

Court upholds city's discretionary powers

BY LAUREEN SWEENEY

The Quebec Court of Appeal has recognized the discretionary powers of Westmount and other municipalities in approving building projects recommended by planning committees of architectural professionals and endorsed by city councils.

The unanimous ruling of three judges November 27 involved a case that has been before the courts for more than three years in which residents of 168 Edgehill Ave. claimed a neighbour's home extension at number 164 had destroyed some of the views and the enjoyment of their home.

It upheld an earlier Superior Court judgment that dismissed the request by Louis Audet and Joycelyne Francoeur, his wife, to have the addition demolished and receive monetary compensation in their case against Richard Cytrynbaum and Westmount.

Audet: 'ordinary citizens' have no redress

"This confirms that we did apply our by-laws in a correct manner based on criteria," said the city's urban planning director Joanne Poirier.

The ruling stated the courts were not the correct venue for determining such aesthetic decisions, and it confirmed the "discretionary" leeway given to planning committees under Quebec's PIIA (Site Planning & Architectural Integration) program.

"We are extremely disappointed," Audet told the

Superhospital update at WMA meeting

On track to provide new types of care

BY LAUREEN SWEENEY

The MUHC superhospital is on track to open in stages at the Glen Yards at the end of 2013 – on time and on budget – and with innovative ways of delivering health-care services.

That's largely due to its set-up as a private-public partnership (PPP), according to St. Clair Armitage, the PPP project director, who addressed the Westmount Municipal Association meeting December 2 at the Westmount Public Library.

One of the main advantages of the PPP structure is that – until the complex opens – "the public, the taxpayer, pays not a single dollar" to the consortium that will be chosen to build and operate it, he said. It is therefore in the best interests of the consortium and its investors to bring the project to fruition as quickly as possible.

But, he explained, "Our project is about patients, not buildings. We are already talking with the bidders about how things can be done differently for the patient."

This includes bringing medical processes to the patient's bedside in the all-single room facility rather than wheeling patients to test and treatments areas. Such planning goes hand-in-hand with the design requirements.

An army of specialists and advisors in numerous areas is currently working with the two bidders to establish needs. This group will continue to oversee the quality of the work during its construction, he said. Ground breaking is slated for the end of 2009.

The most important work we will ever do will be within the walls of our own homes.

Cllr. Martin: Litigation avoidable if neighbours 'made aware'

Westmount Independent. "We have invested considerable funds in trying to get this thing straightened out."

Audet, who is the president and CEO of cable and communications company Cogeco, said he had not decided on future action in the matter.

He said he had been through "a tremendous number of roadblocks" before hiring specialists at his own expense to demonstrate that his neighbour's extension had exceeded the city's limits on site coverage. "We did the work the city should have done," he said, adding that this had led to the initial removal of some of the building.

Without protection from the courts, he said, "ordinary citizens" have no way of obtaining compensation or redress from building projects that are "too large and overbearing" and impede on their properties and views.

The court, he said, "lost an opportunity in building communities because clearly citizens are unhappy with the way a select group of specialists rubber-stamped by the council" makes decisions on such projects.

It is now incumbent on elected and administrative officials, he said, to change approval processes and the granting of permits so that neighbours can be informed of building plans before they are approved.

Cllr. Patrick Martin, who represents the district, said the ruling "should be a wake-up call. With the court reinforcing the city's discretionary powers, it's all the more reason for the council to act as protectors of the citizens who elected them.

"There's an unprecedented number of court cases involving construction permits," he explained, "and there are no winners in such cases. I believe a lot of them could be prevented if neighbours were made aware in advance of what is being contemplated. It's time to have a healthy debate on the protection of views and privacy. There is a reasonable expectation that your micro-neighbourhood will not change drastically."

Another case involving the alleged loss of views by a proposed addition of new storey to a heritage home at 27 Bellevue is currently in deliberation in Superior Court.

Christmas flower display opens

The city's annual display of poinsettia and other seasonal plants can now be seen in the conservatory. The plants have been added as the fall chrysanthemums were phased out.

Arena parking survey taken

Users of the arena were being asked over the weekend (December 6-7) to complete a survey of parking needs concerning the lot across St. Catherine St. behind the Montreal Oral School for the Deaf. The city is considering the installation of pedestrian lights to facilitate the crossing of the busy street.

Rowing to victory

Rowing teams at Dawson College made their mark at the Head of the Fish regatta in Saratoga Springs, NY, at the end of October.

In some of the events, the Men's Open Novice 4+ boat placed first, the Men's Open Light Weight 4+ placed third and the Women's Open Novice 8+ came third. As well, the Men's Novice 8+ placed in the top half of their races.

In other races, the Men's Collegiate 1x boat also recorded a third place time while the Men's Collegiate 2x came second.

"All performed beyond expectation," said Westmounter Gabrielle Murciano, an assistant coach. Over the winter, the team will be training and fundraising for next season.

WESTMOUNT SHOULD DO ITS PART FOR BIKE PATH

I'm grateful to the Westmount Independent for its generosity to citizens' letters. Indeed, this newspaper forum is on my "favourites" list.

I share Ms. An Wyck's ("Bike Path Should be All-Season," November 25, p. 5) utter disappointment over the winter curtailing of the bike path between Atwater and Greene. I regularly find this route hazardous because of heavy traffic. Interrupting the bike path when cyclists are biking year-round is tantamount to creating an accident waiting to happen.

The outrage is doubly felt. Imagine – after years of petitioning – the city of Montréal finally constructs the de Maisonneuve bikeway and keeps it plowed in winter. The bike path's median strip extends a hundred feet west from Atwater. However, Westmount doesn't undertake its part of the project and line its portion of the bikeway with a protective median strip.

The rationale is that there are fewer bikes in winter. What sort of bean counting is this?

Our mayor hasn't yet adjusted to the bike path becoming a transportation route. Ironically, she recently penned an article encouraging Westmounters to be more amenable to change.

The mayor, prepared to throw millions of dollars at the pool arena complex, is ready to compromise cyclists' safety by not implementing a fully operational bike path. What does it take, a debilitating accident, a fatality?

MORE SUPPORT FOR ALL-SEASON BIKE PATH

I must add my voice to that of Deborah van Wyck ("Bike Path Should be All-Season," November 25, p.5) who succinctly made the case for an all-season bike path. As one of many who have eschewed their car as the only means of transport, I too, was jolted to discover cars parked in an area designated strictly for bicycle use.

People daily are experiencing the benefits to their health and the environment from riding their bikes in all seasons. One of the best ways to reduce our overly large carbon footprint is to reduce usage of one of the main carbon-producing culprits, the car.

Restore the bike path link between Greene and Atwater to bicycles and put some clout behind Joshua Wolfe's Sustainability Vision Statement due out in January.

TWO DOGS ARE GREAT

Each week when the Westmount Independent arrives, I find myself turning first to the Underdog page. As a dog owner, I am drawn to this column for both the story-line and its presentation.

In reference to "Two is Better than One" (November 25, p. 13), I can attest to the veracity of the column on the benefits of owning two dogs. As a dog lover who has had two dogs and recently lost one, my own experience mirrors the writer's suggestion that it is, in many ways, much easier to have two dogs who play together and exercise one another. To anyone who might be wavering, I suggest keeping these two dogs together for the company they provide one another and also the joy they give their owners.

As a family bereft by the recent disappearance of one of our dogs, we remain hopeful that we will find her and restore the joy that comes from having two, for our lives are much duller now.

I urge anyone who may be considering taking in these two brothers to take the opportunity and risk being "surprised by joy."

Reporting Back

Democracy at work

BY MARC GARNEAU,
MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT
FOR WESTMOUNT-VILLE MARIE

I could not possibly have entered federal politics at a more interesting time. Having said that, members of parliament are expected to act on behalf of their constituents and Canadians may be asking themselves what is going on in our house of commons.

It began with the presentation of the Economic and Fiscal Statement by the minister of Finance on November 27.

Needed stimulus was absent

Apart from containing certain non-economic measures that angered all of the opposition parties, the document was also criticized for presenting questionable projections about the health of the economy over the next two years.

Salzberg at the Gallery

Westmounter and ceramic sculptor Claire Salzberg will be exhibiting at the Gallery at Victoria Hall until December 18.

Salzberg's ceramic pieces have been described as "full of narrative detail that nostalgically capture the feel of people and their neighborhoods."

The exhibition includes 18 (two and three dimensional) pieces. Many have a strong Montreal theme, including "St. Viateur Bagel Shop", "Lea & Perrins" and "Simcha's Fruit Market".

Salzberg originally taught art in New York City and Maine has been on the faculty of Vanier College for many years.

She has participated in many exhibitions over the years and was featured on the CBC TV program "On the Road Again" in 2004.

Most of all, it was criticized unanimously by all the opposition parties because it did not provide a sufficient number of immediate measures to stimulate the economy, something the government argued would take place when the budget was presented.

This led to the formation of a coalition between the Liberal and New Democratic parties, with the Bloc agreeing to support coalition confidence motions for an 18-month period.

This in turn led to a decision by the prime minister to avoid a vote of confidence that he feared his government would lose, first by delaying a scheduled opposition day and then by asking the governor general to prorogue parliament.

Both sides have argued about the underlying reasons for the coalition.

The opposition parties have argued that it was to put the focus squarely and urgently on job creation and other measures to stimulate the economy, instead of having to wait another two months.

The government, on the other hand, has claimed that it was nothing but an undemocratic lunge for power by three opportunistic opposition parties.

Normal working of parliament

The term "undemocratic" is regrettable because, like it or not, there is nothing undemocratic in a majority of duly elected members of parliament voting against the government, thus signaling non-confidence. That is how parliament works.

In closing, I have heard from many residents in the past two weeks and I would like to thank them for their opinions and suggestions about the party leaders, about the coalition and about the decision to prorogue parliament.

While I have received a lot of feedback, there is broad consensus that parliament's first priority should be to focus constructively on its most immediate priority, the Canadian economy.

Green your holiday

BY ANNIKA MELANSON

The holidays draw out the best in us. But they also bring what seems like an environmentalist's worst nightmare: tons of extra garbage and wasted food, millions of chopped-down trees, and megawatts of flashing lights. Turn over a new, green leaf with these alternatives to some of our traditions:

- Buy an organic turkey that has been treated humanely. Use a cooking pan instead of an aluminum tray for cooking.
- Organize a carpool to your holiday parties and reduce gas emissions.
- Turn off your Christmas lights at night or use a timer to switch them off after you go to bed.
- Instead of giving gift items, treat loved ones to an enjoyable experience: theatre or movie tickets, a membership to a gym, a series of yoga classes or a spa day.
- Take your own re-usable shopping bags with you when you shop and avoid adding to the landfills of plastic bags.
- Try flea markets, estate sales and vintage clothing shops for gifts. Your gift will be unique as well as recycled.
- Check out Coop la Maison Verte (5785 Sherbrooke St. W., 514.486.8000, www.cooplamaisonverte.com) for a great assortment of "green" and fair trade products: personal care products, clothing, coffee, etc.
- If you're having a party, avoid serving food and drinks on disposable plates and cups. Borrow extra supplies from neighbours.
- Choose greeting cards and wrapping paper which contain some recycled paper content. Better yet, use recycled wrapping paper or newspaper to wrap presents. Save money and trees.

- Make your own gifts: a photo album, an artistic creation or something yummy from your kitchen: jams, chutneys and other homemade preserves.
- Create a wonderful holiday ambiance and dine by candlelight. You will save electricity.
- Buy the book, Ecoholic: When You're Addicted to the Planet by Adria Vasil to give as a gift and help spread the word about the importance becoming more green.

Merry Christmas, Happy Hannukah and have a great, green holiday!

Colourfully Yours:

Frugal? Yes. Grinches? No

BY AURELIEN GUILLORY
& GRETA VON SCHMEDLAPP

Well, well, my dears, we're back and we will help you devise an elegant, though frugal holiday season.

First, the atmosphere. Please, please, give all of the lighting in your home a very thorough scrutiny. As I, Greta von Schmedlapp, have observed before, some of the most chic Westmount homes have very low lighting.

"If it was good enough for my mother's home, it's good enough..." You know the rest, but this is no longer the rule!

Well, dear design fiends, please check all the bulbs in that chandelier. Are the bulbs all the same wattage?

Aurel's dicta: One should never see a naked bulb! Glare is the enemy of flattering lighting. Rooms that make everyone look glamorous and make all the elements of a lovely living room really live will reward you with good feelings (and grand compliments from your holiday guests).

Remember, clear bulbs bring out the sparkle in crystal and silver on the table, but they also reveal all the texture in your guests' faces - and that cracked plaster in the front hall mouldings. Parchment or pleated silk lampshades and frosted bulbs give a mellow, soft mood to a room.

Shopping suggestions

Aurel's secret lighting source is Arevco Lighting on our very own Greene Ave., near Sherbrooke, for every weird European bulb or some of those pale pink ones. They will also rewire that family heirloom lamp with a three-way socket and new plug to code. Please do keep all of the decorative Christmas baubles clustered in special places, not just sprinkled everywhere, to allow space for everyone's glasses and small snacks.

Recently, Aurel and I attended the second anniversary of that cute corner shop at the bottom of Mountain St. (number 248). It's called Ludovik, a different and amusing two floors of home décor and gifts. Don't tell everyone, but we find the prices very reasonable and the items unusual.

Now, to the giving part of the holidays: Wasn't it the philosopher Emerson who said "The only gift is a portion of thyself"? Now, dears, don't think that I'm advocating doing the Van Gogh thing with the ear! about such an unthoughtful present. Money may be tight this season, but surely your imagination is boundless. I, Greta von Schmedlapp, hereby promise, with you as my witness, that I will wrap up my mother's crystal earrings and give them to my best girlfriend, as she's been envying them for at least 20 years, and they suit her so well. Just think what a surprise! (And how great I'll feel.)

A super cook we know has given a pretty card to her partner's family as a certificate for a three- or four-course dinner at the time of their choice.

I must also mention the frugal and personal idea of pair of tea cups and saucers from your family's collection. After all, we all know the place at home where you have been saving those abandoned odd sets of porcelain or crystal - for whom? The pope's visit?

Life's short; let's share. Perhaps a subscription to your friend's favourite magazine, and maybe, if it's a cooking mag, you might get to taste some of the results. Special tins of tea, lasting for weeks, are great for after-holiday diets.

Your Greta will return after the winter solstice with many ideas for the new year...and lessons on that delicate subject: Designing for Downsizing!

Do let me hear your ideas from your home. Write to us at aurelien@colors-byaurelien.com. Hugs

New staff at Oral School for Deaf

Several new staff members joined the Montreal Oral School for the Deaf (MOSD) this school year, according to the MOSD's director, Martha Perusse.

The school's mission is to "educate deaf/hearing-impaired individuals from infancy to young adulthood so that they may integrate into society. The focus of the program is to develop spoken language by listening and talking." It is located on the south side of St. Catherine across from the Westmount arena.

Paul Koutas

Now 19 years old, Koutas was diagnosed with a hearing loss at the age of 3 and began attending the MOSD's nursery classes. He was followed by the school's staff all through his school years. In June 2008, he graduated from the Job Opportunities Program at John Grant High School in Côte St. Luc, and now currently works in the preschool program at the MOSD as an attendant-in-training.

Rebecca Loadenthal

Loadenthal studied Early Childhood Education at Concordia and classical voice training in CEGEP and university. This is her second year teaching, and her first contract with the MOSD. Last year, she taught kindergarten in French at Dorval Elementary and was a resource teacher at Westmount Park Elementary. She teaches French to most MOSD classes and teaches math to kindergarten children and grades 3 and 4.

She also teaches phonics as a classroom teacher and assists with the grade 2 and 3 reading centre program. Her other ties to Westmount include her job as a florist at Westmount Florist on Victoria "to put myself through university," - and her husband proposed to her by the pond in Westmount Park!

Jinean Whitley-Cheng

A speech-language pathologist, Whitley-Cheng works with students of all ages. She is a recent graduate of McGill University in this field and has had teaching experience in Asia, Africa, Europe and Central America.

Heather Reckling

Reckling's work in speech-language pathology with children in grades 1 and 6 focuses on listening, speech, language, literacy and self-advocacy, while supporting the child's curriculum. She recently completed a master's degree in Speech-Language Pathology at McGill University. Reckling has worked in Westmount before. Her first McGill placement was with Rainbow Preschool, where she observed children at play.

Casey Finn Lefsrud

Finn Lefsrud is an itinerant high school teacher for the MOSD. Itinerant teachers travel from school to school providing support to students with hearing loss who attend regular schools. They work on further development of listening, speech and language skills as well as vocabulary and concept development to support the curriculum.

Finn Lefsrud also conducts classes for education students at McGill on teaching students with special needs. Finn Lefsrud received her undergraduate and master's degree from Rutgers' University in New Jersey with a specialization in special education. She has taught middle school in New Hampshire and Texas schools. Her jobs have always been as a special educator. She moved to Montreal in June 2007.

TRENDSETTER

NICOLE MAJOR

Nicole Major is a Westmounter who has worked in fashion, the travel industry and real estate. She was a real estate agent for 37 years before retiring two years ago and remembers when a house in Westmount could be purchased for $35,000. The same house today "would probably go for about $800,000 in the same condition," said Major.

Whether she is having lunch at Nick's or socializing at a dinner party, Major is always the picture of elegance.

WI: How would you describe your style?

NM: [Laughs.] My style is practical and classic with some "oomph." I don't wear Prada and all of that...

WI: Do you have a favourite label?

NM: Yves Saint Laurent and Valentino, because they have elegance. It was such a treat to see the recent YSL exhibition at the Museum [of Fine Arts]. I also used to really like Sonia Rykiel. In fact, I still have my first Sonia Rykiel sweater that I bought in Paris many years ago.

WI: Do you have a fashion icon?

NM: French actress Michèle Morgan.

WI: What is your favourite item in your closet?

NM: I love my Anne Fontaine blouses. I also have lots of fun sweaters, shawls and scarves.

WI: What is your favourite accessory?

NM: Silver jewelry. In fact, my daughter Nathalie works for Gas Bijoux in France. She has given me lots of fun stuff.

WI: What inspires your current look?

NM: I enjoy reading Bazaar and other fashion magazines, and get ideas. Then I do my own thing with it. I don't copy Chanel or Prada or Oscar de la Renta. I look at things, and I like to wear what I feel good in. I take bits that fit my lifestyle today and give it my own look. I like the way that the French and Italians buy clothes. They have small closets, so they don't buy many things. But they always look beautiful, well groomed and have sex appeal.

WI: Who is your favourite artist?

NM: Gustav Klimt, all the impressionists, Chagall. I also love the classics like El Greco.

WI: What do you always carry in your purse, no matter what?

NM: My keys.

WI: What are you reading now?

NM: Ken Follett's newest book, World without End. I love historical novels and biographies. I love the little story behind the big story...in French we call it la petite histoire. I read The Economist, which is great. It's totally objective. On holiday, I like to read something crazy and wonderful like The Divorce. It's an escape...it takes your mind off things.

WI: What is your favourite city and why?

NM: My continued on p.14

Among the new arrivals at the Westmount Public Library singled out by staff are:

Browsing the magazines

“The O-list: the 30 people who will rule Obama’s Washington” by Noam Scheier in The New Republic, November 19, 2008, p. 14.

“Mandela’s smile: notes on South Africa’s failed revolution” by Breyton Breyenbach in Harper’s Magazine, December 2008, p. 39.

“Ondes de choc: le téléphone cellulaire peut-il provoquer la formation d’une tumeur? Peut-être que oui; peut-être que non...Alors, si ça sonne, on répond?” by Noémi Mercier in Québec Science, November 2008, p. 18.

Two films for cold nights

The Counterfeiters – winner of the Academy Award in 2008 for Best Foreign Language Film – tells the true story of Salomon Sorowitsch, a swindler who made a name for himself as Berlin’s “King of the Counterfeiters.” However, his life of women and easy money was cut short when he was arrested and placed in a Nazi concentration camp.

Paris je t’aime assembles celebrated directors the Coen Brothers, Gus Van Sant, Gurinder Chadha, Wes Craven, Walter Salles, Alexander Payne and Olivier Assayas portray Paris in a way never before imagined.

Hooray for translators!

Take a look at the translation from French into English category of the Governor-General’s Literary awards – a great way to be introduced to some francophone Canadian authors you have not read before. Three titles in the Library collection are: The Postman’s Round by Denis Thériault (translated by Liedewy Hawk), Nikolski by Nicolas Dickner (translated by Laxer Lederhendler) and Orfeo by Hans-Jurgen Greif (translated by Fred A. Reed).

Award-winning books

Syngué Sabour: La pierre de patience by Atiq Rahimi (Prix Goncourt). In Persian mythology, the “Stone of patience” is a magic rock that one can address to liberate oneself from all the burdens of life. A woman, whose husband is dying of combat wounds, talks to the Stone and spills her hate of her condition as a Muslim woman in a war-torn country. Atiq Rahimi is an Afghan-born writer now living in France.

Là où les tigres sont chez eux by Jean-Marie Blas de Roblès (Prix Medicis). In a remote part of Brazil, a German press correspondent is sent a biography of a 17th century Jesuit, who was a polymath. He decides to find out more about the life of the mysterious Athanase Kirchner.

For kids of all ages

Hockey in Canada series by Don Cruickshank. The six books in this series each cover a different Canadian hockey team in the professional league. Interesting facts about the history of each team are provided as well as insight into hockey positions and the rules of the game.

De tout pour les passionnés de hockey 2 by Eric Zweig. If you are a hockey fan, this book is for you. Fun facts, stories, statistics and portraits of hockey players are covered in this recent edition.

Wine: What’s In Store...

New World labels at SAQ

BY CAROLA PRICE

Did I not just write my December article a few months ago? Where does the time go? I guess it is all a blur through my wine glasses.

I do have some wonderful goodies for you this season however. I have had a great time this year, tasting and note-taking in order for you all to impress your friends and colleagues this holiday season.

Whether you are going out or staying in this year, your lovely SAQ has really ramped up the New World labels and should give you great value for your (ever decreasing) dollar. Wine is a greatly appreciated gift that is used every time!

Enjoy the holidays and remember moderation is always in good taste.

Chenin Blanc, Robertson Winery, South Africa. SAQ#: 10754228. $9.85

This is not the most complex white that I’ve ever encountered, but then for 10 bucks, what do you expect? It is nice, simple and fruity – perfect for turkey or as a starter with oysters or fish canapés. Hints of lemon and green apple with some acidity that finishes very clean represents a great value wine for me.

SAQ available at press time: Victoria, Atwater Market, Across from Atwater Market, Pepsi Forum, Westmount Square.

Fumé Blanc, Hogue Cellars, Washington State. SAQ#: 274829. $14.95

I love the way this wine stays in the mouth. Because I adore oysters in season this is another fabulous match for shellfish and fish of any kind really. Fumé means it’s seen oak, so remember to match it with bigger or more intense flavours. Look for some cedar, gooseberry and floral notes with just a hint of lime.

SAQ available at press time: Victoria, across from Atwater Market.

Tempranillo/Garnacha, Marques de Caçeres, Spain. SAQ#: 10263242. $14.05

Now most people think of rosé in the summer, but for those who don’t want to have a heavy meal and a heavy wine then this has just enough body and loads of flavour in the mouth to do the trick. It starts with hints of strawberry, vanilla, pepper and flowers – and has great body overall.

SAQ available at press time: Victoria, across from Atwater Market, Pepsi Forum

Malbec, Altos las Hormigas Reserva, Argentina. SAQ#: 10692485. $26.80

The flavours of Malbec scream for beef

so enjoy this with prime rib or filet mignon. The reserva has a little more oomph in the mouth than the Malbec, but look for chocolate, plum, blackberry, lead and baking spice in both. The reserva has more dryness in the mouth and a longer finish.

SAQ available at press time: Victoria, across from the Atwater Market.

Grenache/ Syrah/ Mouvedre/ Cinsault, Cigare Volant, Bonny Doon Vineyard, California. SAQ#: 10253386. $40.00

This is a really good wine with a really great story. The best part of this is that it has gone down $10! A Rhone blend wine in true California style; big and bold with loads of fruit in the finish. This dry red blends well with all meats, preferably red and lots of grilled things. In flavour, look for black pepper, red cherry, Twizzler and vanilla.

SAQ available at press time: Victoria, across from Atwater Market, Westmount Square.

QUELQUE CHOSE

...always in good taste

Dear Customer:

It has been two years since I bought Quelque chose and one year since Sophie joined me. How time flies when you are having a good time!

Of course Quelque chose has been designing shades and “saving” old lamps for 35 years. We are still truly “custom” yet the store has evolved into a happy mix of high and low end pieces, old and new, in an understated atmosphere.

We have an excellent line of last minute keepsake Christmas gifts with our special “crystal” wrapping.

Thank you for your business. We wish you peace, love and health. Happy Holidays.

Sincerely,
Annie & Sophie

West Coast experts shed light on possible origins Totem's mysteries unfolding

BY LAUREEN SWEENEY

Mysteries surrounding the origins of the totem pole that Westmount inherited from a summit estate many years ago are slowly unravelling following research efforts by the city as part of the artifact's restoration.

Information from West Coast specialists indicated the totem most likely was carved by young native students of residential schools on Vancouver Island for the tourist trade, said archeologist Virginia Elliott, Westmount's assistant community events coordinator. They would have been reproducing a 19th-century design from the Tlingit people of Alaska.

"Because it comes from native people, knowing its origins is vital," she said. In keeping with tradition, a totem would have a ceremonial resurrection if damaged or knocked over in storm.

It is hoped eventually to display the totem pole at the Westmount Public Library. The city is currently exploring various options regarding its restoration.

Role was to disintegrate

Ironically, she adds, "In its role, the totem is supposed to disintegrate and return to Mother Earth." Totem poles are unique to the Pacific northwest coast, carved and painted to commemorate important events, contain funerary remains or as special monuments.

Recent information has revealed that features of the Westmount pole resemble those of the Kicksetti Memorial totem from Wrangell, Alaska, Elliott said. This pole was erected in the late 19th century in a small community in memory of Chief Kahl-teen. It became a popular model for young carvers.

Westmount's 12-foot totem was a star feature in the Campbell garden at 21 Edgell Hill Rd. It was reportedly brought back from BC by a member of family who had been travelling there in the 1920s. (See Westmount Independent, August 1, 2007.)

After presiding over the tot lot in Westmount Park, it was taken into the greenhouse to prevent further deterioration. Regulating humidity there proved too challenging, however. It has subsequently been moved to the Corporation Yard to gradually stabilize its environment prior to restoration.

The Westmount Horticultural Advisory Committee has generated some $7,000 from the yearly perennial plant sales and other events, including garden tours, for its restoration.

Estimates peg the cost at about $20,000. Before that can be undertaken, the city is trying to establish its value, a process that has become challenging in itself for a historical and irreplaceable artifact, she pointed out. "Finding knowledgeable people in this area is difficult."

THE HEART OF THE FARM

A History of Barns and Fences in the Eastern Townships of Quebec

Text by Louise Abbott
Photographs by Louise Abbott and Niels Jensen

“... in this delightful book ... Abbott and her husband, Niels Jensen, have made a noble effort to preserve what remains [of Townships barns].”

from “Local treasures” by John Kalbfleisch in Montreal Gazette’s Books
section (November 29, 2008)

“one of the most comprehensive portraits of Townships’s history that you are likely to find.”

The Townships Outlet
(October 16, 2008)

“The over four hundred beautiful images, along with a text that entertains as it instructs about the history of barns and rural life in this region, make this book not only a fascinating read, but also a commemoration of the area’s rural heritage, which is disappearing.”

Victoria Vanier, Stanstead Journal (November 19, 2008)

9 Lives: Roxanne

BY LYZANNE

Meet Roxanne! She is a beautiful short-hair calico of about 1 year old. She was homeless outside and followed Elizabeth across a busy intersection and a schoolyard, down three blocks to her home and begged for food and water.

She adores being cuddled and has fun playing, which would definitely make her a wonderful addition to a Westmount family who will give her lots of love in return.

Roxanne will follow you all over the house. She will also keep you warm at night if you let her share your pillow! Call Elizabeth at 514.637.3105 for more information on her or write to her at liz.fred@sympatico.ca.

The adrenaline is always pumping. favourite city to live in today is Montreal. It is a very easy city to live in. The only thing I do not like about Montreal is that the winter is too long! I love New York and Paris, but it's very stressful to live in those cities unless the circumstances are right.
