts increased the number by more than fifty.

Attended by wide-awake delegates, headed by an efficient executive and with a varied well-chosen program the meeting was destined to be a success from start to climax.

Special speakers for the occasion were the Rev. P. A. C. Dossie, of Sherbrooke, who addressed the convention at both the Sunday services, when the church auditorium was taxed to capacity and the Rev. D. T. I. Forsythe of Montreal. Mr. Forsythe, Ontario Boys' Work Secretary, was keenly interested in youth work in which capacity he is widely known throughout the Dominion of Canada. A genial personality, he was one of the highlights of the convention.

The convention was formally opened by Thomas Kirk of Montreal, President of the Presbytery Executive. Rev. J. H. Miller, D.D., and Wallace Rennie, President of local Y.P.U., heartily welcomed the delegates to Huntingdon. After other opening preliminaries, the opening of the Executive to which Stanley Currie was re-elected as district vice-president, a most enjoyable banquet was served by the ladies of the district. Here were followed by a sing-song and a lively recreational party. Vespers with Rev. D. T. I. Forsythe as speaker, closed the meeting Saturday evening.

Early Sunday morning the Convention took on a more serious aspect. Six commissions were in session at 9:00 o'clock and continued throughout the day, the object being to form a basic policy of activity for the ensuing year, "Youth and the Church's Future", "Community Relationships of the Local Y.P.U.", are examples of the topics under discussion. Here views and opinions were exchanged, some points being keenly debated, and study of the problems facing Young People's Unions were dealt with. The leaders of these commissions were well chosen, knew their topics and were of great assistance to those interested in their special discussion. A report of their findings will be available in the near future.

The convention formally closed Sunday evening with a communion service, at which Sacrament was given to three hundred or more people.

All the religious services throughout the convention were carried on by the Young People, the local group officiating at the Sunday morning service.

In order to accommodate this large number of people, much preliminary work was done by Miss Dorothy Davis, Mr. Stanley Currie and the local Y.P.U. Executive members. The church willingly gave a hand in preparation of supper and in billeting the delegates which was one of the interesting features of the convention.

Principal J. B. Macmillan made a plea to the teachers to unite in the formation of a local teachers' association. He pointed out the need of the teachers to the fact that means must not obscure the end in the development of Projects.

Mr. McQuat's lecture was very practical, demonstrating what might be done in rural schools with maximum of material and minimum of equipment. He expressed his willingness to visit, lecture or assist in any way in helping teachers to advance the teaching of so lively a subject as nature study, especially in environment which is so profusely blessed with the opportunity to study nature's living book.

Inspector Brady, all the teachers in Mr. Brady's inspectorate, who might find it possible to co-operate. He pointed out the possibility of mutual helpfulness which would result from such an association.

Inspector Brady outlined the technical use of teachers' memoranda and gave such other instruction from the department as he deemed necessary, especially for the guidance of the young teachers.

Our Empire Democracy and Diplomacy vs. Dictatorship

The Crisis Finds the Man Scene—10 Downing Street, London, England. (Some time in Aug.) Runciman—"Good-morning, Neville."

Chamberlain—"Oh! Good-morning, Walter, glad you came early. Sit down. Care to take a jaunt abroad, Walter?"

Runciman—"As you wish, where this time?"

Chamberlain—"Prague. No doubt you are fully aware that the old racial jealousies have been fomenting for quite a time now in Central Europe. Ever since the revolutions in 1848, continued wars have sprung up and many efforts have been made to solve their problems. It was only half patched up in 1918. "I remember Dad predicting years ago that a large European war would some day result from this tangle of races and babble of tongues."

"Now what do you say to just jogging along over there and letting me have some first hand information as to how it is just now? Let me know your views. Make a holiday out of it. A change, no doubt, will do you good."

Runciman—"Most certainly! When do you wish me to go?"

Chamberlain—"At your earliest convenience."

Runciman—"Day after tomorrow do?"

Chamberlain—"That will suit me fine. So long, Walter."

Runciman—"Cheerio, Neville."

Ditches Are Major Problem Of Council

Ratepayers Ask Godmanchester Council To Clean Ditches Of

The problem of ditches kept the Godmanchester Council busy at their regular monthly meeting on Monday. Several ratepayers felt that Municipality came before the board or sent in a written complaint, about their respective ditches. Some of the petitions were sent in in the near future while others were tabled.

At the morning session, Oliver Bonnevill was granted an extension of time to prepare the proposal on the Cowan Creek. D. D. Clerk, chief of Drainage Section of Quebec, asked Mr. Bonnevill to take this action which would be beneficial later to the Municipality.

Donald Leblanc was granted permission to have some ditching done on the Carr head-line road and Anthony Dineen was given the same permission on the Plank Road.

The Godmanchester Council will hold the Town of Huntingdon responsible for the drainage on Lake street where the Town is extending this street.

Ald. Todd was granted permission to have part of the road ditch cleaned along his property on the Connaught Road.

The secretary-treasurer was authorized to notify the road officer to have some ditching done on the Carr head-line road. The secretary was also authorized to buy 1,500 feet of snow fence.

Azarie Charlebois was advised to call on the rural inspector to settle a dispute over a line fence and ditch between his property and his neighbours.

A delegation came before the Godmanchester Council asking the Council to have the Ridge road opened this winter by motor plow from Arnold's corner to the Town of Huntingdon. This matter will be settled at the adjourned meeting of the Council.

Simcoe Reformer Helps Canada

IN the Province of Quebec the growing of cigarette tobacco on a large scale is a comparatively new industry. In the county of Joliette a considerable tract of land is of sand, and for generations not cultivated, only brush was found thereon. In the Township of Godmanchester and about Cazaville in Huntingdon County we find considerable sandy soil that appears to be like that of Joliette. The planting of tobacco in Joliette county has proved to be a highly successful crop and the growing of this fine grade of flue cured cigarette tobacco is putting many a farm right on his feet financially.

In Simcoe, Ont., in the county of Norfolk, tobacco growing is one of the great crops for many farmers. The Simcoe Reformer, one of Canada's greatest papers celebrated its 80th anniversary last week. The Pearce Bros., who publish this outstanding journal of Canada have for several years featured the tobacco growing industry in their paper and as a result the Reformer is now looked to as the real authority on the Tobacco Growing Industry of Canada. In their thirty-two page anniversary issue no less than five pages is devoted to the tobacco growing industry. This industry is one of agricultural economy for Norfolk farms, for at the present time the farmers are reported to have 60,000,000 pounds of choice flue cured tobacco.

Only a few years ago Norfolk County grew little or no tobacco, and today the 1938 crop will represent some $2,000,000 of an agricultural crop.

The Simcoe Reformer is to be congratulated upon the way it has aided the Norfolk farmers in furthering their agricultural interests in developing this annual cash crop. Incidentally we might mention that on account of the Canadian grown tobacco crop it means so much more Canadian trade, and that much less to be imported from the United States. Our good wishes are extended to the Pearce Bros. of the Simcoe Reformer, and may they long continue their good work in publishing such an outstanding newspaper that will promote and encourage the development of Canada's agricultural interests.

Thanksgiving Day

NOW that we are again about to observe a general day of thanksgiving to Almighty God for the benefits received during the past year, it may be interesting to recall that the first Thanksgiving Day for the whole Dominion was fixed by order-in-council, of October 9, 1879, which fixed Thursday, November 6, as "a day of thanksgiving for a bountiful harvest." Some attempt had been made by the churches to persuade the Dominion government to set aside the same date as that in the United States, namely, the last Thursday in November, but it was felt that this was too late a date in our northern climate and so the earlier Thursday in November was selected. And it continued to be on a Thursday until during the Laurier regime, when it was changed to a Monday, the alleged object being to permit the children to visit their old homes and stay with the old folks instead of just a rush visit. But the result was to turn the holy day into a holiday.

It is curious to note that when Sir John A. Macdonald was asked in 1870 by the Anglican bishop of Montreal, Dr. Oxenden, to appoint a federal thanksgiving day, he objected because "the boundaries of the Dominion are so extended and embrace such varieties of climate that very seldom will the results of the yearly labor of the husbandman be the same throughout its extent. In one section there may be a plentiful harvest, while in another, famine might prevail. We should be in somewhat the same position as the Queen would be if she ordered thanksgiving for a plentiful harvest in England to take effect through all her Dominions. We have determined therefore to leave the matter in the hands of the several Lieutenant-governors."

But when conditions changed, Sir John A. Macdonald changed also, and so, nine years later, he recanted, and the Dominion Thanksgiving was inaugurated.

Thanksgiving day was observed on a Thursday for many years and regarded as a religious day when folks would go to their respective churches and offer thanks to the Almighty for the abundant harvest that was accorded them.

1938 will see the Churches from coast to coast devoting their words of praise and thanks to the Almighty for the deliverance from a world war, more than for the abundant harvest that has been accorded Canada. In reality the Thanksgiving praise this year will not be so much for harvests of Canada but the prevention of destruction of the world by war.

We will not attempt to repeat the march of events that have taken place, particularly during September in Europe. They were heart-breaking, especially to the families that had sons who paid the supreme sacrifice in the war of 1914-18, and it was like the night of the Armistice, November 11, 1918 when word came by radio that the war was off. It was a real sigh of relief to these families, and in particular to mothers and fathers of sons of military age. The youths are as adventurous today as they were in 1914, and few of them perhaps realize what a war really is. They were ready to enlist, as soon as the call to arms was made, and if such had transpired what would be the result. A few years hence it would be another war memorial bearing the names of many of our young sons of the country. They were adventurous enough and loyal to our King and Country to the extent they would have served and died that our land would not be overrun. And what is more, all this fighting and great losses of life and money for the defence of a people we do not even know. However, vested rights must be protected and that is what France and Britain had in their minds at all times. All the European countries could easily visualize the great sacrifices that war would demand of them. Czechoslovakia could visualize it all, and it was a great thing for the civilized world when the head of that great little country, Premier Syray, was willing to concede the German inhabited border of his country, so that war might be averted.

Thanksgiving must mean much to the Christian world in 1938. The bountiful harvest of crops is a great deal to be thankful for, but a thousand times more important is the avoiding of the war that appeared all eminent between Germany and Czechoslovakia, that would unquestionably bring about war that would demand a dozen or even more countries be involved therein.

Professional Sportsman Creates Big Business

PROFESSIONAL hockey players, and professional baseball players are generally followed with keen interest by their sports fans. As the professionals grow older in years they must withdraw from sports and how often it happens they have nothing to turn to in the way of gaining a livelihood.

It is refreshing to read the Notre Dame de Grace newspaper, "The Monitor" for this great weekly newspaper is the product of Hughie McCormick, who for many years has been a professional goalkeeper in the National Hockey League. It was fourteen years ago that Hughie founded the Monitor. He has business acumen as well as sportsman ability. He minded the nets well and so he has guarded his business. Like many business enterprises it started in a very flimsy manner, but Hughie remembered it was essential to not only gain a volume of trade but produce his publication at a profit. He carried the paper through the years of depression, forging ahead. He never stopped expanding and on Friday he held "open house" at his new publishing plant in Notre Dame de Grace. The Monitor is a weekly paper, but this newspaper has become the daddy of two other papers, "The Westmount Examiner" and "The Verdun Guardian."

With his large new plant and combined newspaper staffs they have found it possible to print other newspapers and monthly publications, so that today the Monitor is the publishing house for ten publications. Our congratulations to Hugh McCormick and his efficient staff, and may they continue their good work in their wonderful new home. Montreal is a big city, and with the continued efficient service of the Monitor to the people of Notre Dame de Grace, this business can materially assist in promoting the welfare of that section of the Metropolis, and it undoubtedly will do so, if the people will do their part and lend their whole-hearted co-operation.

What Shall I Do With It?

ONE of the most difficult tasks of life, yet one of the plainest duties is to get a right perspective of life, "To see life steadily and to see it whole."

Life holds for us many things abundantly worth while. We have bodies to care for, minds to develop

"A never dying soul to save
And fit it for the skies."

To give each of these its due consideration and, in order of importance, to put the last first and the first last is life's most serious problem.

Isaiah, the greatest of the ancient prophets of Israel, tells a story of going out into the woods and watching a pagan back-woodsman cutting down a tree. He sees him toiling at his task, laying his axe with blows strong and true at the foot of the tree. At last there is a swaying in the branches, a crack, and then a mighty crash, the pride of the forest lies at his feet. Immediately he begins to do three things with it. With part of it he builds a fire to cook his food; providing for the necessities of his life. With part of it he builds another fire at the close of the day before which he sits to rest his body and develop his mind, thus providing for his recreational and mental needs. With the rest of it he makes a god; seeking thus to satisfy the deepest hunger of his soul.

In this way did this ancient woodsman try, in his ignorance, to do what we should more intelligently be able to do—see life in its entirety, its wholeness. Only he makes the mistake that we are always prone to make. We read that "with the residue thereof he made a god." The necessities and luxuries of life come first, the sanctities last. Our physical, our mental needs are something that must be met. Our spiritual needs are something that may be met if there is any time, any money left over when the others are provided for. Jesus reminded us we would never get the best out of life until we reversed the order, "Seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all other things will be added unto you."

The bushman fell into another error. He set up something that was man-made—something he built with his own hands and called upon his soul to worship it and be satisfied with it. He substituted an idol for God.

One of the most frequent warnings that we receive in advertisements is: "Accept no substitutes." Not only are there substitute foods on the market, competing with that which is pure and wholesome, but there are substitute faiths, substitute gods, calling upon us to worship. Some are made in Russia, some in Germany, some in Italy, some in Canada—doctrines of race, nationality, economy, raised to the rank of religion, bidding for our deepest enthusiasm, our highest devotion. Let us not think to satisfy the deepest hunger of our hearts by blindly espousing one of these, or all of them. Accept no substitutes! "As the heart panteth after the water brook, so panteth my soul after thee, O God." Only God can satisfy. No truer word was ever uttered than spoken by Augustine, "God has made us for Himself and our hearts are restless until they find their rest in Him."—(Amherstburg Echo).

Industrial Quebec

QUEBEC Province, although generally considered as essentially agricultural, ranks second in the Dominion for industry. Figures released recently show that the value of manufactured goods of Quebec for the year 1936 rose to $863,687,389, an increase of 12.3 per cent over that of the previous year.

Quebec, in the field of industry ranks next to Ontario and provides 29 per cent of the total value of Canada's manufactured goods. The production of pulp and paper dominates. Apart from providing about 10 per cent of the gross value of products manufactured in Quebec, this industry supplied nearly 48 per cent of all this production in Canada.

As can be easily seen, agricultural Quebec is important, but industrial Quebec is not to be disregarded.

FORGOTTEN SINCE 1863

New York City newspapers recently carried advertisements of one bank, the Bowers Savings Bank, chartered in 1824, seeking to find owners of 474 unclaimed savings accounts totalling $79,372.36. These accounts were opened between 1863 and 1923. This is part of an advertising campaign begun a year ago during which time ownership for 581 unclaimed accounts totalling $132,321.90 was established by this bank, one of hundreds in New York which is trying to find the owners of "forgotten money." Under New York laws such money passes into possession of the state if the rightful owners cannot be found. The banks cannot claim permanent possession of it.

"DEAD" WIRES NEWS

Shortly after John A. Daly, Newark, N.J., started on a vacation to the Catskill Mountains, his family was shocked to hear he had fallen dead from heart disease passing through New York City. Preparations were made for the funeral, obituary notices were put in newspapers and the Daly home, with crepe on the door, was made ready for the funeral services. Just before the coffin containing the body arrived a telegram came from Daly in the Catskill Mountains, saying he was having a fine time. The mix-up was explained when it was learned that the dead man had given a name that sounded like Daly of Newark. It must have been another Daly.

WIDOWER AT 15

Arthur Godwin Glover, who is only fifteen, has become a widower as the result of a motor smash at Chulivilla, near Sydney, New South Wales. A few weeks ago Glover and two men were bound over on a charge of having forced a consent to his marriage with an 18-year-old girl named Joyce Sainsbury. Now Mrs. Glover has been killed in a car accident.

FOR KEEPS

A decision of far-reaching implication was handed down by a Chicago judge recently to the effect that an engagement ring once placed upon a girl's finger is hers for keeps. The ruling was made in a case in which a girl, her engagement broken, had pawned her ring to raise needed money. The young man tried to get the ring back, questioning the girl's authority to pawn it. An interesting speculation arose as a result of this judge's ruling. What if a ring is claimed by the girl after the engagement is broken is not paid for? Who is to continue making the payments?

WAR STILL ON

Political party lines used to be more seriously taken and more strictly observed during the last century than at present as is indicated by the following inscription on a monument in the cemetery at Attica, Kan.:

N. Grigsby, died April 16, 1890, aged 78 years, 6 months, 15 days. Through this inscription I wish to enter my dying protest against what is called the Democratic party. I have watched it closely since the days of Jackson and know that all misfortunes of our nation have come to it through this so-called party. Therefore beware of this party of treason. (Put on in fulfillment of promise to deceased). N. Grigsby.

GUARDIAN ANGEL THERE

Working in his backyard, which extended down to a railroad track in Buffalo, N.Y., Horton Hulburd was horrified on hearing the screech of a train whistle to see his small daughter, Alice Elizabeth, 3, standing unconcernedly between the rails. The huge 250-ton locomotive struck the little girl and tossed her to one side. Expecting to find her mangled body, the father, picked her up crying, but could find only a bruise on her chin. When that was bandaged and the shock of her terrifying experience had subsided, she was ready to play again—but not anywhere near the railroad.

DROUTH HITS ARMY

Even "Brass Hats" won't be able to get a drink at the Aldershot military camp near Halifax, Nova Scotia. For the first time since the war, orders have been issued that no alcoholic liquor of any kind may be served in the camp. This applies to every mess from the men's canteen to the staff officers' mess. The troops are speechless!

CEMETERY BANS PETS

Following the death of her pet dog, Mrs. Amy Adams, Pana, Ill., had a bronze coffin made in which she sealed its body and had it buried in the family cemetery lot beside her husband's grave. Agitation against this burial reached a point where plans were made to bring mandamus proceedings to remove the dog. The state's attorney, appealed to, ruled the burial was a violation of the law, so Mrs. Adams had the coffin containing her pet disinterred and removed to her farm. Now there is peace in the community once more. Many cities have special cemeteries for the burial of pet animals.

PICKPOCKET SCHOOL

How a notorious Egyptian bully and pickpocket trained 15 boys to become professional thieves was revealed by Hassan Ali El Zayat, who appeared before the Cairo court. He held courses at his house where, with the aid of blackboard, he depicted the "do's" and "don't's" of pocket picking. "Am I doing anything wrong?" demanded Hassan when arrested. "I am teaching them to be alert and quick-witted; in fact, I am performing a service to humanity."

NOT CONSISTENT

After Douglas Corrigan landed in Ireland, an offer was made him for his plane by a London museum. The state department at Washington notified Corrigan that the sale of his airplane abroad would constitute a violation of the Neutrality act. Yet, during May of this year alone, U.S. airplane manufacturers sold $1,609,975 worth of planes to China and $1,889,024 to Japan with the permission of the self-same department of state at Washington.

Good Advice About Constipation!

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with any ailment is to get at its cause. If you're constipated, don't fiddle with makeshift remedies. Find out what's giving you the trouble! Chances are you won't have to look very far, if you eat just the things most people do. Most likely, you don't get enough "bulk"! And "bulk" doesn't mean just a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement. If this is what you lack, your ticket is crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains the "bulk" you need plus the intestinal tonic, vitamin B. Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and join the "regulars"! All-Bran is made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Spanning the St. Lawrence

In 1860, the Victoria Bridge, the first railway structure to span the St. Lawrence, was officially opened by the Prince of Wales, later Edward VII. Twenty years later it was still the only railway bridge across the river at Montreal and in winter an attempt was made to lay rails on the ice.

Years before these interesting events, in 1848, the Canada Life issued its first policy to a resident of Quebec province. It was then the only Canadian life insurance company—a distinction which it held for almost twenty years.

Over a period of ninety-one years, the Canada Life has established a reputation for absolute dependability. It has paid to or accumulated for policyholders, annuitants and beneficiaries more than $650,000,000—over $50,000,000 more than it has received in premiums.

MODERN MATILDA

APPLE PASTRY DIAMONDS

Three cups flour, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/4 cup shortening—butter is preferable, but a half and half mixture of butter and lard is good, 3 egg yolks, 1-3 cup sour cream, 1/2 cup sugar, finely chopped apples, 3 tablespoons sifted cracker crumbs, 2 tablespoons white sugar.

For the rich pastry sift together the flour, the 3 tablespoons sugar and salt. Chop in the chilled shortening or butter as you would for pie paste. Beat the yolks slightly and mix with the sour cream, then add them to the dry mixture a little at a time, stirring them in with a fork, until it is all taken up. Chill this paste thoroughly. (They can be ground if you don't mind them going brown) and immediately mix the 1/2 cup sugar and cinnamon with them.

Work in the chilled dough with the hands to make it strong enough to hold together and divide in two. Roll out one half, smoothing the edges to keep them from cracking, into a rectangle and cut off rough edges and lift onto cookie sheet. Sprinkle the dough with the cracker crumbs, letting some overflow the edges to soak up the syrup when the pastry is baking. Spread apples over dough, patting them down evenly right to the edge. Roll out remainder and place over apples cutting off rough edges. Brush the top with the unbeaten white and sprinkle with the 2 tablespoons sugar. Bake at 450 deg. Fahr. for 20 minutes, until top is golden, then reduce heat to 350 deg. Fahr. to finish baking apples.

Make your plain paste (if you are a puff paste expert make that of course), cut it into rounds about 8 inches in diameter (a little smaller than a medium sized pie) and bake them flat—not on pie plates—they must be pricked with a fork before baking to prevent them puffing unmanageably. (Your pastry will puff better if well chilled, before baking (after rolling) and if baked over 500 deg. Fahr.

TRIPLE DECKER PEACH PIE
(If you can make good pastry you can make this—it looks twice as sensational as a plain pie and tastes easily twice as good.)

flour until they are blended. Mix together 1 cup corn syrup and 1 1/2 cups boiling water and stir these into the butter mixture until it thickens, then add 2 tablespoons molasses (if you like it) and 1 tablespoon lemon juice or vinegar. Let cook for 10 minutes, stirring frequently. Beat the yolks of 2 eggs and pour about 1/2 cup of the cooked mixture over them, stirring, then pour this into the filling and cook 1 minute. Turn off heat, then add 2 cups sliced peaches and let stand until cold—this retarding heat is enough to cook the peaches a little. When pastry rounds are baked and cool, spread the bottom one with one-third the peach mixture, cover with second pastry round, spread with remaining peach filling. Beat 2 leftover egg whites with 6 tablespoons sugar until stiff, then add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Place in oven under broiler turned on low and bake until golden—about 30 minutes. The heat must be low to keep pie cool and prevent soggy.

PECAN PIE (Mrs. Reese)
Beat together 3 eggs, 1 cup light brown syrup, 1 cup dark corn syrup, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Then add 1 cup whole pecans. Pour into pastry lined shallow square or rectangular cake tin (pastry should only come about 3/4 inch up sides of pan). Bake at 450 for 10 minutes—then quickly reduce heat to 275 deg. Fahr. by opening oven door for a few minutes—then close door and finish baking at this low temperature until filling is firm in centre—this takes about 1 hour's baking in all. Serve cut in squares with unsweetened whipped cream. This is more of a confection than a dessert—but a small portion of it is a delicious finishing touch to a company dinner.

MANITOULIN MAPLE SYRUP TARTS

Line small tart tins, preferably fluted, with rich plain paste about 1/2 inch thick not more. Make a filling of 1 cup maple syrup, 3 tablespoons melted butter, 1 whole egg. Beat these three things well together, and pour to within 1/2 inch of tops of tart shells. Start baking at 450 deg. Fahr.—after 7 minutes reduce heat to 350 to finish baking. These little tarts can be very simply done if you make a pie you make enough dough for them. The next day it will roll out nice and stiff if kept in the ice box and the filling is easy to use.

GLAMOR GIRLS' COCONUT CREAM PIE

Twelve Graham crackers rolled very fine, 1/2 cup melted butter, 1-5 cup brown sugar, mix these well together and pat into pie pan to line it.
Filling: 1/2 cup sugar, 3 tablespoons cornstarch, 2 egg yolks, 2 cups milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 8 marshmallows, 1 cup coconut. Mix the cornstarch and sugar, then add the milk and stir over double boiler until it thickens and let cook 30 minutes stirring frequently. Remove from heat and add the cut up marshmallows and coconut, vanilla, cover and let cool. Make a meringue of the left-over whites with 2 tablespoons sugar beaten together until stiff, spread this over filling when it is in pie and bake all 40 minutes at 275 or 300 deg. Fahr. This is all the baking either the crust or meringue needs.

Note: If you use blanched Brazil nuts in place of coconut only 1/2 cup is needed and you have a pie that will make a chef take notice.

PLUM PIE
To 2 cups washed and stoned plums add 1 cup sugar and grate rind 1/2 lemon. Bake in oven of 500 deg. Fahr. between 2 crusts—sprinkle top with powdered sugar and serve warm. Sour plums are best.

JOSH IS OUT
If any proud German parent want to call his son Joshua he will have to think again. The court of appeals has just upheld a decision by a lower court by which a clerk in the vital statistics department was justified in refusing to record the name Joshua for a German child. She informed him that a good many of his congregation were not above making "home-brew" in their basements and drinking it in the privacy of their homes, bringing their children up to do so, while these in turn caused their young companions to form the habit of drinking. Besides this, my friend from Galt declared that while that town was supposedly enjoying the benefits of

Dahlia's Whatnots

Sick—and Ye Visited Me
I have often thought that our women's church organizations could not make too great use of the opportunities offered by such a department as the Welcome and Welfare work. I fear they are too often lost sight of or neglected. Christ knew best how to win human hearts and he did it mainly by individual contact. The W. & W. Secretary of the W.M.S. has in her hands a power of appeal, stronger, more touching than any other official in her auxiliary. Here is a young girl from the country, a stranger in the city, friendless and homesick. Let the country secretary write to the Presbyterian Secretary, if she cannot locate an official in the stranger's district, giving the latter's address, opening the way for a friendly call and an invitation to some service or young people's group meeting.

Or it may be that the W. & W. secretary, say, in Ormstown, notices the one in Valleyfield that is a local woman, member or not,—what does it signify?—is lying sick in the hospital. True, the Valleyfield congregation may have only a Ladies' Aid, but "ladies" are human beings and if there is anything in their constitution which forbids aiding a sick sister woman by calling on her, then it is time the constitution was changed, even though it were as sacrosanct as the B.N.A.

After all, you know, some one has discovered that "what this old world needs is just more kindness." You realize this when you are ill and you get a charming card from one who is not merely a Cor-Sec'y, but one of the kinder-hearted women in the world, or when another such remembers you with a gift of fruit and other delicacies, or an old school-mate sends a beautifully arranged bouquet of flowers. Mr. Chamberlain probably thinks with the Oxford Group that loving-kindness on an international scale would make the world a more comfortable place to live in. Still and all, I must confess that I had a momentary feeling of exhilaration to hear a friend say in a hopeful tone that he thought if war came, the Russians might be depended upon to do the nasty things to Hitler's following, while the speaker wouldn't like to see the British do.

BEERY AND ROONEY TEAMED TOGETHER BY POPULAR DEMAND

For the first time Wallace Beery and Mickey Rooney will appear together as a co-starring team in M-G-M's new picture, "Stablemates." The choice came about after studio officials had interviewed more than 1000 boys for the part of Mickey and after checking on as many letters from the public requesting the combination. While the part of Mickey had been specially written for young Mr. Rooney as Beery's "sidekick" in the story about a race-track, it was discovered, too late, that the boy would be busy in "Boys Town" during its production. Mickey, himself, settled the problem by offering to double in brass and work simultaneously in the two films.

It had been his boyhood ambition to appear with Mr. Beery, it seems, ever since he saw the actor in "The Champ." Now, when he had an opportunity, not only of co-starring with his hero, but of playing with him in a race-track story, he felt he could not pass the chance up, even if he had to lose a little sleep to do it.

As a result, a friendship sprang up between the two "veterans," one still in his teens, the other with a screen career which had begun when the film industry was in its swaddling clothes, which by strange coincidence was climaxed when Beery saved young Rooney from a serious accident.

It happened during a scene in which Rooney had to lead his mount back to the stable after a morning work-out on the track. Beery, who has the part of a stablehand in the picture, was struggling along beside the pair when one of the large light reflectors on the set fell to the ground with a loud crash. It frightened the horse, which reared high in the air. His forefeet, plunging to the ground, would have crushed Rooney but for the quick thinking of Beery, who thrust him out of the way.

When he was praised for his action, he merely said: "Aw, that's nothing. I used to be an animal trainer when I was Mickey's age, and you should have seen some of those circus horses when they decided to go on a rampage. I had to learn how to handle them out of the way or I wouldn't be telling about it now."

Mr. Beery has never lost his interest in horses, incidentally, for his San Fernando ranch boasts of some of the finest breeds in the country, and when "Stablemates" was finished he purchased for it the set consisting of fifteen practical stalls.

All of the sets for the new picture are elaborate and reproduce one of the most beautiful race tracks filmed for America's newest and most expensive racing plant, "Hollywood Park" was virtually "moved" to the M-G-M studio in Culver City for the production. With the exception of the various racing colors and designs, the track was reconstructed in perfect detail for scenes in "Stablemates" and screen tests were given to fifty-seven horses before fifteen were selected to appear in the picture. "Maiden Blush" portrays the leading animal role.

Sam Wood directed the film, and Harry Rapf produced it from a screen play by Leonard Praskins and Richard Maibaum and a story by William Thiele and Reginald Owen.

Others in the cast include Margaret Hamilton, Arthur Hohl, Minor Watson and Marjorie Gateson.

Ethics of Etiquette

The new etiquette does not concern itself so much with the minutiae of table conduct that should be taught in the nursery, but rather with that fine ease and poise at table that make even a blunder seem of no great consequence.

Good table manners are an instinctive part of the well-bred personality. It is not good manners to be constantly aware that these are olives to be taken with the fingers, this is cake to be taken with the fork, here is lettuce that may not be cut with the knife. It is good manners to choose table appointments with great deliberation, watching others a little furtively perhaps, ever fearful of blundering.

Well-bred people are accustomed to using the right knife or fork at the right time, and their manners—or manner—at table is characterized by a fine graciousness and ease that make others feel at ease, too. They select the proper knife or fork or spoon instinctively, without studied care, and if a blunder is made—why, let it pass! It is no very great crime to make a trifling mistake in table conduct, and if one's manner is free from self-consciousness and embarrassment it is quite probable that no one will notice it.

By this we do not mean that the new etiquette recommends carelessness at the table. It recommends, rather, a careful attention to the niceties of dining, the little courtesies of a carelessness of manner that suggests a familiarity with these niceties. The one way to achieve this poise or assurance is to practise the niceties and courtesies of dining in private as in public so that the correct thing becomes instinctive rather than studied.

A Judge's Advice To Those Entering Baking Contests

HERSELF, winner of many baking prizes at Charlottetown and much in demand as a Judge at local fairs, Mrs. W. E. Prowse advises those intending to bake for Fall fairs to make sure of two things:

- 1.—To be certain you have a very good recipe.
- 2.—To choose a flour that works with you.

Mrs. Prowse says that some flours seem to work against you and handicap your best efforts, while others work with you and help you win. She states that she has never found a flour that works as nicely with her as Robin Hood. "I never need to fuss or use any special methods with this flour to have success with every batch of bread or with my cakes, pies, doughnuts or cookies. It is easy to handle, rises surely, and the color, texture and the grain of the finished baking are always splendid," states Mrs. Prowse.

Why not try a couple of bakings with Robin Hood and see how nicely it works with you and how much it improves your baking. Being milled from high-grade, water-washed, scrupulously clean wheat, Robin Hood just naturally makes whiter bread, lighter cake and finer-flavored pastry. You'll see and taste the difference with your first baking.

"Horace Wilson—'Yes, all set'." Chamberlain (in writing)—"Good morning, Herr Hitler. Further to our conversation at Berchtesgaden, having consulted my colleagues, along with our French friends, I am now in a position to state that our early discussion can lead to an amicable and agreeable settlement of the issue. I am attaching copy of map for your kind attention and perusal. An early reply will oblige."

Hitler (in writing)—"Greetings! Mr. Chamberlain. Your letter and map to hand. Having also consulted my 'Advisors' I cannot now even entertain consideration of our former discussions. The position is now, that unless our demands are fully met by October 1, WE SHALL MARCH WITH ALL OUR FORCE AND MIGHT INTO CZECHOSLOVAKIA."

Astonished Chamberlain—"Well I never! Incredible! Have they all gone mad? Here, Wilson, read this!" Wilson—"Apparently they misunderstood your first trip."

Chamberlain—"Well! Well! However don't destroy the maps, Sir Horace, we will require them later on."

Sir Horace Wilson—"As you say, and further, I don't suppose it's any use kicking our heels around here."

Chamberlain—"Not only you stay here while I board the ferry, I wish to say a few words to Herr Hitler." The Führer's Hotel (2 hours later) Chamberlain—"Mr. Hitler, I consider your demands very unreasonable, also I am not in the habit of having my time wasted, furthermore the least you could have done was to have spared me this journey."

(10 Downing St., Wed. morning) Mr. Chamberlain—"Sorry, Anne! I cannot accompany you for a stroll this morning, as I have to go down to the House and discuss a matter with the Boys and incidentally I may be out of town tomorrow."

Mrs. Chamberlain—"That's all right, Neville! Some other time. Didn't you ask me last night to remind you regarding a phone call to Lord Perth?"

Mr. Chamberlain—"Yes! I'll do that right away." (Phone conversation 10 minutes later)

Chamberlain—"Your Lordship, would you be good enough to make an early morning call on Mr. Mussolini and inform him that he would do the world at large a great favor, if he could possibly persuade his friend, Mr. Hitler, from carrying out any drastic step."

Lord Perth—"I'll see him immediately Neville!" (Phone conversation 15 minutes later)

Adolf—"Saw what?" Benito—"Don't interrupt Adolf. You didn't see what I saw and I do hear that many more have left Invergon."

Adolf—"But—" Benito—"Please Adolf, don't interrupt. You know Adolf looking at it from one angle alone—Humanity—I think we should all get together and work for peace."

House of Commons (2 hours later) Chamberlain—"I have something further to tell the House. I have now been informed by Herr Hitler that he invites me to meet him in Munich tomorrow morning. He has also invited Signor Mussolini and Monsieur Daladier."

10 Downing St., (Mon. Sept. 26) Chamberlain—"Your Lordship, I hope His Majesty has been informed that a 'State of Emergency' has arisen and that the necessary papers have been signed."

Dundee

Church News—Next Sunday evening a Union Service between the United Church congregation in Dundee and the Methodist Episcopal Church in Port Covington will take place. Rev. J. H. Lynn will officiate at the service. This will be a return service as a week ago Sunday evening quite a number of the members of the Port Covington Church attended a union service held in the local United Church. On this occasion, the Rev. Mr. Belbin, the Methodist cleric, was the guest speaker assisted by Mr. Lynn, and preached a very inspiring sermon. Rev. Mr. Belbin was a one time minister of the United Church and spent some time on a field in Newfoundland.

Thanksgiving services will be held next Sunday morning in the local churches. Communion services will be held in the United Church on the following Sunday.

Some time ago there appeared in the Gleaner a lengthy article about the failure of Mr. Alpha Leblanc of Dundee to secure a farm loan owing to the fact that an Indian Land Deed had not been issued on the property many years ago. Messrs. Oliver Derocher and A. H. Fraser of the Dundee Council were appointed to interview the Dept. of Mines and Resources about the affair. After several delays an interview was finally arranged with the Department by Mr. Donald E. Black, M.P., and so on Monday, Sept. 19th, the delegation, accompanied by Mr. Black and Mr. Wm. Leblanc, a one-time owner of the property made the trip to Ottawa.

The former article explained quite fully the circumstances regarding the bonding of the municipality of Dundee to extinguish the Indian title to the parish lands. It was thought by many that it was due to some irregularity concerning the repayment of this loan by some individuals that the deed in question was not issued. Such was not the case. The officials of the Indian Dept. brought before the delegation all the old records of fifty years ago and of subsequent dates and made the following explanation. The Indian Dept. only issued Patent deeds to those ratepayers who had all arrears of Indian rent due before 1883, the time when the bonding of the Municipality took place. By some fluke these arrears were not collected on this particular property as well as others, thus leaving a number of farms without Patent Deeds.

At the present time the Dept. is making a list of these Municipal Lots in Dundee on which rent is still due. These will be forwarded to the Sec.-Treas., for the information of any landowners in the town who wish to ascertain if their particular property is affected by the Indian Land rent. The Dept. is expected to make a ruling regarding the settlement to be effected between Indian Affairs Branch and the Dundee landowners affected. It was intimated to the delegation, however, that a fee of $5.00 would have to be charged for the expense of issuing a deed which afterwards would have to be registered at the Registry Office at the option of the individual land owner. Although the Dundee Council are not definitely committed to get deeds for its ratepayers, yet they would like to get the matter straightened out, so that there will not be any confusion of a similar nature later on.

Huntingdon Academy

On Friday morning Miss Abbott, assistant organizer of the Junior Red Cross, visited the Academy and addressed all the members of the Junior Red Cross. In the next few weeks the different groups and officers will be announced.

School will close on Wednesday evening and will be resumed Tuesday morning. The annual Teachers' Convention will be held during that time.

Considerable interest is being shown in science subjects in Grade X, in biology and chemistry. Fine new equipment has been procured. The pupils are taking a keen interest in the work. Laboratory experiments are being ably supplemented by the use of the lantern projector. The study of biology in particular gives the pupils a more intimate acquaintance with simple plant and animal life around them and links up the life of the students inside and outside school.

The girls will start their basketball games in the near future. The Academy rugby team has received a challenge from Macdonald College High School to play home and home games. The local boys need practise and further experience yet before they can engage in any series.

Dundee Consolidated School

The Dundee Intermediate School has received from the Junior Red Cross a seal to be attached to the Five Year Honour Certificate in recognition of the fact that the school has belonged to the Society for ten consecutive years.

Nurse Melling visited the school on Friday and Dr. Patenaude will make a return visit this month at which time vaccinations will be performed.

Miss Abbott, representing the Junior Red Cross, addressed the pupils on Tuesday, Sept. 27. She told the pupils of the work she expected to be done this year, and showed them what had been done last year, among which were the "spool dolls" made by the pupils of the primary grades.

SIX GOOD REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD COOK Electrically

- FAST—The modern electric stove is extremely fast—a quart of water boils in less than 7 minutes, and the oven cooks faster than any other type of oven.
- SAFE—There is no chance of fire with the electric stove, no flue to overheat and the danger of burns on hands and arms is negligible.
- LOW COST—Owing to the automatic control the oven temperature stays just right—no heat is wasted. This means economy of electricity.
- CLEAN—Electric cooking is wonderfully clean. Your pots and pans stay bright and shiny—don't blacken on the bottoms as is the case on fuel stoves. And there is no smoke to soil walls and curtains.
- SAVES TIME—The modern electric stove, with time clock control, gives the housewife more spare time, for the oven can be set to start and stop itself. A complete meal can be placed in the oven, the time clock set, and the meal will be ready at the time required.
- PERFECT RESULTS—Cakes, pies, biscuits and all baked foods come from the electric oven deliciously browned and of unequalled texture. Since the oven is semi-sealed, meats and vegetables cook in their own steam and lose none of their savour and goodness. Electric cooking gives perfect results.

Visit the modern kitchen at the "Shawinigan" Office in Trois-Rivières, or see the latest models of electric stoves at your local "Shawinigan" showroom.

Did Nixon See Stirling?

"I mean, first of all, that this was the matter on which Stirling had been trying to see Nixon. In his desperation he might have believed he could prevail on Nixon—who was his ultimate creditor—to come to some settlement with him as to the shares at a price within his reach. And, failing that, he might even have been driven to commit murder. Stirling was too well versed in the stock-market game not to know what would be the reaction if Nixon died and his death appeared a suicide. With Nixon alive, he was wiped out; with him dead . . .

Rankin's pause was more significant in its implications than if he had completed the sentence.

"But we know," Gilmore objected, that as far as Gardiner was informed, Nixon had refused both to see and hear Stirling."

"It's possible, however," Rankin countered, "that Stirling finally persuaded him of the importance of the matter without the secretary's knowledge. After all, it would be Nixon's loss as well; if he refused to hear what Stirling had to say, he would never stand any chance of getting back his shares. On a compromise, some adjustment might be possible. You can't get around that overcoat; they must have met somewhere after Nixon had completed that more important errand at the Marleys."

Before Gilmore could reply, Rankin swerved the machine into the long drive that led to the Terrace Garden Apartments. The conversation was ended; Gilmore for whom this was the first visit, became too engrossed in the magnificence of the surrounding gardens and of the lobby to talk. As he took it all in, they entered the elevator and in silence ascended to the fifth floor.

At the door or E3, Rankin knocked. A moment later the butler Higgins, opened the door. For an instant, he was speechless as his eyes rested on Rankin; then his sharp countenance a mottled red, he began to shut the door.

"I'm very sorry, gentlemen, but Mr. Stirling is not at home. If you will come in later, perhaps about 6 o'clock."

Rankin's foot impeded the further progress of the closing door. "That's all right, Higgins," he interrupted. "We don't want to see Mr. Stirling; we just want to have a few words with you."

"With me, sir?" The butler fell back before the unwelcome visitors, agitated at their rudeness. "I'm sure I don't know what I can tell you. If you'd wait till Mr. Stirling is in . . .

"Now it's nothing to be alarmed about, Higgins," Rankin said reassuringly. "You just have to answer a few simple questions and we'll leave you alone directly."

"It's nothing that you should have any hesitation in answering," Gilmore put in. "We are merely trying to check up on certain information that we have and we'd appreciate your assistance. If you could tell us how you spent Monday night . . .

assuaging Higgins' fears. Seeing no harm in the simple question, he relaxed, and replied in a manner free from nervousness.

To Cape May
"What I did on Monday night," he hesitated a moment, and then went on. "Except when I went to take Mr. Stirling's bag to him at the station and saw him off, I was in all evening, reading."

"Oh, yes, sir—to Cape May. He called me up about 2 o'clock in the afternoon to say that he was going, but as he wouldn't be able to get home, I was to pack him a bag and bring it down to the Camden terminal by half-past 7. He was taking the 7:45 train."

Martha Marley's Story
"You saw him yet on the train, then, and leave . . .

"Oh, yes, sir—I waited till it went out before quitting the station. And then I went home, and, as I said before, I read . . .

The 7:45 express—the only train bound for the shore resort between the 5:20 local which Philip Nixon had taken, as far as the station and the 9:55 train which Gilmore and Dr. Curtis had taken. The detective, looking back to his time-table, recalled that it made only a single scheduled stop—that at Newfield at 8:25, though, upon notice to the conductor, it would also stop to discharge passengers at Oldroyd, twenty miles beyond the Marley farmhouse and almost ten miles before one reached Cape May. Several times Gilmore had noted it in considering the problem of how long Nixon had been upon the tracks before the 9:55 train came along.

"Do you know when Mr. Stirling returned, Higgins?" Rankin was asking.

"He came back the next morning, sir, by an early train so that he could reach the office in time."

"He called me up from there at 9:50 to come for his bag, I did, as soon as I had the chance."

He did not, he insisted, know why the broker had made his journey to Cape May; the master, it seemed, did not discuss either his private or his business affairs with him. He was aware, however, that Stirling had been having difficulties in the stock market, though he admitted this fact only after a repeated catechism; the exact nature of it he could not say, but he believed from something he had heard, that it had to do with an investment known as Audubon Common.

"I can always tell when Mr. Stirling has something on his mind," he went on, confidently, as he became more so. "He gets so worried and moody, when he's not doing well on the market; but so far, everything has always come out all right. Even this time, though, beginning with Friday on, it was worse than ever before; I never saw him so nervous and scared. On Saturday, last week, he looked so sick. I thought he'd faint when he came back from work. Over Sunday and on Monday, when he left, he was that worried, he didn't say a word to me; but after all, it came out all right."

"How do you know that, Higgins?" Gilmore queried. "Did he say anything to you about it later?"

"He didn't need to, sir; I could tell from his pleasant manner when he came home from work Tuesday that everything was straightened out, and there wasn't anything more to worry about."

Rankin sent his colleague a significant glance; his theories were fast receiving the expected verification. "Now, Higgins," he went on, "as you see, there's been no difficulty about these questions. Just one thing more, and we will be finished." Unconsciously, his voice became stern. "That overcoat I brought here, night before last—that was Russell Stirling's property, was it not?"

The unexpected questions took the butler off his guard. For the first time something like terror showed on his face at the realization that all the time these pleasant-spoken gentlemen had been pumping him and leading him toward a trap. His jaw dropped in silent amazement; his fingers intertwined nervously.

"I Had To"
"Come now, Higgins," Rankin went on. "We know absolutely that when Mr. Stirling took the 7:45 train, he was wearing that coat."

"But I told you before, sir, that . . .

"Never mind lying . . . You've told us the truth so far"—the detective was increasingly brusque—"you might as well continue that policy. Or perhaps you would like to tell the story when you are being tried as an accessory to the crime of murder?"

"Murder!" The butler's abject terror was pitiful; his hands groped for support. "I didn't know that . . . I . . . Mr. Stirling, he'll fire me when he knows I've disobeyed him, but I did my best for him, I really did, sir . . ."

"That's right, Higgins, you did. So it was his, then? Why did you lie to me and tell me that it wasn't?"

"The other gulped and stammered. 'I didn't say it was his, sir.'"

"You've just admitted it"—Rankin pressed his advantage mercilessly—"and unless you answer my question, I shall place you under arrest. Why did you lie to me before and say that it wasn't?"

"Because . . . because, I had to. Mr. Stirling ordered me to. You're right—he had the coat when he left, sir, on Monday for Cape May; but when he came home on Tuesday, sir, he didn't have it any more. I noticed it and asked him what became of it. He was real sharp and said that he had forgotten it on the train, but because he didn't want it any more, he wasn't even going to try to get it back . . ."

"Well, that doesn't tell me why you both denied knowing anything about it when I did bring it back," Rankin said.

"Because, sir"—and Higgins spoke with a desperate effort—"Mr. Stirling instructed me to do so. He warned me that in case it turned up or any other brought it around and asked questions about it, I was to say that I had never seen it before. And . . . I didn't want to lose my position, so, I had to do as I was ordered."

Ten minutes later, with the butler completely cleared of all further details, and gravely warned not to inform his master of their call, the two detectives left. Gilmore had not spoken since his colleague had begun his inquisition on the subject of the coat.

"Well," queried Rankin, as they entered his machine, "have I successfully made my point?"

"Drive me to Abington," was Gilmore's reply. "That is where the Marley girl's aunt lives. You've almost made the point; you've put Stirling on the 7:45 train, but you haven't brought him together with Nixon. And yet, he must have met him. There's something diabolically wrong with this whole case. I have not traced him out of the churches of the Ferris gang or the Marleys yet, and now I'm trying to prove that he was also at another place at the same time. But where or how."

"I don't know; and unless Martha Marley can help me, I'll be ready to confess defeat."

The house Gilmore sought stood alone upon the main highway, set apart from its fellows. Of a generally disreputable appearance, vines and creepers added a picturesque quality to its decay. From a sagging gate a winding path led through a front yard, within which chickens picked a meager sustenance among the scraggly grasses. The dwelling was of weather-worn brown boards, with a slate roof; except for the fact that ray curtains peeped from the windows, one would have considered it an outhouse, rather than a residence.

The detective stood alone as he knocked on the frame door. It would be much easier for him and the girl if he had no company; the presence of two people would very likely frighten her. Rankin had, therefore, gone on, when he left his companion before the house.

Presently the door was opened by a small, stooped old lady in curl papers, dressed in an austere gray. Her features were keen and her heady penetrating eyes offered no encouragement to the visitor.

"Miss Marley," Gilmore inquired courteously, and when the other nodded, "I've come to see Miss Martha Marley; I had heard she is staying here with you."

Cold suspicion appeared suddenly in the woman's eyes, as she replied in tones extremely forceful for one of her age.

"My niece? Yes, she's here. What do you want of her?"

"I'd like very much to talk with her, on a matter of importance to both of us."

"Humph!" . . . You're a detective and you want to pester the poor child with questions, don't you? The reply was tart. "Well, you can't have anything of the sort."

You misunderstand me, Miss Marley. . . . Gilmore hastened to say. "Believe me, I have no intention of distressing her. She could speak or not as she chose. I think, however, it would be for her benefit if you were to tell her . . ."

The girl's voice interrupted him from within. "Some one asking for me, auntie!" it called, and then, an instant later, "Oh, you want to see me, Mr. Gilmore?"

The Huntingdon Gleaner

Seventy-five years ago, on September 18, 1863, The Huntingdon Gleaner was founded by Robert Sellar. It was brought into being at the instance of the Liberals of the district, who asked Hon. George Brown, the great Reform leader of Upper Canada, to send them a man for the purpose. Mr. Brown selected Sellar from his staff on the Toronto Globe, and the young man, then aged 22, came and worked the weekly that remains a force in the Eastern Townships to this day. The Huntingdon Liberals objected to the selection of one so young and voiced their disapproval. But Sellar proceeded with his task, surmounting all obstacles, including a fire, maliciously set, that destroyed his printing plant, and for which no one was punished, although the editor knew the culprits. He was an honest and forceful journalist and a patriotic Canadian, as his first editorial showed. In it he declared that in politics he saw but one end to be attained, the consolidation of the two provinces of Upper and Lower Canada. "Into one not only in name but in reality; one in interest and fellow-feeling, affording to each other mutual aid and support, and thereby forming such a powerful and united people as would constitute our best security for the integrity of our institutions and the continuance of our cherished connection with the motherland."

sons, at intervals from 1911. From 1919 until 1922 Leslie Sellar was the editor, and after his death in August of that year, and until 1924, the editorial chair was filled by R. Watson Sellar. Since 1924 the youngest son, Adam, has directed The Gleaner. It will be seen that this weekly newspaper, which all along has been freely quoted by its contemporaries, because of its sound and firmly-held views, has been carried on through three-quarters of a century by father and sons. The Sellar family may take pride in this record. The people of the richly-endowed Chateaugay Valley are still being well-served by The Huntingdon Gleaner, whose special number relates the progress made in agriculture and industry in the intervening years. Huntingdon itself is a pleasant town of 1,700 inhabitants, and in the three counties of Huntingdon, Chateaugay and Beauharnois, which the Gleaner serves, live some 53,000 people. It is a goodly country and The Gazette extends sincere congratulations to the newspaper and its community. May the Huntingdon Gleaner continue to its century and more, holding fast to its traditions and making yet more friends! —(Montreal Gazette).

The Huntingdon Gleaner

The Huntingdon Gleaner recently observed its seventy-fifth birthday. It is no mean achievement for a newspaper in a small town in this province to have kept its flag flying in fair days and foul for three-quarters of a century, and what is more, to have commanded through out that long period the respect and esteem, not only of its supporters, but also of those who do not see eye to eye with it in political matters. In honour of the anniversary the Gleaner recently issued a forty-six page special edition—in itself a notable feat of journalism for a little town like Huntingdon.

The founder of the Gleaner, Robert Sellar, was one of the most forceful writers Canadian journalism has known. A protégé of the late Hon. George Brown, he assimilated from his mentor the ability to think clearly and to write in words that commanded the attention of all intelligent readers, alike for their clarity as for their sincerity. He became a national figure, and in his day and generation there was no weekly paper in the Dominion more widely quoted. He had ever a kindly feeling for the underdog, and he was champion of many lost causes. Yet he never resented a fight, and in many instances time proved him to have been in the right.

The Huntingdon Gleaner today enjoys an enviable reputation and has lost none of its virility and energy in advocating all principles destined to promote closer union between the provinces and a greater solidarity of thought and faith in the future throughout the land. In particular it advocates in season and out of season a better mutual understanding between various sections of the population to the end that Canada may go forward a united people and ever lead the van of civilization in the British Empire. The good wishes of its many friends will go with The Gleaner as it enters upon the fourth quarter of a century of devoted public service. —(Montreal Star).

A Notable Edition

Daily newspapers never seem to be inclined to be over-modest about their achievements, and there is a practice among them of commemorating each other on notable special editions, anniversary numbers and so on. Provided, of course, that the complimented newspaper is not nearly a rival. It is only a few years ago that Canadian dailies pointed with pride at something, a United States daily that had issued a hundred pages or so. As a matter of fact, however, the weekly newspapers sometimes have issues much more noteworthy than the dailies, when all the conditions are considered. Recently, for example, there was the special issue of The Rouyn-Noranda Press featuring a new addition to the modern business buildings of the town. Illustrations and reading matter alike were of such quality and extent that the edition would have been a credit even to a large city daily. Then last week there was received at The Advance office a copy of the issue of the Huntingdon Gleaner celebrating the 75th anniversary of its birth. The issue contained 46 pages of regular newspaper size. The size alone of the paper was a notable achievement for a town of 1,700. To equal the size of the issue a city like Ottawa would need to publish a number of several hundred pages. That The Gleaner has the plant and the staff to issue such a newspaper is fit subject for boast, for the town and weekly newspaper, as well as for The Gleaner. The anniversary number is crammed with interesting matter, much of it of regular historical value, and all of it well written and arranged. The issue is profusely illustrated, chiefly with photographs taken by The Gleaner artists and engraved in The Gleaner's own engraving plant. The pictures print so clearly that many a daily might well say:—"How do you do it?"

The history of Huntingdon and district and its people is treated in effective way in this special issue, and there is also a story of the seventy-five years of service of The Huntingdon Gleaner. Though the matter is not stressed in the special edition, it is a fact beyond question that the progress and welfare of Huntingdon and the Beauharnois district have owed much to the energy, the enterprise and the public spirit of the Huntingdon Gleaner. It is something for a newspaper to attain the age of seventy-five years in this young country. It is still more interesting to note that for the whole three-quarters of a century The Gleaner has been controlled by the one family. It was founded by Robert Sellar and edited by him until his death in 1919. From 1919 to 1922, a son, Leslie Sellar, upheld the great traditions of his father. From 1922 to 1924 R. Watson Sellar filled the editorial chair with the family talent and efficiency. In 1924, the direction of the newspaper was taken over by Adam Sellar, the present publisher of this notable journal. As The Gleaner itself suggests: "For a weekly newspaper to be founded and carried on for seventy-five years by father and sons is a rather unique record for Canada." Carrying on the fine Sellar tradition the special issue gives generous appreciation to members of the staff and others who have assisted in building and maintaining a newspaper of unusual interest. —(Porcupine Advance) Timmins, Ontario.

An Unusual Weekly

What an asset a newspaper can be to a community is well illustrated by the Huntingdon Gleaner of Huntingdon, P.Q. The Gleaner has anniversary number. Published in a village of 1,700 people, the Gleaner has a circulation, strictly paid in advance, of a size approximating that of weeklies in large towns. The Gleaner has established a large printing trade, giving employment to 21 persons, and has recently put in an engraving plant. This well illustrated newspaper goes out to the world weekly, telling of Huntingdon and its constituency. Incidentally, the Gleaner says: "For a weekly newspaper to be founded and carried on for 75 years by father and sons is a rather unique record for Canada." May we point out that it isn't unique, for The Era was published for 82 years by the 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, 20th, 21st, 22nd, A pleasing feature of the afternoon was the presentation of a chronium plated, relish dish to Mrs. William Graham from the ladies of the W.C.T.U. as a token of esteem and appreciation on their 25th wedding anniversary. ## Net For Nine Months In Excess of Dividends.

Toronto, Oct. 1.—In a letter to shareholders of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. of Canada, Limited, accompanying dividend cheques for the third quarter of 1938, the President, A. G. Partridge, says:—"The earnings of your Company, for the first three-quarters of the current fiscal year compare quite satisfactorily with those for the same period last year. Dividends have been fully earned on both Preferred and Common shares, after ample provisions have been made for depreciation, obsolescence and the usual reserves."

During this period our sales volume has been somewhat lower than last year, due to general business conditions which, we are happy to say, show signs of improvement and with the automobile manufacturers rapidly getting into production on their 1939 models, our sales volume should keep up very well during the last quarter of the year."
