'Disgusted with the Old Rut.'

I HAVE been hoping to see better times but find that I have to live on hope. I have been through my books and find that for the past thirty days, I have received my offer to SELL OUT, and will say that any one can see that I am on the broad road to 'Bankruptcy.' I now receive my offer to SELL OUT, and will say that any one meaning 'business,' can make a strike out of me. I will sell my FARM and throw in my FARM, or sell my FARM and throw in my FARM. Call on me and see if I don't mean business. H. C. BAXTER, Derby Line, Vt., March 10, 1878. 31

COMEDY.

They parted, with clasped hands. And kisses, and burning tears. They met, in a foreign land. After some twenty years:

Met as acquaintances meet, Smilingly, tranquilly— Not even a little less.

Of the heart, upon either side! They chatted of this and that. The notings that make up life: She in a Gainsborough hat. And he in black for his wife.

Ah, what a comely this is! Neither was hurt, it appears; She had forgotten her tears.

MORNING AND EVE, BY THE SEA.

At dawn the fleet stretched miles away, On ocean plains asleep— Trim vessels waiting for the day To move across the deep.

So still the sails, they seemed to be White lilies growing in the sea. When evening touched the cape's low rim, And dark fell on the waves, We saw the ghosts of buried ships, Gone down in one brief hour's eclipse.

HOW SNOOKS GOT OUT OF IT.

(By the Author of "Phyllis," "Molly Bawn," Etc.)

"If you will take my advice," Mr. Wilding, making a last noble but futile effort to balance the ivory paper-knife on the tip of his first finger, "you won't go to the Brownings' ball."

"And why not?" asked his companion irritably.

"Well, I really wouldn't you know," said Mr. Wilding, giving up his struggle with the impossible, and laying the refractory paper-knife upon the table.

"For a variety of reasons. Girls play the very mischief with you, and you know what trouble it gave me to get you out of your last scrape. There are four Brownings girls, aren't there? And they are all pretty?"

"I don't see what that's got to do with it," said Snooks sulkily. "I can't marry a girl in a multitude. I can't marry 'em all, can I?"

"Happily, no! Though, if the laws of your land did not forbid it, I am inclined to think you might try to accomplish even that. Still, be advised, Snooks, and be conspicuous by your absence at the Brownings' 'small and early.' Papa Browning when in company is not nice, and you know you are decidedly queer with Miss Katie."

"No, I am not," said Snooks with decision, "not a bit of it. Though I at all she is a handsome girl, and has lovely eyes. Hasn't she, now?"

"I don't know. As a rule I never look into a woman's eyes. I consider a woman's eyes as 'betwixt' said Wilding earnestly, telling his lie without a blush. "Never mind her eyes. If, warningly, 'you must go to this ball, at least try to forget that she has any eyes at all. If you don't, you will propose to her, to a certainty.'"

"One would think I was a raw school-boy," said young Snooks wrathfully. "You think I can't look at a woman without committing myself? Do I look like a fool?"

"Whatever Mr. Wilding thought at that moment, he kept it to himself. Before he spoke next, he and his conscience had agreed to dissemble.

"My dear fellow, do not let us even hint at such a thing," said Snooks, "I only meant you were slightly—very slightly—susceptible, and that Miss Katie has a certain amount of pleasing power, and that I positively would give up this ball if I—"

"Are you going?" broke in Snooks impatiently.

"Well, yes, I daresay I shall look in about twelve."

"Then I shall look in with you," said Snooks defiantly.

"Fact is, the fellow wants to sponger himself, and don't see the force of being cut out," said he to himself complacently, as he ran down the steps of Wilding's stairs.

Beyond all question the Brownings' ball was a decided success. The rooms were filled to overflowing, the staircases were choked, the heat was intolerable. Sir Thomas and Lady Higgins had actually put in an appearance after all, and the supper, if unentable, was, I assure you, very expensive. No pains or money had been spared; everything was what the mistress of the house called "rag regal"; and all the Miss Brownings looked as charming as any one could desire.

There were four of them. There was Katie, the second daughter—Snooks' friend, and the possessor of the lovely eyes. And they were lovely—large, and dark, and true, and tender, like the North, according to the Laureate; "black as sloes," said her fond if slightly oppressive mother, and of the languid melting order.

Then there was Hetty, the eldest girl, who, if her eyes were so dark as midnight, had at least the dearest little nose in the world. A pure Greek feature, perfect in every respect, ignorant of solids in the head, that made one long to tell her (only she would have blushed, they were all nicely brought up) about Dudu, and her Phidias appendage.

Then came George—George the Third, "as she was playfully termed in the bosom of her family—who, if she had not long ago been married, would have certainly prettier mother than either. A sweet little kissable roselid of a mouth, that pouted and laughed alternately, and did considerable execution.

And finally, there was Lilly. A tall pale girl, with blue eyes, a finely cut chin, and a good deal of determination all round.

Katie's eyes were larger, darker, and (when she looked at Snooks and thought of his thousands) more melting than ever that night. Her dress, if slightly bizarre, was intensely becoming. Snooks, for the first half hour kept himself bravely aloof from her fascinations, declined to notice her revealing glances and languishing cat-lauds, and for reward was wretched. Finally, being driven into a corner during a fatal set of Lancers, he met her eyes, saw, and was conquered. She would dance the next with him? Yes (coltily). And the next? Yes (more gently). And the night—he can see she is disgusted for it? Yes (this time quite warmly).

An hour later the deed was done. Some capital champagne, a dark avenue I believe there were some Chinese lanterns there originally, but a kind little hand slipped into his, did the work; and Miss Kate had promised busily, but with unmistakable willingness, to be the future Mrs. Snooks. Whether it was Snooks or the property pertaining to Snooks she most affected, deponent sayeth not.

When, however, her betrothed found what he had done, and remembered his former words, and all the awfulness of paternal wrath, his heart failed him. He went, as he usually did when in a sorry case, in search of Wilding; and having discovered him, took him into a side room, and shutting the door, confronted him with a rather pale face.

"The eyes were too many for you, eh?" said Mr. Wilding calmly, after a deliberate examination of the disturbed face before him. "I told you how it would be."

"That's the sort of thing any fellow might say," returned Snooks pathetically. "I didn't think you would be so aggravating. And just when I was so agitated down on my luck. Yes; I've been and gone and done it."

"Mother will be pleased," quoted his friend and laid adviser with a shrug. "So, by the bye, will be your father. They both regard nothing so highly as birth. I suppose Miss Browning can lay claim to some decent breeding?"

"The old chap is a corn-chandler, you know that; at least he used to be," said Snooks with a groan.

"Oh, indeed! And a very charming business, too, I have no doubt. Leads up to quite a train of ideas. Corn, wheat, staff of life, quaint old mill, and romantic bridge in the distance; miller sitting on it. I wonder, 'dremilly,' if Browning ever wore a white hat? And if so—why? Don't all speak at once. Well, well, she is a very pretty girl. Such eyes, you know! I really congratulate you, my dear fellow."

"Wilding," desperately, "can't you do something?—I—I don't know how it happened. It was the champagne, I suppose, and of course you know she is pretty; but I don't want to marry any one, and I know the governor wouldn't hear of it."

"He will have to hear of it now, won't he?" asked Wilding unfeelingly.

"He would go out of his mind if such a thing was even hinted to him," declared Snooks wildly. "Try to help me out of it, Wilding, can't you?"

"I don't see what there is to do, except marry her. I only hope Lady Snooks and Miss Corn-chandler will get on. And you should think of her beauty, you know; doubtless it will console you when Sir Peter cuts you off with the customary shilling."

"I suppose I had better cut my throat and put an end to it," said poor Snooks dismally, and then—overcome, no doubt, by the melancholy of this suggestion—he breaks down and gives way to tears.

"I say, don't do that, you know," exclaimed Wilding indignantly. "Weeping all over the place won't improve matters, and will only make you look a worse fool than nature intended, when you go out of the room. If you have put your foot in it, at least try to keep up this hideous boohooing I'll leave the room, and you, too, to your fate. It's downright indecent. They will hear you in the next house if you don't moderate your grief."

As the nearest house was a quarter of a mile off, this was severe.

"I shouldn't care if they heard me in the next town," said Snooks, who was quite too far gone for shame.

"There is just one chance for you, and only one," said Wilding slowly. "I have an idea, and you must either follow it, or—go to the altar."

"I'll follow anything," eagerly—"What is it?"

"You have proposed to Miss Katie," solemnly. "Now go, and propose to the other three!"

As Wilding gave vent to his idea he turned abruptly on his heel and left the room.

"I'll do it," said Snooks valiantly, drying his eyes and giving his breast a tragic tap, "whatever comes of it."

Going into the hall, he saw Hetty standing near an entrance; a little way beyond her was Katie, conversing with a tall and lanky youth. Not daring to glance in the direction of the latter, who plainly expected him to come straight to her on the wings of love, he turned and asked Hetty to dance.

They danced, and then (it was a custom with the ball-goers in that mild, suburban neighborhood) he drew her out under the gleaming stars and up the dark avenue that a few minutes since was the scene of her sister's lappins.

There he proposed in due form, and was again accepted. Hetty's conduct, indeed, was perhaps a degree more pronounced than Katie's, because she laid her head upon his shoulder, and he felt he was by all the laws of sentiment bound to kiss her. Her nose looked lovely in the pale moonlight; so I daresay he did not find the fulfilling of this law difficult.

After that he had some more, a good deal more, champagne; and then he proposed to Miss George, who also consented to be his. There no more to be said, but one other step to be taken. He crossed the room, and asked the youngest Miss Browning to dance. He was getting rather mixed by this time, and was on the very point of asking her to marry him instead, so customary had the question grown to him now. Miss Lilly, however, declined to dance, on the plea that she was tired, and could exert herself no more that night. With questionable taste he pressed the matter, and begged her to give him one, just one. At this she told him frankly she did not admire his style of dancing which of course ended the conversation. So he asked her to come for a stroll instead; and having arrived at the momentous spot, delivered himself of the orate speech that had already done duty three times that night. I forget what it was, but I know it wound up with the declaration that he adored her and wanted her to marry him.

"It's extremely good of you, I'm sure," said the youngest Miss Browning calmly. "But, unavail as I fear it must sound, I don't want to marry you."

"Don't you, by Jove!" said Snooks lastly. "Well, that's awfully kind—No, no!" pulling himself up with a start; "I don't mean that, you know. I really believe in your work through sheer gratitude. You have made me miserable forever; you've broken my heart."

"Dear me, how shocking!" said Miss Lily frivolously. "Let us hope time will mend it. I'm not very sure you did not speak the truth at first. I really believe in your work through sheer gratitude. You have made me miserable forever; you've broken my heart."

Hatley.

On the night of the 25th inst. Mr. Wright Hovey—residing about a mile north of Massachusetts Village had a buggy and harness stolen from his carriage shed adjoining his dwelling house. Both wagon and harness were considerably worn, and they had nothing about them which would attract the attention of a casual observer, but yet easily identified by the thills not being mates, by the springs not being on the side of the seat being broken out, and by the left side of the body being the lowest, and by other marks. No trace of the thief has yet been positively found. This wagon appeared to have gone North.

The provender mill of Elliott & Young at Massachusetts is in running order, but water is too low to admit of its doing much until the stream rises, which, from present appearances will not be long.

S. W. Pierce has moved his butter-fat manufactory to Clifton, where water and timber are more plentiful.

Ayer's Flat.

L. A. Stearns has been quite active for a few days past in making preparations for putting in a steam saw-mill about one mile south of this place on the land formerly known as the Colby farm. The mill is to be constructed by Mr. Freggan of Beebe Plain.

Gardner Morse, on the 24th inst., started to come to this place. His horse took fright and became unmanageable, upset the carriage and threw him violently to the ground, bruising him badly. His physician thinks no bones were broken and hopes are entertained of a speedy recovery.

The crops being nearly all harvested, are quite satisfactory to the farmer except potatoes which are rather light. On Brown's Hill and vicinity some pieces of grain were so injured by the hail in July they hardly pay for harvesting, though the disaster was quite limited.

John Whipple, jr., has raised this season over one hundred bushels cars of corn on land manured in the hill from a compost heap that was principally muck.

Georgetownville.

We were very sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. Mark Taylor, (Esther I. Blake) of East Bolton who was buried last Saturday the 25th. Mrs. Taylor was a lady of a very amiable disposition and was loved by all who knew her. She was one of our first school teachers and no school that we have ever attended since has ever equaled the one taught by her. Though many years have passed and gone, though the teacher and many of our schoolmates have passed over the river, yet the memory of her gentle and loving ways still linger as a bright spot on life's page.

Quite a number of the residents of this village and vicinity took advantage of the cheap trip and visited the Dominion Exhibition at Montreal, and all seemed well pleased, as the show was a fine one. The Manitoba building with its wealth of productions of that new and fertile country excited a great deal of attention as did also the Northern Pacific Railway Co's. Exhibition car which was filled with the products of the "Golden North West," "Minnesota and Dakota," "Montana and Washington." It was an agricultural fair on wheels and was indeed quite a novelty. We noticed among its exhibits of wheat some of the Lost Nation which was a bearded grain with short heads while the variety grown here and known as the Lost Nation is a bald grain with a long head, will some one enlighten us in regard to this difference.

A fine soaking rain this A. M. (Monday) but the springs and streams are still as low as ever, the grass only getting the benefit of it.

Sweetsburg.

The Court of Queen's Bench which opened on Tuesday, the 14th inst. was in session during the remainder of the week, closing on Saturday. Hon. Justice Johnson presiding, and G. C. W. Buchanan Crown Prosecutor, assisted by Col. Amysrauld who addressed the jury in French. The Grand Jury found true bills against the following persons: The Queen vs. Joseph Nadeau and George Papineau, assault: the Queen vs. Joseph Little and Francis Willard, stealing money. These prisoners were young boys and being arraigned, pleaded guilty and were sentenced by the judge; they will be sent to the Reformatory school for a term which I have not learned. The Queen vs. L. D. Bowker and Moses Cowey, no bill. The day that Bowker was acquitted, some two hours afterward, Cowey put in an appearance after learning that no bill was found against him. The Grand Jury found a true bill against Eugene A. Miltemore for passing a false invoice. The case of the Queen vs. Samuel LaPalme for using again and reissuing law stamps: This case was one laid over from last term and consumed two days of the court. The jury could not agree and were locked up over night while considering the case, and at last brought in a verdict of not guilty.

The instant death of Mr. Thomas Scott, aged 61 years, by the cars running over him and covering his body in train, last week Wednesday, near the station at Bromo Corner, is most lamentable. Mr. Scott was on the track near the switch leveling up the rails and tamping dirt under the ties. The train was backing up on the switch and he did not notice it as he was working with his back toward the cars and was not seen by any of the train hands, when the rear car ran full against him, throwing him down on the rail where he lay crushed to death while the whole train passed over his body till severed in twain, in which condition he was found after the train stopped on the switch near the mangled corpse.

Fitch Bay.

The late rains are of great benefit in this section as water in all cuses was exceedingly low.

The mills here will soon be completed. The corn and provender runs will start this week Thursday, and the wheat and buckwheat runs in about four days later.

TRIPLETS.—The wife of Mr. Robert Thowler, of Rockland Quarry, presented her husband with three children at a birth, on Friday. All are doing well.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—Mr. William Elwin, of this Village, was the victim of a serious accident on Wednesday. It appears he was hauling some sticks of timber on Craig's Road, on a large double wagon, which was being driven by another party. Mr. Elwin got up and attempted to walk along one of the sticks, when the jolting of the team caused him to fall over on the wheel—breaking his jaw bone and otherwise injuring him. He was at once placed under medical treatment, and it is we are glad to say, now doing well.—Richmond Guardian.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—A melancholy accident, occurred at the G. R. depot here, to a young man named Demers, a resident of Windsor, on Wednesday. He was crossing the track from one of the hotels opposite the depot, and tripped on the rails, falling in front of the pilot engine then coming on. The engine passed over him cutting off one of his legs at the thigh and crushing the other, as well as both his arms, besides breaking his ribs. When taken up and the doctor had been sent for, it was thought that he was too badly cut up for medical treatment to be of any avail. He is under treatment, but is not likely to recover.—Id.

A VISIT TO CAPLETON MINE.—The Hon. J. A. Chapleau, accompanied by Mr. Dion, of Granville, France, arrived at Sherbrooke on Friday and proceeded to Lennoxville, where they were joined by Dr. T. Storey Hunt, who conducted them through the works of the Oxford Nickel and Copper Company at Capleton. They were met by R. G. Leckie, Managing Director, and R. M. Thompson, Secretary-Treasurer. The Premier and Mr. Dion, accompanied by Mr. Leckie, descended to the bottom of the mine, a depth of over seven hundred feet. The vein showed a width of sixty feet, and over a hundred tons a day are now being raised. The average of the ore during the last month was six and eight-tenths per cent of copper, thirty-five per cent sulphur and three ounces silver per ton. A tunnel is being driven into the mine which will drain it to a depth of over five hundred feet and enable the ore to be delivered direct to the works at Enstis. The new smelting works at Enstis are in full operation, and smelting a hundred tons daily. There is a probability of a French company establishing a sulphate works at Enstis, where acid can be made very cheaply from the sulphurous acid now wasted. Contaick sugar beets yield of this season's growth 1 1/2 per cent of saccharine matter.

Mr. Cotton Fisk, of Abbotford, has eighty-five colonies of bees. The usual yield of this apiary is about a ton of honey a year.

A movement is now on foot in Contaick to induce the village Corporation to take $10,000 stock in the Pioneer Beet Root Sugar Company. It is doubtful whether this effort will succeed.

What will prove a fatal accident, occurred at Irberville, on Monday. Mr. Octave Sears, an extensive hay dealer was riding a wagon which a large hay press was laden. On removing one of the wheels, the prop placed underneath the axle-tree gave way causing the wagon to capsize burying Mr. S. underneath the press. It is supposed he received some severe internal injuries. Dr. Chevalier attends him.

THE BEST REMEDY

FOR Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and other countries testify to its confidence of the public. It is an excellent combination of the medicinal principles of curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Sore Chest, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and unwholesome ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to injure and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and untried medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a valuable preparation, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The fact that it is a good remedy is its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Me and Sam.

Bettie Morris asks me what is good for a bad cold. Well, if the cold is taken in the first stage—say the first evening after you have taken it—creep close up to the stove with a shawl over your shoulders, drink a cup of tea, and take a sweat. Go to bed while warm, the cold will generally break and you will be relieved by the next morning. But if it is settled, a slight cathartic taken at late bedtime, and careful attention to diet will bring a favorable change as soon as anything we know of.

People are so careless about guarding against colds. It is common to see them sitting with their backs up against a window, or as near as they can get; sitting in the draught of an open door or window taking off an extra garment when overheated, or immediately after coming into the house; loosening a collar when too warm, or changing the clothing through the day. This latter should be done only on rising in the morning, when the texture of the clothing varies much. And as to laying off underwear, don't you do it, Bettie, before the fourth of July—that's a sensible girl.

Now my Sam tries my patience terribly, sometimes. He will strip in the spring as soon as he hears the warble of the first frog, unless I watch him. Along in February the winds blew soft one night from the south, and Sam panted like a hippopotamus, and threatened that if the warm snap continued he should dislodge his under shirt. I told him the breeze was treacherous, and that any man who committed so heinous an act would pay for his hilarity, but the very next morning, hanging on the what-not, I found my partner's article of wearing apparel. I scolded and reprimanded, and upbraided. I was vexed because he had taken it off and endangered his precious health, and I was mad at him for putting it on my beautiful what-not, right among all my lovely knickknacks. He said he thought it was as sensible as the little green glass milkmaid, and the Chinese good, and the button off Grant's breeches, and the knob off the bureau that my great-grandmother brought over in the Mayflower. Some men haven't a grain of aspiration in their stolid natures. Now that what-not was my pride; it was loaded down with nice things, and when my inebriate was at its height, that man just sat and laughed, and laughed, and murmured. "Oh, come now, Bettie, let's be friends." Well, a worse cold Samuel never had than the one he took in pay for his temerity. It settled in his nose swelled up as big as a Merino potato, and he begged of me to do something for him. I suggested that he go without eating for three or four meals, but he shook his head and growled out: "Never! I'll have the best the house affords now while I am prostrated, and as soon as demerol. Just bring on your preserves and two or three kinds of jelly, and treat me well, for maybe I'll not be with you very long."

That melted me, for his voice quivered, like, and I cooked good square meals, and he attacked the jellies manfully. He could trim out a glass as speedily as a hungry boy could eat a buckwheat cake. Nothing brings me to terms quicker than "Maybe you won't be troubled with me long." All I could do, couldn't get him to put on his warm underwear again. He invariably said, "When I say a thing I mean it; I don't eat my words." When a man hides behind such a barricade as this sort of talk, he may be set down as very mulish indeed. We mean no insinuations—it is our partner, Samuel, of whom we write. After that he had boils, one of the results of hanging his shirt in playful mood on Bettie's what-not, and partly because he eats more and heartier food than is good for him. We doctored him ourself. We took equal parts of cream of tartar, salts, and pulverized sulphur, mix together, and for a dose, take early in the morning one heaping teaspoonful. Take three mornings, then miss three, then take three, so that they are taken for nine mornings. Then after nine days go through the same again. This cleanses the blood. We make a poultice of light bread and milk with flaxseed or slippery elm bark in it, and a little lump of salutaris; put it on as warm as can be borne and change frequently, letting the boil take its own course and its own time, assisted by this poultice. After it is opened, and relief comes, lay over it a soft rag wrung out of hot water, keeping it moist all the time.

We don't dare suggest a sweat to Sam any more. He don't like to hear about it. He minds the time that he was taking one, holding a coffee-pot spout in his mouth filled with boiling water. He was doubled up and had a quilt thrown all over him, you mind, some of you, when he fell into a doze and the pot tipped over into his lap and scalded his good combination trousers inside and out. O, he pranced like a young hart upon the mountains! Now for a burn say when one hand touches the hot stove, the best and most convenient remedy is either to cover it over with apple butter or soft soap, immediately. No pain will be felt, and no other attention is required unless the burn be severe, and then a second application will be needed. Samuel's cure for any painful cut or sore, especially when cold has settled on it, is to put on a thin slice of fat pork—the older the better. This soothes and comforts amazingly. He said his dead mother—she who came to her death falling from a cherry tree—used to relieve all his stous bruises and sore toes, and snagged flesh wounds, this way.

Samuel and me find a good deal of enjoyment in our wedded life, though sometimes we spat a little, and my pard tries my temper with his obtuseness, still, we find more of sunshine than shadow.

It is the way with all things here—Some days dark and some days drear. All have their ups and all their downs—Some wear crosses, some wear crowns: And all the self-same story tell As Betty and her Sam-u-el.

—Mrs. S. Starkey, in Ohio Farmer.

The Best Farming.—The best farming is that which produces from a man's land the largest net profit with out impairing the soil's capacity to produce. The average farmer tills his acres for profit, and not for the purpose of coming into the possession of abstract truths. Ninety-nine farmers in a hundred will accept the above definition of the best farming; the hundredth farmer, in an experimental way, expects to be of great benefit to his class; makes an assignment for his creditors' benefit, and is useful to his neighbors simply as a warning.

According to the definition given above, the best farmers in the New World are found in New York State. In some regions the farms are hilly, and so stony that the cobbles taken from the soil are plenty enough to fence the land with solid walls; but every knoll and hillside is cultivated for all it is worth, and all the stones are found in the walls that enclose the productive fields. In those regions, fertilizers, except such as are produced on the farm, are to expensive to be largely used. The farmer must manage to get crops without buying fertilizers, or decreasing the producing capacity of his land. These farmers avoid exhaustion of the soil by skillful rotation in the uses to which their fields are put, and that is why they deserve to be called the best farmers in the New World.

The practical farmer usually has profound contempt for what he calls "book farming." He considers the farmer who talks more than he ploughs as little else than an impostor. Thoroughly understanding his own soil, as an instructor understands a pupil who has been for a long time under his tuition, he is apt to carry this feeling too far, and to refuse to hear some truths which a person of scientific education might impart to him, and which would be of considerable benefit.

—Springfield Republican.

ONE CAUSE OF POOR BUTTER.—In giving some directions as to the treatment of milk and cream for churning, Mr. T. D. Curtis, of Utica, N. Y. says: "Half the butter in the country—and I do not know but a larger portion—is spoiled by letting the milk stand too long before skimming, and the product is still further injured by letting the cream stand still longer before churning. Milk should be skimmed, when set in a room kept at a temperature of 60° as it begins to get fairly sour, or just as it begins to thicken on the bottom of the pan. If it stands longer there is a loss of quality without any compensating gain in quantity. The cream should be churned at once. The longer it stands the greater will be the loss of aroma from decomposition and evaporation of the volatile flavoring oils. Only the slightest acidity, if any, should be permitted in the cream before it is churned. Yet it is a common thing for people to let the milk lopper before it is skimmed, and to allow the cream to stand until quite sour before churning. Nothing but bad-flavored and rapidly-decaying butter can be made of such cream. Yet I have seen cream standing with mould on it, and serum filling the cracks of the creamery. It is any wonder that there is so much poor butter in the market?"

The result of last year's operations of the best sugar factory at Portland, Maine, are published. The factory was in constant operation 75 days last winter, closing in January; 9,000 tons of beets were used, of which 8,000 tons were raised in Maine. In some cases 30 tons per acre were raised, but the average was nine tons. Five dollars per ton was paid for the beets at the railroad stations, and six dollars at the factory. The proportion of raw sugar obtained was seven per cent. of the weight of the trimmed and washed beets, and in addition there was three per cent. more of molasses. The sugar sold at prices ranging from six and five-eighths cents to nine and three-eighths cents per pound, and the molasses at twenty cents per gallon. During the latter part of the time the factory was running it used 150 tons of beets per day, the daily expenses being over $500. The sales of sugar, molasses, pulp and lime waste amounted to $111,000. The expenses were $102,000, exclusive of the buildings, machinery and fixtures. Adding ten per cent. for wear of machinery, the total expense exceeded $108,000, leaving less than $3,000. None of the gentlemen superintending the works this year drew salaries, and the state bounty received will be spent in repairs to machinery, etc. The sum paid for beets and freight was $55,321.78; for fitting and storage, $3,682.95, making a total cost of $59,004.73. Almost the whole of this large sum of $59,000 was paid out within four weeks, in sums varying from $5 to $300, to more than 1300 farmers. In every case the money has been permitted to each farmer by a check payable to his order on a Portland bank, by return mail, on receipt of railroad agent's certificate of weight and delivery.—Of 3,000 tons of pulp, the company sold only about 1,000, the farmers hesitating to take it at $2 per ton. Those who did buy it were satisfied that it was profitable feed.

A western yarn says:—A Colorado man who traded liquor to an Indian for a pony, was lynched by his fellow-citizens, and the Indian was burned at the stake by his tribe. The white citizens didn't believe in a man who would pay an Indian for anything he could take by force from an aborigine, and the latter's friends couldn't stand his giving a pony for stuff he might have stolen.

Detroiters are complaining of the poor quality of ice in that city. They say it is warm-eaten, mildewed, and much of it warmed over from year before last, and a ten-cent chunk won't last a family of six over two days. Why don't they lynch the ice dealers! Mrs. Prudence Glover takes pride in her birthplace, Maryland, and celebrated her centennial recently.

SUBSTITUTES!

The public are cautioned against a custom which is growing quite common of late among a certain class of medicine dealers, and which is this: When asked for a bottle of Pain-Killer, they suddenly discover that they are "sold out," but have another article just as good, if not better, which they supply at the same price. The object of this deception is transparent. These substitutes are made up to sell on the great reputation of the Pain-Killer and being compounded of the vilest and cheapest drugs, are bought by the dealer at about half what he pays for the genuine Pain-Killer, which enables him therefore to realize a few cents more profit per bottle upon the imitation article than he can on the genuine.

For CHOLERA MORBUS, CRAMPS, AND ALL SUMMER OR BOWEL COMPLAINTS PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER IS UNRIVALLED. IT CURES ALMOST INSTANTLY.

The Pain-Killer is put up in 2oz. and 5oz. bottles, retailing at 25 and 50 cents respectively—large bottles are therefore cheapest. SOLD BY ALL MEDICINE DEALERS.

WISWELL'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY.

ONE OF THE OLDEST AND MOST RELIABLE REMEDIES IN THE WORLD FOR THE CURE OF Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Whooping Cough, Asthma, and every affection of the Throat, Lungs, and Chest, including CONSUMPTION.

A WELL-KNOWN PHYSICIAN WRITES: "It does not dry up a cough, and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but loosens it, cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of complaint." DO NOT BE DECEIVED BY articles bearing a similar name. Be sure you get DR. WISWELL'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, with the signature of "I. WISWELL" on the wrapper. 50 Cents and $1.00 a Bottle. Prepared by SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, Boston, Mass. Sold by druggists and dealers generally.

PERUVIAN SYRUP.

A Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. When the blood does not contain the usual quantity of Iron, the deficiency can be supplied by the use of the PERUVIAN SYRUP. It cures a "thousand ills" simply by TONING UP the system, and Vitalizing the system. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon. This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Boils, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhea, Nervous Affections, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility, or a low state of the system.

CAUTION.—Be sure you get the "PERUVIAN SYRUP" Sold by druggists generally. Pamphlets sent free to any address by SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, Proprietors, 86 Harrison Street, Boston, Mass.
