The Conference Ends Successfully

For a month the Imperial Conference has been in progress at Ottawa and everywhere the question was asked as to what the probable results would be. Saturday saw the Conference come to a conclusion which exceeded the hopes of all who followed the Conference movements through newspapers from day-to-day.

Premier R. B. Bennett was chairman of the Conference, and many, and particularly his Liberal and Progressive opposition throughout Canada, were ready to be critical of his actions. It is quite true that Premier Bennett appears to take onto himself a burden of the country that might well be shared with other politicians; but he is continually proving himself genial and forceful, and has been the mainspring of this Imperial Conference.

The Imperial Conference was planned to enable the British Dominions to lead the world out of economic chaos and although no country attained every objective demanded, they all go home with something tangible which will likely be for the good of trade within each Dominion. Perhaps some of the twelve treaties signed on Saturday will not work out to the advantage for the country intended, but at least a start has been made in the right direction, and as successive conferences are held the weak spots in the treaties will be amended to bring satisfaction to every Dominion within the Empire. In speaking of the 12 trade treaties signed the Hon. Stanley Bruce of Australia said: "I attach the greatest importance to the spirit that lies behind them, and I would remind the conference that we have here carried through our negotiations on a basis of trying to promote mutual trade among ourselves, not by the exclusion of other nations, not by trying to place barriers around ourselves as against free competition, but we have endeavored inside the British Empire to effect our agreements and arrangements by the lowering of barriers and by the promotion of freer interchange of goods among ourselves. I trust that by the example which we have given here, we have demonstrated that peoples of varied interests, when they come together in a spirit of determination to succeed, can reconcile all differences, overcome all obstacles, by a spirit of mutual good-will and by a determination to aid each other rather than to try to gain advantage. That to my mind, is the great thing that has emerged from this conference."

As the United Kingdom treaty affects Canada Premier Bennett's Saturday speech in part reads:

The agreements signed constitute a definite advance towards closer Empire economic association. Because of this, we may fairly lay claim to an achievement greater than that of which any other conference can boast.

The fundamental difficulty heretofore preventing the consummation of an agreement founded on the principle for which we have stood has now been removed. We have commonly acknowledged that Empire association can be based advantageously upon the principle of reciprocal preferences, and by our several agreements have evidenced our belief that these preferences ensure the greatest benefits when they are predicated upon a general Empire tariff plan.

The agreement between the United Kingdom and Canada has affirmed in principle the proposals made by the Government of this country upon the opening day of the conference. On the one hand, Canada maintains existing preferences in the United Kingdom and secures the extension of that principle to our natural products. On the other hand, Canada balances these advantages by granting such tariff concessions as will place the United Kingdom manufactures on a basis of fair competition with domestic industries, having regard, of course, to such factors as the relative costs of production.

We have, moreover, decided upon the principle that this agreement must be safeguarded from unfair competition from foreign countries, and the United Kingdom, by the exclusion of such unfair competition, ensures effective operation of this agreement. These provisions offer an assurance against further attack upon our standards of living.

The Dominion Government has therefore succeeded, through reciprocal concessions, in manifesting the principle that protection, as we see it in this country, can be used as an instrument of national policy to secure an equalization of benefits as between natural and manufactured products. With frank agreement upon these principles, and with the tangible benefits which the terms of the agreement indicate will follow upon them, we should now be content. This Government does not pretend that it has secured all the advantages it desired, nor does any delegation.

Twelve treaties were signed, the United Kingdom signing seven treaties, viz: with Australia, South Africa, New Zealand, India, Newfoundland, Southern Rhodesia and Canada. Canada signed three trade treaties, viz: with Irish Free States, South Africa and Southern Rhodesia. South Africa and the Irish Free State signed a trade treaty as did also New Zealand and South Africa.

"The signing of these treaties is like the building of a foundation on which the future generations may erect as fair and stable an edifice as lies in their capacity to accomplish. It only remains for us to try and work in practice what we have achieved on paper, and with that sanity and forbearance which we hope will always characterize members of the British Commonwealth of Nations," said the Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin.

Go! Before the Schools Open

Within a few days our schools will be opened for the coming term. After the schools being closed for two months, and being used by the scholars for ten months, they are sure to call for renovations and decorations. Although the Dundee, Howick and St. Joseph's Schools are all new, they will undoubtedly need a certain amount of paint and varnish. It is to be hoped that these schools have already received their brushing up and that when varnish was used they did not copy the example set by Huntingdon Academy and use gloss varnish. We presume Huntingdon Academy thought they would be covering up a multitude of sins if they made things shine within the school building before it was officially opened and inspected by parents. The desks in Huntingdon Academy have been varnished with gloss varnish and if there is anything hard on the eyes of children or adults it is to get the glare off a shiny object, such as a desk. It would be well to have the desks in Huntingdon Academy done over in a dull finish before the portals are swung open for 1932-33 term.

A few days ago it was the writer's privilege to go through the Huntingdon Academy school buildings, and I came away more disgusted than ever with the conditions of these buildings. Can you imagine walking into a home, post office or public building, and as you enter the door and look down the hallway see a disgusting, primitive looking toilet for the girls before you. Yet, that is just what you see in Huntingdon Academy. When we say the toilet is primitive, we say, go and see for yourself, and we feel certain you will say they are disgusting, unsanitary appearing and possibly the reason why so much sickness prevailed amongst the scholars during the past term.

After you see the five lavatory compartments for the 150 or so girls that attend Huntingdon Academy, see what is worse in the way of lavatories for the boys. After you have seen this $6,000 fireproof lavatory with a cedar shingle roof, inspect all the class rooms. The class rooms are miserably small, poorly lighted and blackboard interferences are to be found galore. Note also the very temporary partitions that have been erected. These partitions stop vision, but they do not hinder sound. The scholars can not help but have their attention distracted on account of lessons being heard in adjoining rooms. Now go and see the schools you will send your sons and daughters to this fall.

Huntingdon Academy is lagging behind, for Dundee, Howick and St. Joseph's have new schools, Ormstown will have a new school this fall and Huntingdon puts up with dismal classrooms about which nothing good can be said.

Go now and see your school building before school opens.

Insulate House With Moss

Prof. Victor E. Shelford, department of zoology, University of Illinois, who visited the Churchill, Man. region in the early summer, plans to have his residence in Champaign-Urbana, Illinois, insulated with barren lands moss, according to word received. Prof. Shelford, who is an authority on the lower forms of plant life, believes that the moss will serve the double purpose of keeping out cold in winter and heat in summer. He secured data on the moss while in Churchill, and when in Winnipeg discussed the commercial possibilities of the moss with F. V. Seibert, superintendent of the department of natural resources, Canadian National Railways.

One of Five Million

Calling at the war department in Washington, a young man asked to be identified. He had lost his memory and did not even remember his name, but had a dim recollection of serving in the army. His finger prints were taken and a comparison with the five million prints on file showed the man was Benjamin Spis of Norfolk, Va. Now he is on his way back to begin life anew and hopes that familiar faces and scenes will restore his memory. Some day, it is hoped, there will be finger prints of every human being in this country on record for the public good as well as for the benefit of all individuals who behave themselves.

Bees Enter "Racket War"

Insects entered "racket wars" as a new weapon in Cincinnati, Ohio. Bees were liberated among patrons of a theatre, and, though the perpetrators denied any plot existed, police were ordered to investigate reports that the action heralded use of insects of all kinds in efforts to intimidate theatre operators into hiring projector operators graduated from a Cincinnati school. Three unemployed operators were fined for releasing the bees.

Sight Brought Fear

So long as Earl Musselman, 23, Allentown, Pa., was blind, he did not realize what a dangerous world of speed he was living in and was never afraid. He always went alone and had no fear of going anywhere, guiding himself by the "feel" of objects and his sense of direction. A delicate operation and one artificial eye has given Musselman a 30 per cent vision and now he is afraid to venture out alone. The speed at which cars whiz by him terrify him. His intuitive knowledge and confidence are gone and he is obliged to have a guide wherever he goes. Perhaps he will get over this timidity in time.

Marriage of Midgets

The smallest bride and bridegroom who have ever wed in the smithey at Gretina Green were recently married there. The smallest woman in the world was one of the witnesses. The pair are members of a troupe then performing at a Carlisle theatre. The bridegroom, 32, was George Stoddart. He is 28 inches high. The bride was Miss Evelyn Crane, 32, and four inches shorter than her husband. William MacGregor, three feet high, was best man.

Barber Gets Surprise

Adolph Hoelcher, a barber at Hesson, near Stratford, Ont., trimmed the hair of a stranger and then opened a conversation. Hoelcher came from Austria many years ago. So did the stranger. He came from a small town which he mentioned. So did the stranger. He mentioned the family and friends in the old country. Suddenly the stranger rose from the chair and shook hands. It was John Hoelcher, of Cleveland, brother of Adolph, who had heard of the barber's whereabouts and had come to find him. John was born in Austria but set out for the United States before Adolph was born.

Asleep Six Months

Psychology aligned itself with medicine in the endeavor to open the eyes of Patricia Maguire, 27, who has been asleep six months at her home in suburban Oak Park, Michigan. A well-known psychoanalyst, head of the psychology department of a mid-west university, offered his services to physicians attending Miss Maguire. Miss Maguire's case has baffled the medical world. Doctors have diagnosed her illness as a form of sleeping sickness, but its duration is unprecedented. The psychoanalyst said certain circumstances surrounding the case suggested to him its basis was psychological rather than physical.

Ear Frozen in August

Advocates of keeping cool get lukewarm support from Fred Archer. While the rays of a hot August sun beat down on Belleville, Ontario, he added comment came from the fact that the plants and flowers appear stronger and larger than those grown in other parts of the community. They have been growing in this location for years, but only on the "Glorious Twelfth" do they seem to attract more than passing comment. Father Gerard Todd, of Assumption Church, said with a smile that he might wear one of the blooms in his buttonhole only they were too large.

Modest Dress Decreed

School teachers at Beauce Junction, Que., must wear modest costumes of non-transparent material, buttoned to the neck, with sleeves to the wrist and the skirt not higher than eight inches from the ground, decrees a resolution passed by Beauce Junction School Commission. The commission voted to continue the present salary rate for women school teachers of $225 per annum.

When Clerk Released Tear Gas

Schenectady, N. Y., residents wept copiously, but there were no tears of grief. It all happened because an employe of the Schenectady Savings Bank accidentally placed his stool on the button releasing the bank's supply of tear gas. In a few seconds employes and customers bolted for the door, tears streaming down their cheeks. The gas followed them, and circulated up and down State Street, causing passing motorists and pedestrians to weep. An hour elapsed before the air was purified sufficiently for the banking force to resume the day's work.

Five Fathers Qualify

Five Reigate, England, fathers have won certificates of merit telling the world that they know how to look after a baby. They know: What to do when left with a fretting infant; how to detect the first symptoms of measles or mumps; and what sort of food the child requires. The Reigate Town Council has a special department for teaching fathers, and organized a "father-craft" competition. The five fathers attended, and successfully answered a questionnaire. Mrs. Powell, chairman of the child welfare committee, explained: "It is not suggested that fathers are without knowledge of this question, but often situations arise in which, if the mother is absent, the father is placed at a disadvantage."

Dog Found by Surgical Scar

An operation is valuable in more ways than one. It has been proved by Tiny, a Pekinese dog owned by the socially prominent Mr. and Mrs. Wolcott Blair, of Chicago. While the Blairs were in Europe, Emil Sherman, former butler in their home, saw a dog which he believed was Tiny. Tiny had been missing for several months. There was no accurate means of identifying the dog until Dwight C. Swanson, secretary to Blair, appeared. "Look at the pup's tummy," he said. "If there is a scar from a surgical operation, it is Tiny." The scar was discovered, with the result that Tiny was restored to his rightful owners.

He Likes His Bumps

Orlando Steinolo, of Boston, Mass., at the age of four, has developed an alarming propensity for fawing down and going boom. They picked him out of the yard after he had fallen 28 feet from a second storey window. He was only scratched. It was the fourth time he had fallen from the same window. Orlando enjoys a good cat and dog fight, and is prone to tumble out the window in the excitement.

Lightning Below, Too

Lightning not only comes from the clouds but may jump from the ground under certain conditions, declares J. C. Jensen in a scientific article in the Physical Review. Jensen says that "negative" lightning as well as positive branches both up and down, and that the negative flash is the more deadly. The general scientific belief has been that the "branching" seen in a lightning flash goes from positive to negative clouds or earth. Coming at you from above and below both, there's not much use trying to dodge lightning.

Nearly Buried as Pauper

Tommy Malle, of Chicago, Ill., composer of lyrics for popular songs, who was saved from a grave in Potter's field by the intervention of friends, has been revealed as the possible possessor of an uncollected estate of approximately $100,000. The armless composer left a will in which he bequeathed his estate to William Herring. An attorney representing Herring offered the will for probate. In doing so, he told the court that certain song publishing companies owed Malle that much in royalties at the time of his death.

Value of Wives Fallen

Value of wives has taken a severe slump in the Warmbaths district of the Transvaal. Based on ruling cattle prices, their value has fallen by about sixty per cent. Hitherto wives had been regarded by the natives as an economic asset, but now they are a decided liability. A "high class" wife can now be obtained for the equivalent of about $80, but second-hand and inferior wives are being practically given away in exchange for three head of cattle—valued at about $25.

Child With Razor Blade

A most peculiar accident recorded occurred at the Post Office corner in Cornwall, Ont., recently. Mr. R. Pimm was standing on the corner waiting to board a street car when a girl some six years of age, on a tricycle, ran into him. The young rider, it appears, was carrying a razor blade in one of her hands and as her machine collided with Mr. Pimm the blade came in contact with Mr. Pimm's left hand, inflicting a severe laceration. Why a child of such tender years, or any young person, for that matter, should be carrying such a dangerous weapon as a razor blade under any circumstances, yet alone riding on a tricycle, proved to be beyond Mr. Pimm's imagination.

Lilies Too Large to Wear

Orange lilies blooming alongside the tennis court of Assumption Roman Catholic Church, within 100 feet of the church edifice in Sandvich, Ontario, created some comment because of the 12th of July. Added comment came from the fact that the plants and flowers appear stronger and larger than those grown in other parts of the community. They have been growing in this location for years, but only on the "Glorious Twelfth" do they seem to attract more than passing comment. Father Gerard Todd, of Assumption Church, said with a smile that he might wear one of the blooms in his buttonhole only they were too large.

To Guide City Visitors

The "Teleguide," a mechanical aid to strangers, has made its appearance in Columbus, Ohio. The device, an invention of Michael Abel, consists of a large scale map of the central portion of the city, over which are scattered 900 little lights corresponding to various public buildings, places of interest and business firms. Each light is numbered and listed on a large directory board. The stranger seeking the location of the county courthouse, on referring to the directory, finds it is number 362. He steps to an instrument, similar to an automatic telephone and dials a number. Light 362 glows, marking the courthouse. Three "Teleguides," constructed at a cost of $30,000 will be available to the public soon. One will be installed in the Union station. The others will be placed in the city's two largest hotels. It was said that negotiations were under way for installing "Teleguides" at the Century of Progress at Chicago next year to direct visitors to the various exhibits.

Handle Your Tractor Wisely

The tractor has found its way on to numerous farms and into the hands of drivers with just as numerous tendencies and varying degrees of ability.

Although the tractor is not difficult to understand and manage, there are certain things that should be given attention if the machine is to be expected to give the service for which it was built.

In the first place the tractor owner should follow the instructions of the firm that manufactures the implement and of the agent who sells it to him. These instructions are made as few and as simple as possible, but they consider their vital or they would not suggest them.

In addition the following points should be kept in mind:—

Never race your motor.

Don't measure the depth of petrol with a dirty stick.

Don't let your tractor get to squeaking—keep it up tight.

By keeping your ploughshares sharp you will save a great deal of fuel.

Don't overload, don't overlook lubrication, don't neglect needed repairs.

Don't use common black oil on bearings. Such oil is not suited to the purpose. Don't expect the seeming impossible of your tractor, as you will be bound to be disappointed.

Many a tractor driver thinks he is the whole cheese when in reality he is only a piece of one.

Don't drive with a slipping clutch. Study its construction and master the methods of its adjustment.

No matter how busy he thinks he is the successful driver is never too busy to keep his bearing tight.

A little bit of caution on the part of the driver when in a bad predicament will often save him a great deal of trouble.

Statue Held Up by Two Peoples

Senior Daniel V. del Burgo, consul general of Chile in this country, has given a most interesting description of "The Christ of the Andes," the inspiring sculpture which stands at a mountainous elevation of 4,000 meters (13,000 feet) on the Chilean-Argentine frontier, says the newspaper La Verdad, of Caracas, Venezuela.

Senior del Burgo says of this appealing figure that the suggestion for its establishment came from seeing the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor. It is seven meters high (23 ft.) and weighs three tons. It can be perceived for many kilometers on all the routes connecting the two republics of Argentina and Chile and is held in veneration by the peoples of both nations because it was erected in 1902, to seal and commemorate the peaceful settlement of the final disputes between the two great South American republics. It was the women of these two countries who collected most of the funds necessary to defray the cost of the statue and its transportation and erection and whose influence was most exerted on the respective governments to provide a site and perpetual maintenance for the monument.

"The Christ of the Andes" stands in a lonely and desolate spot, much the same, no doubt, as the wilderness in which "The Man of Sorrows" spent 40 days of his life in prayer and fasting. Yet the statue is not really lonely nor deserted, but visited constantly by thousands in their journeys to and fro, who call it, too, "The Christ of Amity," for this statue is the symbol of the bonds of friendship which henceforth and forever knit these two peoples together in a Christian fellowship.

It took twelve innings of nip and tuck baseball to decide the issue, and our old friend, Vernon Shires, turned back the opposition by a score of 6-3. Right up until the latter half of the twelfth stanza the score read three all, but M. A. A. had not reckoned on our last stand, which proved to be a thriller. Hicks, the pitcher for M. A. A., walked the first two batters to face him in the 12th and then a third batter, picked out a ball that looked good to him and slammed it over the right field fence for a home-run which brought in three runs.

It is a city of great and splendid buildings—the town hall and the royal palace are of the first order in Europe. The spacious streets are lined with gay and palatial hotels and quiet, lovely homes.

But perhaps the waterways and the islands on which the city is built are what make Stockholm not just beautiful, but beautiful.

FORTY-FIVE YEARS OF PROGRESS

A forgotten artist, too modest to sign his name, and a second-hand dealer form the strange combination that brought to light one of the best examples of the growth of Canada's trade with the Orient.

Some idea of the development of shipping in the 45 years may be gained by a comparison. The "Abyssinia" was 363 feet six inches long, 42 1/2 feet wide, had a tonnage of 3,376 and a speed of 15 knots.

Another artist, chancing upon the picture, imposed it upon a photograph of the latest Canadian Pacific ship in the Orient trade, the magnificent Empress of Japan. They are shown above in exact proportion as they would have appeared passing each other on the broad wastes of the Pacific.

Prof. Piccard Makes Record

Cavallaro di Monzarrano, Italy, August 18.—Auguste Piccard and Max Cosens came down to earth this afternoon, having gazed on the world from the greatest altitude ever attained by man—more than 10 miles. When they landed they were somewhat shaky, very tired, and exceedingly modest. Swarms of persons, including Government officials, who came by aeroplane, descended on them, but neither Piccard nor Cosens was in a mood to accept applause. Professor Piccard made certain that the balloons which had taken him to the stratosphere were well cared for and that his delicate scientific instruments, which may have recorded evidence to indicate whether the universe is dying or immortal, were safe. Their altitude was 16,700 metres or 54,775 feet. On his first flight last year the top height was 51,793 feet. Professor Piccard, 48 years old, lean, his head crowned by a shaggy mass of hair, and his 25-year-old assistant, took off at 5:06 o'clock this morning (11:05 p.m. Wednesday, Eastern Standard Time) at Dubendorf, on the other side of the Alps in Switzerland. They were in the air about 12 hours.

Captain Mollison's Record

Saint John, August 20.—Firmly established as one of aviation's great, Captain J. A. Mollison, Australian flyer, awoke today with the pleasant realization that the ordeal of his record solo flight from Portmarnock, Ireland, was a thing of the past. Refreshed by a good night's sleep, he felt a different man than the weary flyer who landed safely in his Puss Moth plane at Pennfield Ridge yesterday thirty hours and ten minutes after leaving the Irish airport. The flying Scot was enthusiastic regarding the performance of his plane and its 120 horsepower engine. Named after Heart's Content, Nfld., which he had expected would be his first sight of land after crossing the ocean, the small ship was jocularly referred to as "flying gas tank" owing to fuel tanks specially constructed to accommodate a large load. He started out with 170 gallons of gas and this prevented him from reaching an altitude of more than 5,000 feet. For hours he flew blindly through fog but his navigating skill was equal to the test.

Imperial Conference Concluded

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 20.—The curtains fell on the Imperial Economic Conference here today and as the delegates started for distant homes, the luncheon of the National Women's Law Enforcement Committee was held to fall chiefly upon Russia and the United States. The chief results were: 1. Agreement that Great Britain will bar the sale of Russian, or other, goods in the United Kingdom at less than world prices. 2. Trade preference pacts which will mean an estimated loss of $50,000,000 a year to the United States in sales of iron and steel products of empire countries, particularly Canada, as well as the loss of an indeterminate amount of textile business. As an offset to this, the empire spokesmen suggested, the United States, which sold the British empire $1,100,000,000 worth of goods last year despite the depression, had reason to be gratified because the way to prosperity was paved for one-fourth of the world's population. The trade preference pacts signed here today, they said, would set in motion an accumulation of goods representing the economic fortune of 450,000,000 people and the ability of these millions to buy improves their ability to take a larger share of world products would increase.

ORMSTOWN W. C. T. U.

From the Union Signal, official organ of the U.S. National W.C.T.U. (June 25, 1932.)
The Woman's Christian Temperance Union does not stand alone among women as opposed to the repeal of the 18th Amendment in the U.S. The General Federation of Parents and Teachers, the National Education Association, the Council of Women for Home Missions, the Council of Women's Foreign Missionary Societies, the Federation of Church Women, the Women's National Prohibition Reform Committee are all on record as supporting prohibition and its enforcement. "The revolt of women of this country against prohibition and in favor of repeal," is a favourite theme of the "women's organization for National Prohibition Reform," according to them, the representative women of the nation are turning their backs by hundreds of thousands against the dry law. This association is challenged to prove the statement. The testimonies given at the Loyalty Luncheon of the National Women's Law Enforcement Committee was convincing proof that it is not true. No, the women revolt is a fiction, fabricated by the wet organizations. Recently the wet press circulated the statement that Mrs. T. A. Edison had called prohibition a failure and expressed the desire to have it repealed. At the Loyalty luncheon this was negated most emphatically by a telegram received from the great inventor's widow in which she re-affirmed her belief and confidence in the law. Very evidently the men of the higher classes do not look with favor on that minority of women who have followed the leadership of the Mrs. Sabin crowd. Sitting in the lobby of Congress Hotel in Chicago this hectic convention week, a woman wearing a not-at-all conspicuous badge that indicated she was a "dry" was accosted several times by gentlemen, delegates to the Republic Convention, with appreciation of what that badge meant, and the remark, "Well, I am glad to see you are on the dry side." I can't understand how any group of women can come out against prohibition.
The Department of Trade and Commerce has just issued its annual Report on the Control and Sale of Liquor in Canada. While stating that it is impossible to obtain accurate figures on the consumption of liquor in the Dominion, the Report shows gross sales of wines, beer and spirits amounting to $133,301,948. There were 35,789 convictions for drunkenness and 18,132 convictions of the Liquor Acts, while 1,799 persons were convicted of driving while drunk.

Small Stature no Bar to Great Achievement

There has been a great many short men besides "the little corporal," the five-foot-two Napoleon, who have made the world sit up and take notice. Two of our Presidents were among them, Martin Van Buren and John Quincy Adams. Martin Van Buren was often alluded to as "the little magician," because of his shortness of stature and his mastery of political wizardry. And there was Stephen A. Douglas, scarcely more than five feet tall, affectionately nicknamed "the little giant."
Gen. George B. McClellan, the Democratic candidate against Abraham Lincoln in 1864, was "Little Mac," and sometimes paradoxically "Little Napoleon," a title which he shared with General Beauregard. Admiral Farragut was five feet six and a half inches tall.
Oliver Wendell Holmes, John Paul Jones and Gen. Phil Sheridan were each five feet; Beethoven was scarcely more than five feet four; John Keats a little more than five feet, and Swinburne and Whistler are given as five feet or so in stature.
Other men who are described as being short, or under medium height were Chaucer, Michelangelo, Chopin, John Milton, Robertspiter, Alexander Pope, Savonarola, Thomas B. Macaulay, Charles Lamb, Isben, Thoreau, Thomas Moore, William H. Seward, William Ellery Channing, Andrew Carnegie and Alexander Hamilton.

CHAPTER VIII

Dreadfully the girl regarded the stranger. "Jack Waring!"—where had she heard that name before? It meant nothing to Susan.

She tried to regain her composure. Waring seemed oddly familiar. Having deposited his rakish Panama hat on the empty desk he straightened his lilac-tinted tie and demanded again, still more jovially, "What's up? Can I help? Come, tell Papa all about it!"

If the ruination of the freshly typed sheet of bond paper in the letter press had not already engrossed the girl's mind she might have smiled at this sally. As it was she could only stare at him with dewy eyes which threatened at every instant to brim over again. "By jingo, the girl's a beauty!" said Jack Waring, half to himself. Susan, confused, caught the ghost of a grin hovering on the thin lips of the observer. Pierson, who had emerged from the office vault.

Pierson now mumbled, "Miss Carey, Mr. Waring. Don't believe you've met before."

Waring bowed royally. "Delighted, I'm sure. Quite an addition to our happy little family. And now can I help the little lady?"

Although Susan hated being called "little lady" above all things she could not deny that the purring softness of Mr. Waring's voice had a soothing quality. Besides, she was utterly overcome by the fiasco of the copied letter. So she extended it to this man, saying quietly, "It is spoiled. Ruined. And I did try—"

Her self-control threatened to desert her. Sheer tragedy it seemed to Susan, that the beautifully neat and correct sheets already signed by the exquisite flourish of the absent Mr. Heath, should be destroyed by her error. In youthful despair she was ready to resign, feeling herself disgraced.

"Oh, is that all?" Waring's laugh somehow reassured her.

"Let me look at it." He took the limp sheets from her hand and gazed at them intently.

"Here!" Susan's eyes followed him fascinated as he led the way to her desk.

"Only the first sheet is spoiled," he said rapidly. "Copy it over. Let me see the book."

She gave it to him and he smiled. "This darn thing's all right," he observed. "All you have to do is type the first sheet over. Quick—before the boss gets back! We'll pop 'em in to an envelope and nobody the wiser."

Susan gasped. Waring's eyes twinkled at her. "It's as easy as that," he cried. "Hop to it! He's hunching at the cub with old Sartre. I passed them 10 minutes ago, and they hadn't got to dessert. Hurry, and I'll check it with you as soon as you've finished!"

Fervent with eagerness, Susan obeyed. Her fingers flew over the familiar keys. With the obliging newcomer she checked the figures and found them correct. Then she folded the letter, prayerfully stamped it, and with a thankful heart cast it into the slot beside the elevator. Just in time, too, because the punctilious Mr. Ernest Heath emerged from the car as she turned to walk away.

"Finished that Sholl copying?" he asked, adjusting his eye-glasses.

Susan nodded. "It's gone," she murmured.

Mr. Heath looked pleased. "Good," he approved firmly. "Good."

Susan felt like a thief and a traitor but held her tongue.

"I can't be fired," she told herself. As the days passed Susan slipped into a fixed and demanding routine. From the moment Ernest Heath arrived in the morning, crisply and immaculately dressed, her time, her very thought, were his. The little world of the office with its soft carpets, its cool breezes straying in from the lake, its ink-wells and blotters and neat, ordered way, completely absorbed her. Aunt Jessie and her nagging complaints were far away. So was the tiny cottage on the shabby street.

Susan learned many things. She learned how an unimportant caller may be courteously turned away and how an important one may be wooed to linger if early for an appointment. She learned how to keep the difficult Pierson in good humor and how to please her just but demanding employer.

One thing she could not seem to master. That was the problem of keeping Mr. Jack Waring in what Aunt Jessie would have called "his place."

Jack Waring, 38, divorced, agreeable, fond of dancing, sport cars and feminine companionship, refused to believe Susan would not flirt with him.

Waring was not used to being snubbed. In fact, he didn't know what snubs were. He turned an invincible armor to them. He laughed at slings. Susan seemed to him a delectable piece of femininity, incredibly innocent, a toy to be played with. She provided a piquant sauce for his sophisticated palate.

Her very difference from the women he knew interested and attracted him. Some days he would scarcely have called her pretty. Her skin was ordinarily too pearl-pale to win his admiration. But those eyes of hers, so mellifluous, eloquent, black and gray by turns! That dark, soft, curling mass of hair and those childishly pink lips, untouched by lip-salve. That deliciously merry laugh! All these enchanted and exasperated him.

Jack Waring had been married young—at 22—to a girl he had extravagantly adored. At 35 he had gone through the painful and disillusioning business of the divorce courts. He had been fiercely and angrily wounded both in his pride and his love. He had for the space of six months thought that life was a futile and grievous burden. Then abruptly, to the surprise and delight of his friends, he had taken a new lease on living. He had decided, though at the slight and arrows had shaken off seriousness and had begun ardently to pursue pleasure. Light amours were his, snatched kisses. He had become a dancing man after 13 years of sturdy and ra-

Scarlet, aghast, Susan leaped to her feet.

She was speechless. No words came to her defense. She twisted her hands, looking in her angry innocence the very picture of guilt.

Ernest Heath's thin lips drew together in a straight, forbidding line. He strode into the private office without another glance at the girl. Over his shoulder he threw these words:

"I'd like to see you at once, Waring. Alone."

CHAPTER IX

Susan came out of Ernest Heath's office shaken but serene. The dreaded interview was over and with it had gone her sense of wrathful shame. Jack Waring had apologized manfully, had taken the entire blame for the awkward scene.

All Mr. Heath had said to Susan was, "Waring has explained he was annoyed you and has promised it won't happen again."

He had directed a cold, angry glance at the younger man, Waring, who evidently enjoyed the playing of this particular role, had made a gallant little gesture of defeat and accepted his dismissal with dramatically bowed head.

"That's all, Miss Carey," Heath had concluded. "And now will you take a letter, please?" It had been as simple as that!

Nothing, Susan felt, would surprise her after the events of this altogether surprising day. Over and over again on the way home in a street car teeming with hot humanity she rehearsed the little scene. She could help admitting that Waring had behaved rather well. But of course it had been his own fault, she assured herself.

Her cheeks burned at the memory. "What did you say, Aunt Jessie?" Susan asked, absently, as she accepted from her aunt's grained hand the plate heaped with potato salad and cold ham.

Her aunt snapped, "I said that young fellow called twice tonight just before you got into the house and said he'd be out around eight."

"What young fellow?" Susan said, started out of her daze.

Primly Aunt Jessie replied, "Mr. Lammpan, of course."

Susan stared. "And you said—you told him it would be all right?"

Aunt Jessie sniffed. "I did," she said flatly.

Susan could scarcely believe her ears. The idea of Aunt Jessie sponsoring a young man was too preposterous. "I wish you hadn't," she demurred. "I'm tired and look a wreck and besides he bores me to tears."

"He is a very nice young man," Aunt Jessie said levelly. "I think the least you can do is show your manners when he takes such an interest in you."

Susan's curiosity was piqued. "How do you know he's nice?" she asked.

Aunt Jessie tossed her head. "I forgot to tell you he came over the other night when you were at Rose's and we had a real nice visit. I declare, I don't know what I've met such a steady-going, sensible boy."

Susan lowered her lips to conceal the imp of mischief dancing in her eyes. She was annoyed, none the less. Wasn't it just like Aunt Jessie, she thought, to sponsor Ben?

Ben was young, she had been increasing all day so that now, in the stillness of early evening it seemed actually endurable. Susan had looked forward to a lazy evening after the supper dishes were done. She wanted to lounge on the tiny back porch in the fewest garments possible. That pleasant plan she now must abandon.

Warily she dried cups and plates and knives and spoons. In silence she dawdled to her room. She hated the thought of entertaining the moody young man, Aunt Jessie had chosen for her to smile upon! She could not, this once, fathom her aunt's motives. Usually Aunt Jessie shunned the bare notion of a suitor for Susan.

The girl strained back her curls, creamed and clasped and rinsed her face. She bathed and got into fresh clothing. In spite of herself and her almost sullen determination not to feel better, Susan's spirits began imperceptibly to rise. She felt a sense of elation as she surveyed herself in the spotted, ancient glass of the oak dresser in her room. A fitful breeze, tiny and yet undeniably a breeze, swung her window curtains. It was good to be alive, to be cool and rested after the dreadful day, she decided.

Her mood changed. Why shouldn't she, after all, be nice to Ben Lammpan? Ray Flannery took every masculine sign and glance as tribute. Probably Ray was right. Susan had noticed before this that the elusive attribute, charm, usually surrounded those lucky girls who were said by their mates to be "popular."

Popular! That terrific and overwhelming word on which the destinies of the young so often hung. Susan wanted to be popular, didn't she?

Well, then, why not begin by taking as a gift of the gods the admiration of Ben Lammpan?

Life was so strange; Susan reflected, as she set the wave in her hair with abstracted but skilful fingers. Six months before she would have crowded with delight at the notion of Aunt Jessie's allowing her to have a masculine caller. Well, she would look the gift horse in the face no longer! She would smile and be pleasant and listen to Ben Lammpan's moody conversation. She, too, would be charming!

Promptly at eight the young man arrived, almost pathetically neat in his brushed blue serge. Ben was the long-looked type of youth who honestly believes temperament and untidiness go hand in hand—but he was the very pattern of neatness this evening.

"Hello!" he said, surrendering his shabby hat. Susan moved over on the porch swing and Aunt Jessie smiled as benevolently as possible.

Ben did not sit down.

"I thought maybe—I wondered if you'd like to go over to see some friends of mine on the north side," he fumbled. "They're very artistic. They're not like you and me. Having a little sort of party in their studio."

Susan could almost see Aunt Jessie's hair rise at the word. Aunt Jessie with her puritanical visions of undraped models and painters in raven hair, inquiringly, "What kind of folks are they? I'm not sure I want Susan to go."

Ben began volubly to explain. They had all right he said. The Strinskys, Arnold Strinsky made leather screens and doo-dads, a sort of Venetian work. His wife did magazine illustrations.

"Polocks?" Aunt Jessie inquired suspiciously. Ben said very solemnly, "No. Arnold was a Russian and so was his wife, Susan. Susan liked the sound of that name. I made her think of a camellia-white face beneath a head of seal-black hair."

Aunt Jessie looked as if she thought Russians little better than the "Polocks" she disliked so much, but after a moment or two of consideration she grudgingly consented. "If you'll have Susan home by half past 10," she stipulated.

The house in which the Strinskys lived was an old brown stone on the north side not far from Lincoln Park. Ben, who had been in New York, told Susan the place was just like Greenwich Village, and Susan believed him. She was a little awed at her good fortune in being introduced to such a charming circle.

The main room of the Strinsky flat was a shock to her at first. The walls were painted with splashes of red and orange. There was a black corduroy couch in one corner and a samovar on a kitchen table that had been painted blue. About the room on soiled cushions and on a few crude chairs were scattered the guests. Susan Strinsky, who was a pale, oily-haired girl wearing a lavender smock, admitted them. She had long, tired, hazel eyes and her hand was limp. She did not in the least resemble Susan's notion of a Russian princess. The hall smelt of cabbage and there was a drift of smoke in the room through which her narrow wrist looked real and sparkling in the dim light.

Ben glanced carelessly across the room. "Oh, her!" he said casually. "She's a society girl from Winnetka or some place. Sonya picked her up at a club. Guess she thinks she's slumming."

The young man protested but was dragged to the battered piano in the corner and Susan left to fend for herself.

It was rather an uncomfortable moment. She dropped into a chair someone had vacated and tried to appear interested as Ben pounded out a jazz tune and two or three wry-looking couples swayed to and fro. Sonya excused herself. She said she must go out and help Arnold, who was preparing drinks.

Susan's head began to ache and she wished she had not come. She began to suspect that perhaps she was not really seeing life, after all. A fat man, informally attired in polo shirt and white slacks, approached and asked her to dance. She did not even know his name.

Susan lied, surprised at her own resourcefulness. "I hurt my ankle—playing tennis."

The fat man sat down cross-legged on the floor beside her and began to talk. Did she like Tilden's style of play? What did she think of Borotra? And Helen Wills? The dancing abruptly stopped and the dancers drifted to their seats, allowing Ben to have the piano. Talk few. Susan was bewildered by the words and the new names. Cezanne—technique is rotten—Louis is living on the Left Bank now—Debussy—can't stand the modernists.

Sonya brought in a tin tray with drinks. Susan frowned over hers and left it untasted. She heard Ben's low voice, "You don't have to drink if you don't want to."

She turned to him gratefully. He was looking anxious. No doubt Aunt Jessie had impressed him with her views. "I wouldn't dare," she breathed. She looked around her. The girl who was called Denise, the flower-faced one with the strange, red hair, was gesticulating with her cigarette and squinting through the little column of smoke.

It struck Susan for the first time that Denise was rather out of place in this shabby company. Her frock was exquisite, her shoes narrow and delicate and fine. The bracelet on

HER FAT WAS A BURDEN

Now She is Quite Slender

Here is another case where the trim, slim, figure of youth has displaced the coarse, fat outline of middle-age. It is a house-keeper writing.

"I cannot say what weight I was,
but I was very fat—a burden to myself. I have taken three bottles of Kruschen Salts and now I am quite slender. I am 56 turned and people take me for 40. I am more than proud of myself. You can turn it from me that every word of this is true. I took a teaspoonful in hot water every morning till I used three bottles. Now
I only take half a teaspoonful each morning. I cannot recommend the Kruschen Salts enough for they are worth their weight in gold."—(Mrs.)
A. H.

For generations, wealthy overweight people have been visiting those European Spas whose waters are recognized for their reducing effect. It is called "taking the cure." Now the formula of Kruschen represents the ingredient salts of the mineral waters from those far-famed Spas. These Salts combat the cause of fat by assisting the internal organs to perform their functions properly—to throw off each day those waste products and poisons which, if allowed to accumulate, will be converted by the body's chemistry into fatty tissue.

Prune Fruit Cake
4 1/2 cups pastry flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 3/4 cup shortening, 2 cups sugar, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon cloves, 1 teaspoon nutmeg, 1 teaspoon boiling water, 1 cup milk, 1/2 cup cold water, 1 cup molasses, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 cup seeded raisins, 1/2 cup shredded citrus, 1/2 cup soft prunes. Sift together first three ingredients. Cream shortening and sugar, add well beaten egg and spices that have been soaked in boiling water. Add milk and molasses with soda dissolved in it, then sifted dry ingredients. Lastly, add fruit cut fine and dredged with some flour.
Bake in two bread pans lined with greased paper one and one-half to two hours in slow oven.

Medieval Clocks

Into the making of clocks and their cases has gone much of man's inventive and decorative abilities. Come and perform clocks had a great vogue during the Fifteenth and Sixteenth centuries. In the museum at Basle, Switzerland, may still be seen a specimen in which the vibration of the pendulum gradually caused a long tongue to protrude. Other clocks were made to show a whole series of scenes, such as processions of the apostles and other characters. Great interest was also excited by clocks representing the positions of the heavenly bodies and the days of the week and month. Repeating clocks which sounded the hours when a string was pulled were prized in the days when the only method of striking a light at night was with flint and steel.

Common Plant Credited With Odd Propensities

Volumes of human history, forgotten hopes, faith, superstitions, love of beauty, rise in the mind of the herb-ist as he comes upon the common St. Johnsworth, Hypericum Perforatum of Europe, standing beside a dusty American roadway. It nods its head of upper branches terminating in clusters of five-parted yellow-green flowers with long yellow stamens in the wind made by passing automobiles. Ages ago it nodded thus as broomsticks. Neolithic women, perhaps discovered the mystic plant had curative properties. When Christianity came in it already was known as a worker of white magic. Pagans, adopting the new religion, still put a string of St. Johnsworth over the door to ward off evil spirits, keep away disease, scare the devil. In Colonial times in America teas were made of it for petals to put into bottles of alcohol to make a lotion for chapped hands, wrinkles, faces. Its stem, one to two feet tall, is crowded with short branches with little oval, stiff leaves. Like modern witches the plant is lovely to look at. It brightens the doorway of the poor.—J. Otis Swift, in the New York World-Telegram.

POINTS ABOUT PEELING

While no one has yet found a method of eliminating the peeling of fruits and vegetables will there are ways of cutting down on the time involved. Good cutlery is the first requisite. Have plenty of paring knives and see that they have good cutting edges. A dull knife wastes both time and food, since it is more difficult to make thin parings. Paring knives with ray enamelled handles make the ever-recurring peeling process a bit more colorful. Stainless steel knives are good in that they require no scouring.

Good Apple Sauce

In the next place, why peel things when it is not necessary to do so? Apple sauce is quite as good made from unpeeled apples and requires much less time. Wash the apples. Quarter, remove the cores and any blemished parts. Cover with water and boil till soft. Mash through the colander. The shells will stay in the colander while the pulp will go through. There is less waste this way than if the apples were peeled, since only a thin part of skin is discarded.

Young carrots, oyster plant and similar vegetables should be scraped much more than necessary. This is especially true of the oyster plant root that is to be used for cakes need not be scraped at all. Wash the tender roots thoroughly, put them through the food chopper and mix with beaten egg and flour to thickening. Fry slowly in hot oil. Vegetables that do not scrape easily can be cooked for a very short time, and can then be drained and the loosened skin will come off easily.

Boiling potatoes in their jackets should be much more generally practiced, as paring them after they are cooked is a much speedier process. To peel onions, scald them in much the same manner as tomatoes, and the outer skins will then slip off easily.

Farm News

Ayrshire Judge at C. N. E. The Ayrshires at the Canadian National Exhibition will be judged by P. D. McArthur, of Cherry Bank Farm, Howick, Que., one of the keenest judges of Ayrshires in the Dominion and as well one of the most constructive Ayrshire breeders.

Whilst Mr. McArthur is still a comparatively young man, he attained his fiftieth birthday last December, he nevertheless, has been a farmer for the past forty years. His father died when he was 10 years of age and left the burden of carrying on Cherry Bank Farm on his youthful shoulders. He has owned a herd of pure bred Ayrshires for the past thirty years and was president of the Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association in 1914. He has always taken a very active interest in various local, district and national associations and councils, including the Montreal District Milk Producers' Association.

Seaman is Remembered as Rescuer of Crusoe

William Dampier is one of the most extraordinary figures in the story of exploration. He was a great navigator and a great explorer, but he was also a buccaneer with a reputation for cruelty. His name is remembered for two reasons. First, because he was undoubtedly the first English seaman to set eyes on Australia and the first explorer to do hydrographical surveys there. Secondly, while buccaneering, he took part in some of the most amazing exploits of the so-called Brethren of the Coast, crossed the Isthmus of Darien and was present at the sack of Santa Marta. Twice the government sent Dampier to the South seas. The second time he returned poor and ill, wrote a "Vindication," and lived to sail again on the famous voyage that thrilled the world by the rescue of Alexander Selkirk, the sailor who was marooned on Juan Fernandez island and became immortal as Robinson Crusoe.

Professors Crawl, Growl

Called the strangest club in the world, the "Red Lion club" recently held its annual dinner at Bristol, England. Its members are professors, and the "King Lion," who presided, was ceremoniously addressed as "Your Majesty" by the other "lions" and "cubs." At supper they sedately quaffed strong old English ale, and the marrow bone. The red lions of the club are the senior scientists, and the cubs are new members, who were made on admission to "swag their tails," and go through a ritual of initiation. There were also two jacksals, and when the king lion gave an order they had to growl ominously. Professors even went down on all fours on the carpet in their conscientious effort to look lionlike.

"Ideal Man" as Seen by Public Health Service

Some men will find comfort in plans and specifications put out by the public health service, the Spokane Spokesman Review remarks. If a man is between thirty and fifty years old, weighs from 160 to 170, and is not more than 5 feet 8 inches tall, he is a pretty fine fellow. At least, he is likely to have more strength and endurance than men who do not fit the specifications. If he is a little short on strength and endurance, he has only himself to blame, and should at once begin to make the most of his opportunities. Wives of men whose measurements are correct will, if wise, refuse to ignore the public health service's information. They will point out that a man at the peak of his physical power should not shrink from rowing a boat over the glossy surface of a lake or from propelling a lawn mower up and down a gently rolling terrace. They will sweetly but audibly wonder why a paltry 12 holes of golf should leave an stalwart 170-pounder too exhausted to paint the garage.

There remains the problem of keeping at or below 170 pounds. This is a matter that cannot be aily dismissed, especially during the trying period between the ages of thirty-five and fifty. It is during these years that a man keeps warning himself that he must get more exercise. The knowledge that he has great potential strength and endurance will not flatten the waistline. The strength and endurance have to be given an occasional chance to assert themselves.

Lemon Sauce

1 tablespoon cornstarch, 1/2 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, 1 cup boiling water, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 tablespoons butter, sprinkling nutmeg, sprinkling salt. Mix cornstarch, sugar and grated lemon rind; add water gradually, stirring constantly. Boil 5 minutes. Remove from fire; add lemon juice, butter, nutmeg and salt. Serve hot. Serves 4.
