

GERMANS RESUME CIVILIAN SLAUGHTER ATTEMPTS

Hospital Proves Chief Objective In Latest Raids

Fear that Not a Single Patient Escaped Death or Injury When German Raiders Attacked Hospital Containing Large Number of Men and Women Patients Over Eighty Years of Age.

London, Oct. 9.—(P)—German raiders hidden in the clouds attacked London in mid-morning today after overnight bombings in which explosives smashed an air raid shelter which housed 160 persons and three wings of a hospital housing 108.

Eight were killed in the shelter and an undisclosed number of others were injured.

The bombed hospital was described as possibly the hardest-hit building in London where the raiding up to midnight was reported to be the most severe the city has undergone.

Three wings, two housing men patients and one housing women patients, were completely destroyed. Most of the patients were eighty years old or over—almost all of them permanent invalid cases.

As rescue crews dug for victims in the debris it was feared that not a single patient escaped either death or injury. How many were dead could not be determined.

The first daylight alarm was sounded some time after midnight as distant firing apparently high above the clouds, were heard in London.

Raiders also were reported over the East Coast. One town was dive-bombed and machine-gunned.

The earliest of the daylight attacks were reported over an East Anglian town where a dive-bomber machine-gunned houses, barely skimming the rooftops. British fighter planes pursued it as it turned away. Bombs fell in the residential section of the town.

British fighter planes were seen in the sky over London just before the first alarm sounded. One group of them pounced on a Dornier bomber which appeared out of a cloud bank over the suburbs.

The headmaster's house at a famous public school near London was demolished by a bomb during the night. None of the students was injured.

In early afternoon eight German planes were seen over the Thames estuary, apparently headed for London. They were met by heavy anti-aircraft fire and turned back when fighter planes rose to challenge them.

First reports said bombs were dropped on at least two London districts during the morning raid.

Londoners again took cover in the afternoon as single raiders streaked across the city. Those in the central part of the city could hear the muzzling of distant anti-aircraft guns, and the sky was spotted with white.

U. S. ARMY TO ACCEPT LONG-TERM ENLISTMENTS

Eastern Townships Pioneer Today Celebrating Hundredth Birthday

Magog, Oct. 9.—Mrs. Mary J. Coons, a resident of this place for the past fifty years, is today celebrating her one-hundredth birthday.

In good health and able to walk about and take short motor trips, she is keenly interested in current events and looks forward to many more anniversary celebrations.

Mrs. Coons was born in Cornwall, Ont., when that city was but a tiny settlement, and lived there until she was eight years of age, when her father decided to move to what is now Bolton Centre.

The journey was made on sleds, father and daughter making their way on foot across the ice of the St. Lawrence River in the absence of any sort of bridge. They were forced to camp out during the trip, a hazardous undertaking in winter-time.

Among the first settlers in what was then a wilderness, they took up their abode on Bolton Mountain, about a mile and a half from the present village of Bolton Centre. Indians as well as white men were to be found in the district and Mrs.

VICE-ROYALTY ENDS VISIT TO MONTREAL

Montreal, Oct. 9.—(P)—Montreal wound up its busy two-day term as host to the Vice-Regal party last night when the Earl of Athlone, Canada's Governor-General, returned by train to Quebec with his wife, the Princess Alice.

Their departure ended a full programme of eleven separate social and civic appointments arranged in their honor. It was the Vice-Regal couple's first official visit to this city since His Excellency took office last spring.

Newberg, Ore., Oct. 9.—(P)—Monroe Miller took aim, fired and saw the pheasant drop at the feet of Frank B. Wire State Game Supervisor. Miller was fined $25 for hunting pheasant out of season.

CANADA PLACES STRICT BAN ON COPPER SALES

Exports Prohibited to All Nations Except Empire Countries and Possibly United States.

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—(P)—Canadian copper producers today to export any of the metal, except to Empire countries and perhaps the United States.

The ban was announced last yesterday in a statement issued after a meeting of the War Cabinet. The announcement said it is now probable that all available Canadian copper will be needed to meet United Kingdom and Canadian needs.

The stoppage on copper export permits followed by less than a fortnight United States action in banning shipments of scrap iron and steel to Japan. She greatly enjoys music and is fond of having others read to her from the Record.

Her favorite hobby is raising flowers and up until five years ago she used to cultivate her own garden, now being content to care for plants in her home. In addition to these diversions, part of her time is taken up with sewing.

This remarkable centenarian forms a truly interesting link with pioneer days of the Eastern Townships.

Coons recalls that her father was at one time under the care of an Indian doctor. She remained in the Bolton region until she was fifty years of age, moving then to Magog.

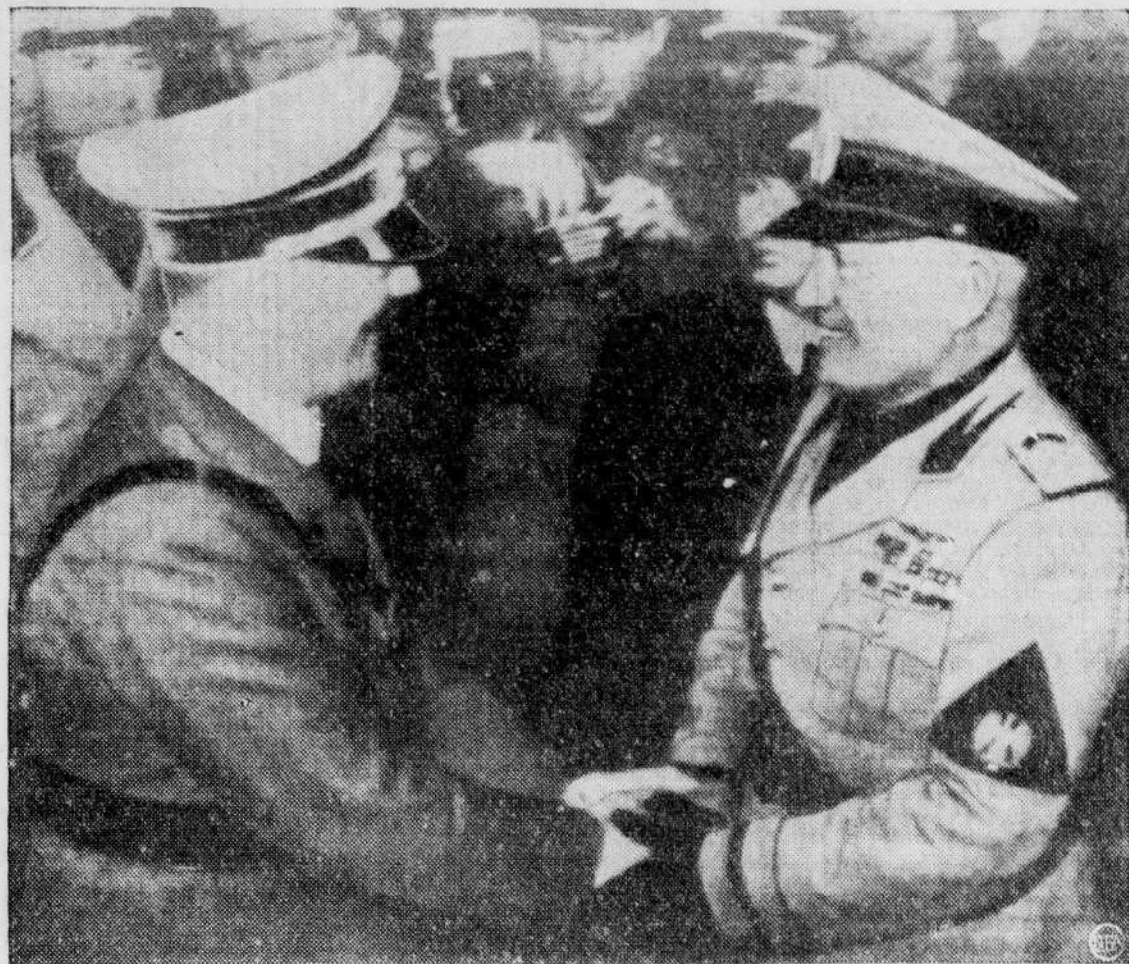

Mrs. Coons has had nine children, three of whom are still living. They are Mrs. E. E. Needham, of St. Catharines, Ontario, Mrs. Jack Mitchell, of Bolton Centre, and Mrs. Fred Whittier, of Magog. She has many grandchildren and great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild. Her husband died about thirty-two years ago.

PARTNERS IN CRIME AGAIN SHAKE HANDS

For the third time this year Chancellor Hitler, left, and Premier Mussolini greet each other with warm smiles and handshakes at the Brenner Pass, where the expanded Reich borders Italy. Neither dictator would discuss subject of their three-hour conference, but German and Italian press reports indicated they planned "knockout blow" at England.

COMMUNIST IS FIRED FROM SCHOOL BOARD

Winnipeg, Oct. 9.—(P)—The Winnipeg Public School Board last night formally declared vacant the School Board seat formerly occupied by Andrew Bilecki, who was elected in Ward Three but is now in an internment camp, and called for a new election.

The Board passed unanimously a resolution urging the Manitoba Attorney-General to take steps to preclude the possibility of "known Communists and members of illegal or subversive organizations being nominated for election to the Board in the forthcoming civic elections."

WARNING GIVEN LANDLORDS ON RENT MEASURE

Closing Up of Dwelling or Apartment House Comes Under Withholding Order of Government.

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—(P)—Any landlord who seeks to combat the rent-fixing order of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board by closing up a dwelling or apartment house will be guilty of breaking the law, Hector B. McKinnon, Chairman of the Board said today.

Original powers of the Board had to do with commodities only. Now it has jurisdiction over rents.

It can buy, sell or fix prices of any commodity and if the owner of a certain commodity, dissatisfied with a fixed price, took the stand he would not sell, but would keep that commodity in store, he would be guilty of "withholding."

This being wartime the Government is seeing that commodities are not withheld from market and, Mr. McKinnon said, a landlord who closed up a house or apartment building to combat the rent-fixing order which applies in certain crowded localities also would be guilty of withholding residential accommodation.

STRIKE CALLED IN QUEBEC GOLD MINE

Val d'Or, Que., Oct. 9.—(P)—Efforts to avert a strike at the Sullivan Consolidated Mines, Limited, were reported last night to have failed with the Abitibi Miners' Syndicate, Incorporated, calling the strike for today. The Union claims three hundred men are involved.

The strike call came despite the fact that the Quebec Department of Labor sent Cyprien Morin, a conciliation officer, to act as mediator. The Union was seeking reinstatement of five men discharged for union activities, higher wages and improved working conditions.

SURPRISED AT HUN FAILURE AT SCUTTLING

British Admiral Cannot Understand How Canadians Managed to Capture German Ship Intact.

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—(P)—Capture of the German freighter Weser off the coast of Mexico by the Canadian Auxiliary Cruiser Prince Robert was a "fine piece of work," in the opinion of Vice-Admiral Alfred E. Evans, Chief of the British Admiralty Technical Mission.

In an interview with The Canadian Press the Vice-Admiral, highest ranking naval officer now stationed in Canada, expressed curiosity about how the Prince Robert succeeded in getting the Weser without the usual German scuttling attempt.

Overhauling Nazi ships at sea is nothing new, he said, but seizing one before the crew can sink or damage her is new.

"Anyhow, Beard did it," said Admiral Evans. "I must ask Nelles what the secret is."

(Commodore Charles T. Beard is Officer Commanding the Prince Robert and Rear-Admiral Percy W. Nelles is Chief of the Canadian Naval Staff.)

Lisbon—Portuguese sources said today forty-eight officers and crewmen of the torpedoed Greek freighters Aghios Nicolaos and Antonios Chandris have been rescued. The Aghios Nicolaos, 3,687 tons, bound from Buenos Aires to Bordeaux was reported sunk by an Italian submarine October 1.

Lima, Peru — The Peruvian Foreign Office last night denied reports that Peruvian troops were concentrating on the border facing Ecuador. It said there was "absolutely no basis" for the reports.

LEFTISTS PLAN MERGER TO WIN FEDERAL HOUSE

Conservative Leader Declares C.C.F. and Organized Labor to Mass Forces in Next Election.

Fredrieston, Oct. 9.—(P)—A plan exists to link organized labor with the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation to win the next Dominion election, Conservative Leader Hanson claimed in a speech before the New Brunswick Conservative Association here yesterday.

The meeting was the first in a campaign designed to build up the Conservative Party organization in Canada. The next meeting is scheduled for today in Halifax, when the Nova Scotia Conservative Association will hear Mr. Hanson.

The party leader pictured a "Radical Government with Red and Socialistic tendencies" if organized Labor and the C.C.F. co-operated to gain a victory over the Conservative and Liberal parties. He said that the C.C.F. already had control of organized Labor.

Mr. Hanson said that the way the last war was received was an example of what he termed the lack of war fervor in Canada as compared with the feeling in 1914. Prime Minister MacKenzie King

Oriental Crisis Nearing Head As Britain Orders Opening Of Burma Road

Washington Circles Move to Counteract Any Emergency Affecting the United States Which Might Occur in the Far East—Tokyo Declares Japanese Bombs Will Close Burma Road if Re-opened.

FRANCE RECRUITING VOLUNTEER FORCES

Vichy, France, Oct. 9.—(P)—The Petain-Laval Government began today the recruiting of a volunteer army of seven divisions, to which it is limited under the armistice with Germany.

The volunteers will replace conscripts of the class of 1938 and 1939, who still are with the colors. All unmarried French citizens over eighteen years of age who have never been convicted of a crime are eligible to enlist for three years.

B.C. SUPPORTS COPPER BAN

Victoria, Oct. 9.—(P)—The British Columbia Government is "heartily in accord" with a Federal Government ruling restricting the issuance of further permits for the export of copper from Canada, Hon. W. H. Assestine, Minister of Mines, said yesterday.

Washington, Oct. 9.—(P)—The United States watched the Far East attentively today, and at the same time kept an alert eye on the progress of the air war over Europe as a critical factor in the present world struggle for power.

The State Department, it was understood, was reckoning with the possibility that an emergency affecting the United States might occur in the Orient. Not wholly in the background, however, some officials said, was the question of additional aid to Great Britain.

The reactions of Japan to events of the last twenty-four hours were variously interpreted, particularly since the events included Britain's announcement that the Burma Road to China would be re-opened for supplies, the ban on the further flow of subsidized American wheat to Far Eastern ports, and the precautionary steps to get American nationals out of potential trouble zones in the Orient.

Some officials here interpreted the tenor of Japanese reactions to indicate the possibility that any major Far Eastern thrust under the aegis of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo alliance might be held in abeyance, at least for the present.

The attention the Government is giving to the uncertain state of affairs in the Orient was underlined yesterday by an extended conference between President Roosevelt and his two top naval advisors, Admiral William D. Leahy, former Chief of Naval Operations, and Admiral J. O. Richardson, Commander-in-Chief of the Fleet in the Pacific.

Richardson said afterwards that "the readiness of the fleet" for any emergency had been discussed. He disclosed that he would take back several thousand men with him to the present fleet base at Hawaii to reinforce the personnel of warships there.

SHANGHAI FOREIGN OBSERVERS WORRIED

Shanghai, Oct. 9.—(P)—Foreign observers expressed anxiety today lest Japanese army leaders in China, regardless of Tokyo's attitude, should decide to take action over Great Britain's decision to reopen the Burma Road.

Should Japanese militarists take the matter of retaliation into their own hands, these observers said, serious developments might be expected at Hong Kong, British Crown Colony on China's Southeast Coast.

Uneasiness over the general situation in the Orient, sharpened by the United States' action in advising its nationals to return home, was reflected by the Shanghai stock market, where most shares dropped three to five points from yesterday's closing quotations with a few buyers in sight.

The Chinese press predicted that if Japan should go to war with the United States, it would be a disaster.

Government Acts To Relieve Any Labor Shortage By Draft System

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—(P)—Action has been taken by the Dominion Government to avoid a shortage of skilled labor in organizations which work on war equipment orders.

A list of war industries was prepared by the Department of Munitions and Supply, and turned over by the National Labor Supply Council to the Department of National War Services.

Now the list has been circulated to administrative boards set up across the country to administer Canada's compulsory military training scheme.

Major General L. R. LaFleche, Associate Deputy Minister of War Services, said last night that with it went "the strong suggestion that any essential key men employed by organizations engaged in production of war equipment have their military training postponed until some time later in the twelve months' period."

(Administrative boards in the thirteen military districts have the authority to postpone compulsory training to later dates within a 12-month period upon application of a recruit's employers.)

Gen. LaFleche said the suggestion for postponement would not affect men called up for the first military training period which starts today. He said he understood the needs of industry had been satisfied.

Arthur Hills, Chairman of the National Labor Supply Council said it has been "arranged" for the Government to "afford some relief to industry."

"Some men will have their training postponed," he said. "Our view is that we are pleased with the arrangement and the postponement is working smoothly."

Hill disclosed the Council is making enquiries in industry concerning plans being forwarded to carry out the training for technical jobs of men employed.

A shortage of highly-skilled metal workers has been developing during recent months, according to V. C. Phelan, Acting Director of Employment for the Labor Department. He said steps have had to be taken to

N.L.R.B. DECISION NOT TO AFFECT DEFENCE ORDER

United States War and Navy Departments to Give Contracts Despite Labor Troubles.

Washington, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Although no formal pronouncement was forthcoming, members of a United States Congress investigating Committee said privately today the results of a one-day inquiry had satisfied them that decisions of the National Labor Relations Board would not be permitted to work to the detriment of the defence programme.

The committee scheduled no further hearing after it had concluded questioning Robert Jackson, Attorney General, and three key defence officials—Frank Knox, Navy Secretary, Robert Patterson, Assistant Secretary of War, and Sidney Hillman, labor specialist of the National Defence Commission.

Knox and Patterson assured the committee yesterday that they would not feel impelled to deny a defence contract to a company solely because the N.L.R.B. had adjudged it a violator of the Wagner Act. Both agreed that this would be "only one of the factors taken into account," and that speed in delivery of defence essentials was the primary concern.

In honor of Mrs. Elmer Fuller, a recent bride, a mock marriage was performed with Miss Edith McCourt acting as the bride and Mrs. John McManis as the father. The groom was impersonated by Mrs. Lloyd Fuller, with Mrs. Grant Campbell as bridesmaid, Miss Eleanor Bieber, groomsmen, Miss Virginia Gunter, flower girl, and Mrs. Douglas Gibbs, minister.

On behalf of the bride's many friends, Miss Edith McCourt presented the guest-of-honor with a cedar chest and chenille bedspread. A musical interlude followed with solos by Mrs. K. G. Nourse and Miss Eileen Gleason and a duet by Mrs. K. G. Nourse and Mrs. H. G. Frazier.

Autumn flowers in profusion were arranged in the hall. Mrs. Charles W. Armstrong presided at the lace-covered table, which was centered with pantries in a cut-glass bowl and surrounded by green and mauve tapers in silver holders.

United States should immediately seize all undefended American interests in the Orient. The same commentaries voiced belief, however, that the United States' superior resources could eventually crush Japan and force her withdrawal from China.

Washington's suggestion that the United States citizens leave the Orient as soon as possible was accepted by Americans here as clarifying the American-Japanese situation.

The American-owned China Press said the suggestion made evident that "a decision has been arrived at in Washington, and that is that America is ready to fight."

Declaring that both Japan and the United States appeared to have made up their minds on a fixed course, the paper said that "a head-on collision appears inevitable unless one of them changes its course—but if there should be any turning about the chances are it won't be the United States."

Steamship and travel agencies were crowded this morning with Americans seeking passage, while many others already have attempted to liquidate their holdings.

Informed sources said Britain has taken no action to remove her nationals from the Orient.

CLAIMS BOMBS WILL CLOSE BURMA ROAD

Tokyo, Oct. 9.—(AP)—The Tokyo press intimated today that Japan will close the Burma road with bombs if Great Britain re-opens this "back-door" route linking China with vital sources of war materials.

Claiming the recent acquisition of airplanes bases in French Indo-China has given Japan a strategic advantage against China, newspapers said the Japanese now are ready for direct action.

Britain will re-open the Burma road October 17, Prime Minister Churchill announced in the House of Commons in London yesterday.

The Japanese newspaper Nichiichi said "further words are unnecessary" because Japan already has explained to third powers her determination to eliminate the supply routes of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek.

"Japan needs no longer conduct any diplomatic negotiations with Britain," Nichiichi said. "The effect of stationing Japanese forces in Indo-China should now be displayed."

Yomiuri commented in a similar vein.

Some sections of the Tokyo press claimed the scheduled reopening of the Burma road was only the prelude to more extensive Anglo-United States assistance to China in the form of loans. The road was closed July 17 by an agreement effective for three months.

Yakichiro Suma, Foreign Office spokesman, declined comment on the Burma road situation. He said, however, that a previous British agreement to suspend shipments to China via Hong Kong was expected to continue inasmuch as no time limit had accompanied that agreement.

Suma expressed surprise at the action of the United States in advising its nationals in Japan to return home as soon as possible.

"We can't understand the necessity of it," he said, Japan has no intention of advising her citizens to quit the United States, he added.

Hong Hong, Oct. 9.—(AP)—The Chinese press in Hong Kong today acclaimed Great Britain's decision to re-open the Burma road to China as indicating "a clearer understanding of the far Eastern situation" but predicted it would lead to serious Japanese repercussions.

PREPAREDNESS BEST BASIS OF LASTING PEACE

New York Mayor Declares that United States Cannot Assure Neutrality by Mind-Only Own Business.

New York, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Urging preparedness and national unity, Mayor LaGuardia declared last night it was useless to contend that "if we just mind our own business we will be left alone."

Addressing the opening session of the New York State Conference of Social Work, the Mayor said: "We are weighing two ways of life—the democratic way and the totalitarian way. This great conflict is not going to be decided in any other way but by proof of the superiority of our own form of government."

"If we are properly prepared, I am convinced no dictator or group of dictators will make any move in the western hemisphere."

MUST PREPARE FOR ALTERNATIVE OF WAR
Philadelphia, Oct. 9.—(AP)—The basic issue confronting Americans today, says Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnall, retired, "is whether the United States is prepared to live indefinitely as an armed camp and whether our form of government can survive the pressure" of events abroad.

"The war in Europe and the war in Asia are phases of the same war," he said. "If we are going to help the remaining free nations we must be prepared for the alternative of war."

PHYSIQUE NOT SOLE STANDARD FOR SOLDIERS

Modernization of Warfare Has Brought Many Changes in Requirements for Good Fighting Man.

By GLADYS ARNOLD,
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—So far as the National Defence Department is concerned, Apollo, for all his great physical standards, was just another fellow. If he hadn't the inner qualities required for modern war he wouldn't be a soldier.

One of the hardest-hit buildings in London was a hospital where rescue parties still were working this morning in an effort to release persons trapped in the wreckage.

"I think one of the war's worst," one of the workers reported. "One part of the building is right down to the ground."

Next to London, the hardest hit area was the tattered triangle down the Thames to the Southeast Coast.

Across the choppy Strait that is the "No Man's Land" between Britain and the nearest Nazi camps the Royal Air Force kept steadily at its task of smashing German-held coastal bases and barge fleets.

From Calais to Boulogne spouting fountains of flame glowing red against low-hanging clouds marked British bomb hits and observers on the cliffs heard the roar of explosions.

The Air Ministry announced that other flights "carried out attacks on naval dockyards, industrial plants, and other important military objectives in Germany and enemy-occupied territory."

The overnight alarm in London did not last as long as the previous night. Until midnight, however, observers in London said, the attack surpassed any the city has undergone previously in the early night.

Raiders crossing the coast in groups of thirty, fanned out over the Thames, then dived through the London anti-aircraft barrage one at a time.

At times a dozen or more bombers over the city simultaneously fired. Sometimes bombs screamed down four or five a minute. "Moonhoff breadbaskets" of incendiary bombs dumped in the suburbs started fires.

After midnight fewer and fewer bombers were heard over Central London. The bombings finally ended and the city was quiet before dawn.

A communique said damage was done to "a number of houses and industrial premises" in London, and added:

"Full reports of casualties are not yet available. It is feared that some may have been caused in one building in London which was struck by a high explosive bomb and partially demolished, but the indications are that casualties generally have not been heavy."

CLAIMS GERMAN PILOTS SCARED
Vancouver, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Po Noel K. Stansfeld, Vancouver's latest Distinguished Flying Cross winner, believes German pilots now raiding England "are really scared to death."

Stansfeld, awarded the D.F.C. recently for operations with the Royal Air Force over Dunkerque and England, said this in a letter to his parents here, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Stansfeld.

Evelyn Beatrice Longman was the first woman sculptor to be honored by membership in the National Academy of Design. Her membership began in 1919.

puffs of bursting shells down the Thames.

The Nazi were reported particularly active over a Southwest Coast town, as well as in the Southeast, where several towns were hit by bombs.

Ten high explosive bombs fell in one Southeast district when a formation of German Messerschmitts dived out of the clouds. Two houses were wrecked and six damaged before R.A.F. fighters drove the raiders off.

Several persons were believed trapped in the debris of houses on London's outskirts, bombed in early afternoon by a single raid which dumped six bombs.

Three Messerschmitts dived over Dover harbor and shot down one bag in the port's balloon barrage.

"Another heavy bomb fell close to a crowded public air raid shelter in suburban London, blowing out one wall and causing a number of casualties. Several persons were killed in another section when a bomb demolished three houses."

Glass-strewn streets, heaps of rubble that had been homes and workshops, and lengthening casualty lists were reported from 102 sections of Britain. Thirty-eight of the areas were in London.

From Calais to Boulogne spouting fountains of flame glowing red against low-hanging clouds marked British bomb hits and observers on the cliffs heard the roar of explosions.

The Air Ministry announced that other flights "carried out attacks on naval dockyards, industrial plants, and other important military objectives in Germany and enemy-occupied territory."

The overnight alarm in London did not last as long as the previous night. Until midnight, however, observers in London said, the attack surpassed any the city has undergone previously in the early night.

Raiders crossing the coast in groups of thirty, fanned out over the Thames, then dived through the London anti-aircraft barrage one at a time.

At times a dozen or more bombers over the city simultaneously fired. Sometimes bombs screamed down four or five a minute. "Moonhoff breadbaskets" of incendiary bombs dumped in the suburbs started fires.

After midnight fewer and fewer bombers were heard over Central London. The bombings finally ended and the city was quiet before dawn.

A communique said damage was done to "a number of houses and industrial premises" in London, and added:

"Full reports of casualties are not yet available. It is feared that some may have been caused in one building in London which was struck by a high explosive bomb and partially demolished, but the indications are that casualties generally have not been heavy."

R. A. F.'S COUNTER-PUNCHERS

Britain's doughty little R. A. F. hasn't been taking Nazi bombings of England lying down. Time and again it has carried the attack to German soil, replied to Nazis in kind. Above, a prelude to such flights, R.A.F. pilots make a last-minute check-up of objectives.

puffs of bursting shells down the Thames.

The Nazi were reported particularly active over a Southwest Coast town, as well as in the Southeast, where several towns were hit by bombs.

Ten high explosive bombs fell in one Southeast district when a formation of German Messerschmitts dived out of the clouds. Two houses were wrecked and six damaged before R.A.F. fighters drove the raiders off.

Several persons were believed trapped in the debris of houses on London's outskirts, bombed in early afternoon by a single raid which dumped six bombs.

Three Messerschmitts dived over Dover harbor and shot down one bag in the port's balloon barrage.

"Another heavy bomb fell close to a crowded public air raid shelter in suburban London, blowing out one wall and causing a number of casualties. Several persons were killed in another section when a bomb demolished three houses."

Glass-strewn streets, heaps of rubble that had been homes and workshops, and lengthening casualty lists were reported from 102 sections of Britain. Thirty-eight of the areas were in London.

One of the hardest-hit buildings in London was a hospital where rescue parties still were working this morning in an effort to release persons trapped in the wreckage.

"I think one of the war's worst," one of the workers reported. "One part of the building is right down to the ground."

Next to London, the hardest hit area was the tattered triangle down the Thames to the Southeast Coast.

Across the choppy Strait that is the "No Man's Land" between Britain and the nearest Nazi camps the Royal Air Force kept steadily at its task of smashing German-held coastal bases and barge fleets.

vised that exports of Rumanian oil to this country now are forbidden, it was reported reliably today.

Oil executives said they were investigating whether the ban was strictly a political measure or due to some unusual transport difficulty.

Although full details were not given, political circles said they regarded the Rumanian action as a direct result of imminent German military control of the Rumanian oil fields and in the form of an economic blockade of Greece.

A number of foreign oil companies also are affected by the shutting off of the source of supply.

Greece at present has a strict rationing system for gasoline. She is understood to have about a two-months supply of the fuel.

SHRINE GLASS UNAFFECTED BY STEADY RAIDS

Memorial to Nine Men Who Gave Lives in First Great War Alone Undamaged in London Street.

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 9.—Down in No Man's Land of East London is a small street called Alice Street. It is a scene of stark desolation, of demolished houses, crumbling walls, twisted beams battered and beaten by German bombers.

The front wall of one house, in the centre of a row of twenty, remains standing almost like a weather-beaten sentinel among the ruins. On it is a small shrine, a memorial to "The Men of Alice Street Who Fell in the Great War."

It is a simple, home-made memorial, a wooden plaque bearing the roughly carved names of nine men of Alice Street who lost their lives twenty-five years ago in a vain effort to make Alice Street safe for their children.

Above the plaque is a glass-enclosed receptacle for flowers and under it is the motto, "Give us peace in our time, Oh Lord."

In Alice Street itself and for some distance in all directions every pane of glass has been shattered except the glass in the shrine. It escaped the fury of the Nazi bombs. It was not even cracked.

Alice Street may be a hambly but its rough, crude shrine to nine brave men still stands, a pathetic memento of a hope now vanished like the houses that lined the streets.

Alice Street will be rebuilt; some day when the East End of London ceases to be No Man's Land.

CIVILIANS BECOME SOLDIERS HERE TODAY

Hundreds Of Recruits Pour Into Drummond Road Centre

Men of First Class Called Up for Training Check In at Sherbrooke Camp and Receive Introduction to Army Life—Come from Widely Separated Points—All English-Speaking Men to Report at Farnham.

From as far afield as distant Rouyn, from Montreal, Drummondville, Farnham and points throughout the Eastern Townships, young men of the first class called up to serve a thirty-day period of training under the Government's preparedness plan poured into the N.P.A.M. training centre on the Drummond Road today.

Only a few short hours after they had seen the camp for the first time, the young recruits of the Canadian Army looked back on their former civilian life as something forgotten.

Garbed in battle dress, assigned to their companies and their sleeping huts, and with the first camp meal tucked under their belts, the trainees were ready to go to work, and looking forward eagerly to the start of training tomorrow morning.

One thousand men were expected to report to the camp today, and from early this morning the road to the camp was crowded with vehicles as the lads arrived in buses, private cars and taxis. One man was noticed pedalling his bicycle along the road, with his suitcase parked on the handle bars.

The local camp is one of eight in Military District No. 4. Others are established at Farnham, Huntingdon, St. Hyacinthe, Sorel, St. Jerome, Valleyfield and Joliette. Although the original intention was to make the Huntingdon and Sherbrooke camps bilingual, the proportion of French to English is so great that the two camps will be French-speaking, and the Farnham Camp will take care of all the English-speaking recruits. Thus the English lads reporting here today were ordered to go to Farnham and at noon a group of them were awaiting transportation from Sherbrooke to the Farnham centre.

The formalities of signing on the men, issuing their uniforms and familiarizing them with camp organization had to be attended to today, and these formalities require plenty of time and hard work, as the Record representative who visited the camp this morning soon learned.

Upon arrival, the recruit went first to the Orderly Room, where his

THANKSGIVING WAS THEME OF W.M.S. SESSION

Lennoxville United Church Society Holds Its Annual Thank-Offering Meeting—Members of Philathea Group Gather.

The annual thank-offering meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Lennoxville United Church was observed yesterday in the Gertrude Scott Hall by the members with special prayers of thanksgiving and a special offering.

During the session, which was presided over by Mrs. P. Pergau, the President, a report was given of the annual meeting of the Lennoxville Branch of the British and Foreign Bible Society on Monday evening, and a statement was made to the effect that the largest collection ever made in Lennoxville has been received for the Society this year, the total amount, including the offering at this annual meeting, amounting to over $108.

The course of study which is followed each year by the members of the W. M. S. was begun yesterday and this year will be composed of sets of pamphlets instead of a book. The first was a study of Africa, and those taking part in the dramatization were Mrs. W. H. Abbott, Miss K. Scott, Mrs. George Sutherland, Dr. Mary O. Vaudry, Mrs. W. J. Lane, Mrs. F. R. Matthews and Miss Mina Pergau.

The worship service was conducted by Mrs. Abbie Willard, the theme of which was "The Way to Life Eternal." The hymns, "Sing to the Lord's Anointed" and "Jesus, Thou Lord of Loving Hearts," being sung. Speaking at the eighth annual convention of the Union of Property Owners' League of the Province of Quebec, the Minister said that the Government wishes in particular to aid small property owners. The Minister suggested diversification of taxation as a possible means of reducing the municipal taxation on property.

Partial arrangements were made to hold a special meeting on the third Monday of this month to welcome the associate members. Miss Mina Pergau and Miss Estelle Wellman were named to take charge of the selling of Christmas cards for the benefit of the Society. The session was concluded with the Mizpah benediction repeated in unison by the members.

PHILATHEA SOCIETY ENTERTAINED

Mrs. W. J. Wark was hostess to members of the Philathea Society of the Lennoxville United Church at her residence on Academy Street last evening at their regular meeting, when blocks were distributed for quilts which when completed will be given to the Red Cross for refugees.

Mrs. Albert Raycraft, First Vice-President, conducted the business session in the absence of Mrs. Austin H. Scott, the President. Letters of thanks were read for sympathy and flowers sent to those bereaved.

Following adjournment a pleasant social hour was spent, when croquet was enjoyed, after which refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. H. R. Frizzell. Mrs. Margaret Wark did the honors at the charmingly appointed tea table, which was covered with a lace cloth and centered with a silver bowl of autumn flowers and tall lighted taper in silver holders.

GIRLS' AUXILIARY MEETING

Members of the Girls' Auxiliary of St. George's Church did a considerable amount of work last evening on articles for a bazaar which is to be sent to missionary societies for the less fortunate at Christmas. The Misses Grace and Emma Lou Stevens were hostesses to the girls at their residence on Clough Avenue, when the work at hand was lightened by pleasant conversation.

During the short business meeting, conducted by the President, Miss Ruth Burt, a letter of thanks was read from Mrs. M. E. Smiley, of Prince Albert, for a layette sent by the members some time ago. The meeting closed with prayer.

Preliminary Hearing In Perjury Cases Resumed In Local Court

Presentation of rebuttal evidence was commenced behind closed doors in Magistrate's Court this morning as the preliminary hearing of four persons on charges of perjury was resumed before Judge J. H. Lemay. The hearings involve Marie Louise Couture, Eugene Couture, Maurice Sherbrooke, who are accused of having committed perjury while rendering evidence in a Superior Court petition early in September. Three other persons—Cecile Desruisseaux, of Sherbrooke, and Mrs. Cote Delisle and Girard Cote, of Johnville—are scheduled to appear for preliminary hearing on similar charges today, while last week Kilda Perron, 18 years old, of Mag., was bound over to stand trial at the forthcoming session of Court of King's Bench. The Perron girl was sent to the assizes after Judge Lemay rejected a motion for non-suit presented by defence attorneys, who claimed that the complainant had not produced sufficient evidence to warrant binding her over to stand trial. The perjury charges were lodged as the aftermath to hearing of an incidental petition in the Superior Court case of Hebert vs. Hebert for separation as to bed and board. The complainant, Mrs. Alice Dallaire Hebert, who is also the plaintiff in the separation case, alleges that the accused perjured themselves while giving evidence in the petition entered by Rene Hebert, through which he sought custody of their children pending settlement of the principal action which has not yet been argued before the courts.

STUDY CHANGE OF MUNICIPAL PROPERTY TAX

Hon. T. D. Bouchard Tells Drummondville Gathering that Plans Are Under Study to Spread Levy.

Drummondville, Que., Oct. 9.—(P)—Hon. T. D. Bouchard, Quebec Minister of Roads and Public Works, declared last night in an address that the present Provincial administration "is studying the question" of aiding property owners in the Province as regards municipal taxation.

Speaking at the eighth annual convention of the Union of Property Owners' League of the Province of Quebec, the Minister said that the Government wishes in particular to aid small property owners. The Minister suggested diversification of taxation as a possible means of reducing the municipal taxation on property.

"Such diversification should mean the creation of new, small taxes amongst all citizens to take away the heavy taxation on property owners," said Mr. Bouchard, who spoke for about fifteen minutes.

The convention opened here yesterday, with the 250 delegates being welcomed on behalf of the City of Drummondville by Mayor Arthur Rajotte.

LOCAL ROTARIANS HEAR ADDRESS ON MODERN LIGHTING

Illustrating with the aid of lantern slides light in all its variations and uses, Frank Groome, of the staff of the Holophone Company of Canada, addressed members of the Sherbrooke Rotary Club last evening at their regular session at the New Sherbrooke House. His subject was "Bringing Light Indoors."

Mr. Groome emphasized the vital part which proper lighting plays in defence and fortification measures, as well as in hospitals where the control of light must be perfect.

Mr. Groome said that poor eyesight is sometimes caused from the lighting in the establishment in which one works, adding that for the eye to wander from the brightness of reflected light, such as light colored books or white paper, to the dark floors and baseboards, strains the vision.

Commercial as well as industrial plants are coming to realize this and as a result are trying to balance the tones of contrast. Some industries are even painting their machinery light gray or even white, he said.

Seated at the head table with the speaker and President J. H. Wark were Rotarians Abe Echenberg, Joseph Booth, F. H. Bradley, Charles Delvenne, M. Graham and P. Mathias.

Guests of the club included John Ward and Stanley Orser, of Montreal, Remo Remy, of Victoriaville, and Carroll Ives, of Sherbrooke, who were introduced by Rotarian Henry Downs, Jr., and welcomed by Rotarian F. H. Bradley. The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Abe Echenberg and thanked by Rotarian Walter Mutchler. Rotarian G. D. Wadsworth said grace.

PRESIDENT OF UNDERWRITERS GUEST SPEAKER

M. L. McPhail, of Saint John, N.B., Addressed Meeting and Dinner of Sherbrooke Life Underwriters Association.

Life insurance is a vital factor in the home as well as in the financial and economic structure of Canada. M. L. McPhail, of Saint John, N.B., President of the Life Underwriters Association of Canada, declared in an address to members of the Sherbrooke Life Underwriters Association at a meeting and dinner held in the Chateau Frontenac Hotel here yesterday.

Choosing for his subject, "What Life Insurance Means to the Social, Educational and Financial Life of Canada," the speaker stated that 4,000,000 people in Canada hold policies which guarantee financial aid to others in the event of their death. In this connection Mr. McPhail cited an instance of what this means to the average home. It was his privilege, he said, to be able to inform a widow that she and her daughter would be independent as a result of her husband's investment in Life Insurance. Her response was "Oh, Jim was always so thoughtful!"

The importance of Life Underwrite Associations to the general public was also stressed. These associations, organized years ago to combat evil practices such as rebating and to eliminate cut-throat competition, are responsible for the better service which exists today. The rule stipulating that agents must carry a rate book was instituted by these organizations.

In closing Mr. McPhail expressed the hope that all Underwriters in the city would join the Sherbrooke Association.

P. H. Dubar, Assistant Superintendent of Agencies for the Imperial Life Insurance Company, who is accompanying Mr. McPhail on a Quebec tour, outlined the latter's remarks in French.

Mr. McPhail was introduced by H. A. Peabody and thanked by J. R. M. Mathias.

W. S. Sutherland, President of the Sherbrooke Underwriters Association, occupied the chair while J. G. Fortin, the Secretary, read the minutes of the previous meeting.

Those at the head table were Mr. Sutherland, Mr. McPhail, Mr. Dubar, Mr. Marois and J. A. Rouleau.

25TH JUBILEE OF ORDINATION IS CELEBRATED

Rev. Canon Michel Couture Guest of Honor at Testimonial Dinner Held at St. Charles Seminary Yesterday.

Rev. Canon Michel Couture was the guest-of-honor at a dinner given him at St. Charles Seminary yesterday on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. Earlier in the day at a ceremony held in the Seminary auditorium he received the congratulations of the teaching staff and the student body.

High tribute was paid Canon Couture by the principal speaker, Mgr. Philippe S. Desranleau, Bishop Co-adjutor of Sherbrooke Diocese, who praised his career as a teacher and drew particularly attention to his record as Dean of Studies at the Seminary. The speaker lauded the conscientious effort and application to work which the guest-of-honor had combined with outstanding talent and ability, and stated that he had won the confidence and esteem of both the students and the teaching staff. The dinner was attended by many of Canon Couture's fellow clergymen.

Born in this city in 1885, Canon Couture was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Virbon Couture. After completing his classical and commercial courses, he was ordained by Right Rev. Paul Larocque, Lord Bishop of Sherbrooke.

He then joined the teaching staff of the Seminary, where he taught rhetoric for seven years. He was appointed Dean of Studies fourteen years ago and Vice-Superior of the Seminary in 1929. He obtained his licentiate in letters at the University of Montreal and was elevated to the rank of Canon three years ago.

COATCOOK MAN IS INJURED IN BLAZE IN HOME

John Andrews Taken to Tafe Hospital Suffering from Burns to Face and Hands—Fire Resulted from Explosion.

Coaticook, Oct. 9.—John Andrews, eighty-seven years old, is today confined to the Tafe Hospital here suffering from burns to the face and hands received early last evening in a fire which occurred at his home on the Dixville Road town limits when an explosion occurred as he was filling a lamp with coal oil.

The flames from the explosion were first seen by Philippe Poulin, who operates a service station opposite the Andrews' residence, and Andrews, stunned by the blast and burned about the face and hands, standing in his kitchen which was ablaze.

Poulin assisted the aged man out of the house and summoned the Coaticook fire bridge, which extinguished the fire before it had spread outside the kitchen's interior.

A second fire started in the Andrews' home at 4:30 o'clock this morning, presumably caused by smouldering embers in a stuffed couch which was in the kitchen. This second blaze caused additional damage to the kitchen and furnishings and to the front part of the house.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrews had left to spend the winter months in Coaticook, N.H., with their two sons, Charles and Albert, and Mr. Andrews had returned yesterday to close up the house for the winter.

Opening Of Burma Road To Prevent Japs From Carrying Out Expansion Plan, Says Chinese Consul General

Through the opening by Great Britain of the Burma Road "we are going to keep Japan occupied near home so that she will not have the same freedom of action to realize the plan of southward expansion in Malaysia and Dutch East Indies," declared Chao-Ying Shek, Chinese Consul-General in Canada in an interview at the New Sherbrooke House this morning.

"Our Government has always maintained that the Chinese people have common ideals with the democratic nations of the world and we feel that this is a very friendly move on the part of the British Government," he added.

It is the first time in history that a Chinese Consul-General has ever visited this city. Arriving at the C.P.R. Station at 9:25 o'clock last night, he was greeted by a delegation headed by S. S. Lee, Chairman of the Chinese Benevolent Association in Sherbrooke. Afterwards a banquet was held at the Grand Cafe, attended by some thirty-odd Chinese residents who listened to the Consul-General tell them that they have done more toward helping Chinese people bear the brunt of war against Japan than their meagre earnings warranted. His mission was also to express the gratitude of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek for their sustained efforts and tell them that China will never submit to Japanese tyranny.

Mr. Chao-Ying Shek has been at Ottawa since April of last year and directly before coming to Sherbrooke was in Quebec City. He will proceed from here to the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland.

The Consul-General stated that it was his mission to impress upon Chinese living in this city that, by fulfilling their obligations to the Canadian Government and supporting Canada's war effort in military training or financially, they were in turn supporting their own people back home in China.

During the course of the interview he stated that Japan's invasion of French Indo-China was claimed by the Japanese Government as a move to attack China through the Province of Yunnan. "But," Mr. Chao-Ying Shek stated, "the more important reasons are to use these advantages as stepping stones to consolidate possessions in French Indo-China and attack the Strait Settlements and Dutch East Indies. As far as her professed aim of attacking us in the rear," he continued, "she can only do so through the air by bombing open towns. Her land forces will not be able to advance into Yunnan one inch because of the extremely difficult nature of the terrain."

When queried as to his opinion of the Far East war, he declared that it was Russia's intent to keep China efficient to such a degree of fighting strength that Japan would be fully engaged with worries in the East. "Russia may sign the contemplated non-aggression pact with Japan but this would not interfere with Russia's policy of supplying China with materials," he stated.

The Chinese Consul-General was firmly opposed to reports from "some irresponsible critics" that China would comply with some very favorable agreement with Japan to settle their differences, which would give Japan a free hand in Europe and the West. "There is absolutely no grounds for such a suggestion," he affirmed. "China is determined to carry on the fight until Japan is willing to grant China a status of equality," he added.

The Consul-General said: "The harmony which is prevalent between the various nationalities living under the Canadian flag is a fine object lesson to all those who are suffering from enmity between races."

THE AXIS REBUFFED

Any hopes that Germany and Italy might have held that by the signing of the military alliance with Japan they could drive a wedge into the friendship of the British Empire and the United States must have received a distinct setback through two developments yesterday, the British announcement of its intention to re-open the Burma Road through which supplies can reach the Chinese Government, and the cancellation of the proposed trip of the British Ambassador to the United States, Lord Lothian, to his homeland. In addition indications are that the recently-announced pact strengthens rather than weakens the British cause through developments in another quarter, the report that Great Britain, United States and Russia may form a common front against a common enemy.

Whatever may be the outcome of the suggested talks between these three powers, the announcement of the re-opening of the Burma Road, made by Prime Minister Churchill yesterday, was accompanied by four interesting developments:

1—The United States State Department is advising Americans in the Far East—Japan and its dependencies, Indo-China, and Hong Kong—to return home.

2—Col. Ralston announced at Ottawa that intense attention is being paid to military preparations for Western Canadian defence and that the question of establishment of a Pacific Military Command, similar to that established in the Maritimes, is under consideration.

3—At Washington and at London the Russian Ambassadors were in conference with British and United States authorities, leading to widespread speculation that further aid to China by the Russians was under consideration, and that Russia in return would have access to important raw and other materials that Britain and the United States control.

4—The Japanese, in what was regarded as an arbitrary manner, landed naval forces at Liu Kung Island, off Shantung peninsula, North-Central China, which Britain has leased for many years. The British Government renewed its lease with Chiang Kai-Shek; Japan chose, through its puppet regime at Nanking, to regard the lease as no longer in effect.

The Burma Road was closed for three months, during the rainy season, after negotiations between Britain and Japan. The British announcement at the time said it was hoped the Japanese would use the interval to seek a real basis for peace with the Chinese Government. No such attempt was made.

Over the road now will flow again the supplies which the Chinese need. More than that. It will be a moral factor for the Chinese, still fighting after three and one-quarter years of war, especially when it is coupled with last week's Washington decision to make available a loan of $23,000,000 to Chiang Kai-Shek's Government.

The Japanese, however, can attack the Burma Road with more hopes of crippling it now that the Vichy Government has permitted the Nipponese to base aircraft in French Indo-China.

A broadcast from Tokyo by Domei, the main Japanese news agency, quoted the Japan Times, a widely-read newspaper, as describing Britain's decision as "an unmistakable indication that she is taking up with the United States a common front against this country."

THE EAGLE SQUADRON

Ever since the outbreak of hostilities between the British Empire and Germany, large numbers of young United States men, either through a sense of duty or a spirit of adventure, have sought to enter the various fighting services of the Empire. This has become specially marked following the open support of the British cause by the United States political leaders, but the exact extent of this aid was not realized by many until the announcement yesterday by British Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair that a Royal Air Force fighter squadron composed entirely of United States pilots will shortly take its place in the front line of Britain's defenders.

The squadron, which will be known as the Eagle Squadron commanded by Sqdn. Leader William Erwin Gibson Taylor, of Fort Leavenworth, Kas., will form part of the regular Royal Air Force, but its members will wear a special badge, approved by King George, consisting of an eagle with wings spread surmounted by the letters "E. S." and will wear the regular R.A.F. uniform of sky blue.

None but qualified pilots with at least 250 hours of flying time are accepted in the squadron, recruiting being carried on at Montreal, where the volunteers are examined and despatched to England for final training. They are not required to take an oath of allegiance to the King.

Commenting on the formation of the squadron, Sir Archibald Sinclair declared: "They joined spontaneously, following the glorious example set in the Great War by the Lafayette Escadrille." Thus, do the true American pilots and aviators belie the stand taken by an individual who, through a fortunate adventure, set himself as the spokesman for the entire industry.

HEATING WITH WOOD TO AID WAR EFFORT

Canadian householders can achieve the dual objective of aiding to win the war and at the same time reducing their annual expenditure for fuel by the increased use of wood for domestic heating purposes, according to information gathered by the Forest Products Laboratories of the Department of Mines and Resources.

Each year for domestic consumption in Canada, quite apart from industrial uses, about 3,400,000 tons of anthracite coal and about 1,800,000 tons of bituminous coal are imported. In addition, homes equipped with oil burners necessitate the importation of a considerable quantity of crude oil from which fuel oil is derived. Under present conditions, when every effort is being expended to conserve foreign exchange, it is important that Canada's outlay for imported fuels be reduced by drawing on her abundant resources in fuel from low grade wood, sawmill waste, sawdust and other such material to as great an extent as possible.

At present Canada uses approximately ten million cords of wood a year for domestic fuel. This exceeds the quantity cut for either sawlogs or pulpwood, and is equal in heat value to about 6,600,000 tons of anthracite. Effective heat obtained from one and one-quarter cords of good hardwood is equivalent to the heat obtained from one ton of anthracite coal.

While burning wood may entail more work and inconvenience in stoking than some other fuels, in most cases a substantial saving can be made by its use. Important advances have been made in recent years in the manufacture of stoves and furnaces for burning wood, and in the development of sawdust burners. As a measure of national economy, increased reliance on Canadian fuel wood resources is important, and places within the reach of every householder a means of furthering the war effort.

A GREAT NEED RELIEVED

Ample proof that the people of Canada are ready to meet any call that the Government may make upon them for aid in the successful prosecution of the war is contained in the announcement of Munitions Minister Howe that a shortage of field glasses and binoculars no longer obtains in this country.

A few months ago, the curtailment of supplies of these articles caused by German overrunning of almost the entire continent of Europe, caused a shortage in the Canadian Army, and the Government appealed to the people of Canada to surrender any such equipment that individuals might have in their possession. The response was whole-hearted, and with the co-operation of a United States supply firm the shortage has been eliminated.

Similarly, the leaders of Canada can rest assured that any other reasonable appeal in the future will be met by the people to the limit of their ability, whatever its nature may be. Canadians are determined to beat Hitlerism and the case of field glasses is but an example.

HORROR!

Of all the horror-laden acts of man
Recorded on Time's blood-splashed page,
No conduct of a greed-mad primal clan
Ever matched the Hunnish butcher's rage
To cut the strands of progress and deprave
The world, including their own kin,
To lower levels than the sullen slave
Who wallows in his master's sin.

Appalling failure of a broken race,
Equipped with naught but gangster care
For others' love and hope and godly grace,
They shame the image that they wear.
They have not even senseless wooden gods
To whom they bow in some restraint;
They are no more than breathing, willless clods
Impelled by tyrants' grim complaint.

They have outlawed the softening theme of love,
Replacing it by dull-eyed hate
That cannot hear the call of peacetime's dove,
Nor feel sweet friendship's soothing weight;
They've trampled down agreement's solemn pact,
Have mired progress in war's grime;
They sting at Justice in a snake-like act
That poisons Virtue's yearning prime.

But they've forgotten that an antidote
Is at each worthy man's command,
And that's a grasp upon the Hunnish throat
Of mighty Right's restoring hand!
Deluded slaves of ailing conqueror-breed
Who carve a shortened way to doom;
Long ere they taste a morsel of their greed
They'll vanish in unlifting gloom.

They may leave scars on mankind's smiling face,
For smile it will, when they are dust,
That they have failed to banish Christian grace
And frame the world to beastly lust.

Then what of us, who criticize and leer,
And barter virtue for a song;
Do we lend aid to synchronize the gear
Of our worn creeds of "right" and "wrong?"

BRITISH BOMBING WITH A PURPOSE

(New York Times)

Mr. Churchill's broadcast seems to have had two purposes. One was to hearten the heroic civilians of London, who were about to endure their fifth successive night of terror from the sky. The other was to explain to a nation deeply angered by these raids why British bombers continue to smash at enemy ports along the Channel and the North Sea instead of concentrating all their fury upon Berlin.

The explanation can be found, in part, in Mr. Churchill's news that hundreds of self-propelled barges have been seen crawling down the North Sea coast bases in France, and that concentrations of shipping have been spotted on coasts as far apart as those of Norway and Brittany. The British are sure, from these signs and others, that their enemy is planning an invasion.

They cannot tell whether the great gamble will be tried under the cloak of autumn fog or sooner, or whether it can be launched at all. In any case, the British strategy is to break the invasion before it begins, to blast at docks and sidings along a thousand miles of enemy coastline, to destroy the ships and supplies that might bring an army to British shores. In this effort the British Navy was used yesterday, and will be used increasingly as the threat develops.

From a military standpoint nothing could be sounder than these coastline raids, especially when they are combined with incessant attacks upon industrial areas in the Ruhr and Rhineland and elsewhere inside Germany. Cities like Essen, Dortmund, Cologne and Frankfurt have had night after night of bombardment for the past three months and the British claim to have destroyed oil tanks, freight yards, warehouses and factories which supply the German war machine. We do not know the effect of these nightly alarms upon German civilians, but we do know that women and children have had to be evacuated from Western German cities to safer places in France or the Czech "protectorate," and we can suspect that factory production has been impaired in many parts of the Reich. These have been systematic raids with a definite purpose.

They offer reassuring proof that despite the raids on London the British have not forgotten that attack is the best defence and that British air power still has means to hurt the enemy.

BRIEF, BUT ELOQUENT

(Toronto Globe and Mail)

There is no depression in this house; and we are not interested in possibilities of defeat.

They do not exist.

This is the wording on a poster displayed in the windows of English homes, one of which has been sent by a woman in Bedfordshire to her brother in Toronto. It is typical of many others. This poster is a modest little square of paper, but it breathes the spirit of the British people: No depression, and not interested in the possibilities of defeat, because they do not exist. In its small way and in its sententious message this poster carries across the ocean a message of reassurance.

Not that opinion of officialdom, nor of prominent investigators and commentators, but the simple declaration of a family that, so far as it is concerned, the situation is faced with cheerfulness and courage. With such people depression cannot find lodgment; and as for the possibilities of defeat they are "not interested." What chance has any enemy against such a people?

THE FUTURE OF CANADA

(L'Action Catholique)

Canada has been at war for a year. We could have remained neutral. In fact, we were for a week, England having declared war on September 3, 1939. France some hours later, and Canada on September 10th only. Right or wrong, parliamentary representatives lawfully elected thought then that the interest of our country demanded that we take side with Great Britain and France against Germany. Whether we approve them or not their action proves that Canada is independent and free to determine its foreign policy.

We do not insist on this point with the intention of discussing the responsibility assumed by our Parliament in that circumstance,—it is not the proper time to do so,—but to point out that we may soon have another opportunity to exercise our liberty. We are coming back to the American fold. We are in for a policy of co-operation with the United States for the organization of the defence of Northern America.

Any discerning Canadian knows that Canada alone cannot ensure the security of its extended coast line against an enemy such as Hitlerite Germany. Nor can the United States, even with their tremendous military budget, shield themselves entirely against an invader landing on some point in Canada. The effective defence of this continent is therefore a matter of common interest to both.

McKENNEY ON BRIDGE

By Wm. E. McKenney, America's Card Authority

ENDPLAY IS TRAP FOR DEFENDERS IN SLAM CONTRACT

You can't win a world championship in bridge and not distinguish yourself on important hands. As I told you in previous articles, Alvin R. Roth and Oscar J. Brotman of Washington, paired up with Bertram Lebar, Jr., of New Rochelle, N.Y., and Samuel Katz of Newark, N.J., won the world championship team-of-four contest this year. Here is one of the outstanding hands of the tournament. Roth and his partner got into a six-spade contract doubled and redoubled.

The bidding smoked out West's psychic double, but bidding well does not always bring the contract. In this case it looked like an almost impossible task to make it. Roth won the opening lead with the king of hearts and cashed three trump tricks, dropping West's jack. A small club was played, West split his equals, and the trick was won with the ace.

On the ace and queen of hearts Roth discarded the jack and six of diamonds and ruffed a heart to get back into his hand. The splitting of the equals marked West with the queen of clubs and his double indicated that he held the ace of diamonds.

Roth cashed his remaining trumps, reducing West as well as South to one diamond and two clubs. Then Roth led the diamond king.

West won and was forced to lead from the queen-seven of clubs into the king-ten, thus giving Roth his contract of six doubled and redoubled.

IF SPAGHETTI TASTES FLAT

Add a few drops of a concentrated relish

WHETHER you buy spaghetti in the can or cook it yourself, you will improve the flavour wonderfully if you add a little H. P. Sauce. A good way is to stir in H. P. while heating up or cooking the spaghetti. And some people like the H. P. flavour so well that they will add a little more when the spaghetti is served on their plates. One good point about H. P. is that you use it sparingly. A little of this thick, fruity sauce imparts a lot of flavour and it's a flavour that is appetizingly delicious. Don't forget H. P. Sauce next time you have spaghetti or macaroni. Use it also for flavouring soups, stews, meats, fish, fowl, sandwiches and salads.

Nourishing Sweets for the School Lunch Box Won't Be A Chore If You Use These Short Cut Recipes

When autumn schoolbells ring in a new regime for hundreds of thousands of children all over the land, lunch immediately becomes a major problem to Canadian mothers. It must be packed and ready five days a week when Johnny and Sue march off to school. And it must be appetizing and nourishing when they open their boxes at recess.

The question of what to pack needn't be a poser if you master a few magic tricks of lunch making. Wholesome cookies and cakes give the meal appetite appeal. You can make a tempting assortment without paying hob with your time schedule if you use these fail-safe recipes calling for sweetened condensed milk. Varied sandwich fillings can be kept on hand—such as jelly and jam, cheese spreads, chopped nuts and raisins—to use when the supply of left-overs runs low.

Remember that you can make sandwiches the night before if you wrap each in waxed paper, then wrap them all in a towel wrung out of cold water. You can make the Magic Angel Cake or the toothsome little cup cakes at the same time. A thermos full of nourishing cocoa can be made in a jiffy if you use this recipe made with sweetened condensed milk:

COCOA

Place 2½ tablespoons of Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk in a cup, and blend with 1½ teaspoons of cocoa and a few grains of salt.

Add boiling water to fill, and stir. There's no saucapane to watch, no "skin" to skim off. It makes a wonderfully smooth, rich cocoa—in a twinkling.

MAGIC ANGEL CAKE

Slice dry old white bread ¾ inch thick. Trim off crusts. Cut into strips ¾ by 2 inches. Spread strips on all sides with sweetened condensed milk, covering well. Then roll in dry shredded coconut, broken fine. Brown under low flame, or toast on fork over coals. It will taste like angel food cake, coconut frosted.

MALTED MILK (PLAIN) CHOCOLATE

2 tablespoons sweetened condensed milk.

2 teaspoons malted milk or chocolate malted milk.

2/3 cup water.

Thoroughly blend sweetened condensed milk and malted milk. Add water gradually. Beat with beater. Serves 1.

GUEST SPEAKER FROM INDIA AT ST. ANDREW'S

Missionary from Jobat, India, Gave Inspiring Address Before Sectional Meeting of W.M.S. in St. Andrew's Church Hall.

Miss Isobel McConnell, Missionary from Jobat, India, gave an eloquent address on hospital work amongst the Bhils, and the difficulties which have to be overcome owing to their superstitions and fears, at the sectional meeting of the W.M.S. in St. Andrew's Church Hall.

Prefacing her remarks with a brief description of the various stations in India and the missionaries in charge, she stressed the wonderful change in the lives of those who had been brought to know the Savior and His love.

Through the love and kindness of the missionaries many doors have been opened to receive the teaching of the Gospel story, said Miss McConnell.

The work is divided into three classes, medical, evangelical and educational, the first mentioned ministering to all classes regardless of caste.

The Bhils, who now belong to the depressed class, were formerly well-to-do, the arrival of the Hindus driving them into the hills.

They are very poor, said Miss McConnell, and oftentimes when they come to a hospital for treatment they are so rundown from malnutrition that they have to be built up and nourished before any surgical work can be done.

The hospital was described by the speaker as "unlike anything you have ever seen," for it's only a barren building, the mere semblance of a hospital.

Patients arrive daily, and many difficulties are daily being overcome, as improvements in the hospital equipment are installed.

The speaker told in a graphic manner the transformation wrought in these patients, who often are thieves but who after they have become Christians, really develop into very fine people.

Their habits, too, were brought to the attention of the meeting by this devoted missionary, who, in concluding her address, spoke of the wonderful opportunity for "nurses" to do great work among the Bhils, the "people of the hills."

Air Ministry posters now warn British to watch out for troop-carrying gliders, which may turn out to be Adolf Hitler's much-touted "secret weapon." Sketches show how such gliders would operate. They need only 10 yards to draw up, can land almost any place. Big planes would tow the gliders, cast them off before reaching the coast. Troop-carrying planes also would be used.

RIPPLE RAPS IN WINNER FOR CINCINNATI

Derringer Tops Newsom 2-1 In Final Game For World's Baseball Flag

Fighting Reds Score Tying and Winning Runs in Seventh Inning of Tense Struggle—Gallant Buck Newsom, Working Third Game of World Series, Heroic in Defeat—Successive Doubles by Frank McCormick and Jim Ripple Start Pay-off Rally.

Cincinnati, Oct. 9.—(AP)—Happy after a day of celebration, Cincinnati's baseball fans awakened today to really realize that it was true—the Reds had won the 1940 World Series.

The Reds ended the series yesterday. Old Paul Derringer licked Detroit's Buck Newsom, 2-1, in the seventh and deciding game, as tense and thrilling a battle as ever climaxed a World Series.

Bobo Newsom, however, was heroic in defeat. Bobo, who pitched the Tigers to two striking victories, blanking the Reds over one stretch of 16 innings, weakened under the terrific pace at the final climax.

After Newsom won his second game Sunday, his arm was so sore he could scarcely lift it. But he was out there again yesterday, firing them across with only one day's rest. In the seventh inning, however, Frank McCormick and Jim Ripple rattled the fence with successive doubles to start the rally that beat the big South Carolinian.

From a romantic standpoint, the grandest figure on the field for six of the seven games was Jimmy Wilson, the 40-year-old coach. He pulled his ancient catcher's mitt off the bottom of the locker and filled the big shoes of Ernie Lombardi behind the plate for the Reds.

He was strapped up with 40-odd yards of adhesive tape yesterday. But Jimmy hit two singles, laid down a perfect sacrifice in the Red's winning inning, and stole the only base of the series.

The goat of the final game and therefore of the series was Dick Bartell, the ever-scraping shortstop of the Tigers.

The Reds were trailing, 1 to 0, going into the seventh, Detroit had scored off Derringer in the third on a couple of scratch hits when Bill Werber threw wild to first on Charlie Gehringer's smash. Then Frank McCormick, husky Red first baseman, inaugurated the seventh with a two-base wallop against the fence in left.

Jimmy Ripple, the next Red, lashed a high, hard drive to right that just cleared Bruce Campbell's head and struck the screen. McCormick, figuring the ball might be caught, held second until he saw it safe, and then tore for third. Campbell made a quick recovery in right and whipped the gate in to Bartell in the vicinity of second base.

It would have been a cinch to cut McCormick down at home. But for some reason Bartell just caught the ball and examined the seams and looked at Ripple, who had just reached second.

Wilson then sacrificed Ripple to third. Billy Myers lifted a long fly to Barney McCosky and Ripple raced home after the catch with the winning run.

Wilson talked the youngster into trying his hand.

"But even in the spring of '35, Bucky was arguing against making the switch," he relates. "But I knew he had the arm and speed and that he was enough all-round ball player to make the change . . . adjust himself to the box."

Walters made such rapid strides with the wretched Phillies that on June 13, 1938, he was sold to the Reds for $45,000, and Cincinnati was to have a sin Virgil Davis and Al Hollingsworth.

And when Wilson had enough in Philadelphia that fall, he also moved to Cincinnati as a coach.

In Rhineland, with Wilson to advise him, Walters helped the Reds to their first flag in 20 years with 27 victories and the lowest earned run average in the National League—2.29. He was voted the most valuable player in the loop.

He came back this season as one of the highest salaried athletes in the game, and earned his pay by bagging 22 games.

When poor Willard Hershberger committed suicide this past summer, Wilson went to work. It was well he did, for had he not whipped himself into shape, the Redlegs would have entered the World Series without satisfactory catching. The loss of Ernie Lombardi, due to a sprained ankle, would have been a terrific blow had Wilson not been in shape.

JIMMY WILSON WAS IDOL FOR BUCKY WALTERS

Reds' Great Flinger Never Thought He Would Work in World Series with Man Who Started Him Off as Twirler.

North Philadelphia is still whooping it up.

Walters and Wilson . . . how about that? And Bucky Walters, throwing to the old bloke who transformed him from a mediocre third baseman, giving the terrible Tigers only three hits.

Walters was 12 years old when Case Fordham Plaster of the Phillies became his idol.

Walters got into old Baker Bowl the best way he could to see his favorite perform. Finally he, too, broke into professional baseball in 1929, but wasted five seasons as an ordinary infielder before winding up with the Phillies to have his possibilities as a pitcher realized by his old friend and neighbor.

Wilson, World Series luminary of the Cardinals in '28, '30 and '31, could no longer hit it off with his roommate, Frank Frisch, when the one-time Phillies first baseman was named manager of the Red Birds.

It was about time he managed a club himself, he argued, and what was more natural than for him to return to Philadelphia.

Shortly thereafter Walters, the kid from down the street, came to the Phillies for mch Bees via the waiver route.

Wilson quickly saw that Walters would not hit consistently enough to play third, but was impressed by the way he burned the ball across the diamond.

The Phillies needed pitching. Wilson talked the youngster into trying his hand.

But even in the spring of '35, Bucky was arguing against making the switch," he relates. "But I knew he had the arm and speed and that he was enough all-round ball player to make the change . . . adjust himself to the box."

Sport Flashes

The other fellows may out-vote us on the series hero, but we'll string along with old Jimmy Wilson. There's a guy 40 years old—yet, he went out there and caught six of the toughest games ever played in series competition. To top it all off, the old boy actually stole a base.

The boys don't forget. When Bill McKeechne was managing the Cardinals he sent two dozen baseballs to prisoners of the Federal pen at Atlanta. Yesterday he received a telegram of good luck from the guys. Most of them are members of the famous "Eagan's Rats" mob of St. Louis, who are in there from 47 years on.

Today's guest star. Lloyd Lewis, Chicago Daily News: "Frank Greenberg is, in personality, the successor of Dizzy Dean as the idol of the baseball mob, just as Dean was Ruth's successor. Unlike them in manner he nevertheless makes it plain to spectators that he takes vast personal delight in winning, just as they did. He grins in open happiness when he cracks out a long hit. His shoulders droop morosely when he pops out."

Best quip of the series was attributed to Joe McCarthy, who is just another guy named Joe as far as this series is concerned. Sitting behind a woman with a big hat, Joe remarked: "This is the worst view of a series I've had in five years."

TIFF BETWEEN PRO BASEBALL AND FOOTBALL

Major League Baseball Owners to Refuse Use of Parks Next Fall Unless Gridders Start Season Later.

Major baseball owners intend to refuse the use of their parks next fall unless the National League of Professional Football Clubs starts its season later.

This is an admission that the diamond campaign is too long, and that competition has become too keen.

What the baseball magnates object to more than anything else are all-star gridiron games in late August and early September.

They monopolize too much of the free space newspapers have given to permit newspapers to conduct national polls to determine members of their All-Star teams, and thus obtain unlimited publicity.

Initial promoters of the biggest all-star football game have been smart enough to let the people have the say in selecting the collegiate side.

All-star games have spread and grown in importance. They have done much for professional football. But organized baseball has had its own sweet way so long that those now controlling it seem to believe they can run the ever growing game of football.

They wield a heavy stick over the heads of pro football backers, for eight of the ten clubs hold forth in big league ball yards. The two exceptions are Detroit and Green Bay, and the Lions wish they had the use of Briggs Stadium, and the Green Bay outfit draws fewer customers at home than any other.

The Tigers closing the American League season at home and entering the World Series precluded the use of Briggs Stadium by the Lions . . . forced them to play home games at the University of Detroit Stadium.

But the Lions' inability to lease the Detroit ball yard may have been big league baseball's first step towards curbing professional football.

Regardless of what is done to professional football by keeping it out of ball parks in New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland, baseball will still have college football to contend with as long as it insists on overlapping the seasons.

The sensible solution, of course, would be for baseball to get itself out of the way—World Series and all—by October 1st.

Safety Valve Blown Off By Celebration In Cincinnati

ANOTHER GREAT GRID MACHINE AT SOUTH BEND

Elmer Layden Turns Out Mighty Edition of Notre Dame's Fighting Irish—Soft Schedule May Spoil National Title Hopes.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 9.—It comes somewhat as a minor tragedy to thousands of Notre Dame alumni—that this year's edition of the Fighting Irish plays what appears to be its softest schedule in years.

Thus, what is potentially the best Notre Dame football team since Elmer Layden took over, can still win straight and still suffer the ignominy of not being awarded a mythical national championship.

With the exception of College of the Pacific, which provided the opening game competition, every foe to be met is a big-name opponent, but only one, possibly two, are top-flight calibre this season—Southern California and Georgia Tech.

Carnegie Tech (Illinois, Army, Navy, Iowa and Northwestern will be pointing for the Irish, of course, but each has only average material with which to back up its designs.

The Skibos, like their Pittsburgh rivals, have been de-emphasized; Illinois is a second division club in the Big Ten the two service schools are no stronger than they were a year ago and Iowa and Northwestern both are definitely weaker.

Although Layden lost 10 out of 11 starters by graduation, his 1940 club finds last year's reserves ready to take over in typical Notre Dame style.

And the fact that there are at least four sophomores threatening to crash the starting lineup any Saturday now, indicates how far the replacement situation has come along.

Lone returning starter from 1940 is Tom Gallagher at left tackle, but there are lettermen all along the front wall. George Rassas works next to Gallagher at end and Pete Kelly is the guard on that side.

Martin O'Reilly and Bob Osterman will battle all season for the center job, and while neither is an All-America, they'll more than do. John Gubanich, 160-pound right guard, looks like another Bert Metzger. Right tackle is capably handled by Cliff Brossey while Paul Lillis recuperates from a broken nose. John O'Brien deploys at the other end.

The tackle situation is exceptionally bright, with eight men going beyond the 200-pound mark.

The first-string backfield is plenty potent, with either Capt. Milt Piepul,

Cincinnati, Oct. 9.—(AP)—The safety valve that had been holding down the steam of twenty-one years blew sky-high in the staid Queen City of the West when the flash came that Cincinnati had won their first world championship since 1919 by beating Detroit Tigers in the World Series.

All through the evening, the night, and the pre-dawn hours of today Cincinnati fans threw blizzards of confetti, torn up newspapers and telephone books. Long streamers caught on the light and trolley wires.

The streets were filled up with the white foam but mostly they filled up with people. People singing, people shouting, people laughing, people dancing. People with horns and people with bells. People with pennants and people with flags. People with baseball caps and people with down hats.

Those who remember called it the greatest celebration since the Armistice.

Fullback, or Bob Saggau, left half, forming as possible All-America candidates. Saggau is a true triple-threat.

Steve Juzwik and Steve Bagarus are doing quite well in Lou Zontini's old right half slot, and Bob Harvare has taken up where Steve Sitko left off at quarter.

By all indications it is the fastest Notre Dame team that has been fielded in years and when the Irish are fast as well as bright, you've got something.

That's why Elmer Layden is uncommonly satisfied, despite the loss of talent enough for two whole teams.

GERMAN BOMBS FAIL TO DAUNT BRITISH FOLKS

Salvation Army Workers Find All Cheerful in Shelters and Dug-Outs—Takes on New Job.

"Air-raid raiders!" "There goes the siren!" It may be the middle of the night. It may be "that chill" hour before the dawn. It may be at any hour of the day. Air-raid raiders are coming and the siren sounds the alarm.

At Salvation Army district headquarters the staff springs to action. Warm uniforms are donned including the "tin" hats that protect men from falling steel splinters, and out they go—the Salvation Army workers delegated for duty as visiting chaplains to the air-raid shelters.

For this war is a different sort of war. Last war—Great War Number One—was a trench war, a war of attrition, a war of man-power, of guns and bayonets, of shot and shell. This war is as it has developed of recent weeks, is a war of nerves, a war of aeroplanes and bombs dropping from the sky, a war of men engaged in carrying on the vital business of the country—civilians. And to these bomb-threatened masses in the shelters and dug-outs of London and other English cities, the Salvation Army is carrying comfort and good cheer just as it did for the soldiers in the trenches.

Reports reaching Salvation Army headquarters here in Canada show that no braver people could be found anywhere than these British mothers and fathers who take their children from their warm beds in the middle of the night and hurry them through the darkness to the bomb-shelters to which they have been assigned. There cramped and crowded into the space of one small brick cell or steel wigwag, or it may be the basement of some large building where a thousand others are seeking refuge—these families spend the long weary hours. But they maintain a wonderful cheerfulness throughout. Overhead the planes drone high in the sky while the boom of explosions and the crash of falling masonry rumble from perhaps near by, perhaps in the distance.

The nature of the shelters provided by the authorities varies. The Salvation Army divides them up among its workers, and by a system of regular rounds endeavour to cover them all.

Perhaps the first folks to be visited, when the siren sounds its warning and a Salvation Army air-raid chaplain starts out, is one of several brick shelter huts erected for the purpose in a school yard. It is furnished with concrete seats and the people bring their own cushions, blankets and rugs, ready to make themselves comfortable as possible for several hours. Overhead for all the rest of the night. An oil lamp gives a faint light. The Salvation Army visitor enters and spreads good cheer. Families from the neighborhood are clustered in the same spaces they occupied on previous alarms. There is laughter and good nature. Though the novelty has worn off, British hearts are still undaunted. The Salvation Army man is greeted like a friend. Here in this corner a father, mother and seven children are ensconced. A baby insists on sitting up to see the visitor. A crippled boy in a wheel chair smiles happily, as he catches sight of the Salvation Army man. A young mother exhibits her baby sleeping in a clothes basket. To all these the Salvation Army chaplain is a cheerful, helpful friend. They are glad to see him, and they say so. He radiates confidence. If there is trouble he is there to help, comfort and advise.

After the school yard the next visit may be to a row of steel shelters erected in the street. The entrances protected by sandbags or bricks. Perhaps a candle fixed to a bolt in a girder gives forth light enough to reveal white-washed walls, old couches and chairs, stools and rag mats. Some of these shelters are decorated with flowers.

The entrance may be screened with a curtain of sack or matting. There are rows of such shelters, and the Salvation Army man visits every one, each containing forty or more persons.

Next call may be down in the basement of a big store cleared to accommodate a thousand people. All around the walls they are resting on rugs and pillows, or sitting playing cards, while in a corner the youngest element pass time in singing. Everywhere the Salvation Army representatives receive a smiling welcome and hearty salutations. "Gran," aged eighty-eight and now an invalid in a chair, is as bright as the youngest. A young woman has overexerted herself hurrying to the shelter and is now in a fainting condition. The Salvation Army chaplain attends her until she recovers.

And so it goes—steel shelters, brick shelters, store basements, Anderson shelters, dugouts—they are all systematically visited in turn by the Salvation Army. Two, three, four or more hours pass in this service, and then at last comes the signal, "all clear." The raid is over for the time being. Sleepy, dishevelled but brave and irrepressibly cheerful, the people stream from their shelters to their homes, carrying their children and their cushions and blankets. To the Salvation Army chaplain comes many a "God bless you" as they pass, and many people stop to shake hands.

It is a new task assumed by the Salvation Army, this of shepherding the civilian population undergoing bombardment from the air. It is an addition to the work done for the soldiers. But it is done conscientiously and systematically and the heroic people of Great Britain, tried as never before, are grateful for it.

North America is inhabited by approximately 80,000 different kinds of insects, 10,000 of which are injurious pests.
