Poetry.

The Last Look.

Do not fasten the lid of the coffin yet,
Let me nave a long look at the face of my pet;
Please all quit the chamber and pull-to the door,
And leave me alone with my darling once more.

Is this little Ethel, so cold and so still?
Beat! beat! breaking heart, against God's mystic will;
Remember, Oh, Christ! Thou did'st dread Thine own cup,
And while I drink mine, let Thine arm bear me up.

But the moments are fleeting, I must stamp on my brain
Each dear little feature; for never again
Can I touch her; and God measures how much
Affection a mother conveys by her touch.

O! dear little head! Oh! dear little hair!
So silken, so golden, so soft and so fair.
Will I never more smooth it? Oh! help me, my God,
To bear this worst stroke of the chastening rod.

The bright little eyes that used to feign sleep,
Or sparkle so merrily, playing at peep.
Closed forever, and yet seeming closed with a sigh
As if for our sake she regretted to die.

And that dear little mouth, so warm and so soft,
Always willing to kiss you, no matter how oft,
Cold and rigid, without the least tremor of breath;
How could you claim Ethel, Oh! pitiless Death?

Her hands—no, it will kill me to think how they wore
Through my daily existence, a tissue of love;
Each finger a print upon memory's page,
That will brighten, thank God, and not fade with my age.

Oh! Father! have mercy, and give me Thy grace
To see through this frowning, the smile on Thy face,
To feel that this sorrow is sent for the best,
And to learn from my darling a lesson of rest.

STRANGE DISAPPEARANCE.

ANNA KATHARINE GREEN.

CHAPTER VI.

A BIT OF CALICO.

It was about this time I took up my residence in a short lodging-house that occupied the opposite corner to that of Mr. Blake. My room, as I took pains to have it, overlooked the avenue, and from its windows I could easily watch the comings and goings of the gentleman whose movements were daily becoming of more interest to me. For set it down to caprice—and men are often as capricious as women—or account for it as you will, his restlessness at this period was fairly remarkable. Not a day that he did not spend his time in walking the streets, and that not in his usual aimless, gentlemanly fashion, but eagerly and with an intent gaze that roamed here and there, like a bird seeking its prey. It would often be as late as five o'clock before he came in, and if, as now frequently happened, he did not have company to dinner, he was even known to start out again after seven o'clock and go over the same ground as in the morning, looking with strained gaze, that vainly endeavored to appear unconcerned, into the faces of the women that he passed. I not unfrequently followed him at these times as much for my own amusement as from any hope I had of coming upon anything that should aid me in the work before me. But when he suddenly changed his route of travel from a promenade in the fashionable thoroughfares of Broadway and Fourteenth street to a walk through Chatham Square and the dark, narrow streets of the East side, I began to scent whom the prey might be he was seeking, and putting every other consideration aside, regularly set myself to dog his steps, as only I, with my innumerable disguises, knew how to do. For three separate days I kept at his heels wherever he went, each day growing more and more astonished if not to say hopeful, as I found myself treading the narrowest and most disrespectable streets of the city; halting at the shops of pawnbrokers; peering into the bar-room of liquor shops; mixing with the crowd that infest the corner groceries at nightfall, and even sling with hand on the trigger of the pistol I carried in my pocket, up dark alleys where every door that swung noiselessly to and fro as we passed, shut upon haunts of such villany as only is known to us of the police, or to those good souls that for the sake of One whose example they follow, lay aride their fears and sensitiveness to carry light into the dim pits of this wretched world. At first I thought Mr. Blake might have some such reason for the peculiar course he took. But his indifference to all crowds where only men were collected, his silence where a word would have been well received, convinced me it was a woman he was seeking and that with an intentness that blinded him to the commonest needs of the hour. I even saw him once in his hurry and abstraction, step across the body of a child who had fallen face downwards on the stone, and that with an expression showing he was utterly unconscious of anything but an obstacle in his path. The strangest part of it all was that he seemed to have no fear. To be sure he took pains to leave his watch at home; but with such a figure and carriage as he possessed, the absence of jewellery could never deceive the eye for a moment as to the fact of his being a man of wealth, and those he went among would do anything for money. Perhaps, like me, he carried a pistol. At all events he shunned no spot where either lay hid or deviltry reigned, his proud stern head bending to enter the lowest doors without a tremble of the haughty lips that remained compressed as by an iron force; except when some poor forlorn creature with flaunting head-gear, and tremulous hands, attracted by his bearing would hastily brush against him, when he would turn and look, perhaps speak, though what he said I always failed to catch; after which he would hurry on as if possessed by seven devils. The evenings of these three days were notable also. Two of them he spent in the manner I have described; the third he went to the Windsor House—where the Countess De Mirac had taken rooms—going up to the ladies' entrance and actually ringing the bell, only to start back and walk up and down on the opposite side of the way, with his hands behind his back, and his head bent, evidently deliberating as to whether he should or should not carry out his original intention of entering. The arrival of a carriage with the stately subject of his deliberations who from her elaborate costume had seemingly been to some kettle-drum or private reception, speedily put an end to his doubts. As the door opened to admit her, I saw him cast one look at her heavily draped person, with its snowy opera cloak drawn tightly over the sweeping folds of her maize colored silk, and shrink back with what sounded like a sigh of anger or distrust, and without waiting for the closing of the door upon her, turned towards home with a step that hesitated no longer.

The fourth day, to my infinite chagrin, I was sick and could not go with him. All I could do was to wrap myself in blankets and sit in my window, from which I had the satisfaction of viewing him start as I supposed upon his usual course. The rest of the day was employed in a long, dull, waiting for his return, only relieved by casual glimpses of Mrs. Daniel's troubled face as she appeared at one window or another of the old-fashioned mansion before me. She seemed, too, to be unusually restless, opening the windows and looking out with forlorn cranings of her neck as if she too were watching for her master. Indeed, I have no doubt from what I afterwards learned, that she was in a state of constant suspense during these days. Her frequent appearance at the station house, where she in vain sought for some news of the girl in whose face she was so absorbed, confirmed this. Only the day before I gave myself up to my unreserved espionage of Mr. Blake, she had had an interview with Mr. Gryce in which she had let fall her apprehensions that the girl was dead, and asked whether if that were the case, the police would likely come into a knowledge of the fact. Upon being assured that if she had not been privately made away with, there was every chance in their favour, she had grown a little calmer, but before going away had so far forgotten herself as to intimate if some result was not reached before another fortnight had elapsed she should take the matter into her own hands and—she did not say what she would do, but her looks were of a very menacing character. It was no wonder, then that her countenance bore marks of the keenest anxiety as she trod the halls of that dim old mansion, with its dusky corners rich with bronzes and the glimmering shine of ancient brocades, breathing suggestions of loss and wrong; or bent her wrinkled forehead to gaze from the window for the coming of one whose footsteps were ever delayed. She happened to be looking out, when after a longer stroll than usual the master of the house returned. As he made his appearance at the corner, I haw her hurriedly withdraw her head and hide herself behind the curtain, from which position she watched him with tired steps and somewhat dejected mien, he passed up the steps and entered the house. Not till the door closed upon him, did she venture to issue forth and with a hurried movement shut the blinds and disappear. This anxiety on her part redoubled mine, and thankful enough was I when on the next day I found myself well enough to renew my operations. To ferret out this mystery, if mystery it was—I still found myself forced to admit the possibility of there being none—had now become the one ambition of my life; and all because it was not only an unusually blind one, but of a nature that involved danger to my position as detective, I entered upon it with a zest rare even to me who love my work and all it involves with an undivided passion.

To equip myself, then, in a fresh disguise and to join Mr. Blake shortly after he had left his own corner, was anything but a hardship to me that bright winter morning, though I know from past experience, a long and wearisome walk was before me with nothing in all probability at the end but reiterated disappointment. But for once the fates had willed it otherwise. Whether Mr. Blake, discouraged at the failure of his own attempts, whatever they were, felt less heart to prosecute them than usual I cannot say. but we had scarcely entered upon the lower end of the Bowery, before he suddenly turned with a look of disgust, and gazing hurriedly about him, hailed a Madison Avenue car that was rapidly approaching. I was at that moment on the other side of the way, but I hurried forward too, and signalled the same car. But just as I was on the point of entering it I perceived Mr. Blake step hastily back and with his eyes upon a girl that was hurrying past him with a basket on her arm, regain the sidewalk with a swiftness that argued his desire to stop her. Of course I let the car pass me, though I did not dare approah him too closely after my late conspicuous attempt to enter it with him. But from my stand on the opposite curbstone I saw him draw aside the girl, who from her garments might have been the daughter or wife of any one of the shiftless, drinking wretches lounging about on the four corners within my view, and after talking earnestly with her for a few moments, saunter at her side down Broome Street, still talking. Reckless at this sight of the consequences which might follow his detection of the part I was playing, I hastened after them, when I was suddenly disconcerted by observing him hurriedly separate from the girl and turn towards me with intention as it were to regain the corner he had left. Weighing in an instant the probable good to be obtained by following either party, I determined to leave Mr. Blake for one day to himself, and turn my attention to the girl he had addressed, especially as she was tall and thin and bore herself with something thing like grace.

Barely bestowing a glance upon him, then, as he passed, in a vain attempt to read the sombre expression of his inscrutable face grown five years older in the last five days, I shuffled after the girl flitting before me down Brome Street. As I did so, I noticed her dress to its minutest details, somewhat surprised to find how ragged and uncouth it was. That Mr. Blake should stop a girl wherever seen, clad in a black alpaca frock, a striped shawl and a Bowery hat trimmed with feathers, I could easily understand, but that this creature with her faded calico dress and dingy cape thrown carelessly over her head, and ragged basket, should arrest his attention, was a riddle to me. I hastened forward with intent to catch a glimpse of her countenance if possible; but she seemed to have acquired wings to her feet since her interview with Mr. Blake. Darting into a crowd of hooting urchins that were rushing from Centre Street after a broken waggon and runaway horse, she sped from my sight with such rapidity, I soon saw that my only hope of overtaking her lay in running. I accordingly quickened my step when those same wooting youngsters getting in the way of my feet, I tripped up and—well, I own I retired from that field baffled. Not entirely so, however. Just as I was going down, I caught sight of the girl tearing away from a box of garbage on the curb-stone; and when order having been restored, by which lofty statement I mean to say when your humble servant had regained his equilibrium, I awoke to the fact that she had effectually disappeared. I hurried to that box and succeeding in finding hanging to it a bit of rag easily recognized as a piece of the old calico frock of nameless color which I had been following a moment before. Regarding it as the sole spoils of a very unsatisfactory day's work, I put it carefully away in my pocket book, where it lay till—But with all my zeal for compression, I must not anticipate.

When I came home that afternoon I found myself unexpectedly involved in a matter that for the remainder of the day at least, prevented me from further attending to the affair I had in hand. The next morning Mr. Blake did not start out as usual, and at noon I received intimation from Fanny that he was preparing to take a journey. Where, she could not inform me, nor when, though she thought it probable he would take an early train. Mrs. Daniels was feeling dreadfully, she informed me; and the house was like a grave. Greatly excited at this unexpected move on Mr. Blake's part, I went home and packed my valise with something of the spirit of her who once said, under somewhat different circumstances I allow, "Whither thou goest I will go."

The truth was, I had travelled so far and learned so little, that my professional pride was piqued. That expression of Mr. Gryce still rankled, and nothing could my injured spirit now but success. Accordingly when Mr. Blake stepped up to the ticket office of the Hudson River Railroad next morning, to buy a ticket for Putney, a small town in the northern part of Vermont, he found beside him a spruce young drummer, or what certainly appeared such, who by some strange coincidence, wanted a ticket for the same place. The fact did not seem in the least to surprise him, nor did he cast me a look beyond the ordinary glance of one stranger at another. Indeed Mr. Blake had no appearance of being a suspicious man, nor did I think at this time, he had the remotest idea that he was either watched or followed; an ignorance of the truth which I took care to preserve by taking my seat in a different car from him and not showing myself again during the whole ride from New York to Putney.

CHAPTER VII.

THE HOUSE AT THE GRANBY CROSS ROADS.

Why Mr. Blake should take a journey at all at this time, and why of all places in the world he should choose such an insignificant town as Putney for his destination, was of course the mystery upon which I brooded during the entire distance. But when somewhere near five in the afternoon I stepped from the car on to the platform at Putney Station only to hear Mr. Blake make some inquiries in regard to a certain stage running between that town and a still smaller village further east, I own I was not only surprised but well-nigh nonplussed. Especially as he seemed greatly disappointed to hear that it only ran once a day, and then for an earlier train in the morning.

"You will have to wait till tomorrow I fear," said the ticket agent, "unless the landlord of the hotel down yonder, can harness you up a team. There is a funeral out west to-day and—"

I did not wait to hear more but hurried down to the hotel he had pointed out, and hunting up the landlord inquired if for love or money he could get me any sort of a conveyance for Melville that afternoon. He assured me it would be impossible, the livery stable as well as his own being entirely empty.

"Such a thing don't happen here once in five years," said he to me. "But the old codger who if dead, though a queer dick was a noted parsonage in these parts, and not a man, woman, or child, who could find a horse, mule or donkey, but what availed himself of the privilege. Even the doctor's spavined mare was pressed into service, though she halts on one leg and stops to get her breath half a dozen times in going up one short hill. You will have to wait for the stage, sir."

"But I am in a hurry," said I as I saw Mr. Blake enter. "I have business in Melville to-night, and I would pay anything in reason to get there."

But the landlord only shook his head; and drawing back with the air of an abused man, I took up my stand in the doorway where I could hear the same colloquy entered into with Mr. Blake, with the same unsatisfactory termination. He did not take it quite as calmly as I did, though he was of too reserved a nature to display much emotion over anything. The prospect of a long, tedious evening spent in a country hotel seemed almost unendurable to him, but he finally succombed to the force of circumstances, as indeed he seemed obliged to do, and partaking of such refreshment as the rather poorly furnished hotel afforded, retired without ceremony to his room, from which he did not emerge again till next morning. In all this he had somehow managed not to give his name; and by means of some inquiries I succeeded in making that evening, I found his person was unknown in the town.

By a little management I secured the next room to his, by which arrangement I succeeded in passing a sleepless night, Mr. Blake spending most of the wee sma' hours in pacing the floor of his room, with an unremitting regularity that had anything but a soothing effect upon my nerves. Early the next morning we took the stage, he sitting on the back seat, and I in front with the driver. There were other passengers, but I noticed he never spoke to any of them, nor through all the long drive did he once look up from the corner where he had ensconced himself. It was twelve o'clock when we reached the end of the route, a small town of somewhat less than the usual pretensions of mountain villages; so insignificant indeed, that I found it more and more difficult to imagine what the wealthy ex-Congressman could find in such a spot as this, to make amends for a journey of such length and discomfort; when to my increasing wonder I heard him give orders for a horse to be saddled and brought round to the inn door directly after dinner. This was a move I had not expected and it threw me a little aback, for although I had thus far managed to hold myself so aloof from Mr. Blake, even while keeping him under my eye, that no suspicion of my interest in his movements had as yet been awakened, how could I thus for the third time follow his order with one precisely similar, without attracting an attention that would be fatal to my plans. Yet to let him ride off alone now, would be to drop the trail at the very moment the scent became of importance.

The landlord, a bursting, wiry little man all nervousness and questions, unwittingly helped me at this crisis.

"Are you going on to Perry, sir?" inquired he of that gentleman. "I have been expecting a man along these three days bound for Perry."

"I am that man," I broke in, stepping forward with some appearance of asperity "and I hope you wan't keep me waiting. A horse as soon as dinner is over, do you hear? I am two days late now, and won't stand any nonsense."

And to escape the questions sure to follow, I strode into the dining-room with a half-fierce, half-sullen countenance, that effectually precluded all advances. During the meal I saw Mr. Blake's eye roam more than once towards my face; but I did not return his gaze, or notice him in any way; hurrying through my dinner, and mounting ing the first horse brought around, as if time were my only consideration. But once on the road I took the first opportunity to draw rein and wait, suddenly remembering that I had not heard Mr. Blake give any intimation of the direction he intended taking. A few minutes revealed to me his elegant form well mounted and showing to perfection in his closely buttoned coat, slowly approaching up the road. Taking advantage of a rise in the ground, I lingered till he was almost upon me, when I cantered quickly on, fearing to arouse his apprehensions if I allowed him to pass me on a road so solitary as that which now stretched out before us; a move provocative of much embarrassment to me, as I dared not turn my head for the same reason, anxious as I was to keep him in sight.

The roads dividing before me, at length gave me my first opportunity to pause and look back. He was some fifteen paces behind. Waiting till he came up, I bowed with the surly courtesy I thought in keeping with the character I had assumed, and asked if he knew which road led towards Perry, saying I had come off in such haste I had forgotten to inquire my way. He returned my bow, pointed towards the left hand road and saying, 'I know this does not,' calmly took it.

Now there was a dillema. If in the face of this curt responce I proceeded to follow him, my hand was revealed at once; yet the circumstances would admit of no other course. I determined to compromise matters by pretending to take the right hand road till he was out of sight, when I would return and follow him swiftly upon the left. Accordingly I reined my horse to the right, and for some fifteen minutes galloped slowly away towards the north; but another fifteen saw me faceing the west, and riding with a force and fury which I had not thought the old mare they had given me capable, till I put her to the test. It was not long before I saw my fine gentleman trotting in front of me up a long but gentle slope that rose in the distance; and slackening my own rein, I withdrew into the forest at the side of the road, till he had passed its summit and disappeared, when I again galloped forward.

And thus we went for an hour, over the most uneven country I ever traversed, he always kept one hill ahead; when suddenly, by what instinct I cannot determine, I felt myself approaching the end, and hastening to the top of the ascent upon which I was then laboring, looked down in to the shallow valley spread out before me.

What a sight met my eyes if I had been intent on anything less practical than the movements of the solitary horseman below. Hills on hills piled above a verdant basin in whose depths nestled a scanty collection of houses, in number so small that they could be told upon the fingers of the right hand, but which nowwithstanding lent an indescribable aspect of comfort to this remote region of hill and forest.

But the vision of Mr. Blake pausing half way down the slope before me, examining, yes examining a pistol which he held in his hand, soon put an end to all ideas of romance. Somewhat alarmed I reined back; but his action had evidently no connection with me, for he did not once glance behind him, but kept his eye on the road which I now observed took a short turn towards a house of so weird and ominous an appearance that I scarcely marvelled at his precaution.

Diffidence.

"I'm afther axin', Biddy dear,"
And then he stopped a while,
To fringe his words the merest mite
With so mething of a smile—
A smile that found its image
In a face of beauteous mould,
Whose liquid eyes were peeping
From a broidery of gold.

"I've come to ax ye, Biddy dear,
If"—then he stopped again,
As if his heart had bubbled o'er
And overflowed his brain;
His lips were twitching nervously
O'er what they had to tell,
And timed their quavers with the eyes
That gently rose and fell.

"I've come"—and then he took her hands
And held them in his own,
"To ax"—and then he watched the buds
That on her cheeks had blown,
"My purty dear"—and then he heard
The throbbing of her heart,
That told how love had entered in
And claimed its every part.

"Och! don't be tazin' me," said she,
With just the faintest sigh.
"I'm far from bloind; I see you've come,
But that's the reason why?"
"To ax"—and once again the tongue
Forbode its sweets to tell—
"To ax—if Mrs. Mulligan
Has any pigs to sell?"

Building a Hencoop.

MR. SPOOPENDYKE'S EXPERIENCES IN HIS BACKYARD.

"My dear," said Mr. Spoopendyke, as he appeared before his wife with a broad grin on his face, "say, my dear, I've bought some chickens so we can have fresh laid eggs. Look!" and he held out a couple of pair of fowl tied by the legs, for Mrs. Spoopendyke's contemplation.

"Well, upon my word!" exclaimed Mrs. Spoopendyke, "Of all things! chickens! Ever since we've been married I've wanted chickens!" and she approached the birds cautiously, and with a look of misgiving that belied her words. "Where can we keep them?"

"In a coop, Mrs. Spoopendyke, in a coop!" retorted her husband, laying the chickens on the bed while he divested himself of his coat and vest. "We might keep 'em up the chimney or in the clock, but we probably won't. We'll just keep 'em in a hencoop, and I've got the laths and nails down stairs to build it with. Come down in the yard," and Mr. Spoopendyke grabbed his new acquisition by the legs and started off, followed by his wife.

"Do you know how to build a coop?" asked Mrs. Spoopendyke, as she watched her husband dig a post-hole in the corner she had reserved for a geranium bed.

"If I don't, you probably do," snorted Mr. Spoopendyke, kicking away at the spade until he loosened his leg. "Now I put this post here and that one there. Then the two fences make the rest, and I only lath up these two—dod gast the post!" he concluded, as he toppled over on his ear. "Can't you hold it up? What're you sitting around there like a cork in a jug for? Hold it up, will ye?"

Mrs. Spoopendyke grasped the post firmly with both hands, and held it at an angle thirty degrees.

"Now hold it perfectly still while I dig the other hole," and Mr. Spoopendyke backed away at the ground again, and set his second post.

"I see what you mean," giggled Mrs. Spoopendyke. "You slat it up from one post to the other, and them put the chickens in. My! how nice that will be!"

Mr. Spoopendyke glared at her a moment and then began putting up his laths, standing between the posts and the fence corner and whistling as he worked.

"Now," said he, as he finished, "what do you think of that?"

Mrs. Spoopendyke examined the job critically.

"It's a perfect palace!" she exclaimed, "But say, dear, how are you going to get out?"

"Yah-h-h!" roard Mr. Spoopendyke, bounding into the air. "Why didn't you tell me? What'd ye want to let me build myself in like a dod gasted mummy for? Ain't ye got any sense at all anywheres? Why didn't ye watch what I was doing?" and Mr. Spoopendyke grinned horribly through the slats.

"I supposed you were going to build a hole in it," faltered Mrs. Spoopendyke.

"So I am!" yelled Mr. Spoopendyke, jamming his leg through the structure, "want any more holes?" and he kicked the side halt way across the yard. "Four chickens, four holes!" he roared, and the laths flew in all directions. "Want any more holes?" and he smashed the roof out with the spade. "Holes constantly on hand! If you don't see the hole you want, ask for it!" and he blew out the end with terrific energy. "New goods coming in all the time! Second-hand holes a specially!" and he banged out the other end. "Parties wanting holes to send in the country will consult their interests by applying here before going elsewhere!" and he ripped down the rest of the coop with prodigious clatter. "Want any more holes in this particular coop?" he roard, wrenching out the posts and slamming them across the yard. "Does this hen-coop begin to convey the impression of having a hole in it?" he demanded, stalking up to his wife.

"Yes dear," replied Mrs. Spoopendyke, soothingly. "I'm so glad you got out, but where can we keep the chickens now?"

"Keep 'em!" ripped Mr. Spoopendyke, with a horrible grimace, and grasping the wretched fowls by the legs, "who's going to keep 'em?" and he cut the lashings. "S'pose I'm going to ruin my business just to gratify every measly whim of a dod gasted woman?" and he jerked the chickens into the air.

"Never mind," cooed Mrs. Spoopendyke, as the last bird slid over the fence and disappeared. "Chickens are a nuisance, anyway. We really didn't need any."

"Why didn't you say so before I bought 'em?" blurted Mr. Spoopendyke, as he dashed into the house.

"I didn't know it," sighed Mrs. Spoopendyke, looking around on the wreck, "and, beside, I don't believe we would have had many eggs, because those chickens were all roosters."

And Mrs. Spoopendyke followed her husband, who stormed around the rest of the evening because she couldn't find the Eagle of January 12, 1879 which he had cautioned her to save because there was something in it he wanted to read, and which he had used the next day, in conjunction with the back breadth of her new flannel petticoat, to clean his shot gun with.

"This informs you that we have sold all those Baxter's Mandrake Bitters you sent us. We sold the last three bottles to-day. Two of our customers disputed about which should have the last bottle, and we decided the matter by promising to send for more at once. The Bitters gave universal satisfaction to all who have tried them. We want you to send us twelve dozen forthwith."

A Proposal at the Opera.

This is an actual conversation from real life, and strictly on the half-shell, between a semi-swell, but altogether spoony, couple at the opera last Monday.

It was overheard by a young lady in the seat in front, who had sworn off (for this occasion only) from her Gainsborough hat.

Moral—Girl, go and do likewise.

At a perfectly obvious part of the show the young man consults the libretto, as an excuse for bringing his head nearer to hers.

She—Oh, my! What nice finger-nails you have!

He (tickled to death)—Pshaw, now!

She—My sister has nice nails. Sister has the hand of the family.

He—Your hand is just lovely.

She—I don't like flattery, so you can just hush.

Gerster has been singing, and the interested and interesting talkers are interrupted by a rude burst of applause.

A recitative follows. The young girl don't catch on any too kindly to recitative, and presently resumes;

Oh! I wrote such a long letter home to-day—seven pages.

He—What! seven?

She—Yes, and the postman didn't come, and I opened it and wrote seven more.

He—I wish you'd write me a letter.

She (tenderly—Why, what could I write?

He—You needn't write but three words.

She—Three words? What can they be?

He—Three nice little words.

She—Oh, my! Ain't you strange?

This knocks the young man out of time for a minute, and during that period the music had a chance. But he comes up smiling, a little disfigured, but still in the ring.

He—Oh! you know.

She—No; indeed I don't.

He—Well, I'll tell you some other time.

The chorus comes down toward the foot-lights with unmistakable intent to howl, and during the preliminary fiddling the not-too-curious-but-just-curious-enough young girl says, with a sweetly shrinkish timidity:

"Can't you tell me while they're singing?"

Then a fiendish yell from the chorus breaks off shorter than could possibly be anticipated, and his voice is heard with startling distinctness—

"I love you. Couldn't you write that?"

"Oh! my, yes, and ever so much more."

And then the tenor clutches the prima donna by the back hair and yells bloody murder into her right eyebrow, and the young man and the young woman lean so hard on the arm of the orchestra chairs that her vaccination mark blushes like an aurora berealis.—Washington Republic.

Three Obedient Husbands.

THEIR WIVES RECEIVING THEM AFTER BEING OUT LATE.

There were four of them together, and it was late. They had been drinking. Finally, one of them looked at the clock, and said:

"What will our wives say when we get home?"

"Let them say what they want to. Mine will tell me to go to the mischief," responded No. 2.

"I'll tell you what we will do. Let us meet here in the moring and tell our experiences. Let the one who has refused to do what his wife told him to do when he got home pay for the evening's entertainment."

"That is a good idea. We will agree to that." So the party broke up and went to their respective homes.

Next morning they met at the appointed place and began to tell their experiences.

Said No. 1:

"When I opened the door my wife was awake. She said: 'A pretty time of night for you to be coming home. You had better go out and sleep in the pig pen, for that's all you will come to, sooner or later, anyhow.' Rather than pay for all we had drank last night, I did what she told me to. That lets me out."

Next!

No. 2 cleansed his throat, and said:

"When I got home I stumbled on a chair and my wife called: There you are again, you drunken brute! You had better wake up the children, and stagger about for awhile so they can see what a drunken brute of a father they are afflicted with." I thought the best thing I could do was to obey; so I woke up the children, and staggered around untill my wife hinted to me to stop. She used a chair in conveying the hint. That lets me out."

Next!

No. 3 said:

"I was humming a tune, and my wife called out, "There you are again! Hadn't you better give us a concert?" I said, 'certainly,' and began to sing as loud as I could, but she told me to stop, or she would throw something at me; so I stopped. That lets me out!

Next!

No. 4 looked very disconsolate. He said:—

"I reckon I'll have to pay. My wife told me to do something none of you would have done, if you had been in my place."

"What was it?"

"She said: 'So you thought you would come home a last. How, hadn't you better go to the well and drink a couple of buckets of water, just to astonish your stomach. There was more than I had bargained for so it's my funeral."—Texas Siftings.

THE COMING ELECTIONS.

DUTY OF THE HOUR.

At this important stage of our country's history it is the duty of every intelligent citizen to consider carefully the merits of the different political programmes before the public, as well as the personal and political qualifications of the rival candates. Great results depend upon the votes to be cast on the 20th inst., including the character of our rulers for the next five, perhaps the next ten years, and the nature of the policy by which our national affairs are to be guided. There should be nothing wearing the semblance of indifference on the part of the electors. On the contrary, every voter, whether psssessed of much or little property, or merely owning those hands and energies by whose constant exertion his living is obtained, should consider it his bounden duty no less than his enviable privilege to reflect carefully upon the competing policies presented for his approval, and upon the conflicting claims of the candidates by whom they are respectively advocated. There never was an election held in Canada in which more important issues were at stake, or upon the outcome of which graver consequences appeared to depend. Let us glance at a few of the features of the impending contest, and some of the considerations by which the judgments of the electors ought to be affected. To begin with, the debt and material condition and prospects of the country, every citizen will look with concern on the fact that our obligations have swelled from $174,957,268 in 1878, the last year of the Mackenzie (Liberal) administration, to $199,861,537, at the end of the four years of Sir John A. Macdonald's rule! Despite the enormously increased taxation borne by the country since 1879, we have a national debt, now, on the border of two hundred millions, which cannot, but under the present system of lavish expenditure, reckless contracting, abuse of public patronage and related political vices, be vastly increased with such another period of Tory misrule. Now this means nothing else than higher taxes upon the food, clothing, fuel and tools used by the people, with nothing to compensate for such burdens and discouragements. It means the necessity of our hard-working townsmen and farmers in these eastern provinces, spending all they can earn, even when fully employed, to procure the necessaries of life for themselves and families; and it involves the emigration of our mechanics and farm laborers, by tens of thousands, to the United States when times of depression arrive. It is no proper answer that we have and shall have a Canadian Pacific Railway for this enormous debt. The most costly sections of that railway, those along the rocky and inhospitable shores of Lake Superior, and over the snow-capped mountains, and across the profound gulfs and mighty rivers of British Columbia, as Mr. Blake and the Liberals contended, from the first, could well have been postponed till Canada became a richer and more populous nation. The Liberals would have constructed the sections through the best parts of Ontario, Manitoba and the North West, not omitting the settled and cultivable portions of the Pacific Province. But Sir John and followers, with that eagerness to purchase political support and that recklessness in regard to the public interest, which are old characteristics, rushed into those costly and perilous engagements with British Columbia which have disturbed the peace of the country since 1872, vastly enhanced its obligations, and in many quarters at home and abroad created grave doubts in reference to its future solvency and prosperity. The clearest, most solemn warnings, the most emphatic reminders of the general ignorance of the North West, and the impossibility of forming any safe estimate of the cost of the Pacific Railway proved wholly insufficient to induce Sir John's Government in 1872 to proceed cautiously, retrace their steps, or pay some respect to the means and capabilities of our people. As a result of this ignorant haste, self-will and recklessness, together with the extravagant bargains formed with the present Syndicate, not to mention the perfect system of contract-jobbing, enormous advantages to political supporters, in the shape of heavy duties in favor of their manufactures—duties which, in the case of three or four sugar refiners, give them the control of the whole market of the Dominion—we have the present scale of burdensome taxation, so trying to the working classes in town and country. Our taxes instead of fairly providing for the public wants, and yielding, besides a moderate surplus, rolled up last year the gigantic, the unnecessary total of $4,500,000—a heavy drain upon the masses not yet fully recovered from the effects of the bad times, which extended from 1875 to 1880. The surplus expected this current year is over $5,000,000, mainly derived from duties on flour, wheat, coal and other necessaries of life imported. But this enormous amount means a much larger volume extracted from the people by means of the much larger profits speculators and over-protected manufacturers will be enabled to make. If such, or even considerably smaller surpluses were obtained as Mr. Gladstone used to get them, by judicious distribution of the taxes, by wise reductions here and increases there, the controlling idea being the lightening of the burdens of the masses at every practicable point, we should rejoice at the skill, patriotism and sympathy for the people they evinced. But Sir L. Tilley's surpluses signify nothing but the vulgar resort to heavy imposts on the chief articles of consumption purchased by the poor. The tendency of the present railroad and fiscal policy of the Tory Government has been, as ably contended by the Liberal opposition in Parliament, to keep the working classes poor, or prevent their accumulating savings, and, on the other hand, to build up a class of wealthy political speculators and contractors, upon whose means they might call, as upon Sir H. Allan's, at the elections in 1872, for large contributions wherewith to bribe the electors in times of trial like the present. No doubt the recipients of Government favors have "come down handsomely," at this crisis, to prolong their opportunities of enriching themselves at the public expense. But we believe the sense of duty, the force of intelligence and the virtue of honesty will be found too strong with the electors to permit of their diversion from that wise, honorable and patriotic course which imperiously dictates, on this grand occasion, the support of the Liberal candidates, who are pledged to the reform of Tory abuses, a more economical public expenditure, the suppression of monopolies, the use of our great resources in the North West for the public advantage, mainly, the fullest right of each province to the management of its own affairs, the repeal of coal and bread taxes, and such general reforms as the increased population, wealth and importance of our country demand.

COMPTON AND THE EASTERN TOWNSHIPS.

There can be no doubt that Mr. John Henry Pope feels very uncomfortable in connection with the present contest in Compton. His opponent, Mr. H. E. Cairns, forms a pleasant contrast to him which has made and is daily making a good impression upon the electors of this fine county. Mr. Cairns in not one of those self-conceited yet ignorant men, easily spoiled by a little success, and given to autocratic airs—in fact a little god in his own estimation, who thinks everybody should worship at his upstart shrine. But he is a plain, modest, honest man, who does not want to enter Parliament to make fortunes for himself and a host of relatives, but who wishes to bring Compton into line with the most liberal, enlightened and progressive counties of the Dominion, in which position it is qualified by the intelligent and energetic character of its inhabitants and by its great natural advantages to stand. There is no reason why this excellent constituency should longer continue a Tory preserve for third-rate representatives, who never did and never can make any mark in public life, or do it any credit whatever. It seems the opinion of certain Tories, with axes to grind, that Mr. Pope has some sacred claim to the patronage and good fat salary which the representation of Compton in Parliament secures him, and that it is unpardonable presumption—something resembling sacrilege—to question his claims to a permanent retention of his very profitable position. It must, however, be conceded that Mr. Pope ~~has~~ long enough enjoyed a big bonanza, while misrepresenting the really liberal and progressive views of the majority of the electors of Compton. Six thousand dollars a year for some years before the defeat of Sir John A. Macdonald's Government in 1873, and $7,000 a year for the last four years, from 1878 till 1882—not to speak of the $1,000 a year for sessional allowance, and other tit-bits, has much increased both his fortune and importance, and mightily strengthened his patriotic desire to continue to devote his brilliant talents to his country's service, and sacrifice himself for the benefit of his very fortunate constituents. They can well, however, dispense with such efficient services and touching self-sacrifice. It would be unfair to exact too much from such lofty abilities and overflowing patriotism. But seriously no resident of Compton or the Eastern Townships can look upon Mr. Pope, Minister of Agriculture, with anything approaching pride or confidence. He as much represents the intelligence and enterprise and liberal sentiments of the townships as he represents the Baconian Philosophy. Like his late colleague, Mr. John O'Connor, who is henceforth to be imposed upon the people in the capacity of a judge—who was found too stupid and burdensome for even a back-bench, mute Minister, he hardly ever opens his mouth without putting his foot in it. Mr. Pope has been merely retained in office as a maceweight, or a figurehead for the townships, there being no men of independence or ability like Sir A. T. Galt, to respectably and efficiently represent the townships, and Sir John, like the late Sir Geo. Cartier, always preferring pliant, unquestioning supporters, upon whom he could always depend no matter how immoral or insane his policy. It is hightime for the townships, and Compton in particular, to be delivered from such an incubus—from the reproach of such representation. It is pleasant to know that Mr. Cairns is gaining ground fast, the progress of the Liberal cause throughout the country, particularly in Ontario, influencing strongly public opinion in the Eastern Townships as it undoubtedly should. Mr. Pope's friends will no longer be able to boast that he carries Compton in his breeches' pocket, and is the dictator and controller of this whole Eastern Section. His meeting in Compton Saturday week was a lame and impotent enterprise, though men who have got substantial favors from this Tory Government, like Senator Cochrane, in the shape of 100,000 acre ranches, and men receiving substantial $600 salaries for playing the part of immigration agents, like Mr. Kellam, showed themselves conspicuous and endeavored to work up an audience and some enthusiasm for Mr. Pope. His address was as dull, incoherent and incorrect in statement as might have been expected; but the recipients of Government favors and the seekers for such favors, of course, exhibited marked satisfaction and professed to be profoundly moved by the speaker's pitiable attempt at logic and declamation, at which the youngest member of a juvenile debating society would have laughed outright. But it is on the resources of the General and the Quebec Government that this gentleman mainly depends for re-election, and all the officials of both throughout the district, will be working, wirepulling and baiting the poorer electors from now till polling-day, to secure his success. Mr. John Henry Pope will struggle hard to avoid political annihilation, which would entail reduction to his original insignificance, and the loss of a splendid salary with other valuable advantages; but the electors of Compton thoroughly understand his little selfish games and vanities no less than his utter unfitness for the high position he has so long discredited, and we look for the election of his opponent, Mr. Cairns, by a respectable majority.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Liberal banner is being borne courageously throughout the length and breadth of Ontario, with the most brilliant prospects of success. Despite the gerrymandering Bill and the gross abuse of the enormous patronage in the hands of the Federal Minister who have contracts for public works and every means of corruptly influencing the electors at their command, Sir John and colleagues are thoroughly alarmed at the present outlook, as there is every reason to believe the Liberals will carry both Ontario and New Brunswick, by respectable majorities, besides securing important gains in Quebec and the other provinces. What a remarkable, what a gratifying change in public opinion! A few weeks ago Sir John's majority at Ottawa was about 90, while in a fortnight it will have been cut down to a baker's dozen or thereabouts, or perhaps entirely swept out of sight. This is something that even sanguine Liberals hardly dared to anticipate one short month ago; but the reaction in public feeling has been as sweeping as it has been sudden, and the country can wait with justifiable pleasure the dawn of a brighter day. It is needless to say that the present contractors and monopolists' administration could not last one month with a small majority, as the infinitely greater abilities of the Liberal leaders, their purer character and better, safer principles would give them advantages in any contest under such circumstances, at Ottawa, which could not but prove perfectly overwhelming to their opponents.

Among the cheering signs of Liberal success in the forthcoming elections is the retirement of Col. Stevenson, from Montreal West. This gentleman has long enjoyed considerable popularity in Montreal as an efficient volunteer officer, a prominent Freemason and Temperance man, and a ready and pleasant speaker. He has been a Tory of the bluest dye; and when, with all these advantages, he has retreated from the field of strife, he has furnished a confession of party weakness in that division which the dullest can perfectly understand. His successor, Mr. Gault, is a wealthy noodle, without talent or independence, whose politics are made up of a blind, unreasoning adoration of Sir John A. Macdonald and an ardent devotion to that N. P. which has made the profits from shares in cotton and woollen factori so large of late years at the expense of the general public. Mr. Ward, the Liberal candidate is almost certain of election.

So the coal tax has not developed much trade in this article between the Lower Provinces and Quebec and Ontario, after all. A few days ago a fleet of barges was on its way from Montreal to Kingston for American coal. One of the most amusing articles that appeared in the Montreal Gazette this spring was one designed to show that the duty of 60c a ton on American coal did not increase the cost of it to Canadians. In fact the Americans were so full of brotherly love and benevolence towards their Canadian neighbors as to pay this duty for us out of their own pockets, that we should have our coal as cheap as ever. In fact the statements and logic of some of our Tory contemporaries were not content with even this extraordinary result, as they went for the theory that this coal had been actually made cheaper to us by the duty. No wonder the retort was made—make the duty still higher and the Americans will at length give us our coal for nothing.

Nobody who knows anything of our leading public men can deny that Mr. Blake, the Liberal chief, is by far the ablest man in Parliament. He is a most learned lawyer, who for many years enjoyed the largest practice in Ontario, but which, lucrative as it was he gave up to devote his whole time and abilities to the service of the public as leader of the Opposition. His knowledge of the constitution, British and Canadian, is thorough and practical, and his acquaintance with Canadian history and public affairs is extensive and ever available. Offers of the highest positions on the Bench of Ontario have failed to seduce him from public life, of which he stands to-day a brilliant ornament. He is besides the greatest orator in Parliament, neither Sir John nor any of his colleagues coming near him in this important capacity. He has no petty, selfish projects to advance, no syndicates to enrich, no monopolies in manufacturing to establish, no crowds of self-seeking contractors or hangers-on to reward at the public expense. His inmost desire is to serve the people honestly, vigorously and efficiently, and raise the name of Canada among the nations—in short, to perform a patriots part and earn a patriot's reward—the gratitude and affection of his countrymen. In character, reputation and objects Mr. Blake and colleagues and Sir John A. Macdonald and colleagues are far as the poles asunder.

Just at the Wrong Time.

Mr. Robert Wilson, of the City Surveyor's office, and Street Commissioner of the Eastern Division for the Board of Public Works, Toronto, Ont., who is very fond of shooting, says: "To lose a duck hunt is a loss for which there is no adequate recompense. This misfortune lately overtook me. The boys got together recently and made arrangements for a good hunt. At the time the arrangements were entered into I was in good health generally; but, just as the shooting was to take place, my old enemy the rheumatism, came back to stay with me awhile again, and I had to forego the pleasure. The rheumatism has been a source of great bother to me, and I have done a great deal of doctoring for it, without much good. When this last attack came on me and crippled my hands so that they were drawn up, a friend of mine recommended St. Jacobs Oil, the Great German Remedy. I tried it, I am happy to say, and the result is that I am now cured and as well as ever. St. Jacobs Oil succeeded where more than a score of other liniments and medicines have failed."

Look out whom you vote for.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

SIR.—A lawsuit has been carried on in Ontario of which I quote verbatim a report as follows:—

"The action of General Hewson against Sir John A. Macdonald was renewed yesterday. The action, as will be remembered, was brought by Hewson against Sir John A. Macdonald to recover damages for a breach of contract. The plaintiff, it appears, was engaged by the defendant to work in his behalf at the last elections and in consideration of his service to Sir John and the party was to receive $2,500 in cash and a government appointment worth at least $2,000 a year. After the suit was began, the defendant pleaded a release executed by the plaintiff whereby in consideration of a stipulated sum he abandoned all claim against the defendant. The validity of this release has been the question on which the whole case hung. The plaintiff while admitting the execution of the release, refused to be bound by it, because of other verbal considerations made between himself and Sir John, which the latter had not carried out; the verbal consideration being the government situation. The Master in Chambers on an application made to him some time ago, stayed the proceedings on the ground that the release was an effectual bar to the plaintiffs action, but on appeal to Mr. Justice Armour, his ruling was upset, and the matter was directed to go down to trial at Ottawa, and the defendant then went to the full Court of Commom Pleas on appeal from the order of Mr. Justice Armour. His Lordship, Chief Justice Wilson, in a very elaborate judgment, reviewed the whole case and decided in favor of the defendant, allowing the application with costs."

The above is sufficient to induce me to withdraw all confidence in Sir John A. Macdonald as the leader of the Government. My reasons are because to hire any person to work at an election is a corrupt practice by the Dominion Elections Act, disqualifying the person guilty thereof from voting, sitting in parliament, or holding any office soever during a period of seven years, and the leader of the government of this great country should he, like Cæsar's wife, above suspicion.

I never heard anything brought forward that reflected upon the honor of Mr. Blake.

Notwithstanding the personal qualifications of the Hon. Mr. Pope, since he is acting on behalf of Sir John A. Macdonald instead of Mr. Blake, I shall vote against him. WIDE AWAKE.

CAMPAIGN NOTES.

The taxes paid by the people of Canada in 1878 amounted to a little over $22,000,000. This year they will exceed $33,000,000.

The Ministerialists squirm painfully because they are now forced either to endorse the Chapleau Administration or abandon their policy of running local and Dominion contests on party lines. But if a majority of Government supporters are returned at the Dominion election Mr. Chapleau will be quite justified in accepting the result as an endorsation by the tax-payers of every act of his Government.

Mr. Poirier is making a gallant fight in Terrebonne. It is said that Mr. Chapleau will take the stump in that county in support of the Government nominee. The Local Premier knows well that a defeat for the Ottawa Ministry would augur the speedy overthrow of his own Government.

Dr. C. Leggo, a prominent citizen of Ottawa, who asserts that he has for 25 years been a disinterested adherent of the Conservative party announces his intention to vote for the Liberal candidates in that city. He says he can no longer tolerate the humbugging of the present Administration.

It is odd that Canadians should almost invariably get the go-by when positions in the civil service or at the disposal of public associations are being given out. Many Canadians have been thrown out of their places on the Canada Pacific railway in order to make room for men from the States. This is the more remarkable in that Canadians have shown their ability to hold their own against people of any other nationality, and in the States they are valued on account of their steadiness and reliability. They frequently get the preference over others on these grounds. But the trouble seems to be that nothing is considered good enough in this country unless it has come from the other side of the Atlantic, and so we see importations filling positions in all branches of the public service, positions that should be the heritage of Canadians. If it is to be considered a mark of mediocrity for a man to have been born in Canada, and he is to be subjected to disabilities on that account, we may as well be told so in plain terms at once.—Ex.

The Richmond Guardian (Conseryativive) concedes the election of Mr. Fisher in Brome. It says: "Mr. Manson has been set aside in favor of Mr. Boright of Sutton Flats, who will be beaten by Mr. Fisher."

In Toronto the Conservatives are demoralized and desperate, and the Premier is struggling to prevent a complete stampede of his followers by making the most extravagant and absurd promises. By means of the Smith-Costigan manifesto Sir John imagines that he can secure some Irish Catholic votes, while to the Orangemen he has pledged himself to secure a special Act of incorporation for their Order from the Dominion Parliament. What a humiliating position for the Prime Minister of Canada to be placed in. Imagine a Gladstone or a Disraeli making "deals" with selfish office-seekers for political support. The Reformers in Toronto and throughout Ontario are working earnestly and harmoniously, and intend to sweep the Province. Sir John knows that his promises are incapable of fulfilment, but if sustained in power he will be able to laugh at the expense of his dupes.—Herald.

A TERRIFIC HAIL STORM.—On Thursday evening a hail storm suddenly struck Laredo, Texas. Hailstones as large as a man's fist fell for thirty minutes without interruption. Glass doors, windows and other fragile objects were broken. Several houses were unroofed. A building in course of erection, worth $15,000, was demolished, killing one man and wounding two. John Shea, caught in the storm, had his skull fractured. Charles Munster, beaten about the breast and shoulders by hailstones, fell exhausted on the highway and died shortly after he was conveyed home. After the storm the sun shone brightly and the sky was unclouded. The storm, it is feared, did much damage among sheep in this county. The storm was the heaviest ever known in Laredo.

SWEPT OVER THE FALLS.—News was received in Quebec Sunday of a frightful accident which occurred Saturday night at Montmorenci Falls. A farmer named Laberge was driving home his daughter, a married woman, who leaves seven children, when the horse became unmanageable near the bridge on the road which crosses the river. About 300 feet above the Falls the vehicle struck the bridge with such violence as to break away the guard, throwing Laberge out upon the bridge, but pitching the woman, horse and cart into the boiling torrent, which immediately swept them over the terrible abyss, a fall of nearly 800 feet. The body of Mrs. Richard was subsequently found at the toot of the Falls, near Hall's dam.

Troubled Egypt.

SERIOUS RIOTS.

ALEXANDRIA, 7 p. m., June 10.—Serious riots broke out to-day between hostile natives and Europeans. Several persons were killed and wounded, and a number of houses were destroyed. The police at first remained inactive.

Later.—The riotous demonstrations took place before the French Consulate, to which several of those mortally wounded were conveyed. The English Consal is severely hurt by receiving a gunshot wound. The engineer of the British man-of-war "Superb" was killed. The disturbances continued for five hours, when the military dispersed the rioters.

ALEXANDRIA, June 11.—The Greek consul and Italian vice-consul here were also severely wounded. The British man-of-war "Superb" will arrive in port to-night and land two hundred men to protect the British Consulate. Boats will be sent to take on board all British subjects desiring to leave. It is estimated that twenty persons were killed in the riots, but the exact particulars are as yet unobtainable.

CAIRO, June 11.—As far as is ascertainable the rioting in Alexandria commenced on a street near the Great Square. The immediate cause was the stabbing of an Arab by a Maltese. A mob of natives collected, cleared the streets with sticks and made their way into the Great Square, where they demolished the music pavilions and furniture in the cafes. The Europeans precipitately left and took refuge in the French Consulate. The soldiers were called out, but looked on without interfering during the work of demolition and bloodshed. The British Consul was wounded on the head with a bludgeon, but is progressing favorably. The mob subsequently sacked the shops of the Europeans. Egyptian troops occupy the chief points in the city. The Rue Des Sœurs inhabited chiefly by Europeans is completely wrecked. The Europeans fired from the windows killing many Arabs. The latter made terrible havoc among the Europeans in the streets, the British Consul was dragged from his carriage and beaten. Dervisch and Arabi Pashas have left Cairo for Alexandria. It is stated that the engineer of the British man-of-war "Superb" was stabbed to death. The captain of the British ironclad "Invincible" is in charge of the British Consulate. Another American corvette is expected here.

It is reported that France and England have sent a note to the Porte and the powers urging an immediate meeting of the conference.

The European colonies in Egypt have appealed to their Governments to send a squadron for their protection.

ALEXANDRIA, June 12.—The surgeon of the British man-of-war "Superb" was badly wounded in the riots yesterday.

CAIRO, June 12.—A project to carry off the Khedive, Dervisch Pasha, and the British and French Consuls to the citadel is freely discussed.

ALEXANDRIA, June 11.—Mr. Cockson, the English Consul, says that yesterday, when he was proceeding from the Great Square to the Governor's residence, he saw two Europeans, respectably dressed and apparently naval officers in plain clothes knocked down. A Greek was shot and killed by a solder five yards from Cockson's carriage. Others who were even closer were knocked down and stabbed. A soldier cut at the consular khavass with a sword. The carriage of the Greek Consul was stopped by a number of soldiers, the occupants dragged out and the Consul severelly beaten. Mr. Cockson escaped such severe maltreatment by his coachman lashing the horses, but he was struck on the head and one of his arms broken. The Italian Consul was wounded by a stone. The wife of the Austrian Consul-General was attacked and insulted. Accounts of the origin of the riot are conflicting.

ALEXANDRIA, June 12.—The disturbances here commenced simultaneously in three different points. The object of the rioters in great measure appears to have been pilage in which Levantians as well as Arabs participated. A regiment of cavalry and a regiment of infantry have been ordered to re-enforce the garrison. The official report of the riot states 67 Europeans were killed. Arabi Pasha and Mahomed Pasha Sami had separate interviews with Dervisch Pasha yesterday. It is generally believed they refused to submit to Dervisch's views. Great excitement continues to-day and all the shops are closed.

LONDON, June 12.—The Admiralty has received despatches confirming the report of the murder of the engineer of the "Superb." The fighting in Alexandria, except the deliberate attack upon the consuls when proceeding to the residence of the Governor, seems to have been confined to the Arabs and Lavantians. No English resident is reported wounded.

A correspondence at Cairo lays the responsibility of the riots upon Arabi Pasha. Dervisch Pasha had summoned him to resign and there seemed to be no alternative but submission or defiance. Since the riot broke out Dervisch had to appeal to Arabi as commander of the only available forces to restore order.

LONDON, June 13.—A correspondent at Alexandria telegraphs: The situation is terrible. Any small force the fleet could land would only suffice to excite the Arabs to a general massacre, and the English man-of-war "Superb" wore round to the harbor on Sunday midnight. A report she was about to land marines to protect the Consulate spread, and the soldiers crowded the beach. The boats of the "Superb" were ordered to keep off. The proportion of Arabs killed in the late riot is insignificant. That the fleet is almost a source of danger is shown by the fact that when the French stationed a vessel opposite their Consulate to receive refugees, she was immediately surrounded by Egyptian steam launches which remain. A collision may occur at any moment.

LONDON, JUNE 13.—In the House of Commons Sir Charles Dilke stated the the Government had informed the British Consul-General in Egypt they think his place is with the Khedive in Alexandria. He said he supposed if the Consuls went to Alexandria number of Europeans would go there. He declared the present anarchy in Egypt will not be allowed to continue. The garrison at Alexandria has been increased to 12,000. On the outbreak of the riot Admiral Seymour made preparations to land a large body of marines, and telegraphed the British Consul-General for leave to do so. The latter, however, refused, after conferring with the Consuls. The purpose of Dervisch and the Khedive in going to Alexandria is to check outbreak and obviate the necessity of landing marines. Egyptian Unified securities have fallen two per cent. within an hour on the reports of further troubles in Egypt.

ALEXANDRIA, June 14.—The streets are blocked and carts are piled with the baggage of the fleeing Europeans. All the men-of-war in the harbor are crowded with fugitives. The American frigate "Galena" is crowded with families claiming American protection. The Revs. Joseph and Richard Smith, of New York, and Baltimore, have taken refuge on board. An American officer narrowly escaped while in company of a British officer of being killed in the fight. Sunday's disturbance was evidently premeditated, breaking out in several places at once. Europeans were dragged out of their carriages and murdered with sticks and the legs of tables or chairs, obtained by sacking the shops. The British Consul is still in danger. Three officers of the British fleet were buried at sea yesterday. It is stated the Prefect of Police in Alexandria, with the assistance of a fanatic orator, has organized the outbreak, the soldiers setting the example of sacking the shops.

To The Free and Independent Electors of the County of Compton.

GENTLEMEN,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of a requisition signed by a large number of the intelligent electors of this county requesting me to accept a nomination as a candidate for the representation of this county in the Commons of Canada at the approaching elections.

After mature deliberation I have determined to accept the nomination without offering any apology for doing so.

I am not vain enough to believe there are not many others in this county quite as competent as myself and perhaps very much more so to take the position of candidate for the very responsible and honorable position of a member of Parliament for the Dominion House of Commons. Yet when my friends have so generously and with such expressed confidence invited me to this position I accept willingly and thankfully and enter into this contest confidently feeling that I am the right man in the right place.

I have looked in vain and am still at a loss for any intelligent reason why the Government should bring on the general elections more than a year in advance of the proper time. The country is in a prosperous condition and the Government has been numerically strong enough to carry any measure they deemed proper to propose; neither are there any measures or issues of any vital importance that I am aware of to be submitted to the electors for their approval or otherwise. I cannot therefore conceive why the elections should be brought on in such a hurried manner at this busy season of the year. If the Government can give a satisfactory reason for doing so it will no doubt be accepted by the electors, otherwise they must expect to be held responsible.

This is a very large county, yet I hope to be able to visit nearly every portion of it between now and polling day, and will be most happy to answer any questions that may be proposed having reference to the political affairs of our country and also to define my own position in regard to the political features and issues of our constitution and Government. I have the honor to be, gentlemen, your obedient servant

ERROR.—In last week's Milby local the writer was made to say that the government imposed a duty of three cents a pound on all kinds of wool that are imported; it should have read on all kinds that are never imported.

The Richmond papers record the death of Mr. Louis Desauluiers, of Melbourne village on Thursday last. He was one of the oldest residents, and for a long time carried the mails. He had been more or less ill for a year past.

AT LAST.—Our city fathers have done a good thing in putting on the street something like a watering cart that throws more than a garden sprinkler. We expect that clouds of dust will no longer blind the eyes of our citizens on the leading thoroughfares of the city.

Fresh Strawberries received every day, fresh fish Thursdays and Fridays. R. L. Harvey & Co.

A child of Mr. A. L. Lance, of the Bedford Times, came near being drowned in a stream of water flowing under the sidewalk, from which the child fell on Saturday evening. Mr. B. T. Rice, of Riceburg, was passing at the time, and observing the child in its precarious condition, rescued him.

Mr. Joseph Bailey, late of Sherbrooke, has accepted an offer from the Canada Pacific Railway and left the Grand Trunk. RACES.—The spring races of the Sherbrooke Turf Club take place over the Harkness Trotting Park next Thursday and Friday, the 22nd and 23rd instant. A large number of the best racers in the Province are expected to be present. See advt.

CONCERT.—We draw special attention to the advertisement in another column of the St. Jean-Baptiste Concert, which takes place on Thursday evening next in the Drill Shed. The Hon. Lucius Robinson, an old and respected resident of Newport, Vt., died in that village last Thursday, after several weeks of great suffering from mortification of the foot. The leg had been amputated above the knee but it was of no avail as he sank rapidly and passed away. His funeral was very largely attended by his neighbors and by leading gentlemen from Montreal, Sherbrooke and Boston.

A fresh lot of Cigars and Tobaccos just received by J. Arthur & Co.

NEW MACHINE SHOP.—We beg to draw attention to the advertisement of Messrs Crabtree & Colclough, machinists, which appears in to-day's issue. Both these gentlemen are practical workmen of long experience, and we can confidently recommend them to any desiring machinery made or repaired. Their shop is located in the old Banner Sewing Machine building, near the paper mill, where they will be glad to receive orders in their line.

DOMINION DAY.—The Sherbrooke Lacrosse Club are preparing quite an extensive programme of games for Dominion Day as will be seen by reference to our advertising columns. They have arranged for numerous races, etc., to end with a grand Lacrosse Match between the second twelve of the Montreal Club and the first twelve of Sherbrooke, so that good sport may be looked for. The music will be furnished by the "Victorias" or 53rd Batt. Band.

Destructive floods are reported from British Columbia, meadow lands and highways being from 13 to 60 feet under water.

The concert on Tuesday evening at the City Hall was attended by a select and appreciative audience. Miss Pauline Saxe's playing was marked with much taste and delicate feeling, especially in the "Nocturne" (Clopin) which was beautifully rendered. "Irish Diamonds" (Pope) also elicited much applause. The lady and gentlemen who contributed to the vocal part of the evening's entertainment were well received, and being old Sherbrooke favorites their efforts were highly appreciated.

TUESDAY'S NOMINATION went off very quietly in this city, R. N. Hall, Esq., being elected by acclamation, as was W. B. Ives Esq., at Richmond. At Cookshire Mr. H. E. Cairns and Hon. J. H. Pope were nominated, and at Ayer's Flats H. M. Rider and C. C. Colby Esq. The total result of Tuesday's nominations were the return by acclamation of 18 supporters of the government, and one of the opposition, nearly all being from this Province. By provinces as follows: Quebec 13; New Brunswick 2; Nova Scotia 1; Ontario 2. The result next Tuesday is expected to be just the reverse.

SUDDEN DEATH—A sudden death occurred to Edward Varney at the residence of his father, Nathan Varney at Brompton Falls on the 6th inst. The deceased, who worked at the Grand Trunk wood yard of that place, went up to the house at eleven a. m. to prepare for shearing sheep in the afternoon; and was standing in the barn, when his brother Edgar who was with him going outside for something heard a noise as if something had fallen, and on returning to the barn found Edw. lying on the floor. Assistance was immediately called, and Dr. Pare who happened to be passing at the time was summoned, but life was extinct. His remains, followed by a large number of friends, were taken to the cemetery at Brompton for interment. He leaves a wife, three small children, and a large circle of relatives to mourn his loss.

WATERVILLE.—A large and enthusiastic meeting of electors was held in Waterville Saturday night last. The mayor, L. W. Wyman Esq., was called to the chair and presided with fairness and ability. Mr. Jas. Reilly was the first speaker who told the audience that he had been a Liberal when that party were in power but now he was a supporter of the other side—they being in power. This position appeared to strike some of the audience as being peculiar to others than Mr. Reilly—they liked to be on the biggest side. Mr. H. E. Cairns spoke briefly and intelligently. N. W. Trenholme Esq. of Montreal delivered an eloquent address. He was followed by R. N. Hall Esq of Sherbrooke, to whom Mr. Trenholme replied, and the meeting adjourned. Presentation.

It is refreshing when strikes are so common to be able to record such an event as the one which took place at the Manufactory of the Dominion Snath Co., on Saturday the 10th inst., in the presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Ball, by the employees of the Snath Factory, of a magnificent family Bible beautifully bound and illustrated. The presentation was made by Mr. Bishop and was a complete surprise to Mr. Ball who briefly responded for himself and Mrs. Ball thanking them for their beautiful and valuable present feeling doubly thankful for the spirit that prompted the gift. A basket of oranges, nuts and candies then appeared as Mrs. Ball's surprise, and the half hour spent in discussing them and the present seemed to be heartily enjoyed by all present. We give the address entire.

To J. R. Ball, Esq., Manager Dominion Scythe Snath Company, Sherbrooke, Que.

DEAR SIR,—It is customary to close this establishment for a short time during the summer months, and as that period is now at hand we desire to take this opportunity of expressing our unqualified appreciation of the manner in which you have always acted, in the capacity of Manager, towards us your employees, a course which has been productive of complete harmony among us. It has also been a source of pleasure to us, as, we feel confident it must have been gratifying to you, to find that those with whom you have business and social relations, concur with us in our estimation of you.

As a slight token of this esteem for you we would respectfully ask your acceptance, on behalf of Mrs. Ball and yourself, of a copy of the Book from which we hope you may both, with your family, be long spared in health and prosperity to receive instruction and guidance; trusting that He by whom this Book was inspired may be pleased to restore us one and all at the close of our vacation to a return of that most desirable accord which has characterized our labours together during the past few years.

For our fellow employees and selves yours sincerely,

HARVEY C. WILSON,
JOSIAH DUSTON, } COM.

Stanstead Wesleyan College.

The following report of this excellent institution, which was presented to conference in Montreal recently, will be read with interest by all well wishers:—

Rev. Prof. Shaw presented the report of a special committee on the Stanstead College, which recommended that the general conference be asked to accept the title of the property and recognize the institution as a part of the education system of the Methodist Church of Canada; and in the event of this recommendation not being accepted by the general Conference, the committee recommended that the Montreal Conference should assume the ownership and management of the college and its property. It was also recommended that the minimum of the endowment fund of the college be fixed at $20,000 instead of $25,000, in order that the proceeds of this fund may be immediately available for the purpose of placing the institution on a sound financial basis.

The report and its recommendations were adopted, and the Rev. William Scott, Rev. Prof. Shaw, Mr. J. J. McLaren, Q. C., and Mr. C. C. Colby, M. P., were appointed a committee to memorialize the General Conference and to carry out the other recommendations in the report.

The annual report of the trustees of the college was presented by the Rev. A. Hardie, Governor and Secretary-Treas. It showed that over $5,000 had been collected during the past year towards paying off the liabilities of the college, and some $12,000 of subscriptions have yet to be collected. The debts now amounts to $9,222 65; subscriptions to the endowment fund now amount to $18,000. During the past year, 195 students were in attendance, an increase of 60 per cent over the previous year. The income of the school was nearly up to the expenditure.

Rev. A. Lee Holmes, principal of the college, gave an account of the work done by the institution, and a resolution was passed expressing the satisfaction of the Conference with the reports and pledging its continued co-operation with the college.

Wood Pulp.

The mills of the Canada Paper Company at Windsor add to the old processes of producing papers from rags and ropes the extensive production of paper from wood by a chemical process. The wood is cut by a powerful rotary machine into chips, which are shovelled into immense revolving boilers, where they are boiled with a mixture of soda ash and water, previously prepared. The boiled mass comes out thoroughly reduced to soft pulp, the rosins and other ingredients of the wood, except the fibre, having passed into liquor. The whole mass passes into vats where it undergoes three washings. The first is accomplished by taking the previous lot and washing out the black liquor. This black liquor is then passed into a sort of oven of enormous size where it passes down, as it were, from story to story and finally over a long bed of coals. Here it its dried away and burned; everything that is not soda ash is turned into vapor and is consumed by flames passing over the mass. The soda ash then becomes again fit for use. The pulp is secondly washed with water and the product is used for the first washing of the next lot, and finally with water again, the product of which is drained away. The pulp then goes through a complicated process of straining and bleaching with chlorine, when it is ready to mix, in proper proportion with other stock. The pulp made from wood by this chemical process is much better than that which is merely ground. Mr. Angus, of the Canada Paper Company, i erecting pulp mills at Angus on the Quebec Central, where he expects to prepare that article for the paper mills of the Dominion. It seems strange that Canada should not long ago have become an exporting country for what is now a large article of commerce and one she is so peculiarly well circumstanced to produce.—Witness.

A Crises Impending.

No better argument in favor of the position which the Liberals of Canada have taken in regard to the trade question, could possibly have been presented to the country than the speech of Mr. Smithers, President of the Bank of Montreal, delivered at the annual meeting on Monday of last week. No one will venture to question Mr. Smithers' complete and accurate knowledge of the situation, and any person who reads his statement will at once undestand the hollowness of the cry that the country is prosperous because of the high tariff imposed by the present Ministry. The much boasted prosperity is to be attributed altogether to the increased exports of farm and forest products. The partial revival of trade has led to inflation, and Mr. Smithers warns business men to be prepared for emergencies, as the banks cannot go on expanding much longer. With regard to the general state of trade, Mr. Smithers says:—

"I do not wish to make any extravagant or exaggerated statements but I think that it is an undeniable fact that trade is not in an altogether satisfactory condition. Complaints are general that profits are light, and it is pretty well understood that considerable stocks of merchandise have had to be carried over and then it is to be feared that manufactures are being, or are likely to be overdone, or at least in certain directions—for example, I find from information obtained from the most reliable source, that there are thirteen cotton mills now running and six under construction, making nineteen in all, in addition to which we know that many of them have increased their capacity and others are doing so."

These views we are satisfied, are shared in by every sensible commercial man. It is therefore absurd to assert that trade has been or can be regulated by other than natural causes, and when our people learn—perhaps by bitter experience—to understand this they will understand how utterly worthless are the high tariff arguments of the Government organs and orators.—Herald.

I BEG TO ANNOUNCE TO THE

FARMERS!

That I now have full control of the Genuine Gillis Harrow as well, and for the remainder of this season Harrows will be furnished for cash or sure pay, on or before 1st July, at $14.00 for eleven-sixteenths.

15.00 for three-fourths.
16.00 for Cultivator Tooth.

These figures are one dollar lower than the Upper Canada prices, notwithstanding the freight is one dollar on each, and the same Harrow is sold in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia five dollars higher.

I have a fine line of Plows which are well known. The Celebrated East Farnham Plow a specialty.

I can highly recommend the Reversible Steel Tooth Cultivator with attachments for hilling, thus combining the two in one.

Mr. McIntosh says they are really the finest toyl he ever saw to mellow the ground, cut up weeds, and hill up potatoes.

Every Implement Fully Warranted

Repairs always on hand. Sections for all kinds of Mowers.

Every article sold subject to approval after a fair trial.

Almost daily I hear Farmers complaining because they can't get some little simple repair that is wanted and have to lay aside a tool which is perhaps but little worn, or perhaps the repair can be secured under a great expense, or they gave a note for an Implement and it was sued without notice, or that they bought an article and after trying it it was not adapted to their farm but they had to keep it.

Farmers,

If you want an Agricultural Implement business to be kept up in your midst, where you can always get repairs, where your notes can be found and where you can get goods subject to approval, etc., etc., give me a share of your patronage and I will endeavor to carry on business satisfactory to the farming public.

Call and see my hand and horse Root Drills, Broadcast Seeders, &c. G. M. COSSITT &

BRO. are turning out six thousand Rakes and Mowers for this season. I hope I shall be able to secure enough for the trade this year, as I have been short the two previous years. Please give in your orders as early as convenient.

PULMONARY
ELIXIR IS WARRANTED TO
[illegible]
WHITE'S ELIXIR

N. H. DOWNS'

Vegetable Balsamic

ELIXIR!

This valuable medicine is purely vegetable, the discovery of which was the result of many years' close study, in order to discover the cause, the symptoms and the cure—viz.:

Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Influenza, Pleurisy, Hoarseness, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and every species of oppression of the Chest and Lungs. In all cases where this Elixir has been duly administered its efficacy has been invariably manifested, convincing the most incredulous that is not incurable, if properly attended to.—Consumption at its commencement, is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the lungs; then an inflammation, when the cough is more observable, but rather dry. Then becomes local fever and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and chills more common. This Elixir in curing the above complaints, operates so as to remove all morbid irritations and inflammation from the lungs to the surface, and finally expel them from the system. It facilitates expectoration,

CONSUMPTION

IT HEALS THE ULCERATED SURFACES

and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy. It supports the strength and at the same time reduces the fever. It is free from strong opiate and astringent articles, which are of so drying a nature as to be in great danger of destroying the patient; whereas this medicine never dries or stops the cough, but, by removing the cause, generally destroys the hectic before the cough is entirely gone. Consequently, when the cough is cured the patient is well. Send address for pamphlet giving full directions for cure of pulmonary diseases. Price 25cts. and $1 per bottle. Sold everywhere.

Poetry.

Only Try.

I'll never marry; no, not I;
You men are all so stupid.
I wasn't made to mope and sigh,
And pay my court to Cupid.
I just say—catch me if you can;
A slave I'll never be;
I'd dearly like to see the man
That dare propose to me!
I'll never be a wife, not I.
I see you doubt me; so
Will some one ask me—just to try?
I warrant I'll say "No."

I'm six-and-thirty, yet unwed;
That shows I'm hard to please.
I find it, when the truth is said,
So very nice to tease.
I always keep of beaux a train;
But I'm a little queen,
And let my subjects sue in vain;
For what I say I mean.
I wouldn't be a wife, not I.
I see you doubt me; so—
Who'll pop the question? Just to try—
And hear me answer "No!"

My hair is just perfection's tint,
So Capitain Baldo said;
And by my smile, said Major Guile,
A hundred might be led.
Adolphus said my teeth were pearls,
Will called my cheek a rose,
Tom said I was a match for earls;
Now—just for fun—propose!
I'll never be a wife, not I.
I see you doubt me; so
Will some one ask me—just to try?
I promise to say "No!"

You're serious; your solemn look
Proclaims your great dejection;
However well you bate your hook,
You know you'll meet rejection.
I count refusals not by name,
But reckon by the score;
To ninety-nine my last list came,
I want to add one more;
Not that I'd be a wife, not I.
Do you still doubt me? Oh!
For shame. Do ask me—just to try?
And trust my saying "No!"

One thousand two ounces of blood pass through the kidneys every hour.

The skeleton measures about one inch less than the height of the living man.

A man breaths about 18 pints of air in a minute, or upwards of 7 hogsheads in a day.

The heart beats 175 time in a minute; sends nearly ten pounds of blood through the veins and arteries each beat; makes four beats while we breathe once.

Henry Bergh.

We can recommend to Mr. Bergh, the great friend of dumb animals in New York, if he does not know its virtues already, as most probably he does, a remedy for the many ills of horses and cattle that. in the hands of men the most ignorant would produce a marked charge for the better in our four footed servants. This is Dr. Dow's Sturgeon Oil Liniment an inexpensive and certain cure for sprung sinews, sore shoulder, wind galls, rough and broken knees, contracted, fevered or cracked hoofs, cords and similar ailments. There are few poor men who can afford to let their horses stay idle for any length of time from these causes and thus attempt to evade the laws and the country. But if they were once aware of the virtues of Dr. Dow's wonderful liniment they would see that it is easier to keep their horses in good conditfon than not.

Just in Time.

It was also an Ohio man, who, when a terrible storm set in one night, rushed into the house of a neighbour and cried out:—

"Jones, this is the ending up of the earth!"

"I'm afraid so—I'm afraid so!" was the reply.

"And what shall we do?"

"Make our peace with heaven."

The wind blew still stronger, the house began to shake, and the excited man exclaimed:—

"Jones, you lost five bushels of wheat last fall?"

"Yes."

"And you have your suspicions?"

"I have; the man who took my wheat had better own up."

"Can you forgive him?"

"I can."

"Well—"

Here the wind suddenly dropped, and after a look through the window, the conscience-stricken man turned and finished:—

"Yes, if I ever meet him I'll advise him to call around!"—Detroit Free Press.

Just in Time.

I have suffered from a severe cough for several years and it had grown so dangerous that I feared that it would result fatally. This winter it was more severe than usual. I began taking Dr. Wilson's Pulmonary Cherry Balsam and soon found that it had cured me, assisting the inflamed lungs to heal. Thus writes G. P. Ayer, Greenfield, N. S. The probability is that if this case had not been taken just when it was there would have been no hope of recovery. Had the remedy been used when the cold was first taken there can be no doubt the disease would have been cured at once, and what years of pain, anxiety and weakness would have been spared. There are many others to day who would receive as much benefit from this remedy as Mr. Ayer did.

The report of the physicians of Garden Island Hospital discloses an alarming condition of affairs on board a transatlantic steamer. Twelve children in the steerage of the Nemesis, from Rotterdam, died en route, and five in the hospital after arrival. These deaths are attributed to the bad drinking water and the neglect of the ship's surgeon.

GARIBALDI.

ROME, June 3.—The death of Garibaldi has produced an immense impression. The municipal council last night adjourned on the arrival of the news, and the preformance in the theatres was stopped. A great popular demonstration of sorrow will be arranged. The chamber of Deputies will adjourn. The King sent a despatch to Menotti Garabaldi expresseing grief at the death of the Garibaldi, and the loss the family and country have sustained.

FREE TRADE IN RUM.—The Globe commenting on Sir John Macdonald's statement at Yorkville that he would get an Act passed restoring to municipalities the power of licensing taken away from them by the Ontario License Act, says it would practically mean free trade to liquor, as with two rival licensing bodies it would be impossible to regulate it, and says the promise belongs to that class which Sir John always keeps if he can.

Farm and Garden.

The White Grub and the June Bug.

The ravages of the White Grub are becoming, in this country, almost as serious as those of the related Cockchafer in Europe—indeed the two, though belonging to different genera of insects, are much alike in their habits. The grub passes (probably) three years of its life under ground and is not thought of until, in its last year, it suddenly calls attention to its existence by the mischief it does. A heretofore verdant lawn suddenly becomes brown, and the turf may be rolled up like a rug One may look forward to a crop of strawberries and find the plants wilt in the row, in succession. The nurseryman may find his rows of apple or other young trees suddenly dying, and the flower-grower may find his plants wither without apparent cause. Few connect these troubles with that noisy insect that at evening comes into the house and bumps its head against the walls and ceiling, generally known as the May and June-bug, and also as the Dorbug. The insect probably causes more losees to cultivators than any other. The grub lives some three years under ground, in which state it works its worst. If when a plant is seen to suddenly wilt, it is probable that a White-grub is at work at the root, and the plant should at once be dug up and the grub found, before it can make its way to others. The only method of effectively destroying the insect is to attack it in the beetle state. When a Dor-bug appears in the house, it is an indication that there are others in the trees near-by, and traps should be set for them. The destruction of one female beetle means the prevention of between one and two hundred grubs. During their season many that enter the house may be caught and destroyed by hand. If nothing better than this can be devised, a lamp set in a common tub, but all the better one made by cutting a barrel in halves, in the bottom of which is a few inches of water, with a film of kerosene or other oil floating upon it, will catch and destroy many. The matter is getting to be a serious one, and destruction of the beetles should be a work of co-operation in order to be effective. In this, as in many other cases, the utility of Farmer's Clubs, to secure united action throughout the neighborhood, is manifested.

Can't Get it.

Diabetes, Bright's Disease, Kidney, Urinary or Liver Complaints cannot be contracted by you and your family if Hop Bitters are used, and if you already have any of these diseases Hop Bitters is the only medicine that will positively cure you. Don't forget this, and don't get some puffed up stuff that will only harm you. 2w42.

Raise Your Own Seed Corn.

The time to plan for this is now while the corn crop is going in, or under cultivation. It is a reasonable thing to say that a tenth may be added to the yield of corn on any farm by using seed that has been raised for the purpose. Not much attention is paid to the selection of seed by the average farmer. The man who reads and thinks about the seed used for his crops, selects the best he can find in his crib at planting time, and finds that this pays. It pays still better to select ears from the field the fall previous to planting, from stalks that bear two or more perfect ears. A better practice still is to plant the corn for seed in a small patch by itself, and guard it against all the accidents that must attend its growth and cultivation in the larger field. The ground should be especially prepared for this purpose, and made rich enough to supply all the wants of the plant. It should be thoroughly cultivated every two or three weeks, until the grain is full in the ear. Like produces like, in corn as in cattle, and the silk and the tassel are both factors in giving character to the ear. Though the male and female blossoms in the corn are upon the same plant, there is no security for self fertilization when any plant is grown in the open field. The pollen from a barren stalk may fall upon the ear grown from selected seed, and this ear may be imperfect, or be a cob with little or no corn on it. If the ears selected for seed have been fertilized by a nubben stalk, the nubben imperfection goes down to posterity. In a small piece of corn planted remote from other corn we may guard against the accidents of promiscuous fertilization, and secure, as far as possible, corn with a good pedigree, and perfect after its kind. All barren stalks should be cut out, and no more stalks be left in the hill than will give perfect ears. If the owner will select from the patch the earliest and best formed ears for his seed, and follow up this practice for a few years, he will have a new variety and a large increase in his yield.—American Agriculturist for June.

Egg-Eating Hens.

It is a serious drawback upon the profits of the poultry yard when the hens eat the eggs, and this is generally brought on in their confinement in summer, to which most villagers and some farmers have to resort. This seldom occurs in flocks that have their liberty. In this case as in many another, and ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. The craving for animal food is met by the great numbers of insects in the summer. With a supply of grain the flock at liberty gathers enough animal food. If cut off from it, it must be supplied in their confinment. The maximum production of eggs cannot be kept up without it. One of the cheapest and most effectual sources for those who keep a cow is skimmed milk. All kinds of poultry become very fond of this, and with green food and grain will do fairly well in a large yard. Other sources of supply are butcher's offal, fish offal, chandler's greaves. Hens finding other animal food respect their own eggs. In obstinate cases the only cure is the hatchet.—American Agriculturist for June.

What can be Sown in June.

Those who have a time of "making garden" in early spring, and doing up the sowing all at once, do not get the greatest good from their gardens. There are many vegetables of which the season can be greatly prolonged by making successive sowings. A striking example of this is Sweet Corn, which, by judicious sowing may be had every day until frost stops its growth. In many localities, the most thoroughly tropical plants, such as Lima Beans, Okra, and the Melons, do better if put in now than if sown earlier. For succession, after the first sowing, put in Bush Beans, Beets (allowing plenty to be used as beet greens), Cucumbers, and other pickle plants. Carrots, Kohi Rabi, and Salsify, are among those that may still be sown and make a crop before the frost arrives. —American Agricultvrist for June.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

From the Oneonta Press, N. Y.

Oneonta, New York, Jan. 6th, 1881.

Early last summer Messrs. B. J. Kendall & Co., of Enosburgh Falls, Vt., made a contract with the publishers of the Press for a half column advertisement for one year setting forth the merits of Kendall's Spavin Cure. At the same time we secured from the firm a quantity of books, entitled Dr. Kendall's Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases, which we are giving to advance paying subscribers to the Press as a premium.

About the time the advertisement first appeared in this paper Mr. P. G. Schermerhorn, who resides near Colliers, had a spavined horse. He read the advertisement and concluded to test the efficacy of the remedy, although his friends laughed at his credulity. He bought a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and commenced using it on the horse in accordance with the directions, and he informed us this week that it effected such a complete cure that an expert horseman, who examined the animal recently, could find no trace of the spavin or the place where it had been located. Mr. Schermerhorn has since secured a copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases, which he prizes very highly and would be loth to part with at any price, provided he could not obtain another copy. So much for advertising reliable articles.

From a Prominent Physician.

Washingtonville, Ohio, June 17th, 1880.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—Reading your advertisement, in Turf, Field and Farm, of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and having a valuable and speedy Horse which had been lame from spavin for eighteen months, I sent to you for a bottle by express, which in six weeks removed all lameness and enlargement and a large splint from another horse, and both horses are to-day as sound as colts. The one bottle was worth to me one hundred dollars.

Respectfully yours,
H. A. BERTOLETT, M. D.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Fremont, Ohio, Jan. 25th, 1881.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I think it my duty to render you my thanks for benefits and profits which I have derived from your invaluable and far famed Spavin Cure. My cousin and I had a valuable stallion worth $4,000 which had a very bad spavin, and was pronounced by 4 eminent Veterinary Surgeons beyond cure, and that the horse was done for ever. As a last resort I advised my cousin to try a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure. It had a magical effect, the third bottle cured it and the horse is as well as ever. Dr. Dick, of Edinburgh, the eminent Veterinary Surgeon, was an uncle of mine, and I take great interest in assisting his profession.

Yours truly,
JAMES A. WILSON,
Civil Engineer

Kendall's Spavin Cure

ON HUMAN FLESH.

It has been used in thousands of cases on human flesh with such wonderful success that we now feel certain it is the best liniment known for man, as it has sufficient strength to penetrate and virtue to cure the worst cases, which are not affected in the least by ordinary liniments, and yet does no blister or cause a sore.

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 25th, 1880.

B. J. KENDALL & Co., Sirs:—Enclosed find twenty-five cents for your recently published Horse book—the revised edition. I have used your Spavin Cure, in bad cases, with very fine results, and I would not be without it for four times the amount per bottle. It is equally as good for man as for beast. I fell from a high tree about four years ago, and have complained of my back ever since, until about two months ago I began using Kendall's Spavin Cure, and have not been able to complain since. My doctor says that he had expected me to be a cripple for life, as he could do nothing for my spine. Please send the book to

CHARLES L. OOTHOUT,
Toll Gate, Troy Road, Albany, N. Y.

Kendall's Spavin Cure

Is sure in its effects, mild in its action, as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach any deep seated pain or remove any bony growth or other enlargements, such as spavins, splints, curbs, calous, sprains, swellings, and any lameness and enlargements of the joints or limbs, or for rheumatism in man and any purpose for which a liniment is used for man and beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild, and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for Illustrated Circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All Druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors, DR. B. J. Kendall & Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

NOTICE TO BORROWERS.

PERSONS in the District of St. Francis desirous of effecting loans of money with the Credit Foncier, can do so by applying to the undersigned. This new system will undoubtedly necessitate long explanations to place the borrower in position to understand the working thereof. People must, as much as possible, communicate verbally with me. In order to put more celebrity in the negotiations of loans, here is what the borrowers will, at the beginning, have to furnish me with—

1st. The claim of titles.
2nd. The certificate of the Municipal Valuation
3rd, A certificate from the Registry Office.
4th. A certificate of the state of the property.
5th. A statement of the revenue of the property showing how the borrower expects to meet the annuity.

Borrowers will never obtain loans for more than one-half of the real value of the property. If, however, more is asked, let no one be surprised if their demand is not granted. Borrowers worthy of confidence by regular and economical habits, by their industry and assiduity to work, are sure to be well treated. The fact that a person will have obtained a loan from this financial institution, will be a good certificate in favor of such person.

I will take the liberty to add with pride that all the inhabitants of the Eastern Townships, with few exceptions, will merit the confidence of the officers of the Credit Foncier, and that they can apply to this institution with all security. Apply to
