WOULD NOT PAY FOR NAVAL DEFENCE

Sir Frederick Borden Thinks Canada Should Develop Her Land Defences.

MONROE DOCTRINE SAVES US

Professor Leacock Believes That if Canada Depends on U. S. Navy it Should Contribute to it.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Ottawa, February 24.—Sir Frederick Borden put himself on record last night as being opposed to any contribution from Canada for the purpose of the naval defence of the Empire.

The occasion was the fourth university extension lecture by Prof. Leacock, of McGill University, his subject being naval defence, winding up with an earnest appeal for Canada to bear her part in this respect.

In the discussion which followed, General Lake, Col. Irwin, Mr. J. G. A. Creighton, Mr. James Smellie, and others took part. Sir Frederick Borden said in approaching a question of this kind the political aspect could not be overlooked. It met them at the very threshold. It was not a question whether the people of Canada were willing to pay their fair share towards the maintenance of the British navy. It was a question whether the people of Canada were going to tax themselves and the money to be expended by a committee in which Canadians would have no part. He did not think the people of Canada were prepared to take that step, nor did he think they could be charged with niggardliness because they assumed that attitude. In considering the defence of the empire they could not separate naval defence from land defence. They were absolutely inseparable. Then if that proposition were sound, was it not possible by the fair understanding between the different parts of the Empire that one portion should pay more attention to the army and land defence while another part would devote more attention to naval defence. Canada for this reason was doing her share for the defence of the empire by strengthening herself on land and by developing her wonderful resources at an expenditure of millions of dollars.

Dissenting from the view taken by the lecturer on the Munroe doctrine, Sir Frederick said that behind that doctrine were the guns and warships of the United States, and the whole power of eighty million souls. Surely, if that doctrine meant anything it meant that Canada was safe from foreign aggression. It meant that neither Germany nor Russia, nor any other foreign power would for one moment, whether England were strong or weak be permitted by the United States to place a hostile foot in this country. That might not be the law of nations, but it was the law of power and there was no disguising the fact that the United States had told the world that that was their policy. Before Canada contributed to the British navy she should be given representation of some kind in an imperial council which would have the power to declare war and determine what was to be done with the warships to the cost of the construction of which Canada was to be called upon to contribute.

Prof. Leacock, in reply, said if Canada was going to depend on the United States for her defence then in common decency she should contribute her share of the present per capita tax of $1.20, paid by the people of the United States for the maintenance of their navy.

VOTE IN BRITISH HOUSE.

Chinese in South Africa Amendment Hopelessly Beaten.

London, February 24. — An amendment to the address in reply to the King's speech at the opening of Parliament, expressing regret at the fact that the Government had brought the reputation of the country into contempt by describing the employment of Chinese in South Africa as slavery, was defeated in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon by 416 to 91 votes. The debate, which lasted two days, developed considerable bitterness.

Joseph Chamberlain and other members of the Opposition declared the Government had ridden into power on false pretences. Mr. Chamberlain asserted that he had been informed that the mining magnates had approved the Government's proposals, which could not be carried out for several years.

Premier Campbell-Bannerman here interrupted Mr. Chamberlain, saying the statement was false. Chancellor of the Exchequer Asquith said that, though he would like to do so, the Government could not take a wet sponge and wipe the hateful ordinance off the slate. However, no new licenses for the importation of coolies would be issued, the ordinance would be amended, and all coolies desiring to leave South Africa would be repatriated at the cost of the Imperial Exchequer. When a responsible Government is established in the Transvaal it would have full power to determine whether to detain the Chinese. But the conditions would be subject to the assent of the Imperial Government.

An Important Announcement Made in the Quebec Legislature.

M. PREVOST IN NEW YORK

Many Members Absent—Important Bills Involving Public and Private Interests.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Press Gallery of Legislature, Quebec, February 24.—Yesterday's sitting of the Assembly lasted but little more than half an hour. It was dull and uninteresting, though considerable business was disposed of without any debate.

Many members of the House were in Maisonneuve at the election, and others had left for Montreal by the early afternoon trains, including Messrs. Leblanc and Tellier.

Pursuant to understanding, none of the Government measures on the order paper were, therefore, taken up, though Mr. Prevost, who left last night for New York to attend the banquet of the Canadian Camp there, as a guest of honor, gave notice that he would introduce his new fish and game resolutions on Wednesday next.

Mr. Leblanc's question on the order paper regarding the next sale of timber limits, was answered in his absence by Hon. Mr. Turgeon, and elicited the information that the next sale of these limits would occur in June; that they were situated in the agencies of the Upper Ottawa, St. Maurice, St. Charles, Saguenay, Lake St. John, Bonaventure and Rimouski; that their extent was about ten thousand square miles, and that they would soon be advertised. Mr. Turgeon also said that the Government had passed no orders in Council respecting the classification of public lands.

Hon. Mr. McCorkill answered a number of questions of more or less importance put by Mr. Perrault.

He said that the total amount of the tax paid by the banks doing business in the province to the Government, based on the paid up capital, was $33,757, and that the Government did not intend to introduce a bill to change the law so as to have a uniform tax for all commercial corporations and companies based on the amount of paid up capital.

A few returns were ordered on motion of different members, and the following bills were read a third time and passed: An act respecting school taxes in the city of Montreal and the school debentures of the said city; act to amend the charter of the city of St. Hyacinthe; act to amend the charter of the Quebec and James Bay Company; Legislative Council amendments to bill respecting the Montefiore Club; Legislative Council amendments to bill to repeal the act 23 Victoria, Chapter 145, and amendments thereto incorporating the St. Bridget's Asylum Association of Quebec, and also further to amend the act to incorporate the Congregation of the Catholics of Quebec, speaking the English language, 18 Vic., Chapter 228; legislative council amendments to bill to amend the acts relating to the Montreal Street Railway Co.

INJURED BY SHRAPNELL.

Children Playing With Charged Shell Seriously Hurt.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Belfast, February 24.—Two children were seriously injured here by the explosion of a 14-lb shrapnel shell. A little boy, while playing on the river bank took a shrapnel shell out of the water. Another was recovered, and then a number of children began to play with them, when one of the shells exploded. A boy had a portion of his thigh blown away, and a girl who was skipping a dozen yards away, was also injured, but the other children escaped unhurt. The force of the explosion broke many windows and holes were made in the walls of adjoining property.

It is believed that the shells were brought from South Africa by a reservist.

WANTS THREE WARSHIPS.

France Will Build Three Larger Than Any Others She Possesses.

Paris, February 24. — Minister of Marine Thomson, in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, announcedn his intention to ask Parliament to build three battleships, each of 18,000 tons, which will be the largest French ships yet constructed.

A POLITICAL FIRE-EATER.

(The Toronto News.)

Capt. Whitney, R.N., commanding H.M.S. Ontario, is another Cochrane. His proper place would be pacing the bridge embowered in the smoke of battle, giving orders in a stentorian voice and cursing the enemy for an aggregation of cowardly rascals. On landing expeditions he would be particularly at home leading heroic forlorn hopes against strongly fortified positions. It is somewhat disappointing to have such a giant in attack transferred to the Home Station. Here he should sit idle awaiting the enemy's forward movement, and in the meantime give up his quarter-deck as a rendezvous for polite society, and allow dancing to the strains of the squadron band in the waist of the ship.

When an attack is really made and the battleship Ross delivers a few well-aimed shells, Capt. Whitney is in a fearful state. "Clear decks for action," he shouts. "Double shot your four-point sevens." "Look lively now, get the bow-chaser into action!" "Man the tops." He fires off both broadsides at once, runs out to sea after the Ross in spite of the fact that he is hampered with barnacles and can never catch her, waves his dress sword, roars orders to Flag Lieutenant Willoughby, and never ceases until all his guns are red-hot and $50,000 worth of ammunition is wasted.

One would imagine that a Home Squadron Captain would confine himself to absolutely necessary defence and would save his heavy shell for an emergency—say, an attempt to "cut out." But Whitney, R.N., is not that type of man.

Our only fear is that some day he will swell and swell with rage until he bursts into a thousand fragments, and the good ship Ontario will have to secure another commander.

ROUVIER MAKES AN APPEAL

Prench Premier Asks the Deputies Not to Force a Debate Just Now.

MOROCCO QUESTION AGAIN

First Feeling of Depression at Algeciras Over Germany's Attitude is Wearing Off.

Paris, February 24.—Premier Rouvier made an earnest appeal to the Chamber of Deputies yesterday not to force a debate at this moment, as it might embarrass the interests of the country. Later, the Premier added, when the conference at Algeciras terminated or was suspended, he would fully discuss the question.

M. Rouvier's reference to the possible suspension of the conference caused surprise. The orators yielded.

M. Jaures, the Socialist leader, declared that France demanded to know the real situation, of which the people are ignorant. The conference had attained nothing, he continued, except the possibilities of a conflict. M. Jaures concluded with saying that it would be piteous were the two great nations to fall on each other over the miserable question of Morocco.

M. Rouvier, after warning M. Jaures of the effect his utterances would have in Germany, declared that the Government had the entire support of the country. France, he said, was deeply desirous of peace, but of peace on condition that her rights and dignity be safeguarded.

Premier Rouvier laid the Moroccan situation before the Cabinet yesterday.

ALGECIRAS HAS HOPE.

Algeciras, February 24. — The first feeling of depression over Germany's rejection of the French proposals is gradually wearing off and a slightly more hopeful feeling is observable among the delegates. This is due largely to the amicable spirit shewn between the French and German delegates, during the formal debates on the Moroccan Bank question. The discussion will be continued to-day, when an effort will be made to draft a final bank project reconciling the two views. Strong influences operate to induce the Germans to recognize the syndicate of French bankers who furnished the first loan to Morocco and who seek thereby to obtain a preferred position in the state.

SOLUTION HINTED AT.

London, February 24.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company, from Gibraltar, says it is stated in Spanish official circles that the Algeciras conference will ask Spain to provide officers for the Moroccan police, and it is confidently asserted that France and Germany will assent to this plan.

Truth Will Out

Barnum's remarks about fooling the people are well known. "You cannot fool all the people all the time." And for a good business policy you cannot afford to fool any people any of the time. Big mark down prices, Premiums and advertising are no use to build a business, unless they are genuine. Now the fact of us being still in business selling Men's and Boys' Clothing for so many years, and notwithstanding so many others having gone into that line of business and gone out of it, and also that our business in these lines increased last year, is surely a proof that we are selling the best goods all round that money can buy, and while a few customers may try other dealers, they always come back and trade with us.

It is rather bold for us to say that we have the best made Ready-to-put-on Suits and Overcoats for men, but we believe it's true, because we buy the tweeds, worsteds, etc. Our Custom Cutter cuts up a few Suits at a time, and we keep our Custom Tailors busy all the time making up these goods the same as made to order, with the best linings and interlinings. They are not low priced suits—run from $15.00 to $22.00; but they prove their value in the wear by retaining their shape and always looking well. Come in and inspect them.

Also Custom Made Good Trousers, in all sizes, ready to put on, for men.

KING EDWARD WILL ALWAYS LIMP

Report Rendered An American Paper States He Has Broken the Tendon Achilles.

New York, February 24.—According to the London correspondent of the World, King Edward can never walk again without the aid of a cane.

The King's fall while shooting in Windsor forest last November resulted in breaking a tendon Achilles.

The World correspondent states this on indisputable authority. It was announced at first that the King had sprained his ankle.

The King is sixty-five years old and nature even with surgical assistance cannot completely repair the broken tendon Achilles of a man of that age, the correspondent avers. Leaning on a stick, King Edward walks very slowly and with a pronounced limp.

His Majesty leaned heavily on a crutch-handled, stout malacca cane when he opened parliament. He could not arise from the throne until the cane was handed to him. He wears an orthopaedic instrument inside his boot to support his ankle.

Otherwise the King looks to be in good health, but is planning for a quiet restful stay at Biarritz before his Mediterranean cruise.

Books of the Week Reviewed; Old Houses of Edinburgh.

By George Murray, B. A., Oxon., F. R. S. C.

(1) Old Houses in Edinburgh. Drawn by Bruce J. Home. With an Introduction by Professor C. Baldwin Brown. First Series. (Edinburgh: Published at John Knox's House by William J. Hay.)

(2) Scottish Life and Character. Painted by T. Dobson, and Described by W. Sanderson. (London: A. and C. Black; Toronto; Copp, Clark Co.)

So long ago as the spring of 1905 we review the first two numbers of "Old Houses in Edinburgh." We have now before us seven more numbers, which complete the First Series of the work. The Second Series will also consist of nine numbers, and when bound will make two handsome volumes. The ninth number gives in detail the whole contents of the First Series, and the work is, by permission, respectfully dedicated to the Right Honorable the Lord Provost, the Magistrates, and Council of the City of Edinburgh."

The second volume on our list does not deal with the inanimate stone or bricks and mortar of a venerable city, but with something which will appeal to many millions of human hearts, "Scottish Life and Character." Mr. Sanderson, who dates his "copy" from Glasgow, does not profess that the scenes presented in his pages give a complete survey of social life in Scotland, but claims for them that in their subject-matter they are typical of the Scottish nation. It is the humble, as Lord Beaconsfield once said, that is more abiding in national characteristics, and this thought is an ample justification for Mr. Sanderson's twenty articles. We regret that we have no space for quotations from some of these well-written and sympathetic papers. The twenty full-page illustrations in color reproduced from Mr. Dobson's paintings, can scarcely be praised too highly, and the names of the owners of these paintings who have, at considerable inconvenience, kindly placed them at the disposal of artist, author and publisher, are gratefully recorded in the list of the twenty illustrations. They form a gallery of well-selected pictures which will delight the aesthetic sense of all true lovers of art. The Messrs. Black are to be congratulated on their publication of a handsome volume, which does credit to all whose names are associated with it.

King Lear. Edited by Charlotte Porter and Helen A. Clarke. (N. Y.: Crowell and Co.)

We are delighted to receive a new volume of this carefully edited edition, which goes back to and reproduces the famous First Folio text of 1623—the one that gives Shakespeare's Plays in the original spelling and punctuation. As this is the only reprinting of the First Folio obtainable in handy form, and is issued from the famous De Vinne Press, it ought to obtain as wide a circulation as its predecessors in the same series. The trouble is that many present-day readers, who have become accustomed to the modernized editions of Shakespeare, are afraid of stumbling at the many changes that, on insufficient grounds they are afraid of meeting. It may, therfore, be as well here to mention the few formidable changes that they are doomed to meet. They will find a long "f" for "s;" the interchangeable "i" and "j," "u" and "v;" an occasional "y." for "th;" and one or two slight abbreviations used in the old printing. But to balance these trifling differences they have the text collected and published in 1623, as a tribute to the dead poet's memory, by Hemminge and Condell, acting as Shakespeare's friends and "fellows." They have, in fact, the text nearest to Shakespeare's stage, to Shakespeare's ownership, and to Shakespeare's authorities.

The two ladies, who have now reproduced for our benefit several of the undying plays, have in the case of "King Lear" followed out the play that they originally drew up for themselves. Thus, the modern equivalents of special words used in a different sense from that now common, are given near by in the side margin of the page; though the bulk of archaic words, together with the pronunciation of proper names, or of words affecting the metre, and explanations of old grammatical forms are relegated to the Glossary, which seems very full. One instance will suffice of an explained grammatical form. It is the last entrance but one in the Glossary. "You were best:" Act I.IV. 99; i.e., "It were best for you. Compare III., IV.; 106, and 2 Henry IV., I., 2, 105, the pronoun "you," originally in the dative has become nominative. The notes, introduction, glossary, list of various readings and selection of valuable criticism of the play, show that much time and labor have expended the play by the two industrious ladies. One or other of them has been guilty of a slight blunder on p. 133, which should be corrected in the proof. She writes: "The germ idea is due to Halliwell; but fortunately there is in this case too little data to furnish matter for theorizing." The writer evidently thought "data" to be a Latin feminine singular noun of the first declension, whereas the word is neuter plural of the second declension, (from "datum," a thing given) and means known or admitted facts or truths. "Humanum est errare," and it is also "humanum condonare."

The Little Heiress. By Margaret B. Clarke. (Thomas Nelson and Sons: London and New York.)

A dying woman's last words to her husband "in sunny California where she had been so happy" were: "Promise me that you will take our little May to England when she is old enough, and put her into a good school. * * * one thing more: promise me that you will never tell her our secret unless there comes a time when she must know." Ten years later, Benjamin P. Oates, orange-grower and millionaire, stood with his daughter May on the deck of a Cunard steamer bound for Liverpool. Four brightly colored illustrations add interest to the story, which relates the adventures of "The Little Heiress" who, in accordance with her mother's express desire, goes to school in England, and becomes a great favorite with all her young school-mates. May was then fifteen years old, and Stoneyhurst Hall, the name of the school chosen for her, suited her admirably. There was no reason why it should not, for it was well and tastefully furnished— good coloring and good furniture throughout making an harmonious whole. Miss Carey, the head-mistress at once took May's fancy, and had it not been for a girl named Flora Tyrrell, the Californian would have been perfectly happy. But we must not tell tales out of school. All girls will enjoy Miss Clarke's vivacious story, and though we must be reticent about the secret mentioned by May's mother, we may be permitted to quote the final words of the tale: "So May and Alec stood together in the sunshine at the beginning of a new life, with noble aims and high ideals before them, strong in mutual love and trust—not lovers only, but friends tried and true * * so each felt, and braved the future, believing happiness to be no fairy-tale, but a blessed reality: for 'love is heaven, and heaven is love.'

Notes and Queries.

A Letter and a Reply to It.

"A Chicagoan Friend," in the course of a letter to me, writes: "Some time ago, you spoke in "Notes and Queries" of some clever renderings from the fables of old Aesop by an Englishman named Sharp. They were entitled "Old Friends in a New Dress," and you praised them highly. I am desirous of obtaining a revision of "The Fox and the Crow," written by an American—Mr. Guy W. Carryl—and called "The Sycophantic Fox and the Gullible Raven"; but I forget where I met with it. Can you help me?"

Guy Wetmore Carryl, who was born in New York in 1873, and graduated at Columbia University in 1895, now lives in Paris, where he is the representative of the great Harper firm. He is a frequent contributor to the magazines, and favorably known as the author of "Fables for the Frivolous," in which volume the verses referred to by my correspondent may be found.

THE SYCOPHANTIC FOX AND THE GULLIBLE RAVEN.

A Raven sat upon a tree,
And not a word he spoke, for
His beak contained a bit of Brie,
Or, maybe, it was Roquefort
We'll make it any kind you please,
At all events it was a cheese.

Beneath the tree's umbrageous limb,
A hungry fox sat smiling;
He saw the raven watching him,
And spake in words beguiling.
"I admire," said he, "ton beau plumage,"
(The which was simply "persiflage.")

Two things there are—no doubt, you know—
To which a fox is used;
A rooster that is bound to crow,
A crow that's bound to roost,
And whichsoever he espies,
He tells the most unblushing lies.

"Sweet fowl!" he said, "I understand
You're more than merely natty,
I hear you sing to beat the band,
And Adelina Patti.
Pray, render with your liquid tongue
A bit from 'Gotterdammerung.'"

This subtle speech was aimed to please
The crow, and it succeeded:
He thought no bird in all the trees
Could sing as well as he did.
In flattery completely doused
He gave the "Jewel Song" from "Faust."

But gravitation's law, of course,
As Isaac Newton showed it,
Exerted on the cheese a force,
And elsewhere soon bestowed it.
In fact, there is no need to tell
What happened when to earth it fell.

I wish to add that when the bird
Took in the situation,
He said one brief, emphatic word,
Unfit for publication.
The fox was greatly startled, but
He only sighed, and answered "Tut:"

The Moral is: A fox is bound
To be a shameless sinner,
And also: When the cheese comes round,
You know it's after dinner.
But (what is only known to few),
The fox is after dinner, too!

The moral in a new edition of Aesop (Moffat and Co., N.Y.), which is now before me, is: "He who listens to the music of flattery must expect to pay the pipers."

Meaning of the Noun "Abilgail."

"Domina" (Westmount) asks me in a polite note: why a lady's maid, or waiting-maid, is often, in novels, called an Abigail.

A reference to the 25th chapter of the First Book of Samuel, will show that Abigail was the beautiful wife of Nabal, a wealthy owner of 3,000 sheep and 1,000 goats, who was, however, "churlish and evil in his doings," and is described in verse 17, as "Such a son of Belial that a man cannot speak to him."

When David sent ten young men to greet him kindly, and asked Nabal to "give them whatsoever came to his hand," the churl imperiously refused. "David said unto his men, 'Gird ye on every man his sword,'" and prepared to destroy everything that pertained to "the son of Belial." It was then that his wife Abigail, "a woman of good understanding, and of a beautiful countenance," took upon herself, unknown to Nabal, to supply David and his followers with ample provisions, and succeeded in appeasing his anger. "Ten days after the Lord smote Nabal, that he died," and then "David sent, and communed with Abigail, to take her to him to wife."

When Abigail addresses David she in all cases calls herself his "handmaid," and even went so far as to say in verse 41: "Behold, let thine handmaid be a servant to wash the feet of the servants of my lord." She became David's wife, and bare him a son, who is called Chileab, in 2 Samuel III., 3, but Daniel, in 1 Chronicles, III., 1.

The name of Nabal's widow received an additional significance from the fact that a well-known lady, Abigail Hill (afterwards Mrs. Masham), was a waiting-woman of Queen Anne, who finally by her intriguing supplanted the Duchess of Marlborough in the good graces of her sovereign.

"The Green Little Shamrock of Ireland."

"Shamrock" writes: "Will you kindly favor me with the words, through the medium of the "Star" of "The Dear Little Shamrock"?

The following song, written in 1806, by Andrew Cherry, and entitled "The Green Little Shamrock of Ireland," is probably the poem that my correspondent wishes to have.

Editor of "Notes and Queries."

There's a dear little plant that grows in our Isle.
'Twas St. Patrick himself, sure, that set it;
And the sun on his labor with pleasure did smile,
And with dew from his eye often wet it.
It thrives through the bog, through the brake, and the mireland,
And its name is the dear little shamrock of Ireland.
The sweet little shamrock, the dear little shamrock,
The sweet little, green little shamrock of Ireland.

This dear little plant still grows on our land,
Fresh and fair as the daughters of Erin,
Whose smiles can bewitch, whose eyes can command,
In what climate they chance to appear in;
For they shine through the bog, through the brake and the mireland,
Just like their own dear little shamrock of Ireland—
The sweet little shamrock, the dear little shamrock,
The sweet little, green little shamrock of Ireland.

This dear little plant that springs from our soil,
When its three little leaves are extended,
Betokens that each for the other should toil,
And ourselves by ourselves be befriended;
And still through the bog, the brake and the mireland,
From one root should branch, like the shamrock of Ireland—
The sweet little shamrock, the dear little shamrock,
The sweet little, dear little shamrock of Ireland.

A Strange Request.

W. C. S. writes: "Would you, for argument's sake, kindly publish in your question and answer column, the correct dates of each month on which the first days of spring, summer, autumn and winter fall?

As these dates, especially in Canada, seem to vary every year, so far as I have noticed, I cannot comply with the request of W. C. S. But I shall be happy to hear from any correspondent who thinks he knows.

An Unpublished Letter.

The experience of the good ship Discovery (an auxiliary steam barque) making the voyage from London to James's Bay, summer of 1905, as related by one of the crew in a letter to a friend in this city.

We started from London on the 15th June, 1905, and had a very fair passage to the ice, which we made on the 14th July. On the 18th we got within 18 miles of Resolution Island, found the straits jammed from shore to shore with ice, the pack came out on us and we had to steam out before it, to keep the ship from being beset. When it cleared up, we found we were nearly 100 hundred miles off the land. Then I worked north and came in on Resolution again, some 15 miles off. Straits still jammed up, we dodged about for two days, hoping the ice might open. The ice did open up, so the captain saw that this was the chance and put her at it. At night the ice began to race, and then closed like a rat trap; the wind after this was from the southeast. We drove in the pack from Resolution to the Upper Savage Islands, passing large bergs quite close. We got into the open water on the 10th August. Then we got along all right till we were within 140 miles of Bear Island, when we met another large body of ice. We saw the French steamer, which turned out to be the Pouvoir, on the edge of the ice. We took the ice and came across the Stork sticking in the pack. We gave Captain Ford some provisions he wanted, then we went along boring through heavy ice. At dark we were almost clear, got clear next morning, passed Bear Island at 2 a.m. on the 24th August and arrived off Charlton on the 26th, got into the harbor on the 27th, started discharging on the 28th and was ready for sea on the 7th September. We had more ice on our way out, we were 34 hours in the ice, then we had strong head winds and passed Mansfield Island on the 15th September, then we were in the ice for over 24 hours from the Lower Savage Islands out beyond Resolution Island, we got out of the straits on the 19th September, and though all our troubles were over, but they were only beginning. On the morning of the 20th it was blowing a hard gale from the southeast, which lasted for two days, afterwards we had nothing but gale after gale, sometimes lasting for four days and a sea like to swallow us. I am sorry to say we lost a fine young sailor, he fell into the sea from the main topsail yard. It was a very bad night, dark as pitch, and a tremendous sea running. At lost we got home on the 3rd October and you may be sure we were not sorry.

Majority and Plurality.

J. H. writes as follows:—An election was held recently in a fraternal society in this city under the following regulations: The candidate receiving the majority of ballots cast shall be declared elected."

"Should there be no choice of any officer at any ballot, the name of the candidate receiving the lowest number of votes shall be dropped from the list and a new ballot shall be taken."

In the first ballot there were thirty-three ballots cast. A received 15, B received 11, and C received 7. According to the above rule, was A elected, or did he require to receive seventeen ballots?

A received a plurality of votes, not a majority, and, according to the regulation quoted above, was not legally elected.

LOST FIVE DAYS IN A DORY OFF NOVA SCOTIA WITH A MANIAC

Terrible Experience of Captain Charles Matheson off the Nova Scotia Fishing Grounds

Alone in a dory upon a limitless ocean for one hundred and two hours with a youth whom hunger, thirst and exposure drove raving mad,—such was the experience of Capt. Charles Matheson of Boston off Brown's Banks, a Nova Scotia fishing ground. His companion was Charles Hemmeon a youthful Nova Scotian and both were trawlers, late of the fishing schooner Quonopowitt.

In the beginning of it, they saw a little world made up of a limited area of green sea and a heavy yellow fog. Their dory was full of fish and the labor of trawling was all done, but there was more serious work at hand. These two men were anxious to return to their fellows, but they were unable to find the other little world inhabited by their vessel. They studied the rim of the universe with great care, but they could not see her. So far as they were concerned she did not exist.

So the younger man threw out the anchor and made himself restful in the bow and watched the waves undulating lazily out of the clouds of mist, into the small world, and then into the mists again. Eventually his pipe went out and he lifted his head abruptly, regarded the other man stupidly, and remarked that he had nearly fallen asleep. A moment later he said he guessed he would doze awhile, since there were no signs of the schooner.

"Keep awake," answered the old man sharply. "You'll take cold if you sleep in this dampness."

But Hemmeon protested that he would sleep only a short time. The other man commanded him to sprinkle some water on his face and swing his arms vigorously. The older man had been to sea during the past 30 years; the younger man only 3 years. So the latter obediently sprinkled his face with the cold brine and exercised, and presently he said he was wide awake again. He asked the old man if he had ever been lost in a fog.

"No," Matheson replied gruffly.

FOG SHUT OUT WORLD.

The younger man gazed from rim to rim of the little world, and then knitted his brows and observed, curiously:

"What hope is there if you are lost in a fog?"

"Oh," snapped the older man. "Don't cross your bridges until you come to them. Wait till you're lost, my boy."

Hemmeon said the fog was growing thicker. The old man corrected him with considerable sternness. He said night was coming. He told the younger man to swing his arms whenever he felt drowsy and cold. Several times during the early part of the evening the youth rose in the bow and exercised; later, he lay still so long that his dorymate grabbed an oar and prodded him and ordered him peremptorily to keep awake.

Always they listened for the foghorn, and the youth often wondered what had become of the schooner. But the night grew older and older, and the cold penetrated through their oilskins. Occasionally the youth swore.

Morning dawned, raw and thick with fog. Hemmeon complained of hunger and thirst. He kept looking across the undulating lake, asking fretfully if the fog would ever lift. He said that the cook on the schooner was probably getting a feed ready, and he remarked that the feed would go mighty well. He felt of his stomach, and then he asked the older man if he, too, was pretty hungry.

"Well, I could eat," said Matheson, grimly. "But keep your ears open for the foghorn, and don't think of grub. We ought to hear that thing by and by. And maybe the fog will blow away.

FOG LIFTS.

Matheson was relating a famous experience of life on the Nancy Jones, when he felt a sudden coolness on his forehead. He pulled off his mitts and wet his finger and held his hand up.

"Breeze blowing up," he remarked, cheerfully.

The youth rose in the bow and tried the same experiment. Then he forgot his hunger and looked hither and thither with renewed interest. He observed many times that if the wind ended the fog perhaps they could see something of the schooner. The breeze continued to increase the coolness of their foreheads and to revive their energy. Both men became very optimistic.

Matheson lit his pipe and chatted amiably. His gravity was ancient history, and as the breeze gained strength the fog began to lose its density; it changed to a creamy yellow, then the creamy yellow evolved a very light yellow, and after a time the very light yellow became only a haze. This haze lasted for an hour or more. And as it grew thinner the oceanic lake grew larger and larger. Eventually it assumed gigantic proportions. The men suddenly realized that they couldn't define its boundaries; it had become the limitless ocean. All the time the two men in the dory strained their eyes to detect the hull or even the masts of the schooner. They looked unendingly from port to starboard.

Then they rowed, rowed, rowed, in a heart-breaking search for the Quonopowitt. The wind developed into a 45-mile-an-hour gale, and the men rowed very little and bailed frequently, for the waves boiled angrily and from time to time splashed over the sides of the dory.

The younger man became very weary and hungry and sleepy. Now and then his head drooped on his breast and lay there until the man in the stern prodded him roughly with an oar. Whereupon the young man slowly awoke, and showed much anger. Sometimes his friend spoke to him brusquely and sometimes he pleaded with him. The young man continued to complain. He said he was hungry enough to eat leather. He wished to eat some of the remaining fish in the bottom of the boat. The older man ordered him to leave them alone, and to make certain that the youth complied, he picked them up, one by one, and threw them overboard. The young man said that he had already eaten one, and when the other man scolded him he laughed loudly.

BOY GOES MAD.

But by and by the laugh became a shriek, and the complaints incoherance. To check the delirium, the older man splashed cold water on the burning face. These ministrations restored his friend to temporary sanity. But presently the old man was so busy trying to manipulate the dory in the turbulent sea, that he couldn't give much attention to the youth, and then, above the wailing of the wind and water, he heard a disorderly clamor. And once in a while the youth reached forward and grabbed him by the arm and demanded his supper. He accused Matheson of keeping his food from him.

During the night the storm tossed the dory about like a piece of wreckage, and sometimes it amused itself by deluging its occupants, and once, when Hemmeon was standing theatrically in the bow and expostulating with his companion, a wave descended upon the boat and careened it so far that the raving boy lost his balance and toppled over the side. Matheson jumped for him and caught him by the color of his jacket, and, when the next wave came along, he yanked him into the boat again. The young man was no longer delirious; he was as limp as a dead man. His face was pallid and parboiled.

After many hours the boy moved restlessly and rose to his feet, to talk incoherently and give aimless assistance to his companion. All the afternoon and early evening of this day the youth sputtered and fumed. And at last began to talk about his home in Nova Scotia, and carried on a long conversation with his mother and father. He told them that he had gone out fishing with a man named Matheson, and that this man, by reason of some enmity for him, had eaten all the food and drunk all the water in the boat. He said that he suffered so much from hunger and thirst that finally he wished to jump into the sea.

MANIAC ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

Whereupon he stood up and screamed a long denunciation to the man with the board and bucket, and, when Matheson ordered him to sit down, he flung himself over the side of the boat.

The older man dropped his board and bucket and jumped for the lunatic. The latter fell into the water, but his friend had him firmly by the tail of his smock and dragged him back into the dory. For a long time the youth lay apparently dead. Matheson tried to receive him, but the frequent deluges of water interrupted him. He collapsed automatically for the remainder of the night.

In the morning the storm lessened, but the waves still tumbled over one another in a threatening manner, so that the older man busied himself in steering the boat and in bailing.

To add to their bitterness, schooners and an occasional steamer made their appearance from time to time; they would raise a signal and shout frantically, only to see with wild despairing eyes the beacons of hope disappear again. The long hours dragged by and Hemmeon began again to talk of his cruelty of a man named Matheson. The latter tried to quiet him, but the mad youth glared out of his burning eyes and threatened to kill him. After a time he crept along the bottom of the boat and fumbled about in the water until he found a pitchfork. And then he sprang up and stood over the older man, brandishing the pitchfork. Matheson moved quickly also. He tried to seize the youth's wrist; Hemmeon laughed and jumped backward, nearly swamping the boat. Matheson pleaded with his friend. The youth screamed with laughter, and before the laugh ended, made a sudden plunge with the pitchfork. Once Matheson missed the wrist and barely dodged the prongs of the fork; the next time he gripped the mad youth's wrist and wrenched the pitchfork away.

LUNATIC RESCUED AGAIN.

Hemmeon, in struggling to regain it, staggered and fell overboard. The older man leaped for him just in time again to catch the tail of his smock, but the wet garment slipped out of his grasp and the lunatic went down into the brine. Matheson clutched for his companion frantically, and at last caught him by the hair of the head. He was barely able to drag him into the boat again. The effort left Matheson exhausted. For a long time the youth again lay in the bottom of the dory like a corpse, and his friend thought he was a corpse, but he couldn't try to revive him because another wave came into the boat and compelled him to resume bailing.

Presently his arched figure suddenly straightened. His haggered eyes opened wide and stared tensely into the night. Far off to the starboard he thought he observed a change in the blackness. Gradually the misty yellow reflection became a number of twinkling stars, and later a continuous discharge of sparks. The trawler shouted to the still figure in the bottom of the dory:

"It's a steamer! She's bearin' down on us!"

At once he reached for the fork and repeated his frenzied signalling. The steamer came nearer and nearer, but at last she approached no more, but began to recede. Then Matheson concluded to signal no longer; he sat down in the boat and sobbed tearlessly.

PICKED UP BY FISHERMEN.

The youth revived during the night and sang and swore. Matheson bailed and steered the boat and kept the fork close beside him. The older man was alternatively discouraged and hopeful. He felt certain that the dory was in the path of commerce. He told the lunatic that they would see more schooners.

In the morning on the horizon appeared two steamers and three schooners, but they continued on their way unseeing. Yet at last, when Matheson figured out that the day must be saturday, he detected still another sail. He couldn't see very plainly, but he told the youth in the bottom of the boat that it was a fishing schooner. After a time he began to believe that she was drifting in a course similar to his own. He made out a number of small boats around her like a flock of busy chickens. Later he saw the boats spread out and ramble hither and thither. So he struggled to his feet and held up his signal for the last time, and waved it to and fro.

Then he saw the other dorymen wave something back and steer their boats towards him. The stimulating influence of their acknowledgement was so great that he leaped on the maudlin figure in the bow and tried to arose him to a realization of the most wonderful event in the world. The youth answered him with faint incoherencies. The boy was very pallid.

Later, on board the Flora S. Nickerson, the older rescued trawler drrank endless quantities of water. Eventually he said to his rescuers:

"What day of the week is it?"

They answered: "Saturday—Saturday afternoon. When were you lost in the fog?"

He answered: "On Tuesday—I don't remember what year."

The other fishermen counted rapidly on their fingers, and then they gasped:

"One hundred and two hours—God!"

In a nearby bunk the pallid youth babbled continuously. When they brought him into Boston, the other day, and sent him to the hospital, he was still babbling.

"Le Canada Ecclesiastique" is the title of a volume issued by the Cadieux & Derome Company. It is a volume of 475 pages, well bound, and contains information of a most interesting character on all the archdioceses, dioceses, parishes and communities of the Roman Catholic church in Canada, even in the Yukon territory. The work shows signs of careful compilation and as a book of reference for statistical purposes must prove most valuable to all interested in obtaining such information. To some extent it is a history of the province of Quebec, for it gives the dates of the establishment of the several sees, with the names of the prelates who occupied them, and these names are all connected with the history of the province.

..A Change of Profession..

BY HARVEY J. O'HIGGINS.

(Copyright by S. S. McClure & Co.)

Gorman and Hanrahan, the two probationers newly assigned to Engine Company No. —, were the first to reach the roof of the sixteen-story Mansard Building. They had the nozzle of a line of hose that was being laid from the standpipe of the top floor to wet down the north wall of the "sky-scraper;" and they came out into the night, dragging their length of the line, to face a gale of wind that took the breath from between their teeth. They struggled against it, through the darkness, toward the light of fire over the parapet; and they looked down there through the smoke, at the flames in the roof of an adjoining clothing house, twelve stories below them.

Captain Ball had followed them. "Turn on your water," he bellowed above the storm to the men behind them, and in a moment a feeble stream swelled the line of hose and gushed from the "pipe." He swore at it. "It can't spit past its chin," he said.

It strengthened slowly as they watched it. "Keep wettin' her down," he shouted in Gorman's ear. "Get up another line," he cried to the rest of the crew.

The rushing of the wind drowned their answer, but they hurried below to obey him. He remained with Gorman and Hanrahan, watching the fire spread and brighten in the roof of the clothing house. Gorman was still grinning at his "Can't spit past its chin."

They were 200 feet above the street level, and the storm, hurling itself across the huddled roofs below them, drew up a draft of heat and smoke to them, as if they were looking down a chimney. They could guess what the heat must be in the street, for across the road the woodwork of the windows of a five-story building had caught fire without the touch of any flame, and a pigmy crew were drenching it with a stream which they shot up straight from the sidewalk. Officers, the size of manikins, ran up and down in the ruddy glow, waving their little arms. The fire flowed over the roof as if it were a burning oil; and the smoke came up to them thicker, and the heat more stifling, with every breath.

Their weak stream dribbled down the wall, to dry out on the hot bricks before it touched the point of danger; and Gorman leaned over the parapet to see that the paint was beginning to peel off in great scales far below. Hanrahan and he tried hopelessly to reach these by swinging the pipe from side to side. They might as well have tried to irrigate a desert with it. Their eyes were dry and beginning to smart.

The rest of the crew came up again, dragging a second line.

Captain Ball turned to the lieutenant. "Please bringin' more lines up here," he shouted. "Windows'll be breakin'. There ain't a shutter on the whole blessed buildin'. Fireproof! She's nothin'wood; Back down to the twelfth floor. Get lines stretched to the air shaft there!"

The men went back with their hose.

"Do the best you can up here," he advised Gorman. "Chief's orders to wet her down. Look out for the air shaft."

Gorman caught the first of these instructions, but the wind carried away that last warning of danger, and the captain turned and left the two men unconscious of the catastrophe which was preparing for them.

The air shaft, in fact, was acting as a sheltered flue for the flames. It cut a deep groove into the wall of the Mansard Building at Gorman's left; and the wind, rushing into it, rose straight and, blowing up sparks like the draft of a blast furnace Gorman, watching only the wall and the windows below him, pitied the crews at work in the street. He was wishing for a quid of chewing tobacco, and he remembered with exasperation that Hanrahan would have none.

That was one of Hanrahan's social limitations—he did not chew. He had been nicknamed "Delicate Pete" by his fellow-probationers at Fire Headquarters, and Gorman—who was known as "Ball" Gorman, being the big man of his class—had despised him for the day that the instructor, having pitted them against each other in a race with scaling ladders, had then publicly compared Gorman to a baby hippopotamus in point of nimbleness, because Hanrahan had run away from him.

These two were being "broken" together with all the hard work of the company, but there was no friendship between them. They rarely spoke to each other; for Gorman had found Hanrahan's conversation all "hot air an' free silver," and had quarreled with him about this wearisome enthusiasm for politics. They continued stolidly at their work now, in the silence of mental indifference. The growing strength of the stream threatened to tear the nozzles from their hands, and they raised the hose to their shoulders to bend it in a swan's neck arch, that sent the water hissing down the bricks.

They were busied so, when they saw a bluish-green flame flash in the red of the fire in the roof below, and a belch of smoke rolled up to them on the burst and echo of an explosion. Before it reached them, they heard another roar beneath it; the cloud of smoke was split with flame, and they leapt back from the parapet as if from the crater of a volcano, and threw themselves on their faces, as the burning gases, freed by the collapse of the roof—flaring 200 feet in the air and licking up the side of the Mansard Building, to break every window glass in its upper ten stories and ignite every window curtain, window sash and "trim" in its north wall—rolled over them in a heat that nipped their ears like a frost bite, and was gone.

Gorman pinned down the pipe that was threshing about on the roof, and staggered back to the parapet with it. The heat of heat was unendurable, and he could see nothing for the smoke that blinded him with tears. He did not know that the gale was carrying a solid tongue of fire into the hidden air shaft, and that every window on that shaft was already spitting flames. He could just see that the woodwork of the window below him was afire, and called Hanrahan to train the pipe on it with him. They doused it back at once, and scattered the smoke, to see another blaze below. Then, suddenly, the stream from the hose weakened and fell short. It was plain that the crews were using the water on the lower floors.

"We're wanted down below, I guess," Hanrahan said. "We're no good up here now."

Gorman nodded. They shut off the nozzle and turned to drag the line to the door of the stairs.

They were too late. Gorman saw the blaze in the air shaft, and cried out an oath. That shaft, he knew, lit the stairway from the ground up, and cut them off from the elevator shaft in the centre of the building. They dropped the line and ran to the door. Smoke was pouring from it; and flame was behind the smoke. Gorman ran back to the hose, turned the neck guard of the helmet over his face, and, with the water to open the way for him, fought down three steps into a blaze that could not be faced. The wind blowing in the broken windows of the air shaft, brought up a smother of heat and smoke against which his pipe was useless. He was fighting a prairie fire with the stream of an extinguisher.

Hanrahan pitched forward on his shoulders. Gorman braced himself against the weight, turned to catch him under the armpits, and carried him up, half suffocated, to lay him on the roof. They were greeted by the fierce purring of the flames. Hanrahan groaned.

"Y' all right?" Gorman asked him.

He rolled his eyes. "Let's get down out of this," he gasped.

Gorman straightened up and looked around him. The doorway was the only entrance to the roof. He walked back to kick the useless hose down the staircase and shut the tin-sheathed door on the blaze below. He went to the stone railing that surmounted the cornice on the front of the building. The coping overhung the lower windows in a sheer drop to the street. He hurried to the south wall. The windows there were twelve feet down, and there was no pipe—no foothold. He went to the back of the roof and found another coping.

He turned to see Hanrahan running from parapet to parapet, now hidden in a cloud of whirling smoke, now black in the red glow of wind-blown flames. He saw him lean over the marble railing that surmounted the cornice on the front of the building, and put his hands in a trumpet to his mouth; the voice was lost in the roar of the wind. He saw him take off his helmet and try to throw it down into the street; and the gale snatched it from his hand, tossed it aloft and blew it away to the south with the smoke and the flying embers.

He came running back to Gorman. "Let's get down," he panted. "Let's get down."

Gorman did not answer him.

"For the Lord's sake, Bull," he cried, "don't let us burn alive up here."

Gorman shook his head. "I can't get down," he said.

He could see that there was nothing on the brick roof to burn; the heat and not the flames would be their danger. The fire was at its worst in the light well, and at the point farthest from it there was enormous water tank, protected with a covering of tin and supported across the angle of the walls on steel beams, so that, even if the roof should fall, the tank would not go with it. Here was the greatest safety. They would have water to prevent the heat from baking them alive, and they would have the tank to shelter them from the drift of smoke.

Gorman went over to it and crouched to peer beneath the beams. Hanrahan stumbled against him. "Bull," he whimpered, "I can't—I can't get down."

Gorman thrust him aside. "Well, who said you could?" he snarled. "You're up here to stay. You better make up your mind to that an' shut yer yap."

Hanrahan threw up his arms and screamed at the sky in a high, dry voice, clutching with his fingers and snapping like a dog with his teeth. Then he pitched forward into the smoke on a run for the street parapet again.

Gorman climbed slowly up the iron ladder to the top of the tank. He came on a scuttle there, and raised it, to find that the tank was almost full. He took off his rubber coat and dipped it down, and it came up dripping. He rubbed it over his face, and licked at the moisture on the smooth, tarpaulin; and the touch of water sent a burning fever flush of thirst through him. He reached down with his helmet, drew it up half full and emptied it over his head and down his back, again and again. Then he drank in great gulps, sighing with satisfaction.

The relief brought back his energies. The tank ladder took his eye, and it occurred to him that, if he could get it loose, he might be able to reach a lower window with it. He took hold of it in his huge hands, drew a long breath, and strained to wrench it from its iron sockets, tightening on it slowly, until the blood drummed in his ears. He bent the upright of it, but the socket held it still. When he paused for breath, he remembered Hanrahan, and shouted to him for aid.

He got no answer, and he descended to the roof to find him lying on his face in the worst of the heat that blew from the air shaft. He dragged him back from it and emptied a helmet full of water on his face.

Hanrahan rolled his head from side to side, muttering to himself.

"Say," Gorman said, "Say, look-a-here——"

He opened staring eyes, moving his lips in a whisper.

"Better get up to the tank and take a dip. I want you to help me get that ladder loose."

Hanrahan slipped an arm around his neck, raising himself on his elbow. "Get me down out of this, Bull," he whispered. "Get me down out of this, an' I'll make it good. I got a pull, I got a promise——"

Gorman threw off his arm. "Stop talkin' foolish. I can't get you down, man. Here, take a drink."

Hanrahan caught at his collar, thrusting aside the water. "Get me down," he said. "You get me down, Bull, I'll make it good. I'm right in with the Gang. Dorgan said——"

Gorham threw him from him with a curse. "I can't get you down," he yelled at him. "What's the matter with you?"

Hanrahan fell back heavily, and lay breathing hard, with open mouth. A puff of smoke blew down and choked him with a sob.

Gorman dragged him across the roof to the tank, and sat down beside him—uncertain what to do—with his back to the parapet and his face to the light well. The heat swam over them in a suffocating current. Hanrahan threw out his arms and lay as if stretched on a cross, rolling his head from side to side, agonized and speechless.

He began to mumble the "confession" of a Roman Catholic, beating his breast with a whispered "through my fault, through my fault, through my most grievous fault."

Gorman scowled. The smoke irritated him; the heat pricked him. Can't you shut yer yap for half a minute," he complained.

Hanrahan groaned and turned to him. "D'you think there's any hell?" he asked in a husky whisper.

Gorman laughed. "Aw, cut it out," he said. "You're scared. That's all that's wrong with you."

There was a crash of breaking windows in the air shaft. The flames roared up, flapping like a banner in the wind.

"Help!" Hanrahan screeched. "Help! Hel——"

Gorman clapped a hand over his mouth. "Well, you lobster," he said.

"Aw,don't Bull," he pleaded. "Don't."

Gorman stood up in the thickening smoke and looked down on his. "Say," he said, "if you got any breath to waste, you'd better save for yer prayers. This roof's goin' to drop you in a hole so hot it won't leave enough of you fer the devil to raise a blister on. Shut up, will you?"

He turned away from him and climbed the ladder to the top of the tank, so that he might sit down there in quiet. He could hear the engines in the street whistling frantically for coal from the fuel waggons; and they sounded very far away. He reached down into the scuttle and drank from his helmet again. The air came up cool from the tank. He lay with his face in the draft of it and shut his dry eyelids on his aching eyes.

Although he had threatened Hanrahan with the collapse of the roof, he had spoken in anger to terrify him into silence, and not because he believed that either of them would lose his life. He was not a man of imagination, and his breath was too strong in his body for him to realize the possibility of death. If the crew below did not find some means of reaching him, he hoped to live out the fire where he was. Chiefly, he was engry—and bewildered by his own anger—because Hanrahan had gone to pieces and made such a noise. He could not think. The heat was wearing on him. He lay there, waiting.

And, in fact, the men below were already planning to reach him. For a time Captain Ball had been so busy fighting back the flames on the twelfth floor that he did not think of the two men whom he had left on the roof. It was not until sparks and burning woodwork began to pour down the elevator shaft that the possibility of their situation occurred to him. Fortunately, the building was "fireproofed," and the progress of the flames would be slow.

He called two of his crew to get scaling ladders, and, leaving his lieutenant in charge of the pipes, he ran to the south-west end of the building—to be furthest from the fire—and opening a window there, looked up. He could see no signs of fire in any window above him.

"Looks all right," he told the men. "But you'll have to be quick. Keep your eyes open for the windows behind you."

They had a coil of life-line and two ladders. They used but one of the latter, going up together for greater speed. At their first window they saw the wisdom of Captain Ball's instructions. The room within was stifling with smoke and heat; and as soon as they opened a vent into it, the fire showed in the darkness.

At the fourteenth story, a light of flames was already glimmering behind the broken pane. The smoke poured out on them as they beat in the glass and hauled up the ladder. They went ahead, however; and while they were climbing up the wall from that window they heard the rush of a "back draft" below them, and looked down to see the flames in the thirteenth story cutting them off.

A cry of warning from Captain Ball was answered by a faint shout above them. They looked up, to see Gorman peering down over the edge of the water tank. Captain Ball shouted to them, "Come down the rope!" They looked down, to see him waving to them. They looked up, to see that Gorman had disappeared.

"Jim," the upper man said, "we can't reach 'em." They tied the end of their rope around the shaft of the ladder, and each took a twist of it in the hook of his belt, and dropped.

They slid down through fire and smoke, blistered and blinded, to Captain Ball, who caught each, as he came, and drew him in the window. A fireman, sent by the lieutenant, came up shouting, "Fire at the elevator shaft!" They turned and ran.

Gorman had gone down to the roof to get Hanrahan, and found him lying on his face on the bricks.

"The men're comin' up the ladders," he said. Hanrahan sprang to his feet with this new hope of life, and followed him around the tank to the parapet.

They looked down, to see the empty ladder, twenty feet below them, hanging in the flames, with a blazing rope rangling from the centre of it into the smoke. "Hell!" Gorman said, disgustedly.

Hanrahan stared at the abandoned apparatus. "I guess," he said, in a new voice.

He turned back with Gorman to the front of the tank again. There was a lull in the wind; the smoke and the flames rose up straight on two sides of the roof, and the bricks were hot under their feet. There was no escape now.

"We got one chance left," Gorman said. "We can get in the tank."

Hanrahan shook his head. "No use, Bull," he answered. "I got to cash in, I guess."

Gorman cursed him. "Well, I ain't," he said. "Get a hold of this ladder."

He braced himself, with a foot against the tin covering of the tank, bent his back and tugged to loosen the ladder from its fastenings. Hanrahan helped him. They strained and struggled with all the strength of every muscle, and the great screws in the sockets of the uprights came out slowly, as if they had been sunk in wax. Once having loosened its hold, they levered the ladder, twisted it and wrenched it free. Gorman crawled under the steel beams and turned off the stop-cock there. They then both climbed aloft, lowered the ladder into the tank and slid down, one on each side of the rungs, into the water. They drank together, sunk to the teeth.

Gorman ducked. "You'd better tie yourself on," he spluttered. "We'll be eating smoke here before long."

The scuttle was a red square of light above them, and they could see each other's faces as pale blurs of no recognizable feature in the darkness. They stripped off their upper clothing, and bound themselves under their arms to the ladder.

They could hear the crackle and roar of flames outside. There was a pecking of scattered rain on the tin above them.

"I wish I had somethin' to eat," Gorman said.

Hanrahan sighed again. "I'd like something to breathe better."

He was choking with heat and smoke. He rested his chin on the rung of the ladder. He was tired and dizzy. He seemed to be drifting on clouds of smoke, blown about in storm and heat, a glowing spark above the flames. His mind wandered in a delirium of suffocation. He heard Gorman's voice, as a great distance, say, "Wind changed—south."

Daybreak found the "fireproof" Mansard Building a smoking and blackened shell above its tenth story, with the firemen putting out the last smoulder in the gutted rooms. They fought their way up slowly from floor to floor, until by noon Captain Ball and a squad of his company, looking for their dead, reached the stairs leading to the roof.

They found there the blackened nozzle which Gorman had abandoned to the fire. They went up the stairs, hopelessly, and burst open the door, to see Gorman himself — red-eyed and dripping, and stripped to the waist—sitting on the edge of the tank, beating with his heels on its sides, and singing crazy nothings in the voice of insanity.

Captain Ball went over to him and called up, "Where's Hanrahan?"

He winked and pointed down into the tank. "I'm the king of the castle," he sang. "I'm the king of the castle. I'm the king—what's Hanrahan? Pete, Pete, Delicate Pete! Oh, he's a spellbinder," he said with a grin. "He's a spellbinder, talkin' hot air. Comin' up? Come on up. It ain't as hot up here as it was."

And they found Hanrahan, unconscious, but alive, still tied to the ladder and floating with his head between the rungs.

Two weeks later, when Gorman reported for duty at the engine house, his first question was for "Delicate Pete?" "Him?" the lieutenant said. "Oh, he's quit the department. He's goin' to join the police."

"Hanrahan threw up his arms and screamed at the sky in a high, dry voice."

"Beating with his heels on its sides, and saying crazy Nothings in the voice of insanity."

DINKELSPIEL WRITES A HISTORY OF TO-DAY

George V. Hobart, the creator of "Dinkelspiel," has just commenced a "History of To-day," in the New York American. The latest chapter runs as follows:

Ven a man starts ould to write history his fairst idea should be to fill it mit realisms.

Dis is der day of realisms.

Der meaning of der vord realisms is a condition vare eferyding is yoost vot it is und nuddings ain't vot it isn't.

Dest days if a man has no realisms in his nature his vatchvord is "skiddoo!" and his favorite study in arithmetic is "23."

Dese days if a book has no realisms Anty Carnegie refuses to build a library to put it in.

Dese days if a play has no realisms der public passes sneeringly py der box office mid der index thumb resting slightly on der edge of der nose und derfingers viggling.

Ven ve haf finished mit der purchase of a new suit of pajimmies at der insomnia counter in der compartment store ve valk ofer to der book counter und ask for der latest nofel of der day.

Ve open it at der fairst chapter und if ve find dare der hero pleasantly engaged in kicking der brain house avay from a cubble of t'ieves und desperandums ve buy der book because it is realisms.

Realisms is now der chincher vich moves der vorld.

Realisms has taken civilization py der hand und leads it into all der foolish places on der map.

On der stage it used to be der noble art of acting ven in der last act der hero vould eat sugar ould of a green paper und die mit his boots on.

Nowadays it is called realisms because der actor takes off his clothes, goes to bed und sends for der doctor und dies in der natural vay.

Realisms vas eferyware.

Dis naturally brings me to der supcheckt of der gas bill vich is on der kitchen table before me as I emit dese bitter vords.

Gas is der greatest realisms of der age.

In our house we haf der most eggspensive gas dot money can suchhest.

Our gas bills can make a tventy-dollar note ged red in der face, und ven der postman brings it in der bank book gets up und leaves der room.

Our gas meter has a vunderful imagination.

It has also a great head for figures.

It knows nearly efery figure in der alphabet und it has a speaking ackvaintance mit all der foreign figures in der dead lankviches, also.

Der fairst day our gas meter efer vent to vork it vas for a man und his vife py der name of Ananias und Sapphira.

Dis meter of ours is nefer at a loss for something to say, und efery time it speaks it costs us money.

Our meter believes in der olt proverb vich says dot figures nefer lie; so, like Tennyson's crooks, it goes on forefer mitould getting pinched.

Our gas is so veak dot it should be sent to a sanitarium, und der chandeller is ashamed to look me in der face.

But der meter—ach, Himmel!

Vot realisms!

Vunce I holded a short gonversationing mit my olt college chump, der President of der Gas Trust.

I learned much knowledge on der gas subcheckt vich hidderto I vas ignorant abould.

Der vord Gas is descended from der ancient lankcich of der Persians, und it means "hot air in captifity."

Gas is divided into two classes, to vit:—gas dot burns und gas dot frightens der meter so it chumps.

Both dese classes vill be found in your gas bill efery month.

Der style of gas vich burns und gifs forth a faint light is der most popularkty mit der Gas Trust.

"Who vas it discofered der gas meter?" I inkvired politefully to der President of der Gas Trust.

"A skientist vas vun day looking for perpetual motion," responded der President mit a faravay smile on der ouldskirtings of his face.

"Und he found it, yes?" I busted in.

"He found der gas meter," de President continuationed.

"Den all dese years ve half had perpetual motion mitould knowing it!" I eggsclaimed.

"Vell," set der President, "I vould chudge from der bruises ou some of our bill collectors dot certain peoples suspected der truth."

Ve both laughed contemporaneousslesly.

"Vy," I inkvired, "vy do you charge such bright prices for such dark gas?"

"Dare vas sigs reasons," set der President, silently.

"Could you specimen dem to me?" I pursued.

"Mit pleasure," set der President, raising his hand for silence.

"Fairst—Because I doan'd need der money, but I yoost as well haf it anyvay.

"Second—Because der higher the fewer you vill burn, und, darefore, you ain't so varm!

"Third—Because I luff you, und vish to save your money py keeping it in my safe.

"Fourth—Because you might spend your money for too much lopster salad, vich ruins der complexion und makes you sick. Look at der gas bill efery month und dot vill make you sick qvicker!

"Fifth—Because I believe dot efery man vas created equal, und I vish to change dot system as soon as possibility.

"Sigth—Because dis vas a free country mit vun or two eggseptions, und der public vas vun of dem."

Clasping my pocketbook firmly mit both hands, I made a low bow at der President of der Gas Trust und blew myself ould.

But der realisms vas dare.

If you doan'd belief me sneak up insuspectfully on your own gas meter some bright, sunny day und vatch how its face vill blush because you caught it vorking clondestinely.

Red Rose Tea costs no more than other teas

EVERYONE agrees that the best in anything is always the most economical even if it costs more.

But when you can get the best in tea at the same price you pay for inferior teas,

—when you can get that "rich fruity flavor" of Red Rose Tea,

—when you can get all the good qualities of both Indian and Ceylon teas with none of their weaknesses,

—when, in short, you can get Red Rose Tea at the same price as other teas; why not have it?

Red Rose Tea is good Tea

ANNUAL DANCE INAUGURATED BY MONTREAL AMATEUR ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

The Club Gymnasium Scene of Brilliance and Gaiety—List of Officers, Patronesses and Subscribers.

The first annual dance of the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association took place in the new club house of that institution last night, and proved most successful in every particular. The affair was the inauguration of a regular annual fixture and henceforth will be looked forward to most impatiently by members of the M.A.A.A. when the dancing season comes around.

Last night's function, although of a very informal character, eclipsed anything yet undertaken by the entertainment committee of the club, and proved a great credit to the promoters of the scheme. To the untiring efforts of Mr. W. E. Findlay most of the credit for the success of the entertainment is due, and too great praise cannot be given to him and his corps of assistants for their untiring zeal in promoting the dance.

Flags, bunting and many trophies and emblems of different branches of sport, adorned the walls of the gymnasium which, combined with the floral decrations made the usually solemn-looking "Gym" a veritable paradise, in which the many dancers enjoyed themselves to their heart's content. During the time that the regular programme was being rendered the orchestra was stationed on the stage at the end of the "Gym," where the dancing was carried on.

During supper, which was daintily served in the reading room, sweet music floated forth from the balcony over the rotunda, so that laughter, the merry clink of glasses, and selections from the latest operas commingled with the chatter of the happy throng.

About four hundred guests filled the fine new "Gym" and dancing was kept up until the wee sma' hours.

A trumpeter from the Royal Scots was in attendance all evening to announce the dances, and everything went off in as easy and satisfactory manner as anyone could desire.

ST. DAVID'S FESTIVAL.

Patron Saint Day of Welshmen Will Be Observed in Montreal.

Fine days and bright sunshine indicate very strongly that springtime is not very far distant. Be that as it may, for a certainty at this time a Welshman's thoughts, wherever he may be, on land or on sea, turn to the anniversary of his Patron Saint, the good and holy St. David, which always comes on March 1. It is a day of general rejoicing with the Cymru, and in centres where they are numerically strong they hold their Eisteddfods, or banquets on elaborate scales.

In Montreal our Welsh colony usually celebrate the day in various ways, but they always bring the day to a close with a grand concert. They engage artists from the Welsh communites in the United States, associating with the best local talent. St. David's Society, which is well known in this city, is the pivot around which the local sons and daughters of old Cambria rally. This year is their third annual festival, and the festival promises to be an unusual success.

MAISONNEUVE ELECTION.

(See also page twenty-one.)

LE CANADA ON THE RESULT.

Referring to the result in Maisonneuve yesterday, Le Canada says:—

"The defeat of Mr. Grothe in the Maisonneuve election cannot be regarded as a defeat for the Government. The Conservatives of the distict realizing fully its strongly Liberal sentiment, prudently withdrew Mr. Bumbray, whom they had in the beginning brought forward as a candidate. It was then that the labor unions, whose difficulties with Grothe are matter of public knowledge, proposed Mr. Verville. Throughout the course of the stuggle they proclaimed themselves Liberals. In the numerous meetings which were held the labor candidate and his representatives proclaimed themselves devoted partisans of the Laurier Government.

"The Liberal workingmen who are in the immense majority in the district of Maisonneuve, have no intention of seceding from their party or of diminishing the majority of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the House by the election of Mr. Verville.

"If the new member has not the radical ideas which are attributed to him and which are hostile to the general policy of the party, there is no reason why he should not take his seat to the right hand of the Speaker amongst the followers of the Government in the session which will open on the 8th of March."

AN AGED PRELATE PASSES TO MAJORITY

Right Rev. David Shaw Ramsay's Death Was Very Sudden at His City Residence.

The death occurred last night at his residence, 147 Metcalfe street, of Right Reverend Monsignor David Shaw Ramsay, domestic prelate and prothonotary apostolic, who has been for a great number of years one of the well-known figures among Montreal citizens.

Mgr. Ramsay passed away very suddenly about 7.30 last evening. Death was due to apoplectic congestion of the lungs.

Mgr. Ramsay was of Scottish descent. He was born at 1 Hill street, Edinboro, April 22, 1825, being in his eightieth year. He was a son of the late David Ramsay, the late Judge T. K. Ramsay being an elder brother. Shortly after Mgr. Ramsay's birth the family removed to St. John's, Maybole, Ayrshire, and there the future prelate remained until he was 13 years of age. He afterwards removed to Manchester, while his education was continued in the University of Edinburgh, where he proved to be a distinguished student.

In 1845, at the age of twenty years he came to Canada, residing at Varennes for a time, for the purpose of learning French. He purchased the seigneury of de Ramezay, and lived upon it, managing the manor house and other portions of the property situated in the diocese of St. Hyacinthe. Afterwards he busied himself with military matters, and raised a troop of cavalry. So much interested in this was he that he removed to England, and passed some time there in a Hussar regiment, and then again returned to Canada. In 1857 he was an unsuccessful candidate in Bagot county in the Conservative interest.

Until his residence in Varennes he had been a staunch member of the Anglican Church, and had contributed largely to the construction of Christ Church Cathedral. But while studying there he had taken up "Les Conferences de Lacordiere," which had the effect of unsettling his mind on religious matters. The period of doubt came to an end in his entering the Roman Catholic Church, being received therein at Montreal in 1859 by Canon Fabre, afterwards Archbishop of Montreal. After this he devoted himself to the study of theology in Montreal, and later, when he had taken up his residence in Rome, in the Pio College there.

While in Rome, he took orders, receiving the tonsure from Bishop Bourget, then on a visit to the Eternal City. He was ordained in June, 1867. For some years after his ordination Father Ramsay was occupied in parish work near Manchester, and again at South Shields, giving his services gratuitously, and expending all he could spare of his income upon the poor. While in England he devoted much attention to the question of education, and particularly to higher education.

As Father Ramsay he returned to Canada about fifteen years ago, and took up farming at Magog. He later gave his residence at St. Margaret's, on Lake Magog, to Bishop Larocque, for the support of the poor. A few years ago, in order to acquire an annuity, Mgr. Ramsay sold the seigneury of de Ramezay. He lived in an exceedingly modest manner, and expended all that he did not require upon the poor.

In 1895 he was raised to the rank of domestic prelate, and in the following year to that of prothonotary apostolic, which gave him the title of Right Reverend, and entitled him to wear the purple.

Mgr. Ramsay is survived by a sister ten years older than himself. The funeral of the deceased prelate will take place on Tuesday morning, leaving his residence at 8.45 o'clock, to St. James Cathedral, where a service will be chanted.

THE SYMPHONY CONCERT.

The Symphony concert of Friday afternoon, given in the Academy, drew as usual, a good house. The programme was of a character to bring out the best work of the orchestra.

The first number, Tschaikowsky's "Pathetic"—Symphony No. 6—especially in the Adagio movement, was very well received.

Mrs. Rollie Borden-Lowe and Mr. Joseph Saucier were the soloists of the afternoon. The former who has been heard before in Montreal under the same auspices, was in good voice, although the orchestral accompaniment to her first number, Widor's "La Petite Couleuvre," was unfortunately a trifle heavy, at times almost drowning the singer. Her last numbers, however, "Sweetheart, Tell Me Thy Beaming Eyes" from McDowell, and "Love's Philosophy" from Hunn won deserved applause. Mr. Saucier was heard in a selection from "Les Saisons" by Masse, and generously responded with a particulaly catchy encore, accompanied by Miss Plouffe.

The second orchestral number was Massenet's "Scene Religieuse," with 'cello solo by Mr. Dubois, rendered with all that peculiar symphathy which characterizes Mr. Dubois' playing.

The final orchestral numbers were "Valse des Sylphes," from Berlioz, and the ever welcome Tannhauser, "Overture," which closed a most enjoyable concert.

Mr. John Z. White's Lectures.

Mr. John Z. White will lecture this evening, at 8.15, at the McKenzie Club, Victoria Hall, Westmount, his subject being "Henry George." To-morrow he will speak, at three in the afternoon, at Taylor Presbyterian Church, on "Civic Righteousness," while at seven in the evening he will speak in McVicar's Memorial Church, in the north end, on "Applied Christianity."

Superfluous Hair

De Miracle

It is better than electricity, because it does not scar or produce a new growth. Better than X-ray, because it does not burn, scar or paralyze the tissues under the skin. Better than depilatories because it is not poisonous; therefore it will not cause blood poisoning, or produce eczema, which is so common with depilatories, nor does it break off the hair, thereby increasing its growth.

Electrolysis, X-ray or depilatories are offered you on the bare word of the operators and manufacturers. De MIRACLE is not. It is the only method which is indorsed by physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and prominent magazines.

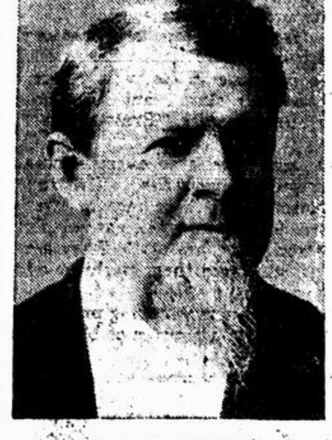
BANQUET GIVEN MR. DANIELS

Railway Man Receives Monster Demonstration on the Occasion of His Changing Companies.

Special to The Montreal Star.

New York, February 24.—A monster testimonial dinner was given to George H. Daniels, former General passenger agent of the New York Central Railroad, at the Waldorf Astoria, in honor of his recent appointment as advertising manager to the Vanderbilt lines this week.

The hosts of the banquet were 500 advertising, railroad, business and professional men, who have known Mr. Daniels intimately for years, and they drank their guest's health in twenty varieties of wine. As favors, miniature busts of Daniels in papier mache were passed around. Toastmaster William H. McElroy introduced Daniels as the "man who has shown there are no boundaries to the kinship of good fellowship, no limitation to the heart throbs of friendship."



MR. G. H. DANIELS.
Tendered a Banquet on the occasion of his leaving N. Y. C. to join the Vanderbilt lines.

When Mr. Daniels arose to speak there was a storm of cheers.

Mr. Daniels made a graceful speech, in which he attributed his success in railroad life to his appreciation of advertising.

"Advertising underlies success of any business on earth, except burglary and stealing," he said. "If you have anything to sell, the way to attract the public notice is by advertising. A business man without advertising is a man without success."

Other speakers, all of whom paid eloquent tribute to the new advertising executive, were Frank Lawrence, Admiral Coghlan, E. P. Jeffery, President of the Denver and Rio Grande Railway; Melville E. Stone, Rev. Merle St. Croix Wright, Charles S. Francis, and J. C. Stubbs.

Death of Mr. George S. Brush.

One of Montreal's old business men has passed away in the person of George Seymour Brush, who died yesterday at his residence, No. 320 Elm avenue, Westmount, in his 80th year.

The late Mr. Brush was the proprietor of the Eagle Foundry and Engine Works, with which he had been connected for many years. Indeed, the works which date back to the very early days of Canadian machinery manufacturing, were operated by the father of the deceased as early as 1838. Some of the first steamers operating in the St. Lawrence were engined at this works.

The late George S. Brush studied law in the early days and finally launched into the business which during his life time he greatly extended. The funeral will be private.

: : Some Facts : : About Linoleums.

Linoleums are the most sanitary, and therefore the most healthy, covering made for floors.

Germs cannot lodge in them, because they are not porous.

And, having a wax finish, are easily kept clean.

Owing to the peculiarity of construction, linoleums always lie flat—never bulge or curl.

Some are made to represent hardwood flooring, with two light narrow strips and an alternate light and dark strip.

They make fine floor coverings anywhere, as rugs can be thrown over them.

We've got others in Mosaic patterns, in imitation inlaid flooring, and in very small grained designs.

In inlaid linoleums the pattern runs right through to the back so that it doesn't wear off—

No matter how much they're worn, the pattern always shows up.

Workman Enters Action for Damages.

A $2000 damage action has been entered into against the Dominion Bridge Company by John Wall, a workingman in their employ who had a leg broken in an accident at the shops of the defendants. He alleges that while working on a planer in August last the machinery got out of order and a piece of iron struck his leg fracturing the bone.

Ledoux Carriage Company's fine carriages are all made by hand, notwithstanding the fact that this great firm's plant on Osborne street contains more labor-saving machinery than any other carriage factory in the Dominion. In the making of their high grade Broughams, Victorias, etc., only the first rough work can be done by machinery. After the wood and iron begin to take shape, everything must be hand wrought to produce in the finished vehicle the character, style and wearing qualities which comport with the Ledoux Carriage Company's name.

Young Englishman Drowned.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., February 24.—Archer Devilliers, aged 32 years, a native of Sunderland, Eng., fell through the ice in St. Mary's River here yesterday and was drowned before assistance could reach him. Devilliers, who came here from England via Montreal a few months ago, was engaged in a lumber camp near here under the assumed name of Jones.

SPANISH MARRIAGE MUCH DISCUSSED

Protestant Clergyman Leads Crusade Against the Princess.

SUGGESTION THAT HE IS MAD

He Calls the Conversion Only a "So Called" One, and is Very Bitter.

Special Cable to the Montreal Star.

Paris, February 24.—The expected has happened and all interested in "The Spanish Marriage," as it is now called, are discussing the religious features of the case. Four hundred years ago a Spanish king might even have gone to war to keep a Protestant Princess off the throne of Spain or he might have gone to war insisting all the while that he should be allowed to marry whom he pleased. Or England might have gone to war with any nation which dared to protest against the niece of her King being kept off the throne of Spain. Or England might have gone to war with anybody who would fight at home or abroad for daring to suggest that the niece of the King of England should ever be obliged for reasons of state to renounce her Protestant faith and turn Catholic

At first it was thought that the world had advanced in religious relief, and discussions to a point where the religious phases of this latest "Spanish marriage" would not even arouse a serious protest. It was supposed that if there was to be any serious protest it would come from Madrid where the people might object to a Protestant-educated Queen, even making due allowance for the genuineness of her conversion. Such objections as have been raised within the Spanish borders have grown out of questions of etiquette and rank, the argument being advanced that the Princess Ena of Battenberg was hardly of royal rank sufficient to warrant her selection to a place so exalted. But when it came to discussions regarding the right and discretion of selecting a Protestant Princess one of the Madrid papers supposed to most faithfull, represent the views of His Majesty put a stop to all discussion by repeating what M. Thiers declared in France under the July monarchy when the eldest son of Louis Philippe married a Protestant Princess, "All the better; that proves our respect for liberty of conscience."

But the Nonconformist conscience of the average Englishman is evidently a peculiar thing. Rev. Robert Bolton Ransford, a clergyman of the Church of England, appears to have been the first to lead the Protestant crusade against the pretty young Princess renouncing the faith of her fathers to become Queen of Spain. Lord Hylton suggested that the Rev. Mr. Ransford must have completely lost his mental equilibrium. This latter suggestion apparently did cause Mr. Ransford to lose his mental equilibrium, and he has been carrying on a campaign ever since which is attracting attention not only in England but on the Continent. Replying to Lord Hylton he said:—

MAD MEN THINK OTHERS MAD.

"Whether or not I have lost my mental equilibrium I had better leave to others to determine, for I cannot forget that madmen are apt to think all others mad. But I still think the proposed conversion a deeply irreligious proceeding. A devout Catholic told me, only the other day, that such a worldly conversion was a 'sacrilege' of the most shameful kind and I must say that I agree with him.

"The ecclesiastical entanglement must be of a very serious nature. The First Synod of Westminster (Roman Catholic) held in 1855 in its decree on baptism, enacted that 'since the reasons which induced the Vicars Apostolic' at the beginning of the century to decree that all persons born after the year 1773 baptized by Protestants should, on their conversion to the faith be baptized conditionally, are even now stronger, we renew absolutely and command that all converts from Protestantism be baptized conditionally unless it be most surely ascertained, from evidence beyond all doubt that all that regards the matter and form of the sacrament was duly performed." The next section goes on to provide that conditional baptism must not be administered publicly, but altogether privately, with holy water and without ceremonies. Sacramental confession is likewise in all cases to be required."

"I venture to retain my conviction that it is my business as a clergyman of the Church of England," continues Rev. Mr. Ransford, "to resent and oppose such sacreligious repetition of the 'one baptism,' and such dishonor to the Church of which Princess Ena is still a member, as will be involved in her so-called conversion."

The point being made that Princess Ena is after all not an English Princess, Rev. Mr. Ransford retorts:

"She is the daughter of our King's sister, and it is not improbable that the Crown of England should devolve upon her or her descendants. It will, therefore, be absolutely necessary that with her repudiation of the church of her baptism and confirmation she should also formally renounce all pretensions to inherit any right to the throne of Great Britain. And although her father was a foreigner he became a naturalized Englishman, and was Governor of the Isle of Wight. Is it not of the King of England, and not from the Kaiser that the sanction for the proposed marriage will have to be sought?"

BABY'S AWFUL MISERY

Eyes Sore and Inflamed and Lashes Fell Out.

SPEEDILY CURED BY CUTICURA

"My little son had an attack of measles which left his eyes in a shocking state. The lids were inflamed and sore, and every lash fell out. They would be stuck in the morning, and bleed when washed, causing untold suffering. I tried everything without success until I got Cuticura, and with the first application had cause to be thankful. Before I had used one box of Cuticura Ointment the lashes were growing, and in a short time he had a crop of lashes of which any person might be proud.—Mrs. C. Todd, Old South Head Road, Waverly, Sydney, N. S. W." Reference. R. Towns & Co., Sydney.

BLOOD IMPURITIES

Three Things Cause Them.—One Thing Cures Them.

OTTAWA, ONTARIO, 34 Union St., Sept. 18th 1905. It gives me much pleasure to certify that "Fruit-a-tives" have entirely cured me of a disagreeable skin disease. I had a dreadful rash on my face, arms and hands, the rash was red and itchy and my face and hands were fearfully swollen. I had a pain in my back, and I was very ill. I was advised to take "Fruit-a-tives" to purify the blood and I am very thankful that I took this medicine. After I had taken one box of the tablets, I was much better; and when I had taken two boxes, the rash was entirely gone, the swelling in face and hands was gone, the pain in the back had left me, and I was quite well again, and my complexion is clearer than it has been for years. I want to thank "Fruit-a-tives" for this great cure—as before I used this medicine I had used many kinds of salves and took quantities of medicines but these did me no good. But "Fruit-a-tives at once seemed to do me good—and they entirely took away the fearful rash.

(Sgd.) Mrs. F. Mailhiot.

This case of Mrs. Mailhiot proves one great truth—that you can't CURE pimples, blackheads, blotches, red rash and other skin diseases with salves and ointments.

Simply because the disease is not with the skin but WITH THE BLOOD. The skin trouble is the RESULT of blood trouble.

"Fruit-a-tives" proves this because when salves and ointments are left off—and "Fruit-a-tives" taken to purify and enrich the blood, the skin diseases are cured to stay cured.

Pimples, red rash, eczema etc., come from disease of one of three organs—liver, kidneys or stomach. It may be all three—but certainly one. And this one affects the other two.

And there will be skin disease

—as long as the bowels are constipated

—as long as the kidneys retain urea or tisssue waste

—as long as the stomach does not digest food properly and the body is improperly nourished

Ointments won't cure—salves won't cure—soaps won't cure. Because the trouble is the BLOOD—not the skin. But "Fruit-a-tives" will cure—"Fruit-a-tives" do cure—because "Fruit-a-tives" PURIFY THE BLOOD.

"Fruit-a-tives" act on the liver—stimulate it to excrete more bile—and thus make the bowels move regularly every day. This rids the system of one source of blood poisoning. These famous liver tablets act on the kidneys—prevent the formation of excessive uric acid—and insure the kidneys being strong and healthy. They act on the skin—strengthen the glands and stimulate them to throw off the impurities which the blood brings to them.

With bowels, liver, kidneys, stomach and skin working properly—the blood is pure and rich—and there can be no pimples or blemishes to mar the complexion.

At all druggists or sent postpaid on receipt of price—50c. a box or 6 boxes for $2.50.

CHRISTIANS OF JAPAN NOW NUMBER MORE THAN 100,000

William Jennings Bryan Writes of Their Zeal and Sincerity—The Development of Education in Last Half Century.

[Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles —Copyright, in Great Britain— All Rights Reserved).

Back of Japan's astonishing progress along material lines lies her amazing educational development. Fifty years ago but a few of her people could read or write; now considerably less than ten per cent. would be classed as illiterate. It is difficult to conceive of such a transformation taking place almost within a generation. The prompt adoption of Western methods and the rapid assimilation of western ideas gives indubitable proof of the pre-existence of a vital national germ. A pebble dropped into soil, however, rich, and cultivated no matter how carefully, gives back no response to the rays of the springtime sun. Only the seed which has life within can be awakened and developed by light and warmth and care. Japan had within her the vital spark, and when the winter of her isolation was passed, her latent energies burst forth into strong and sturdy growth.

Her sons, ambitious to know the world, scattered themselves throughout Europe and America, and, having laden themselves with new ideas returned like bees to the hive. In this way Japan constantly gained from every quarter,and her educational system is modeled after the best that the ages have produced. She has her primary schools for boys and girls, attendance being compulsory, and below these in many places there are kindergarten schools. The middle schools in which the boys and girls are separated, take up the course of instruction where the primary schools leave off.

Then follow the universities of which there are seven under the control of the Government. Besides these there are in the cities institutions known as higher commercial schools, which combine general instruction with such special studies as are taught in our commercial colleges. There are also a number of normal schools for the training of teachers. In addition to the schools and colleges established and conducted by the Government, there are a number founded by individuals and societies. The largest of these is Waseda College, founded and still maintained by Count Okuma, the leader of the progressive party. It is adjoining the home of the Count, and is built upon land which he donated. Dr. Hatoyama, at one time Speaker of the National House of Representatives, who holds a degree from Yale college, is the official head of this institution. In all of its departments it has some 5,000 students.

I have already referred in a former article to the Kelo Gijuku, the college founded by Mr. Fukuzawa. The attendance here is not so large as at Waseda, but the institution has had an illustrious career and exerts a wide influence upon the country. I visited both of these colleges and never addressed more attentive or responsive audiences. As English is taught in all the middle schools, colleges and universities the students are able to follow a speech in that language without an interpreter.

The State university at Tokio includes six departments, law, medicine and engineering courses being provided, as well as courses in literature, science and agriculture. The total number of students enrolled at this university is about 3,500. The National University at Kyoto has three faculties, law, medicine and science, the last-named including engineering; the attendance at this university is between 600 and 700. In the States of Choshu and Satsuma there are higher schools supported by funds given by former feudal lords of those states.

The education of girls is not neglected, although as a rule the girls do not go as far in their studies as the boys. There are a number of normal schools and seventy-nine high schools for girls, besides the Peeresses' school and several private institutions. The Woman's university of Tokio, situated near Waseda College and under the patronage of Count Okuma, has had a phenomenal career. Established only five years ago it has now an enrollment of some 700, and is putting up several new buildings.

There are also a number of missionary schools and colleges. The Presbyterians support three boarding schools for boys and 11 for girls, besides two day schools, the total attendance at these schools is nearly 2,300.

The Congregationalists have a number of schools, the largest, Doshisha College at Kyoto, being the largest and most influential Christian institution in Japan. I had the pleasure of visiting both this college and Kyoto University.

The Methodists have eighteen boarding schools and nineteen day schools, with a total attendance of nearly 5,000. Their college at Kobe is a very promising institution.

The Baptists have a theological seminary, an academy, five boarding schools for girls and eight day schools, with a total attendance of nearly 1,000. The Episcopal Church has also taken an important part in educational work, while the Catholics (who were on the ground first), have over sixty seminaries, schools and orphanages, with an attendance of some 6,000.

The Japanese Government supports more than 25,000 primary schools, attended by more than 5,000,000 boys and girls; it supports more than 250 middle schools, with an attendance of nearly 100,000. While less than two per cent. of the primary students enter the middle school, more than ten per cent. of the middle school students enter the higher colleges.

Although the figures given above give some idea of the interest taken in education, they do not furnish an adequate conception of the enthusiasm with which a large number of these students pursue their studies. Nearly fifty young men called upon me or wrote to me asking to be taken to America that they might continue their studies. Many of the leading men in Japan to-day are graduates of American or European colleges. The physicians have shown a preference for German schools, while to engineers and politicians our universities have been more attractive. A part of the friendliness felt toward foreigners can be traced to the favors shown Japanese boys who left home in search of knowledge. Marquis Ito, one of the first of these, owes much to an elder of the Presbyterian Church in England, in whose home he lived as a student and the Marquis has ever since been making returns in kindness to foreigners and Christians.

Marquis Ito's case is not exceptional; all over Japan are men who hold in grateful remembrance Americans and Europeans to whom they are indebted for assistance. I met a man, now a publisher of an influential paper, who 20 years ago, at the age of 16, went to sea and in a shipwreck was cast upon one of the islands in the south Pacific. He became a retainer of the king of the islands and as such wore the scanty native dress, consisting of a loin cloth. He went with his king to Honolulu to pay a visit to the Hawaiian queen,and finding a Japanese settlement there, remained for two or three years. He then went to the United States and making a friend of a professor in one of the universities, attended school there for several years. He now visits the United States every years or so on business, and one seeing him wearing a silk hat and a Prince Albert coat would hardly guess the experiences by which he has risen to his present position. If Japan, beginning 50 years ago with no educational system and scarcely any educated men or women, could accomplish what she has accomplished in half a century, what will she accomplish in the twentieth century with the start which she now has and with the educational advantages which her people now enjoy.

Jaapn has several religions, although Shintoism has been, since 1868, the state religion. As a matter of fact, however, Shintoism can hardly be called a religion, for it has no creed, no priesthood and no code of morals. It is really ancestor worship and comes down from time immemorial. It implies a belief in immortality, for the ancestral spirits are invoked and vows are paid to them at numberless shrines that dot the country. These shrines are not usually in temples, although sometimes Shintoism and Buddhism have been mixed together and one temple employed for both shrines; as a rule, however, the Shinto shrine is in some secluded spot on the top of a hill or on a mountainside where a bit of natural scenery awakens a spirit of reverence. A gate of simple but beautiful design is placed at the point where the pathway to the shrine departs from the main road. We had read of these Shinto gates and had seen pictures of them, but we first saw one at Honolulu, itself the gateway to the orient. No description can convey to the reader the impression which this gate makes upon the traveller; its outlines are so graceful and yet so strong that it seems an appropriate portal to a holy place.

The moral code of Confucius has also influenced the thought of Japan.

About 1,400 years ago the Buddhist religion was introduced into Japan by Chinese priests, and it spread rapidly throughout the islands. Its temples were imposing, its ceremonies impressive and the garb of its priests costly and elaborate. It did not root out Shintoism, it simply overwhelmed and absorbed it. The Buddhist temples, though not as popular as they once were, as still visited by millions of faithful believers and are objects of interest to the tourist. Most of them are old, one at Nara having been built about the year 700. It is in such an excellent state of preservation that one can hardly believe that it has stood the storms of 12 centuries.

In the centre of the temple is an image of Buddha and on either side the figure of a huge warrior. There is also in this temple a god of war, to which the Japanese were wont to pay their vows before going to battle. The devout Buddhist approaching the image of the founder of his religion, bows and mutters a prayer half audibly and throwing his mite in a box on the floor before the shrine, departs. There is usually a bell, or sometimes only a chain, hanging above the place where the prayers are said and the suppliant swings a rope against the bell or shakes the chain before his prayer and claps his hands two or three times at its close. We inquired about the bell and received two answers; one, that it was to attract the attention of the god, and the other, that it was to awaken the conscience of the one about to present his petition.

Near the temple at Nara stands an ugly image which never fails to attract the attention of the visitor. It is literally covered with paper wads, which have been thrown against it by worshippers at the temple, in the belief that their prayers would be answered if the wads adhered to the image.

There is also at Nara a huge bell, almost as old as the temple. This bell is about 13 feet high, nine feet in diameter and eight inches thick. It hangs in a pagoda quite near the ground and when struck upon the side by a swinging log, gives forth a sound of wonderful depth and richness. It was rung for us and as its mellow tones reverberated along the hills were awed by the thought that a thousand years before our declaration of independence was written, 800 years before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock, yes, even 700 years before America was discovered, this old bell was calling people to worship.

There is at Nara an immense bronze image of Buddha, even larger than the famous one at Kamokura, though not considered so finely proportioned. The smaller one is 49 feet in height and nearly 100 feet in circumference (both represent Buddha seated tailor-fashion on a lotus-flower) and the larger one is almost twice as large as the smaller one. The lantern of stone or bronze seems to be as necessary an adjunct to a Buddhist temple as the Shinto gate is to that form of religion. At Nara there are 2,900 stone lanterns of various sizes along the walks that lead from one temple to another, and they are found in abundance in other cities. The Corean lions are also identified with Buddhistic worship, these animals wrought in bronze or carved in stone guarding all temple doors. They are not as ferocious in appearance as the Numidian lion and they illustrate an idea. One has his mouth open and the other has his mouth tightly shut and they together represent the affirmative and the negative, or, in other words, the eternal conflict between truth and error.

Nara has an additional attraction in the form of a beautiful park containing some 700 deer, which are here regarded as sacred animals. They are so gentle that they will come, old and young, and eat from the hand.

Next to Nara, in our opinion, and in the opinion of many even before Nara, comes Nikko in beauty and interest. The spot was wisely chosen for a temple, a foaming stream, rugged mountains and stately trees adding to the attractiveness of the place. There is a shaded avenue 25 miles long leading from the lowlands to the temple and it is said that when other feudal lords were bringing stone lanterns, one poor daimio, unable to make so large a gift, offered to plant little trees along the way; these, now 300 years old, furnish a grateful shade for the pilgrims who visit this Mecca and the poor tree planter is now known as "The Wise Daimio who went into partnership with Nature."

The temple at Nikko is only about three centuries old and its decorations are the richest and most costly to be found in Japan. As the Buddhists and Shintoists worship together here, the temple is kept in repair by the government and one can see the best in architecture and ornamentation that the temples exhibit. So famous are this temple and its environment that the Japanese have a phrase which when translated means "You cannot say beautiful (kekko) until you have seen Nikko."

The most modern of the large temples is that at Kyoto. It was erected about 30 years ago on the site of one which had burned. It is not so large as the original, but is a reproduction in other respects and is one of the 33 temples to which pilgrimages are made. Some estimate can be formed of the ardor of those who worship here when it is known that the immense timbers used in the construction of the building were dragged through the streets and lifted into place by cables made of human hair contributed by Japanese women for that purpose. One of these cables, nearly three inches in diameter and several hundred feet long, is still kept in a room adjacent to the temple, the others having been destroyed by fire. Japanese women pride themselves upon their hair and arrange it with great care—what a poem of piety—what a strong sacrifice in these myriad strands of mingled black and gray!

All of the Buddhist temples stand within a walled inclosure, entered through a gorgeous gate, which contrasts sharply with the simplicity of the Shinto gate. The Buddhist gate has a roof resembling a temple roof and is often ornamented with animals, birds and fantastic figures carved in wood. As an illustration of the superstition to be found among the ignorant, the following incident is given. An American, Mr. Frederick W. Horne, who lives at Yokohama and who has built up a large importing business in American machinery, has a handsome new home modelled after a Buddhist temple. At one gable he put a devil's head. The servants of the man living next door threatened to leave because the devil looked over into that yard. But they were quieted when the neighbor put two brass cannon on his roof and pointed them at the devil's head. The story seems too absurd to believe, but we were shown the cannons when we called at Mr. Horne's.

But Buddhism is losing its hold upon the Japanese; its temples are not crowded as they once were; its ceremonies do not interest and its teachings do not satisfy the new generation. Christianity will appeal more and more to the educated element of the Japanese population. Already favor is taking the place of toleration, as toleration 30 years ago supplanted persecution.

The Catholics, who have been the pioneers of the cross in so many lands, brought Christianity to Japan through Portuguese missionaries about the middle of the sixteenth century. The success of the Jesuits was so pronounced that in 30 years they estimated their converts at 150,000. In fact, the adherents to Christianity became so numerous and so influential that the Shogun, Hideyoshi, began to fear for his temporal power and, having absolute authority, he expelled the foreigners, closed the ports and established the policy of non-intercourse with other nations—a policy which was followed until 1853. When the country was again opened to Christian missionaries it was found that some 10,000 men and women were still worshipping according to the forms of the Catholic church, although for two and a half centuries there had been no communication between them and the church outside. Even after the opening of the country to foreign commerce there was some persecution of Christians and several thousand were imprisoned. But in 1853 the prisoners were set at liberty and the exiles allowed to return; since that time there has been absolute religious freedom and many men prominent in official life have been devoted Christians. The most noted of these native Christians was Mr. Kataoka, who was four times chosen speaker of the popular branch of the Japanese congress or diet. He was an elder in the Presbyterian church and when it was suggested that it would advance his political chances to resign his eldership, he replied that if compelled to choose between them he would rather be an elder than speaker.

The Catholic population of Japan numbered 58,000 in 1903; at the last report the Protestant communicants numbered nearly 51,000. There are among the natives 442 ordained ministers, 559 unordained ministers and helpers and 186 theological students. I met a number of Japanese Christians and was profoundly impressed by their earnestness and devotion. There is a large Y. M. C. A. at Tokio and a smaller one at Kyoto; at Kogoshima I found a Women's Christian Association. While I have met American missionaries everywhere, I have tried to gather information from Japanese sources as well and have been gratified to find such cordial co-operation between foreign and native Christians. A physician in the navy introduced himself and volunteered the information that one American woman had undertaken the establishment of Christian clubs at the various naval stations and within five years had gathered together more than 600 members. He said that she met with opposition from the authorities at first, but now had their hearty support. The war with Russia, while retarding the work of the Greek church among the Japanese, has been utilized by other denominations to reach a large number of sailors with Bibles and pamphlets.

Japan needs the Christian religion; a nation must have some religion and she has outgrown Buddhism. The ideals presented by these two systems are in many respects diametrically opposed to each other. One looks forward, the other backward; one regards life as a blessing to be enjoyed and an opportunity to be improved, the other sees in it only evil from which escape should be sought; one crowns this life with immortality, the other adds to a gloomy existence the darker night of annihilation; one offers faith as the inspiration to noble deeds, the other presents a plan for the perfecting of self with no sense of responsibility to God to prompt it or promise of reward to encourage it; one enlarges the sympathies and links each individual with all other human beings, the other turns the thought inward in search of perpetual calm.

Christianity dominates Europe and the western hemisphere, while Buddhism still holds the Orient under its drowsy spell. On the Island of Japan a struggle is now going on between these two great religious systems, and the triumph of the gospel of love and of consecrated activity in the land of the Rising Sun will open the way to a still larger triumph in Asia.

A PICTURESQUE RIVER VIEW IN JAPAN.

Lunatic In a Cell.

Special to the Montreal Star.

St. Catharines, Ont., February 24.—Representation having been made to County Judge Carman regarding the arrest and confinement in Merritton lock-up of Sylvestre Newton Barr, an alleged lunatic, His Honor made an order suspending Samuel Moffat from the office of village constable for thirty days, in order that enquiries might be made. The charges are that the lock-up being in the basement of the town hall is not a proper place in which to keep any person, much less one in the condition in which Barr then was, and that Barr was confined in the lock-up without any authority for three days. An order has been made that the use of the cells be discontinued pending the result of an inspection.

Nervous Debility

Pains in Your Back, Rheumatism, Varicocele and All Weaknesses, Weak Stomach, Constipation

are cured quickly and forever by my wonder-working Electric Belt. How quickly it soothes the aching nerves and drives the pain from the body! How gently it warms and invigorates the weak stomach and helps it to do its duty! No remedy on earth is one-half so effective, gives one-half as much joy and pleasure to those who use it.

It never fails, and to prove this statement I offer you my appliance

FREE UNTIL CURED.

So pronounced are my cures, so strong is my Belt to cure the human ills, that I do not hesitate to make you this offer. All I ask is that you give me security for the Belt while you wear it.

Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt is no longer an experiment. It is hailed by thousands with loud praise because it cured them. "It cured me. I am well and strong as ever. What more could one ask?" writes a man with a heart full of gratitude.

Do not be in error. This grand appliance is like no other. It is new. It has all the good points that are known in electricity. It gives a powerful current, but does not burn or blister because my special cushion electrodes make the current a warm, gentle glow, which exhilarates and relieves at once.

NERVOUS DEBILITY.—When we consider that our nervous system, which is the fountain of life to the kidneys, liver, stomach, brain and the various organic functions of the body, depends for its sustenance upon the vitalizing element of electricity, and that without this life it is impossible to keep up a normal condition of health in the body, it is easy to understand that a waste of this life principle will be followed by weakness and disease, and it is also easy to understand why the natural restoration of this electric force in the nervous system will saturate the various vital organs which have become weakened with a new energy which will place every vital part of the body in a state of natural health.

TAKE RHEUMATISM.—It is found the world over; it does not respect age or sex, rank, condition or occupation. We believe we are justified in saying that no disease numbers so many subjects; from no disease is the sufferer rendered so helpless or deserving of pity. It gives many warnings,and is easy to cure, if you take it in time. You feel the first stiffness in your knee joints, shoulders and back. Attack it then; you can easily drive it out of your body. But if you let those come-and-go pains come often, they will settle down and stay with you. Cure them at first, and you will save many years of needless suffering. I have cured many thousands of Rheumatics.

VARICOCELE.—The cause of more wrecks in men than any other disease. Thousands of men have Varicocele and are ignorant of the harm which may result; they only know that something is draining the vim and ambition from their bodies and brains, and know of no reason to account for it. This terrible affliction is the most treacherous and certain in its work of all known ailments. It comes on without apparent cause and never ceases in its destructive influence until it robs a man of all his vitality and leaves him a mental wreck. My method has cured after the knife, injection, ligation and every known means have been tried and failed. I have perfected the only appliance which has a special attachment that carries a strong current to the seat of the trouble. In connection with this attachment I also give my Special Spiral Suspensory Free with Belts for Weak Men.

INDIGESTION AND CONSTIPATION, which troubles are the result of inactivity of the liver, and most deadly in its torpid workings upon the system, affecting every organ of the body, can quickly and surely be restored to its normal condition by the effects of the current my Belt will generate and its direct influence upon the action of the liver, promoting and rendering more natural the process of excretion and secretion; in a word, it will impart tone and strength to this organ.

I believe in finding the cause and removing it. After I have removed the cause nature will cure the disease. Too many physicians make the mistake of treating the condition, and overlooking the cause. When the heart is weak they stimulate it with drugs when they ought to devote the treatment to building up the stomach, which is the real cause of the heart failure.

NOTE THE ACTION OF MY METHOD ON THESE CASES:—

NERVOUS AND RUN-DOWN.

Dr. McLaughlin,—

Dear Sir,—I have used one of your Belts at intervals during the past year and can testify to its wonderful stimulating properties for persons whose nervous system is debilitated or run down in any way.

SCIATICA AND CONSTIPATION CURED 6 YEARS AGO—STILL CURED.

Central Kingsclear, York Co., N.B.

Dr. McLaughlin,—

Dear Sir,—When I purchased the Electric Belt from you about six years ago, I was then suffering very much with sciatica in the hip. When I began to wear the Belt it acted like a charm. The sciatica left me, and today I am entirely free from it. I also suffered with costiveness, and had for years been taking medicine to keep my bowels right. Since wearing the Belt I have scarcely ever taken any medicine for that cause, and I can confidently recommend your Belt to any one suffering as I was. I am, yours very truly,

D. F. KNIGHT.

PAINS AND ACHES ALL GONE.

Galt, Ont.

Dr. McLaughlin,—

Dear Sir,—I received your Belt and am well pleased with it. I wore it steady for a month, and it has given me perfect satisfaction. All the aches and pains have disappeared, and I find it invaluable for any sprain, as we often sprain our legs in jumping off of cars.

I remain, yours truly,

H. T. SIMPSON.

RHEUMATISM AND WEAKNESS CURED TO STAY.

Grand Mere, Que.

Dr. McLaughlin,—

Dear Sir,—I must apologize for being so long in answering your letter, and at the same time I must say that I was surprised to receive same, asking for results by the use of your Electric Belt. It must be fully two years ago that I wrote you to the effect that the Belt did the work O.K. I wore it then for some time, and gradually but surely both rheumatism and weakness disappeared. I then laid the Belt aside and have proclaimed it a real cure. Yes, the Belt cures. I wrenched my back last fall and immediately applied the Belt and am again well. I repeat it—I believe the Belt is a wonderful appliance for the relief of suffering humanity.

Yours truly, G. DUVAL.

WAS A POOR CRIPPLE—CAN NOW STOOP AND PICK UP A PIN.

Riviere aux Pins,
St. Gabriel P. O., Que.

Dr. McLaughlin,—

Dear Sir,—I take this opportunity of letting you know the benefit your Belt has given me. I was a poor cripple before I got it; now I can stoop and pick up a pin with ease. It was worth a great amount of money the good it has done me. My advice is that no home should be without one. I thank you for the benefit it has done me.

Yours truly, PHILIP McGAHEY.

DYSPEPSIA.

Lunenburg, N.S.

Dr. McLaughlin,—

Dear Sir,—The Belt bought from you last October, when suffering from dyspepsia, has proved a great benefit; in fact, I may say that I am quite well now. Yours sincerely, (REV.) G. C. WALLIS.

"THE PLAGUE SPOT."

Chatham, With Its 20,000 Soldiers Comes In for Severe Criticism.

London, February 24. — "Darkest England," or "The Plague Spot of the Medway," is the title which has been bestowed on Chatham. Chatham is declared to be the most unsavory of all of the naval and military centres in the United Kingdom. A Church of England mission has been carried on during the past few weeks at this place. The missionary engaged was the Rev. A. J. Waldron, of Brickston, who determined to find out for himself the exact situation. Dressed as a workman he visited the different dens of vice and was appalled at the immorality. So emphatic and pronounced were his statements that a citizens' league was this week organized for the purpose of attempting the renovation of the place. One of the clergymen interested declared that he had worked in the slums of London and that his clerical duties had called him to the very worst sections of the city. He said that never before had he witnessed scenes to equal those in Chatham, drunkenness among women being especially prevalent in that town. He said that where nearly 20,000 soldiers and sailors were gathered together it was to be expected that vice would prevail. "It is as perfect an imitation of Hades as can be found anywhere," he added. "At any time of the day one can see dozens of women staggering from one drinking shop to another. Young girls, not out of their teens, women with babes in their arms, old women hideous with sin, drink heavily from morning till night."

FATAL HEAT OF TUNNEL.

Italian Workman Stifled by the Heat of Simplon Alpine Tunnel.

Geneva, February 24.—The dangers of the Simplon tunnel are illustrated by the fact that an Italian workman has just been stifled by the heat of the interior of the passageway. To prevent accidents of this kind in the future the tunnel authorities intend posting a special man at each tunnel. Wishing to return to Italy the Italian decided to brave the heat of the tunnel rather than the cold and snow on the pass above. At dusk he entered the northern portal and followed the rails for nearly two miles, when he was overcome by the bad air and became unconscious. He lay there until morning, when he was injured by a locomotive and was discovered. The injured man was removed to Brigue, where he soon died.

SESSIONAL INDEMNITY.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Quebec, February 24. — Very little committee work was done yesterday, a Ministerial caucus having engaged the attention of the greater number of members of the Assembly up to nearly half-past twelve o'clock. There are various rumors of the proceedings of the caucus, but all present having been pledged to secrecy, it is far from easy to give very complete details of the proceedings, which were held behind closed and carefully guarded doors. It can be positively asserted, however, that the most important matter before the caucus to-day was that of the proposed increase in the sessional indemnity. The matter was discussed at considerable length, as rather serious opposition to the movement developed itself on the part, it is said, of some of the more recently elected members of the Montreal district. Some of these were seen, but declared emphatically that their mouths were closed as to what occurred in party caucus. From other sources, however, it is learned that the further consideration of the matter was deferred till a later date.

Dr. Reaume at Convention.

Ottawa, Ont., February 24.—Among the visitors to the Bilingual School Teachers' Convention are Hon. Dr. Reaume, Minister of Public Works for Ontario, and O. Aubin, M. P. P., East Nipissing. Dr. Reaume and Mr. Aubin gave addresses praising the work of the Bilingual schools. The Provincial Minister of Public Works assured the convention of the support of the Provincial Government in bringing the schools up to a high standard of efficiency. Both gentlemen sat to the right and left of Archbishop Duhamel in the seats of honor at a reception.

STRUGGLE OF THE CLASSES

Lord Roberts Continues His Fight to Apprise English People of Their Military Weakness.

Special Cable to the Montreal Star.

London, February 24.—The newspapers and the people of Great Britain have not as yet done with discussion regarding the world-wide sweep of labor movements as manifested in the general elections just held. The adjustment of the difficulties between the upper and the lower classes in Russia growing out of the strikes and the great economic revolution there, the Socialistic agitations in Germany and France, the war between the trusts and the labor unions reported from America and the whipping out of the railroad rate situation in congress as reported from the United States all give rise to the theory that what the Socialists in their technical class jargon call "class consciousness"—the hour when the workingmen really become conscious of their strength and power—has arrived. For instance, Mr. J. Keir Hardie, M.P., in a paper just written for the National Review, talks in this strain of the labor movement.

"One thing is certain—the common people of Great Britain, for weal or woe, like those of the world generally, have entered upon a final struggle with the upper classes for supremacy. For ages past the policy of the politician has been to get hold of any member of the working classes who has risen into prominence and became a power amongst his fellows, and to attach him to the chariot wheels of the Liberal party. These days have now gone past and in the new party no member will be allowed whose vanity or ambition will lead him to desert his class and to enlist in the ranks of the enemy.

"In the future, at least, those who act in this manner will be estimated at their true value, and instead of being hailed as saviors and leaders of the people, will be treated as renegades and deserters. The working class of Great Britain have entered the field of labor politics somewhat late in the day. But they have entered it, and will now take their place beside their fellow workmen of other lands in seeking deliverance from the bondage of toil and poverty wherein they have so long been enthralled and in working out their own salvation—economic, industrial and political."

"WONDERFUL" STATE OF AFFAIRS.

"Oh, wonderful, wonderful and most wonderful, wonderful, and yet again wonderful, and after that out of all whooping!"

This is a quotation from Shakespeare's "As You Like It," and is used, possibly in a facetious sense by a correspondent writing a leader in the London Times analyzing the recent general elections. This particular correspondent who writes as a Liberal voter on the Liberal victory, gives a pretty keen analysis of the situation as it exists to-day.

The interesting part of the entire discussion is that the London Times, which is ultra Conservative, should admit to its columns the ideas of a Liberal voter who claims to be "obscure," a radical, a Home Ruler and a Free Trader. He says that he believes that he represents hundreds and thousands of silent voters all over the country. Some of the conclusions in his "Keen Analysis" indicate that he is clever, even if he be an obscure voter, and inasmuch as the Times never admits to printing communications from obscure people it is probable that the writer really belongs to the political "400" of the country.

His first conclusion is that it seems certain now that the general election in 1900 did not reflect the permanent political complexion of the country. The writer concludes, "It represented the resolve of the electorate that the government which had made the war and prosecuted it with steadfastness and conviction, if not with administrative capacity and intelligence, must be left to bring it to an end, and its conviction that an opposition which had largely opposed the war could not be trusted either to conduct its final stages with vigor or to end it with dignity. In other words the sole mandate that the Unionist party got from the electorate in 1900 was to fight to a finish, and having done so to bring the war to an end on terms compatible with the objects for which it was waged.

"As soon as that was done it was inevitable that the Liberal party should begin to recover its normal strength in the constituencies, and it was at least a reasonable contention on the part of its representatives in parliament that the mandate obtained by the Unionist party in 1900 did not entitle it, after the war was ended, to employ its majority in pursuing a legislative policy acceptable to the Unionist party alone, and singularly distasteful, as the result has proved to the country at large."

THE CAMPAIGN OF LORD ROBERTS.

Lord Roberts with a sustained effort that is remarkable continues his struggle to awaken the people to a sense of their military weakness and the perils which the situation involves. At a time of life when nothing but profound conviction usually impels even a hard worker who has reached the top of his profession to sacrifice his leisure and repose, he is making a campaign of the country for the purpose of interesting the people in the subject which is nearest and dearest to his heart. Just by way of illustration it may be shown that so active was he that he made a speech at Liverpool on Monday and another at Manchester on Tuesday, reiterating his warnings and setting forth the only remedy that he judges effectual. As he states the problem the regular army voluntarily recruited, is a strictly limited quantity.

One secretary for war tries to stretch his material in one direction and another in another direction. One tries short service, in order to obtain a strong reserve, and finds that he cannot keep an efficient and adequate army with the colors. Another tries long service in order to get the necessary forces, and finds that he cannot build up even an adequate reserve for a very moderate sized war. Each is abused for not accomplishing what the other attempts. The public sickens of the bootless quarrel and of the entire question.

Lord Roberts desires an increase in the number of trained men from whom volunteers could be drawn in case of need, a million men being his standard. He favors laying the foundation of this training at school as a part of the physical training now given in other ways or not given at all. He does not favor conscription, but a universal military training, under which every man would be in the position of a volunteer.

Special to The Montreal Star.

St. Andrew's, N.B., February 24.—Charles Watt, thirty years of age, despondent through illness, leaped from a cliff into the St. Croix River and put an end to his troubles. His body was found after the tide receded. Early in the winter he returned from the Klondyke, broken down in health. He consulted several specialists, and last Monday he returned from Montreal very despondent.

Many Charges Against Usurers.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Toronto, February 24.—Eight hundred charges will be laid, Crown-Attorney Curry has announced, in the McHarrie and Kehr cases of charging extortionate interest. McHarrie was remanded in the police court this morning on a charge of fraud, and will come back in a week. The hugh grist of information to be laid is a part of the Crown Attorney's crusade for the reformation of high interest contracts.

TROUBLE RIFE IN CELESTIAL EMPIRE

Chinese Officials Use Opportunity to Obtain Graft.

OFFICIALS WANT NO TROUBLE

Missionaries, While They are Sending Their Wives to Seaports, are Remaining at Their Posts.

Special Cable to the Montreal Star.

Pekin, February 24.—The policy of China for the Chinese is producing the results naturally to be expected in the existing condition of the native administration. The official class while professing to deplore the violence of the views of the students and reactionaries avails itself of their agitation as an excuse for adopting an uncompromising attitude in all relations with foreigners, and at the same time adroitly uses the movement as a means of increasing official revenues. For instance, in Kwang-tung and Ngan-hwei provinces the native railway bureaus have been authorized to raise money for the construction of the proposed lines by local taxation since funds are otherwise unobtainable without recourse to foreign capital. The immediate result is to afford lucrative opportunities for the officials concerned while increasing the anti-foreign feeling.

TROUBLE IS PREDICTED.

In foreign circles here trouble this summer is freely predicted. A revival of the Boxer agitation is regarded as almost certain. The alarm has reached such a stage that officials and missionaries are sending their families to the coast cities whenever possible without attracting special attention, feeling that they will be safer under the protection of foreign warships. The state of feeling can best be understood when it is remembered that the officials and the missionaries personally are not leaving their posts. They appear to be satisfied with knowing that their families are safe. They are willing to take chances on getting away so far as they are personally concerned, or this very reason it can be seen that the situation is not so bad as it might appear at first thought. If there were immemdiate danger the foreigners would learn it from the friendly natives and would hurry to Pekin or the coast cities themselves without loss of time. The secretive nature of the precautionary measures taken makes it difficult to correctly estimate the situation since when a foreigner sends his wife away he does not tell the natives the real reason, he merely says something about going back to Europe or America on a visit or about going to Pekin, Shanghai or Hong Kong for health. If the missionaries and the foreign residents in the interior cities should come away themselves instead of being content with sending their families their failure to keep up their work would speedily indicate that trouble was brewing. But on the surface things do not appear bad for the reason that the men are remaining at their posts.

RULERS DO NOT WANT TROUBLE.

The central Chinese government is undoubtedly doing everything in its power to prevent a repetition of the Boxer outrages. Admitting for the sake of the argument that the ruling classes are in reality no more friendly to the foreigners than the meanest coolies, the Chinese are great students of history. The Dowager Empress like most rulers certainly does not want local troubles, either religious or commercial. She remembers the British seizure of Hong Kong, the entry of the allied forces into Pekin, the resultant absorption by Russia of the province of Manchuria proper. She realizes that every outbreak no matter whether religious or commercial, is made the excuse for new and fresh land grabbing such as Russia enforcing a lease of Liaotung Peninsula, to Great Britain securing a corresponding foothold at Wei-hai-wei and Germany demanding the cession of Kiachou. As one of the leading Chinese diplomats remarked when the subject of the American boycott was up for discussion a few weeks ago and it was suggested that another Boxer rebellion and the killing of more missionaries might be expected to follow:

"That will not be if the Chinese Government can prevent. It costs us a port like Kiachau for the killing of a missionary or two. You can understand that we cannot afford to kill very many of them, since there are more missionaries than we have ports."

The Chinese diplomat appeared to make this statement in sober, serious earnestness. To an American or a European it may sound like an attempt at a joke, but even in China there is such a thing as paying too dearly for one's whistle, especially if that whistle or hobby be a habit of killing missionaries.

NO STRONGER THAN PEOPLE.

If the Europeans and Americans will only understand that here in China even governments are not stronger than the people themselves when the people are once roused to action they will go a long way towards getting at the true reason why the government does not dare to exercise a strong hand in the suppression of rebellions like those inaugurated by the Boxers—why the boycott is not stopped at the point of its inception. For while the Dowager Empress may be afraid of Boxer rebellions (this is not to say that she loves the foreigner more, but that she fears him more and loves her own peace of mind) she is still powerless to prevent these outrages or outbreaks. Government here in China, like government in the United States, is a series of compromises with the people. And the Dowager Empress could no more prevent the Boxer rebellion than President McKinley could have stopped the American people from going to war with Spain over Cuba.

The reports from the United States to the effect that the Americans are shipping troops to Manila for the purpose of protecting Americans in the event of another outbreak in China similar to that of the Boxer rebellion, are not attracting even a passing interest here. It is possible that the Dowager Empress and the Emperor and some of their advisers may conclude that the sending of the troops manifests anything but a friendly attitude on the part of the Washington authorities, but if so, of course, they would give no sign. But upon even the educated classes it would have no effect except perhaps to accentuate at times the bitterness of the commercial boycott.

Girl Charged With Double Crime.

New York, February 24.—A mysterious stabbing affair, which may result in the deaths of Joseph Riga and his wife, occurred in Williams Bridge. The police allege that the stabbing was done by a young niece of the couple, Marie Noba, who lives in Brooklyn. She had spent the day with her aunt and uncle and after a quarrel which the neighbors heard, left the place. The wounded couple were found shortly afterwards. What the quarrel was about is not known. Both Riga and his wife are unconscious.

A SUCCESSFUL ARTIST.

Young American Artist Photographer Making a Name in London.

Special Cable to The Montreal Star.

London, February 24.—Mr. Alvin Langdon Coburn, a young American artist photographer, is making a reputation for himself this winter in London by his photographic exhibitions, which are original and artistic. The Royal Photographic Society has even gone so far as to lend its rooms on Russel Square to an exhibition by this artist. Mr. Coburn is only 23 years old, but he has already had fifteen years of technical experience, as he began at eight years of age, and has experimented ever since with a whole battery of lenses and cameras of every description. A number of men and women well known in the world of art and letters have been placed on exhibition, one room containing the very interesting series of "speaking likenesses," while the other is hung with groups of landscapes and buildings in New York, London, Rome and Venice.

THE TELEPHONE QUESTION.

Government Ownership Will Not Likely Be Pressed.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, February 24.—Evidences are accumulating that nothing further will be done by the government in connection with the special enquiry into the telephone matter inaugurated last session, apart from bringing in a report, which it is not expected will go very far in the direction of recommending government ownership. The evidence and correspondence, which will make two or three large volumes, is being published. Mr. Dagger, the English expert who was employed by the Government at a salary of $250 a month, has returned to English, having, it is understood, completed his engagement with the Government. The proposal of the Bell Telephone Co. to largely increase its capital stock is regarded as a sure indication that the directors have good reason to believe that they have no reason to fear an announcement of a policy of government ownership.

Plays and Players.

Music played an important part in the week at the theatres, the inauguration of the Philharmonic taking up His Majesty's for two evenings, and the Symphony concert being held at the Academy on Friday. The State concert was probably one of the most brilliant performances ever given in Montreal and was worthy the attention it attracted. Tuesday evening's concert was in many ways equally enjoyable. "It's Up to You, John Henry" drew large audiences at the Academy and the other local houses were well patronized.

The management of His Majesty's promise a number of new productions during the remainder of the season, including "The Rose of the Alhambra"; Frank Daniels in "Sergeant Brue," Charming Pollock's new play, "The Little Grey Lady," and also Patro's "The Fascinating Mr. Vandervelt," with Elis Jeffreys in the leading role; George Ade's "The College Widow," and the musical plays, "The Tenderfoot" and "The Runaways." In Toronto this week two popular artists of widely differing talents divided honors. They were Edna May, in "The Catch of the Season"; and Richard Mansfield neither of whom are announced to visit Montreal this season.

AT LOCAL PLAYHOUSES.

When Charles Dana Gibson and Augustus Thomas wanted a Mr. Pipp for "The Education of Mr. Pipp," they sought Digby Bell, his comedy possessing the ingredients for the Gibson-Thomas character. Mr. Bell, the creator of the stage Mr. Pipp, will be presented by Daniel V. Arthur for one week, beginning next Monday night at His Majesty's Theatre. J. Wesley Pipp, the unassuming and always with apologies the head of the illustrious family (when Mr. Pipp is out of sight), has made millions through the courtesy of United States Steel, but deplores that the squeezing process of the trust has retired him from active business life. To Mrs. Pipp in her tireless search for social recognition the change comes as a godsend, the fulfilment of a long-cherished hope, a Fifth Avenue mansion. The native Pittsburg so dear to Mr. Pipp, where as a puddler boy he courted his future dominating wife and builded the foundations of his fortunes, is left behind and forgotten, and it is in New Yrok that the first act shows the Pipp family comfortably installed in a made-over mansion. Count Charmarot, self-styled, reduced in fortunes, robbed of estates, some time croupier at Monte Carlo, more recently instructor of the French language to aspiring Americans of wealth, is Mrs. Pipp's first idol. The villainy of the bogus Count and the plot to defraud the Pipps out of thousands of dollars is revealed when Charmarot meets an accomplice, a Duc de la Touraine, in the Pipp mansion. The Duke is Mrs. Pipp's idol Number 2. It is around the story of the theft of $75,000 by means of a bad cheque and a traced signature that Mr. Thomas has constructed his lines of unoffending satire. A series of "thrills" is furnished by the discovery of a scheme to rob Mrs Pipp of her diamonds, a plot to poison Mr. Pipp and the arrest of the bogus celebrities. In the company are Helen Tracey, Janet Beecher, Adele Leulrmann, Sam. B. Hardy, Fred. Courtenay, W. S. St. Clair, Sam Colt, Seth Halsey, Frank Powell, Ann Warrington, Edytha Johnson, William Evans, C. Jay Williams, Harry L. Lang and Helen Vassar.

KUBELIK AND HIS WIFE, THE CO UNTESS GZAKY.

DIGBY BELL,
Who will appear next week at His Majesty's in "The Education of Mr. Pipp."

"The Sultan of Sulu," which will be seen at the Academy of Music next week, is by George Ade, and the music has been provided by Alfred G. R. Wathall. The plot is said to be less improbable than that on which the general run of musical comedies are based, and differs from them in the possession of a subject of contemporaneous interest The theme is suggested by the American occupation of Sulu, and the "benevolent assimilation" of its polygamous ruler. The island potentate, with many wives, accepts the sovereignty of the United States and takes the title of Governor, under the tutelage of a volunteer colonel from Arkansas. A strong-minded maiden lady who arrives with the American invaders is appointed Judge Advocate. She insists upon divorcing the Sultan from all his wives but one, "the charter member of his harem." The Judge Advocate also exacts alimony at the rate of half the Governor's salary for each of the seven divorced wives, and upon his failure to comply with this impossible decision, the unhappy ruler is plunged into gaol. There are said to be many amusing complications before affairs are finally straightened out and the constitution is distorted so as to admit of every one being made happy.

"The House of Mystery," by Langdon McCormick, will be given at the Theatre Francais next week. From a melodramatic standpoint "The House of Mystery" is said to be interesting, being founded on an entirely new and original theme told in a logical and interesting matter.

"L'Instinct," a three-act play by Henry Kistemaeckers, is the offering next week at the Nouveautes. In the principal parts will be Melle Ducange, as "Cecile"; Mr. Lefrancais as "Dr. Bernou"; and Mr. Christian as "Andre Bernou." Melle Bienfait, Mme. Lefrancais, Messrs. Prevost, Desplas, will also be seen. Monday evening, between the acts, there will be a special programme of recitations.

"The Fay Foster Company" will be at the Theatre Royal next week. The performance opens with "Cleopatra in Central Park," in which the entire company appears to advantage. In the vaudeville portion of the show are the following acts: Vivian, the phenomenal baritone; Herbert and Willing, eccentric black-face comedians; Cushman and St. Clair, sketch artists; Keno, Welsh and Montrose; and Louie Dacre, the happy girl.

Miss Ellen Bowick, who will give a recital in the lecture hall of St. Andrew's Church, on February 27th, was born in England of Scotch parentage. She became a student at the Royal Academy of Music, and was awarded a medal by Forbes Robertson for her Shakesperean readings. She made her debut at the Queen's Hall, London, ballad concerts, and also gave selections with orchestral accompaniment with Henry Wood's Orchestra. She has since been heard with all the principal orchestras in England. Miss Bowick has received a medal from King Edward and Queen Alexandria, and an autograph letter of appreciation from H.R.H. Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein. Following is the programme she will give at her recital:

Christmas Eve in the Far West:
(a) The Old Apple Orchard

Accompanist, Frederick H. Blair.

The first presentation in this city of Strauss's "Enoch Arden" will be given by Mr. Blair at the Montreal Woman's Club on Monday next, with Miss Ellen Bowick as elocutionist.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

Among the most interesting piano recitals given by local artists are those of Mr. S. Stratford Dawson. Mr. Dawson does not design his programmes merely to display his technical brilliance and make an impression on possible pupils, but rather to show his general artistic powers which have notably broadened in the few years since he came here. His recital on Friday at the Y. M. C. A. Hall should be of much interest.

The Kubelik concert to be given in Windsor Hall next Monday night, will in all probability be the last concert in Windsor Hall, as work is to be commenced at once on the new Windsor Hotel building. Opportunities to hear Kubelik play are rale. This is his first visit to America in four years, and it will be his last for some time, for at the end of his present visit he will go on a tour around the world that will prevent his return to this country for two seasons at least. Kubelik will play an exceedingly interesting and highly spectacular programme here. He will be assisted by Ludwig Schwab, accompanist, and Agnes Gardner Eyre, solo pianiste.

The programme of cello numbers which will be performed by the great cellist Jean Gerardy at Stanley Hall on March 6, has been arranged. Mr. Gerardy's numbers are as follows:

1—First Concerto .. .. .. Saint-Saens.
2—Symphonic Variations .... Boellman
3—(a) Aria .. ..Bach
(b) Abendlied .. .. Schumann
(c) Berceuse .. .. Schubert
(d) Papilion .. .. Popper

"The Rose of the Alhambra," in which Lillian Blauvelt is starring, will come to His Majesty's the week beginning March 5th. Miss Blauvelt is a violinist as well as a vocalist and at the age of seven made her first public appearance as a violinist. During the years of her study and touring abroad she did not give up her violin. During the past summer in New York, when taking part in a charity concert, she appeared with her violin and played a difficult sonata.

The Mendelssohn Trio Fourth Chamber Music concert, under the patronage of their Excellencies the Governor-General and Lady Grey, will be held Thursday, March 1st at 8.15, in the Art Gallery. Following is the programme:

Kolb and Dill will appear at the Academy of Music, Monday, March 5, when they will portray two Dutchmen, trying to run a hotel without belonging to the various unions. They will be supported by Miss Williams, Francis K. Lieb, Ben Dillon, and Will H. Cross. The musical features include, "Blew, blew, blew," a sextette by Kolb, Dill and Dillon, and the Misses Bain, Darragh and Tolon. "My Maori Maid," by Charlotte Vidot and chorus, is a dance originated in New Zealand, when Kolb and Dill played there.

"Girl of the Streets," said to be a powerful play of human interest, is an early booking at the Theatre Francais. The company is headed by Edith Gray, in the leading role of "Kit."

The Brigadiers' Extravaganza Company will be the attraction at the Theatre Royal the week of March 5th, with Mr. Edmund Hayes as "the wise Guy."

The Emerald Musical and Dramatic Association, will present Dan McCarthy's favorite Irish drama, "True Irish Hearts" in Sohmer Park, afternoon and evening, St. Patrick's Day. The cast is said to be an excellent one.

Arthur Rubinstein the young virtuoso pianist who will play at Stanley Hall on March 14th will probably conclude the season of piano concerts. He is winning great success in his American tour not only by his extraordinary technique but also by his personality. Mr. Apthorpe the well known Boston critic who met him a year or two ago paved the way for Rubinstein's success here by his glowing discriptions of the young virtuoso's magnetism and poetical charm.

DOINGS OF THE PLAYERS.

Even Pittsburg, Pa., will not prove a haven of peace to Olga Nethersole. The good ladies of the smoky city are said to have acquired a condition akin to nervous prostration for fear she will present "Sappho" there. The executive committee of the Wilkinsburg Women's Club have sent her a letter begging her to omit it from her repertoire. Perhaps they would have included "The Labyrinth" in the petition if they knew much of current plays.

Lewis Waller will shortly appear at the Imperial Theatre, London, in

BERNICE HART,
Who will appear as Chiquita in George Ade's "Sultan of Sulu" at the Academy next week.

"Brigadier Girard." A play founded on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's tales of the fascinating French soldier.

It is said the company of Richard Mansfield enjoyed a rehearsal the other day in the supposed absence of the actor-manager, but that just as the rehearsal was over Mr. Mansfield rose from the gloom of a stage box and hurled remarks about until some of the women were reduced to tears. The lot of the actor isn't all roses in the Mansfield tour. Wonder how he and the "divine Sarah" will get on if they join forces.

Channing Pollock, author of "The Little Grey Lady," etc., has been suffering from a severe attack of mumps, and his condition has caused some worry.

Edna May, formerly the wife of Fred. Titus, the bicycle rider, is said to have been married in Chicago recently to Oscar Lewisohn, a wealthy New Yorker.

"Alice-Sit-By-the-Fire," in which Ethel Barrymore made more or less of a hit in New York, will be succeeded at the Criterion Theatre on March 6th by Francis Wilson, in "The Mountain Climber."

Mrs. Wharton's novel, "The House of Mirth," is to be dramatized by the author and Clyde Fitch, and the play will be produced by Charles Frohman.

BERTINE ROBISON,
With "The House of Mystery" at the Theatre Francais next week.

Brander Matthews and George Arliss, the latter a member of Mrs. Fiske's company, have written a play, which is said to have a theme of international interest. The play will be produced next season by Daniel Frohman, who has secured the English and American rights.

David Warfield will give the five hundredth performance of "The Music Master" in New York on March 6th.

Benjamin Horning is a member of the company playing "Behind the Mask," a four-act melodrama by Edmund Day, which was recently produced in New York.

Will that original "Florodora" sextette never get married? Another, almost the three hundredth it seems, has just been wedded in the person of Miss Frances Belmont, who this week married Lord Ashburton in Paris. How many were in that sextette, anyway? Not the usual amount by about several hundred, if all claimants are correct.

John Hare will shortly produce in London "The Alabaster Staircase," by Captain Marshall.

Arrangements are said to have been completed for Henrietta Crosman to appear in London at the head of an English company, in "As You Like It." Harry Woodruff will be the "Orlando."

DEATH BLASTS HIGH HOPES.

Mother of Immigrant Family Dies En Route to Eldorado.

When Frederic Sheldenhardt, his wife and three children, arrived from Russia, he told the interpreter at the Windsor station that he had come to make his fortune in the great new world, the land of golden promise to refugees like himself. His wife smiled and said that they would make a happy home for themselves in far Dakota, which was their destination.

That was a fortnight ago, and next day Mrs. Sheldenhardt was taken seriously ill. Too poor to delay his departure, Sheldenhardt set out for Dakota with the three young children, earnestly entreating the Royal Victoria Hospital officials to take good care of his wife and to send her to him at the earliest opportunity.

In every one of his letters that came regularly during the days that followed, Sheldenhardt begged that his wife be sent. Penniless thought he was, he would work hard and repay them all the expense.

Mrs. Sheldenhardt died Friday. In her last moments she entreated to rejoin her husband and children, and her dying wish has been carried out. Friday the C. P. R. arranged for the sending of the body to Dakota, and the immigrant family will be reunited, though death stepped in to ruin their brightest hopes.

Absolon Thouin, restaurant keeper, St. Catherine and St. Andre streets, appeared on Friday before Mr. Recorder Poirier charged with conducting a cafe concert, where instrumental and vocal music was given. He was fined $5 and cost or ten days. The arrest was made by Sergeant Smith and Constable Cote.

FURTHER DELAY IN WHARF SHEDS

Harbor Board Rescinds Order to Engineer Kennedy for Their Completion.

PROTEST BY MR. A. A. ALLAN

Shipping Men Advocate Angle Iron Frame Doors—New Tariff of Wharf Dues.

At the Harbor Commissioners meeting yesterday afternoon the shed door question again took up a goodly portion of the session. Mr. Andrew A. Allan, who has been absent at the last two meetings of the board, having been out of town during that period, took exception to the Commissioners settling this matter without having first consulted the shipping men or their representative on the board.

It was explained that this question of doors had held fire for a good many weeks, and had added materially to the difficulty of getting on with the sheds.

DOORS FAVORED BY SHIPPERS.

Upon motion the report of Mr. Robb, secretary of the Shipping Federation, upon doors was read. Mr. Robb, who Mr. Allan explained had had a great deal of experience in such matters advocated an angle iron frame door which some of the members objected to on the ground that it was not acceptable to the fire underwriters, not being considered fireproof.

Mr. Doran contended that the doors advocated by Chief Engineer Kennedy were correct in principle but incorrect in detail.

As there had been over-abundance of reports upon these self-same doors, no two of which agreed, the Commissioners finally decided to refer the reports of Messrs. Kennedy, St. George, Marchand and Robb to a committee of the whole for consideration, rescinding the order placed upon the minute book at the last meeting, by which Mr. Kennedy was ordered to go ahead with his particular type.

ENGINEERS REPORT ON SHEDS.

A report pertaining to the probability of the first seven sheds being ready at the opening of navigation was received from Mr. Kennedy and read. The report dealing with each shed individually elicited the following information.

Shed No. 2—The lower floor will be finished by May 1, and should be ready for occupancy by that time.

Shed No. 4—This structure would not be ready for occupancy by May 1.

Shed No. 7—Of this Mr. Kennedy expressed the opinion that with good weather the first floor might be utilized by May 1.

Shed No. 9—The report on this shed was practically the same as on No. 7.

Shed No. 8—This structure would not be finished by May 1, nor would No. 12.

Shed No. 10—Mr. Kennedy stated that nothing had been done on this shed, and, of course, it would not be ready at the time previously mentioned.

MORE INFORMATION WANTED.

The report was not satisfactory to the Commissioners, inasmuch as it did not in all cases give the reasons why the sheds would not be complete. In other words the Commissioners wished to place the responsibility for the slow progress which had from the first been one of the most noticeable features of this shed building. The report was therefore sent back to Mr. Kennedy for more explicit information.

Mr. Doran stated that there had been altogether too much interference by Mr. St. George. The sheds should be erected according to Mr. Kennedy's plans, and then, if they were not found satisfactory, it was up to their Chief Engineer.

Mr. Robert Bickerdike remarked that the people were after the Commissioners because of the delays in this work when, as a matter of fact, it was not their fault, at least not all of it, and he proposed to place the responsibility where it belonged.

NEW WHARFAGE TARIFF

Near the close of the session Mr. Andrew A. Allan laid before the Commissioners a revised tariff of wharfage dues which were satisfactory to the shipping men. The changes from last year's schedule pertained to the tariff on glassware, crockery and earthenware. The rates on these were, according to the amendments, reduced to from 12 cents to 18 cents per ton, against the old figure of 20 cents. This being satisfactory to the Commissioners it was passed.

CHANGES AT CITY HALL.

Additional Offices to Be Provided for Treasury Department.

The superintendent of the City Hall is having extensive changes made in the basement, in order to make room for a new suite of offices for the treasury department. A number of rooms which had hitherto been devoted to more or less unimportant purposes are being used to make way for the proposed changes. A large vault, whose three arches had been walled up, has been again opened, and will be given over to the Treasury Department as a storehouse for its records. The vault formerly occupied by Mr. Drouin, one of the City Hall engineers, will be turned over to the Department of Surety for stowing away articles concerned in actions for theft. These changes will be completed in a week.

Given His Last Chance.

James Mulcahy, who was before Mr. Recorder Poirier Wednesday morning, and fined for being drunk and assaulting his father, who is 83 years old, appeared again before the Recorder, charged with being drunk and loitering, and was sentenced to eight days in gaol, $3 or ten more days. Mr. Poirier in sentencing him told him not to appear again before him, as it was the last chance he would give him.

Let the mother take Scott's Emulsion for the two; it never fails to benefit them both. One can eat for two, but nourishing two is a different thing. It calls for a degree of internal strength that the average woman lacks. SIXTH ANNIVERSARY OF PAARDEBERG

Six Years Ago Now Cronje Was Beleaguered in Modder River Bed.

CANADIANS BLOOD BAPTISM

Their Wild Charge Up Steep Hill Was One of Famous Actions of the War.

This week occurs the sixth anniversary of the battle of Paardeberg, in which Canadians for the first time gave their lives for the defence of the Empire. To many it will come with bitter souvenirs of the anxious hours spent waiting for news from the front where loved ones were engaged in deadly battle, fears which in many cases were only too completely realized. But even those who look back with pain on these days of anguish can join with all other Canadian in the feeling of pride with which they recall the time when the Empire called on her sons to come to her aid, and when Canadians did not turn a deaf ear to the summons but boldly took up the burden and sacrificed even their lives in devotion to their national ideals.

BOERS IN DEATH TRAP.

As the calendar of this year is exactly the same as that of 1900 the account of the battle of Paardeberg is greatly simplified from the days coinciding with one another. Six years ago last Sunday General Cronje's magnificent night march from Magersfontein ended in disaster, and the main body of the Boers was enclosed in a death-trap. The enemy were reported to be hiding in the bed of the Modder river, commanded by the British artillery and enclosed on the east and west by the British infantry. Sunday had witnessed a gallant stand on the part of the retreating foe. Tired and harassed they still maintained a bold front. They entrenched the river bed and prevented an advance in that direction. The whole line was then ordered to envelop the Boers, who held both banks of the river. The firing soon became heavy. The Boers holding a spl did position were able to command the advance and do terrible execution. General Cronje's laager could be plainly seen on the north bank of the river. General Smith-Dorien collected a large body of men, including the Canadians, and crossing the river by Paardeberg Drift advanced towards the laager which was being vigorously shelled. This force made a gallant attempt to charge into the laager, but failed. On Monday the Boers were in the same place. During the night they had constructed entrenchments around the laager, which was being threatened by Smith-Dorien, with his brigade, in which was the Canadian regiment.

BOMBARDED WITH LYDDITE.

A bombardment of the Boer position was then ordered, and three field batteries and a Howitser battery took up their stand in front of the laager and began an accurate fire. The Howitsers using Lyddite shells freely. The Boers were seen retreating from the trenches to the river bed to seek shelter from the terrible fire, but there was no shelter to be had. The Howitsers dropped Lyditte shells with precision into the very bed of the river, and the trenches were soon filled with the horrible fumes and green smoke, but still the enemy held grimly on.

Tuesday was the third day of General Cronje's imprisonment and grim resistance. Early in the morning the infantry engaged the Boers in the bed of the river and drove them back for a short distance. Every opportunity was given the Boers to surrender, but when it became apparent that they had no intention of doing so, Lord Roberts decided to crush once and for all time their resistance. All the guns in the British force were concentrated on the Boers' camp, and a terrible scene ensued. Over a hundred guns directed their fire on a spot about a mile square. The Lyddite shells raised great clouds of green smoke completely filling the bed of the river. The shrapnel burst on the edge of each bank, except for a short space where the proximity of the British infantry made it dangerous. The shells searched every bush and every ravine of the river bed. The roar was deafening, yet with a spirit of desperate madness the Boers would now and again attempt to snipe the naval guns which were firing at a range of 1,000 yards.

INVESTMENT BECOMES CLOSER.

The struggle then developed into a continuous artillery fire, with steady advances of trenches and gradually more and more complete investment of the Boer position and a concentration of the lines of attack. Day after day went by, and still the Boers held grimly out, though there could be no doubt as to the final outcome, and though resistance meant merely the sacrifice of many lives.

But at last early on the morning of February the 27th a Boer officer came through the British lines and said that he had a message for the commander-in-chief. He was taken to Lord Kitchener, to whom he announced that Cronje was willing to surrender, having found his position untenable, and seeing only defeat and capture in prospect if he continued to fight. He wished to avoid useless shedding of blood and to save the women and children. He requested that they might be given safe conduct.

Lord Kitchener granted the request so far as the women and children were concerned, but insisted that the surrender in all other respects should be absolutely unconditional. To this Cronje agreed. The Boer commander at once left his laager, escorted by a half-dozen officers, and entered the British lines. He was met by Lord Kitchener, who immediately brought him to the headquarters of General Lord Roberts. The meeting between the rival generals was kindly — very sympathetic on the part of Roberts, and brave and dignified on the part of Cronje.

TURNING POINT IN WAR.

This was the first great victory of the war for British arms, which hitherto had suffered many reverses. Its influence on the final fortunes of the struggle, by depriving the Boers of the services of one of their ablest generals and his large following, and especially by discouraging them and giving them for the first time reason to fear their ultimate defeat, was incalculably great. Paardeberg has, therefore a claim to be considered one of the most important battles of the war.

And Canadians may reflect with pride that the men who represented Canada played no insignificant part in that struggle and contributed greatly to its happy issue. The coolness and gallantry which they displayed under fire and in the most perilous of positions drew forth abundance of the most favorable comment even from the leading generals. All the war correspondents joined in echoing the general praise bestowed on them for their courage, which was conspicuous even amongst so many regiments of brave men.

CANADIANS' FAMOUS CHARGE.

It was especially in the first Sunday's fighting that they distinguished themselves. On that occasion, under a galling fire, they gallantly endeavored to carry the enemy's position by assault. The Canadians and Cornishmen crossed over the river with the object of taking the enemy in the rear, but they found them occupying ridges at right angles to the river and invisible to the attacking force.

The artillery then went to work with shrapnel, and as soon as the enemy's fire slackened the Canadians charged the ridges, which they took in gallant style. Few pluckier things than this wild charge up a steep hill, right in the teeth of a strong opposing force firing from positions of perfect security on the exposed attackers, were performed in the whole course of the war. It is true that many a splendid specimen of young Canadian manhood fell never to rise again, but still sorrow for their premature and violent death cannot diminish the pride which their countrymen feel in the magnificent work they did in defence of the Empire.

Military Happenings.

In the Victoria Rifles the great event of the coming week will be the annual "At Home" of the sergeants' mess. All preparations have now been completed and the organizers of the affair are quietly waiting for the enjoyment of the fruit of their labors. The programmes have already been printed and they are very artistically gotten up. On the front of the cover is a colored reproduction of the crest of the regiment in high relief, and on the back a miniature of the star which is worn on the headdress of the men. The "At Home" takes place on Thursday night and everything promises that the annual event of the sergeants' mess will be a most successful and enjoyable one.

No. 8 Company of the "Vics" intend to give a sleigh drive to the Back River on Monday night to be followed by a dinner at Peloquin's Hotel. In the event of there being no snow the Company will probably give their sleigh drive on wheels. The affair is in charge of Color-Sergeant Trotter and Sergeants Stevenson and White.

Sergeant Frank Whatley has resigned his position in No. 6 Company, having left the limits of the regiment. He has gone to New York to enter into business there. He has been succeeded by Corporal Frank Ward.

The Duke of York's Hussars will hold a squadron smoker on Friday, the 2nd of March. It is being given by the non-commissioned officers, and a large gathering and a pleasant evening may be looked forward to.

The concert given by the sergeants' mess of the Duke of York's Hussars on Saturday last was very well attended and enjoyed. The limelight views, which were descriptive of a trip across Canada, proved to be exceptionally good ones, and were very much appreciated. An extensive and enjoyable musical programme was provided and refreshments were served.

A lance corps is in course of formation in the Duke of York's Hussars, and about sixteen have already joined. It is being taken up merely as a very fine form of military drill, and in view of its picturesque quality and interest it is thought that its establishment in the corps will be productive of much good.

Squadron drill in the Duke of York's Hussars will not start before the 1st of April, although considerable preparatory drilling is being gone through already. The annual camp on St. Helen's Island will probably take place in early May.

On Monday night No. 1 Company of the 2nd C. A. gave their annual "At Home." A large number of the friends of the regiment were assembled and a very pleasant time was spent. Euchre and dancing were the order of the occasion. The principal feature of the evening was the presentation of a gold locket to Quarter-Master Sergeant Denman, on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his joining the regiment. Sergeant Denman has served under five different lieutenant-colonels in the corps, and has come to be regarded as the dean of the sergeants' mess. The presentation, which was made by Major Lyman, aroused a great deal of enthusiasm amongst the many friends of the recipient.

Last night the sergeants' mess of the 2nd Canadian Artillery held their monthly dance. The attendance was good and a pleasant time spent.

It is rumored that an artillery school will probably be established in the near future for the 2nd Canadian Artillery. Nothing definite has so far been announced, but it is stated that an announcement will be made in the early part of next month. The course will be simply in matters of drill and is intended to enable lower officers and men to qualify for certificates.

A number of promotions were announced in the 65th regiment at their parade on Wednesday last. Corporal Labelle was made sergeant in No. 1 Company. Bugler Deguise has been named for the position of paymaster-sergeant, a position which has been vacant in the corps for some time. Corporal Dion has been made sergeant of No. 8 company to take the place of Sergeant Desrosiers, who has resigned. Private Craif, of No. 3 Company, has been made a corporal, and Private Scott, of No. 2 company, has been promoted to the position of sergeant. Other promotions will be announced in the near future as a result of the examinations.

The 65th regiment boasts of the fact that they have the youngest sergeant in Montreal, perhaps, in all Canada. Francis, the young son of Lt.-Colonel Mackay, the commander of the regiment, has qualified for the position of sergeant and will shortly be appointed to that position in No. 3 company. He is only 15 years of age, but has already had considerable military experience as is natural in the case of one descended from a family which has been so much connected with the military affairs of this city and province and especially with the 65th regiment. Last summer Sergeant Mackay acted as orderly clerk in the brigade room at the camp at Three Rivers.

It has been announced that the annual outing of the Sixty-fifth regiment will be to Toronto and will probably take place on the 24th of May. This is the first time that the regiment has decided to go west for its annual outing, the usual goal being Portland or some other of the New England towns, where they have so many friends and relatives. But in view of the well known hospitality of the military men of Toronto, the corps looks forward to as good a time as they have ever been able to have.

Young Prince Suicided.

Naples, February 24.—Prince Pignatelli Strongoli, aged 19 years, son of a lady-in-waiting to Queen Helena, committed suicide by shooting himself. He was to have been married in a few hours to a daughter of the Duke of Corigliano. He left a letter to his father, saying he killed himself because he was sceptical about life, and another letter to his fiancee saying she would have been unhappy with him. The affair has caused a great sensation, both families being among the most aristocratic in Naples.

REAR - ADMIRAL HICHBORN is one of the best known admirals of our navy.

His statement concerning Peruna will have much weight as it goes out into the world.

What he says is echoed by many other naval officers of high standing.

WHAT THE ADMIRAL SAYS.

Philip Hichborn, Rear-Admiral United States Navy, writes from Washington, D.C., as follows:

"After the use of Peruna for a short period, I can now cheerfully recommend your valuable remedy to any one who is in need of an invigorating tonic." — Philip Hichborn.

AN EVER PRESENT FOE.

The soldier and the sailor are especially subject to catarrh in some form or phase.

Exposed as they are to constant changes, subject as they are to various vicissitudes, and all kinds of climate, wet and dry, night and day, they find catarrh to be their most insidious and ever present foe.

In the barracks and on the field, Peruna is equally efficacious.

Taken at once after exposure, it should prevent catching cold.

PE-RU-NA A RELIABLE REMEDY.

After a cold has become established, Peruna will break it up as quickly as any other remedy known.

Even after a cold has become settled in some organ of the body, Peruna can be relied upon to promptly dispel it.

Peruna will relieve catarrh whether acute or chronic, but a few doses taken in the first stages of the disease will be more effective than when the disease has become chronic.

If you suffer from catarrh in any form, do not neglect it. Take Peruna at once. Delays in such matters are dangerous.

CHRONIC CATARRH OF THROAT.

"I was troubled with catarrh of the throat particularly, and suffered considerably as a result thereof for a period of about five years, and my general health was affected.

SOUGHT CHANGE OF CLIMATE.

"Three years ago I was forced to give up business, and took up my residence in the Western country, looking for relief in change of climate as well as a change in the method of treatment for my ailment.

RELIEF IN PERUNA.

"After much expense, both here and in the West, I was induced by a friend to try Peruna. I continued the use of it for about five weeks, at the end of which time I returned to New York, both well and happy."—Wm. H. Switzer, 325 E. 33rd street, New York City.

USED PE-RU-NA IN HIS FAMILY.

"I have used Peruna in my family with very satisfactory results for the last two years. Besides I have recommended it to all whom I think are in need of it.

"I urge all who are afflicted to buy a bottle and begin its use at once. I have never heard of any who have used it to be dissatisfied with the results."—Frank W. Harris, box 23, Basic City, Va., member A. F. & A. M.

A TYPICAL TESTIMONIAL.

Mr. J. H. Galbraith, 390 West Second avenue, Columbus, Ohio, writes:

"I have been a sufferer of catarrh of the stomach and kidneys for seven years. Doctors did me no good, and after taking Peruna for six months, at intervals, I believe I am cured. My appetite returned, I sleep well and work every day. I always have it in the house."

No remedy ever yet devised has received such unstinted eulogy from so many renowned statesmen and military men as Peruna.

We have on file thousands of testimonials like those given above. We can give our readers only a glimpse of the vast array of endorsements Dr. Hartman is receiving.

What the New Aluminum Tone-Arm Invention means to You:--

CHAMPION, $35.00.

The enjoyment of music is closely associated with the ability personally to produce it. When you are wholly dependent upon the efforts of others, your opportunities are of necessity limited. With the introduction of the Talking Machine, the beginning of a new era for music, loving people commenced, but the novelty was deficient in tonal qualities and consequently unsatisfying.

Many advancements in improved forms have developed from time to time, gradually bettering the quality of tone, but every step forward has been far from perfection until the advent of the Columbia Aluminum Tone-Arm Graphophone which is indeed the "acme of perfection" in sound-reproducing machines.

LODGE ROOM OF THE MOST PROMINENT CHINESE FREE MASONS' LODGE AT LOS ANGELES.

FREEMASONRY IS STRONG IN MONTREAL CHINATOWN AND AMONG CHINESE COMMUNITIES IN CANADA

Although the Montreal Chinatown has not yet attained to very considerable size there are many things down in that part of the city that people in general do not know about "For ways that are dark" in the inhabitants of the Chinese quarter of a city have no rivals. It is a tribute to the astuteness of the race that it can be said of them, as one well versed in the Chinese quarters of western cities put it: "They know all about us ten days after they arrive in the country. We never know anything about them."

In Montreal there are about two thousand Chinese. As Chinese must ever do, this two thousand have their well defined differences of ideas, concretely expressed in the sundry and various "tongs", or secret societies. And of these perhaps the greatest is the Chee Fong Tong, which is the Freemason society of Chinatown.

It is generally known that the Chinese have or affect to have many Masonic lodges. It will however, be a surprise to many to learn that there is a lodge in Montreal Chinatown that has no less than four hundred members. Which is a fair percentage out of a possible two thousand.

HOME OF FREEMASONRY.

On Lagauchetiere street, east of Cote over a store run by Yep Kee Tuck the quarters of the Chinese Masons are to be found. The place is known as the Chee Fong Tong, and is situated in the third storey of the building.

Ascending various stairways, the visitor enters a long, low-celled hall, frontage on Lagauchetiere street, and made up of two apartments thrown into one to give additional room. The floor of the half of the hall to the rear is covered with sawdust, while the front part, which contains the altar and other emblems of the society, is carpeted with linoleum.

Between the two windows at the front, which admit light to the place, is a niche in the wall, wherein is a full-length painting, embellished with sundry striking adornments, and representing one Quan Kung, the traditional founder of the Gee Hing, or Chinese Masonry.

One of the officers of the lodge described Quan Kung as a sort of king or emperor, who, thousands of years ago, began the society. Needless to say, the history on this point is a little involved.

There are two other figures in the picture, one a woman, evidently a handmaid to the great Quan Kung; the other a very fierce-faced warrior. At the front of the painting on the floor are three cups full of some liquid resembling tea.

THE MYSTIC ALTAR.

In front of this niche stands a species of altar, or table, carved after the manner of Chinese art, supporting several carved metal columns some two feet in height. On either side of these columns are vases with elaborate bouquets of artificial flowers. In front, again, of the altar, is a table, whereon is a Japanese pot containing colored sticks, probably incense sticks.

The room is plainly furnished throughout. Rows of chairs line the walls to right and left, and papers covered with Chinese characters are suspended in rows on the walls, about six feet from the floor on either side. On the right side the papers are red, and the writing shows what each member has contributed to the upkeep of the society. On the left they are white, and the characters denote the expenditures for the good of the order. It is a method of public book-keeping.

Presumably, the idea of publishing the state of the members' accounts with the "tong" is expected to have the effect of keeping would-be delinquents in line.

Members of the Masonic order, who have visited Chinese lodges, state that the ritual is in effect the same as that practised in English and other lodges throughout the world. The Montreal lodge dates from six years ago, and is an offshoot of the San Francisco lodge, as are most of the branches of the order throughout America.

OFFICERS OF THE "TONG."

The Chee Fong Tong holds its meetings in its hall every Sunday evening, and the society has a recognized standing in Chinatown. Almost all of the leading merchants and other prominent members of the Chinese community belong to the "tong." A glance at the list of officers will prove the social standing of the Freemasons' lodge in Chinatown. Some of them are: Joe Pang, Grand Master; Lee Puck, assistant; Lee Tom, secretary; Yip Kee Tuck, "leader"; Chu Kim You, translator; Joe Kim You, translator; Hoo Quong, "trustee."

The father of the Chinese Masonic lodge in Montreal is Joe Pang, whose Chinese name is Pang Sung. Mr. Pang is the grand master of the lodge, and it was due to his efforts that the branch was organized six years ago. He is a great man in Chinese Masonic circles, and has a general jurisdiction over the lodges from Winnipeg east, for it is an interesting fact that there are Chinese lodges in every city which has enough Chinamen to form one. Toronto has a very flourishing body.

Mr. Pang is an intelligent looking man, of quiet mien and manner. He is 49 years of age, and thirty-four years have been spent in America. For the last sixteen years he has lived continuously in Montreal with his family. The biography of Mr. Pang is interesting in that it shows the enterprise of our Chinese citizens. Joe Pang, by the way, is a naturalized citizen of the United States since 1879. On arriving in America he remained for some time in 'Frisco, learning his trade, which is the manufacture of cigars. Then he went to St. Louis, whgge he opened up as a merchant prospered for some years. Then New York called him, and he entered the service of a firm there as a traveller. Since that time the vicissitudes of Mr. Pang's life have included a sojourn in Boston, where he kept a tea store, a short residence in Worcester, Mass., and finally a permanent settlement in Montreal.

CHINO-AMERICAN FAMILY.

While in St. Louis Mr. Pang married an American girl and he is now the happy father of five Chino-American children. It was in that city that he became connected with the Chinese Masons also.

"The head lodge of our society," said Mr. Pang, speaking of the Montreal body, "is in San Francisco, where there are a great many Chinese Masons. Our people are great Masons. We have lodges all over China, as well as the European countries, and it is thousands of years since they began. Our society is all the same as the English one. The signs are the same, and every thing. We have the same number of degrees—thirty-three."

Mr. Pang raised the lapel of his coat and exhibited the Masonic pin, the real "square and compass." "I don't always keep that in view," said he. "There will be too many friends if I do. When you meet English people of our lodge they have pleasant ways of showing their hospitality that I cannot keep up with."

Joe Pang is one of the prominent members of the new Canton Club as well.

PETER NEWELL TO DRAW CHILDREN FOR YOUNG READERS OF THE STAR

First of a Series of Special Page Illustrations of Children's Adventures to Appear Next Saturday.

Peter Newell, whose name is familiar wherever there is a nursery and a child's library, the artist par excellence of children and for children, has at last consented to supply a weekly page of drawings, depicting the adventures of some "Newell children" and The Star will publish the first of this series next Saturday.

No better appreciation of Newell and his work has ever been written than that penned recently by John Hendrick Bangs, who has long known and loved the artist.

"Peter Newell needs only to be seen to be appreciated, but he never can be explained," writes Mr. Bangs.

"To me, who have known him long and intimately, he is even yet one of the charming mysteries of this world-ful of inscrutable things. I feel when I am in his presence, or even when within the influence of his aura, very much as I felt the first time I laid eyes upon the Rock of Gibraltar; as I sometimes feel when, passing up the Hudson, I look upon the Palisades, or when face to face with some other unusual fact, like the Sphinx, for instance—unusual in the sense that there never has been anywhere else in time or space, that we know of, anything like it or even remotely resembling it.

"In short, I regard Peter Newell not as a mere masculine being with a talent for making pictures and rhymes, but as a creation, and I would as soon attempt to elucidate him as to analyze an element. I have always thought that he was the answer of an indignant Providence to those who say that there is nothing new under the sun, for it has been that quality of "newness," of absolute freshness in the man and in his work, that has made him what those of us who have watched his career from its beginning know him to be, the very essence of modest, simple manhood as a man, the quintessence of quaint originality in technique and concept as an artist.

"Utterly unaffected in his manner, frank and devoid of pose, he has always the poise of simplicity. To look at him you might feel that here was a man to whom in your hour of need you might go with a gold brick with a more than reasonable chance of selling it, and yet you would never be able to strike that bargain, for the reason that, once convinced of your need, he would be rather inclined to help you at his own expense than to acquire for himself even so desirable an object as a real nugget at yours.

"I do not think he will be offended if I say that he looks as if he had himself drawn the lines upon which he has grown up. If he does object to this assertion and chooses to meet the allegation with an indignant denial I have only to confront him with a caricature portrait of himself, hanging on my wall, and made for me, with his own wonderful pen and brush, which is, to my mind, the perfection of portraiture, to put him utterly to rout. It not only looks like him, but it is the man himself. It speaks, moves and hath a Peter Newell being which lifts it off the plane of caricature and places it upon the higher level of undeviating likeness to the original.

"I feel as if I had in my possession the ground, first and second floor plans, north, east, south and west elevations, together with the cellar and roof lines, of one of the creations of nature from the hand of the original. I lack only the carpenter's and mason's specifications for the construction thereof, and a complete knowledge of what is going on in behind the doors and windows out of which the soul of the creator looks quaintly upon the passing show.

"I may add here in parentheses that, side by side with this portrait, hangs a caricature of myself from the same hand which is an artistic outrage, but is tolerated in my family because it shows how much homelier I might be if, perchance, there was any necessity for my being so.

"I keep the one as a perpetual reminder of, and proxy companionship with, a man for whom I have the highest esteem and a deep affection, and the other to frighten burglars, obstreperous hired men and refractory children with. But they show the wonderful range of the man's art—any hand that can attain to such heights of artistic perfection as shown in the one and run to such opposite lengths of outrageous exaggeration as made manifest in the other can never be thought of as otherwise than the hand of a master.

"I have just spoken of Peter Newell as if he were a house with a plan—I think I am justified in going further and likening his head to a small world in which myriads of delighted people have their being.

"Somebody wrote a story once—or if he didn't somebody ought to have done so—about a crazy man who made up his mind that he and all the rest of mankind were but the figments of some other man's imagination in sleep, and he was oppressed with a terrible fear that that other man would wake up and that he and everybody else about him, the world, the flesh and the devil, Tammany Hall, Mrs. Chadwick and Tom Lawson included, would be snuffed out like a candle in the act of awakening. Consequently he tried his best to make everybody go around on tiptoes, shuddered at the slamming of a door, and shivered like an aspen leaf at every slightest sound as an almost certain premonition of annihilation.

"It was a strange fancy, and yet I sometimes wonder if inside of that head of peter Newell, behind those clear, grave eyes of his, there is not a little world full of affairs that would be snuffed out if Newell should awake from his dreams, teeming with droll people, constantly suggesting quaint ideas to its encircling genius, of all of which we who dwell on the outside enjoy the exquisite fruit.

"How else can we account for the dear little maid who was afraid because "the wild flowers they are so wild?" Where in this prosaic but still lovely workaday world of ours can we find such pictures as we find in the topsy-turvey land of Peter Newell's fancy, where, whether you look at them standing upon your feet or on your head, they are complete, intelligent and intelligible limnings of a life that might be, although we know that it is not? what mundane forests hold such birds and beasts as those that roam through the jungles of Newell Land? Surely all these quaint and curious creatures that have sprung into being beneath his magic touch have their habitat somewhere, and, since we know whence they come, why, indeed, should we deny the existence of that strange world."

SHALL U. S. LUMBER RESOURCES "GO THE WAY OF THE BUFFALO"?

Annual Output of Thirty-Five Billion Feet, Forest Fires and Wasteful Methods of Lumbering Rapidly Wiping Out the Timber Supply—Secretary Wilson's Warning.

It is a startling statement, but nevertheless a true one, that the fourth largest industry in the United States—lumbering—is in danger of sinking into relative unimportance. Secretary Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture, puts the case in these words: "If the present drain upon the timber resources is not checked the lumber industry will go the way of the buffalo."

According to the figures of the last census, the amount of lumber produced by the mills is 35,084,166,000 feet per year. If this colossal output constituted the only drain upon the timber resources, the industry might still survive, for the total woodland area of the United States is nearly 700,000,000 acres, and natural growth would keep somewhere near legitimate demand. But, in addition to lumber cut and milled for commercial purposes, $20,000,000 worth of standing timber is burned up in forest fires every year.

WASTE IN LUMBERING.

Wasteful methods of lumbering are still the rule, although the Bureau of Forestry is doing what it can to get lumbermen out of their present wasteful habits, and to show them that in the end there is greater profit in conserving woodlands, than there is in destroying them at one fell blow. In no direction, perhaps, unless it be in the scientific instruction of farmers, has the educational work of the government been more sorely needed than in the conservation of the available supply of useful lumber. But before the government started out upon this campaign, the greater part of the white pine in the United States had been cut and vast inroads had been made upon the supply of other valuable timbers.

Even a vivid imagination would be staggered by the amount of wood that went up in smoke before effective measures were taken to prevent forest fires. Minnesota took the lead in this direction, and now Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania, Maine, and a few other states have effective laws on the subject, and, what is more important, as experience shows, they have fire wardens whose duties it is to see that these laws are enforced. Forest reserves have been made by a number of states, and by the Federal government under a law passed in 1891. Sixty-two millions of acres had been reserved under the Federal law at the time of the last report on the subject.

Although forest preservation and scientific methods of lumbering and reforestation, together with the prevention of forest fires, are mainly depended upon by government and other forestry experts to preserve our timber supply, it is realized that other measures must be taken, and taken at once. For one thing, the annual demand for lumber of all kinds need not be anywhere near as large as at present if proper measures were taken to prolong the life of the wood after it is cut.

HOW TO LENGTHEN LIFE OF WOOD.

Over 400,000,000 ties are required to lay the railroad mileage of the United States, and as the life of a tie only averages seven years, 60,000,000 ties must be replaced each year, not to mention the new ties required for additional mileage. So far as the railroads are concerned, however, they have realized that one way of saving money, was to resort to preservative processes. Private capital is also crowding into this field, as it becomes known that the money-making possibilities in getting control of economical sources of lumber supply and the wood-preserving processes are immense.

Every now and then we hear of some wonderful new treatment which will, we are told, result in making a Methuselah of every stick of wood that comes under its benign operation, but wood decay, nevertheless, goes on unceasingly. Fireproofing processes belong to the same category, and are just as numerous as the processes for giving long life to lumber under normal conditions of use. The main trouble here is not with the preservative processes; it is that they are not used nearly so generally as they should be. But several cities, taking a lesson from the navy's experience (and perhaps with the fact in mind that the fire loss in the United States last year was nearly $200,000,000), now require that good work in public buildings shall be fireproofed.

It is plain, however, that serious attention must be turned upon this subject if any positive results are to be accomplished. As pointed out by President Roosevelt, the qustion is even a larger one than the maintenance of an industry in which there is invested over $800,0000,000 and which employs nearly 800,000 wage-earners. Wrapped up in the future of the lumber industry and the problem of prolonging the life of lumber, is the future prosperity of a great many industries—shipbuilding and housebuilding, notably, but, as a matter of fact, nearly every industry in the country. For when we come to think of it, there is hardly one that is not dependent, to a greater or less extent, upon a continuous supply of good, and, at the same time, cheap, lumber.

Besides the warnings of President Roosevelt and Secretary Wilson, quoted at the beginning of this article, the constantly increasing prices demanded for forest land is more positive evidence of the approach of the time when we shall have to admit that there is an actual scarcity of lumber. In the East, and especially in the Adirondack region of New York, there are plenty of instances where the price of lumber land has trebled within a year. The West is much better off, but it will not be long at the present rate of consumption, made still more destructive by the depredations of timber thieves, small and large, official and unofficial.

In making solutions of the drugs used in curing diseases of the eye, distilled water of the greatest purity should be used.

Not only do I use distilled water in these preparations, but use it whenever water is used, whether distilled water is ordered or not.

INTERESTING WILL CASE.

Death of Aged Paris Bridegroom Reveals Existence of Many Wills.

Special Cable to The Montreal Star.

Paris, February 24.—A will suit of unusual interest is being heard in the courts here, the case turning on the disputed will or wills of the late M. Jourdan, a distinguished member of the Paris bar, who five years ago, at the age of seventy-two, married a widow of sixty, Mme. Berger. M. Jourdan had at that time a fortune of $1,000,000, and his bride, who had three children, possessed about $300,000. A year after the marriage M. Jourdan died, and his widow at once sent to the solicitors of her late husband a number of bonds payable to bearer to the value of more than $700,000, which she had found in his desk. M. Jourdan had made a great number of wills, so many in fact, that none of his relatives had been able to keep track of them. According to the terms of the latest of these will so far as known, it appears that to the widow M. Jourdon has given only $60,000—the same amount, by the way, which he had given her at the time of the marriage.

While the case was going on Mme. Jourdon appears to have made a discovery. In her husband's prayer book she found a slip of paper bearing these words: "Look carefully among my papers and clothes. I have hidden something of value to you, my Marie." Search was accordingly made, and in an old pocketbook was found a signed statement in which the testator left $200,000 to his wife. Experts, however, have been called, who set up the claim that the note is a forgery.

How Athletes Keep Strong and Healthy

Their Diet Should Be a Revelation To All Men and Women.

Physical perfection, great endurance and unfailing health are positively essential to severe athletic work and great attention is given to the diet.

In schools where a "training table" is provided for the athlete, only the most nutritious food is served, and in cases where there is no training table the athlete is advised to eat the most healthful food only. Whether or not he follows such advice is soon shown by his physical condition. If the average man—the business man—the lawyer, the teacher, the clerk, the mechanic, the laborer—took such care as to the food he eats as the athlete does, there would be far less of sickness and suffering in this world.

Among athletes the food value of whole wheat is recognized. They have demonstrated what scientists have long declared to be true: that the various food elements found in wheat are the food elements with which the blood and muscle, the tissues and cells, the bone and brain of the human body must be replenished if life and perfect strength are to be sustained.

Every nutritive element of the best white wheat grown is found in Malta-Vita, and it is fast becoming as popular among other people as it long has been among athletes.

And Malta-Vita is so good to eat! Always deliciously crisp, refreshing, satisfying. All krocers, 10 cents.

RULES, "NOT SECRET BUT NOT TO BE SEEN"

Correspondence Between Stock Exchange and one of Its Patrons.

MR. MITCHELL'S REQUEST

Various Stages Through Which Inquiry for Sight of the Regulations Passed and Its Final Result.

"Open your mouth and shut your eyes—I'll give you something that'll make you wise."

—Old Song.

Inasmuch as all stock transactions on the Montreal Stock Exchange are subject "to the rules and customs" of that institution, it occurred to one client to ask that he be put in possession of a copy of said "rules" and became acquainted with said "customs."

But the chairman of the Exchange thought otherwise.

The following published correspondence allows the public to judge of the merits of the request of Major Victor E. Mitchell and of the bonafides of the "stand off" of Mr. Andrew A. Wilson, the chairman of the Exchange:

"Montreal, February 7, 1906.

"The Secretary of the Montreal Stock Exchange, Montreal.

"Dear Sir,—I occasionally purchase stock through Montreal brokers, and I notice that on the brokers' notes it is stated that all transactions are subject to the rules and customs of the Montreal Stock Exchange. I shall be very glad indeed if you will kindly furnish me with a copy of the rules and regulations of the Montreal Stock Exchange.

"Yours faithfully,

"(Sgd.) "VICTOR E. MITCHELL."

"P. McDougall, Esq., Secretary, the Montreal Stock Exchange.

"Dear Sir,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter dated February 8th, in which you state that you regret you are unable to furnish me with a copy of the rules and regulations of the Montreal Stock Exchange. I shall be glad if you will kindly inform me why you are not able to furnish me with the rules and regulations. It seems to me that as stocks are bought and sold by the Montreal brokers, subject to the rules and regulations of your Exchange, the public are entitled to know what these rules and regulations are.

"Yours faithfully,

"(Sgd.) VICTOR E. MITCHELL."

"February 12th, 1906.

"Dear Sir,—I have your favor of the 12th inst., and am directed by the committee to acknowledge receipt of same.

"February 12th, 1906.

"P. McDougall, Esq., Secretary, the Montreal Stock Exchange.

"Dear Sir,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of today's date. In my previous letter I asked you to furnish me with a copy of the rules and regulations of the Montreal Stock Exchange. I find on referring to the broker's notes that purchases and sales are made subject to the rules and customs of the Montreal Stock Exchange, and I now beg to request you to furnish me with a copy of the rules referred to in the broker's notes, to which such transactions are subject.

"Yours faithfully,

"(Sgd.) VICTOR E. MITCHELL."

"February 12th, 1906.

Messrs. Grant & Gaudet, Stock Brokers,

Dear Sirs:—I notice that on your brokers' notes it is stated that all transactions are subject to the rules and regulations of the Montreal Stock Exchange. Will you be good enough to furnish me with a copy of these rules and regulations in order that I may know the conditions under which I buy or sell stocks through you as brokers.

"Yours Faithfully,

"(Sgd.) VICTOR E. MITCHELL."

Feb. 12, 1906.

"Victor E. Mitchell, Esq., Canada Life Building,

Dear Sir:—We beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of even date, and in reply to state that it is contrary to the customs of the Montreal Stock Exchange for members to lend the copy of the regulations, but we believe that if you applied to the President, Mr. Andrew A. Wilson, he would only be too glad to comply with your request.

"Yours very truly,

"(Sgd.) GRANT & GAUDET."

February 14, 1906.

"Andrew A. Wilson, Esq., President the Montreal Stock Exchange,

"Dear Sir:—I have applied to my brokers, Messrs. Grant & Gaudet for a copy of the rules of the Montreal Stock Exchange to which all transactions through brokers are subject, and in reply they state that it is contrary to the custom of the Montreal Stock Exchange for members to lend their copies of the Regulations, but they believed if I applied to you, you would only be too glad to comply with my request.

"I might mention that I have already written the Secretary of the Montreal Stock Exchange, asking him to furnish me with a copy of the Rules of the Exchange, and he has replied that he is unable to do so.

"It seems to me that as stock must be bought and sold subject to the Rules and Regulations of the Exchange, the public are entitled to know what these Rules are.

"The Rules and Regulations of the Stock Exchanges of London and New York are published and are easily accessible to the public, and I cannot conceive of any legitimate reason why equal publicity should not be given to the Rules and Regulations of the Montreal Stock Exchange.

"I have before me a work by Messrs. Schwabe and Branson, Barristers-at-law, on the Law of the Stock Exchange, published by Stevens & Sons of London, and the Rules and Regulations for the conduct of business on the London Stock Exchange are published in full as an appendix to this work.

"I would also venture to remark that it is in the interests of the Montreal Stock Exchange that its Rules and Regulations should be published or made easily accessible to the public, as otherwise I fail to see how the clause on the broker's note to the effect that all transactions are subject to the rules and customs of the Stock Exchange could be enforced.

"No court would enforce any rule of the Exchange against any person who had applied for a copy of such Rules and had been denied communication thereof, either by his broker or by the officials of the Stock Exchange.

"Although the replies to my letters which I have received from the Secretary of Your Exchange have been exceedingly curt—not to say discourteous—I desire to discuss this matter in an entirely friendly spirit, and I am communicating with you at the suggestion of Messrs. Grant & Gaudet in the confident hope that you will recognize the reasonableness of my request.

"Yours faithfully,

"(Sgd.) VICTOR E. MITCHELL."

"February, 14, 1906

"P. McDougall, Esq., Secretary, The Montreal Stock Exchange.

Dear Sir:—I shall be glad to receive a reply to my letter dated February 12.

"Yours faithfully,

"(Sgd.) VICTOR E. MITCHELL."

"February 15, 1906.

"Victor E. Mitchell, Esq.,

"Dear Sir:—I have to acknowledge receipt of your favor of 14th instant, and have noted what you say re request for a copy of the Rules and Regulations of the Montreal Stock Exchange.

"If I am correct in assuming that you object to the clauses on the broker's notice, to the effect that 'all transactions are subject to the Rules and Regulations of the Stock Exchange,' why not refuse to accept these contracts.

"And as you make your request from a public point of view, I will say that we have not the slightest objection to the public being acquainted with our Rules and Regulations. We have no intention, however, of going to the expense of publishing them. Another reason against doing so is the fact that these Rules have been altered and are being altered from time to time as circumstances arise, and it would be absolutely impossible to keep outsiders informed of these changes. This fact alone would make our position more misleading than otherwise, if we issued copies to the public.

"I reciprocate the latter portion of your letter re friendly spirit, etc., but at the same time must remind you that your answer to our first refusal was also rather on the curt side.

"The answers to your letters were dictated by myself.

I am,

Yours faithfully,

"(Sgd.) ANDREW A. WILSON

Chairman."

Feb. 16th, 1906

"Andrew A. Wilson, Esq., chairman, Montreal Stock Exchange.

Dear Sir.—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter dated 15th February. You are certainly not correct in assuming that I object to the clause on the broker's notes to the effect that 'All transactions are subject to the rules and regulations of the Stock Exchange'; on the contrary, I have no objection to the clause, providing the rules referred to are reasonable. But I submit most respectfully that I am entitled to know what the rules are before agreeing to be bound by them.

"You suggest that if I object to the clause I should refuse to accept these contracts. Am I to understand by this that I can buy or sell shares through a broker on the Montreal Stock Exchange without submitting myself to these rules and customs?

"I have always understood that brokers were bound to transact all business according to the rules of the Exchange, and if I am correct in my understanding, no broker could accept an order from me unless I agreed that the transactions should be subject to the rules and customs of your Exchange.

"I note that you have not the slightest objection to the public being acquainted with your rules and regulations, but you fail to state in what way the public can obtain communication thereof.

"You give two reasons for not publishing the rules:

"1. The expense of printing them.

"2. The rules may be altered from time to time and it would be impossible to keep outsiders informed of these changes.

"I must state frankly that these reasons do not, in my opinion, offer any adequate justification for the failure of your board to make the rules of the Echange easily accessible to the public.

"As regards the first of these reasons, I would venture to remark that the expense of printing the rules would be small, and as regards the second, you are in this respect in no worse position than the Stock Exchanges of London and New York. Both these institutions allow their rules and regulations to be printed and impose no restriction upon their circulation among the public.

"The right of the public to know the conditions to which their transactions on the Exchange are subject, cannot be denied, and it is clearly the duty of your board to make such arrangements as will permit the public to obtain copies of your rules and regulations at any time. If you do not care to incur the expense of printing them, you should allow any one who desires it to make a copy at his own expense.

"I am dealing with your letter, perhaps with too much particularity, but the position which you have taken appears to me so extraordinary and unreasonable that I feel compelled to express my views as fully and emphatically as possible.

"Referring to the concluding paragraphs of your letter, I must certainly take exception to your statement that my answer to your first refusal was rather on the curt side.

"I have re-read the letter referred to and I consider it a perfectly proper letter, couched in terms to which no reasonable person could take exception.

"In conclusion, I again respectfully ask to know in what way I may take communication, and if necessary make a copy of the rules to which transactions on the Stock Exchange are subject.

"Yours faithfully,

"(Sgd.) VICTOR E. MITCHELL."

"February 16th, 1906.

"Messrs. Grant & Gaudet.

"Dear Sirs,—I have written to Mr. Andrew A. Wilson, the chairman of the Montreal Stock Exchange, as suggested by you, and in his reply he makes the following statement:

"'If I am correct in assuming that you object to the clause on the brokers' notes to the effect 'that all transactions are subject to the rules and customs of the Stock Exchange,' why not refuse to accept these contracts?'

"I shall be glad if you will inform me if you will accept orders from me to sell and buy stocks on the Montreal Stock Exchange, and execute them, without making my contracts subject to the rules and customs of the Montreal Stock Exchange.

"Yours faithfully,

"(Sgd.) VICTOR E. MITCHELL."

"February 17th, 1906.

"Victor E. Mitchell, Esq.,

"Dear Sir,—We beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 16th inst., and in reply to state that we regret being unable to make our contracts in any other way than as at present, which are subject to the rules and customs of the Montreal Stock Exchange, to which all the members of the Board are obliged to subscribe.

"Yours very truly,

"(Sgd.) GRANT & GAUDET."

"February 17th, 1906.

"Victor E. Mitchell, Esq.,

"Dear Sir,—I am in receipt of your favor of the 16th inst., and note contents.

"I have to say in answer to your remark: 'The position which you have taken appears to me so extraordinary and unreasonable,' is quite uncalled for.

"When you state in writing giving clearly all details and reasons, and give us any and every information we may in consequence require, your request will be given due and careful consideration by the committee.

"Unless the above is acceptable, I beg to state with all courtesy I consider further correspondence on this subject is unnecessary.

"I am, yours faithfully,

"(Sgd.) ANDREW A. WILSON,

"Chairman."

"February 19th, 1906.

"Andrew A. Wilson, Esq.,

"Dear Sir,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter dated February 15th, in which you say:

"'When you state in writing, giving clearly all details and reasons, and give us any and every information we may in consequence require, your request will be given due and careful consideration by the committee.'

"In reply I beg to enclose you herewith a contract of brokers' note for 100 shares of Illinois Traction preferred, which I bought on Saturday last through Messrs. Grant & Gaudet.

"This document states that the purchase is subject to the rules and customs of the Montreal Stock Exchange.

"I shall be glad if you will kindly inform me what are the rules of the Exchange to which this purchase is subject, or inform me when and where I may take communication of such rules, and, if necessary, make a copy thereof at my own expense.

"Yours faithfully,

"(Sgd.) VICTOR E. MITCHELL."

"February 20th, 1906.

"Victor E. Mitchell, Esq.,

"Dear Sir,—I have to acknowledge receipt of your favor of 19th inst. The document (contract) you enclose is issued by the broker in a manner he may consider as a sufficient notice of having carried out his order, and he is not bound as to the form of notice in any manner. As I have already suggested, if the contract is not satisfactory it would be quite proper for you to refuse it, and make any other arrangements you may desire with Messrs. Grant & Gaudet.

"I am, yours faithfully,

"(Sgd.) "ANDREW A. WILSON,

"Chairman."

"Feb. 21, 1906.

"Andrew A. Wilson, Esq.

"Dear Sir,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 20th. In response to your suggestion, I have written Messrs. Grant & Gaudet, asking them what other arrangement they would make with me for the purchase or sale of stocks on the Montreal Stock Exchange. In reply they state that they cannot buy or sell stocks on the Montreal Stock Exchange without making their contract subject to the rules and customs of the Exchange.

"They add, 'We do not clearly see how we could make any other arrangement with you, but if the committee or the president of the Stock Exchange should care to approve of any modification in our contract forms, we would gladly submit to their ruling.'

"I shall be glad to know if the committee of the Stock Exchange will approve of Messrs. Grant & Gaudet buying or selling stocks for me on the Exchange without requiring me to be bound by its rules and customs. For your information I enclose copies of my letter to Messrs. Grant & Gaudet and of their reply thereto.

"Yours faithfully,

(Sgd.) VICTOR E. MITCHELL."

"Feb. 21st, 1906.

"Messrs. Grant & Gaudet.

"Dear Sirs,—I enclose herewith copy of my letter to Mr. Andrew A. Wilson, Chairman of the Montreal Stock Exchange, dated 19th February, and copy of his reply thereto dated 20th February.

"You will note that Mr. Wilson states:

"As I have already suggested, if the contract is not satisfactory it would be quite proper for you to refuse it, and make any other arrangements you may desire with Messrs. Grant & Gaudet.

"I understood by your letter to me dated February 17th, that you are unable to make your contracts in any other way than at present.

"In view of Mr. Wilson's letter to me, will you kindly state what other arrangements it is possible for you to make with me for the purchase or sale of stocks on the Montreal Stock Exchange?

"Yours faithfully,

(Sgd.) VICTOR E. MITCHELL."

"Montreal, February 21, 1906.

"Victor E. Mitchell, Esq.

"Dear Sir,—We beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of even date with stated enclosures. For the reason given in our letter of the 17th instant we cannot buy or sell stocks on The Montreal Stock Exchange, without making our contracts subject to the rules and customs of that institution. We do not clearly see how we could make any other arrangements with you, but if the committee or the president of The Stock Exchange, should care to approve of any modification in our contract forms, we would gladly submit to their ruling.

It Makes Pure Blood

We are often asked, Why does Hood's Sarsaparilla effect such wonderful cures of cases that seemed beyond the reach of medicine?

An examination of our well-known formula, from which Hood's Sarsaparilla is and always has been carefully and scientifically prepared, confirms the fact that it contains those well-known and valuable medicinal ingredients, which, when intelligently combined and properly administered, are sure to bring about good results.

It is the properly balanced proportion, combination and process in combining those ingredients known to have specific action upon the blood, stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, which make Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar to itself and enable it to produce results unequaled by any similar medicine.

These ingredients are: for the blood, Sarsaparilla, Stillingia, Yellow Dock; for the liver, Mandrake, Dandelion; for the kidneys, Uva Ursi, Juniper Berries, Pipsissewa; for the stomach, Gentian, Wild Cherry Bark, Bitter Orange Peel; for the bowels, Senna, Mandrake, Dandelion.

"I used Hood's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier and the results were entirely satisfactory. Several of my friends use or have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla and all speak highly of it." MRS. RACHEL BRODRICK, 71 Murray St., Montreal, Que.

"After scarlet fever I was without strength, had defective hearing, running, watery eyes, twinges of pain and exhausting aches, and free perspiration upon the slightest exertion. A sore on my left limb laid me up. In this low condition Hood's Sarsaparilla helped me in a week and in 8 weeks I was in perfect health, my blood cleansed of impurities and the sore healed. My complexion is better now than ever. I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla for all blood humors and skin diseases." MRS. HENRIETTA EMORY, 34 Dean Street, Roxbury, Mass.

GENERAL SHAFTER TALKS.

United States Troops Could Not Reach China in Time, He Says.

Elpaso, Texas, February 24.—General William Shafter, who commanded the United States army in Cuba during the Spanish-American war, passed through here yesterday en route from a hunt in Mexico to his California home. Discussing the Chinese situation and the possibilities of intervention by the United States, he said:

"If there was an uprising in China this country could not get sufficient forces in the field to make a showing. There are many troops in the Philippines, but they would not be available for a clash with the Chinese. The danger, if there is any, is to the Americans situated far inland. If they were attacked it would be all over before the United States could get troops to the spot. So far as the naval forces are concerned it is different. The navy is well equipped. At Manila, along the coast of Japan and China, and at other convenient points in the Orient, the United States has ships which could be brought to bear on China and enough to meet all possible needs."

"Do you believe that China has a grievance against the United States?" the General was asked.

"Grievances? Of course she has," he declared. "For years the Chinese have been subjected to every possible indignity by our officials. It has been scandalous. Theodore Roosevelt recognizes it and has issued instructions which ought to bring some improvement."

"EVENING DRESS" CANES.

Twentieth Century Beau Brummels Introducing a New Fashion.

Special Cable to The Montreal Star.

London, February 24.—The question is whether the "evening dress" cane such as Count d'Orsay carried to the opera; such as a thousand famous dandies twirled and twisted with such grace as they could command, is coming into fashion again. For these "sticks" are now seen everywhere in the stick shops of Mayfair. So far they have not made their appearance at the theatres, but a mild thrill fluttered through the stalls at His Majesty's Theatre a few night ago because of the appearance of a ticket holder, who as he walked to his seat "made graceful play" with a long cane, gold-knobbed and tasselled.

With his satin lined opera coat flung back at the right shoulder, his left hand carrying his hat daintily, this Twentieth Century Beau Brummel progressed to his seat with the studied mincing curves of his Georgian cane. It is too early to even venture a prediction as to whether these canes will become the vogue once again, but the fact that they have appeared at all is of interest at the present time.

Heintzman & Co., Pianos

When all has been said the supreme test of a piano's worth is tone. If the tone be poor the instrument has little value, however well the case may have been made, and however good the materials that have been used. The whole object in view is tone. We gladly offer the HEINTZMAN & CO. PIANO for criticism on the quality of its tone and elasticity of its action.

While we are proud of the fine construction in every detail, of the unusually fine appearance of the instruments, after all our whole plea for consideration of the HEINTZMAN & CO. PIANO is its superlatively delightful tone. In speaking of it we find difficulty in avoiding the appearance of exaggeration, for it has a warmth, a body, a power, a delightful singing quality that we think is not equalled in other pianos. We prefer to have the intelligent opinion of the appreciative buyer to any praise we could bestow on the instrument ourselves.

Our warerooms are open for your inspection. You cannot please us better than by examining for yourself every little detail in the construction and asking questions at every turn. The HEINTZMAN & CO. THE ACCIDENT TO THE TARIFF.

Our unlucky new tariff is, it seems, likely to arrive still later than even its last delayed schedule date because Mr. Fielding has fallen and injured his leg. When Mr. Fielding sprains his ankle, the tariff limps. Nothing could more clearly show the close and beautiful sympathy between Mr. Fielding and his fiscal favorite.

But this new tariff has been having a hard time of it ever since the country was invited to look forward to the "happy event" of its prospective birth. It couldn't get around in time for the last session, because the Ministers were too tired after the campaign of 1904 to do more than arrive themselves. Then it was thought that the Commission could not get it ready in time for this session, and we were accustomed to the idea of having to damp down the fires of our impatience for another year. But the Commission grew tired of listening to disinterested tariff opinions sooner that it expected; and again we were keyed up to expecting the "baby" this spring. Parliament being kept back a couple of months to give it time.

But now there has come another slip between the cup and the lip—or rather between the cup-bearer and his doorstep. Again it is whispered that the country must practice patience. Everybody will be sorry for Mr. Fielding; but there will be general surprise that he makes his tariffs with his foot. It was commonly thought that other people did the kicking. And possibly the business interests of the country may do some kicking if they are to be hampered for another year by the real inconvenience of tariff uncertainty.

POLITICS IN THE TRANSVAAL.

The announcement in the Speech from the Throne, read on the occasion of the opening of the Imperial Parliament, that a new constitution for the Transvaal would be framed as soon as possible, was by no means the least interesting item of the varied programme put in the mouth of His Majesty by the new Liberal administration. The inauguration of a constitutional government in the land which, a few short years ago, was the scene of a sanguinary struggle for supremacy between two stubborn races, is an event which will excite world-wide interest. A London paper has recently employed the services of a journalistic commissioner to make a special study of the existing conditions in South Africa, and in a recent letter this writer deals with the political situation in an interesting and comprehensive manner. He says: "To venture to describe the politics of the Transvaal is like facing the task of writing an essay on snakes in Ireland. Politics do not spring up mature and full-grown in a single night, and the virgin soil of the Transvaal has as yet produced only a somewhat weedy crop. The people do not quite know who are their leaders. The men who aspire to be leaders have somewhat hazy notions as to how and whom to lead. So the Transvaal waits rather helplessly, groping among the shadows."

The writer goes on to explain that there are political parties which have been arranged somewhat hastily to meet the exigencies of the moment. There are the "Progressives," "Responsibles," "Het Volk," and Laborites. The official programme of the first two parties has much in common, save that the "Responsibles," aim at full self-government at once, while the "Progressives" would reach that point by stages. Up to the present time there has been an alliance between the "Responsibles," "Het Volk" and "Labor" parties, which has divided the country into two great camps of about equal strength, the "Alliance" and the "Progressives." But this line is artificial, the real division being one of race.

"The division," continues the writer, "is one that is natural and unavoidable in a country where you have a great section of the people who have lived for years with different ideas, and have been trained in a different school. You cannot get rid of the influences of the past in a few years, and in the twinkling of an eye make the Boer into an ordinary British elector by labeling him with some new name. Right at the bottom is the old dividing line, and it will take a generation at least to get rid of it. This is not to say that the Dutch are to be eyed with suspicion. If their power be great in the new Parliament it will be used for no studied harm. But it will be unsympathetic from a British standpoint, inclined to indulge in criticism, apt to magnify the interests of the Old Country population, and minimize those of town and mine—not hostile in the old sense, but unprogressive, uncertain. There will never be another white war in South Africa."

The writer's advice to the "Responsibles" and "Laborites" is to cut loose from "Het Volk," and throw in their strength with the "Progressives," who include the majority of the British population. It would appear that the decision of the Campbell-Bannerman Government to give the Transvaal a constitution without delay removes the only ground of difference between the "Progressives" and "Responsibles," the policy of the Government conforming to the views of the latter and less numerous party. This will undoubtedly cause a readjustment of the line of division between the opposing camps, and tend to consolidate the British vote. It would nevertheless be a misfortune should the parties in the Transvaal be formed along racial lines. A mixture of the two elements of the population on both the Government and Opposition benches at the beginning, would mark the first great advance in bringing about in that country the happy conditions which prevail in Canada today, and make the unification of the two races from the standpoint of national sentiment at any rate a matter of the not distant future.

THE RURAL EDUCATION PROBLEM.

In this discussion of the vitally important question of rural education, we must not lose sight of the truth that the community cannot afford to agree to any system which will palm off on the country schools an inferior grade of teachers. It may be true that a second-rate teacher is better than none; but in a wealthy Province like Quebec—for with all our "poor mouth" at times, we have a wealthy Province—we have no business to offer to the children of the farm second-rate or ill-equipped teachers.

If a larger grant must be made to education from the Provincial Treasury to enable the young men and young ladies of the rural districts to obtain the best training that we have devised for our teaching staffs, then that grant should be made and the money raised. The poorest sort of economy that we can practice is a cheese-paring policy toward education. We should have good schools, good school-books and good teachers. The young people who are growing up far from the centres of population should not be handicapped by an inferior education. In the face of such a duty, no set of men have the right to plead, in the name of the province, the excuse of poverty.

The salaries of our teachers have been far too small for years; and it is undoubtedly true that we may demand too great an expenditure on the part of the candidates in order to qualify for some of these pitiable stipends. But the cure is not to permit our teachers to be unqualified, but to raise the pay so that they may qualify profitably. This is not an argument in favor of centralization. There seems to be some jealousy of the McGill Normal School throughout the Province; and the only reason of any weight for keeping all our eggs in one basket is that in that way we can make this a better basket. If efficiency require that the Montreal school should be kept the only Protestant Normal School, then there may arise a duty to keep it so; but with this should certainly be coupled some better means of making it easy of access to candidate-teachers from the distant parts of the Province.

But there must be no letting down the standard. This is not the time to sound a retreat. We should be bettering—not cheapening—our educational machinery. Quebec ought to be raising her position as a centre of popular education, and not falling out of step with the general advance all along the line. All discussion of the problem should have this spirit. It is not a question of saving a few dollars; but a question of saving a generation of school children.

An interesting series of letters appears in another column of the Star, dealing with the right of a client to know the terms of his contract in connection with the purchase of shares through members of the Montreal Stock Exchange. But it appears "the rules and customs of the Montreal Stock Exchange"—specified as part of the agreement or contract before mentioned—are not available for public scrutiny. That is the dictum of the chairman of the institution. The public is thus served with a notice that it has not the right to know under what regulations its stock investments are put through—according to the chairman's ruling. But to the ordinary lay mind—as the chairman's correspondent (Major Mitchell), maintains—it would seem that a specification in a contract should call for textual details. The matter is of public moment, because the public's money is at stake. It will not be denied by disinterested people that an investor dealing through a public and chartered exchange has the right to know, to the last detail, every condition under which he pays in his money.

THIS DATE 30 YEARS AGO.

February 24, 1876.

Dr. D. M. McEachran.

The meeting of the Veterinary Medical Association took place last evening at the Veterinary College, and was attended by a full complement of the members. Mr. D. McEachran, the president, occupied the chair. The subject for discussion was "Rabies or Hydrophobia," which was very well debated by several of the professors and students.

Dr. Duncan McNab McEachran, F.R.C.V.S., was the founder of the Veterinary College of Montreal and its principal for many years. The college he established in 1875 on Union avenue has been non-existent for some years. In 1876 Dr. McEachran was appointed chief inspector of cattle at all quarantine stations in the Dominion and North-West Territories, during the lung-plague or pleuro-pneumonia scourge, the prevalence of which was widespread and serious in the United States. In 1886 the disease reached the Dominion in a valuable herd of imported Galloways, which the professor promptly destroyed, and by his watchfulness and energy the disease is unknown in Canada. For ten years the doctor was veterinary surgeon of the Montreal Field Battery.

The report of the Minister of Militia has been received. It includes a report to the Minister of Justice by Major-General E. Selby-Smyth, in addition to his report to the head of the department. In regard to a standing army, the General remarks: "The occasion has not yet arrived, nor is the country in a position as yet to maintain such a permanent establishment."

THE late Gen. Sir Edward Selby-Smyth, K.C.M.G., was appointed to the command of the Canadian militia in October, 1874, and the following year, after inspecting the several training camps, made a journey of inspection across the North-West plains, through the Rockies to British Columbia. Sir Selby was a fine specimen of the British officer and soldier, bluff and honest to all ranks. He saw much active service in India and South Africa against the Kaffirs in 1852-3. He was given a grand banquet at the Windsor Hotel in 1879 by the officers of the Montreal Garrison and Quebec and Eastern Townships military men on the eve of his return to England after completing his five years term of staff service. He died many years ago at his house, Thames Ditton, Surrey.

Word was received to-day of the settlement of a famous case in the English Church, which has caused much comment in the British and Canadian press for a long time. The judicial committee of the Privy Council, according to the cables this forenoon, decided the case of Jenkins against Cook, appealed from the Arches Court at Canterbury, in favor of Jenkins.

THE above case arose out of the refusal of the sacraments to Jenkins by his pastor, Rev. Mr. Cook, because he openly denied the personality of the devil. Jenkins sued in the Court of Arches, and the court sustained Mr. Cook; thereupon Jenkins went to the Privy Council, which set aside Cook's theory of Satan's personality, and made the latter pay all costs, and admonished him not to refuse to administer the sacraments to Jenkins. There was much excitement at the time in a certain section of the English Church over the adverse decision.

Mr. Euclide Roy, advocate, was examined by Mr. Commissioner Hemming yesterday morning regarding the conduct of proceedings in the Police Court. He went very fully into the causes of the complaints against the procedure and business of the court.

THE late Mr. E. Roy, who was a brother of the late Mr. Rouer Roy, K.C., ex-corporation attorney, was called to the Quebec Bar in 1862. He had an extensive practice in the Police Court, and therefore spoke with some authority. He condemned the system of the magistrates being unable or unwilling to control the clerks of the courts, having political "pulls," interfering in cases for trial. He remarked that Chief Penton and the whole of the detective and police force complained of obstacles thrown in their way by the police court clerks. Mr. Roy passed away in the nineties.

The committee on standing orders of the House of Commons have elected Mr. Rymal chairman.

THE late Mr. Joseph Rymal was truly the "funny man" of the Commons until he retired into private life. His satirical speeches generally caused roars of laughter at the expense of his victims.

RURAL SCHOOLS IN QUEBEC.

(The Huntingdon Gleaner.)

Mr. Mackenzie's zeal on behalf of the schools of the English minority redounds to his credit. By means of a series of ingeniously devised questions to the Government, he has demonstrated the incapacity of the normal school to furnish the supply of teachers needed and the blighting influence exerted by the universities, especially that of McGill, over our rural schools. An entire separation between the city and the country is necessary for the preservation of our schools. With a committee composed of members selected from the counties whose interests are at stake, changes could be made that would increase their efficiency. Release from the thraldom of McGill would make possible those alterations that are so desirable in the curriculum, and the scandal of boys and girls learning Latin who cannot spell in English, of studying mathematics who cannot add correctly, would cease. We want schools adapted to the means and conditions of life that prevail in rural Quebec, and such schools we will not have until their management passes solely into the hands of those who have a direct interest in them. Mr. Mackenzie is doing excellently well; may he persevere until success is attained.

MOUNT ROYAL SANATORIUM
DOMINION SQUARE, MONTREAL.
ANNOUNCEMENT.—Just what a sanatorium consists of is to many persons obscure, and we are constantly asked to outline the field of work embraced by this institution.
OBJECT.—To provide in Montreal a place where the invalid and chronic patient may have a change of surroundings and benefit by the most modern sanatorium facilities—water treatment, massage, electricity, diet and nursing.
CLASS OF CASES.—The sanatorium is not an hospital, but rather a home, where invalids, chronic cases, nervous and run-down persons may obtain rest and quiet, combined with the various special diets and treatments, impossible in a hospital. Insane, alcoholic or tubercular cases are not received.
SITUATION.—We believe unequalled on the continent. Facing the quietest part of Dominion Square, pure air, and a delightful outlook are assured. To the stranger all the advantages of a high-class sanatorium, while obtaining the services of any of the eminent men residing in the medical metropolis of Canada.
PHYSICIANS.—The sanatorium is devoted to no school, sect or pathy. Any reputable physician may send his patients and attend them himself. The resident physician, superintendent and nurses will carry out his orders and assist him in every way.
NURSES. — We are training up a special class of nurses to cover a field of work so far unprovided for. While competent in ordinary medical cases, they are trained in massage, baths and electricity, consequently specially adapted to care for invalids and chronic patients.
SURGICAL. — Good results in operations are largely dependent on the general health of the patient. A month of rest and sanatorium treatment will greatly increase the possibilities of success. A finely equipped operating room is at the disposal of surgeons for such cases.
EQUIPMENT. — At present our facilities for electric light and water baths, Turkish baths, water treatments, electricity, sun baths, are unexcelled. A leading electrical expert is now installing a new high frequency and X-ray outfit, and supervises generally our electrical equipment.
BATH DEPT. — For persons desiring something superior to the ordinary Turkish bath and massage, this department of our work is open. The gentlemen's hours are afternoon and evenings, and are under the direction of a specialist of continental reputation in hydro-therapy. Ladies are received every morning, and are cared for by an English lady, thoroughly trained in the Weir-Mitchell, Schott-Nauheim and other modern methods.

VESSEL THOUGHT TO HAVE GONE DOWN

Disappeared in a Fog and Captain and Crew May be Lost.

MAY BE THE MARICONI

A Brigantine Which Sailed From Halifax and is Due in Liverpool, N. S.

Halifax, N.S., February 24.—It is believed that a sailing vessel or small steamer was lost at Little Hope, 10 miles west of Liverpool, N.S., yesterday. Opinion inclines to the view that it was a coasting vessel, and it is feared that it may be the brigantine Marconi, which sailed from Halifax at noon and was due there yesterday morning. Last night the Marconi had not arrived at Liverpool. An unknown vessel was seen ashore at Little Hope in the morning by Otis Sims, who went to the nearest telephone office, three miles away, to send word. When he returned the vessel had disappeared. A strong northeast wind was blowing, causing a heavy sea. It was running so high that a vessel located where Sims saw her could not live for two hours, and if she broke up, the direction of the gale would carry any wreckage far out to sea. A tug was promptly despatched from Liverpool in the hope of rescuing the seamen or rendering assistance to them in saving their vessel. Captain Ryan made a thorough search, and did not return till late in the afternoon. His report was that he saw no sign whatever of a wreck, but he did not say that there had been no wreck. A vessel might easily have been aground there, as Sims reported, and have moved off into deep water and sunk, or might have broken up where she lay. Shipping people in Liverpool believe that a disaster has occurred, and grave fears are entertained for the Marconi, which was bound there with a general cargo. The brigantine is owned by Harlaw and Rempton, of Liverpool. If the vessel was lost there is no doubt that her captain and crew perished with her.

Crawford, Hamilton; additional members of the executive, A. B. Spencer, Collingwood; J. A. Copland, Harriston, and H. L. Matthews, Toronto.

A.O.U.W.—King Edward VII. Lodge, No. 69, of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, whose headquarters are at Inverness, elected the following officers for 1906, they being installed by Bro. R. H. Gooley, D.D.G.M., and Bro. J. Z. Trigganne, G.M.E., Master workman, Dr. W. B. Lambly; foreman, P. McKaig; overseer, J. B. Rosseau; recorder, J. McCammon; financier, H. Marois; guide, A. E. McKenzie; inside watch, J. Paradis; outside watch, J. Ross.

The Latest and Best Medicine for Women

Medicine has made great strides during the past few years. Doctors do not prescribe the same remedies now they did twenty-five years ago. There is something better.

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women are vastly better than the remedies put on the market then, which contain none of the medical discoveries since that time.

Good, perhaps, in their day, they are now superceded in the march of medical science by something better.

Many of the most effective ingredients in Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets had not been discovered twenty-five years ago. Some of them were not discovered ten years ago.

Yet the world's best physicians are now using them in diseases of women. There is no other preparation in which they can be obtained except these tablets. That is why we term Dr. Hugo's remedy "The twentieth century preparation for women." It is up-to-date. Women cannot afford to ignore these recently discovered ingredients, which science has made possible for their relief.

It is an incontrovertible fact that these tablets, embracing as they do, all the latest and best in medicine, will change weak and diseased organs (no matter which they may be) into strong and healthy organs, when the tired feeling, nervousness, and irritability, which come from a run-down condition, will disappear.

They will take away the backache, constipation, and dragging-down pains which are symptoms of a run-down condition or some serious disorder. They will cure all menstruation or uterine troubles even when chronic. In a word, they make healthy women.

Don't think you can never be a strong, healthy woman until after you have tried these tablets. One box will prove that you can. Improvement is noticed the first week.

PROPOSAL TO TAX CORPORATIONS

Special to the Montreal Star.

Quebec, February 24.—The private bills committee of the assembly met and made some further progress with the Montreal bill. Lr. Lacombe moved the reconsideration of the clause adopted at a previous sitting imposing a tax upon presbyteries and supported his motion in a vigorous speech.

Premier Gouin said that if he were a member of the committee he would certainly support most strongly the stand taken by Dr. Lacombe last week. He had spoken and voted in the house in favor of taxing certain ecclesiastical property in Rimouski and he believed he was right in so doing for there were precedents for such legislation. But for taxing presbyteries there were no precedents. He knew personally how unfair for instance would be the proposed taxation in the case of the presbytery of St. James Church in Montreal.

There was a big fight over the proposal in clause 16 to tax all corporations exercising franchises obtained from the province or the city. Mr. Martineau supported the clause, which was combatted by Mr. Geoffrion, both advocates making pleas which were listened to and followed with great attention. The telegraph, telephone and tramway companies all opposed the bill very strenuously. Mr. L. P. Demers appearing for the telegraph companies, the telephone by Mr. Peatland, the Montreal Light, Heat and Power, by Mr. Aime Geoffrion, and the Montreal Street Railway by Mr. Archer, K.C. It was finally agreed that the companies should pay one per cent. on a valuation not of 75 per cent. of their gross receipts as suggested in the bill, but of 50 per cent.

Clause 27 of the bill permitting the expropriation commissioners to exceed the amount of indemnity provided by law was adopted despite an amendment by Mr. Stephens to limit such excess to ten per cent.

The committee did not agree to any increase in the recorders' stipends, but in the cases of Recorder Larochelle, of St. Henri, and Recorder Govette, of St. Cunegonde, were taken up and it is understood that hey will receive an indemnity of some $4,000 each.

The committee meets again to-day.

MOTHER'S-IN-LAW LETTERS.

Bridegroom Suicided Because of the Slanders Against Wife.

Special Cable to the Montreal Star.

Berlin, February 24.—Herr Luppin, so evidence produced in the courts this week shows, was driven to suicide by anonymous letters containing slanders against his young bride, whom he had recently married. The mother of the bride had strongly objected to the wedding, but was persuaded to be present at the ceremony. Immediately after the marriage the letters began to arrive at the rate of two or three a day, each containing worse accusations against the bride than the ones preceding them. So detailed were they in their charges that they are believed to have been written by Luppin's mother-in-law, and neighborhood gossip has it that the mother-in-law really expected to be in the place of the daughter, at the wedding. Luppin finally became morose and depressed because of the continual slanders against his wife and shot himself, leaving only a letter explaining the reason of his suicide.

PRESENTATION TO MR. ELMSLY.—Mr. James Elmsly, Superintendent of Branches for the Bank of British North America, was on Thursday presented with a handsome oak cabinet of silver, together with a mahogany cabinet for china, from members of the staff throughout the service of the bank. The presentation was made by Mr. A. E. Ellis, manager of the Montreal branch of the bank, on the occasion of the forthcoming marriage of Mr. Elmsly to Miss Ramsay, at St. Paul's Church on Tuesday next.

REVOLT IN SULTAN'S DOMAINS

Troops are Refusing to Go to the Scene of the Outbreak.

Constantinople, February 24. — An extraordinary meeting of the Council of Ministers has been summoned to confer with the Sultan at the Yildiz Palace, and deal with the situation in Yemen, Turkish Arabia.

The hitherto localized revolt in Yemen against Turkish rule has been fanned into a more widespread rebellion by a warlike proclamation of Sheik Mahmud Yehia. A number of tribes have joined the rebel Sheik and the encounters with Turkish troops which have taken place at various points indicate that the situation is critical. Turkey is embarrassed by the objection of the troops to go to Yemen. Further reinforcements, which were on their way there, mutinied on board a transport in the Red Sea early this week and refused to do any duty until they received their arrears of pay.

WESTMOUNT PLATEAU ATTRACTING ATTENTION

Yes, and widespread, earnest, substantial attention on the part of HOME-SEEKERS, INVESTORS, BUILDERS and SPECULATORS, who know and appreciate good property when they see it. Not without cause. What cause then withholds you from becoming interested in a property which is gaining hundreds of satisfied buyers? Why should you overlook a splendid investment, an excellent property within 20 minutes from Victoria Square, on the direct line of the city's westward development and growth.

We ask again, what prevents you at this time—in this era of money-making in real estate—from becoming interested in the Metropolis' very best kind of property at prices so low and upon terms so easy and convenient that an investment of this high character would not embarrass you or bear heavily against your earnings or income. If you would invest in good real estate in the same easy manner that you do on the races or in oil and mining stocks, you would soon be counted a man of wealth and influence in the community in which you live. Can you dispute this argument from any standpoint whatsoever?

Spend this day well with your wife, or with any friend (who understands the present and immediate future values of real estate) in investing in WESTMOUNT PLATEAU BUILDING LOTS while you can still purchase them on such beautiful streets as Western Avenue, Sherbrooke Street, Upper Lachine Road, Notre Dame de Grace Avenue, Cote St. Antoine Road, Plateau, Highland and Old Orchard Avenues for $375 and up. Terms, 10 p.c. cash, and 10 years for the balance. $5 per month will carry two lots, 10 per cent. discount for cash. Plans and information free.

A Life Story in Classified Want Ads.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Classified Partner.

When a man works for years and a fortune acquires,
He sometimes sells out and from business retires—
Or takes in a partner—sells him a share,
Thus dividing the work, the worry and care.

Our hero's business had prospered and grown—
The books every year a large profit had shown—
Said he, "A half interest I'll sell, if I can Get a price that is right from a good business man."

He procured a fine partner—the best to be had—
He got him, of course, from a Star "Want" Ad.
Now, if you are observant you surely can tell
That Star "Want" Ads all others excel.

ALLEGED BARONET DROWNED

United States Marine Claiming to Be Sir Archer Villiers Drowned.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., February 24. —A man named Archer W. D. Villiers or A. W. Jones was drowned by breaking through the ice on the river in coming from the Michigan Soo this afternoon. With another man named Bert Barlow he had enlisted with the United States marine corps, expecting to be detailed for duty in China, and it was when coming here to bid goodbye to friends that he broke through the ice. Barlow was unable to save him. Barlow states that his companion had told him his name was Archer W. D. Villiers, and that he was entitled to rank as a baronet in England. He had been receiving mail under the name of Jones. He had been in this country but a few months, was 32 years of age, born of English parents in Australia, served four years with the British troops in South Africa, also saw military service in India.

His relations live at Sunderland, England.

The Ledoux Carriage Company's repair shop on Osborne street, between Drummond and Mountain streets, is one of the model departments of this great establishment. Instead of tinkers who merely patch up the failing vehicles, Ledoux's repair men are first class carriage builders, who carefully go over every bolt, nut, screw and spring, restoring the carriage to its original condition as nearly as skill and work can do so. Summer carriages now out of commission are keeping the Ledoux Carriage Company's repair men busy.

Some Take an Optimistic View of the Outlook for Stocks in Wall Street

Interesting Factors That are Governing the Market at Present —The Coal Strike and Insurance Co. Stock Holdings.

From the Special Correspondent of the Montreal Star in Wall street.
New York, February 24, 1906.

The opinion of the stock market experts is that the market has been largely oversold, and that while it may decline a few points further on additional short selling, and scattered liquidation, a substantial rally is looked for in the near future. A very fair proportion of the recent selling is said to have been by one of the most highly speculative houses in the Street, which has had a reputation for buying stocks at the top and selling them at the bottom. Much of the liquidation has been through commission houses by professional operators who have been plunging heavily on both sides of the market. This class of operators who have parted with their stocks believe that the market will rally soon, and are ready to take back as many or more stocks than they have sold. A man who is in a position to get a good general idea of the character of the trading says that the heaviest buyers of the United States Steel stocks and of Union Pacific below 152 were the two large banking houses whose names are most closely associated with those two properties. There is excellent reason for believing that the head of the former institution is very optimistic with respect to the future of the Steel Corporation, and the possibilities of United States Steel common in the market during the present year. It is claimed that he has recently freely recommended the purchase of Steel common.

THE BIG ORE DEAL.

It is also claimed that the terms of the Great Northern ore deal, as published from time to time, are not entirely correct. A railroad man who is familiar with the Northwest says that in his opinion the Great Northern ore bodies are the most valuable in the Northwest, and that the Steel corporation has found that its own ore bodies will not last as long as had been calculated. He regards the acquisition of the Great Northern property as much more valuable to the Steel Corporation than is generally realized. There is excellent reason for believing that J. P. Morgan, Jacob H. Schiff and other prominent men in financial circles who have gone or are about to go abroad and elsewhere, for recreation are not only confident regarding the future, but believe that present conditions are much better than they have ever been at this season of the year. It may be taken as a fact that they are fully satisfied with conditions and that they see no clouds on the horizon. There is equally good reason for believing that they would not go away at this time for rather extended trips if they felt that there was any serious trouble in sight.

SOME BEAR FACTORS.

Among the factors which contributed to the downward course of the market must be mentioned the heavy underwritings of new securities, which reached an aggregate of most $250,000,000 in one week. As fully 75 per cent. of the proceeds will be devoted to new purposes, such as betterments, extensions and equipment, this means a heavy drain upon the available money surplus of the country. Investors are naturally more inclined to purchase bonds when they yield a greater return than stocks. Doubtless much of the funds derived from the recent liquidation of stock market issues by the inner interests will go into desirable porderwritings, though a considerable part will find their way into the hands within of the foreign alliances made by New York bankers. It is well that such is the case, since in the present dormant bond market a glut would inevitably ensue, resulting in another period of undigested securities. Extremely suggestive of the trend toward higher interest rates is the outcome of the New York city bond sale, which nets 3.65 per cent. as compared with 3.50 per cent. for the allotment last November. Of course, this was in part due to the exceedingly heavy output of New York city securities and the lowering of its credit through the municipal ownership campaign.

Among the announcements of new underwritings and offerings the past week are the following:

American Tel. & Tel.	$180,000,000
Atchison	17,296,000
Atlantic Coast Line	10,000,000
Kansas City Southern	5,100,000
Lake Shore	35,000,000
Louisville & Nashville	10,000,000
Mexican Central	33,000,000
Minneapolis and St. Louis	5,000,000
Southern Railway	15,000,000
United Rys. Inv. Co. of San. Fran.	18,400,000
Total	$248,796,000

There has been a distinct change in money market conditions, rates for both call and time funds moving to a higher level. The probability of gold exports this spring no longer exists; indeed, the outlook favors imports of the precious metal in the course of the next few weeks. Local bank reserves have been materially contracted in the last two weeks, and as a result borrowers in the call and time departments of the market have been compelled to pay higher rates for funds, with the probability of being forced to give even better rates before the end of the spring season. While the higher quotations for money at this centre may serve to attract funds from out of town, it must be remembered that the demand for money at interior points its extremely heavy, and that the spring requirements of trade soon will become an active factor in the movement of currency. New York is not in a position to lose much money without disturbance in the money market, and this fact naturally encourages the belief that assistance will be forthcoming in the shape of shipments of gold from Paris. Although London and Berlin are not in a position to spare the yellow metal, Paris is well supplied, and now that there is no prospect of new Russian loans in the immediate future, Paris bankers doubtless will be willing to send good sized amounts of gold to the United States. The Bank of France is the last year has accumulated an enormous supply of gold, chiefly for the protection of the Russian securities held by the French investors, and as conditions in Russia have again become normal, the necessity for maintaining large supplies of idle gold no longer exists. The higher rates for money in this country already have attracted foreign cash.

IRON AND STEEL.

Producers believe that the buying movement in iron and steel will reach larger proportions in the course of the next few weeks, as stocks on hand appear to be decreasing, while the wants of consumers evidently are expanding. Many new records are being made in the matter of shipments of finished products, but the acceptance of new orders for immediate delivery is practically out of the qestion. According to the reports received from the United States Steel Corporation, more new business is pending than at any time in the history of the concern. Railroad earnings and bank clearings continue to run far ahead of last year's figures. These facts influence conservative people to believe that the stock market will necessarily go higher. The public, however, is still taking very little part in speculation. Even the Amalgamated-Heinze settlement, so ardently longed for, fell flat as a stimulant for higher prices. Some very heavy speculative lines of issues like Steel common, Amalgamated Copper and Union Pacific, were thrown on the market, finding little support from insiders. Undoubtedly the departure of many of the leading lights in Wall Street on vacations inspired sellers for a decline. Some selling was due to fear that the money market will run away next month.

BORROWING MONEY.

It is stated that important financial interests have been borrowing money for far more important purposes than have yet been publicly discussed, and that the departure of leading financiers to various parts of the world is more significant than is generally supposed. The oft-talked-of merger plans involving Union Pacific, Northwest and New York Central now include the Illinois Central in the group. The buying of Chicago and Northwestern shares is believed to have relations to this situation and the buying of Union Pacific by William K. Vanderbilt has also relation to this project. The buying of New York Central has been entrusted to still other interests, and there is being wrought out a plan, it is said. In comparison with which the solidification of the investment in Chicago, Burlington and Quincy will be but as the advance sample. The announcement of a stock issue by the Northwest, even though this is explained to shareholders as intended for new equipment and extensions, leads to the conclusion that a step has been taken towards the aforesaid alliance. Just what the Union Pacific would gain by an actual merger it is difficult to perceive, since it already has a satisfactory working agreement with the Northwest. The Vanderbilts have for years controlled this latter property, so that no material gain can accrue to the New York Central from a closer connection. However, as a prospective mystery it is a most interesting theme.

THE COAL SITUATION.

A man well versed with the practices of the anthracite and bituminous coal roads, says that evasions of the law practically amounting to rebates, are common. He cited an instance where a large system had practically given soft coal operators a rebate of a dollar a ton, though still keeping within the law. It charged this firm the full schedule rate from the mines to the seaboard, but allowed it a rebate of the above-mentioned sum for switching charges, which simply amounted to hauling the cars over a private line on the docks. Among other methods for discriminating against the independent shipper is making it difficult for him to obtain cars, or, if he purchases his own equipment, causing delay in the return of the same to the mines. There are a thousand and one ways in which the railroads can discriminate and still keep out of the clutches of the law, and they appear to be doing it.

GATES BOUGHT COPPER.

Gates and Company have been recent buyers of Amalgamated Copper on the expectation, so the Street said, of further details regarding the Heinze settlement. Incidentally, it was assumed that short covering was in progress, the stock having been under marked pressure during the liquidating movement of last week. Naturally Thomas W. Lawson was mentioned in this regard, since considerable of the selling came from the "Hub."

INSURANCE HOLDINGS.

It is said that the insurance companies do not hold nearly so large an amount of stocks as is generally supposed. Legislation adverse to these interests would not cause a panic by any means. In all probability any law that might be enacted in connection with this matter would allow the insurance companies ample time to sell the stocks without a loss. Large interests and investors would be perfectly willing to take the stocks now held by the insurance companies, at least at the prices paid for them, and undoubtedly would be willing to take them at present market prices. Banking interests do not anticipate that whatever laws may be enacted as a result of the Armstrong committee's recommendations will be a disturbing factor in the stock market.

MARCONI WIRELESS

It would be impossible to find, in the history of the world's great inventions, a record of such consistent and rapid progress as that made by the Marconi System. Advancement along every line has been the by-word of the Marconi System. With the aid of a recent slight modification of the apparatus, the operator on the SS. Philadelphia is now able to transmit messages between seven and eight hundred miles. This means that this vessel can begin communication with the Station at Cape Race, Newfoundland, before she has dropped communication with the Marconi station just outside of Queenstown.

NEVER OUT OF TOUCH WITH LAND

Is now a fact, and not a theory, and every big steamship plying the ocean will shortly adopt this latest apparatus which Mr. Marconi has perfected.

The Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of Canada will benefit directly by this increased communicating distance, because messages will be transmitted through all the Canadian stations during a much longer period than before. This will allow for messages to be sent and replies to be received in steadily increasing numbers. You should not delay a thorough investigation of the investment opportunity which the Canadian Marconi Company offers. We will accept subscriptions for any amount of stock from one share to two hundred shares at $5.00 per share. An increase in this price to $7.00 may be expected at any time, and the need of investigating this matter is an immediate one. Address all communications and make all checks payable to to absolutely establish WIRELESS COMMUNICATION between America and Europe on or before NOVEMBER 1st, 1906.

These stations will be the most powerful in the world, and will have a capacity of sending or receiving

50,000 WORDS PER DAY,

which will give a net revenue to the Dominion Company, based upon reducing the present cable charges from 25 cents to

12 CENTS PER WORD

of over

ONE MILLION DOLLARS PER ANNUM, which, with the land stations of the Company, should bring the total net earnings up to over $1,200,000.00 per annum,

equal to 100 PER CENT. ON THE ENTIRE SHARE CAPITAL.

The Dominion DeForest Wireless Telegraph Company, Limited, is the only Wireless Telegraph Company doing a commercial business in Canada, and it numbers among its customers some of the most prominent business men and corporations in the cities of it will be in a position to very materially increase its present earning power.

MONTREAL, OTTAWA AND QUEBEC.

Its business is rapidly increasing, and with the completion of the station at

TORONTO ABOUT MARCH 15th

The share capital ($1,200,000) of the Dominion Company is remarkably low and for that reason the shares will advance very rapidly in price and we now predict that within the shares of the Company will sell for

ONE YEAR FROM DATE

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful It Is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefitted by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

Tremblay Won Two Falls

He Defeated the Englishman, Acton, in Two Straight Falls.

LARGE CROWD WAS PRESENT

No One Prepared to Lift the 320 Pound Dumbell in the Test of Strength.

It was no surprise to the large sized audience at Sohmer Park to see Tremblay pin "Joe" Acton to the mat last night, in two straight falls. It was Tremblay all through, and judging from the applause of the cheering it would appear that the young French-Canadian has lost none of his old-time popularity, and has, if anything, gained in speed and cleverness.

Tremblay took the first fall in thirty minutes and forty-five seconds, after some stiff work, in which he was always the aggressor. Acton was clearly outclassed, but his defensive tactics were always reliable, and showed some ingenuous tricks. Replete with head spins, long drawn out bridges, from a spectacular point of view the bout was all that could be desired. Tremblay had his adversary going at all times, however, and kept him busy getting out of jeopardy, and holding his shoulders from the mat.

Time after time Tremblay very nearly had him, only to let Acton slip away to safety by some pretty piece of work.

Acton was finally caught on a leg hold, with head and shoulders pressed to the mat, it occurred directly after the third spell.

In the second round, the Englishman went to the mat in twenty-four minutes. He was clearly outclassed in the encounter and showed signs of distress. Tremblay was in far better physical condition, and during the last few moments handled Acton at will. Acton, on the other hand, looked played out and was not at all in good training.

In the preliminary bout, Samson threw the local aspirant, Viger, three times within an hour, and gave him all he was looking for, as far as rough work was concerned.

The crowd was all for Viger, and this apparently made the big Swede sore, for every time the crowd would yell "Viger!" Samson would immediately proceed to enlighten them by making a mop of that same gentleman.

The evening was spoiled by tedious waits, long arguments and vaunting challenges thrown in the face of the different strong men.

Barre, in the test of strength for a world's record, lifted the 270 pound bumb-bell all right, but found the 320 pounds too much for him.

George Kennedy then offered to wager $100 that there was nobody present who could lift the latter, and although the two famous strong men, C[illegible] and Decarie, were both on hand, neither came forward with his accustomed alacrity.

ROCHESTER TEAM REMAINS THERE

President Withdrew Right From the Wilmington People to Buy the Franchise.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Rochester, N. Y., February 24.—President C. T. Chapin, of the Rochester Baseball and Amusement Company, has called off the Wilmington deal, notifying the Eastern Baseball people that negotiations for the sale of the local club are at an end. The Wilmington people, it is understood, asked for more time in which to consider the matter, but Mr. Chapin was unwilling to grant it and keep the local fans on the anxious sit longer. Mr. Chapin now says that if there are local baseball enthusiasts who are willing to come forward and buy up his holdings he is perfectly willing to sell them. There is little likelihood that there will be any change in ownership, as the local baseball enthusiasts are far apart, as to price.

CANADIAN WON RACES.

Indoor Championships at Pittsburg Were a Success.

Pittsburg, February 24.—Morris Wood of New York, captured both events at the opening of the world's championship indoor skating races at Duquesne Garden last night. Events were one mile and two mile races. Fred Robson, champion of Canada, was second in the mile event, and Phil Kearsey, of New York, third. In the two mile event Con. Hefferman, of Ontario, was second and E. A. Kyler, of New York, third. Hefferman's starting was the surprise of the evening. There were 4,000 people in the garden when the races were called. A sensation was created by the announcement that Thorval Thompson, of Minneapolis, had been disqualified on account of being a professional. The disqualification was caused by the Canadian charge that Thompson had skated with Nilson, the professional champion, at Montreal, in 1899. Thompson did not deny the statement, and the officers of the National Skating Association ruled him out.

A Liberal Donation.

Secretary James E. Sullivan, of the American Committee of the Olympic games of 1906, was yesterday notified by President John R. VanWormer, of the New York Athletic Club, that at the last monthly meeting of the club, held February 13th, a resolution was unanimously adopted appropriating $1,000 to the fund of $25,000, which the American Committee is now trying to raise for the purpose of defraying the expenses of an American team of athletes to the Olympic games this spring.

In addition to this donation of $1,000, President VanWormer was authorized to send out a personal communication to the leading members of the New York Athletic Club, requesting that subscriptions for the purpose mentioned be made, which means that a much larger fund will come from the New York Athletic Club.

This liberal donation on the part of the New York Athletic Club still keeps it in the position it has occupied for so many years—that of being the leader in everything athletic, and its liberality on this occasion will make for it many friends.

Great efforts will be made in all sections of the country for the next ten days towards increasing the fund which is now going at a very lively rate, and every effort will be made to raise the amount asked for by the American Committee — $25,000. The Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U. has sent out communications to all the clubs in the Metropolitan district, and it is confidently expected that $1,000 more will come from the small athletic clubs of Greater New York.

Emerald Snowshoe Club.

The Emeralds held their third ladies' night last Tuesday at Lumkin's, where a most enjoyable eve. ng was spent. Owing to the disagreeable weather most of the party drove out, although a few defied the rain and took the mountain course. Da. ing was kept up to a late hour and after partaking of refreshments the party returned to the city in special cars. The following ladies and gentlemen were among those present: Miss Ella Mulcair, Mrs. M. J. Brennan, Miss Margaret Mulcair, Miss W. Dempsey, Mr. and Mrs. Mulcahy, Miss N. McNally, Miss S. Coughlin, Miss A. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stafford, Miss Katie Scott, Miss Flynn, Miss M. Fox, Miss Nellie Regan, Miss Molly McGee, Miss Evelyn Brennan, Miss Constance Milligan, Miss May McNally, Miss Ella Hoobin, Miss K. O'Brien, Miss Muldoon, Mr. J. Johns and Miss Johns, Miss D. Tansey, Miss A. Delahanty, Miss T. Delahanty, Messrs. D.C. Benson, Phil. Meehan, M. J. Brennan, H. F. Hoobin, J. O. Moriarty, F. Macdonald, R. McLeod, P. T. Hoobin, W. A. Richards, J. D. Thomson, W. D. Robinson, W. J. Hushion, W. W. McEvilla, J. J. Davis, R. J. Booth, E. Fogarty, A. M. Moran, Bert Dayton, T. J. Grant, Geo. Grant, Chicago, Ill.; John Sheehan, J. Donnelly, F. P. Williams, W. M. Liston, Leo Regan, R. Y. N. Brennan, W. A. Telford, M. Telford, N. Telford, H. J. Stafford, Charles O'Brien, John J. Craven, V. J. Macdougall, J. T. Stevens, L. Macdonald, Miss Telford and many others.

The club steeplechase will be held next Saturday afternoon, weather permitting, starting from the foot of McTavish street. The following Saturday, March 3rd, a joint steeplechase will be held with the Hollys, so next Saturday's race will give a line on what the Emeralds can do in this event.

Le Montagnard Races.

Through an error in reporting the above races, which took place at Delorimier Park last Saturday afternoon, one of the contestants, the last one to cross the tape, was claimed to be "a Y. M. C. A. man." This was not so, as the runner in question proved to be a team mate of the one taking second place. There were several other starters, who, being unable to keep up the pace, dropped out and did not finish. The Y. M. C. A. Snowshoe Club is not a racing element, and, therefore, had no entries in the race.

Lord Grey is Patron.

The Westmount Association Football Club has been highly honored by the acceptance of His Excellency the Governor-General to become honorary president of that institution. Mayor Knox has also signified his willingness to become an honorary patron.

Many new members have enlisted in the Westmount Club since last season, and a most successful and prosperous year is looked for.

The return hockey match between Dufferin Grammar School, Brigham, and Sutton Intermediates was played at Brigham, in the presence of a large crowd. Mr. Archie Longtin, of Farnham, was referee. The game was closely contested from start to finish, the result being a draw as the score stood 1 all. This leaves the school team victorious, as they won the first match. The visiting team were the guests of the D. G. S. boys for the day and were entertained at the school to dinner and tea, and left on the evening train, expressing delight at the welcome and hospitality they had received.

What Sulphur Does

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide), and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health: sulphur acts directly on the liver and excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles, and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins, while experimenting with sulphur remedies soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles and especially in all forms of skin disease as this remedy."

At any rate, people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers," will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

THE OLD STANLEY CUP IN USE AGAIN.

Although all the principal hockey clubs in this part of the country decided last year to ignore the Stanley Cup, it seems to be as strong a favorite as ever, and a team from the well-known Queen's University of Kingston will battle for it next Tuesday in Ottawa.

"IT'S ONLY A COLD, A TRIFLING COUGH"

Thousands have said this when they caught cold. Thousands have neglected to cure the cold. Thousands have filled a Consumptives grave through neglect. Never neglect a cough or cold. It can have but one result. It leaves the throat or lungs, or both, affected.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the medicine you need. It strikes at the very foundation of all throat or lung complaints, relieving or curing Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Sore Throat, and preventing Pneumonia and Consumption.

It has stood the test for many years, and is now more generally used than ever. It contains all the lung healing virtues of the pine tree combined with Wild Cherry Bark and other pectoral remedies. It stimulates the weakened bronchial organs, allays irritation and subdues inflammation, soothes and heals the irritated parts, loosens the phlegm and mucous, and aids nature to easily dislodge the morbid accumulations. Don't be humbugged into accepting an imitation of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. It's put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, and price 25 cts.

Mr. Julian J. LeBlanc, Belle Cote, N.S., writes: "I was troubled with a bad cold and severe cough, which assumed such an attitude as to keep me confined to my house. I tried several remedies advertised but they were of no avail. As a last resort I tried Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and one bottle cured me completely."

VICTORIAS DEFEAT BROCKVILLE

Last Game of Season Clean and Snappy, But Vics Won Out.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, February 24.—After seesawing for three-quarters of the time, the Victorias made a garrison finish of the Brockvilles here last night by 14 goals to 8, in the last game of the season for both teams. There was a slim attendance at Dey's Arena for the game, about 400 turning out. Despite the very mild weather, the ice was rather good, though one wet place caused some bad slips. It was exceedingly clean hockey, and the combination of the Victorias was pretty to watch.

Brockville's defence men scored five out of their eight goals, showing that the Victorias had the forwards beaten to a standstill.

A few accidents occurred to delay the game. Troop's bad leg was injured near half time, and he and Serviss dropped out of the game. Harrison tripped and fell headlong into the fence, but returned to play. Tommy Smith, Alf's brother, made a record score—nine out of the fourteen. Shouldis, at cover, was brilliant. The summary tells the tale.

The teams:

Brockville.		Victorias.

Debeau	point	O'Leary

McGill and Wanderers.

McGill II. and Wanderers II. will clash this afternoon, in the Arena, in the first of the two final matches for the Western championship of the intermediate C. A. H. L. The next match will be in the Victoria Rink, on Thursday night, and the majority of goals in the two games will determine which team is to play off with the winners of the Eastern division.

McGill II. won this honor last year and will put up a strong kick for it again. They form a very nicely balanced team. The forwards, though a little light, are fast, good stick handlers, and work well together. The defence men are heavy and able to handle pretty nearly anything that comes their way.

McGill II. will line up as follows:
Goal, Mather.
Point, Harrington.
Cover, Callaghan.
Rover, Gurd (captain).
Centre, Baillie.
Right Wing, Rowell.

A Quebec Snowshoe Carnival.

The Quebec and district snowshoers will hold a grand reception, church parade, games and torchlight tramp on February 25th. The Zouaves Snowshoe Club are making elaborate preparations for this convention. Thirty clubs will be represented. The Montagnards, Le Candien and Champetre Snowshoe Clubs have chartered a special sleeping car leaving Saturday, February 24th, at 11.30 p.m. (Viger Station) and returning here Monday at 7 a.m. Tickets good for five days will cost $4.50, to be had at F. Moretti, 1658 Notre Dame street.

Hardware League Game.

The teams of Frothingham & Workman, Limited, and Lyman, Sons & Co. met at the Victoria Rink in a fast game of hockey. At half time the score stood 1 to 1, but the superior condition of the hardware men told, and at the end of time the score stood 3 to 1 in favor of Frothingham & Workman, Limited.

Tennis Challenge Accepted.

London, February 24. — America's challenge for the Dwight E. Davis international tennis cup was accepted by the British Lawn Tennis Association by cable yesterday. The only other entry thus far is Australia.

PRIZE-FIGHT HOCKEY AT CALUMET

The Referee Was Tripped Up and Players Used Their Fists on One Another.

Calumet, Mich., February 24. — Portage Lake defeated the American Soo team in Thursday night's International League hockey game at the Amphidrome, Houghton, by 7 goals to 2.

The contest was fast and exciting throughout. The first half ended 2 to 1 in favor of the Soo.

After 5 minutes in the second half Joe Hall tripped Referee "Chaucer" Elliott, who benched the player for the remainder of the game—a twenty-five minutes' penalty.

Portage Lake developed a whirlwind offence in the second half and played all around the Soo men.

The game was fairly clean, few players being penalized. "Reddy" McMillan and Barney Holden engaged in a fistic encounter, and later McMillan mixed it up with "Grindy" Forrester. The line-up:—

Portage Lake (7).		American Soo (2).
Hern	Goal	Jones
Forrester	Point	Howel
Holden	Cover Point	Hamilton
Stuart	Centre	McMillan
Bright	Rover	Pitre
Hall	Right Wing	Laviolette
Lake	Left Wing	Schweitzer

Referee—"Chaucer" Elliott.
Goals—Bright, 3; Stuart, 2; Lake, 2; Schweitzer, 2.
Attendance—3,000.

G. T. Railway Clerks Play Hockey.

A very interesting game of hockey was played at the St. Lawrence Rink between the General Auditors' Office, and the Freight Claims Office, auditors winning by two goals to nil, the first half being very close, neither sides scoring. Auditors, in the second half, started with a rush, scoring two goals within ten minutes of playing time, the defence on both sides being very strong, the Auditors being by far the stronger and are mostly responsible for the victory. Following is the line-up:—

Auditors.		F. C. O.
Wright	Goal	Barrow
O'Brien	Point	Daissault
Cathcart	Cover point	Venoneau
Kinsella	Centre	Baker
Levis	Rover	Porteous
Lyons	Right wing	Watson
Duncan	Left wing	Waugh

Referee—R. Clemens.
Umpires—C. Ion and R. Walker.

The Starlight hockey team played a friendly game with the Athenaeums of the Junior League on the Crystal Rink, the former winning by a score of three to two. The feature of the game was the close and rough checking by M. Meldrum, of the Athenaeums, and the great defence work of the Starlight.

A RIGHT WAY and A WRONG WAY

Many people have many ways to bring about the same result. Most of them are mistaken ways, but this is not known until the test of time points plainly to the error. Practically there are but two ways to accomplish anything; a right way and a wrong way. Take, for instance, a man with a bad back, there are lots of them, and of various kinds, some with stiches and twitches, others with cricks and twinges; then there's the dull, heavy continuous kind that lasts all day and doesn't sleep at night. They're all bad enough, they're all hard enough to get rid of. Some people rub the back with liniments, others cover it with plasters, either or both means often bring relief, but the pain comes back—it's the wrong way to cure the trouble.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

have a way to cure backache, a way that's all their own—the right way. They're made for the kidneys only. When the kidneys fail in their work of filtering the blood the back aches because they are situated in the small of the back; backache is the kidney's warning of trouble, and every day you let the warning go it brings you nearer to urinary disorders, Diabetes, Bright's Disease, etc.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure every form of kidney ills and that's why they bring such quick relief from backache. Mr. Fred Gray, Good Corner, N.B., writes: "I was greatly troubled with pain across my back. I procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and received so much benefit from them that I consider them the best remedy for kidney trouble there is. I would not be without them in my house."

Price 50 cents per box or three boxes for $1.25, all dealers or The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

Would-Be Champion Lost

Marvin Hart Was Chopped to Pieces by Burns' Blows.

BUT HAD LOTS OF COURAGE

His Opponent Was Nimbler and This Was the Latter's First Heavy-Weight Match.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Los Angeles, February 24.—Marvin Hart, the Louisville plumber, who has been claiming the heavy weight championship, had his little aspirations knocked out of him here last night by Tommy Burns, of Detroit. They boxed twenty rounds and the referee gave the match to Burns. The real name of the winner is Noah Brisso. He weighed 180 pounds, and it was his first match above middle weight class. Hart, who has fought his way to the top by main strength and awkwardness, weighed 195 pounds, and was a chopping block for his nimble and clever opponent. For fourteen rounds the man who claims the title of Jeffries hardly laid a kid glove on Burns. He could not reach him. Burns swung, jabbed, hooked, and uppercut him to such good effect that Hart was bleeding in half a dozen places. One of his eyes was closed at the end of the fourteenth, and the other was gashed. His nose was flattened out and both lips laid open. The courage that had helped him to win other battles was still his, and he came back for more after each blow. Burns had weakened himself in his early endeavors, and failing to knock Hart out early, relied upon his skill at blocking and jabbing to avoid being knocked out himself in the later rounds. Hart recovered to some extent in the last rounds and forced matters, but had no chance. He was a pitiable sight at the end of the twentieth round—covered with blood and weak from punishment and exhaustion.

Hart has repeatedly claimed the honor of wearing Jeff's discarded shoes. If he had been able to lay Tommy Burns away in quick order, the fistic fans would have begun lending an ear to the buzz of the championship bee. Since Tommy has turned the trick, Burns will become a name to conjure with in the heavyweight camp.

Tommy has been battling at the middle weight limit, but each time it had been more difficult for him to make the weight and when he received a chance to meet Hart at catch weights he jumped at the chance, although he knew he would be conceding at least thirty pounds. Although Burns weighed about 165 pounds last night, Hart was a giant beside him. Marvin is six feet tall and close to 200 pounds. Tommy is several inches shorter. Charlie Eyton, as usual, was referee. Los Angeles is one town where the question of the third man in the ring never causes trouble.

An inter-urban championship billiard tournament will open next month at Marcotte's billiard parlors in this city.

A. Parent, A. Renans, and Z. Duscheneau are expected to represent Montreal, Mr. O'Hara, will uphold Ottawa, and A. Talbot Quebec. Entries from Toronto and even Winnipeg are also looked for.

ANOTHER BALL CLUB ASSURED

Montreal Will be Represented in Northern League Without a Doubt.

ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETE

At Meeting Last Night Franchises Practically Granted Ottawa and Montreal.

At a meeting held at the Windsor Hotel last night, it was practically decided that Montreal should have a franchise in the Northern League, as suggested in the Star this week.

It is proposed this year to have a six club organization, of which Montreal will be one, and Ottawa, Plattsburg, Rutland, Montpelier, Barre and Burlington will form the remainder. All these clubs were represented at the meeting last night, and although no definite conclusion was arrived at, it was practically decided that Montreal should have a franchise.

The Northern League is at present an outlaw organization, but is anxious to come under the National agreement. As this would be impossible with a franchise in Montreal, unless an amicable arrangement were made with the Eastern League Club now placed here, it is expected and hoped by those interested in the proposal that the Eastern League club will grant its support.

In the event of this support not being granted the Northern League will remain an outlaw organization and the local franchise will probably be taken up by the Mascottes.

Last season there were four clubs in the league, and the addition of Ottawa and Montreal is a natural development of a policy of extension for some time under consideration. The Ottawa Club has an enthusiastic backing, and among those in charge of the venture are Harry Sims, Harry Ketchem, J. P. Cain and Dr. Baird.

The annual meeting of the league will be held in Burlington March 9th, and the season will open probably on May 30th. A change has been made this year in the matter of salaries, and under a penalty of a $500 fine and the forfeiture of the franchise no club will be allowed to have a weekly salary list totalling over $375.

Mother Superior's Tribute

Is Similar to That of Thousands of Other Woman Who Have Been Cured of Kidney Disease by

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

She writes: "I am happy to say that we have experienced in several instances the beneficial—I would say almost marvellous—effects of the WARNER'S SAFE CURE in cases of female and kidney complaints.

"I heartily join in the numerous testimonials from those who, like myself, have been benefited by the use of your WARNER'S SAFE CURE, and, if possible, I will not be without it in the household.

"You can publish my grateful thanks for your valuable medicine, if you deem it best to do so. Very gratefully yours, Mother St. Ferdinand, R.J.M., Convent of Jesus Mary, Kingsbridge Ave., and 232d St., Kingsbridge, N.Y. City."

Thousands of women suffer unspeakable misery through nervous prostration, caused by disorders of the kidneys and female organs. Dark or bluish circles under the eyes, pallid complexion, a feeling of apathy and listlessness, loss of sleep and appetite; pains in the back and loins, headache, bearing-down sensation, painful periods and other female troubles are certain and unfailing symptoms of kidney disease.

Test Your Kidneys Let some morning urine stand 24 hours; if a reddish-brown sediment forms, or if particles float about in it, or if it is the least cloudy or smoky, your kidneys are seriously affected and unable to carry the poisonous waste matter from the body.

For over fifty years Warner's Safe Cure has been the only complete, permanent and safe home cure for Bright's disease, diabetes, rheumatism, gout, gall stones, uric acid poison, female troubles and all diseases of the kidneys, liver and bladder.

LARGE TURNOVER IN VOTE

Late Mr. Prefontaine's Majority in 1904 Over 2000, While Verville Gets Over 1000 Majority.

Mr. Alphonse Verville, the Labor candidate, in Maisonneuve division yesterday defeated Mr. L. O. Grothe, the Laurier candidate, by the decisive majority of 1073. The return was not a surprise to the election workers, who had been convinced for some days back that the nominee of the government was doomed to defeat.

The number of votes polled was comparatively large, coming nearly up to the nine thousand mark, or a little more than one-third of the votes registered in the constituency. This is a big record for Maisonneuve, where the vote is always light. It is a big turnover from 1904, when the late Hon. Raymond Prefontaine defeated Ald. S. D. Vallieres, a strong Conservative candidate, by the decisive majority of 2,172. The figures for the two contests are as follows:

WORKERS EXPLAIN DEFEAT.

The Liberal election workers explained the defeat last night by the unpopularity of the candidate and the lack of proper organization. They freely declared that almost any other candidate would have been defeated, with two possible exceptions. The initial mistake, they declared, was in practically packing the convention, at the behest of the Liberal clubs, whose chiefs had been seen and gained over to Mr. L.O.Grothe. Then, it was added, these same clubs failed to put up anything like an organization. The Laurier Club, the largest and supposedly the most influential in the northern section of the constituency, split in twain on the question of cash needed for the contest. Each section declared that the other was robbing the party organization. This split was fatal to the chances of the Government candidate.

Hon. L. P. Brodeur, the new leader of the Montreal district, and Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, who was foremost in the campaign, did not escape criticism. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries was accused of having forced the convention. It was stated that when he handed out the cards to the delegates to the convention he told the delegates that they must vote for Grothe, as he was the candidate the Government wanted chosen. Then in the convention he practically outlawed all who would not stand by Grothe as the candidate.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux came in for blame for the manner in which he had spoken throughout the campaign. His attitude makes the success of Mr. Verville a decisive defeat for the Government. Instead of accepting the declaration made by Verville and his friends that they were not opposing the Government any more than they were the Opposition, but merely asking that a representative of the working classes be elected, Mr. Lemieux declared in meeting after meeting that Mr. Verville was the candidate of the Conservatives, that the candidate himself was a Conservative in disguise, and that the success of Verville meant a serious defeat for the Government. On Thursday evening, Mr. Lemieux declared that as he had received the last sigh of their late beloved representative, before his death, he asked the electors of Maisonneuve as a boon for Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Government the election of Mr. Grothe. The reply of Maisonneuve was the election of Mr. Grothe's opponent by a large majority.

Mr. Beauparlant, M.P., went further and declared that Verville was the candidate of Mr. R. L. Borden, and if they still had confidence in Sir Wilfrid Laurier's government they must elect Grothe. The election workers blamed the Solicitor-General and Mr. Beauparlant for these extreme statements, which made the defeat of Grothe a direct defeat for Laurier.

RECEIPT OF RETURNS.

The returns were received by the returning officer Mr. Ernest Tetreau, at 94 Pontiac street, while Mr. Cadieux de Courville, who had been deputy returning officer at the poll held at that place, received the boxes as they arrived from the different polling booths.

The first returns from St. Denis ward indicated that Verville would take a majority there, but this was expected. St. Jean Baptiste however, was expected to give Grothe a substantial majority, and when the returns came from that division it was seen that Grothe was beaten. In Hochelaga, the Liberal organization there had promised four hundred majority, but it was soon seen that this would fall, and at the end it was found that only four majority had been secured.

Delorimier, too, proved a disappointment to the friends of Mr. Grothe, and when the returns from that section began to arrive, it was seen that all hope was at an end.

ALPHONSE VERVILLE,
The successful Candidate in Maisonneuve.

Mr. Grothe's Central Committee rooms at the corner of St. Lawrence and Marie Anne street was deserted at an early hour, while the overflow from the Verville committee almost across the street took up the space left by their opponents. The regular Liberal campaigners, were conspicious by their absence, the only one of the old guard who put in an appearance for any length of time being Mr. D. A. Lafortune, remained until shortly before 7 o'clock, when he, too, left.

The room had been half emptied, when Mr. T. O. Grothe, brother of the candidate, who replaced his brother throughout the fight, thanked those present for what they had done. There was nothing left but to congratulate the winner and to hope for better luck next time. His brother had always been a true friend to labor, and would not change on account of his defeat.

Mr. F. Matthews added a few words explaining that the illness of Mr Grothe was really a serious matter, and those who had jeered at the report of the illness of the candidate had been misinformed. This closed the speech making, and the crowd dispersed.

AT VERVILLE'S HEADQUARTERS.

Long before 5 o'clock Mr. Verville's headquarters, at 1143 St. Lawrence street, was crowded with electors from all parts of the division, and each return as it was announced by Mr. Joseph Ainey, business agent of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, was received with tremendous applause. The first announcement was from poll No. 7, which gave Mr. Grothe 25 and Mr. Verville 48. This report was well received and it soon became apparent that the labor man was going to defeat the Laurier candidate. Mr. Verville occupied a seat near the end of the table, or rather the temporary affair which had been used as a table for clerical work during the fight. On his right stood the former president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, Mr. John A. Fiett, and on his left stood the former vice-president, Mr. J. B. Mack, and as each return was brought in and announced it was handed to John J. O'Donoghue, legal adviser of the Congress. When Mr. Verville's majority had reached six or seven hundred Mr. George Poliquin, secretary-treasurer of the Longshoremen's Association, declared from a prominent position in the headquarters that the Laurier candidate was swamped. Cheers filled the place and the great throng sang an appropriate air.

By 7 o'clock the hall was packed like sardines in a box and the street was also filled right up to Mr. Grothe's committee room on the opposite side. When it became absolutely certain that the Labor candidate had been elected, Mr. Verville mounted a platform and thanked the electors from the bottom of his heart. He said the victory belonged to the workingmen of Montreal and he would do his best to faithfully represent them in the House of Commons. He believed it was one of the most brilliant victories that had ever been obtained by any political party in Canada since confederation.

Mr. Achille Latreuille, of the Soft Stone Cutters' Union, said a few words. The people on the street could not hear and an adjournment was made to the St. Jean Baptiste Market Hall. Mr. Verville again spoke briefly and was followed by several prominent labor leaders, after which a procession was formed composed of about two thousand workers. Mr. Verville was placed in a vehicle drawn by a white horse.

Mr. Verville was supported by Messrs. E. W. Villeneuve, John A. Flett, Thomas McGreavy, John C. Bumbray, Joseph Ainey, Charlemagne Rodier, A. Bourdon, George Poliquin, Achille Latreuille, Alphonse Gariepy, former president of the Montreal Trades and Labor Council. The Cigarmakers were prominent in the parade.

Speeches were made on St. James street by Messrs. Verville, Latreuille, St. Martin, Charlemagne Rodier, J. A. Rodier, Alderman Medric Martin and several others.

Mr. John J. O'Donoghue, the legal adviser of the Dominion Trades Congress, was escorted to the Windsor station, where he took the train for his home in Toronto. Mr. O'Donoghue expressed himself as being delighted with the outcome of the struggle.

Weak Kidneys

It is of but little use to try to doctor the kidneys themselves. Such treatment is wrong. For the kidneys are not usually to blame for their weaknesses or irregularities. They have no power—no self-control. They are operated and actuated by a tiny shred of a nerve which is largely responsible for their condition. If the Kidney nerve is strong and healthy the kidneys are strong and healthy. If the Kidney nerve goes wrong, you know it by the inevitable result—kidney trouble.

This tender nerve is only one of a great system of nerves. This system controls not only the kidneys, but the heart, and the liver, and the stomach. For simplicity's sake Dr. Shoop has called this great nerve system the "Inside Nerves." They are not the nerves of feeling—not the nerves that enable you to walk, to talk, to act, to think. They are the master nerves and every vital organ is their slave. The common name for these nerves is the "sympathetic nerves"—because each set is in such close sympathy with the others, that weakness anywhere usually results in weakness everywhere.

The one remedy which aims to treat not the Kidneys themselves, but the nerves which are to blame, is known by physicians and druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative (Tablets or Liquid.) This remedy is not a symptom remedy—it is strictly a cause remedy. While it usually brings speedy relief, its effects are also lasting.

If you would like to read an interesting book on inside nerve disease, write Dr. Shoop. With the book he will also send the "Health Token"—an intended passport to good health. Both the book and the "Health Token" are free.

For the Free book and the "Health Token" you must address Dr. Shoop Box 29, Racine, Wis. State which book you want	Book 1 on Dyspepsia.

AN IMPRESSIVE DISPLAY

If we could only impress you through the newspapers as effectively as the new goods would do it themselves, this store wouldn't be big enough to hold the crowd that would be here to-morrow. It takes only about five minutes to fill any visitor with enthusiasm.

Why, we have had men go into raptures over our new Wash Goods even! And no wonder, for there never has been in Montreal before anything prettier or more popularly priced.

This afternoon and on Monday we shall just demonstrate to you

What We Can Do in Wash Goods for .5.

In order to make the assortment all the larger at this uniform price, we will admit that we have had to put in some goods that we might otherwise have marked .40 and .45.

In all the new and prettiest of shades we are showing:—

- The Arnold Organdies for 1906.
- Figured Muslins, with mercerized stripe.
- Flowered Striped Crepes.
- Flowered Delainettes, mercerized body.
- Mercerized, inch square checks.
- Embroidered Lawns, spots and figures
- Embroidered Fancy Brocades.
- Embroidered and Figured Voiles.
- Embroidered Checked Zephyrs.
- Embroidered Swiss Spots.
- Piques, Bedford Cords and Plains, in all the new and prettiest shades.

AUTHORITATIVE INFORMATION REGARDING STYLES.

We shall be pleased to have any of our thoroughly experienced and capable modistes personally conduct customers through our Dress Goods, Silk and Wash Goods Departments, and acquaint them with the new styles that fashion has decreed for the coming spring, and show the materials out of which the new ideas can best be realized. We can assure you that the information you get in this way will be decidedly correct and authoritative.

SPANISH SILK SCARFS AND MANTILLAS.

Only 92 of them, but if we wanted to place them in our regular stock they would bring us over $600.00; being samples, however, we shall sell them for $225.00. They are all of fine black silk and they will be divided in three different prices on Monday, as follows:—

Those Worth	Those Worth	Those Worth
$1.75 to $2.50 at	$3.00 to $5.00 at	$6.00 to $12.00 at
$1.00	$1.75	$3.50

NEW EVENING GLOVES AT $1.45.

At a time when there is a greater demand for Evening Gloves than there has been for years, and when the stock of so many of even the wholesalers is practically exhausted, it comes as a rather startling announcement that we can sell you on Monday:

A new Evening Glove made by Perrin Freres of France, 12 button length, in black or white, of a fine quality of kid, at $1.45 per pair.

Why you couldn't get a real good street glove for much less than that.

MORE THAN A TYPEWRITER.

As She Straightened Author's English She Was Paid as Amanuensis.

Special to the Montreal Star.

London, February 24.—Fine distinctions between words, in which efforts were made to draw lines of demarcation between an amanuensis and a mere typewriter was explained at the Brompton County Court this week, when Mr. Carl Joubert, the well-known writer on Russian affairs, was sued by Miss Celia Moyes, formerly his secretary, for $100 being a month's salary in lieu of notice. Mr. Joubert's defence was that Miss Moyes was not an amanuensis but an ordinary typewriter, and was therefore only entitled to a week's notice. Despite the energetic defence made by Mr. Joubert the judge finally decided that Miss Moyes was an amanuensis and gave judgment in her favor with costs. Miss Moyes testified that among her duties was that of putting Mr. Joubert's English in order and preparing his books for the printer. She claimed that while he was able to speak very fluent English his language was at times twisted and that it was necessary for her to put it in order for the writer. On this point the judge rendered his decision in the girl's favor.

Eye glasses repaired, lowest prices. R. Hemsley, 255 St. James street.

ECZEMA Cured

50 Cent Box Free to Any One—No Money Required.

We want you to try at our expense the new external-absorbable skin cure, Zema-Salva, which has made so many wonderful cures of acute and chronic skin diseases. We know what it can do and are, therefore, willing to stand all the cost. We could not do this if our remedy did not cure. Remember, you try it free—not one cent in advance. If helped we expect 50 cents.

FREE

Zema-Salva is in the nature of an ointment and is externally applied. It is a positive cure for Eczema and skin diseases of all kinds. It works somewhat on the principle of a poultice, drawing out all the poisonous matter.

It heals from the inside, cleaning out the sore, instead of healing over the sore and keeping the poison scattered in the system.

Hundreds of cures testify to all we claim. Test us and send for a box of Zema-Salva to-day to the Kirby Chemical Co., 4224 Kirby Block, Grand Haven, Mich.

If satisfied with benefit you get, send us 50 cents.

The Charm of LUCIEN FOUCAULD BRANDY

Medico-Tonic Liquor is never forgotten once it has been experienced. The irreproachable flavour of this rare refined brandy has made it the desire of every cultured palate.

Its pure invigorating and tonic effect and its delicious soft bouquet makes it exceptionally valuable as an after-dinner liqueur for all invalids and others of delicate constitutions. Accept no other.

Have You Anaemia?

The following letter will put hope of recovery in your breast. The PHOSPHATED WINE of CINCHONA BARK succeeds where all other remedies fail. Don't hesitate—but go out and order a bottle immediately you have read this convincing letter. Read and then act. It means renewed health and vigor for you.

Montreal, Dec. 1st, 1905.
Messrs. Motard, Fils & Senecal, Montreal:
Gentlemen,
I think it my duty to add my testimony to that of so many others in favor of your famous PHOSPHATED WINE of CINCHONA BARK made by the RR. Trappist Fathers. My wife, who suffers greatly from Anaemia, tried all other tonics without result. She at last tried the PHOSPHATED WINE of CINCHONA BARK made by the RR. Trappist Fathers, and the results have been so good that she entertains strong hopes of recovery. It is unnecessary to tell you that she is continuing the treatment.
Truly yours,
J. O. DENIS, 723 St. Denis.

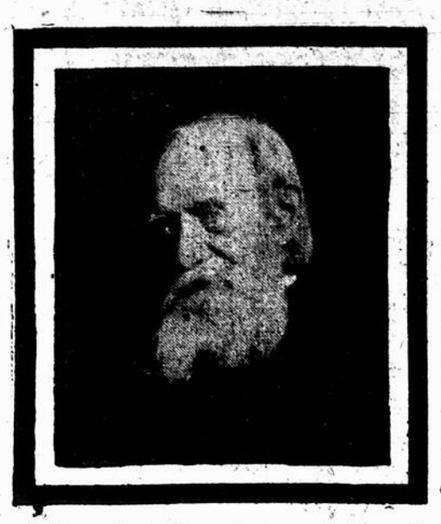
Montreal General Hospital

—and—

CHARLES ALEXANDER MEMORIAL



FUND OVER $200,000

Assurance of Success Unmistakable

Montreal's citizens are proving, without a doubt, that they feel the Montreal General Hospital is their own institution. The steadily continued receipt of donations from all classes of Montrealers shows their regard for the Hospital and for the memory of Charles Alexander, and the advance of the Fund towards a successful completion assures a bright future for that grand old landmark of Montreal, the General Hospital. The last acknowledgement showed $193,000. To-day the $200,000 mark is passed. What this and the future growth of the Fund means to the Hospital and to the suffering and afflicted of Montreal is known only to those who have do deal daily with the Hospital's utterly inadequate means of coping with the tremendous demands upon its resources. And how better can Montreal testify its regard for the man who spent his life doing good?

THE ALLIANCE-- ANGLO-JAPANESE

Tokio Thinks That it Might Snap at Any Hour.

Special Cable to the Montreal Star.

Tokio, February 24.—It appears to be almost impossible for the English and the Japanese to understand each other and the much-talked-of Anglo-Japanese alliance may snap in an hour.

This difficulty is perhaps due to the fact that it is not given to the Westerner to understand the subtleness of the Oriental mind. Scarcely had the difficulties which have arisen out of the telegrams misquoting General Terauchi, making it appear as though he had stated that he was going to negotiate with England to augment her navy in view of the proposal for a military convention under the renewed Treaty of Alliance and of the apparent inadequacy of the British defence in India been smoothed out by the statement that he did not say it—difficulties which caused storms of protests to go up from the British allies of Japan, than a vast deal of indignation has been aroused in Japanese navy circles over the publication of Sir Ian Hamilton's reminiscences of the Russo-Japanese war. Copies of the work have been received here.

The indignation of the British officers because General Terauchi, the Minister of War at the time of the meeting of the Budget committee of the Japanese Diet, when questioned by Mr. Oishi, the leader of the Progressive party, replied that if at any time in the future enquiry might lead Japan to express her views regarding the British army she would not hesitate to do so. According to the terms of the treaty every one now admits that General Terauchi had a perfect right to reply as he did. But the indignation of the Japanese officers regarding General Sir Ian Hamilton's reminiscences of the war know no bounds.

Sir Ian Hamilton went to the war in the Far East as the representative of Great Britain and as the guest of Japan. In publishing his "Staff Officers' Scrap Book," which is an open criticism of Japanese methods, it is held that he has at least violated Japan's hospitality if he has not strained the "military" or "official secret" laws of Great Britain. What makes matters even worse is that the British War Office and the British Foreign Office must share the blame since the "Staff Officer's Scrap Book" was advertised some time before it appeared, and the authorities had plenty of time to stop it if they had wished to do so.

For instance, referring to the censorship established by the Japanese, he says: "Nothing makes Europeans, and perhaps especially Americans, more mad than to feel that they have been cleverly played upon. Personally I have never much minded when my requests for particulars have been responded to by generalities, generalities and banalities, for I have found some of those red herrings to have an excellent savor."

Regarding the military ability of the Japanese Sir Ian Hamilton says among other things:—

"There are not many commanders who have resolution enough at the end of a terribly anxious night and morning to reject a series of plausible arguments for leaving well alone. I have heard Lord Kitchener remark under similar circumstances, 'Your reasons for not doing what you were told to do are the best I ever heard; now go and do it!'

"Kuroki, however, determined that as the main position had been carried it was not desirable that further heavy sacrifices should be imposed on the troops by a direct attack upon the rear guard, and he authorized Major General Nishi to stand by and do nothing pending further orders. It was a pity, but no doubt it is a very exceptional man who is able to detach his mind from the terribly impressive 'now' of a hard-fought field into the 'then' of the far future. Yet this is necessary to a full comprehension that what may seem heavy further sacrifices at such a moment may be literally trifling compared to the ultimate sacrifices which may have to be paid for an incomplete victory—for a thrust only half driven home.

"On April 25th the Japanese stood, and knew they stood in overwhelming force, only separated by two rivers from their enemy. Nothing, however, would induce them to make the plunge until they had completed their most minute preparations. Let the Germans admire this if they will; it is not the principle by which Marlborough, Napoleon or Lee won their reputations. On the day they meet a first class general this passion for making all things absolutely safe may be the ruin of our careful little friends."

These things added to the protest of Baron Suy E. Matsu regarding his treatment on board the North German liner Zieten have made a profound impression here.

Though Baron Suy E. Matsu declared that he would not enter into any controversy with the officials of the North German line, accepting for what they are worth the statements of the managers that they could not assign him first place at the captain's table because it was already occupied before he came on board by some distinguished Germans, it is felt that the Baron, who is a writer, a statesman and a traveller, would not have made complaint if he had not found the condition of travelling in Europe intolerable. The feeling here is growing not only against the English allies of Japan, but against all Europeans. This fact alone will prove that these disagreements are not the outgrowth of political conditions since Japan perhaps understands better than any other country the tension which has existed between England and Germany.

While there is a growing unfriendliness towards official England there appears to be a growing friendliness towards the United States.

For instance, the Tokio newspapers only laugh at people for circulating the reports that Japan was behind the Chinese boycott of American goods. To most it appeared as though the statements in connection therewith were too absurd to be even worth notice. On the other hand, the Japanese press has made a great deal of the proclamation of President Roodevelt calling for contributions through the Red Cross for famine sufferers. It has been the policy of the Japanese to minimize this famine and the manner in which the American President phrased his proclamation showing that it is a calamity such as may befall any country, showed that Mr. Roosevelt appreciated this fact and that he would not in the issuance of his proclamation give currency to the reports that the famine is worse than it really is. Many leading Japanese are calling attention to the fact that the United States has always been a friend of Japan and some are speculating as to whether a Japanese-American alliance would not prove more profitable in the long run than an Anglo-Japanese alliance.
