

GM superpurchase of Hughes means more high-tech on wheels

By Edward Miller

NEW YORK (AP)—General Motors Corp.'s willingness to spend $5 billion for Hughes Aircraft Co. can be explained by looking under the hood of a new car.

"The cost of computers and electronics will be $1,200 a car by 1990 compared with $500 today," auto industry analyst Arthur Davis said. "I think GM wants to make sure it has the right pieces."

GM Chairman Roger Smith announced Wednesday his company has won the countrywide blind bidding for Hughes, offering $2.7 billion cash and more than $2.3 billion in stock for the defence electronics specialist.

GM's biggest domestic rival, Ford Motor Co., and Boeing Co. also were prime bidders.

Thomas O'Grady, a senior director of the research firm Chase Automotive Services, said GM went for Hughes as a way to improve its electronics quickly in the face of mounting competition from imported Japanese cars, which carry a significant cost advantage and are growing in sophistication.

Aerospace, O'Grady said, "has been geared toward high tech for a long time because of competition and investment funding from the government." For that reason, he expects Ford to shop for another aerospace partner.

"The Japanese have the lead in automotive electronics," said John Hammond, senior economist and automotive industry analyst at Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass. "They were already leading in automotive design."

USE COMPUTERS

Automakers today are using computers and miniature electronics systems for precise control of emissions and gasoline use on fuel-injected engines. Use of electronics in transmissions and for exotic options such as satellite navigation systems are coming.

GM also may count on Hughes for help in the electronic retooling of its vast system of 34 North American assembly plants and 100-plus parts plants as the automaker steps up its use of robots and automated machines and the mating of those systems with computers.

GM's most advanced system has its debut this fall when its new assembly plant opens in Detroit. There, a microchip bearing a customer's order for, say, a red Buick Riviera with an assortment of options, will be attached to the raw metal shell of the car. As the car body moves through the assembly plant, computers will read the chip's message and apply the appropriate paint and get the right parts for that car.

The system is so sophisticated that, if the car is to have two-tone paint, a computer will route the car off the assembly line and back through the paint shop, where robots will read the chip again and apply the second paint color.

Parts suppliers at GM divisions and outside companies will be tapped into the same computers to have their orders filled.

HANDLE DATA CHORES

That kind of technology has been made possible by GM's $2.5-billion acquisition last fall of Electronic Data Systems Corp., a computer services company that also is handling GM's big data processing chores, from computer design of cars to handling the health care claims of 750,000 employees worldwide.

Industry analysts disagree on whether Hughes is a good partner for GM. David Healy of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. in New York said Hughes will not contribute significantly to GM's earnings and that, in manufacturing, the two have little in common.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader criticized the linkup because of Hughes's status as the seventh-largest U.S. defence contractor. In an interview, Nader said GM was "using the windfall profits of the (Japanese) auto import quotas to acquire other companies instead of improving the quality of their automobiles."

Tories won't back off on index plan — Wilson

MONTREAL (CP) — Finance Minister Michael Wilson stood firm Wednesday on what is emerging as the most controversial part of his budget, a measure to reduce the indexing of old-age pensions.

"There is no question of backing down," Wilson told reporters after a Canadian Club luncheon. "This budget stands."

Allan McKinnon, the 68-year-old MP for Victoria, and Gabrielle Bertrand, MP for Brome Missisquoi and parliamentary secretary to Health and Welfare Minister Jake Epp, are among several Conservative back-benchers who have spoken out against the budget measure.

"I don't make any comments on anything that happens in caucus but no budget is ever one way," Wilson said.

The business audience at the luncheon did not snicker at the minister's defence of his budget as an economists' meeting did here last week, when Wilson remarked that Canada has an "acute shortage of rich people."

The partial indexing proposal means pensioners will not have their benefits indexed to cover the first three per cent of inflation.

COURSE IS SET

"We'll review this matter in future as conditions and our financial resources permit but I would say to you that we've set our course in this budget of creating jobs and getting control of the national debt," he said.

Later, Wilson received encouragement from the de-indexing plan from the Conseil du patronat, a Quebec employers' group.

Sébastien Allard, president of the Conseil, said after a meeting with Wilson that the minister hadn't gone far enough in his budget, and suggested he should have trimmed $5 billion from spending, rather than the $1.5 billion that was cut.

"I don't think they can get out of this mess without doing something about social programs which represent a good part of the total budget," Allard said.

"We feel that he should have gone further, but we have to recognize that politically it was difficult and they've changed the trend which is good.

"The way to do more is to look at social programs," Allard said.

Company could lose $38.6M

MONTREAL (CP) — Marine Industries Ltd. may lose a $38.6-million contract to build 620 hopper cars for the Canadian Wheat Board if a 10-month-old strike at the shipyard continues much longer, a spokesman for the board said Wednesday.

"If the strike continues, the board will have little choice," Dan Fenety told the Montreal daily La Presse. "For now, Marine still holds the contract but the company is very worried about the dispute."

Officials from the wheat board and Marine, 65-per-cent owned by the Quebec government, met in Montreal Tuesday to discuss the contract that is scheduled to put 400 employees to work for seven months.

Pork producers can't agree

OTTAWA (CP) — The country's pork producers are split over federal legislation to establish a new income stabilization plan for all farmers, Howard Malcolm, president of the Canadian Pork Council, said Wednesday.

Malcolm said the council has tried for two years to resolve the issue but has failed to find common ground on a key provision in the bill to create tripartite stabilization.

Farmers and the federal and provincial governments would pay equal amounts into a fund that would make payments to producers when prices for their products fall sharply.

Government meets in school gym

RANKIN INLET, N.W.T. (CP) — The elementary school gymnasium in this Inuit community was turned into a temporary legislative assembly Wednesday.

The 24 members of the assembly and an entourage of assistants and bureaucrats, as well as the speaker's chair and mace, have moved in for a session expected to last 10 days.

The territorial assembly, which usually makes its headquarters in a Yellowknife hotel banquet room, travels once a year to give people in far-flung communities an opportunity to see the government at work.

Rankin Inlet, a community of about 1,500 on the west coast of Hudson Bay, is about 1,100 air kilometres from Yellowknife.

MP takes back criticism

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal John Nunziata on Wednesday "completely and unequivocally" retracted criticisms of Commons Speaker John Bosley he made in a weekend radio interview.

Nunziata said in the Newsradio interview: "As far as (Liberal MPs) are concerned, (Bosley's) not being fair."

Criticism of a Speaker's impartiality is considered a Commons taboo.

Nunziata said he apologized after reconsidering his remarks, and denied the Liberal caucus put pressure on him to retract the statements.

Forces to create jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — The Defence Department has allocated $60 million to create about 6,000 new jobs this year at Canadian Forces bases and stations across Canada by extending a youth training and employment program and renewing a civilian temporary employment program.

A department news release said Wednesday $32 million will allow 2,500 men and women aged 17 to 25 to receive the training and work experience they need to find permanent jobs.

Participants receive one year of full-time training and service with the regular forces, including basic military training and learning skills and trades for positions such as mechanic, medical assistant and finance clerk.

Alcoholism treated inadequately

TORONTO (CP) — Alcoholism is Canada's third most prevalent ailment after heart disease and cancer, but many physicians still dismiss it as a social disease and governments refuse to fund affordable treatment centres, an Ontario Medical Association meeting was told Wednesday.

"Our knowledge is based on a lack of understanding," said Zoltan Poznan, chairman of a discussion on addiction, alcohol and drug-related problems.

Doctors often feel ill-prepared and uncomfortable dealing with alcoholics, he said, and as a result, 85 per cent of alcoholics never receive medical treatment for their illness.

Medical schools devote a "pitifully small" amount of time to the subject, Poznan said.

Hog farmers fight import ban

WINNIPEG (CP) — The federal government has advised hog farmers to take several American states to court for blocking imports of Canadian livestock.

A Telex to provincial officials from the External Affairs Department said Wednesday provincial marketing boards have the best chance of pursuing a case in American courts.

South Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska and Wisconsin starting blocking imports of all livestock from Canada last month because this country allows the use of an antibiotic that is banned in the United States.

However, Canadian producers have said the real reason for the blockade is that the states want to protect their depressed hog markets.

Lévesque releases PM's letter that says little

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier René Lévesque's office Wednesday released a letter from Prime Minister Brian Mulroney acknowledging receipt of Quebec's proposals for signing the 1982 Constitution Act.

While the prime minister's letter said Lévesque's proposals will receive "in-depth study," it gave no indication that Quebec's demands for sweeping new powers as a condition for signing the Constitution were acceptable.

"Once we have looked more closely at the Quebec proposals, we'll be in a position to suggest a process leading to a constitutional agreement that we both want," Mulroney wrote.

"Once again I thank you for the delicate gesture you made toward me by sending me a copy of the Quebec proposals. I assure you....that I welcome them with all the seriousness and attention they deserve."

Lévesque is asking for recognition of Quebec as a distinct society and exclusive jurisdiction over language matters. He also wants near-total exemption from the Canadian Charter of Rights, saying the Quebec Charter of Rights should apply in the province.

In his reply to Mulroney, Lévesque acknowledged a recent statement by Mulroney in which the prime minister said Quebec has an "obviously distinct" character.

"You demonstrated an openness of mind which seems to me to augur well for the future of things," Lévesque wrote.

The premier also noted that during a recent telephone conversation, Mulroney raised the possibility of a meeting between the two leaders some time in the future.

No election yet — René scrap independence from the party's electoral platform.

In his first appearance in the legislature since the byelections, Lévesque told the Opposition Liberals Wednesday that he won't bow to their demands for an immediate provincial election.

He said the four byelections, which will bring Bourassa back into the National Assembly next week, "were the most severe lesson we've been dealt since the start of our scoring in byelections." He was referring to his party's 26 byelection losses since 1976.

"After 26 times I find it hard to find something to say on the subject," a laconic Lévesque told Opposition Leader Gerard D. Lévesque who was challenging him to call an election "as soon as possible."

"One thing is certain," the premier said. "If as soon as possible means right now, the answer is no."

Lévesque has been avoiding meetings with reporters since the byelections, using a private passage to enter and leave the main legislative chamber.

PS strike rights limited

QUEBEC (CP) — By a vote of 60 to 46 Wednesday the provincial legislature passed in second reading a law severely limiting the right to strike of Quebec public servants.

The law also leaves it up to an outside research institute to establish salary categories after comparing public service wages with those in private industry.

The opposition Liberals and five independent members, all of them former members of the governing Parti Québécois, voted against the measure. Two independent members, Gilles Gregoire (Frontenac) and Jerome Proulx (St-Jean), supported the government.

Service, not control for anglos

QUEBEC (CP) — Justice Minister Pierre-Marc Johnson said Wednesday that Quebec's anglophone minority will receive health and social services in English but cannot expect control of the institutions providing them.

He said the control of health and social service institutions by a linguistic group and the guarantee of English-language services in these institutions to English-Quebecers are two very different matters.

He was commenting on a statement by Alliance-Quebec, the Anglo-Quebec pressure group, which said Tuesday it is prepared to go to the courts to fight for continued anglophone control over the English community's health and social services.

Union Nationale leader to quit

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP) — Jean-Marc Beliveau said Wednesday he will resign as leader of the once-mighty Union Nationale party in the wake of his third-place finish in a Quebec byelection Monday.

Beliveau, who has led the party since 1982, said in an interview with radio station CHLN that he will formally announce his resignation after he meets with the party executive Saturday.

He ran a tight third in Trois-Rivieres riding Monday night with about 16 per cent of the vote, just behind the popular support won by the Parti Québécois candidate. Liberal Paul Philibert won with 67 per cent of the vote.

Hope remains for starving Ethiopia as rain, food finally coming

By Eleanor Brown

SHERBROOKE — "300,000 died last year. How many this year? And those who survive? They need us to support them."

Gaétane Gascon has just returned from a month-long fact-finding trip to drought-stricken Africa and says "The rains have started; it's very beautiful and very painful." The starving are too weak to begin full-scale farming and immediately raise their standard of living.

Gascon is a projects officer for Development and Peace, a Canadian Roman Catholic organization with connections in most dioceses. She told a Sherbrooke group of her experiences at a meeting Wednesday.

She presents a telling picture of northern Ethiopia, perhaps the worst-hit area of the continent. Almost all media coverage of the famine presented footage from the north, she says, not accurately reflecting the damage in other countries but at least prompting action. Despite the need, only non-governmental relief organizations (NGOs) work in northern Ethiopia.

MASS RELOCATION

The Ethiopian government has been sponsoring the mass relocation of its citizens to less arid central and southern lands within the country.

"An Ethiopian official came up to me and said (about the north) 'It's hopeless. Everything is finished, burnt, lost.' I told him my information said otherwise. He ended up agreeing with me," Gascon recalls.

Although the Soviet Union signed a friendship treaty with Ethiopia in 1973, the Russians have been criticized for paying more attention to arms shipments than food, preferring to help the self-proclaimed socialist Ethiopian government defend itself from warring factions within the country (mostly based in the northern province of Eritrea). "Often, famines are used as political tools," Gascon says.

But lately the Soviets have been helping with the relief effort, Gascon adds. They've been funding the relocation program. "2.2 million people were displaced," she says, "and hundreds of thousands are in Sudan, trickling back in. But they are so weak they can only work very slowly."

OTHERS AT FAULT TOO

The Soviet Union is not the only

Foreign aid specialist Gaétane Gascon told a Sherbrooke audience Wednesday that some food aid to Ethiopia must travel "undercover" to get to the needy.

country at fault.

Two Catholic relief agencies offered aid to northern Ethiopia. According to diplomatic regulations, such initiatives must be accompanied by the approval of the Canadian ambassador to Ethiopia. The go-ahead never came, says Gascon. "Most of Ethiopia is ignored. Their government isn't helping. The United Nations isn't helping."

Denied access, the organizations went undercover. They channeled money into other groups working in Ethiopia. The funds gradually made their way up to north.

All foreign aid finding its way into Ethiopia is controlled by the Relief Rehabilitation Commission (RRC). It is second in power only to the defence ministry. "Nothing happens in Ethiopia without their approval." The agency doesn't get involved in local politics. "It's not neutrality, really. It's retaining our autonomy. No one is neutral."

HIGHER BUDGET THIS YEAR

Development and Peace's annual budget is normally $14 million. "This year was an emergency budget — $16 million," Gascon explains. The diocesan groups that are the national organization's life-blood divide the year into two parts. Volunteers solicit donations and distribute information packages during Lent. In the fall, members set up pressure groups and lobby the government for foreign aid and policy changes.

The agency's goal is long-term project planning and funding. That's where Gascon comes in. A projects officer for the last 10 years, she discusses, plans, receives, and accepts or refuses requests for aid.

She thinks the worst is over in Ethiopia, but "Every African country is like a novel. The story is to be continued."

Poor turnout at MRC meeting

By Bobby Fisher

SHERBROOKE — Citizens of Sherbrooke are more concerned with the future of their green spaces than they are with increased industrialization of the city.

That was the general feeling at an information meeting by the Sherbrooke Municipalité régionale de comté (MRC — regional municipality) Wednesday night.

The poorly-attended meeting was held to inform the public of the MRC's land-use plans, which the Quebec government will make law January 1, 1987. Several previous gatherings have failed to draw crowds as well.

The Sherbrooke MRC is made up of the municipalities of Sherbrooke, Ascot, Deauville, Fleuri-mont, Lennoxville, Rock Forest, St-Elie d'Orford and Waterville.

Sherbrooke MRC plans call for one of two options which outline urbanization projects for the next five years. The two options differ in that the second offers a more aggressive approach to tourist industry zoning as well as concentrating the industrial zones into an area more to the east of Sherbrooke.

SOME DISAGREEMENT

While the meeting, attended by about 60 people, was cordial and well-mannered, not all citizens were in accord with the MRC's proposals and several voiced suggestions.

François Lambert, a landscape architect from St-Elie d'Orford, said he feels the "information was good" but that the plans won't work.

"The options are simply not applicable," Lambert said, "because they are not in line with what the other MRCs in the region are planning."

Lambert said the Eastern Townships' other MRCs are putting more emphasis on the tourism industry and while Option 2 put forward by the Sherbrooke MRC leans in that direction, it isn't in line with what he feels should be better cooperation between all of the groups.

Lambert said another problem had to do with a planned new industrial park where "smokestack" industries — the ones that produce higher levels of air, water and noise pollution — would all be concentrated in an area near the Bromptonville and Scotch roads east of Sherbrooke.

"They haven't taken into account the visual problem," Lambert said.

AGREES

Marjorie Goodfellow, president of the Townshippers Association and a lifelong Scotch Road resident, agreed with Lambert.

"I don't see why they are moving all their projects down into an area that is presently zoned green and is primarily a residential area," Goodfellow said.

"They want to put the polluting industries all side-by-side near the new highway (Contournement de Nord, or North-end bypass which runs from Route 55 to the CHUS)," Goodfellow added.

What that does, Goodfellow went on, "is visually pollute another entrance to Sherbrooke and they have been saying all along that they want to get rid of the entries to the city" that are not pleasing to the eye.

Following a question period, the audience was asked to submit proposals of amendments to the two options.

Of the two, Goodfellow said she favored Option 2 because "of the environmental and recreational advantages" it offers.

Angels four, five found near Lac-St-Pierre dock

BERTHIERVILLE — The bodies of two men believed by police to be Hell's Angels motorcycle club members killed in gang warfare were pulled from the St. Lawrence River Wednesday, the fifth such discovery in as many days.

The men were found stuffed in sleeping bags and weighed down by cement blocks in the river, about 45 kilometres northeast of Montreal. Their bodies were identified by police as those of Guy-Louis 'Chop' Adam and Laurent 'Anglais' Viau, both leaders of the Angels' Laval chapter.

Two others, found in the same manner Saturday and Sunday, have been identified as Laval Angels Jean-Guy 'Brutus' Geoffrion and Michel 'Willie' Mayrand.

Police divers found the body of a fifth man, Claude 'Coco' Roy, weighed down in the water by exercise weights Monday.

A Quebec Police spokesman said the five were part of a group of six Hell's whose disappearance two months ago triggered a massive series of police raids on biker lairs in Quebec and Nova Scotia.

Autopsies are to be performed today to determine the cause of death of the two men found Wednesday.

SHOT TWICE

An autopsy Monday on the body of 'Brutus' Geoffrion showed he has been shot twice in the head.

The six members of the defunct Laval Angel chapter disappeared on about March 30, victims of what police believe was gang warfare.

Police said they would continue their search today for the missing man, Jean-Pierre 'Matt le Crosseur' Mathieu.

Nine QPF divers have been at work since Saturday near the dock in St-Ignace de Loyola, where the ferry which takes cars and trucks across the St. Lawrence moors. The underwater search for the dead Angels began beneath the St. Francis River opposite Bishop's University in Lennoxville a few days after massive police raids April 11.

That day more than 50 people were arrested and 200 weapons seized during a police sweep of several Quebec cities and the Halifax area, but few major charges followed.

For eight years, the Hell's Angels have been battling another club for control of illicit drug sales in Quebec. At least 40 people died in the crossfire last year.

INTERNAL DISPUTES

But the troubles with the Laval chapter are internal, say police. Detectives say the Laval gang's behavior was outrageous even to the outlaw gang's own members, who didn't appreciate the high-profile drink-drug-violence escapades in the residential area near their clubhouse.

When inter-branch negotiations aimed at controlling the Laval group's behavior failed at meetings there and in Sorel, the renegades were ordered killed by the Hell's Angels international headquarters in California.

Police believe the executions took place at or following a meeting at the Sherbrooke chapter's clubhouse in Lennoxville on or about March 30.

$100,000 CASH

The Queen Street house, heavily armed, armored and guarded by hungry dogs and several sophisticated burglar alarms, was a major attraction to police, who spent three days scouring the buildings and grounds. Although they turned up a number of apparently illegal weapons and over $100,000 in cash buried under a doghouse, few charges were laid.

The money was turned over to Revenue Canada for investigation of income-tax evasion. Then the Lennoxville Angels and their friends launched lawsuits totalling $378,000 against police and the Quebec Justice Ministry. The suits claim that those arrested in the raids were held without a chance to see their lawyers for up to 29 hours; that detectives abused them; that several of their cars and motorcycles were vandalized by police; and that the club's reputation had been damaged to the extent of $10,000.

Quebec Police Force divers continue their search of Lake St. Pierre today as they try to nail down the body of the last of Laval's fallen Hell's Angels.

Mario Lebeau of the Sherbrooke MRC outlined land-use plans the Quebec government will make law January 1, 1987 to Sherbrooke area citizens at an information meeting Wednesday.

Farmer sues six municipalities, police for bungling barn blaze

SHERBROOKE — A farmer who blames sloppy work by police and firemen is suing virtually everyone in sight for the loss of his pig barn in a fire last year.

Pork producer Jacques Thériault says the municipalities of Compton (Village, Township and Station), Waterville, Lennoxville and Ascot Township, the Lennoxville-Ascot Metro Police and the two-town intermunicipal committee which runs it are all liable for the lost barn and animals, which he values together at $260,000.

Thériault and his insurance company are suing all of the above for that amount, saying they failed to figure out who should put the fire out until it had almost burned out on its own.

According to documents filed in Superior Court this week, Thériault left his Corriveau Road farm on the evening of Sunday, Nov. 28, 1984, to visit his son's in-laws in St-Camille. His wife was in Sherbrooke for the evening.

A fire broke out in the fattening pens of his barn, Thériault claims. When Mme. Thériault came home, she saw it and called the joint fire department of the three municipalities of Compton at about 10:30 p.m.

Compton Fire Chief Paul Lessard and his men were alerted, says the lawsuit, but Lessard phoned Mme. Thériault back to ask which municipality the couple pay their taxes to.

Informed that the place was apparently in the municipality of Ascot Township, Chief Lessard told Mme. Thériault he would not send his department on the call, but he would pass the message on.

At 10:40 or so, a call was received by the Waterville fire department; the person answering the phone is alleged to have replied that the department would 'verify' whether it would go to the scene or not. However according to the documents, no action at all was taken by the Waterville fire department, apart from answering the phone.

At about 11 p.m., according to the lawsuit, Mme. Thériault dialed the Lennoxville-Ascot police, and was answered in person by none other than Police Chief Richard Tremblay himself. Tremblay apparently replied that the fire would be attended to immediately.

supporting services designed for the densely populated Belvedere section composed mostly of apartment buildings — particularly the police.

Marcotte says that the new municipality would have a population of around 3,000 people, making the maintenance of a municipal police force unnecessary. Under Quebec law, only municipalities with populations exceeding 5,000 are required to maintain their own force. Ascot and neighboring Lennoxville share the services of a force established under an intermunicipal agreement signed in 1983.

"But what do we (the rural resi-

FIREMEN ARRIVE: 12:00

However, say the documents, Lennoxville firemen (who cover the section of Ascot Township including the Thériault home on Corriveau Rd.) arrived only at about midnight — nearly an hour-and-a-half after Mme. Thériault first returned home to find the fire already well underway.

The lawsuit claims the municipalities and the police department were all negligent by failing to turn up at the fire first and figure out the municipal boundaries later.

Ascot Township is also blamed for operating a fire protection system which is incompetent because the fire departments concerned (Ascot doesn't have its own) haven't been told exactly where to go in case of a fire and the residents haven't been told who they should phone.

VAGUE LISTINGS

The phone book is confusing too: Ascot Township's white-pages listing under 'Pompiers' and 'Fire' emergency calls lists four numbers — Lennoxville, North Hatley, Sherbrooke (in smaller type, for some reason), and Waterville — but no explanation of who goes where is included. However the blue pages (allegedly listing all government phone numbers) list still another number, that of the Lennoxville-Ascot police department.

Meanwhile (see separate story), the Township of Ascot may soon be divided into two separate municipalities...

Ascot group moving with petition

SHERBROOKE — The movement to dissect the municipality of Ascot Township into separate rural and urban entities is stepping up and organizers will be petitioning rural residents for support in the next ten days.

Bob Marcotte, founder of the Action Rurale Democratique says the new municipality he envisages would contain most of the agriculturally zoned land in the present sprawling municipality as well as 40 per cent of all buildings.

Marcotte claims the present make-up of Ascot Township is badly suited to the needs of rural residents and says that a disproportionate share of their tax revenues go to supporting services designed for the densely populated Belvedere section composed mostly of apartment buildings — particularly the police.

Marcotte says a division of the present Township would allow rural residents to save considerable tax dollars without causing any diminution of their quality of life.

Marcotte says petitioners will be going door-to-door in the next 10 days seeking popular support, and adds that the movement still needs volunteers. Those interested are invited to contact him at 567-3242.

Thanks Bob, but no thanks

Quebec Liberal leader Robert Bourassa was ringing the Parti Québécois death bell in front of an audience of financiers and investment analysts at the Inter-American Relations Center in New York City Wednesday.

But being the helpful kind of guy that he is, Bourassa saw fit to offer a small piece of political advice to his sometimes-friendly rivals.

"Premier Lévesque and his party should call a provincial election as soon as possible," Bourassa said, "or else they run the risk of disappearing completely as a political force in the province of Quebec."

Thanks for your concern, Bob. What a buddy. With this statement, Bourassa showed an amazing amount of optimism and hope in assuming that things could actually be worse for the Parti Québécois.

How, I ask you, could the PQ be any worse off than it is right now?

The PQ leader has been described as a 'lame duck,' and is sure to be found dead soon with a million knife wounds in his back; the party hasn't won a byelection since, I believe, 1826; and if an election were held in Quebec tomorrow, there's a darn good chance that the PQ wouldn't win a seat. Not one.

So perhaps Bourassa's apparent concern for the welfare of separatism in the province of Quebec is really tainted with personal and selfish motives (shame on him). An election right now would be absolutely fantastic for the Liberals, but our good friend Robert is going to have a hard time convincing anyone that a trip to the polls in the near future would be the best way out for the Parti Québécois.

If the Péquistes are politically smart (which they were at one point in their relatively brief existence), they'll stop delaying the inevitable, elect a new leader, and start building toward a new beginning in the spring of 1986. After all, with their popularity being what it is today, the PQ has absolutely nothing to lose by waiting until the last possible moment. The party has pulled seemingly burning situations out of the fire before...

In other words, contrary to public belief, the PQ DO have time to rebuild before the province's next trip to the polls.

"My point exactly"

Snide suggestions have been made, recently, concerning nepotism — all of them directed at John Crosbie, our justice minister.

A hue and cry went up when it was learned that Crosbie had two sons doing legal work for his department. Outraged, Crosbie slashed back at his critics.

Meanwhile, the sons in question quietly asked to be relieved of their chores.

This, of course, is scandalous — both sides are giving nepotism a bad name. In order to get the public's view of the matter, it was necessary to take to the streets.

"Excuse me, sir, but we would like to get your opinion about nepotism..."

"Certainly. Good early foot, but does not stay any distance at all. Completely out of it if it comes up mud."

"No, no. The word is from the French nepotisme or, possibly, the Italian nepotismo. It has to do with putting relatives on the payroll. It also concerns — or did in ancient times — illegitimate offspring..."

"I don't know about that, but if there's anything at all in blood lines, it sounds like a great idea."

Hmmmm.

"How about you, sir? Have you been following the Crosbie situation?"

"Indeed I have, sir. Get all the papers up at the farm, you know."

"For my money, this Crosbie is doing a bang-up job. And if he's raising boys to follow in his footsteps, so much the better."

"Then you think..."

"If old John had been a black Aberdeen Angus, why, he would have been registered with the agriculture department long ago as a prime herd bull."

"Thank you, sir."

Warm work, this testing of the public pulse. Possibly this purveyor of cooling refreshment could be prevailed upon to comment.

"Sir?"

"What's yours, Mac?"

"Well, actually, I'd like your opinion about the Crosbie situation..."

"Glad you asked. Been wanting to let off steam on that subject for days, but the only thing the customers want to talk is baseball."

"Not that there isn't a parallel, you know."

"There is?"

"Certainly. What do you think it is that makes the Blue Jays such a great team? It's the farm system. They hide away a few good guys down in the bushes. They train them in all the fundamentals and then, when they need experienced help, they bring them up to play for the big team."

"Look at that kid Berra, with the Yankees. His dad, Yogi, let him season in the minors before calling on him. You do not just go out and hire some guy off the street when you need a major-leaguer."

"Aha, but while Berra the younger is still with the big club, Berra the elder is gone..."

"My point exactly."

And now, it's back to the studio for these messages...

Tiny Rockall site of four-way claim dispute

By Colin McIntyre

DUBLIN (Reuters)—A remote lump of rock in the Atlantic Ocean, inhabited only by a few birds, is now at the centre of an international wrangle involving four countries.

Rockall, a granite outcrop measuring 33 metres by 19 metres, is about 400 kilometres northwest of the Republic of Ireland.

While the rock itself is of no interest to anyone but the hardest of bird-watchers, it could be the key to rich fishing grounds surrounding it and possible oil and other mineral wealth under the seabed.

Britain was first to see the potential in Rockall. In 1955 a party of Royal Marines managed to land on the unprotected rock, which is constantly buffeted by waves, to plant a Union Jack and bolt on a brass plaque proclaiming sovereignty.

In 1972, it was formally incorporated into the United Kingdom, which declared a 12-nautical-mile limit around it and claimed that as an island it was entitled to its own 200-mile economic zone, giving it fishing and mineral rights.

CITE UN ARTICLE

This was quickly disputed by the Irish republic, Denmark and Iceland, which cited an article from a UN convention on the law of the sea that rocks unable to sustain human habitation or economic life should not have an economic zone or continental shelf.

Britain, like most other countries, has yet to sign the convention.

In 1980, Britain and the Irish republic, which argues that Rockall is closer to the tip of northeast Donegal than any other mainland, agreed to seek international arbitration over the dispute.

A Foreign Ministry official in Dublin said there had been official negotiations since then with a view to setting up an arbitration tribunal, but little progress had been made.

The dispute drifted for some years until April, when Denmark officially laid claim to an area of sea that included Rockall, arguing it was part of a geological extension of the Faroe Islands, which Copenhagen controls. The Danish government declared that Rockall was not an island but a cliff, with few if any rights. The claim drew a formal protest from the British government.

ICELAND CLAIMS

A few days later Iceland laid claim to Rockall on the basis that they shared the same undersea plateau, the Hatton Bank.

Iceland has proposed four-way talks to divide up the disputed area, warning that if the countries involved failed to reach agreement the issue could go to the United Nations, which might come up with a solution unwelcome to all of them.

Dublin has yet to put in a formal Irish claim, pending arbitration talks with Britain, and officials have sought to play down the dispute. But it is in the Irish republic, alone among the parties to the dispute, that the issue has caught the public imagination.

One former member of Parliament went so far as to change his name by deed poll to Sean Rockall Loftus to highlight the issue.

A popular singing group, the Wolfe Tones, wrote a song entitled Rock on, Rockall, which included the line: "You'll never fall to England's greedy hand."

IN HIS RIDING?

The member of Parliament for North East Donegal, Paddy Harte, says Rockall is part of his remote constituency.

"We are in danger of losing Rockall forever by simply failing to act," he told the Irish government.

Patriots have sallied forth from the Irish republic and Britain to stake the claims of their countries.

Last September, a retired Irish fisherman was drowned in an attempt to plant an Irish flag on the rock.

British adventurer Tom McLean, who previously rowed the Atlantic single-handed, sailed from the Scottish coast with a colleague in May "to claim the island of Rockall for Britain."

McLean said he will live in a cabin on Rockall and dispense scotch whisky to distressed seamen passing the desolate outcrop.

When the M-moonshines over the Kremlin...

MOSCOW (AP)—Soviet police carrying out a new government crackdown on drunkenness have destroyed hundreds of moonshine stills, including one run by an old woman who supplied an entire village, official newspapers reported this week.

Few details of the raids were included in the reports, but the articles appear to be aimed at showing quick results from new measures to curb alcohol abuse in the Soviet Union that took effect June 1.

The measures announced May 16 by the Communist party Central Committee include banning sales of vodka and other spirits on work days until 2 p.m., raising the legal drinking age to 21 from 18, cutting liquor production beginning next year and raising discipline drive given new impetus by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, who became Communist party general secretary March 11 after the death of Konstantin Chernenko.

STATISTICS SCARCE
Although statistics on alcoholism in the Soviet Union are not available, the government newspaper Izvestia recently called it a "disaster."

Izvestia cited a Soviet study concluding that economic damage from drinking far outweighs revenues from liquor taxes — estimated by Western analysts to be about $64 billion in 1983, about 11 per cent of the national budget.

Soviet authorities blame drink for 75 per cent of murders and rapes, 80 per cent of robberies, 90 per cent of hooliganism and most divorces.

While Soviet vodka is inexpensive by North American standards at $7.50 to $10.75 a half-litre, the average wage of a Soviet factory worker is only about $290 a month.

Particularly in villages, moonshine traditionally has been a cheaper alternative.

Samogon, like moonshine anywhere else, is made in home-made stills. It is distilled from fermented grains, sugar, potatoes, beets, fruits and other foods containing starch.

The final product usually is quite potent, and its taste varies according to what it is made from.

The government newspaper of the Georgian republic, Zarya Vostoka, reported there were numerous arrests and moonshine seizures early Saturday morning when the new regulations took effect.

The Communist party daily Pravda reported Monday that 2,500 moonshiners, or "samogonschiki," were exposed during recent raids in the Belgorod region of southern Russia.

Pravda did not say over how long a period of time the raids occurred, or whether the moonshiners were arrested and charged.

Pravda said one of those caught in the police dragnet was an elderly woman known in the village of Yastrebovo as Grandmother Sonya, who had been earning a living by supplying local residents with the liquor for years.

Pravda said her still was destroyed, but gave no details of what happened to the woman herself.

Violence in England not restricted to soccer

LONDON (CP)—In the anguished aftermath of last week's horror when 38 people died trying to flee a horde of rampaging English soccer fans in Brussels, reaction in Britain has ranged from outrageous excuse-making to shame and now-worn promises never to let it happen again.

Robert Kilroy-Silk, a prominent Labor MP from Liverpool, whose soccer fans once enjoyed the rare reputation in Britain of being well-mannered, unabashedly contended that all the trouble before the European Cup match between Juventus of Italy and Liverpool was caused by Italian fans dressed in Liverpool colors.

That view ignored the decade of increasingly violent outbursts at soccer stadiums across Britain and the stark toll of last Wednesday's casualties — 31 dead Italians, one dead Englishman.

At the opposite extreme, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who has long avoided becoming embroiled in the simmering issue of what, with traditional British understatement, is termed "football hooliganism," took command and promised new measures to catch and imprison the "thugs" who threaten the British game.

Amid the various bans and withdrawals from European play affecting

Paul Koring

British clubs, the promises of emergency legislation and the collective shock of a country watching people die over and over again on television, only a few commentators have looked beyond the immediate need to curb the violence at soccer grounds.

'IRON CAGES'

The Times blandly suggested that "British football may have eventually to be played in fortified amphitheatres with iron cages, ... and a breathalyser machine at every turnstile."

"Future football matches may not have the excitement and romance of the national game of the past but at least it may be a game again, a game worth playing and safe for export too."

No doubt, enough security measures and an overwhelming police presence could clean up the bad behaviour that has become synonymous with British soccer fans.

But that might be treating the symptoms instead of the disease.

(It might also create the potential for disaster. A "fortified amphitheatre with iron cages" in Bradford, England, last month would have meant hundreds and perhaps thousands of people burned to death because they couldn't have escaped to the field during the grandstand fire that killed 54.)

The Economist, posed a broader, and perhaps more valuable question.

"What's wrong not just with British football but with Britain?" asked the newsmagazine.

"Why has a nation that used to pride itself — fairly or not — on civility and respect for authority become a byword in Europe for violence, drunkenness and dirt?"

"Bluntly, something nasty has happened to the British working class — whether or not because something equally nasty has happened to the middle-class to whose values it might aspire."

"As a shamed Britain ponders the tragedy of Brussels it would do well to examine the system of cultural values that made it possible."

FAR BEYOND

The problem goes far beyond soccer pitches. The massed violence — by both police and strikers — during the year-long coal miners strike was perhaps most surprising in that it apparently shocked so few in Britain.

Only last weekend, police armed with truncheons smashed the windcreens of dozens of vehicles in a "peace convoy" and arrested more than 500 "hippies" headed for Stonehenge.

Simmering violence can be seen in the black clothes and bright studs of young punks — the newest of Britain's urban tribes.

They are more than simply a generational successor to the flower children of the 1960s. They represent a rejection of a society that offers limited opportunities and record-high joblessness.

Finally getting tough on soccer hooliganism may succeed in making the sport safe for fans again but it won't end mindless aggression.

The blamed "tiny minority" is thousands strong as anyone who watches television knows. Their rage and frustration will find another venue unless the disillusionment that breeds violence in Britain gets treated as well.

Pratt and Whitney sales keep growing despite air industry stall

By David Gersovitz

PARIS (CP) — The debut of a new generation of commuter aircraft will help Pratt and Whitney Canada increase engine deliveries this year despite continued sluggishness in the low-price end of the general aviation market, says president David Caplan.

Pratt and Whitney, the world's largest manufacturer of small gas-turbine aircraft engines, designed the PW100 turboprop family for modern twin-engine commuter planes seating 30 to 70 passengers.

When research started, these planes were all on the drawing board. Pratt and Whitney pulled off a major coup by getting orders to supply PW100 engines for five of the seven planes making up the group.

Initially, there was skepticism whether there would be a place in the marketplace for these aircraft.

Now they're starting to roll off production lines and orders are increasing. Production of PW100s is picking up accordingly.

"We're quite confident that there's a long-term market there," said Caplan in an interview at the Paris Air Show, which continues until Sunday. "And we're comfortable that our market share will be quite nice."

BEGINS FLYING

Among PW100 users, Canada's de Havilland Dash 8 began flying last winter with NorOntair. The first Embraer Brasilia was officially delivered during the current Paris show at Le Bourget airport.

The French-Italian ATR-42 will follow shortly and a new version of the old Dutch Fokker F-27, the F-50, will be certified later this year. The British Aerospace ATP will fly next year.

In addition, de Havilland is considering a PW120 (part of the PW100 class) for a possible new version of its four-engine, 50-passenger Dash 7 and Canadair Ltd. of Montreal is looking at the PW120 for a turboprop version of its CL-215 piston-engine water-bomber.

The largest engine in the PW100 class is the PW124, with a rated power of 2,400 shaft horsepower. It will power the ATP as well as stretched versions of the Dash 8 and ATR-42 due in 1988.

Delivery of engines by the Montreal-based company peaked in 1981 at 3,300 units, then fell sharply in the recession. Last year, the total exceeded 1,200 and should climb to between 1,300 and 1,400 units this year, said Caplan.

But the numbers are deceiving. Many of the units now being built are in the larger PW100 class, which has at least three times the output of the smallest versions of Pratt's tried-and-true PT6 line of engines.

It's that bottom end of the general aviation field — small private aircraft using the smaller PT6s — that has been slowest to rebound from the recession, said Caplan.

Caplan, 45, a Montreal native and chartered accountant by training, said development of the new PW200 turboshaft engine for light helicopters is on schedule, with the first complete unit due to run later this year. PW200s will power the new 400A and 440 TwinRangers, to be built in Montreal by Bell Helicopter Textron Inc.

Pratt and Whitney is a wholly owned subsidiary of United Technologies of Hartford, Conn. The company is looking at the Chinese market.

This year the Chinese will begin production of the Y-12, a 17-passenger regional utility aircraft powered by two Pratt PT6A-27s and more deals with China may lie ahead.

Pratt now employs about 7,600 people, mostly at its suburban Montreal plants. Employment should exceed 10,000 by the end of the decade.

The firm has announced plans to spend over $200 million to re-equip the mammoth Montreal operation for computer-integrated manufacturing and build a new plant at Halifax airport to produce high-precision, light-alloy castings.

Tax plan sets sights on smokestack industry

OTTAWA (CP) — The battle over tax reform in the United States is about to open a second front in Canada.

The impetus comes from a discussion paper released with the May 23 budget proposing reforms that would reduce corporate tax incentives for business while lowering overall corporate tax rates.

President Ronald Reagan unveiled similar measures in the United States and the result was an outcry from the smokestack industries — steel, automobiles, machine tool companies — who will see their tax bill rise as incentives are removed.

The two proposals involve reducing fast write-offs, otherwise known as accelerated capital cost allowances, for machinery and eliminating the investment tax credit. The Canadian version retains this credit for scientific research expenditures only.

In addition, the inventory allowance, a form of inflation protection, would be eliminated in Canada, with possible provision for its restoration if inflation should rise significantly.

In his discussion paper, Finance Minister Michael Wilson says these measures would result in a lower statutory rate of corporate income tax "to benefit all firms in all sectors."

"The basic federal rate would be reduced from 36 to 29 per cent," the paper says, "so that the standard combined federal and provincial corporate tax rate would fall from 46 to 39 per cent."

Under the U.S. plan, the maximum corporate rate of 46 per cent would be replaced with a flat tax of 33 per cent for all corporations.

While the figures look good on paper, they don't tell the whole story. Heavy industries on both sides of the border have until now been able to take advantage of the investment tax credit and fast write-offs to reduce their taxes substantially.

With these two tax measures removed, the result in both countries will be higher taxes for heavy industry and lower taxes for the consumer and service sector.

Eric Owen, a taxation specialist with the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, said that despite the problems in reforming the corporate tax system, Canada has very little choice. The United Kingdom has already put similar reforms in place and now the United States is moving in this direction.

"If our major trading partners are going this way, Canada has to come up with some resolution, otherwise we are going to be in the position of not being competitive. We certainly have to be internationally competitive."

AGREES ON REFORM

John Bulloch, head of the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, agreed that reform was inevitable if the United States went ahead with its plan. If corporations in Canada paid higher taxes than their competitors in the United States they would be at a disadvantage, he said.

But Bulloch said reform would not come easy. "There are certainly going to be winners and losers," he said in an interview.

Bulloch said most members of his small business group will be among the winners because small business is generally not capital-intensive. They will be affected, however, by the elimination of the inventory allowance.

Thomas D'Aquino, whose Business Council on National Issues counts among its members such smokestack heavyweights as Stelco Inc., Dofasco Inc., Ford Motor Co. of Canada and Chrysler Canada Ltd., said the principle behind the reforms is generally endorsed by the business community.

David Perry, a research associate with the Canadian Tax Foundation, said the proposal would remove the bias toward capital investment, giving labor-intensive businesses a better break.

"The present tax system is not neutral," Perry said. "It does have some distinct biases built into it. By lowering the rates, by getting away from the emphasis on the capital side, you do make a more efficient tax system, a more efficient allocation of economic resources in the country, and you also make it fairer."

CDC an example of Tories ready to sell crown

Ottawa clearly wants to get rid of as many Crown corporations as it can.

That approach was hammered home during the election campaign and in statements since the Tories took over the government with 211 of 285 seats. The latest example is the government's announcement that it wants to flog its large holdings in the Canada Development Corp.

This is a holding company set up by the previous Liberal government with the aim of channelling Canadian investment into domestic industries that are seen to have growth prospects. CDC's debts have been larger than profits recently primarily because of large interest payments on costs run up by acquisitions that haven't paid off as expected.

Then, there's Canada's aerospace industry, which has cost taxpayers hundreds of millions in the last few years. Ottawa has done everything but bring dancing girls to your TV screen to offer in these firms.

There are other headlines among the hundreds of Crown corporations in Canada, including telecommunications.

NOT SO SIMPLE
It's not so simple, however, as lining up the Crown corporations and making them walk the plank.

Canada is, and has been since before Confederation, a mixed economy — a country where private business operates in some sectors and the government takes over in others. They often overlap.

That's because there are some essential services every country needs. If private business couldn't provide them, the argument went, the government had to step in.

There's nothing particularly new in this concept; the United States, that bastion of free enterprise, practises it every time a soldier gets roused from his bunk, an air traffic controller cleans a jetliner for takeoff or a federal park warden says don't feed the bears.

It's your business

BY KEN SMITH

In Canada, however, the concept has gone a lot further.

Because of the country's vast space and still sparse population, it has been accepted as a philosophical notion that Canada needs more government intervention than most countries to generate growth in problem economic areas.

Over the years, this idea has resulted, for example, in Air Canada — needed in the 1930s to help draw the country together, but now reported to be on the selling block — Via Rail, nuclear developments under federal companies and financing of high technology firms. Many of these ventures have cost taxpayers billions.

What, then, do you do if you have oversee this confusion?

SOME UNAVOIDABLE
In some areas, such as national defence — and maybe even postal service — you have to accept federal control.

Then, you undoubtedly need some Crown corporations, because there are sectors of the Canadian economy which — while essential — may not be profitable, so they're best handled by the government.

If the national good is at stake in a particular enterprise, such as national transportation or communications, and private enterprise isn't willing to step in because of the costs involved, it seems reasonable for Ottawa to move into the breach.

A new paper prepared by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce suggests some fresh criteria. Basically, the chamber says, let's apply the tests of the marketplace.

If consumers are going to be hurt by monopolies, let's have the government involved — through regulation if nothing else.

But if private enterprise can deliver the same — or better — goods and services than offered by Crown corporations, then good luck.

But let's look, suggests the chamber, at the proliferation of Crown corporations during the last couple of decades and see how many really are needed.

It's not a bad idea.

Stabalization plan needs adjustment for farm voice

OTTAWA (CP) — Farmers and provincial governments must be given an equal voice with the federal government in the operation of a proposed new farm income stabilization plan, Saskatchewan Agriculture Minister Lorne Hepworth said Tuesday.

The federal government has proposed to take sole administrative authority over the plan, called tripartite stabilization, which now is being studied by the Commons agriculture committee.

But Hepworth said experience in Saskatchewan has shown that farmers are more willing to participate in programs they have a say in.

And he re-iterated his province's opposition to any provincial supplementary payments under the program.

Under tripartite stabilization, the federal and provincial governments and farmers would pay equal premiums to build a fund which would make payments to farmers when the prices for their products fall below average prices of previous years.

But the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, the country's largest farm organization, told the committee that payout prices should be linked to the cost of production.

And the federation urged that supplementary payments, called toploading, be permitted under strict limits, to help farmers where production costs are high.

It said that rather than banning toploading, the legislation should allow various commodity groups to determine what levels of toploading they'll permit in their sectors.

DJ wins it for Celtics

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — It seemed almost as if time were suspended momentarily as Dennis Johnson's long-range jumper floated toward the basket.

But two seconds after the shot left his hand and just as the buzzer sounded, the ball swished through the net and Boston Celtics had beaten the Lakers to even the National Basketball Association Championship Series at 2-2.

"I figured it had a 50-50 chance of going in," Johnson said after his 22-footer beat Los Angeles 107-105 Wednesday night at the Forum. "The play was set up to take the clock down to five seconds, with Larry (Bird) coming off the pick."

Bird dribbled, was double-teamed by Laker defenders, then passed off to the wide-open Johnson, who immediately fired the ball.

"I saw Byron (Scott) and Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar) running toward me so I figured I'd make the shot a little higher," Johnson said. "It felt good."

"We just lost a tough game at the buzzer," said Lakers' Earvin (Magic) Johnson, who'd tied the score at 105 with a basket just 19 seconds earlier. "All we can do now is forget this game and look ahead to Friday."

Johnson, who hadn't been much of a factor in the opening three games, had 27 points.

Kevin McHale paced the Celtics' scoring with 28 points, while Bird added 26.

McHale kept the Celtics in the game during the first three quarters, then Bird took control with outstanding all-around play in the fourth before Johnson nailed down the victory at the gun.

The Lakers, who led 92-85 early in the fourth quarter before Boston surged back, were paced by Abdul-Jabbar with 21 points and Johnson with 20.

Unlike the first three games of the series, this one was close most of the way. And, unlike the third game, it was scuffle-free.

NBA Vice President Scotty Stirling had met with the coaches prior to the game, ostensibly to talk about the rough play that had characterized the third game and resulted in some tough talk from both sides.

The fifth game is scheduled here Friday night at the Forum. The series then shifts back to Boston for a sixth game on Sunday, and, if necessary, a seventh on Tuesday.

Mahler hurls a one-hitter as Expos win 6-0

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — If San Francisco Giants don't see Mickey Mahler for another six years, it's fine with them.

"He shut us down pretty good," Giants manager Jim Davenport said Wednesday after his team managed just one hit, Dan Gladden's infield single, off the Montreal Expos pitcher and lost 6-0 in a National League game. "But it looked to me like we thought we could just walk out there on to the field and beat him."

"We were dragging from the first inning on."

Mahler, 32, is a journeyman left-hander who has been released by several clubs and done most of his travelling through minor league cities over the last five seasons. The Expos brought him up from their Indianapolis farm club, where he was 4-1, a week ago.

"I've felt since 1980 that I belonged in the majors," he said. "I had a lot to prove today to people in other organizations who wouldn't keep me."

Gladden singled in the third inning, barely beating a throw which shortstop U.L. Washington made after going to his right to field a grounder.

12 HITS FOR EXPOS
Terry Francona had three hits and three runs-batted-in, and Washington, Tim Raines, and Vance Law had two apiece. The Expos tallied 12 hits, the first seven off Mike Krukow, 4-4, who lasted only 3 2-3 innings.

Mahler made his first major league appearance since 1982 last Sunday at Los Angeles, pitching three innings in relief and allowing three runs. On Wednesday, he got his first start since 1979 because Bill Gullikson is sidelined by a minor leg injury. He had a 12-24 big league record and no shutouts before stifling the Giants.

Mahler, older brother of Braves Rick Mahler, made his career record 4-0 against the Giants with the one-hitter. He struck out six batters, walked two, and didn't allow a runner past first base.

"He didn't walk many people, and we swung at a lot of bad pitches," said Tom McCraw, batting coach for the Giants, whose average dropped to .213 as the team suffered its sixth shutout loss.

Dodgers 2 Mets 1

Bob Welch, making only his second start of the season, teamed with three relievers on a three-hitter to earn his first victory in beating New York. Mariano Duncan had an RBI single in the fifth inning to break a 1-1 tie. Steve Sax singled, stole second and scored the go-ahead run. George Foster hit his eighth homer for the lone New York run.

Braves 4 Cubs 2

Rafael Ramirez drove in all of Atlanta's runs, the last two with a homer in the top of the 11th inning. Paul Zuvella started the Braves 11th with a single. One out later, Ramirez hit an 0-2 pitch over the left-field fence for only his second homer of the season. Ramirez had a two-run double in the third inning.

Reds 11 Pirates 9

Alan Knicely hit a three-run homer in Cincinnati's four-run sixth inning as the Reds rallied to beat Pittsburgh for their fourth straight victory. Knicely's homer, his fourth, broke an 8-8 tie.

Tim Raines... Two big hits.

Drugs throughout majors

NEW YORK (AP) — Evidence uncovered by investigators in the Pittsburgh federal grand jury probe of drug trafficking shows that cocaine was sold to baseball players in virtually every National League city. Sports Illustrated reports in its June 10 issue.

Sports Illustrated quotes unnamed law enforcement officials as saying drug deals involving ballplayers were so routine "that those who co-operated in the investigation often had trouble providing specific information about transactions."

Seven Pennsylvania men were charged with 165 drug violations in indictments returned by the grand jury following a 14-month investigation.

More than a dozen ballplayers — most under grants of immunity — were called to testify before the panel. However no players were named in the indictments.

The seven men indicted are to be arraigned Friday before a U.S. magistrate in Pittsburgh.

A story in today's editions of the New York Times said dates of 133 counts in the 165-count indictment match days on which the National League days Pittsburgh Pirates were home.

Connors and McEnroe play for the USA

PARIS (AP) — With just two rounds remaining, both Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe have a chance to give the United States its first French Open men's singles title since Tony Trabert captured the crown in 1955.

Standing in the way, however, are the defending champion, Ivan Lendl, and Mats Wilander, the 1982 winner.

Connors and the top-seeded McEnroe have battled their way into Friday's semifinals on the slow, red clay courts at Roland Garros Stadium where Connors, possibly playing his last French Open, will meet Lendl and McEnroe will take on Wilander, his third consecutive Swedish opponent.

Today, though, is women's day, and Americans have done extremely well thus far.

Defending champion and No. 1 seed Martina Navratilova faced West Germany's Claudia Kohde-Kilsch, and second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd met 15-year-old Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina.

Navratilova and Lloyd met in the women's final last year, Navratilova winning in straight sets. Lloyd has won the French Open a record five times but Navratilova, twice a champion, is favored to repeat this year.

On Wednesday, Connors, 32, fought his way into the semifinals of this Grand Slam tournament for the fourth time, stopping Stefan Edberg of Sweden 6-4, 6-3, 7-6. Lendl, who came from two sets down to outlast McEnroe in a thrilling five-set title match here last year, advanced to the semis with a 6-4, 6-2, 6-4 victory over Argentina's Martin Jaite.

The veteran left-hander, who says this may be his last appearance on French clay, said he gets a kick out of winning against the younger players on the tour.

"I really enjoy playing the young guys and still grinding it out. That's what really keeps me going more than anything," Connors said.

"It's one of the biggest pleasures for me personally — when your legs are supposed to be one of your biggest weapons. Mine still work. How many miles they've got in them, we'll have to see."

But Connors' semifinal foe, Lendl, is on a four-tournament winning streak and hasn't dropped a set in his steady, five-round march here toward the final.

Ranked second in the world and seeded behind McEnroe here, the Czechoslovakian right-hander posted another convincing straight-set victory on Wednesday against the unseeded 20-year-old Jaite.

For the past year, Lendl has been adhering to a special diet, avoiding red meat and carbonated drinks while loading up on whole grains.

Connors has a 13-9 lifetime record against Lendl, but Lendl has won their last four meetings and has handed Connors the worst two defeats of his long career.

Richard remembers Canadiens' 1950s glory days

NEW YORK (CP) — The Punch Line of Montreal Canadiens was reunited Wednesday to honor its most famous member, Maurice (Rocket) Richard.

The Canadian Society of New York gave its third annual hockey award to Richard, the first National Hockey League player to score 50 goals in 50 games. He did that 40 years ago.

Elmer Lach, the Punch Line's centre of the 1940s and 1950s, credits Richard and his famous Detroit Red Wings rival, Gordie Howe, with playing a key role keeping the NHL alive during the lean wartime years and the post-war period.

Howe, last year's award recipient, gave a warm welcome to the Rocket. The inaugural trophy went to the late Clarence Campbell, former NHL president.

While old age is setting in for the Punch Line, memories of the glory days with the Canadiens still are vivid among the trio.

GOOD YEARS

"All the years I played with the Canadiens, they were good years," said Richard, 63. One thing he misses is the high salaries NHL players now earn compared with the 1950s.

When the Canadiens won five straight Stanley Cups in the 1950s, a Montreal player could earn between $40,000 and $50,000 a year counting bonus playoff money, Richard said.

Lach, 67, was the centre and Richard and Toe Blake were his right and left wingers respectively, when the Punch Line finished 1-2-3 in scoring in the 1943-44 season. The order was Lach, Blake and Richard.

Richard was 23 when he reached the 50-goal milestone the following season.

After Blake retired as a player, he coached the Canadiens to five straight Stanley Cups in the 1950s. Richard was his star.

"He kept me in the league as a player and coach," Blake said. "When he retired we certainly missed him and I think that's the reason we never got the sixth cup in a row."

At 72, Blake is the oldest Punch Liner.

Sports celebrities, politicians, businessmen from Wall Street and Canadian diplomats came to Richard's bash at the Pierre Hotel.

Jays' Bell getting cocky over 6 1/2 game AL lead

TORONTO (CP) — George Bell, Toronto's slugging left fielder, believes Detroit is a toothless Tiger in 1985.

"We call the shots now, we're the No. 1 team, up six games (6 1/2 actually)," Bell said Wednesday night. "I don't think they have a chance, because we're going to beat them."

"They're not playing the same as they did last year (a 35-5 start). Look at their record this year and last year. They're not the same team. This year we're the team. We'll beat them this year."

Bell and his teammates, who sit atop the American League East with a 34-16 record, will have an opportunity to back up the statements when the Tigers and the Blue Jays open a key four-game series tonight with Dan Petry, 8-4, going for Detroit against Toronto's Jimmy Key, 4-2.

Bell, who is second on the team in homers with 10, two behind Jesse Barfield, leads the Jays in runs-batted-in with 31. He is coming off his first full season in the major leagues, a banner year where he started ripping the ball in spring training and never tailed off. Last year, he led the team in homers with 26 and finished second to Lloyd Moseby in RBI with 86.

"I wasn't surprised by what George did last year," said manager Bobby Cox of his 25-year-old outfielder. "I always considered him to be a hitter as soon as I laid eyes on him for the first time in spring training."

"What I liked was he could hit the ball hard to all fields and he has no fear."

Bell, emerging from a rare hitting slump where he went 11-for-67 over a 16-game stretch, hit a three-run shot on Tuesday night against Minnesota Twins, then followed up Wednesday night with a 2-for-4 performance.

Bell is the reluctant star in the Jays' talented outfield which also includes Moseby and Barfield. All three can hit, run and possess above average arms.

WATERLOO — 'Le Club Sportif et Culturel de Waterloo' will be holding the third annual 'Waterloo Triathlon' on July 5, 6, and 7.

Participants and spectators from all across the province will be on hand for the running, bicycling, and canoeing event. A variety of other activities are also planned for the weekend, including an exhibition softball game and a chainsaw, wood-chopping competition.

The Waterloo Triathlon is run on both an individual and a team basis. Teams relating to family, region, age, place of employment, and so on, can be organized.

For more information, contact Alain Berubé at 514-539-1023.

held at the Venise Golf Club on June 26. The tourney is open to men and women golfers of all handicap classes.

Several contests and drawings will be held throughout the day, with cars, vacations, and thousands of dollars in prizes. A dinner and dance will also take place immediately following the tourney.

Entry fees are $50.00 for golf and dinner, and $25.00 for dinner only. For more information contact Irene Delisle or Pierrette Roy at 819-564-7444.

de Wit wins

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Canadian heavyweight Willie de Wit, gaining momentum every round, pounded out a lopsided six-round unanimous decision over Sterling Benjamin of Trinidad on Wednesday.

The six-foot-one native of Grande Prairie, Alta., combined an effective inside attack with a couple of booming left hooks and straight rights to the head in the final two rounds to move his record to 40-1 with three knockouts.

De Wit spent a couple of rounds monitoring Benjamin's awkward style before emphasizing a consistent body attack in the third round.

WHY PAY MORE IN ANOTHER STORE WE HAVE THE BEST FOR SO MUCH LESS. 98 Wellington St. N. Sherbrooke, Que. Minimarge

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am the mother of a disabled child. One can see at a glance he is not like other children and will spend the rest of his life in a wheelchair.

His mind is good and he understands everything that is said to him. At times he has trouble responding, but when people are patient and treat him as they would any other child. He does very well.

Please tell curious strangers not to stop us on the street and ask personal questions. For example: "How old is he?" "Will he grow to be normal in size?" "Is he in pain?" "Whatever he has, does it run in your family — or your husband's?" "If I speak to him will he answer me?"

I have seriously considered ordering printed copies of a poem by John and Edna Massimilla of Hatboro, Pa., so I can hand one to anyone who approaches us in a restaurant or supermarket with a rude or insensitive question. Here is the poem and I hope you will print it in your column. Thank you. — A Mother in Philadelphia

Dear Mother: I'm pleased to do so. Thank you for sharing.

Different
"He's not just right," someone did say.
"He walks and talks in a different way."
"But, what is right?" asked a different voice.
"What type of person? Is there a choice?"
Tall, short, frail or strong?
Who is right and who is wrong?
The shy, the mighty, or those with fame?
No two persons are just the same.
"He's not just right?" Can we not see.
God makes us all quite differently?
And should some need our extra care
It's up to us — this burden to share.

Dear Ann Landers: "Deeply Concerned in Georgia" wrote for help concerning her stepdaughters who live with their mother and stepfather. She suspects he has or will sexually abuse the girls.

Frankly, my dear, your advice stank. It's unrealistic to expect the mother to speak to her husband "in very plain language". You would not believe how many mothers know what's going on and refuse to "make waves" because they don't want their home disrupted.

You should have told the stepmother to talk to the girls and get the facts. She should then call a social worker, or a lawyer, a physician, a clergyman, someone who has the authority to move in on the situation.

A man who French-kisses his stepdaughters is a bomb ready to go off. The welfare of the children is of utmost importance. They must be protected NOW, or those who suspect and do nothing will carry the guilt to their graves. I know because I was — Abused And The Mother Of Abused Children

Dear Mother: I thought my answer was pretty good, but yours was stronger — and therefore better. Thanks for writing.

Visit to Denmark should be a maturing experience

Anne Lessard is looking forward to learning Danish language and culture — even if she makes a few mistakes along the way.

By Laurel Sherrer

SHERBROOKE — While most high school graduates are looking for a job or making plans for college, Anne Lessard will be packing for a year-long stay in Denmark.

Lessard, 17, who is soon to graduate from the College du Sacre Coeur in Sherbrooke, is one of 70 students in the province chosen for an international student exchange program through American Field Services (AFS).

Started in 1914 as a voluntary service to help the injured on the battlefields in Europe, AFS evolved into a world-wide exchange program with the goal of promoting friendship and understanding between nations.

The program now involves 64 countries and 10,000 teenagers around the world every year.

Lessard leaves for Denmark July 15, and upon arrival there will start a three-week orientation along with students from various other countries to learn some of the basics about the language, history and culture of Denmark. She'll spend the summer getting to know her host family and travelling.

REGULAR SCHOOL

"It's so small I'm sure I'll see everything," she said in a recent interview. "Then I hope to see some of the neighboring countries, such as Sweden."

In the fall she will attend a regular high school.

Lessard isn't exactly new to travelling and participating in cultural exchanges. She has been to Florida, Cuba and Guadeloupe with her parents, and set up her own month-long exchange with a family she met in Guadeloupe. She has spent time in Toronto, London (Ont.) and Port Coquitlan, B.C. on exchange trips, as well as visiting the Terry Fox Centre in Ottawa.

But this will be her first time in Europe and she's excited. And just a little nervous.

START FROM ZERO

"It'll be a big change and it's going to be very hard at first," she said. "I'll make mistakes I'm sure because we don't have the same culture. But I'm ready to make mistakes and learn."

She has done some reading about the country, but most of it is outdated, so she's prepared to "start from zero."

There are 106 students from Canada participating in the exchange, and 150 from other countries coming to Canada. They are chosen on the basis of marks, participation in school and other activities, evidence of maturity and independence and other factors.

There has been some trouble locating host families in Canada. So far there are only about 80 available.

Although her college education may be delayed by the exchange, Lessard thinks it's worth it.

"We'll be much more mature after a year there," she said. "Other teenagers will seem very, very young."

Besides, she says, the education system is supposedly very good there, so she may be able to go directly to university once she returns.

Dig up the old stories for Bedford High reunion

As mentioned last week, the old Bedford High School will hold a reunion in '86. Organizers need names of students who attended dear old BHS. Graduates are known, but who was that funny looking kid who sat beside you in grade six and then left town? Who was the cute blonde in grade ten? Try to remember, then let somebody (Murray Gunson, Carole Soule or Kathy Kaiser) know who it is.

Another valuable contribution will be remembering school stories. Does anyone remember Bert Gittens standing outside the grade eleven windows (second floor) to wave at the teacher as she came in? Who today (except myself) recalls the sight of a leggy BHS defenceman guarding our often porous net wearing hand-knitted hockey stockings that alternated three inch purple and gold stripes all the way up? Let me tell you, it worked. Just ask anyone who ever tried to shoot a puck while giggling madly.

At a reunion we can all compare the different techniques of education we suffered through at one stage or another. In my day it was "back-to-basics", not the three R's, but Bedford's version of the ideal education system, Socrates sitting on one end of a log with a student at the other. When the school bought desks, things improved. The trick back then (after teaching the art of cutting a fine nib on the turkey feather) was to keep students coming to school until they caught some education. It usually happened between mumps and whooping cough.

Y'ALL COME
There will be a meeting on June 18th to discuss details of the reunion. It's a "Y'All come" affair. In particular, organizers need pictures and memorabilia. For those of us who attended during WWII and before, don't worry if you can't find memorabilia. WE are the memorabilia.

Next week, on the 11th of June, the Farnham School will hold its annual year-end awards dinner. The purpose is to honour students in the categories of academics, sport and citizenship. There are still tables available at the Bedford Social Club flea market and rummage sale to be held on June 8th (this Saturday) at the Masonic

In the long-range reminder category, don't forget the Legion Poppy Day Brunch, 9:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. on June 16th. The $3.00 you pay to get in supports the Poppy Fund.

It's not too late to buy a ticket for the Missisquoi Historical Society's historic house tour this Saturday. Buy your ticket at the museum. Ten dollars, ten places to visit and no tour director asking you to shuffle faster. After you finish, there's a tea which I'm told will be on the museum lawn. For those who insist, tea will also be available in cups. Cost for that is $2.50.

SAVE THE BMP

As many of you know, the Brome Missisquoi Perkins Hospital may become a chronic care facility. A group called "The Friends of BMP" is being formed to lobby the government in case they react to those by-elections by implementing the bizarre plan. Anyone willing to help save the hospital should phone Townshippers (263-4422) in Cowansville or Tina Gasser in Pike River (248-2954).

Finally, I spent last weekend cavorting at the Alliance Quebec Annual Meeting. Marjorie Goodfellow, President of Townshippers, was elected Vice President (actually, she was acclaimed, but this sounds more democratic), and Royal Orr, Former Executive Director of Townshippers is the new Off-Island Vice President. We are slowly taking over.

Alliance Quebec only made one mistake all weekend. They somehow allowed Dr. Jim Ross of Sherbrooke to escape from the post of Chairman. The good doctor runs a tight ship and most speakers under him end their remarks on time. His technique is simple. When it's time for speakers to sit down, Jim stands up and goes to peer over their shoulder. Nothing so concentrates a speakers mind on getting off the stage quickly as having one of Quebec's prominent surgeons staring at them with a professionally speculative look in his eye.

Katimavik receives environment award

MONTREAL — The Katimavik program received an award from the United Nations Environmental Program in New York Wednesday.

Katimavik, the national volunteer program for Canadian young people between 17 and 21, is receiving the award for the example it has set by involving thousands of young people in community service activities aimed at protecting the environment and preserving natural resources.

With this award, the UN recognizes Katimavik's efforts in protecting the environment since 1977, and particularly since 1984 when more than two million trees were planted throughout Canada under its special tree project.

Katimavik shares this honor with the California Conservation Corps, with which it worked for the past two years in a joint conservation project in California and British Columbia.

Science journalist David Suzuki and Senator Herbert Sparrow are also Canadian recipients of awards for their contribution to environmental protection.

St. Paul's Church news

KNOWLTON (KT) — At St. Paul's Church, Sunday, May 26, readers at 10 a.m. were Merle Sykes and Wendy Paige. Servers (8 a.m.) Zip Johnson-Main, (10 a.m.) Linda Martin. Sidesfolk (8 a.m.) Tom Trenholme; (10 a.m.) Barry and Vicky Dyball. Communion Helper Bob Wismer. Prayers were said for the Deacon's ordination at the Cathedral the next Sunday and for the ordination to the diaconate of M. Yvon Pilon at St. Edouard's Church. For the sick: Fred Whitehead. For a son born to Michel and Joy Royea.

One of the strengths of St. Paul's Church is the diversity represented in the congregation, coming from different backgrounds. When expressing Christian faith, different people prefer different styles of worship. Recognizing this reality, Father Murray and the Corporation have prayerfully and with much thinking of how to respond more adequately to the various expressed needs of the congregation, decided to offer an Evening Prayer service at 7:00 p.m. Sunday evenings on an experimental basis, throughout the summer. If well attended, it will be continued on as a regular service. It will begin on Sunday, June 9 and will be "traditional" evening prayer from the Book of Common Prayer, and will include a 15 minute homily and hymns. The extent to which the service can be sung will depend on the resources to provide for that. It is sincerely hoped this will encourage people to worship regularly who find the 10 a.m. service difficult.

Reminder: Life in the Spirit Seminar will be offered starting Tuesday, June 11 at 7:30 p.m. The seven evening course offers a way to deepen your faith.

The Church Picnic will be held after the 10 a.m. service on Sunday, June 16. There will be Sunday School attendance prizes, eats and games, right on the beautiful church grounds. Let's have everyone plan to attend!

Ordination to the Diaconate took place on Sunday, June 2, Paul Charbonneau, Kenneth Lee, Charles Morris, Arthur McKibbin.

Compton County Women's Institute holds 72nd annual meeting

The 72nd annual meeting of the Compton County Women's Institute was hosted by the Brookbury Branch in the Bury Town Hall on Tuesday May 7 at 10 a.m. with the president Mrs. Lavina French presiding. The meeting was opened with the Opening Ode, Salute to the Flag, and a moment's silence for deceased members, after which an appropriate poem was read by the president.

Mrs. Faye Coleman gave the address of welcome and 30 members answered the roll call, with all five branches represented. A motion was made to accept the minutes as circulated, also to change the agenda if necessary.

The plaque for the names of deceased Life members was on display. Mrs. Ruth Nugent explained the different ways that names could be engraved, but all agreed that the names appear like this: ex. Mrs. James Parkinson (Eldora) East Clifton W.I. Heading on the plaque to read: Compton County honours deceased Life Members. A motion was made that each branch pay twenty dollars towards having the names engraved on the plaque. Mr. Fred Robinson was kindly offered to make a box suitable to keep the Book of Remembrance in while it is at the Compton County Museum.

Life Membership information to be sent to Mrs. Nina Rowell as soon as possible, so that she can update the book. Mrs. Ruth Nugent, treasurer, gave her report and a report of the auditor. All convenors gave their reports showing that much work had been done in the branches throughout the year. Mrs. Muriel Fitzsimmons gave a report of Bursary Fund, and report of the auditor. Application forms for bursaries were distributed among the branches to give out in their local area.

Money was voted to the bursary fund, and to pay all bills including honorariums.

Correspondence was read, which included thank-you notes from Cookshire, Bury, and Sawyerville Primary schools for money received from the County to purchase books for their libraries to observe World Food Day. Bursary recipients: Misses Jennifer Epps, Kelly Rothney, Laurie Jenkins and Trudy Deacon. An appeal for funds from Sherbrooke Hospital re their annual campaign. A donation of $100.00 was voted to this worthy cause.

Judges were appointed for the J. & P. Coats and Q.W.I. handicraft competition at the County level.

Pennies for Friendship were collected. Old papers re: Compton Co. W.I. Bursary Fund were handed in to be kept with other Compton Co. W.I. material in storage.

The meeting adjourned for lunch, and after a delicious meal, the meeting reconvened with the Queen. Mrs. Flora McIntyre, as County Convenor of Education, and Cultural Activities (including handicrafts) congratulated those who had brought in handicraft for the competitions. J. & P. Coats crocheted Christmas tree ornaments — Mrs. Mabel Mackay and Mrs. Frances Bain. Q.W.I. apron — Mrs. Lavina French. Knitted vest — Mrs. Geraldine Lowry and Mrs. Wilda Robinson. A demonstration on tatted Christmas tree ornaments by Mrs. Wilda Robinson.

A suggestion was made that afghans be included in J. & P. Coats' competition.

Reports were given on Status of Women, Family Policy and Women's Day at Bishop's.

A motion was made to nominate Mrs. Lavina French as Provincial Convenor of Agriculture and Canadian Industries.

Ladies Auxiliary branch 10 hold regular meeting

SHERBROOKE — On May 21 the Ladies Auxiliary of Royal Canadian Legion Br. 10 met in the Legion Hall. The meeting was opened by the President Rita Morin. Roll call was read by 1st Vice Claudette O'Malley with 15 members responding.

Minutes of the last general meeting and executive meeting was read by the Secretary Annette Dubois, those being approved. Treasurer Marg Smith gave her report and mentioned that a more complete report will be given at the June meeting. She also mentioned that she hoped to be able to have a report on the March of Dimes at the next general meeting, as there was still some cards out to be returned.

President Rita Morin wished a happy birthday to a couple of the girls who had birthdays during the month of May, Gwen Fuller and Bernice Walker. Before going into the business part of the meeting, a letter of resignation was read from Lila Morrison who has resigned as Sgt.-at-Arms. The President of the Senior Br., Roger Morin was called into the meeting to install a new Sgt.-at-Arms for the Aux. Kim Fuller was installed and will be carrying on the duties for the rest of the term.

President Rita Morin thanked the girls who worked for the two bowling banquets and the Spring supper. She read a list of coming events: June 8, Father's Day Dance, music by Mrs. Goulet (June 9, in the Lounge, Roland Daigle); June 9 at 2 p.m. Ladies Aux. general meeting. This will be a supper meeting and the last general meeting until September.

June 16, bus trip to Lake Megantic Branch. This is also District meeting at Megantic (any member interested on going by bus, please put your name on poster on bulletin board at Legion Br. 10 or tel. 563-4944); June 16 in the Lounge, John Foster.

Violet McNab, Chairman of Honor and Awards mentioned that she thought the membership book for the Ladies Aux. should be updated as this has not been done for the past few years and asked permission to have this done with the help of Rita Ross who is Membership Chairman and Gwen Fuller, one of our Past Presidents, she suggested that this should be done before the Honors and Awards Committee meets.

Colombe Mailhot thanked the girls who helped her in the kitchen for the Spring tea, and Claudette O'Malley also thanked the girls who helped in the dining room.

Before closing the meeting, the girls were asked to bring in a half loaf of sandwiches for the lunch after the Parade on D-Day. They will be phoned by the Telephone Committee. A reminder to all members to try and get to our next general meeting on June 9.

Before closing, would like to, on behalf of the Aux., extend congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Andy Forret who celebrated their 72nd wedding anniversary at the end of May, from all your friends from Branch 10.

St. George's ACW meeting

AYER'S CLIFF — The regular meeting of the A.C.W. of St. George's Church, here, was held at the home of Connie Ashworth on May 6 with seven members present.

President Alice Vance opened the meeting by leading the members in the A.C.W. prayers followed by the meditation from the Living Message.

The minutes from the previous meeting and correspondence were read by the secretary Lorraine Harrison. The treasurer's report showed a favorable bank balance after bills were paid. It was noted the proceeds from the last casserole dinner and the rummage sale were very satisfactory.

Plans for the Flea Market set for June 15 at 9 a.m. were finalized. It was also agreed that we pay our pledge and also decided to give a sum of money towards the A.C.W. Diocesan traveling fund.

Several planned to attend the ACW. Coffee party in Lennoxville on May 30.

It was agreed to give the Sherbrooke Hospital a sum of money and Maude Chadsey money for stamps etc. to carry on her work.

The business meeting was adjourned

Card of Thanks

GALLUP — I want to thank the Doctors and Nurses on the tenth floor at the C.H.U. for their patience and kindness to me during my stay there. With special thanks to Doctor Teijeira and Doctor Cote. And a thank you also to Doctor Jacques and the staff at the Sherbrooke Hospital while I was a patient there. To Michael Baker, for the good job he did looking after my cattle while I was away. To all who telephoned, sent cards and visited me in hospital and since I came home. Thank you so much.
MERRICK GALLUP

MACLEOD — The family of Mr. Fred MacLeod wish to express their sincere thanks for the many and various expressions of sympathy received during our recent bereavement. We wish to especially thank the Bearers, Margaret Couchman and the Choir, Rev. Walker and James Findlay for their words of comfort. We are very grateful to the Ladies Circle and friends for the lovely lunch served after the funeral.

Hydro Sherbrooke

more than a service

QUEBEC'S LARGEST INDEPENDENT ELECTRIC COMPANY

While municipally-owned electric companies are on the decrease in Quebec—where some fifteen such utilities exist, including those in Westmount, Joliette, Jonquière, and Amos—such is not the case in the rest of Canada; Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Edmonton, and Calgary being typical examples.

1,039,000,000 kW/h Sold in 1984

Sales totaling one billion thirty-nine million kW/h in 1984 make Hydro-Sherbrooke the leader of Quebec's independent utilities and account for 54 percent of the total electricity supplied by all Quebec independents. Today, Hydro-Sherbrooke has more than 125,000 subscribers.

Total Electricity Supplied by Independent Utilities

488,000 KW

Hydro-Sherbrooke: 54%

In response to increasing energy needs over the years, Hydro-Sherbrooke has turned to Hydro-Quebec to help meet local demands to such a degree that Hydro-Sherbrooke is now one of Hydro-Quebec's five best customers.

Hydro-Sherbrooke More Than a Distribution Network Area Served

An Ultramodern System

On a yearly basis, Hydro-Sherbrooke commits nearly $3.5 million to expansion and equipment modernization to improve the system's reliability and to provide, in the relatively long term, substantial savings.

Hydro-Sherbrooke uses its six power stations and two substations to generate and redistribute electricity to its customers. Although most of the stations were built sometime ago, they have been periodically modernized and now contain equipment which allows optimal operation. The Weedon and Westbury stations are remote controlled by UHF radio—a first in Quebec—which provides better control of peak demand periods among other things.

Computerized Billing

Hydro-Sherbrooke is presently computerizing its billing system which contains files for 48,968 customers. Once this long, complex process has been completed, billing and verification will be much easier.

A glimpse of the controls of the Richelieu transformer station, which provides remote control of the power stations and substations.

A Fleet of 43 Trucks

To ensure high-quality service to its customers, Hydro-Sherbrooke has a fleet of 43 trucks ranging from ten-wheel cherry pickers to late model vans. Each carries all the equipment required to maintain and repair our 86 traffic lights, the equipment mounted on the 15,500 poles along our streets, and the 925 km of wire crisscrossing our service area.

A Source of Pride for Sherbrooke Residents

Hydro-Sherbrooke's constant modernization and technical improvements clearly demonstrate our desire to provide our customers with ever-better service. And Hydro-Sherbrooke is a major force among the province's independent electric companies. More than ever, Sherbrooke residents have reason to be proud of and satisfied with their power company.

Helping Circle holds regular meeting

ROCK ISLAND (IH) — Mrs. Mildred Wheelock and Mrs. Alberta Rolleston were hostesses for Stanstead South Church Helping Circle on the evening of May 21 at the home of Mrs. Wheelock.

The president Madelyn Curtis opened the meeting with devotions reading passages of scripture, an interesting story on growth, a prayer, and invited all to recite the Lord's Prayer.

The secretary Mildred Lawton called the roll, and submitted the report from the April meeting. Ruth Putney, the treasurer, presented the financial report.

A sum of money was voted for the August Bible Vacation School. The three Ladies Units of the church will serve a supper in the church hall on June 20 for the Three Steeples choir to show appreciation to the men and women whose musical talents add to the worship service. They will also serve a luncheon in the church hall following a worship party at a restaurant, then all will return to the home of Katie and his family's departure from these Border communities.

The next Circle meeting will be on September 17 with Thelma Dustin to make arrangements for a supper party at a restaurant, then all will return to the home of Katie McCune in Rock Island for the transaction of business.

The meeting adjourned and the silent auction items went to the highest bidder and added a few dollars to the treasury. The hostesses served delicious refreshments during the social period.

The joy of giving

By James Jacoby

Declarers who win money at bridge follow a simple rule. They try very hard to make their contracts. They despise overtricks and search out ways to give up tricks, if by doing so they can guarantee their contracts. Greed got the best of the declarer in the diagramed deal. He won the opening lead with the club ace and played the king and ace of spades. The 4-1 trump split wrecked the hand. Of course a reasonable spade division would have netted 11 tricks. But it's not that rare for a suit to split badly. The winning line surrenders the possible overtrick. At trick two, declarer should play a low spade from both hands. Now the defenders can take a club and a heart in addition to their trump trick, but no more. When declarer regains the lead, he can successfully draw trumps and claim the rest. There is a circumstance that would overrule this approach. If the club played by East on the opening lead suggests that clubs might be divided 5-2 for the defenders, then South cannot risk ducking a spade. The third round of clubs might promote a trump as the setting trick when East holds a doubleton club.

Your Birthday

June 7, 1985

If you begin to make preparations and plans now, some distant place you've long desired to travel to can be visited in the year ahead. The ways and means to do so will be found. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Bits and pieces that didn't mesh together yesterday will fall into place today. Good things could be coming to you from all directions. Be watchful. Major changes are ahead for Gemini in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. CANCER (June 21-July 22) Assert your native shrewdness in joint ventures today. You are the one who can ethically arrive at a solution that will have advantages for all. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Do everything within your power to keep your valued alliances intact today. Partners can now play helpful roles in your affairs. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) More opportunities than usual exist today in your chosen field. Try to grasp what's happening because these circumstances have long-range benefits. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Keep your channels open today for faraway friends. Good news will be trying to break through to you from an unexpected, distant source. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Negative financial trends will do an about-face today. If you have suffered any losses recently, you'll now have a chance to recoup. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your warm sense of humor and broad, generous outlook are your tickets to success today. The kindness you show others will be reflected back to you. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Nominal opportunities, skillfully managed, will yield substantial returns in your capable hands today. Much can be made from little. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Ventures or enterprises that you originate or personally control have excellent chances for success today. Get out front and stay there. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Friends tend to share things with you today that they wouldn't divide with others. The worth of their gestures may startle you. ARIES (March 21-April 19) There are things just over the horizon that are about to bring you joy. Have a hopeful attitude today and focus on the new, instead of the old. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Financial and career conditions are especially favorable for you today. The tide is running with you and so is Lady Luck.

Cleveland Township to celebrate 130th anniversary

Richmond Q.F.A. Farm Day should have a new look this year. The Township of Cleveland, wanting a day to celebrate their 130th anniversary, have asked to take part in the event. It is hoped to have some new activities along with the usual free samples of farm products, Barbecue, displays of crafts, maple syrup, honey and sheepskins. Some new breeds of cattle will be on hand for visitors to see, along with the usual breeds, plus horses, ponies, sheep, pigs and fowl. Old and new machinery, antiques and various activities to take place throughout the day. A great opportunity for all county and town people to visit a farm, bring a picnic lunch or bry coffee, sandwiches and doughnuts which will be available. Picnic tables will be provided. All this to take place at the home of Gerald and Mona McGee on Route 143 between Windsor and Richmond on June 9, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Come and join us!

Recent callers at the Seymour home were Douglas McClay, Mrs. Dorothy Moynan, Ernest Seymour, West Bromme and Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Wright, Fulford. Mrs. Helen Seymour and daughter Miriam attended the graveside service in the Knowlton cemetery, Monday, May 20 for their sister and aunt, Mrs. Annie Proulx of Bondville, who passed away Saturday, May 18 at the Cote nursing home in South Bolton. Terry Sturtevant of Gaspé has completed his teaching duties there and spent a couple of days with his mother, Mrs. Ethel Sturtevant. Miss Helen Shipley of Bramalea, Ont. was accompanying Terry back to Toronto where both were hoping to find summer employment.

Mrs. Valentine Vintinner and Mrs. Alice Whitcher accompanied Mrs. Ethel Sturtevant of Mansonville Baptist Church Wednesday evening, May 22, to meet and listen to the seven young people, members of a tour group from the Baptist Leadership Education Center, Whitby, Ont.

Members of the Victory Fellowship Church met in the United Church, Waterloo, Sunday evening, May 19 for their annual congregational business meeting. This evangelical church's membership includes families from Knowlton, Cowansville, East Farnham, Foster, South Stukely, Ste. Anne de La Rochelle and Waterloo.

First Universalist Parish news

This Sunday, there will be a Question Box Sermon at First Universalist Parish, Derby Line at 10 a.m. Parishioners have been asked to put any questions they would like to have answered from the pulpit into a question box at the church. Rev. Brendan Hadash will attempt to answer the questions this Sunday. Questions received include the following: Why is baptism important? How about a talk on the spirituality of clowns. Are there any clowns in the Bible? If Jesus returned to earth in this 20th century, what would he say about the Christian faith? What is the soul? Is it different than the spirit? Why don't the Universalists feel free to keep God's 4th commandment to observe the 7th day, Saturday, as their day of rest instead of following the Christian change to Sunday? All are invited.

The Sunday School at First Universalist Parish, Derby Line will celebrate Japanese Children's Day this Sunday, June 9, at 9 a.m. Carp kites on poles and tissue peach blossoms will be made to emphasize the need for gentleness, courage and determination in both boys and girls. All children are invited to join us.

Boundary Rotary Club to hold 50th anniversary

On Wednesday, June 26, the Rotary Club of the Boundary will hold a gala celebration at the Border Motel Restaurant in Derby marking the 50th anniversary of the granting of a charter.

On this date 50 years ago the Boundary Club became the first truly international club drawing its membership from Rock Island, Stanstead, Beebe and Ayer's Cliff on the Canadian side of the international boundary and from Derby Line and Derby in Vermont. The club can proudly point to 50 years of service in this area where it is still very active in community affairs and ever striving to make the area a better place in which to live and carry on business.

The original sponsoring clubs of Newport and Sherbrooke will join in the celebration, as well as representatives of Rotary District 785 and Rotary International headquarters. Special invitations have gone out to all clubs of District 785, as well as all past presidents and officers of the Boundary Club. All former members of the Boundary Club are also urged to attend and reservations can be made by contacting Edward Hyatt at Stanstead or the president, Raymond Greenwood at Beebe, Vermont.

Guest speaker for the evening, following a happy hour and roast beef dinner, will be Gary Earl Heath of Montgomery, Alabama, a former Boundary Club president and the first of two District Governors from this club.

Bury to hold 59th Canada Day event

On June 30, in Bury, Que., the Bury Athletic Association will be presenting the 59th annual Canada Day celebrations.

The Association began this tradition in 1927 by having an athletic programme in the Memorial Park on Dominion Day. In 1930, the Grand Parade was added to the sports events and the day has grown and changed to what you know today.

This year with the assistance of the Canada Day Committee, we will be pleased to entertain you with Grand and Junior Parade; Children's Sports Events; Greased Pig Contest; Fiddler's Concert; Horse Pull; Amateur Hour; Fireworks.

Mark the date, June 30, on your calendar. Bring your lawnchairs and spend the day with friends and family in Bury, Que.
