Members of Canadian Railway Club Who Attended Recent Annual Dinner at the Windsor Hotel

RAILWAYMEN MAKE MERRY AT PLEASANT SOCIAL FUNCTION—The annual dinner of the Canadian Railway Club took place recently at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, on which occasion the above flashlight photograph was taken. The function proved to be a great success, upwards of 250 members of the Club being present. The Club, which is made up of officials and employees of the different Canadian railways, has already proved of inestimable value to those who belong to it. (Photo by Swan Photo Co., Montreal.)

AMERICA'S LAST BIG ROUND-UP OF BUFFALOES—A herd of 350 (the largest ever photographed) in the corrals at Lamont, Alta., into which the animals were turned after having been carefully brought by railway to the Canadian West from the Western States by the Canadian Government. The repatriation of these animals was undertaken by the Government for the purpose of preventing them from becoming extinct. Thirty years ago they roamed in millions over the western plains—now they are numbered only by the thousands.

Owing to the large numbers of immigrants who have poured into Canada during the past few years, the Western Provinces contain at present a very cosmopolitan population, made up of settlers from almost every part of Europe.

The world's great age begins anew,
The golden years return,
The earth doth like a snake renew
Her winter weeds outworn;
Heaven smiles and faiths and empires gleam
Like wrecks of a dissolving dream.

Another Athens shall arise,
And to remoter time
Bequeath, like sunset to the skies,
The splendor of its prime,
And leave, if naught so bright may live,
All earth can take or Heaven can give.

Mr. Augustine Birrell and Lord Morley

THEY WILL ONCE AGAIN WALK BENEATH THE SHADOW OF CROMWELL AND OF RICHARD THE LION-HEARTED TO THE HALL OF ST. STEPHEN'S—On this page are reproduced some life-like photographs of the leading men who took part in the recent epochal election campaign in Great Britain. The break-up of a Parliament is very much like the breaking up of other institutions, and even the most prominent Commoners run a risk of being left at home as the result of an appeal to the country. The statesmen featured in the above illustration met with success in the recent campaign, and they will consequently be members of the new Parliament. Lord Morley, however, is a member of the House of Lords.

An Interesting and Historic Church.

THE ancient church of SS. Peter and Paul at Ormskirk, England, is a magnificent building of great historic interest. It was originally a small Church with low Chancels and Nave, and only one narrow Aisle (south), the North Aisle was added later, and later still both Aisles widened. The Church had low arches like those of the Derby Chapel. Galleries came into fashion in 1739, and as these could not be put against blank walls, the arches were taken away and round pillars substituted; a specimen of which now stands by the path at the entrance to the Churchyard; heavy wall plates rested on these pillars, which supported the nave roof. In 1824 the old oak roof, found to be rotten, was replaced by deal. A round plastered ceiling adorned the nave and chancel, while flat, white-washed ceilings covered the aisles and chapels.

The late Vicar, Canon Sheldon, commenced the restoration of the Church in 1879, by removing the galleries and concreting the floor (7,000 bodies had been interred within the walls of the church). In 1884 the present Vicar, the Rev. J. E. Woodrow, took up the work and carried it on to completion. The total cost, including the Organ, was about £20,000. Everything really old was scrupulously kept, while the work of the Churchwarden period was removed. There is no Chancel Arch—canopied figures—St. Peter and St. Paul, the patron Saints of the Church—mark the division between Nave and Chancel. The tall, graceful arches are

ONE OF GREAT BRITAIN'S MOST HISTORIC AND INTERESTING CHURCHES—The Church of SS. Peter and Paul at Ormskirk, in the diocese of Liverpool. This edifice is quite unique in England, as it is the only church that has a tower and spire which stand side by side. There is an old tradition that it was built by two maiden ladies, daughters of the pirate Orme, after his conversion to Christianity. These ladies agreed to erect a church in commemoration of the event, but one wanted to see it embellished with a tower; the other with a spire. They could not agree, hence each carried out her own idea.

North Wall of the Chancel, built A.D. 1076. The outer arch would be planted on the fact of this A.D. 1150. There are also two Saxon figures built in the outside wall at the East end of the Church possibly from an ancient font.

The East Window is one of the finest modern windows in the North of England, and will bear minute inspection; the glass alone cost £500. The subject is Christ enthroned, the Apostles in Adoration, the two prominent figures being SS. Peter and Paul, to whom the Church is dedicated. The two bottom lights on the right form one picture—the conversion of Saul of Tarsus; the two on the left, Christ's charge to St. Peter; the centre lower light being the angel, emblem of the Gospel.

The Derby Chapel on the south side of the High Chancel has been the burial place of the Derby family for 300 years in the large vault underneath until 1850, when the vault was full and closed. A new vault was built at Knowsley, where the last three Earls are buried. The remains of James, the brave and martyred Earl (who was beheaded for his country) lie here; his body in a short coffin and his head in a square box by its side. The effigies (deeply mutilated by the Puritans) represent the 1st and 3rd Earls of Derby, and the two wives of Thomas, the first Earl; his second wife being the Duchess of Richmond, mother of Henry VII.

The Scarisbrick Chapel is that enclosed with brass rails. The cost of restoring this Chapel in keeping with the rest of the Church was defrayed by the Marquis de Castella, the present Lord of Scarisbrick. The seats are intended for his tenants. The splendid memorial brass is worthy of close inspection.

There is an Old Window in the wall near the pulpit, the bottom of which is worn away by the poor receiving their doles there, hundreds of years ago, before the north aisle was added. It is supposed to be the window of an ancient sacristy.

Some excellent Wood Carving is seen in the pulpit and retables, the scene in the retables, of the Last Supper being after Leonardo de Vinci.

Ormskirk Church, which is recognized to be the finest old Church in the Diocese of Liverpool, is quite unique in England, having a Tower and Spire standing side by side. Two Churches in Wiltshire, Purton and Wanborough, are something like it, but their spires are at the Chancel end, the towers at the West.

There is no documentary evidence of the building of the Church. In the absence of this many suggestions have been put forth. There is an old tradinew, the pillars are without capitals; and all the roofs of carved oak are new.

We enter the Church by the Porch, which was erected by the children of the parish. In the niche of the gable is a carved figure of the Good Shepherd. We pass under the Spire, which is absolutely distinct from the Tower, and contains the Priest's Bell, which by ancient custom rung immediately before every service. The base of the Spire is the original work, the upper part, which looks comparatively new, was rebuilt in 1826.

The Font, bearing date 1661, and the Royal Cypher C.R., is thought to have been given by the Countess of Derby, Charlotte de la Tremouille, as a thank-offering for the restoration of the Monarchy.

The Tower is massive, being 40 feet square, independent of the buttresses, the walls are 7 feet thick; so thick that in the opening of the windows are vaults where people are buried. The Tower contains a fine peal of eight bells, old and mellow, the tenor (25 cwt.) being cast in 1497.

The Nave is very graceful in its proportions, the two easternmost bays, on either side, enclose the King's Chancel. Above the apex of the arches are the arms of Henry VII. He and his retinue sat in this Chancel when on a visit to his stepfather, the 1st Earl of Derby, at Lathom House. Ever since then this part of the Church has been called "The King's Chancel," and the Chancel proper the "High Chancel."

The Chancel. Here we have the oldest part of the Church: the inner arch of the Saxon-Norman Arch in the tion which says it was originally built by two maiden ladies, daughters of the pirate Orme, after his conversion to Christianity. If this be true the town takes its name from its Church, "Ormskirk," the Kirk, or Church, of Orme. They both agreed to build a Church—it would perpetuate their memory—would be to the glory of God, and a blessing to future generations. This Tradition the Vicar has put into the following verse: Listen! while I tell the story, How this grand old fane, so hoary, Hath been builded for God's glory! Tradition saith, in days long gone Two daughters of the Pirate Orme Resolved to raise, ere they should die, A monument to their memory. Debating what the form should be, These maiden sisters did agree To build a Church, for that would be A blessing to posterity: Their name with it might be allied, And God, too, would be glorified. "Sister," said one, "it's my desire

The Church should have a tapering spire, To point to realms where sin's forgiven, And lead men's thoughts from earth to heaven;" The other said: "I like a tower, It speaks of strength, of might, of power— An emblem of the Church's strength To overcome the world at length: To show that 'gainst the Church, though frail, The gates of hell shall not prevail." "Why not have both," the elder asked, "And build a larger Church, the task Would not be great, to me it seems To do the work we've ample means." "You do your part, erect your spire, And I'll build mine and put my tower; Thus there will be, as e'er they stand, A Church unique throughout the land." Upon the rock, on rising ground, They built the Church, and placed around, God's acre, where, in Holy Ground, Frail dust should rest till life be crowned. —J. E. W.

MONTREAL ROLLING MILLS' AMBULANCE ASSOCIATION.

(See Page 3.) There are now fifty-four members in the Montreal Rolling Mills' Branch of the St. John's Ambulance Association, which has just completed its fourth year since inauguration. Owing to the large number of men employed in the works, and also to the nature of their work, the necessity of a knowledge of "First Aid" principles led to a class being formed among the men to study the subject, under the auspices of the St. John's Ambulance Association of England. Interest and enthusiasm in the movement steadily increased, the knowledge gained thereby proving of inestimable value in caring for the injured and relieving suffering until medical or surgical aid could be secured. From time to time flesh wounds have been cleansed and treated; crushed fingers, hands and feet antiseptically dressed, and even broken bones set.
