PREFACE.

The Publishers take pleasure in presenting the Directory for 1902-1903. They trust that it will be found as accurate as a work of this nature can be. A work of this kind to be really valuable must be in all respects thoroughly reliable; and with a full appreciation of this fact every precaution is taken in order to secure the accuracy of the information, but it has to be taken into account that the whole of the work—compilation and printing—is done between the 4th of May and the 8th of July, a period of nine weeks, and is a task that requires the greatest anxiety and care.

The Directory has increased some 50 pages this year, and this to a large extent represents additional names and occupied houses, and is evidence of the steady increase in the growth of the City.

In 1841, the first volume of the Montreal Directory, compiled by Robert W. S. Mackay, and published by Lovell & Gibson, was issued from the same premises as occupied by the present publishers. It was a small book, 4½ by 6¾ inches, and contained 272 pages. In 1864 the work contained but 526 pages (of a smaller size and in larger type than now used), and was issued on June 29. In 1884 the number of pages had increased to 800 pages, whilst the present volume contains 1,517 pages in a small clear type, and the matter condensed as much as possible, care being taken, however, in every instance to give the necessary information.

It has always been the aim of the publishers to place the work in the hands of the subscribers at the earliest possible date in July, but this is becoming a more difficult task each year, as the growth of the City adds to the work, and there is a limit to the number of compilers who can be placed on it.

The Directory contains about 85,000 names (exclusive of Lachine, Laprairie, Montreal South, St. Lambert and St. Laurent), and these represent a population of 333,861 for the City and outskirts, or, deducting for the outskirts 58,561, a population for the City proper of 275,300. The number of streets in the City and outskirts number some 800, and our returns give 1,886 unoccupied stores, houses and tenements, nearly three hundred less than last year, a very favorable showing, as in a large number of places the houses are old, and a large number have just been built.

The names of those residing in the outskirts of the city (except those of residents in Lachine, Laprairie, Montreal South, St. Lambert and St. Laurent) will be found in the Alphabetical portion of the Directory.

The Miscellaneous portion will be found as complete as ever. Where information is wanting about some society or corporation the blame for the omission rests with the party who should have supplied it.

The Advertisers' Classified Directory is now a feature of the Directory, and as it is steadily increasing in size must now be of great value to those requiring to use it. Being printed on colored paper, its position is easily found. In its pages are the names of the principal and most progressive firms in their several lines of business.

As usual, the Directory is divided into five parts, (1) The Miscellaneous Directory, (2) The Advertisers' Classified Directory, (3) The Street Directory, (4) The Alphabetical Directory, (5) The Outskirts.

The book is respectfully dedicated to its generous patrons—THE PUBLIC.
