SOLUTION OF TEXTILE STRIKE APPEARS NEAR

World News In Brief

St. John's, Nfld., Nov. 7.—(P)—The terms under which Newfoundland would be welcomed into the Canadian Confederation were read yesterday to the National Convention considering the Island's political future but evoked nothing more than a notice of motion that they be received and discussed at tomorrow's session.

The only convention member to comment outside the Assembly on the Dominion Government's communication, released simultaneously in St. John's and Ottawa, was Joseph Smallwood of Bonaville Centre, leading advocate of federal union with Canada.

Smallwood merely repeated a statement he made a month ago that when the terms had been learned and understood by Newfoundlanders "they would sweep the country."

Peter Cashin of St. John's City West, leading advocate of restoring the responsible government which the island lost in 1933, offered a curt "no comment."

Washington, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Howard Hughes arrived here early today after a 12-hour flight from the West Coast to attend a second round of Senate hearings on his wartime airplane contracts.

Hughes could not tell when he might appear before the committee or what he might say, but he would wait until he is asked to testify before replying to an assertion of Senator John Williams (Rep.-Del.) that the Hughes companies owe the government almost $6,000,000 in taxes.

Vancouver, Nov. 7.—(P)—Decision of 2,800 tram and bus operators on a return-to-work proposal may be known late today or early Saturday, according to Union officials.

The operators have been on strike since October 20 in Vancouver, Victoria and New Westminster, demanding a 20-cent-an-hour pay boost, and an immediate 40-hour week.

The men vote today on a new proposal, reported to call for a 10-cent-an-hour pay boost, and a 40-hour week when sufficient crews are trained for all shifts.

Voting hours are from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., and all ballots will be counted at union headquarters here. Ballot boxes from the Victoria local will be flown to Vancouver.

If a favorable vote is received, normal transportation services may start Sunday or early Monday.

Russian Boycott Policy Is Puzzling Assembly Members

Lake Success, Nov. 7.—(P)—The United Nations today was confronted with the strange, new "boycott pressure," introduced by the Russian bloc into General Assembly affairs to oppose majority decisions in lieu of a veto, confined to the Security Council where the Soviet Union has invoked it 22 times.

In the last two days, the six-state Soviet group has vigorously declared its boycott of the "Little Assembly"—after it was approved yesterday by an overwhelming majority—and also the U.N. commission to facilitate Korean independence.

Earlier the bloc boycotted the Balkan "border-watch" commission and the sub-committee which drafted the "Little Assembly" proposal.

These boycott tactics have the delegates here puzzled. They watch the Russian bloc going to these radical lengths to declare its opposition to majority decisions of Assembly committees, yet there isn't the slightest indication that the Soviet Union and its supporters have any intention of walking out of U.N.

In fact, Russia's Andrei Vishinsky said in effect yesterday Russia would resist any attempts to push her out.

One leading delegate, who requested not to be identified, termed the boycott measures the "veto of the mechanical six."

He said he felt it was an attempt to introduce the veto, or at

Union Spokesman Believes Agreement Announcement To Be Issued Later Today

Argument At Meat Probe Nears Close

Adoption of Rand Formula May Meet Union Demands for Maintenance of Membership Clause in Contracts.

Toronto, Nov. 7.—(P)—Argument was expected to be completed today, third day of hearings before C. P. McTague, arbitrator in the dispute between the United Packinghouse Workers of America (C.I.O.) and two of the three big Canadian packinghouse chains—Canada Packers Ltd., and Burns and Burns.

A separate and final agreement had been reached between the union and the Swift Canadian Company at the close of the recent six-weeks' strike of packinghouse workers. The union struck for a wage increase of 17½ cents an hour, among other issues, and Canada Packers and Burns had granted seven cents increase. It is the difference between seven cents and 17½ cents, among other things, that is being arbitrated.

Mr. McTague's arbitration decision will be binding on both parties. He has received submissions on wages and union security for the past three days.

There was a hint in yesterday's hearing that the formula invoked by Mr. Justice Rand in the Ford strike at Windsor in 1945 might be a factor in the arbitrator's report. The Rand formula provides that all production employees must pay union dues, but that they do not necessarily have to join the union.

In the present hearings the U.P.W.A. seeks a "union shop." The company asks for deletion of a clause requiring "maintenance of membership."

Pat Conroy, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Congress of Labor, and Fred Dowling, Canadian director of the U.P.W.A., yesterday argued that if the companies expect the union to assume responsibility for all those under its jurisdiction, the union must have the power to command that responsibility.

And the union leaders added that all members of the bargaining unit should be compelled to pay for the benefits they obtain from the efforts of the union.

It was at this point that Mr. Justice McTague said that this could be taken care of under the Rand formula.

Briefs of the question of wages were completed and remaining problems are the work schedule, question of pay for statutory holidays, and a few other matters, finally technical.

Compromise on a Number of Basic Points Reported as Result of Meeting of Company and Union Officials With Quebec Labor Minister.

A spokesman for the Canadian and Catholic Confederation of Textile Workers announced in Quebec City last night that a settlement of the current strike in four Quebec textile plants will be announced in Montreal today.

However, following sessions today in the office of provincial Labor Minister Antonio Barrette, it was reliably learned that "some progress" has been made, but that the Dominion Textile Company and the syndicate are "far apart" on many points.

The strikers, members of the National Catholic Textile Syndicate, affiliated with the Confederation, walked out on Monday morning in plants at Sherbrooke, Magog, Drummondville and St. Gregoire de Montmorency.

The dispute arose over terms of a collective agreement recommended by a Provincial arbitration board on October 15.

The spokesman for the Confederation in Quebec said an agreement had been reached on at least one point today in Montreal. He added that the classification of jobs, a main point in the dispute over which 5,800 workers struck, had been retained "in its fundamental principles" as set out in a provincial arbitration decision made last October.

Meanwhile, reports from Magog and Drummondville say all is continuing quiet. The picket lines are token ones and no incidents have been reported.

G. B. Gordon, president of the Dominion Textile Company, has issued a statement saying "A degree of confusion appears to exist regarding the particular issue which the Catholic Syndicates and the company have been trying to work out under the chairmanship of the Honorable Mr. Barrette, Minister of Labor, during the past few days."

He has been stated, for example, that the syndicates are opposed to any changes in methods of production by the company which would result in a reduction of the wage increase of 15 cents per hour recently granted, while the company is said to have taken the stand that nothing must interfere with its freedom to put into practice new methods of production.

"Such a presentation of the situation does not do justice to the respective positions of either the syndicates or the company. The drafting of a clause for a collective labor agreement dealing in detail with technical operating matters is necessarily an involved affair. On the one hand the syndicate is concerned very properly in protecting its membership against the imposition of inequitable changes in tasks and other working conditions while the company cannot afford to place itself in a position where it is prevented from producing lower-cost cotton goods through new machinery, improved methods and other technological advances."

"There is no thought of the newly-increased wages being reduced by any such changes, but it is a matter of defining the exact procedure to be followed by the syndicate and the company where moves to improve methods of production are involved."

In a statement issued yesterday he requested Mohammed Ali Jinnah, Governor-General of Pakistan, to send reinforcements to Kashmir.

New Delhi, Nov. 7.—(P)—Dispatches from Kashmir said today that Indian troops defending Srinagar had driven back tribal raiders from Pakistan who thrust within 4½ miles of the embattled capital of that princely state.

An official announcement said Royal official Air Force planes had strafed the raiders, who numbered between 300 and 400, and turned them back with heavy losses.

"Armored trucks and armored cars fitted with machine-guns will be in Srinagar soon," the announcement said. "Further reinforcements of Indian troops are arriving with the convoy."

An Indian Defence Ministry communique issued last night said that in other sections of the Srinagar valley Indian troops had killed a number of raiders in "aggressive patrolling."

A dispatch to the New Delhi statesman said a large contingent of Indian reinforcements had reached Srinagar.

Wedding Gifts For A Future Queen

Gift of the President and Mrs. Truman is this handsome Steuben glass-covered bowl, designed by Sidney Waugh, American sculptor. Entirely hand-blown, of lead crystal, the 10-inch high bowl bears copper-wheel engraving showing five sets of merry-go-round figures and riders.

A New York firm made up this set of half a dozen "glamor" garters, a pair for each outfit in Princess Elizabeth's trousseau. Cover girl Chris Holly, who models them, holds in her hand the wedding garter, designed as the traditional "something blue" for the bride.

Bald eagle plate, above, is one of a dozen Waugh-designed glass plates, etched with Auroch bird motifs, presented by U. S. Ambassador Douglas.

World Food Situation Is Still Bleak

Deficit of 9,000,000 Metric Tons in Overall Wheat Production Compared With World Demand Reported.

Ottawa, Nov. 7.—(P)—The world wheat situation is still bleak, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports in its monthly review of wheat needs and prospects throughout the globe.

Since its last report, the Bureau said, little has happened to change the prospects of a general world need for more wheat, and the 1947-48 requirements for grain imports for deficit countries, set by the Food and Agriculture Organization at 38,000,000 metric tons, probably will fall short by about 9,000,000 tons.

The report of the F.A.O. conference emphasized that unless special efforts are made in both exporting and importing countries to mobilize more food and reduce this wide gap the calorie intake in deficit countries must inevitably fall to still more unsatisfactory levels, the report recalled, "and it stressed the necessity of using every available device to save grain from human consumption."

Most of the surplus wheat this year will come from the United States, which harvested the largest crop on record. Improvements have been noted in the Argentine and Australian crop prospects, but no change has been reported in the Canadian situation during the last month.

Situation In Forest Fire Area Static

Heavy Frost Plays Part in Drive to Keep Fires in Mansonville and Dunkin Area Under Control.

(Special to the Record)

Mansonville, Que., Nov. 7.—The fire situation in this area has not materially changed from yesterday and this morning the site of the fires could not be seen due to a thick haze which has enveloped the district.

The fires are burning about six miles from here and about five or six miles from Dunkin.

Firefighters were aided today by the haze, the heavy frost which partially dampened the ground and the lack of wind.

The fire warden of the State of Vermont has paid a visit to the district to see if aid was required and to review the situation in case the flames should race away and cross the border.

Canadian Prime Minister In Britain For Royal Wedding

Southampton, England, Nov. 7.—Prime Minister Mackenzie King arrived from Canada today aboard the liner Queen Elizabeth for a three-week visit to Britain and Northwest Europe during which he will attend the Nov. 20 wedding of Princess Elizabeth and Lieut. Philip Mountbatten.

The Prime Minister leaves tomorrow for Paris and goes Monday to Brussels where he will receive an honorary degree from Brussels University. Wednesday he will drive to The Hague where he is scheduled to address the Netherlands Parliament. He expects to return to London Saturday.

He said in an interview on his arrival here that his main reason for going to the continent is that on his last visit—to the Paris Peace Conference last year—he had been able to visit some, but not all, the Northwest Europe battlefields where Canadian troops fought.

Friends in Holland had heard of this and invited him to make a return trip.

He was going to express "very strongly" the hope that Princess Elizabeth and Lieut. Mountbatten would find it possible to visit Canada.

"Canada would give them a great welcome," he said. The mink coat which the Canadian Government is giving Princess Elizabeth as a wedding gift will be flown from Canada in time for the wedding. The further gift of antique

London, Nov. 7.—(AP)—A measure designed to develop the latent economic resources of British colonies headed today for final approval in the House of Commons.

The bill, which passed its decisive second reading last night, would endow two government corporations with an initial borrowing power of £165,000,000 ($660,000,000) for long-range colonial development.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

by Billy Rose

Today I'd like to spin a little story—a very, very little story. It's of no great importance, and I won't get mad if the editor man decides to use my regular allotment of white space for some big story about Vishinsky or Elizabeth's wedding.

To begin with, this story concerns itself with a church, and a lot of bright people will tell you a church is no longer of any importance in this test-tube and Bunsen-burner age. To make matters worse, the church is in Brooklyn, and—well, I guess you've heard plenty of jokes about how unimportant Brooklyn is.

Some weeks back, on my way out to Ebbett's Field to see a World Series game, I passed a Methodist church on St. Felix Street. As I drove by, I heard a set of chimes that did nice things to my ears. They were unusually good chimes, and I know that, as a rule, anything very good costs a lot of money. If I had heard them coming from a two-million-dollar cathedral on Fifth Avenue, I wouldn't have given it a thought. But this exciting and expensive set of chimes was coming from the belfry of a modest church in a modest neighborhood.

I stopped at a newspaper stand. "What's the church with the chimes?" I asked the newsie.

"A Methodist church," he said. "Hanson Place Central Church, I think they call it."

"Have they had those chimes long?" I asked.

The newsie thought for a minute. "No, not very long," he said. "I think they put 'em in last Spring."

The next day I did some telephoning. I kind of like what I found out.

Early this year, Rev. John Emerson Zeiter heard about a new type of electrically-controlled chimes called Carillon bells. After hearing them demonstrated, the pastor told his congregation about them. He said it would be a nice thing for the neighborhood if people going to work in the morning, and coming home at night could hear these beautiful chimes. He told his flock the bells cost a lot of money, and suggested they contribute a little something from time to time. Maybe in a year, or so, the church could afford the bells.

The next day he got a phone call from a member of his parish.

"I've been discussing the bells

Miss Geraldine Vernal, R.N., of

with my business partner," said the parishioner. "We think it would be a nice thing for the neighborhood, and we'd each like to donate a third of the cost. But there's a hitch."

"What's that?" asked the Reverend.

"Well, my partner is Jewish," said the businessman, "and we were wondering if that would make any difference."

Reverend Zeiter said he didn't think it would make any difference at all.

"We think," continued the businessman, "it would be a good idea to find some Catholic who will put up the other third. After all, people of all faiths are going to enjoy these bells. Maybe we could even call them 'The Interfaith Carillon Bells.'"

The next day a Catholic in the neighborhood offered to put up his third, and the Carillon bells were ordered. At the dedication ceremony a couple of months later, a plaque was put up on the wall of this Methodist church. Inscribed on it were the names of the Catholic, the Protestant and the Jew.

And that's all there is to this story—this very, very little story.

Do I think this one set of electrically-controlled bells is going to eliminate religious bigotry in the neighborhood? Of course not. Do I think the people who hear the chimes are going to resolve to be better and kinder people? Again, of course not.

Why, then, am I writing this piece? Well, I guess it's because I'm chump enough to think even one drop of clean water falling on a dusty street is important. It may clean up an inch of ground and give somebody else an idea. One of these days—and I don't expect to be around to see it—a lot of drops of clean water may fall and a lot of dust may be washed away.

SKELTON WANTS TO BUY UP HIS CONTRACT

Hollywood, Nov. 7.—Exclusively Yours: Red Skelton is still trying to break his contract because of bad scripts. His latest offer was $750,000 to buy up his contract. Bing didn't remember Clark. "In fact," he said, "I doubt whether I had a dollar before 1927."

Comic Jack Parr has been under contract to RKO 18 months now without looking into a movie camera's eye. Says Jack: "They send me scripts. I read 'em and say they're great and that's the last I hear from the studio."

Danny Thomas turned down a small fortune to become a regular on the Joan Davis air show. He'll have his own program after Jan. 1. . . . U. I. will enter "A Double Life" in the Academy race. Ronald Colman, they say, is terrific.

RECLAMATION OF LAND IN NETHERLANDS

Wieringerwerf, The Netherlands, Nov. 7.—The world's greatest land reclamation scheme—draining of the Zuyder Zee—has been resumed after a wartime break and The Netherlands soon will have a new province on what was once the ocean bed.

Already the Zuyder Zee, cut off from the ocean by a 30-mile enclosing dam which has a full-vi motor road and extra space on top to build a railway, has disappeared. Several rivers have gradually changed it into a freshwater lake, IJssel Meer.

Wieringermeer Polder, a dyke-enclosed area of 77 square miles at the western end of the $80,000,000 dam, was reclaimed in 1933 and soon its flat, treeless acres were growing huge crops of cereals and vegetables where fishermen used to put out their nets.

But Wieringermeer was flooded intentionally by the Germans 18 days before they surrendered. It was under water for seven months after Canadian troops had liberated all Holland. Almost all its up-to-date farm homes, barns and villages were destroyed. Now its 400 farms are being cropped again and hundreds of workmen are busy restoring the buildings.

Northwest Polder, 186 square miles of good land across IJssel Meer, was first drained in 1942, during the German occupation and, although it missed any war-ened flooding, the laying out of towns and villages and farms is not yet complete.

Work has begun on a 220-square mile Southwest Polder, including the Island of Marken where peasant women still wear brightly-colored traditional costume; and the plans are complete for a final Southeast Polder of 493 square miles, stretching across the base of IJssel Meer from the south of the Island of Marken to the east, almost to Amsterdam.

When all four Polders are complete, some 6,000 new farms will have been created. The 3,000 fishermen who earned a living on the Zuider Zee will have been replaced by 300,000 men, women and children living on the land.

TWO MILLION CHINESE ARE LACKING FOOD

Shanghai, Nev. 7.—(Reuters)—Two million Chinese are facing food shortages this year chiefly owing to crop failure caused by droughts and floods.

Centre of the acute famine area is in southern Hunan province which was also the scene of last year's famine and where about 1,000,000 people are in desperate need of food. Other hard hit areas include northern Kwangsi, Kwangtung, northwestern Shantung and central Honan.

Nevertheless, this year's pre-harvest food shortage in Hunan is not so severe as last year's when an estimated 7,000,000 people were threatened with death as a result of lack of food. Official figures of last year's scarcity areas in China showed a total of 2,000 square miles of food deficiency, compared with less than 500 square miles this year.

In Kwangsi province, bordering on Hunan, in the southern half of China, there are reported to be some 40,000 persons in need of food and more than 2,000 tons of rice have been rushed to the affected areas. Future supplies are urgently needed.

The Chinese National Relief and Rehabilitation Administration is reported to have sent 10,000 tons of foodstuffs to these areas of Kwangtung recently devastated by the worst flooding of the East, North, West and Pearl Rivers for 35 years.

Food Deficiency Rife

Relief officials estimated that between 300,000 and 400,000 persons in Shantung province are suffering from food deficiency. Spring droughts are said to have destroyed the winter wheat crop north of the Yellow River so that yields may amount to only half the average harvest.

In Honan, 300,000 needy persons have returned to reclaimed areas of the Yellow River and are dependent on imported food until crops are harvested in September. Crop conditions in other areas of Honan province have been good this year, however, and a better than average winter wheat crop has been harvested.

Agricultural reports from Hopeh and Jehol provinces in North China, indicate that winter wheat harvests are only 50 per cent of normal as a result of severe droughts in April and May, which are also depleting other summer crops. Widespread famine conditions are not expected however.

Crop failure in the northeast, particularly in the province of An-tung, has resulted in food deficiencies in parts of four or five "Hsiens," or districts, affecting a possible 100,000 people.

Distribution of foodstuffs before the suspension of U.N.R.R.A. supplies was described as being difficult in the northeast because of increased military activities.

Great Success Met Opening Night Of Local Rotary Fair

Minor Drop In Receipts Of First Night Is Registered

The gross take at the opening night of the 16th annual Rotary Fair at the Belvedere Street Armory last night totalled $3,440, a slight drop from the gross figure of $3,783 taken in on the opening night last year.

Robert L. Curphey, acting as honorary treasurer during the fair, pointed out that expenses and the cost of merchandise must be taken out of the gross figures. The colorful decorations, the gay atmosphere and the almost professional ability of those in the booths gave the drill hall the appearance of a small circus, only as the posters proclaim, it was "more fun than a circus."

Thousands of people surged around the booths, many winning the valuable prizes awarded to winners. They included blankets, lamps, ashtrays, arm chairs and many other valuable and useful gifts.

Probably the most popular of the booths was "Superfine" where a spin of the wheel results in a valuable prize for the winners.

The Sherbrooke Record Mystery Man was spotted by Mrs. Lewis Allen, of Lennoxville. Carrying the Record under her arm, Mrs. Allen designated R. L. Bishop as the Mystery Man of the night and collected the $10 "reward."

The rules of this contest are very simple. Any adult patron of the fair can enter providing a Sherbrooke Daily Record is carried. The person simply guesses which prominent citizen might be the Mystery Man, who arrives early each evening, then goes up and tells the person that he is the Mystery Man. If right, the award will be paid at the Rotary Fair office.

Raffle tickets drawn and holders were: 11426, Denis Kironac, 52 Cartier street; 11695, Burt Fortier, 94 St. Louis street; 10290, Paul Biron, 1 Leonidas street; 11429, Fernand Mercier, 50a Federal street; 01600, W. A. Smyth, 2305 Rosemount Boulevard, Montreal; 12593, E. Towner, 11

LOCAL CHILD INJURED WHEN HIT BY TRUCK

Roland Couture, 6 years old, 11 Leonidas street, is a patient in St. Vincent de Paul Hospital suffering from lacerations to the head and cuts to the left hand, sustained when he was hit by a truck while crossing Belvidere Street near the C.P.R. Station late yesterday morning.

The victim was hit by a truck driven by Armand Lapointe, 1A Perry Street. Lapointe was travelling south on Belvidere Street when he hit the youth. He is under the care of Dr. A. Ledoux and his condition was reported as satisfactory this morning.

STILL SEIZED NEAR VALCOURT

The Sherbrooke detachment of the Quebec Liquor Police staged a raid yesterday, seizing a still approximately 2½ miles from Valcourt, in an abandoned house on the property of Albert Gagne.

Four hundred and fifty gallons of mash were seized and while no arrests have been made, the matter has been transferred to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police for investigation.

The raid was carried out by local agents R. Taylor and A. Elie under instructions from Inspector Aurele Lemay, of the Provincial Liquor Commission, and the Sherbrooke detachment was in charge of Sub-Inspector Longpre, of Montreal.

TODAY and TOMORROW
St. George's W.A., Lennoxville, will hold their regular meeting on Friday, at 3 p.m., Parish Hall. Guest speaker will be Dean Basil Jones, of Bishop's University.

SUNDAY
The usual Remembrance Day service will be held Sunday, November 9, at 3:30 p.m. at the monument.

For those who felt ill, a St. John Ambulance Brigade first aid post was located behind the booths. John Rennie, in charge of the post, is from No. 5 Brigade of the Corps. At the post are ambulance sisters from No. 12 brigade, Miss I. Colleigh, L.A.O., in charge of that section. Teams of first aid men are continually patrolling the hall.

A host of charming young ladies mingle amongst the crowd selling raffle tickets. Many people having nowhere to rest their ticket while writing their name, used the shoulder of their companion as a makeshift table.

Numerous persons among the patrons carried blankets, table lamps, beautiful baskets of fruit and other prizes they had won.

The change booths did a booming business with the workers changing money with the dexterity of a first class bank teller. The three booths are located in convenient spots in the hall.

The bingo, Double-Double, fruit and groceries booths did a good business.

Many persons could not wait until they got home to taste the fruit and scores were strolling about the hall munching their winnings and having a thoroughly good time.

The Fair closes on Saturday night and all are welcome to attend, admission is free. All funds realized through the fair are used by Rotary in their charity work.

Death Of Lord Nelson And Trafalgar Battle Vividly Described In London Paper

Although the anniversary of the Battle of Trafalgar is October 21, it was 142 years ago today that the public of England heard about the action between the British Navy and a combined French and Spanish fleet during which Lord Nelson fell mortally wounded aboard the now famous H.M.S. Victory.

The London Times, in its issue of November 7, 1805, carries a lengthy editorial on the death of Horatio Nelson, Duke of Bronte, Commander in Chief of the British forces, as well as a copy of the dispatches sent to the Admiralty by Vice-Admiral Collingwood, who replaced Lord Nelson after his death.

A copy of the issue was loaned to the Record by Mrs. George H. Parsons, of 81 Portland avenue. The newspaper, a four-page tabloid, is owned by Mrs. Parsons' daughter, Mrs. John C. Powers, now living in Albany, N.Y., and formerly of Sherbrooke. The paper was handed down from Mrs. Powers' great-grandmother, Mrs. Wiggitt.

In mentioning the death of Lord Nelson, Admiral Collingwood wrote: "His Lordship received a musket ball in his left breast about the middle of the action, and sent an officer to me immediately with his last farewell, and soon after expired."

Previously in his dispatch, Admiral Collingwood wrote: "I have not only to lament in common with the British Navy and the British Nation in the fall of the Commander-in-Chief, the loss of a hero whose name will be immortal and his memory ever dear to his country; but my heart is rent with the most poignant grief for the death of a friend to whom for many years intimacy and a perfect knowledge of the virtues of his mind, which inspired ideas superior to the common race of men, I was bound by the strongest ties of affection; a grief to which the glorious occasion in which he fell does not bring the consolation which perhaps it ought."

The Times observed: "When Lord Nelson was shot, and was yet in the arms of the men who were supporting him, his eye caught the tidler rope, which was unusually slack; he exclaimed, with much emphasis 'Tighten that rope there!' an eminent proof that his professional ardor still survived the brilliancy of the flames of life. When he saw his Secretary and his friend, Mr. Scott thrown overboard, uncertain of the disfigurement of the wound and the confusion of the fight whether it was him or not, he inquired, with affectionate ardour — 'Is that poor Scott?' An impression seems to be made on Lord Nelson, for as the men were carrying him down to the cockpit he said — 'Don't let me be thrown overboard; tell Hardy to carry me home.'

In its editorial the Times wrote: "The official account of the late naval action, which terminated in the most decisive victory that has ever been achieved by British skill and gallantry, will be found in our paper of this day. That the triumph, great and glorious as it is, has been dearly bought, and that such was the general opinion, was powerfully evinced in the deep and universal affliction with which the news of Lord Nelson's death was received. . . There was not a man who did not think that the life of the Hero of the Nile was too great a price for the capture and destruction of twenty sail of French and Spanish men-of-war. No ebullitions of popular transport, no demonstrations of public joy, marked this great and important event. The honest and manly feeling of the people appeared as it should have done; they felt an

EDUCATIONAL PROBLEMS ARE UNDER REVIEW

In co-operating with the observance of Canadian Education Week, the Y's Men's Club of Sherbrooke devoted their weekly meeting, held at the Chateau Frontenac, to Education Night, with an address given by Neil Ginter, of the staff of Sherbrooke High School.

Speaking on the difference between teaching and education, Mr. Ginter clearly and precisely brought home to the Y's Men several important points. The first way that the school child is the centre of an equilateral triangle which is made up of the Home, the Church and the School, and any weakness depicted in the child's education may be due to a weakness of any one of the supporting institutions.

To say that the educational system (the school) is failing in its task is unfair criticism unless all influential factors are also closely inspected. Mr. Ginter pointed out, "Teaching is something that can be handed to or placed before the school child, but education is something else again, and it can only come from within. Teaching is the oil that enables the machinery of education to produce good citizens. . . kindly, helpful tolerant peoples," he added.

"There is no key to education," claimed Mr. Ginter, "as education is a life-long discipline by one's own self towards one's own self to lead a good life."

"All the experience schooling can possibly give will not eliminate spelling mistakes," Mr. Ginter insisted, "but it can eliminate racial intolerance, hate, violence and other evils. Today's teacher and today's school are not like the schools of yesterday. The teacher and the schools are full-blooded units of our democratic system. The teacher is no longer a physical force. No longer are the Three R's forced into the minds of uninterested children."

"Today's teacher is a guide, a leader and a counselor. Fields of teaching have been enlarged so that a child's education can be broadened depending upon the inert skills and unknown abilities that lie dormant within the child himself."

In closing, Mr. Ginter reminded those present that we are all, inasmuch as we all contact children, really teachers ourselves, each and every adult person, and our duty to our younger generation is so to live and so to teach as we would have learned ourselves.

With President J. J. McKnight in the chair, Mr. Ginter was introduced by Frank Jones and thanked by Archie Mitchell. Two new members of the Y's Men were introduced by the president, the

October Average Temperature Substantially Above Normal

The month of October was unusually warm with the average temperature of 50.82 degrees compared to 47.96 degrees for the same period last year and an average of 45.21 degrees for the thirty-three years records have been kept at the Lennoxville Experimental Farm.

On October 17, the temperature rose to 82 degrees, but this was not a record for the month as during the past thirty-three years the record was set on October 4th, 1932. The temperature that day was 85.

The lowest temperature for the month of October this year, 15 degrees, was registered on October 28th, while the lowest temperature for the past thirty-three years, 12 degrees, was recorded on October 26th, 1941.

Not only was the temperature higher than last year but the total hours of sunshine for the month were increased. Local citizens enjoyed 183.9 hours during the past month while the total sunshine for the same period last year was 169.3 hours. The average amount of sunshine for the past thirty-three years is 128.8 hours. The highest amount of sunshine for 33 years, 194.3 hours, was registered in 1924 while the lowest monthly sunshine for 33 years was 81.1 hours set in 1917.

Some 1.28 inches of rain fell during the past month while 3.22 inches fell during the same period last year. The average monthly rainfall for the past thirty-three years is 3.32 inches, the highest monthly rainfall is 6.43 inches, registered in 1919, and the lowest monthly rainfall, one inch was set in 1924. As can be seen by the figures last month was fairly dry.

No snow fell during the month. However, in 1925, the record for the thirty-three year period was set, with 15.1 inches of snow falling.

Total precipitation for the month was 1.28 inches while total precipitation for last October was 3.22 inches. The average monthly precipitation for 33 years is 3.65 inches. The lowest monthly precipitation, 1 inch, was set in 1924. Highest precipitation for one day, during month, 4.1 inches, established on the 19th. The highest precipitation for one day during the month of October for the past thirty-three years, 5.22 inches, was set in 1937.

LOAN NOT THE ANSWER

Reports from Ottawa and Washington indicate strongly that the Canadian Government is seriously contemplating a five hundred to seven hundred million dollar loan from the United States Government to replenish this country's rapidly diminishing supply of U. S. dollars.

Finance Minister Douglas Abbott, while refusing to confirm that a loan was being discussed by Canadian officials in Washington, also would not deny the report. Treasury officials in Washington said that they had been asked by the Canadian Government not to discuss the negotiations that were taking place between them and a Canadian group headed by Graham Towers, Governor of the Bank of Canada.

All this official secrecy would indicate that at least a loan is seriously being contemplated by the Federal Government as a way out of the American dollar shortage. While a half a billion borrowed U. S. dollars would be a temporary answer to Canada's problem, it is by no means a long term solution, and would do no good, unless accompanied by other measures. The example of Britain, with most of her loan used up and conditions in no way improved, is an example of what could also happen here.

If the drain of U. S. dollars is to be halted it must be done through stern Government measures, which apparently the Federal administration feel would be too costly in votes to implement. Imports from the United States must be cut down, and this should be done at once.

Useless pleasure travel south of the border should be stopped, but this edict must come from Ottawa. Individual citizens in time of peace cannot be expected to give up such luxuries voluntarily until their Government takes a lead in stressing how serious the crisis is, and takes steps to overcome the situation.

There are millions of dollars spent annually by Canadians for luxury imports from the U. S. and for pleasure travel in that country. These expenditures must be regulated, or no loan will permanently solve the dollar crisis. Too late the British Government discovered that her borrowed American dollars were being spent on such things as movies and tobacco, and the money has well nigh run out without doing the job of rehabilitating British industry.

Canada is undergoing a period of great prosperity, and on the face of it there should be no need to borrow money from another country. Our supply of U. S. dollars should be carefully hoarded for purchases necessary to our continued industrial effort. Let the Government institute measures that will save dollars now, instead of borrowing and thereby putting a still greater tax load on future generations.

ACCURACY OF MR. PICK'S OBSERVATIONS

Yesterday's news despatches from Prague bore out only too truly the observations of Jan Pick, who recently returned to Sherbrooke after a visit to Czechoslovakia, that the Communists were prepared to go to any lengths to obtain complete control of the country.

After threat of a general strike the Communists have now obtained the power to rebuild the Government of semi-autonomous Slovakia. The Associated Press despatch reads "Communist Premier Klement Gottwald emerged tonight from a political crisis as Czechoslovakia's new strong man."

Mr. Pick believes that Czechoslovakia is next on the Soviet list for complete domination, in spite of the loss of Communist support throughout the nation. Events within the last forty-eight hours bear up this opinion. If Czechoslovakia is to be saved for the democracies then dynamic action must be taken at once. Supplies and financial aid are more effective than any words in Europe today. Let emergency aid be offered now, as was done in Italy, and perhaps, as also happened in Italy, the result will be a sagging loss to Communist political power.

PEDESTRIANS ALSO HAVE RESPONSIBILITY

Police Chief Edouard Moreau is to be congratulated on his stand that pedestrians also have a responsibility in obeying traffic regulations, and a $2 fine was levied in Recorder's Court yesterday against a jay walker who crossed an intersection against the red traffic light.

One of the difficulties of driving a car down Sherbrooke's main street is the actions of pedestrians at the corner of Wellington and King streets. Groups of men and women have been in the habit of crossing this intersection against the red light, and in many cases when they wait for the light they do so standing up to six feet off the sidewalk on the road. This creates a hazard for the motorist and a danger to the pedestrian.

In other cities it has now become established practice to treat the pedestrian on the same basis as the motorist, thus recognizing in law that both have responsibilities. In the last issue of the Tyrone Constitution which arrived from Northern Ireland a case was recounted where a pedestrian stepped out from behind a parked car right into the path of an oncoming vehicle. He was knocked down and injured. When the case was investigated the pedestrian was found to be at fault, and not only were no damages awarded against the motorist, but the pedestrian was fined for jay walking.

Only when pedestrians and motorists recognize their equal responsibilities, and accept them with courtesy and thoughtfulness, will traffic difficulties be solved.

YOU AND YOUR CIVIL RIGHTS

Four apparently unrelated things now need to be brought together for a closer look in proper perspective.

First is the "Freedom Train," now touring the country, pulling up on sidings to let the people have a look at the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, the Bill of Rights and other sacred documents which guarantee Americans their liberties.

Second is the House Committee on Un-American Activities, which is currently conducting a probe to determine the extent of Communist thought infiltration in Hollywood and the moving picture industry.

Third is the loyalty investigation of all government employees now being conducted by the FBI.

Fourth is a 178-page Blue Book report, just released by the President's Committee on Civil Rights, chaired by Charles E. Wilson of General Electric.

The Freedom Train and the Un-American Activities Committee are not mentioned in the Civil Rights Blue Book. But they fit in. Main purpose of this Blue Book is "to discover wherein, and to what extent, we are presently failing to live up to... the heritage of freedom and equality for all men, sometimes called 'the American Way' of life."

FINDS RECORD FAIRLY GOOD

In general, the Blue Book finds that "Americans worship as they choose. Our press is freer from governmental restraints than any the world has ever seen. Our citizens are normally free to express their right to speak without fear, to assemble for unlimited public discussion."

But the President's Committee points out that the most immediate threat to these freedoms is indirect. It comes from two groups who refuse to accept democracy—Communists and native Fascists.

"The same zeal must be shown in defending our democracy against one group as against the other," says the President's Committee. But their Report on Civil Liberties opposes, without qualification, any attempts to put special limitations on these people to speak and assemble.

"The principle of disclosure," says the Blue Book, "is the appropriate way to deal with those who would subvert our democracy by revolution or by encouraging disunity and destroying the civil rights of some groups... If we fall back upon hysteria and repression as our weapons against totalitarianism, we will defeat ourselves."

Now this is where the House Committee on Un-American Activities fits in. Out of a threat "of clear and present danger," as the late Justice Holmes called it, the House Un-American Activities Committee has moved in to stop the Communists from bringing about "the evils that Congress has a right to prevent."

IF YOU DISAGREE, YOU'RE A COMMUNIST

"A state of near-hysteria now threatens to inhibit the freedom of genuine democrats," the President's Committee declares. "Irresponsible opportunists who make it a practice to attack every person or group with whom they disagree as 'Communists' have thereby aided their supposed 'enemies.'"

The Blue Book recognizes the need for the government to have in its employ only persons of recognized loyalty. Because Communists and other subversives conceal their affiliations until they have done serious damage it is necessary to have the loyalty of all federal employees checked by security police agencies.

"Yet our whole civil liberties history provides us with a clear warning against the possible misuse of loyalty checks to inhibit freedom of opinion and expression," says the Blue Book in another section.

"An employee whose loyalty is questioned is not charged with a crime. But loss of job and inability to obtain another one is a severe punishment to impose on any man. Accordingly, provision should be made for such traditional safeguards as the right to a bill of accusations, the right to subpoena witnesses and documents where security considerations permit, the right to be represented by counsel, the right to a stenographic report of proceedings, the right to a written decision and the right of appeal."

The historic documents which guarantee all these rights to American citizens are now on display in the Freedom Train.

To rally the American people to support and strengthen their civil rights, the President's Committee recommends a long-term campaign of public education. A visit to the Freedom Train should offer the best possible first lesson to such a course in liberty.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

But it is good to be zealously affected always in a good thing, and not only when I am present with you. — Galatians 4:18.

AMERICAN FAITH

Christian Science Monitor

A good many Americans feel hurt and puzzled. They hear of European and Asian nations turning to them for material aid, and then they are told that these nations think of them as materialists, imperialists, racial bigots, cultural barbarians.

Instead of resenting this ignorant caricature of American society, they can take it as a challenge and an opportunity. What the world wants desperately—even more than dollars—is faith. Let Americans show that they have a faith that is rooted in something more than material success. Untold millions of doubting hearts would rally eagerly to such a shining light in a dark and troubled world.

Several outstanding American voices have been heard within the last day or two at the New York Herald Tribune's annual forum speaking on behalf of the spiritual values in American life. What they said was not mere platitudes. It was a call to dig down to the well-springs of American vitality, which as David E. Lilienthal declared in a stirring speech, are not economic but ethical and spiritual, arising from a faith that men are not simply production units but children of God.

John Foster Dulles reminded his audience of Lincoln's conviction that the Declaration of Independence was something "giving birth to a new nation, out of the world for all future time," and that its promise is "that in due time the weights should be lifted from the shoulders of all men and that all should have an equal chance."

Is this Lincolnian ideal of equal opportunity Utopian today? Is it a mere luxury of doctrine, safe-guarded by America's position of economic privilege? That is what the doubters across the sea fear. They need to hear ringing words that deny their fears, words backed by strong, co-operative actions. They need to see the picture of an America striving towards constantly higher goals of social justice, not merely higher material standards of living.

They need to know the America that has faith in God, not merely in America.

Finding this, they will find America that is humble as well as proud. Humility, according to Reinhold Niebuhr speaking at the Forum, is the most important of virtues for the most powerful and wealthy nation in the world.

Without it, we will insist on political creeds and forms which Europe regards not as the creed of democracy but as the characteristic prejudice of a very wealthy nation.

For Europe loves freedom deeply, too, but it needs economic security more desperately than the United States, and its creeds are colored by that need.

With humility, Americans can recognize Europe's and the world's need, and help to supply it. Not merely from their material resources, but from their spiritual experience. For they have actual experience of a system which, in Mr. Lilienthal's words, is no system at all but "a society of the greatest imaginable diversity and flexibility."

This society is held together not merely by the bonds of finance and technology but by a common faith in the equal rights of all men under God. Here is a dynamical emerging pattern for the world where diversity and unity, freedom and order, must somehow be won together.

NOW WHAT?

Wall Street Journal

Men's clothing is simple compared with the unpredictable mysterious and complicated subtle nuances of style and shades that rule women's apparel with an iron fist. True, once in a while there are sporadic outbursts from the ladies but without being facetious we merely mention in passing that women are lengthening their skirts even as they voraciously peruse fashion's dictates.

It is time, however, that men's comparatively simple problems were simplified further. If one wears a 16 size shirt he assumes that means the number of inches around his neck. Then when he goes to try on a hat the sales clerk murmurs something about a seven and a quarter. Men's heads admittedly differ in sizes. Some men have big heads, on occasion they seem to grow rapidly. Other times they shrink. But by and large it is ridiculous to think a man's head is smaller than his neck. Probably hat size is measured by the diameter of a head. That's incongruous also for very few men have round heads. There are fat heads and square heads, but rarely do we hear of round heads.

Styles being what they are, we say let the ladies continue to ask for size five shoes and 9 11-12 inch stockings. Let them order two-year size play suits for six months old youngsters. But we wish a simplified logical system of sizes for men's clothes could be devised as a contribution to a more sensible world.

"MEAN STREAK" IN THE CCF

Winnipeg Free Press

There is no question of the motives of the CCF Government. Mr. Douglas and his associates, while eager to improve political parties, have, themselves, had no other desire than to improve the health and hospitalization services of Saskatchewan.

Their refusal to admit that anything worth while had been done prior to their election to office is just a mean streak which runs right through the CCF organization.

Actually much had been done in Saskatchewan prior to the election of the CCF in June, 1944. But the CCF Government, upon election to office proceeded to root up and to destroy the services which already existed. These services were indigenous to the province. They had grown out of and were firmly rooted in the municipal administrative system of Saskatchewan.

BRITAIN'S YOUTH ORCHESTRA

UK Bulletin

Britain's most talented and promising young musicians are to have their own National Youth Orchestra.

It is planned to give young players the opportunity of working together as a full symphony orchestra under the direction of eminent conductors. At the same time children and youths will have a chance to study their own instruments both individually and in section under well known artists.

Children must be between the ages of thirteen and nineteen and have reached a high standard of playing for their age. Britain's most distinguished musicians are deeply interested in this venture. Sir Adrian Boult will be the president while vice-presidents will be Sir Malcolm Sargent, John Barbirolli and Dr. Reginald Jacques.

Letters To The Editor

GRATEFUL FOR NURSES' ADVERTISEMENTS

Dear Sir:—During a meeting of the Committee of Management, The Association of Nurses of the Province of Quebec, held yesterday afternoon, a copy of the Sherbrooke Record, under date October 28th, 1947, was presented because of the full page advertisement which appeared therein relating to recruitment of student nurses in the Sherbrooke Hospital. Our Board members were greatly pleased with the amount of space you had allotted to this subject and the quality of the information supplied through the generosity of twelve industrial firms in the Sherbrooke area and unanimously agreed that this letter of appreciation be sent to you in the hope that you will share it with them. We trust that this timely publicity will inspire all the Eastern Townships to support the Board of Management of the Sherbrooke Hospital and its Building Committee in their plans for the construction of the proposed new hospital and nursing school.

We hope that you will give this expression of appreciation the fullest possible publicity.

With best wishes to you all.

Yours very sincerely, with head resting on the palms of clasped hands, and legs comfortably jacked, he can dreamingly sail to faraway lands on magic carpets of clouds.

But the deeper into the woods he strolls, the greater the adventure. His sauntering through the carpet of leaves sends a partridge with a roar of wings from a nest-by-berry-chicken. Squirrels chatter at his intrusion, while blue jays jaw at him from lofty pines. He stops, now and then, to chip a piece of stone from a tumbled-down wall for his rock collection. He fills one pocket with acorns, and then tosses them here and there with the thought that he is sowing a huge forest of oaks.

Then comes the greatest thrill of all! In back of an old stone wall is a butternut tree, its fruit still hanging in clusters of three. He hurries beneath its branches and scours the ground for the hard green nuts. With the agility of a monkey he's into its branches, shaking them with all his might to free the clinging nuts. Back on the ground once more he fills his pockets to overflowing.

The boy knows the butternut is spread on the attic floor to dry. Then, some winter night, his mother will crack them open and make butternut bread from the rich, tasty meat.

Indeed, there is a rich woodland harvest awaiting the boy that takes to the woods these autumn days.

WAR ON DISEASE

New York Times

That seemingly inevitable camp follower of war and disaster—pestilence—can be routed if the will and the techniques are available.

Col. Crawford Sams, chief of the Public Health and Welfare Section of our occupation forces in Japan and Korea, reports that cholera has been stamped out in both those countries, after 11,000 deaths in Korea from that disease last year.

Important gains have been made, too, in decreasing the incidence of typhus, smallpox, scarlet fever, meningitis, typhoid, paratyphoid, diphtheria and dysentery, the most prevalent communicable diseases in those countries.

JUST HUMAN BEINGS

Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph

The first public session of CBC's Board of Governors has concluded. For those members of the public who attended, and who might reasonably have felt rather like the first Europeans to enter Lhasa, it is said to have been singularly dull. There were no mysterious rites; no burnt offerings; nothing to justify the secrecy of years. Members of the Board were, in fact, discovered to be ordinary human beings.

McKENNY ON BRIDGE

By Wm. E. McKenny, America's Card Authority

WHICH TO FINESSE FIRST, IS PROBLEM

The situation in today's hand does not bear out the old saying "When in doubt, lead trump." Declarer has only one entry into dummy. He can take either the heart or the club finesse.

If he both lose he will go down one, but the percentage favors his winning at least one of the two finesses. Therefore his problem is which one to take.

If South is a believer in picking up the trumps he probably will take the heart finesse, and when it loses he will be unable to get back into dummy to take the club finesse. Since he will have a loser in every suit if both finesses fail, his first play, after winning the opening lead with the ace of spades, should be the nine of spades, hoping to establish the queen. But West covers the nine with the ten, and East wins the queen with the king. A spade is returned and trumped by declarer, and now he leads a diamond to dummy's ace.

At this point the correct lead is the seven of clubs. When the queen holds the trick, the ace of clubs is cashed and a club trumped in dummy. This puts declarer in a position to take the heart finesse, and although he loses, he makes his contract of four-odd.

If he takes the heart finesse first, there is no way he can get back into dummy for the club finesse.

Molotov Views On Capitalism Prove Interesting

By
DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

There is no need for you and me to lie awake nights worrying over Foreign Minister Molotov's disclosures that the secret of the atom bomb "has long ceased to exist," and that "we live in a period when all roads lead to Communism."

These striking declarations—and others—which were made in a Moscow address yesterday on the eve of the Russian revolution's 30th anniversary, appear to have been intended more as a pep talk to Communists and fellow travellers, both at home and abroad, than as an effort to bedevil the democracies. That's not to try to belittle Molotov's effort, since he is an accomplished speaker and did a workmanlike job of propaganda-making for those at whom it was aimed.

The Foreign Minister's announcement about the atom bomb was the high-point of his pronouncement. He made it calmly and with studied language, such as would befit a revelation about the most momentous development of our age. It was a clever move.

Of course Molotov is right. The broad information about the structure of the bomb long ago ceased to be a secret, the experts tell us. The information is available to Russia, or even to you and me. However, it's equally true that there are a thousand-and-one technical details which still are secret, and without them the bomb couldn't be made.

There's no great secret about making an ordinary automobile, so far as your correspondent knows. But let the average citizen try to build one, starting with the making of the steel and other metals employed. His blue-print of an automobile wouldn't be worth a row of beans to him. See what I mean?

Another interesting point in Molotov's address was his revelation of what recently has become a red theme-song: that capitalism and Communism can exist side by side in peace. This is a complete about-face for the Bolshevik tenet that there was no place in the world for capitalism and it must be destroyed.

At first blush it looks as though Moscow might feel that it has just about reached the limit of its expansion in Europe and is figuring on a live-and-let-live attitude between the Russian bloc and the democracies. Be that as may, we shouldn't let ourselves become confused over the issue of whether Communism and any other ism can mingle in the same state.

As this column has remarked

HEADS DOMINION BURLINGTON MILLS

Appointment of E. F. KING, of Montreal, as president of Dominion Burlington Mills Limited, Sherbrooke, was announced at the company offices in Montreal. He is succeeded as vice-president by A. C. Werner, of New York, a director of the company and president of Burlington Mills International Corporation, New York.

Mr. King entered the textile industry in 1920 with the Dominion Textile Company Limited at its Verdun plant. In 1924 he moved to the manufacturing and cost department at head office, and in 1931 joined the sales department. He was manager of rayon fabric sales prior to joining Dominion Burlington Mills Limited as vice-president and general sales manager when that company was formed in 1945.

He now fills a vacancy created last July by the resignation of Britt M. Armfield, of Greensboro, N.C.

duction are concerned. It is obviously in the best interests of all concerned, including the consumer, that nothing should be allowed to stand in the way of changes in operating technique made, with due regard to the employee's welfare, which work towards lower, manufacturing costs. That way lies progress, giving the employee greater security in his job, and better earnings, enhancing the company's chances of selling its production at all times and affording the consumer an opportunity to buy the same, or a better article at a lower price.

"In view of this community of interest, it will be most surprising if the syndicates and the company under the able guidance of Hon. Mr. Barrette, do not finally develop a procedure satisfactory to both parties."

more than once, it might be possible for two neighboring countries—one capitalist and the other Communist—to live in peace. However—and let's not forget this—there is no possibility whatever for Communism to exist side by side with another ism within the boundaries of the same country. The most dangerous fallacy of our time is the belief by some that Communism can be combined with anything else.

You will note, by the way, that neither Stalin nor Molotov claimed Communism and an alien ism could live together in the same land. So we should recognize the subtle distinction and not allow ourselves to be tripped over it.

EARNINGS OF CHAIN STORE ON INCREASE

Operating profits for the twenty-eight week period from March 23 to October 4, 1947, of $1,036,867 after all charges but before income and excess profits taxes are reported by J. William Horsey, president of Dominion Stores, Ltd. Profits after providing for estimated income and excess profits taxes of $450,000 were $586,867, or $1.89 per share as compared with $1.34 a share for the corresponding period of 1946 which contained twenty-nine weeks.

Total sales amounted to $28,763,962, compared with $21,232,055 for the same number of weeks last year, representing an increase of $7,531,907 or 26.05 per cent. Part of this increase was due to higher retail prices resulting from higher commodity costs, but the full increase in costs was not completely reflected in higher prices with the result that gross margins percentage-wise have been narrowed.

Average weekly sales per store during the twenty-eight weeks showed an increase of 27.81 per cent over last year, the number of stores operated being reduced from 232 to 228.

Operating expenses in dollars continued to rise and showed an increase of 21.97 per cent over the same number of weeks of last year. Employees' payrolls were substantially higher as the result of job evaluation plan whereby wages and salaries applying to the different classifications of jobs was set up at the close of 1946 resulting in substantial increases for the employees. A cost-of-living bonus plan was also adopted January 1, 1947, providing for quarterly adjustments based on fluctuating living costs.

Three dividends totaling 97½ cents per share have been paid to shareholders during the current calendar year with a final dividend of 37½ cents being payable December 15, bringing the annual distribution to $1.35.

Net working capital was $2,423,855, compared with $2,427,324 at March 22. The ratio of current assets to current liabilities was 2.20.

inward satisfaction at the triumph of their favorite arms; they mourned with all the sincerity and poignancy of domestic grief their Hero slain."

The Times continues that when Nelson found he had placed the enemy in the desired position "he said to Captain Hardy, and the officers who surrounded him on the quarter-deck, 'Now they cannot escape us; I think we shall at last make sure of twenty of them. I shall probably lose a leg, but that will be purchasing victory very cheaply.' About two hours before the close of the action, His Lordship received a wound in the shoulder from a musketball. . . he was immediately carried below, and the surgeon pronounced the wound mortal. His Lordship received the intelligence with all the firmness and pious resignation to the will of Divine Providence, of which he has given such frequent and signal examples during his brilliant course of peril and of glory. He immediately sent an officer to Admiral Collingwood, the second in command, with his instructions for continuing the action which, he had so gallantly commenced, and the melancholy bequest of his last farewell.

"During the short interval between his receiving the wound and his final dissolution he remained perfectly collected displaying in his last moments the heroism that had marked every action of his glorious life. In that trying moment, cut off from nature and from glory's cause, all his anxiety, all his thoughts, were directed to his country and her fame.

"A few minutes before he expired he sent for Captain Hardy; when the captain came he inquired how many of the enemy's ships had struck their colors. His Lordship then, with the fervent piety which so strongly marked his character, returned to the Almighty; then turning to Captain Hardy he said: 'I know I am dying. I could have wished to have survived to breathe my last upon British ground, but the will of God be done.' In a few moments he expired."

The newspaper carried Nelson's last telegram to his fleet; "England expects every man to do his duty."

A casualty list was carried as well as a list of the ships and their positions.

The section regarding court affairs has an item saying: "His Majesty wears a green shade constantly over his eyes, after candle-light; and we are sorry to say, he cannot distinguish any person, except he be very near, and with the assistance of a glass."

SAWYERVILLE TO HAVE TALK ON ATOM BOMB

Sawyerville, Nov. 7.—A drastically different approach to the atomic bomb problem will be presented at 7:30 p.m., Sunday, at the Baptist Church, when the new sound-color film, "God of the Atom," is shown. The picture has been produced by Dr. Irwin A. Moon, director of Moody Institute of Science in Los Angeles and noted originator of "Sermons from Science," according to the Rev. Donald Day, pastor of the church.

"God of the Atom" points out that the discovery of atomic energy has brought man's consciousness of religion more sharply into focus. The problem, Dr. Moon declares, is not what man has but what man is.

"Our trouble in the world has never been due to the fact that we've had swords, or guns or gunpowder, or tanks, or airplanes, or even atomic bombs," says Dr. Moon. "Take all these things from the world and men will beat each other to death with their bare fists!" He believes that there is only one solution to the problem—a personal relationship to God.

Actual shots of the Nagasaki and Bikini explosions are featured in the film, as well as the only full-color moving pictures ever taken of the giant 184-inch cyclotron at the University of California. Since this exclusive sequence was filmed, concrete walls have been built around the cyclotron, and the interior has been rendered dangerously radioactive.

"If there was ever a time in the history of the world for sober and realistic thinking, this is it," warns Dr. Moon. "There is no defense against an attack by an atomic weapon." Scientists have predicted that fewer than 10 per cent of those now living would escape such destruction.

Larry Johnston, a young physicist who aided in atomic development at Los Alamos and photographed all three wartime bombs as they exploded, appears in the film with an eye-witness account of his experiences. "Man needs the kind of help which, in my experience, only God can give," says the scientist, adding, "For me, this is no academic statement, but an experimental truth!"

"God of the Atom" is second in a series of religious-science films produced in the laboratories of the Moody Institute of Science, a branch of the Moody Bible Institute in Chicago. It follows the popular "God of Creation," which was shown last year to more than a million people in churches, schools, and civic auditoriums.

The film will be shown by H. L. Harris, Moody film representative.

thing, the "know-how" in making it another. They commented that Molotov specifically did not say Russia had the bomb.

Today's ceremonies in Red Square, the Moscow broadcast said, started promptly at 10 a.m. when the chimes of the Kremlin echoed over the massed troops waiting to be reviewed.

Marshal Bulganin galloped into the square and was greeted by Marshal Kyril A. Meretskov, commander of the parade. He inspected the troops, both inside and outside the square, and then—as an orchestra of 1,300 men began to play—mounted the tribune to speak.

When Bulganin finished, the orchestra played the Soviet national anthem, an artillery salute of 24 guns was fired and the troops began rolling through the square.

Molotov's declaration in the Bolshoi theatre last night that the secret of the atom-bomb had ceased to exist was greeted, according to Moscow dispatches, by an audience which sprang to its feet "and cheered wildly and with abandon for a prolonged period."

Big grins were said to have spread across the faces of Russians who heard him and their triumphant glances were interpreted as meaning: "Now we've got it, too."

NEW PROMOTION ANNOUNCED FOR CMDR. BOULTON

Word has been received of the appointment of Cmdr. Angus G. (Gus) Boulton, D.S.C., well-known war-time destroyer captain, as Chief of Staff to the Commanding Officer, Atlantic Coast, at Halifax.

Cmdr. Boulton is married to the former Frederica Bradley, of this city, daughter of Mrs. F. Bradley and the late Dr. Bradley. During the war Mrs. Boulton served in England, France and Newfoundland as a member of the R.C.A.F. (W.D.).

The new Chief of Staff is a native of Russell, Man., and established a splendid record during the last war. He joined the R.C.N. V.R. in 1932, at Winnipeg, and participated in many cruises of Canadian warships to southern waters. After receiving his naval training, he was ordered to report for active service on September 1st, 1939, and he entered the R.C.N. with the rank of Lieutenant.

Appointed first lieutenant of the first destroyer Ottawa, he was then named to command the corvette Rimouski. Spending more than a year there, he took over the Annapolis for a year and a half. Also commanded the destroyer St. Laurent which he took overseas for the invasion and made many sweeps in the English Channel and the Bay of Biscay.

Cmdr. Boulton saw five and a half years' service at sea during the war, on the North Atlantic and in Iceland, as well as in continental waters. He witnessed the great "blitzes" in Liverpool and Glasgow.

Before taking his present appointment, he served for nine months as training commander at the R.C.N. station in Bermuda. Cmdr. Boulton's D.S.C. was won during the invasion.

He said migration from the United Kingdom to Canada depended on the keenness of British immigrants. "I understand here you don't want too many people leaving and we don't want to embarrass anyone," he said.

Conditions in Canada were "extraordinarily good."

"I don't think we've ever had so many employed. To the United Kingdom I would say we are doing all we can to produce and fulfill our contracts."

"We're all beginning to realize that the world is increasingly one and we are working towards better conditions."

The last week of his visit would be devoted entirely to the royal wedding. The Canadian Parliament opens Dec. 5 and he plans to return via New York on the board the ship with Irene Ricketts, 2½, of Barrie, Ont., returning with her warbird mother to visit her grandparents at Motherwell, Scotland.

Philip Noel Baker, Secretary for Commonwealth Relations, was to meet Mackenzie King on his arrival at London's Waterloo Station. Prime Minister Attlee hoped to be at the station but was delayed by a meeting.

Mackenzie King planned to spend the day in London, reading newspapers, writing letters and seeing old friends. Frank Salisbury, noted painter, was among friends meeting him at the station.

In the two-hour train journey to London, Mackenzie King dictated letters to his secretary, Ed Handy.

But the United States stuck by its guns in its earlier proposal that the General Assembly elect a U.N. commission to supervise the proposed partition of Palestine into Jewish and Arab states.

The Russians want the security council to handle this. While it was described as a "compromise proposal" to meet the Russians, it didn't go far and further negotiations are going to take place before the two divergent views of the United States and Russia can possibly be reconciled.

plan, to "use his power and influence to withdraw the invader," and added that he would go to Karachi to meet Jinnah if he desired.

From the government point of view the military news is better. It was reported here that attacking Indian troops thrust forward over 12 miles from Patten yesterday to retake Sangrama, about eight miles from Baramulla. Strayed Indian Air Force fighters strafed raiders concentrations in several villages north of Srinagar.

Opposition is still formidable, however, and the threat to Srinagar is not yet wholly removed.

A Kashmir Government communiqué said an armored convoy with further reinforcements of Indian troops was expected to arrive soon.

LOCAL WATER SITUATION IS VERY SERIOUS

All the rivers and lakes in the area have dropped considerably during the current drought and Lake Memphremagog is so low that no more water is being drawn from it. Little Lake Margie is three feet lower than its usual level.

The water situation is so bad that the town of Lennoxville is considering the shutting off of water for certain periods during the day if the situation worsens. Municipal authorities have requested householders to conserve water and, above all, not use it for non-essential purposes.

Gaston Massé, superintendent of the Sherbrooke Electricity and Gas Department, revealed that the St. Francis River, which has a level rating of 127 when full, now is recorded at 109, and the Magog River, with an average of 112, is 102 at present.

The lack of water is so serious that the municipal power plants are manufacturing but 30 per cent of their normal output. The remainder of the power is being piped in from Shawinigan Falls, by virtue of an agreement between the city and the Shawinigan Water and Power Corporation. This agreement terminates in 1949.

A prolonged, heavy rainfall is necessary to alleviate the desperate situation.

The Lennoxville Experimental Farm reported little fall ploughing has been done so far and that the situation will be more than desperate if the freeze up hits the region before rain comes.

At present, the ground is too dry for ploughing and if the fields go unploughed until the spring, the seeding season at that time, which is very short, will suffer considerably.

Many farmers have been forced to draw water for their stock in one respect the situation is not too bad for farmers in that they can turn their animals out on fresh grass instead of having them in the barn, as they usually do at this time of the year and feed them stored feed.

This in turn has given rise to a growing conviction on the part of some highly placed officials that such United States information agencies as the Voice of America radio program must take a more aggressive tack.

The Doctor Says

SOME DOS AND DON'TS FOR FIRST-AIDERS

By William A. O'Brien, M.D.
Emergency care for injured persons should not be hasty, except to stop bleeding. It is better to do too little, rather than too much, while waiting for competent aid to arrive.

Every bone fracture should be splinted before the patient is moved. First-aiders should not attempt to pull on an injured extremity to set the bone. It may be necessary to straighten out an extremity, if the limb is in a grotesque position, but this should be done gently to avoid injuries to the arteries or nerves or further bone damage.

If there is a cut or lacerated wound, antiseptics should not be applied, as even putting tincture of iodine in a cut causes further damage to the tissues. The first-aiders should simply cover the wound with a clean dressing.

Following an injury, even though the patient is left in the street, he should be made as comfortable as possible and covered with enough blankets or coats to conserve heat, but not too many, which might bring too much blood to the surface.

The patient should not be lifted by his knees and armpits and shoved into the back seat of a car. When fractures of the spine are present, this movement can cut the spinal cord and cause permanent paralysis.

Physician Gives Morphine
When a physician is called to attend an injured person, he usually gives an injection of morphine to ease the pain, except when there is head injury. In the latter case the brain may become too depressed by the morphine to make it safe.

If a fracture is suspected, it is much better to splint it before the patient is moved, even though no break in the bone is proved later. A severe sprain, with torn joint ligaments, should be splinted as it lessens the pain. In ankle sprains, the shoe may be left on to act as a splint.

Q—Please send instructions on how to quit smoking.

A—I have no written instructions on the subject; all you have to do is stop. At first it may be difficult, but it will not take long to get rid of the craving if you really want to quit. Stopping smoking is a display of will power, as vital tissue processes are not affected. When drugs or alcohol are stopped, the patient may be left in a serious condition.

Feminine Charm

Girl Can Cultivate Qualities To Attract
Without Being Beautiful

There is one question I am asked oftener by girls than any other and that is how to make themselves charming. In fact, one girl wanted this information so badly that she was willing to pay for it, and she sent me five cents asking me to please send her, for the enclosed nickel, a reliable recipe for acquiring it.

This knowledge would be a bargain at any price, for charm is a far more valuable asset to a woman than either beauty or brains, but, alas, we do not even know in what it consists, and we do not know how to make it. We do know how to whip up a little bunch of atomic bombs that would annihilate all who came in contact with us. It is just something that one woman has and another woman hasn't, and there she is, a daughter of the gods, or a stepchild.

As near as we can define charm, it is the comelier look in a woman's eyes that attracts us as a magnet does a needle, but why it does is also a mystery. Of course, prettiness helps, but beauty alone will not do. Nor are good looks absolutely necessary. All of us have known plenty of living pictures who were wall-flowers, while other women who were homely as a mud fence were so charming that they were positively hypnotic.

CULTIVATE CHARM

But while charm in its highest estate is a gift that Mother Nature hands out to her favorites, the ones who are by-passed need not mourn as one without hope because they can cultivate a synthetic article that is almost as good as the real thing.

Curiously enough, the main ingredient of this magic elixir is simplicity; so I would say to all the girls who desire to be popular to quit being copy-cats and just be themselves. The girl who poses as Miss America, or a sophisticated woman of the world, doesn't bowl people over with her fascinations; she only makes them laugh. It is the girls who are just what they are, simple and sweet and young and fresh and unworldlywise, who are the charmers. It is naturalness that does it.

Also, it is part of a girl's charm to be able to do things, to be adaptable, to fit in anywhere. So if you want to be a "must" on hostesses' invitation lists, you must be able to dance well, to play a good game of cards, to swim, to be one of the crowd. Likewise, you must be intelligent enough to carry on an interesting conversation. Scherzerade is the tutelage of every woman. Before and after marriage you have to keep some man interested if you want to save your life.

Perhaps, in its last analysis, a woman's charm is made up of three things: Tact, sympathy, skill in incense burning. All of us are vulnerable. We have our little weak spots, and we are just naturally drawn to those who respect them and who keep off of our toes. None of us craves the society of arguers, or people who tell us home truths or remind us of our faults. Those who charm us are the ones who butter us up and make us feel good and purry inside when we leave them.

The second charm of a girl and the one to conjure with is sympathy. We adore those who rejoice with us in our good fortune and who let us weep on their shoulders in our sorrow. And if all the other charms fail, there is one that invariably works. That is the ability to pay a debt compliment. No girl whose tongue drips honey is ever unpopular.

The Record will be pleased to receive any letters to this Dorothy Dix column. These will be forwarded to Miss Dix who will answer them as quickly as possible.

FONTAINE—BEGBIE

The marriage of Gwendolyn Clara, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Begbie, of Sherbrooke, to Mr. Francois Fontaine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henri Fontaine, also of Sherbrooke, was solemnized on Saturday, October 25th, in St. Patrick's Church, Rev. J. R. Moisan, rector, officiating. Mr. John Codere, organist, played the wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was dressed in a light blue wool costume, with white or-gandy blouse, black hat and white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

The groom's mother wore a black silk suit, black accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where about sixty relatives and friends assembled to offer their congratulations and best wishes to the happy couple. The tea table, covered with an ecru lace cloth, was centered with pink and white flowers in crystal vases and white candles in crystal holders. Friends of the bride assisted in serving refreshments.

The bride couple were the recipients of many useful and beautiful gifts including crystal, china and cheques.

Later the bride and groom left for a honeymoon trip to Quebec City and upon their return will take up residence in Desnais, Que.

A quiet wedding took place in the parsonage of the United Church, Lennoxville, when Hazel Olive, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Picken, of Cookshire, became the bride of Mr. Roy W. Flack, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Flack, of Kingsbury.

The bride wore a light blue wool suit with black accessories. Following the ceremony a dinner was served at the home of the bride.

KOTAPSKI—OLSON

Scotstown, Nov. 7.—The marriage of Margaret Wilhelmina (Betty), elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Olson, Scotstown, Que., to Mr. Edward Kotapski, of Montreal, son of Mrs. Nicholas Kotapski, of Roumania, and the late Mr. Kotapski, took place at 3 o'clock, on Saturday afternoon, October 11, in St. Andrew's United Church. Rev. C. J. Gustafson, of East Angus, presided at the ceremony. Miss Lois Mackenzie presided at the organ, rendering appropriate wedding music and accompanying Mr. Henry Moul-and, of Milan, who, prior to the ceremony, sang "I Love You Truly," and during the signing of the register, "Will Walk Beside You." The church was effectively decorated with large baskets of fall chrysanthemums, and the pews reserved for the guests were marked with red berries and bows of white tulle.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in lustrous blue satin, fashioned with sweetheart neckline and long, fitted sleeves tapering to points over the hands. The full skirt, edged waist line, fell in graceful folds to the floor. Her fingertip veil of tulle illusion was held by a sweetheart halo of orange blossoms and she wore a single strand of pearls with matching earrings, gift of the groom. She carried an arm bouquet of American beauty roses.

Miss Shirley MacDonald, of Montreal, the bride's only attendant, wore a slipper-length gown of orchid taffeta, with sweetheart neckline and short puffed sleeves. The fitted bodice, with low waist-line, was buttoned down the back. She wore an orchid Juliet cap with shoulder-length veil, long matching gloves, and carried an arm bouquet of yellow roses.

The flower girls, Faith Olson, sister of the bride, and Sheila Coates, of Bury, the bride's cousin, were dressed alike. They wore long full-skirted gowns of primrose yellow taffeta, simply fashioned with short puffed sleeves, fitted bodices buttoned down the back and tied with bustle bows. Their headresses were of matching material and they carried colonial bouquets of yellow and mauve baby mums.

Mr. Jack Phillips, of Montreal, acted as best man. The ushers were Mr. Fraser MacLeod, of Milan, and Mr. Fred Crossman, of Lake Megantic.

Mrs. Olson, mother of the bride, wore a street-length dress of navy crepe, with shoulder corsage of Talsman roses, a large tailored hat of navy felt and white accessories. Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church hall which was decorated with orchid and white streamers, forming a canopy under which the bride and groom received congratulations and good wishes of the guests.

The bride's table, in white and silver, was centered with a three-tier wedding cake decorated in silver and topped with a miniature bride and groom with a horseshoe of lilies-of-the-valley. Fall white tapers in silver holders and pink and white carnations, in silver vases, completed the decorations. Later the bride couple left for a trip to Ottawa, Toronto, Niagara Falls and Buffalo, N.Y., the bride travelling in a sheer wool dress of robin egg blue with embroidery in black and white. She wore a small tailored hat of black felt with gold trim and a corsage of pink roses.

MODERN MARRIAGE

WHAT CAN YOU OFFER?

Dr. Paul Popenoe
When you pick out a wife, take the long view.

Bob has been going for several months with Louise—"cutest little girl I ever did see," he declares. They have a good time together. She's a swell dancer and they both like badminton and dislike chocolate.

"I suppose there are a lot of things more important than those," he suggests. "What should a fellow particularly look for in a wife?"

Maybe it would be profitable to turn the question around for a few minutes, Bob, and ask what you should look for in yourself, before you try to wish yourself on any young woman.

1. Do you understand the differences in the way men and women think, feel, and act, well enough to be an understanding and tolerant partner for her, or any other woman?

2. Do you respect her personality and intelligence enough to give her genuine comradeship, not condescension?

3. Do you recognize the fact that she has known her own family all her life and you only a few months; that her attachment to her family is a normal and desirable one and that you will have to adjust yourself to it, instead of being jealous and demanding all her time and attention?

4. Will you be proud to introduce her to all of your relatives and friends, in all sorts of circumstances?

5. Can you approve of and accept the standards of personal conduct to which she will expect you to conform?

6. Are her habits and mannerisms such that you can adjust yourself comfortably to them?

7. Is your background such that you are proud to think of contributing your heredity to her children, as well as having her for your own offspring?

8. Do you consider yourself qualified to be a satisfactory partner?

Questions and Answers
Q—Can psychiatrists tell us what real love is?

A—How? Psychiatrists deal with mentally diseased persons, and mentally diseased persons are incapable of real love.

Q—I don't trust my husband. Would it pay to have him followed by detectives?

A—No. That's an expensive procedure and won't conceivably make your marriage any better; it may just create a rift. Don't let your husband know that you suspect anything is wrong, but figure out what he is entitled to get from you in marriage, and see that he gets it. In the long run, you'll usually keep your husband, in any event you'll keep your self-respect, by such tactics.

Q—Should engaged couples talk over and study sex differences?

A—It's one of the most interesting and useful topics you can take up. Ask your public library for Antram Scheinfeld's book, "Women and Men."

Archbishop Gives Views On Palestine

British Prime Minister Declares Difficulties Have Been Greatly Increased by Failure of Jewish Agency to Co-operate.

YORK, England, Nov. 7.—(Reuters)—Britain's difficulties in Palestine have been greatly increased by failure of the Jewish Agency to co-operate in suppressing terrorism, Most Rev. Cyril Garbett, Archbishop of York, told the York Diocesan Conference here today.

"The reason for Britain's failure in Palestine is honorable; it has been due to our desire to act fairly and impartially to both Jews and Arabs," he said. "We have protected the Jews from Arab hostility, but we have refused to allow Palestine to be invaded by the Jews in such large numbers that the Arabs would become a minority in the country they had occupied for 1,000 years—and at the mercy of the newcomers."

Speaking of Jews remaining in Europe, Dr. Garbett said: "Some place of refuge must be found for these unhappy people; the Christian conscience demands that they should be given both hope and security but very soon even the Jews will be forced to recognize that they will create a slum state if they open the doors to all of their race who wish to settle in that small country."

"The sooner we withdraw from Palestine, unless an acceptable agreement is reached by Jews and Arabs, the sooner will other nations recognize their responsibilities. Future generations will believe, give to the British administration and occupation of Palestine the tribute for fair dealing, patience and justice which prejudice and passion now withhold."

Aid given to illegal Palestine immigration and the "unscrupulous" propaganda conducted by the Zionists in the United States, had caused deep resentment in Britain.

"The crowding of unhappy refugees into unseaworthy and insanitary ships—floating slums—for financial and political propaganda, has been a disgraceful episode."

Writer Gives Inside View On Hungary

(Jack Guinn, Associated Press Correspondent at Budapest since January, 1945, was notified by the Hungarian Government on Monday that he must leave the country. The following dispatches tell of his arrival in Vienna.)

By JACK GUINN

Vienna, Nov. 7.—(AP)—To avoid arrest on Hungarian charges of "espionage" and smuggling of anti-Communists out of the country, I have been forced to bring my family out of Budapest into Vienna.

The Hungarian Foreign Minister, Erik Molna, a leading Communist, on Monday morning gave me until Tuesday midnight to leave the country or face trial. He told United States Minister Selden Chapin that Hungarian political police had "incontrovertible evidence" that I had engaged in spying on Hungary and that I had smuggled the Communist party's enemies into Austria.

Molna did not explain to Chapin exactly what I was supposed to have done. An official communique issued by Interior Minister Laszlo Rajk, another leading Communist, said that several Hungarians, all of them my friends and one of them my secretary, Miss Elizabeth Pallos, had been arrested for providing "confidential information." The official announcement said that in this connection I had been expelled from Hungary "forever."

Many persons in Hungary have given me information in the 21 months and seven days I spent there. Much of it, after being verified from other sources, developed into news stories which I am sure did not please the Communist-dominated regime. Chapin said he did not understand how a reporter's news dispatches could be classed as espionage.

Some of these news stories concerned the flight from Hungary of some prominent men and some ordinary little men who said they were afraid they would be arrested on various charges. Perhaps my prior knowledge of their plans to leave the country is what the Hungarian Government meant when it accused me of smuggling Hungarians out of the country.

But in the midst of the flurry of official announcement, Ivan Baldizer, Under-Secretary of State for the Foreign Office, stated that the charges against me did not involve news dispatches. He also stated the Hungarian Government was not angry at the Associated Press as a news agency and would take no action against its incoming news reports.

The implication is that I received what the government calls "confidential information" and passed it on to somebody else by some method other than cable or telephone.

I have worked in Hungary only as the representative of The Associated Press. I have never been a spy.

ATTENTION IS GIVEN ONTARIO WATER POWER

Toronto, Oct. 7.—(C)—Water power, the key to all industrial development, is getting its full share of attention in this province's post-war projects.

On a 35-mile course of the Nipigon River from Lake Nipigon to Lake Superior, two power plants are already generating 145,000 horsepower for the Thunder Bay district system and "upstream in country so far inaccessible except by boat, another is planned."

First of these is the Cameron Falls plant completed in 1926 and generating 74,000 horsepower. The falls were created by the dam which has built up a good-sized lake, spilling water over a natural rocky cliff.

Three miles down stream and set in solitary splendor and the natural beauty of Ontario's north-land is the Alexander Landing power plant turning out 71,000 horsepower. The Alexander Landing plant is remote-controlled from Cameron Falls, and only three men are required to superintend the big house.

Third project on the river is the Pine Portage project just 15 miles upstream from the Cameron Falls. This project is still in the survey stage and will not be completed for several years but is expected to generate 193,000 horsepower. Completion of the Pine Portage development will mean the same water flowing down the Nipigon is utilized for power production in three separate powerhouses.

Recent completion of the 50,000 horsepower Decew Falls plant, three miles west of St. Catharines, is one of eight post-war power plants to be started since the end of the war.

Decew Falls area, often referred to as "the cradle of the Canadian hydro-electric industry," has been an active centre of water power

MASQUERADE DANCE HELD BY LEGION

North Hatley, Nov. 7.—The North Hatley branch, No. 78, of the Canadian Legion sponsored a "Masquerade Dance" in the Town Hall, on Hallowe'en. It was the first public dance of this nature that had been held in the vicinity for several years, and a large crowd attended.

The costumes were many and varied and all of the old familiar characters were on hand. The black faced population of North Hatley had increased perceptibly. There were Aunt Jemimas, Mammies, dapper, light-footed young blades, and big buck coons. Several gaily colored gypsies flittered about on the arms of ragged itinerants and farmers with the hay still in their hair. The group that caused the most interest and comment was the Yokum family and neighbors. Friends of Daisy Mae and L'il Abner will be happy to learn they were man and wife for Hallowe'en, at least, in the persons of Mr. and Mrs. James Lowe. Moonbeam McSwine and the Wolf Girl were present, being Mrs. Ray Hattrick and Mrs. Douglas Gordon. The evil smelling inhabitant of Skunk Hollow was present with his skunk, in the person of Mr. Ray Hattrick. Mr. Charles Abbott was a lively and benign Pappy Yokum, while Mrs. Lyall Kirby, as Pansy Yokum,

Mr. And Mrs. Gustafson Are Given Large Farewell Party At Bishopston

Bishopston, Nov. 7.—Nearly one hundred people gathered in the Bishopston United Church on the evening of October 28, to honor Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Gustafson. For five years this congregation has had the privilege of working with Rev. Mr. Gustafson and it is with profound regret that it sees him leave to assume his duties at Beebe.

Mrs. H. Adams, formerly of Bishopston, and now organist of the Presbyterian Church in Missouri Valley, Iowa, played organ music, followed by the singing of familiar hymns.

TO REV. C. J. GUSTAFSON AND FAMILY

This large congregation tonight has met With hearts full of sorrow and deep regret, We have come together from far and near To say our goodbyes to ones we hold dear, To our Pastor and wife and their children as well, Whom we all love more dearly than mere words can tell.

For over five long and critical years Marked by blood and sweat and tears, Years of war and post-war peace Wherein grave forebodings never cease, Our Pastor has given us his very best And proven his worth in many a test.

On Sundays his sermons have ever been good, Well thought and practical, in fact they would compare most favorably with points to spare. With some we have heard on "The Church of the Air." He has followed the path that Our Master trod And helped us to live ever nearer to God.

He has shown us not only the way we should live But exhorted us sometimes as to how we should give To Missions, the church's most urgent work Toward which our duty we must never shrink, But strive to follow Our Lord's command And send the gospel to every land.

Besides, he has proven himself a friend In whom we could trust and fully depend, One who knowing our faults and weaknesses, too, To our confidence and faith has always been true. In short, since his work among us began, Indeed he has shown us a very fine MAN.

But now, one result of his talents and zeal, He's been called to work on another large field, And while this parting gives us all much pain, We know that our loss means some other's great gain, We believe he is obeying his Master's will And hope that success will follow him still.

So tonight to one who has served us so well We tender our kindest fond farewell, May God's greatest blessings throughout your life Rest richly upon you, as also your wife, And your father, and the children, may God in His love Shower blessings upon you from heaven above.

On behalf of the entire United charge.

ROBERT ELLIOTT, M.D.

Mr. Maurice Bowen was a serious, and over-worked Doctor Fixum, who administered pills to all his smoked assistant was Mr. Albert Sequin.

At mid-night hot coffee and sandwiches were served by the members of the Legion, their wives assisting, and dancing continued until two o'clock, when awarding the prizes, and thanking all who had supported the dance, Mr. Joseph Ditchburn said that the Legion hoped to put on another such dance, possibly a "Valentine Dance."

A good time was enjoyed by all who attended and the endeavor was reported to have been a gratifying financial success.

CHANCELLERY TODAY LITTLE BUT RUBBLE

By ERIC BOURNE

Berlin, Nov. 7.—(Reuters)—Soviet army and police guards have been withdrawn from the miserable rain and wind-haunted ruins of Hitler's former "Reichskanzlei" on the Wilhelmstrasse, and Germans now are venturing, with half-timid curiosity, into the building in any numbers for the first time.

Elderly couples, arm-in-arm, peer with scarce concealed awe at the towering walls and lofty ceilings stripped now of their rich mosaics and panellings and their massive, elaborate chandeliers. It is a "hangover" of awe lingering from former days or awe at the depths of their fuhrer's fall? If you ask them, they shrug their shoulders and murmur, "Terrible, terrible," and shuffle on.

A gang of laborers still is working

In the chancellery, removing what little is left of the precious marbles, metals and other building materials considered to be of use for reconstruction elsewhere. When their task is done, the whole building is scheduled for demolition.

Out in the chancellery gardens, weeds abound near the entrance to the air raid shelter, covering the tiny depression in which the bodies of Hitler and Eva Braun, wrapped in gasoline-soaked blankets, are supposed to have been burned after their deaths.

Best informed guide in the chancellery is an old man who worked there for two years under the Russians. He now is the solitary guard, a caretaker with really nothing but his own corner to care for.

From Hitler's former private suite, behind Bismarck's one-time chancellery, everything that escaped destruction in the war has been looted or dismantled. The safe—18 in the past year, the old man said—the heating system, even the lavatories and Hitler's special bath, all have been removed.

Yet, scattered everywhere over three spacious, lofty apartments, there still is a profusion of blank sheets of notepaper headed "Reichskanzlei," various forms, index cards, proposals for promotion and the filled-in pleas for Hitler's clemency by the wives and mothers of some of those thousands condemned by the so-called "people's" courts.

From the gardens, you can see the burned-out villa of Goebbels, with its narrow windows. Closer, is Hitler's "orangerie," also burned out.

Before you leave, the old caretaker will lead you on to the famous balcony from which Hitler accepted the ovations of the marching storm-troopers and frenzied Hitler youth. It is a sorry little balcony, from which today the eye roves over the Wilhelmplatz, where workmen are breaking up and removing some of the wreckage of the Third Reich.

But, in giant letters across the mass of Russian soldiers' names written at the entrance to the broad reception hall where Hitler received foreign diplomats, someone has scrawled: "Es lebe der fuhrer! ein fuhrer—ein fuhrer! sieg heil!" ("Long live the fuhrer; one Reich—one fuhrer! Hitler-victory").

"LES CANADIENS" WHITEWASH TORONTO MAPLE LEAFS 3-0

Elmer Lach Paces Punch Line With Two Goals As "The Rocket" Draws 2 Assists In Victory Over Leafs

A bartender experienced in mixing that knockout concoction known as a "Mickey Finn" looked like the best bet today for any National Hockey League club seeking a means of halting Montreal Canadiens' potent "punch line."

One look at the scoring statistics is all anybody needs to realize why an opposing coach must shudder every time James Dickinson, Elmer Lach and Hector (Toe) Blake out on the ice. The punch line boys have run up a total of 14 goals in eight games, a good deal better than half the team accumulation.

It was the same old story last night when Canadiens ground out a 3-0 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs. The punch line showed the way with Lach firing home two goals and Richard getting two assists. At the same time, Detroit Red Wings moved into a first place position with Boston Bruins by squeezing out a 2-1 victory over New York Rangers.

One of the curious things about the brilliant work of the punch line up to this stage of the season is that the unit started the season something of an unknown quantity. In fact, there had even been talk before the season got underway that the line would be broken up.

First there was the fact that Habitant bosses felt Lach might have slowed up too much to hold his own on the line. Then there was the question of whether Lach would be able to regain his old-time form after the serious head injury that put him on the sidelines for the last half of the 1946-47 season.

The answer is in the scoring records. Richard heads all N.H.L. point getters with 11, from five goals and six assists. Lach is in second position with seven goals and three assists. Blake is tied for third place with Buddy O'Connor of New York Rangers with nine points. Blake has scored two goals and helped on seven while O'Connor has a five and four record.

As an additional point of interest, it might be noted that Lach, who used to set play-making records, now holds down the top slot among the league's goal-getters with his seven tallies. On the other hand, Richard appears to have developed an ability to make plays as well as pot goals. Until now Richard had been the line's "great finisher"—a player who wound up with a bundle of goals but comparatively few assists.

Leafs and Canadiens mixed it up in hectic fashion throughout with the result Referee Bill Chadwick dished out 19 penalties. A free-for-all broke out two minutes from the end that brought majors to defencemen Kenny Reardon of Canadiens and winger Vic Lynn of Leafs and minors to defencemen Bill Barilko of Leafs and centre Billy Reay of the Habs.

In the first period, another flareup led to penalties to Reardon, Richard and the Leafs' Gus Mortson. Jacques Locas of Canadiens also collected a misconduct penalty that meant an automatic suspension.

Interpersed with all this fussing, feuding and fighting the punch line got in its licks at the Leafs. Lach drove him a rebound of Richard's shot in the first period and then counted again in the second period on a pass from the Rocket. Bobby Carse fired Canadiens' other score in the middle session.

It was goalie Bill Durnan's second shutout of the season, giving him the lead in that department. There have been only three zeros chalked up so far, with the other two belonging to Harry Lumley of Wings.

All the scoring in the Detroit-New York game came in the opening period and rookies accounted for the lot. Jimmy McFadden sent Wings out in front in the third, while Lach took over sole possession of third place with ten points, dropping Leafs to fourth with eight. Rangers have collected six points while Chicago Black Hawks still have to mark up a point in seven games.

Wings used the triumph to pull into the first place slot with Bruins, each with 11 points. Canadiens took over sole possession of third place with ten points, dropping Leafs to fourth with eight. Rangers have collected six points while Chicago Black Hawks still have to mark up a point in seven games.

PLAYOFFS FOR EASTERN CROWN START TODAY

The East's Grey Cupers start playing for keeps today, with Hamilton Wildcats opening the series of lose-and-you-out playoffs leading to the Dominion Football Final at home against Toronto Indians.

The Wildcats are heavy favorites to win this Ontario Rugby Union sudden-death semi-final and make amends for their untimely exit last season. But the Indians looked at the season's record and still found cause for plenty of confidence as they whipped through a two-hour drill in Toronto last night.

The other O.R.F.U. semi-final will be played in Toronto's Maple Leaf Stadium Saturday with Toronto Argonauts and Ottawa Rough Riders will wind up the Big Four schedule in Ottawa Saturday and start their two-game, total-points playoff Nov. 11 at Ottawa, with the winner meeting the O.R.F.U. title Nov. 22 for the Eastern crown.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers already have a 12-point stranglehold on the West's berth in the Dominion final at Toronto Nov. 29. The Bombers, whipped twice by Argonauts in the last two finals, defeated Calgary Stampeders 16-4 in the first of a total-points series with the second game scheduled for Calgary Nov. 11.

A's Withdraw Q.R.F.U. Protest; If Eastward Downs Comets They Meet Locals Here November 15

The Athletics withdrew their protest against Eastward at an executive meeting held in the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium in Montreal last night.

The fireworks that were scheduled to go off never exploded as the A's were satisfied with an off-the-record explanation of the referees' decision on the Eastward game-winning touchdown, so the Eastward victory still stands.

It was decided that, providing Eastward beats Comets in the game at Maisonneuve this Sunday, they will travel to Sherbrooke for a sudden-death playoff Saturday, November 15, with the winner playing Rockland either November 22 or 23.

Sherbrooke withdrew their protest and saved $25, as it is almost impossible to win one, but next Saturday on the rugby field the A's are quite certain that there will be no protest as the score will not be that close.

Aja Vrzanova, 16 Year Old Czech, Is Considered As Biggest Threat To Barbara Ann Scott's Skating Titles

London, Nov. 7.—(P)—A long-legged, 16-year-old Czech girl is regarded by her coach as one of the biggest threats to Barbara Ann Scott's world figure-skating championship.

The girl is Aja Vrzanova, senior champion of Czechoslovakia who finished sixth in last year's European Championships and seventh in the World Championships.

Her coach is Arnold Gerschulder, Swiss-born figure skater and teacher who only yesterday made a few criticisms of Miss Scott, 19-year-old Ottawa who won both the European and the World Titles at Davos Platz, Switzerland, and Stockholm.

Before Miss Vrzanova's name came up, Gerschulder said in an interview that he thought Miss Scott was "very good but certainly not unbeatable."

"She isn't the type of champion. I'd say, who could hold the title five or 10 years," he said.

Gerschulder's brother, Jacob, another famous coach, was even stronger in his comment. He termed

With three men protecting the passer, you sometimes wonder how Notre Dame gets four eligible receivers down field. It's big and mobile linemen who drop back.

Navy wasn't as bad as it looked. The middies were made to look that bad by these extraordinary forwards pouring through.

The Irish have the poise of professionals, even to signing autographs, and no professional dressing room door or stadium gate sees as many of the faithful as does the Notre Dame squad.

But with all Notre Dame's passing, running and poise, it's the big and fast line that makes it all possible.

Even with the passing and running games working hand in hand, football games are still won up front.

Vernon G. Cardy's Entry Cops Hunt Team Event At National Horse Show

New York, Nov. 7.—(P)—Canada has little hope of winning the low-score challenge contest which concludes today in the International Jumping competition at the 64th Annual National Horse Show.

But the showing of the Canadian Team in the three-day opening event of the eight-day show is gratifying to Sqdn. Ldr. Douglas Cleland, of Toronto, team captain, and Lieut. W. R. Ballard of Weston, Ont., who have been participating in the early events.

Lt.-Col. H. A. Phillips and Maj. J. H. Laracque, both of Camp Borden, Ont., are the other members of the Canadian Team which has been jumping together only for two weeks.

The Canadians, all in the early 30's, are making a showing against the polished army teams of Eire, Mexico and the United States.

Riding Rejet, a chestnut gelding which has taken him around the course faultlessly on previous days, Lieut. Ballard placed second in the Stratosphere Trophy contest last night.

Swizzelestick, ridden by Lt.-Col. Charles Symroski of the United States team was guilty of only four faults against Rejet's eight, when the two jumped off after two faultless rides around the eight-obstacle course in Madison Square Garden where 7,000 spectators many of them dressed formally, watched the display of military pomp.

The Mexicans, who had won three of the five previous military events, continued however, to lead the low-score challenge contest by a wide margin.

Another colorful part of the program, the non-military hunt team event, was captured by entries of Vernon G. Cardy of Montreal. His hunters, Jervis Bay, Goldenwood and Fort Riley, entered under the Eglington Hunt Club of Toronto and ridden by Edith and Helen Ferguson and Joseph Goodwin, all of Montreal, were the top team, Cardy's entry finished second in the same event last year.

Another Canadian top-notch in the non-military events was Poppy, a chestnut mare owned by Lieut. Ballard, who placed second in the touchout jumping off event and thus moved into first place in the open jumping division. Earlier the Canadian Military Team placed third in the second event of the low score competition, a difficult pair-jumping show.

Sqdn. Ldr. Cleland rode Alladin and Lieut. Ballard was up on Rejet again. The Mexican Team won the event with a faultless ride with the United States and Eire teams tied for second place.
