LONDON, Oct. 21.—It is said that Bismarck has required the foreign ministers at Paris to communicate with their Governments only by open despatches.

Later dates have been received from Paris. Breech-loaders were being made in the city. The Prussians had evacuated Meung and Beaugency. The people were subscribing freely for the defence of the capital.

The negotiations for the surrender of Metz have failed, and the envoy has returned to the beleaguered town. Gen. Bazaine proposed the surrender of all his own army on the same terms as at Sedan, except that the regular garrison of Metz should continue to hold the fortress, thus releasing at least half the investing army. Gen Moltke refused these terms, because a reduced garrison could hold out longer. An entire surrender is expected early.

Bitche was yesterday invested by 8,000 men with heavy guns from Strasbourg. The siege will be pushed.

A violent storm passed over the seat of war around Paris last night.

The department of the Somme has been declared in a state of siege, and energetic preparations have been made at Amiens, the capital, for defence.

A force of 30,000 Prussians, which was advancing on the city, has returned to Breteuil.

The French squadron was seen off Heligoland on Tuesday evening. A Hamburg despatch of to-day reports that nothing has since been seen of them.

The Manchester Examiner has a report from Berlin which confirms the report that Bazaine has offered to sell Metz for the Regency with the Prince Imperial.

A Prussian attack on Bourges is probable, as that city has a large arsenal and several foundries. It is believed that a formal summons to surrender will precede the bombardment of Paris.

TOURS, Oct. 20, evening.—It is positively contradicted by the French Government that Boyer's mission to King William related to the capitulation of Bazaine, and it is now stated that this object was to urge permission to remove the women, children and invalids from Metz, for humanity's sake, which was positively refused.

Gambetta urges the strongest arbitrary measures against the disaffected political persons who are agitating Lyons, Rouen, Tours, and other places, and says that at present such persons are dangerous enemies and traitors to the country, and should be treated as such. Other members of the Government are more timid, and fear compromising Republican principles.

Preparations are completed for the removal of the Government departments to the South at a moment's notice. The papers, books, &c., are kept packed, with the exception of such as are required for immediate use, and a strong force of mounted guards is ready at all hours to start, acting as escort.

The sailor states that the steamer "Cambria," of the Anchor line, from New York, struck at 10 o'clock the night previous on Innistrahull Island, and became a total wreck. Four other boats containing passengers left the steamer, but are not yet heard of. The sailor reports that his own boat upset, and all in it but himself were drowned.

The Catholic hierarchy of Great Britain have issued a protest against the action of the Italian Government in occupying Papal territory. They call upon all good Catholics to form prayer unions to protest against the treatment of the Pope, and to prepare documents on the subject, which may be made the basis of an appeal to the British Parliament.

The Pall Mall Gazette has an article on the Government control of telegraphs, in which it adduces facts and figures to show that the business of telegraphing has declined since the postal department assumed its management. It says the estimates in the budget of the Chancellor of the Exchequer are belied by the event. So far from realizing a profit, £120,000 deficit is predicted by Mr. Lowe for telegraph service.

The Pall Mall Gazette, referring to the appointment of Mr. Morton as U.S. Minister to the Court of St. James, says:—A thoroughly incompetent person is selected to represent the United States in England, and is instructed first to bully and next to threaten war. This incompetent person hesitates, probably preferring a domestic skirmish with the Democrats to war with England.

FLORENCE, Oct. 21st.—Signor Sella, Minister of Finance, says a transfer of the capital to Rome is no longer doubtful, but it requires the sanction of parliament.

The reported candidature of the Duke of Aosta for the throne of Spain has been definitely accepted.

The object of Keratry's visit to this city is variously stated. He has made no official announcement of his mission to the Government. The impression is that he seeks to form an offensive and defensive alliance by representing that Italy will join France if Spain does. Should this be his purpose, he will certainly fail.

LONDON, October 21.—The ship "Odessa," with a cargo of petroleum from New York, is stranded at the mouth of the Weser. Her crew saved.

The 28th of Oct. has been fixed as the day for the King to enter Rome.

THE LIBERATED FENIANS.

Some of the United States journals speak our pretty freely on this subject. The Rochester Express says:—

The pardoned Fenians are very independent fellows. After their release from prison, instead of going quietly to their homes, as would have been becoming, they were surrounded by their friends and made speeches, in which they thanked no party or administration for their release, but evidently considered it a matter of right. We are afraid that our Government has been mistaken in its mild treatment of these worthies. After a pardon, of course nothing can be done against them, but the pardon was granted solely on the assumption that they were sorry for their acts, and would behave better in future. If they do not, all we can say is, that if captured again we hope they will be taken by the Canadian authorities, in which case they will be apt to get what they richly deserve.

The Buffalo Courier, regarding the action of the United States Government in a political light, says:—It did not need sharp optical powers to discern that the administration, in pardoning out the imprisoned Fenian leaders three weeks before election, was not actuated wholly by disinterested motives. That the transaction was purely a stroke of party strategy is now shown by a little recital in the New York Herald of Sunday. "On the 13th of October," says that paper, "an agent of the Republican party called at the Auburn State prison to impress upon Gen. Starr and Messrs. Thompson and Mannix the extent of the clemency extended to them, and their great obligation to the Republican party therefor, and to secure them as missionaries to go through the state and convert all the Fenians they could and make them vote the Republican ticket. But their efforts proved wholly unsuccessful. These gentlemen, who had suffered so much for their cause and been subjected to the degradation of being associated with felons and convicts, declared that they would not sell their principles at any price, and that whenever they should be released they would, on the contrary, do their utmost to aid in the triumphant election of the Democratic ticket. And thus another little game of the Republicans has been spoiled." Served them right!

The St. Albans Messenger says:—The Canadians do not exactly relish the pardon of the Fenians, and we do not know as the fact is much to be wondered at.

NEGRO REVOLT IN MARTINIQUE.—The troubles of France seem to have reached her West India possessions. News has come of a negro insurrection in the Island of Martinique. On the news arriving at that Island of the surrender at Sedan and the proclamation of a Republic, the Governor issued a proclamation stating that Martinique had ceased to be a possession of the Empire, and, instead, became a portion of the Republic of France.

The next day the blacks in the eastern portion of the Island proclaimed the "Republic of Martinique," wherein the African element would predominate in the Government, something after the manner of Hayti. Some destruction of property seems to have ensued, and several persons were killed in offering resistance to these lawless proceedings. There are only a few hundred military on the Island, and though the revolt seems to have met with a temporary check in several encounters, wherein many of the revolters were killed, it is feared that should the insurrection spread over the Island the scenes at the revolt of Hayti at the close of the last century may be repeated. The sanguinary nature of the contest, should it be further provoked, is foreshadowed in the fact that a considerable number of colored prisoners who had been taken in one of the encounters were shot, in revenge for their destruction of property.

American writers see in this revolt a chance for the United States getting a foothold in the West Indies. It is stated that it was with the idea of requiring a portion of the Antilles from France that the Government of the United States have refused to prohibit the exportation of arms and other contraband of war to that country from the States. Three things, it is affirmed, are left to France; namely, to attempt the reduction of the colonies, to allow them by default to become independent, or, while they are yet French, dispose of them to the United States. This latter, says the N. Y. World, seems the most feasible one now under discussion.

LOSS OF THE "CAMBRIA."—The "Anchor Line" has lost another vessel. Our readers will remember that the "Hibernia" and the "United Kingdom" were lost formerly, and now it seems the "Cambria" is gone too, having been wrecked off the coast of Ireland. Only one person, a sailor, is at present known to have escaped. He was in a boat which was picked up off Innishowen Head, and states that the vessel struck at ten o'clock of the previous night on Innistrahull Island, and became a total wreck. Four other boats with passengers left the steamer, but have not yet been heard of. The "Anchor Line" has certainly been singularly unfortunate. There seems to be no doubt that there was rough weather; and it would also seem that the vessel, in rounding Innishowen Head, on the mainland, kept too close in shore, not bearing far enough to the northward, and consequently ran on the Island of Innistrahull. The "Cambria" was from New York and had a hundred and fifty passengers on board besides the crew, every one of whom is supposed to be lost. Still it would be premature to conclude that this has been the case, and the public, and the friends and relatives of those on board will wait with great anxiety for further particulars.

EDUCATIONAL.—We have received the report of the Minister of Public Instruction of the Province of Quebec for the year 1868, and in part for the year 1869. These Blue-books lose much of their interest, and even of their value, by being so delayed in their appearance. The present one contains information much of which has, in substance, already appeared in the newspapers. Many of its pages are devoted to the subject of the policy of giving instruction in agriculture in our public schools; the weight of evidence and of argument leaning to the affirmative side.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY.—Mr. Thomas Hughes has visited the Cornell University at Ithaca, where his celebrated countryman, Prof. Goldwin Smith, holds a distinguished position. Mr. Hughes met with a most cordial reception, and addressed some plain and practical remarks to the students, as being members of a University which was yet merely an experiment. Mr. Hughes seems to make a very favorable impression wherever he goes. He is no orator; but what he says has the ring of honesty, and his goodwill towards the States is not less undoubted than is his loyalty to his own country.

— In our supplement to-day will be found as rich a variety of religious literature as we could select and crowd into the space.

— Dr. Jewett will address the Sabbath Afternoon Meeting to-morrow.

THE CENSUS.—La Minerve says Messrs. Piché and Lowe have been appointed superintendents of the Census for the district of Montreal.

HOLINESS VERSUS PROFANATION.

(To the Editor of the Witness.)

SIR,—In your editorial of to-day having reference to the street cars and private carriages, it appears to me that you have not pressed the point sufficiently which tends to weaken the argument contrasting the use of private carriages and that of the street cars—namely: The carriages referred to by our Mayor take their occupants to church to worship God;—Where do the cars take their passengers to? That's the point.

If the cars will take all that ride in them on Sunday to some place of worship, like the private carriages, and if these parties will not go without cars, I would say bring them out and have "Holiness unto the Lord" printed upon the harness of the horses. Yours, &c.,

CITY ITEMS.

FIRE.—About one o'clock yesterday the roofing of the boiler house of the dyeing department of Wood's Factory, St. Gabriel Locks, caught fire, which was put out by the firemen before any considerable damage was done.

DR. JEWETT AT ST. PATRICK'S HALL.—Arrangements have been made to give the whole of the time of the Sabbath Afternoon Temperance meeting to Dr. Jewett who has consented to be present. His subject will be "The harmony of the Divine Word with teachings of Modern Science, relative to the use of intoxicating liquors and their relation to human welfare." In order to afford all an opportunity to hear this most eminent scholar and lecturer, the meeting will be held in St. Patrick's large Hall and will commence at half past 3. A collection will be taken up.

THE LECTURE TO-NIGHT.—We beg to remind our readers of Dr. Jewett's fourth lecture this evening in Mechanics' Hall. We hesitate not in saying that, if the public knew what they are losing by missing these lectures, the Hall would prove far too small for the audiences that would attend. An opportunity of learning so much at so small a cost is rarely offered to a Montreal audience. We would urge all who can do so to go and hear the Doctor. He lectures to-night and Monday.

DORCHESTER STREET WESLEYAN CHURCH.—The winter session of the Young Men's Christian Association of the above church was opened last night by a public entertainment, at which an unusually large number were present, many of them being friends from other churches. After tea, the chair having been taken by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Meachem, the choir sang with great taste the opening anthem, "I will Extol Thee." The Chairman, taking for his theme the subject of "Christian Cheerfulness," gave an admirable portraiture of what should ever be a distinguishing characteristic of Christian deportment. Mr. Benn, in an essay on "Robert Burns and his Poetry," evinced no small degree of elocutionary ability, the "Cottar's Saturday Night" being recited with great tenderness, and Mr. Dawson's paper on "Ireland" was equally well received for its humor. Among other features of the musical part of the programme, a solo by a lady amateur, "Christmas Chimes," with cornet obligato, elicited a hearty encore.

TEACHERS' CONVENTION.—The sixth Annual Provincial Convention of Teachers, was opened yesterday afternoon in the Hall of McGill Normal School. Mr. Justice Torrance presided. There was a fair attendance of Teachers, and among those present were Principal Dawson, Principal Hicks, Dr. Graham, Dr. Mills and others. After some informal business, a paper was read by Prof. Duval, on "The best methods of teaching the French language in English schools."

During the half-hour occupied in the discussion, opinions seemed to be divided. Professors Hicks and Howe and others were in favor of the student being well grounded in the French grammer. Professor Duval and others were in favor of more attention being given to the conversational portions of the lessons. The meeting finally adjourned at 4 o'clock until this evening at 8 p m, when the President and others will deliver addresses.

SPECIAL CASES.—During the past few days several persons have been brought up before the Recorder's Court on special complaints, viz:

Francis Wilson, an agent, only 21 years of age, residing in Bonaventure street, went to the Chaboillez Square police station on Wednesday night and stated that he had been drinking hard for some days, and that day he felt as if he was about to become insane.

Wilson requested to be locked up, as he was afraid of himself. As he appeared to be bordering on delirium tremens, the serjeant locked Wilson in the cell, and on the following morning His Honor committed him, on a medical certificate, to jail as a dangerous lunatic.

Augustin Basinait, a peddlar of threescore years of age, from the Quebec Suburbs, got drunk on Wednesday and behaved in very insulting manner towards two women in the house where he lodged. He was fined $12 and costs, or two months in jail.

In the case of the young man Wm. Geo. Walsh William street, an apprentice cooper, arrested on a charge of deserting his employment, the complainant abandoned the prosecution on $3.50 of costs being paid.

John Carlisle, cabinet maker and furniture dealer, doing business in Notre Dame street, and residing in Champ de Mars street, was brought up on Tuesday charged with assaulting and beating his wife. The latter stated that for ten days previous he had been drinking and beat her on several occasions. The prisoner had previously been sent to jail for the same cowardly practice, but his wife, before his term was half expired, took pity on him, and although he had used her cruelly procured his discharge. This was within the preceding fortnight. His Honor, from the evidence adduced, said that prisoner's conduct had been very bad towards his wife, and extended over a long period. He had hoped that Carlisle would have turned over a new leaf ere this, as it was not long since that one of his associates had fallen a victim to drink. His, Carlisle's, conduct had been so aggravated, that the Court committed him to jail for one month, without the option of a fine. The prisoner pleaded that the latter part be withdrawn, and that he be allowed the alternative of paying a fine. The Court refused, remarking that it would be punishing his family, who would, no doubt, after a few days, pay the money and get him out. His Honor told Carlisle that he was committed for thirty days to jail that he might be punished, and during that time he would have ample leisure to take a retrospect of his past intemperate life and resolve to reform before it was too late.

John Creagan, 19, a young rowdy of Griffintown notoriety, against whom a warrant has been out since the 10th inst. for smashing a glass door, was brought up on Thursday and committed to jail for two months.

DAMAGE TO SHIPPING ON THE ST. LAWRENCE.—A contemporary publishes the following report of Captain Short, of the SS "Merritt," from Montreal to Quebec:—Oct. 18th at 5 a.m. got under way. Saw a small tug ashore at Long Point; two barges ashore above Lavaltrie Light; a tug-boat at anchor at the lower end of the islands, and two barges ashore. 8.30, passing Sorel.—10 40, second Lightship, Lake St. Peter; blowing a gale. Arrived in Quebec, and moored alongside the S S "Prussian" at 1 p m.

COAL OIL.—Since our last reports the arrivals by Grand Trunk and steamship have not been quite equal to the demand—country merchants having commenced to buy their winter supply. The stock of Refined Oil at present in store does not exceed 1,500 brls, which, at this season, is small, compared with former years. Western Refiners are not anxious to sell ahead, as the moment war ceases shipping to Europe will be resumed. Last week one vessel cleared from this port for Liverpool with about 1,600 brls., shipped by two Western Refiners. Crude keeps steady at $1 60 to $1.70 at the wells, while Refined brings 21c to 21½c in London (Western gauge); prices here by the car-load (58 brls) are 24½c to 25c, regauged; broken lots of 20 brls and upwards, 25½c to 26½; single brls. delivered in the city, 27½c; Retail, 30c to 40c.

LOSS OF S. S. "CAMBRIA."

NEW YORK, Oct. 22nd.—The total loss of the S.S. "Cambria," is fully confirmed, and there is little to give hope that the passengers who had taken to the boats have escaped. The coast is a very dangerous one, and it is evident from the upsetting of the one boat from which the single survivor of the wreck was picked up, that the sea was very rough at the time of the disaster. Nevertheless those who had friends on board, need not be in haste to imagine the worst. The coast is admirably guarded by expert and adventurous men, and it is not impossible that if the boats are driven ashore, some of the passengers were saved.

The "Cambria" was considered in sound condition, and has ever been regarded as the finest vessel on any of the ocean lines. She was but recently rebuilt thoroughly of iron, and in every way prepared for the severest contests with wind or wave. From the meagre despatches, it can be surmised that the vessel ran foul of some of the innumerable islands off the North Coast of Ireland, and before she could be got off worked to pieces by the continual dashing of the waves.

It is possible that the boats may have reached some of the innumerable islands about the coast. Captain Carnaghan, commander of the "Cambria" during this ill-fated voyage, was one of the most experienced and skilful naval officers visiting this port. He has been in command of vessels of the Anchor line for several years, and was thoroughly conversant with the navigation of the transatlantic route to Glasgow.

The "Cambria" had one hundred and fifty passengers besides crew on board, every one of whom is supposed to be lost.

OTHER MARINE DISASTERS.

Other less fatal but still serious marine losses are reported this morning, many of them on our own coast. Late gales were everywhere dangerous, and we may expect to hear for several days of serious wrecks along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

SPAIN DECLINES TO HELP FRANCE.

A Berlin despatch says it is stated officially that the French Charge d'Affaires at the Spanish Court in Madrid had asked Government, for the interest and preservation of the Latin race, to send to France an army of 50,000 Spanish soldiers to assist in resisting the Prussians. This proposal was positively declined by the Spanish Government.

The carpets, gasaliers, mirror, and hall furniture are excellent, and in the best possible order. The dining-room and library furniture are solid oak, by Morice, and unsurpassed. The piano is a rich toned instrument, and selected for its brilliancy by the late John Bethune. A good "Spencer" breach-loader and double-barrel fowling-piece, with case, will also be sold. Permits to view the furniture during all Monday can be obtained from the Subscriber's office ONLY. The sale is on Tuesday morning, at Ten o'clock.—JOHN J. ARNTON, Auctioneer.

—The Great Book Sale of the estate of Richard Worthington, with the additional sale of over one hundred cases, comprising as it does, in great quantities, the latest editions of most valuable works in nearly every department of literature, is a literary event in the annals of Canada that should command general attention, for nothing strikes a stranger as more singular, or tends more to lower his estimate of our population, than the paucity of useful books in even our best homes. Such an opportunity cannot for many years occur for completing private libraries or the libraries of Schools and Public Institutions, and booksellers from all quarters may safely provide themselves with a full supply that will be taken off their hands by regular business. The Sale commences positively on Tuesday, the 25th instant, at 11 o'clock a m.

LOSS OF S. S. "CAMBRIA"—FURTHER.

LONDONDERRY, Oct. 21, midnight.—Vessels just returned from the scene of the "Cambria's" disaster report that they discovered only a lot of broken spars and a few barrels of flour which formed part of her cargo. Nothing has yet been heard of the three small boats which put out from the "Cambria" when she struck. Hope for their safety has not yet been entirely abandoned, but McGartland reports that a wind little short of a hurricane prevailed at the time, which it would be miraculous for such small craft to weather.

LONDONDERRY, Oct. 22.—Careful examinations of the coasts and waters for miles around the place where the "Cambria" was lost, by river steamers, fail to discover any trace of the missing boats from the "Cambria."

LONDON Oct. 22.—The armistice at Mezieres ended yesterday afternoon. The bridge over the Meuse near that place will be blown up by the Prussians to-day; but the bombardment will not be commenced until more troops and munitions of war can be brought up. The French force within the walls of Mezieres is computed at about five thousand men, and are fragments of various French regiments.

DR. JEWETT'S SECOND LECTURE.

On Thursday night Dr. Jewett gave the second lecture of his temperance course, in Mechanics' Hall, the subject being "The Philosophy of Alcoholic Enslavement; or, How Intoxicating Liquors Obtain the Mastery over the Human Will."

Mr. J. S. Hall occupied the chair, and Rev. Mr. Campbell, Wesleyan, having offered up prayer.

Dr. Jewett began by saying that his first lecture, on the disintegration of tissue, was by no means exhaustive.

STRENGTHENING WINE AND ALE.

He then took up the thread of his argument where he left it at the close of his lecture on Tuesday evening, and glided smoothly and logically into the second phase of the general subject. In recurring to the topic of tissue he observed that in the course of any prostrating disease tissue melted down, and the patient became emaciated; but after the turn the tongue grew moist and clean, the appetite returned with more than its usual heartiness, the digestion was good, and the individual regained his ordinary weight. But, says he, "Doctor, I weary soon; I can't endure much fatigue." Now, at this stage of the case the popular idea is that he must take a little wine, or strengthening ale. But this was a blunder; for whence came this weakness? The man has his appetite and digestion, and sleeps soundly. But it must be borne in mind that his tissues have been disintegrated, and they have been but recently built up,—all is green. His muscles are like those of a youth who has just shot up into the stature of a man. He has a man's size, but he cannot do the work of a man; he lacks endurance. Not wine, not ale; nothing but time and exercise can give strength and firmness to tissue. Yet doctors formerly knew no better than to insist on stimulants.

But there was such a thing as special nutrition for special tissues. Men by continual mental labor, may, and often do, wear down brain and nerve structure faster than they build it up. What is the brain composed of? Largely of albumen and phosphorus. Fish contains both abundantly; hence, give men who have so exhausted their brain and nerve structure a fish diet, in so far as is agreeable to them, and they will recover faster than with the administration of drugs. In fact, the medical profession were beginning to see the importance of special diet to repair special waste.

HOW MEN BECOME INEBRIATES.

But now about the way in which men become drunkards. The audience must have known men who had resolved to stop drinking, yet had from time to time broken their resolutions, and now were lying in despair, and were being swept along by the current of their evil habit down to ruin. Many of these were fine men, men of intellect, scholars; though they were now, like Milton's Satan, rolling in the fiery gulf. How did they get there? It was necessary that the process should be understood; the great thing was to instruct them early, so that beginners might stop in time.

He laid it down as an axiom that no simple stimulant ever conquered the will. Cayenne pepper, ginger, mustard, volatile oils, tea and coffee were stimulants, but did they ever conquer any one? Do tea and coffee make men jump up for them at an untimely hour in the morning, or during the night; and do men pawn their own or their wives' or their children's clothes for them? We become attached to them without being their slaves; but alcoholic liquors make the man who has accustomed himself to them wretched if he cannot get them.

CASE OF A PHYSICIAN IN OHIO.

The lecturer illustrated this last assertion by a melancholy instance which he had met with in Ohio. A gentleman, himself a medical man, had come to hear one of Dr. Jewett's temperance lectures, and at its close requested to have an interview with him. In the quiet of the stranger's office he informed Dr. Jewett that he was one of those unfortunates whom he, the lecturer, had been speaking of. He feared it was now too late for him to strive to amend. He had again and again resolved not to drink another drop, and he had as often fallen by resorting to liquor. "How did you arrive at this state?" Dr. Jewett asked; and he replied that his good resolutions were made, and his vows never to touch intoxicating drink any more were generally offered up at the close of the day, when he was already partially under the influence of liquor, and did not realise the terrible feeling of want which was sure to follow on the morrow if he should try to carry his resolution into effect. In the morning, then, he took tea or coffee at breakfast, but it did not satisfy his need; his vitiated nature clamored for drink, and in the middle of the forenoon he was wretched, and before midday he felt as though he should sink into hell; he trembled from head to foot—he could not control his brain—and at last he rushed out and got liquor; and how he was to escape from this horrible condition he knew not. Now, such men were to be numbered by thousands.

DRUNKENNESS IN HIGH PLACES.

There were at least three of them in the American Legislature—splendid men, and orators, and the speaker supposed we in our Canadian Legislature had as many,—at least he had seen one when at Toronto during Prince Arthur's visit. Yet when these men began to drink, they, like all other drinkers, never dreamed that liquor would enslave them. But they found the demand for the article increased; that the system continually craved to be supplied therewith, and at last they woke up to a sense of their deplorable state, and cried in an agony, "Alas, alas! what shall I do?" These men generally say they will begin to reform by drinking less and less; but they find, instead, that they are drinking more and more, and they are astonished, as well as alarmed; and at length, probably, get into the hopeless condition of the doctor of whom he had just spoken. Such a man formerly drank for pleasure, but he now drinks to escape from misery. His case was a sad one; but there was no escape from his sore plight except by going down into the valley of suffering.

ALCOHOL A NARCOTIC.

The thing he had been dallying with had the power of a narcotic, and there were three stages which a narcotic produced. One of these was exhilaration, caused by a slight injection of alcoholic fumes into the capillary vessels of the brain. These fumes were poisonous. Alcohol was a brain poison. This was a fact that was now admitted by the Medical Faculty. It ranked the third on the list of such brain poisons. It irritated the brain; the flow of blood to it was increased, and when an increased flow of blood goes to an organ there is an increase of functional activity. Another glass of liquor is drunk, and the brain is thereby further irritated; another yet is taken, and then ensues disturbed function; and it is in this second stage that crimes are committed; they are perpetrated in a state of mental bewilderment. Take still another glass, and we have narcotism, or suspended function. The man, in popular phrase, is dead drunk. Scientifically speaking, he is powerfully narcotized; and this condition is very different from being in a state of increased activity. He could not too emphatically declare that the power of alcohol as a narcotic is what enslaves the will.

THE LAW OF INCREASE.

It was the law of increase that did this. This law was inherent in all narcotics. A little chew of tobacco is taken, and this quantity suffices, at first; but at length there must be the full plug, filling the cheek. The man begins with a glass of whiskey and ends with a quart. It was of no use trying to escape this physical law. The man must go with the natural current. The deadening and narcotic nature of alcohol was so great that the lecturer had performed most painful surgical operations upon men when drunk, and they had scarcely winced. It was as good as chloroform. Of this the lecturer gave some instances. A narcotic, say laudanum, does not cure; it only benumbs the nervous system for a time. It gave sleep to the brain, when the patient was deprived of it by wounds or disease. The disease and the medicine were a choice of evils.

THE DANGER OF USING NARCOTICS.

The lecturer then showed the ulterior danger attendant on the use of anodynes, and strongly brought out the grand law, that those who used them must continually increase the dose in order to obtain the required soothing result. These individuals had to narcotise themselves. But the tone of the nerves got lowered, and the person must either relinquish the anodyne altogether or take a bigger dose; the law of its use was as a sliding scale. It was in vain for a man to say he would use caution, be would not take the insidious thing to excess; for he would certainly be found taking larger and yet larger doses by and by. Formerly it was exceedingly common to give infants laudanum. The mother or nurse began by giving five or six drops and at last administered a teaspoonful. That was owing to the working of the law of increase which ruled in connection with these anodynes, or narcotics. A drinker formerly felt good and comfortable on three glasses; but now it takes a quart to make him feel good. And where, pray, did the sin come in? At the fourth or fifth glass, or when? Drinkers sought for abnormal sensations. That was what Eve did. It was the first sin of the race; it was a trying to be happy, in fact, without being good. Neither alcohol, morphine nor tobacco could be given up without suffering, and no physician should tell a patient to use narcotics medicinally, without warning him of the danger.

MODERATE DRINKING.

It was foolish and illogical to practice moderate drinking, and yet condemn the drunkard; for so long as there was drink, there would, by virtue of the physical law of increase to which he had directed attention, continue to be drunkards. There was no relying for safety on education, natural ability, or social or official position, to keep men from becoming the slaves of alcohol. The use of the article must be put a stop to in what is called good and genteel society. To act upon the motto of "letting drink alone" was the only way of safety. Why should a man who is in health call for a glass of brandy, more than he would for tincture of rhubarb, or a dose of senna? for each of them were medicines. The lecturer would still enforce this important lesson—namely, that the law of increase governed in narcotics, and hence the danger connected with their use, and hence the reason why they had such hideous power to enslave the human will.

The lecture was illustrated by several anecdotes, all of them to the point, and enforcing, by example, the principles enunciated. A vein of quiet humor continually cropped out through the strata of the argument, and at the close, Dr. Jewett invited any one present to put questions on the subject he had been discussing and he would endeavor to answer them. No questions were put, and after the doxology had been sung and a benediction pronounced, the meeting broke up.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

PRESBYTERIAN.—A meeting of laymen of the Irish Presbyterian Church has been held in Belfast for the purpose of considering the question of raising an adequate Sustentation Fund for the support of the ministry in lieu of the Regium Donum, of which it has been deprived by the Irish Church Act. The conference was composed of delegates from the various Presbyterian congregations throughout the country, and is said to have been one of the largest and most influential of its class ever held in the north of Ireland. There were upwards of 1,000 persons present, and Mr. John Lytle, J.P., and ex-Mayor of Belfast, was called to preside. In his opening statement he said he was glad to be able to announce that upwards of £22,000 of the £30,000 required in order to bring up the stipends of all the ministers to £100, in place of the £69 received formerly as Regium Donum, had been promised by congregations and individuals as the annual subscription to the new Sustentation Fund, and that the ministers had nobly responded to the request made that they should commute in the interest of the Church. He, however, thought that the Presbyterians of Ireland, with a population of over 80,000 families, should be more liberal to their ministers, and that in place of £30,000 which was aimed at by the conference of laymen last year, a sum of £50,000 should be subscribed annually towards the Sustentation Fund.

— The Mission Board of the United Presbyterian Church have this year, as usual, sent £500 to the Union of Evangelical Churches in France. The welcome grant was remitted to the Rev. Dr. Fisch, of Paris, with a letter of sympathy. In acknowledging it, Dr. Fisch says that it is this year more needed than ever in consequence of the sufferings occasioned by the war, and that the true and hearty sympathy shown both by the grant and the brotherly letter was a great comfort to them in their terribly crushing state. "Our nation (he adds) upheld the Papal See when the Council made a man a god, and as soon as that blasphemy was uttered God thundered, and smote, and smashed, in order that it might be seen that He reigns." Dr. Fisch has also informed the Mission Board that this year, before the declaration of war, their churches had raised for their own support and for their other operations more than £6,000, being an increase of 66 per cent. in three years, and that Dr. de Pressense and M. Bersier were deservedly popular among the Protestants.

— This year, says the United Presbyterian, His Highness Dhuleep Singh has, with his usual noble generosity, signalized the anniversary of his marriage with a gift again to our mission in Egypt of £1,000. Truly he is a nursing father to our mission. It is known to most of our readers that his wife was educated in one of the United Presbyterian mission schools.

EPISCOPAL.—The commutation question is exciting a good deal of interest at present in the Irish Episcopal Church. The adjourned meeting of the Church Convention has been summoned for the 18th inst., and meanwhile there is no small amount of speculation as to the number of the clergy who may commute. One of the Church papers in the South of Ireland states that the next few months will in a great measure determine the future character of their body, and great efforts are being made to increase the subscriptions to the Sustentation Fund, which is now about £300,000.

— We mentioned last week that the eminent Baptist minister, Rev. Dr. Steane, had accepted the invitation of Dr. Blackwood, rector of Myddleton Tyas, to preach in his pulpit. The John Bull, a very High Church journal, says that the Bishop of Ripon has expressed his disapproval of the act, and intimates that disagreeable consequences are to follow. It would be a curious and not very edifying spectacle to find Dr. Robert Bickersteth, the most pronounced Evangelical Bishop on the bench, the first active agent in preventing this practical form of Christian union.

— One of the agents of the British and Foreign Bible Society, in a letter from Rome, states that four, if not six of their colporteurs are in that city, having entered with portions of the Scriptures in company with the Italian soldiers. The agent says that the prominent feeling in the minds of the people is disgust with all that is "papal" in consequence of the proceedings of the Papal authorities; but he trusts wiser and more enlightened feelings as regards the truth will prevail. It is ten years since the Bible was openly offered to the Neapolitans.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION IN ST. JOHN, N. B.—A correspondent writes: "In September last, after much study and prayer, a few Christian ladies met in St. John at a private house, and there in humble dependence upon the Lord, organized an association to be called the 'St. John Young Women's Christian Association,' taking for their motto, 'The love of Christ constraineth us.' There were seven present at this meeting, now we number about thirty-five. After two or three months it was found necessary to remove to a rented room. Additional expenses must be incurred. But with the aid of weekly collections from members of the Association, and a few donations from friends, we stand to-day a loving, united band in the Lord, seeking alone His glory and the salvation of souls. Four denominations are represented, and we enjoy perfect harmony in the work of the Lord. We hope to increase in numbers and power for good. We have five officers, namely: a President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer and Librarian. Our work during the fall, winter and spring consisted in the regular distribution of tracts and Bibles, in the visitation of the sick, and in relieving as far as possible, the distressed. We visited hospitals trying to dispense the "Bread of Life to the hungry." Four cottage prayer-meetings were held in remote parts of the city. Since April 5th we established a mission school, taught by a principal, elected, (term quarterly) and two assistants appointed monthly by President. The school is progressing, sixteen having already joined. Our regular business meeting is held every Saturday afternoon and a monthly prayer-meeting. Unto the Lord Jesus we would ascribe all the glory, for our sufficiency is of Him.

Miscellany.

THE ANGEL AND THE CHILD.

BY PHILIP B. AMMIDON.

An angel bending o'er an infant's slumbers,
Traced his own features as in crystal streams;
And tuning golden strings to heavenly numbers,
Filled with strange melody its baby dreams.

"Fair child, my earthly image, let me lead thee
With tenderest care to fields of endless peace;
Though sore a mother's yearning heart may need thee;
O, what to thee is death save sweet release,
And glad escapes from countless sad to-morrows?
Near thy life's starting-place, I fix its goal;
No stain of earth-born sins or mortal sorrows
Stains the clear whiteness of an infant's soul."

So stooping low, he touched with gentle finger
Dark eyes and lips forever safe from guile,
And bade a ray of sacred beauty linger,—
The bright reflection of an angel's smile.

Then with great wings of fair celestial splendor,
He soars beyond the wild wind's freest breath,
Bearing the babe to its divine Defender.
Mother! the little limbs are cold in death.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR; OR, MRS. BARRY AND HER BOURBON.

(By the Author of "Dr. Willoughby and his Wine.")

CHAP. XXI.

THE SACRIFICE.

"How is the strong staff broken, and the beautiful rod!"

Dr. Sharpe, after many years of successful practice, gradually lost his popularity. I never heard his medical skill doubted; but people said he was growing careless and neglectful of his patients; that the promptitude and decision which, contrasted with old Dr. Burton's deliberation, made him, when he first came among us, extremely popular, were succeeded by a selfishness and love of ease that often left his patients suffering for want of attention. It was whispered, as the cause of this change, that the doctor drank too much wine with his dinner; and though never seen intoxicated,—"to drink and be sober" was one of his favorite axioms—there were times when his head was not so clear, or his hand so steady, as they needed to be in a profession that, beyond all others, requires coolness, skill, and clearness of intellect.

These complaints were greatly to Dr. Barry's advantage. The young man, after years of patient up-hill labor in his profession, was gradually working his way into practice. Yet Dr. Sharpe held the pre-eminence, and the rumors against him assumed no definite form until he was guilty of a piece of mal-practice so utterly stupid and inexcusable in one of his knowledge and experience, and so dreadful in its results, as to draw upon him the indignation of the whole community.

Mr. Elliott was suffering from a severe attack of neuralgia, paying the penalty of overtaxing his nerves and brain, and Dr. Sharpe was his attending physician. The fourth morning of his illness, I called to inquire for him; and his young wife—only eighteen months before, Mr. Elliott brought his bride to the parsonage—met me with a frightened face.

"He is not nearly as well," she said; "he has had two dreadful turns this morning, like spasms, and is in great distress all the time. Dr. Sharpe is out of town, and will not return till noon. I really don't know what to do for him. Dear Mrs. Stanley, can you stay with me?"

She was a timid little blue-eyed woman, nervous, and unused to nursing the sick; and I soon discovered that she was quite helpless in her husband's chamber.

"I have sent for Dr. Barry," she said; "but he is so young I don't like to trust him. O, I wish Dr. Sharpe was here!"

My first glance at Mr. Elliott told me he needed help, and that speedily; and a moment after, with a feeling of great relief, I heard Dr. Barry's quick step in the hall. He examined the patient carefully, and though I watched his face, it betrayed no emotion. Who ever learned anything from a doctor's face when he cared to conceal his feelings? Then he turned to Mrs. Elliott.

"What has your husband taken this morning?" he inquired.

"Only a little gruel, doctor, besides his medicine. Dr. Sharpe was here yesterday, soon after dinner, and said he was doing well. He sat down and wrote a prescription, but told me not to commence giving the new medicine till this morning, because he might not rest as well after it."

"Let me see the medicine," said Dr. Barry.

He shook the bottle, smelt and tasted its contents. "How much has he taken of this?" he inquired.

"Not more than three or four doses, doctor. I commenced giving it to him early this morning. He vomited dreadfully after taking the first dose."

"I must see the prescription," said Dr. Barry. "Will you send for it at once? Stay—I can go quicker myself." He hurried from the room.

I could not in the least understand these proceedings, and Mrs. Elliott exclaimed, "How strangely he acts! O, I wish Dr. Sharpe would come!"

Dr. Barry was back in a moment, for the drug store was just round the corner. He was breathless from the haste he had made, but did not pause an instant to recover himself. He flew to his case of medicines, and for the next two hours worked as I never saw a man work before. He administered powerful antidotes and emetics, using the stomach pump freely; and when no relief was obtained, the distress continuing, accompanied by great faintness and exhaustion, and the difficulty of breathing increasing every moment, he resorted to artificial respiration. He worked silently, except as from time to time he gave me orders how to help him, in a low, stern voice. Of Mrs. Elliott's repeated exclamations, "O, I wish Dr. Sharpe would come!" he took no notice. Before he ceased his efforts, I felt that he was uselessly torturing a dying man, and I whispered to him my fears. He gave me a look of despair and rage I shall never forget.

Dr. Sharpe came at length, entering with his noiseless step. "And how are we this morning?" he commenced to say, but stopped short on seeing the young doctor.

"O Dr. Sharpe," said Mrs. Elliott—

She got no farther, for Dr. Barry seized him by the arm, and led him from the room.

"What does this mean?" said Dr. Sharpe, in astonishment.

For a moment the young man could find no words to reply. He still grasped the doctor's arm, and his eyes fairly blazed with anger.

"What does this mean?" repeated Dr. Sharpe, angrily, and trying to release himself.

"It means," said Sam Barry,—and the words came between his set teeth,—"that you are either a scoundrel or a fool. You have given that sick man, in three or four doses, poison enough to kill an ox."

"You puppy!" said Dr. Sharpe, his face purple with rage, "how dare you use such language to me?"

"Look here," said Dr. Barry, drawing a slip of paper from his pocket, and thrusting it close to the doctor's face; "read your own writing—will you? and tell me what you meant by prescribing an ounce of deadly poison, to be given in twelve doses."

Dr. Sharpe fumbled in his pocket for his spectacles. "Ounce!" said he; "there's no ounce about it. I prescribed a drachm of veratrum viride, to be given in doses of five grains each." He perused the paper carefully. "I declare," said he, changing color, "it is ounce, but I meant drachm."

"In God's name, then, if you meant drachm, why didn't you say drachm? You fool! Have you practised medicine thirty years, and do you make such a blunder as to write ounce when you meant drachm?"

Dr. Sharpe was too much frightened to keep up a show of anger.

"It was a slip of the pencil," he said. "I declare I don't see how I did it, either."

"I do," said Dr. Barry. "You were drunk, sir! You make your boast that no man ever saw you the worse for liquor; but you wrote that prescription when your perception was inaccurate, your reasoning faculties obscure, and your whole brain confused by the wine you drank with your dinner; and in the sight of God, sir, you were drunk! For all the wealth of California I wouldn't put my soul in your soul's stead to-day, for before God you are guilty of the blood of that just man."

He would have said more, for Sam Barry's blood was up; but I touched his arm, and he checked himself.

"You are right, Lizzie," he said, unconsciously calling me by the old name; "this is no place for angry words, and the man's conscience, if he has one, will say harder things than I can speak.—Now go, and look at your work, you coward."

Dr. Sharpe at that moment deserved the name. He stood speechless before his accuser, the paper containing the proof of his guilt shaking in his hand.

He roused himself with an effort.

"Come," he said. "Why do we stand here? We will save him yet."

"It is what I have been trying to do," said Sam Barry, dryly, "for the last two hours."

When we re-entered the sick-room, Mrs. Elliott sprang forward to meet us, and, clinging to Dr. Sharpe's knees, sobbed out, "O doctor, save him! save him!"

At that moment I pitied Dr. Sharpe. He hurried to the bedside, gave one look at the sick man, and turned away.

"Doctor, is it death?" said Mr. Elliott, calmly.

He made no reply, and, after a moment's silence, Dr. Barry answered for him.

"It is death."

"God's will be done," said the minister.

Dr. Barry bent over him. The fierce anger was all gone from his face. His touch was as gentle and delicate as a woman's and his features beautiful in their expression of tenderness and compassion.

"Can I do anything for you?" he said. "Are there any directions you would like to give about your affairs?"

"All settled long ago," he said. "I have not left worldly business for an hour like this. O, hush, my darling!"—to the poor young wife. "Try and bear it as well as you can. Remember we have an eternity to spend together."

* * *

When all was over, I heard Dr. Sharpe speaking earnestly, in a low voice, to Dr. Barry, who heard him in contemptuous silence, and, when he had finished, replied, with a stiff bow, "I shall say nothing, sir." I understood then that he was pledging the young doctor to secrecy; but he might have spared himself the humiliation. When Dr. Barry ran to the drug store, and demanded the prescription made up the previous evening for Mr. Elliott, his urgency admitted of so little delay that no copy of it was taken, nor did the druggist stop even to read the contents of the paper; but his curiosity was excited by the eagerness of the young doctor, and he questioned the clerk who prepared the medicine. The boy remembered putting up an ounce of veratrum viride. "Was he sure that it was an ounce?" "Yes; for he thought it was a large quantity, and looked a second time, to see if he was right."

"Then," said the druggist, very incautiously, "Dr. Sharpe has made a mistake; and if Mr. Elliott has taken that medicine, he is a dead man."

There were people lounging about the store, and the news flew like wildfire; and when Dr. Sharpe left the house of his victim, the mistake and its dreadful consequences were known to half the village.

A sudden death comes with startling power to a community. Especially in a quiet village like ours, where there was little to vary the monotony of every-day life, the unexpected removal by death of the humblest citizen would be noticed and felt by all. But when a man like Mr. Elliott, for many years a resident among us, beloved and revered for his many excellencies, rendered prominent by his holy profession, and personally known to most of the people living in the place, is cut down by a single stroke, it is not strange that the town should be moved to its foundations.

His death was felt to be an overwhelming calamity. A settled gloom hung over the village. Business was, in a measure, suspended. In the families of his own congregation there was great weeping and lamentation. Men, women, and children thronged the parsonage, lingering about, trying to learn the sad particulars, and then, seating themselves, silently remained in the same position for hours. Here and there little groups gathered at the corners of the streets, and talked together in low tones; but the general feeling seemed too deep to be expressed, and there was upon many faces a look of stern, suppressed indignation.

His unfinished sermon, and the pen so reluctantly laid aside that first day of his illness, lay upon his study table. His books of reference, open and scattered about; the Greek Testament he used at his private devotions, close at hand; the little memorandum-book, where, in a late entry, he reminded himself of a pastoral call to be made, a plan for good to be carried out, a poor person visited,—all these told of his busy, crowded, useful life; of the "purposes broken off," of "a sun gone down while it was yet day."

We buried him on a still, bright, summer afternoon. Over the doorstep his feet had trodden so many times, going in and out, in his faithful ministrations, they bore him; down the gravel walk he was wont to pace in the early summer morning, meditating upon his next Sunday's sermon; through the usually busy street, now silent as the grave, where in every store his face, and voice, and the grasp of his hand were familiar; past the green where he used to pause and watch the boys at their play, entering into the excitement of the game, and applauding, with voice and hand, the little fellow who struck the best ball; and then slowly, at the call of the familiar bell, up the hill to his own church, where only the last Sabbath he preached to us from these words: "Here we have no continuing city, but we seek one to come."

He never ascended that hill so slowly before. Many times he has passed us on our way, with a quick, eager step, fresh from his study, his face aglow with enthusiasm, in haste to deliver his message. Coming down after the service, grieved, perhaps, at the inattention of some of his hearers, and, in his self-depreciation, feeling that he had failed to make the desired impression, I have seen him, with drooping head and downcast eyes, walk slowly down the hill; but, loving his work,—it was his meat and his drink to preach the Gospel of Christ,—it was always with a joyous step and a beaming eye that he "went up to the house of God." To-day we followed him for the last time.

They bore him past the lecture-room,—how many words of prayer and exhortation have we there heard from those dear lips!—then slowly up the aisle, till they rested their burden on the altar, over which, with clasped hands, he has blessed for us the sacramental bread and wine. When the casket was opened, we saw the pale face of our minister turned calmly up to the pulpit, from which it had long looked down upon us in love. "And looking steadfastly on him, we saw his face as it had been the face of an angel."

At the grave we sang one of his favorite hymns, and then, "earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust," we laid our treasure in the faithful bosom of the tomb, "in the assured hope of a glorious resurrection."

And we comforted one another with these words:—

"We sorrow not even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so those also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

"For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality.

"So when this corruptible has put on incorruption, and this mortal has put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory.

"O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?"

Among the crowd of mourners who pressed forward to take their last look of the beloved remains, we saw those whom this good man, by long-continued efforts and unwearied gentleness and love, had rescued from the power of an evil habit. His "Band of Hope" was there, with temperance badges on their breasts; and we wondered as they sang their sweet hymn, standing about the grave, for the first time without a leader, whether he who trained those childish voices, and loved so dearly to sing with children on earth, might not have the privilege of training an infant choir in heaven.

There were hard-looking men at Mr. Elliott's funeral—men who paid no outward respect to religion, who never heard him preach in their lives, but who seemed impelled, as it were, to render this tribute to his memory. And among the recipients of his charity it was interesting to hear one and another say, "He was very generous to me, but he charged me not to speak of it;" or, "I am indebted to him for kindnesses which I am not at liberty to mention." But one poor widow told a story, in her homely way, that illustrates one phase of his character so perfectly that I will relate it.

Mr. Elliott came to see her one day, she said, and when he went out of the yard she saw him look at the scanty remains of her wood-pile. Very soon came a large load, which the man who brought it said was sent by a friend. Who this friend was the widow readily guessed. Very early the next morning she was awakened by a slight noise in the yard, and, on rising and lifting the window-curtain a little way, she discovered, in the dim twilight of a winter's morning, her minister, his coat off, hard at work sawing her wood. "I knew," said the old lady, "the good soul came at that hour, long afore folks was up 'cause he didn't want his left hand should know what his right hand was doing,—and I wouldn't have spoilt the blessing for him for anything,—so I just crept back to bed again, and when it was daylight he went away; but the next morning he came back, and so on for three mornings. And I never told of it, nor so much as thanked him. But, O, what wood that was! The Lord's blessing was on it. It seemed as though it would last all winter, and it warmed my heart as much as it warmed my bones."

While such beautiful deeds live in the hearts of his people, can we call our minister dead?

He is not dead, our dear departed friend.
We saw him carried to his narrow bed,
And grieved Affection cried, "Is this the end?"
Yet our hearts whispered, "No, he is not dead."

Call that man dead who has no name to leave,
Whose aimless life 'tis kindness to forget,
Whose memory is as voiceless as his grave.
O, he is dead—our friend is living yet;—

Living in all the blessed doctrines he has taught;
Living in all his bright example shown;
Living in hearts whose burdens he has sought,
Whose cares and sorrows he has made his own.

The orphan and the widow hold him dear;
The Church is honored by the life he led;
His prayers, his sermons, all his labors here,
Are living yet. O, do not call him dead!

There is no death for those who love our Lord;—
Dry all your tears, and raise the drooping eye;—
No death for those who trust in Jesus' word:
"He that believeth Me shall never die."

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

THE HARD MASTER.

CHAPTER IX.—TEMPTATION.

The time at last arrived when Luther had reached the goal of his hopes. His name was enrolled among the medical students at the old college where Doctor Stuart had studied and he had fairly commenced his studies for the profession on which his heart was set.

Never did he feel so utterly alone as in the heart of this great city. He had often fancied what it must be to be lost in a boundless forest; but now he seemed as completely lost in the midst of the throngs that surrounded him. That one so sensitive should be both homesick and heart-sick, was not surprising; but such experiences sometimes do us good. They drive us to the sure Source of comfort, whatever our wants may be. He turned the key to his room, and, kneeling down, commended himself to the care of his heavenly Father. He wrestled in prayer for grace to do right in his new position. A single day's experience was enough to show him that he should need all his moral courage and the abounding grace of Christ to walk here as became a Christian.

"I must take a decided stand on the Lord's side," he thought, as he paced his room, "or I must give it all up. I can't be a half-way Christian here, as I am afraid I have been trying to be. No! With God's help, I will never yield one inch of principle to get favor with the highest. I will try to be courteous and obliging towards everyone; but I must never forget my master's orders."

Again he prayed for strength from on high, and when he went forth again, it was with a light heart and a strong purpose, which nerved his arm for all the difficulties in his way.

It is an easy thing to fall in with the current and drift along smoothly, with mirth and song, down to the cataract at the end. But oh, how hard it is to make headway with wind and tide all against you!

Luther's keen sensibility, which was so lovely a trait in his character, was also a source of the deepest pain to him at times. The first time he entered the operating-room, he fainted dead away, and would have fallen to the floor had he not been saved by the arms of a companion. He was laid out on one of the benches, with his head low, which, indeed, was the best thing that could be done for him and left to come to himself as he could. There were plenty of jeers and smiles in store for him after this; but he bore them all good-humoredly, and so it soon passed over. A little manifestation of anger and resentment would have continued the annoyance until it became almost unendurable.

Again Luther sought for help from on high, to keep a rein on this trying sensitiveness of spirit, which so unnerved him for his duties, and again he was graciously answered. Even while his heart was tortured, there was no steadier head or hand in the company.

"Garvin," said his room-mate,—a cheerful, merry-hearted fellow,—"you must take something to steady you up before you try that operating room again. I am afraid you're not the right stuff to make a doctor of, if you give in so easy. Here's something to put a little spirit in you;" and he pushed towards him a broad, thin flask he took from his trunk.

"No, I thank you, Dayton. I have taken something to strengthen me, though not of that sort. I am not afraid of fainting again, though, of course, I cannot be sure."

"Well, I hope you won't; but if I had been you, I would have knocked down those fellows, who taunted you so. You've got an arm big enough to mow down a swath of those city chaps. Why didn't you show fight?"

"My Captain doesn't give me any such orders," said Luther, smiling. "He tells me as far as lieth in me to 'live peaceably with all men.'"

"You'll get over quoting Scripture before you've been three years in this Hall, or I'll lose my guess!"

"I hope I shall never give over making it my guide-book. It is the only one that can lead us safe to our journey's end."

"Now look here, Garvin, if you want to live peaceably, as you say, just shut up your preaching. I can't and won't stand it! I ain't used to it."

Luther turned to his books with a prayer in his heart that God would yet touch this young man's heart, and make him a true follower of Jesus.

As the days wore on, Luther made good progress in his studies; but had much opposition to face from the thoughtless, careless associates, who were bound to laugh him out of his religion. There were other professing Christians among them; but too many of them "bowed down in the house of Rimmon," resolving to be more consistent when they got out into the world once more, where they would have less to oppose them. Jesus says of those who are ashamed of him here, "Of them will I also be ashamed before my Father and the holy angels."

That is a fearful thought for those who are seeking to keep their light hidden from the eyes of the world.

Yet, notwithstanding all the scoffing the irreligious made at "Parson Garvin," there was not a young man in his class who did not respect him all the more for being true to his colors. If they hated religion, they did like to see one who professed to believe in it, "act like a man, and not like a sneak." The "time-servers" got no credit for their compromising with Satan. Indeed, in most of such cases, Satan gets the largest share, if he does not even take all. "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon."
