NATO, Warsaw to hold troop cut talks

As foreign ministers confer at the history-making Helsinki security conference, doubts are being cast whether old-style diplomacy can work in an age of big-power simmity. OH CANADA DAY — Rain may have forced postponement of some of the planned Canada Day celebrations at Bury and Hatley this weekend but it didn't dampen anyone's spirits; love of Canada still prevailed. Ontario education future looks dark

By ELMO CIPRIETTI

TORONTO (CP) — Five years after the Hall-Dennis report promised to liberate and enlighten the schools of Ontario, clouds of controversy, backlash and resentment have blackened the educational horizon.

The provincial government has made innovations such as open-concept schools, freedom in subject choice and the high school credit system compulsory, amid shock, distress, dismay and laughter. Dr. Allan J. C. King of Queen's University, Kingston, author of Innovative Secondary Schools and other publications, discussed these strong emotional reactions in a three-hour interview recently.

He documented compelling data to support his claim that few of the province's 614 high schools have implemented the innovations thoroughly and honestly. But he agreed that the changes have generated such a storm of reaction that the educational barometer points towards a surge of counter-innovation, which he views as unfortunate backlash.

Laughter is the common reaction of pupils to their sudden liberation from compulsory subjects and from the fear of "failing a year," unheard of today in high schools.

Some observers, among them Toronto vice-principal Robert

Brooks, says the laughter is of delight in permissiveness; others such as Toronto trustee Fiona Nelson, hear it as a desperate cry of tension.

But no one denies that the laughter is echoing more loudly in less-populated schools. Media expert Marshall McLuhan described innovation by saying schools are teaching "the art of dropping out."

Dismay has plagued parents distraught by children who are carefree about homework, free from the old discipline and immune from failure and some forms of success, such as being ranked top in one's class under the old system.

Sheila Morrison, leader of a parents' action group in suburban North York, complained that despite some innovations and expanded facilities, 3,000 pupils in the Metro Toronto borough are unable to read.

Distress has been the almost universal reaction of the province's teachers to changes which force them to liberate their personalities and to do so immediately.

The controversy has its origins in the 1968 Hall-Dennis report, Living and Learning, which started with the premise that "the truth shall make you free."

The report called for an educational system that would "take all who respond to its call out of their poverty, their slums and their despair... that will spur the talented to find heights of achievement and provide every child with the experience of success... that will make all men brothers."

Education was to be thoroughly re-humanized. Classroom walls and desks were to disappear in open-concept elementary schools.

Secondary-school students were to be taught subjects of their own choosing at whatever level of difficulty they desired.

These theories became law through an education-ministry directive, Secondary School Organization and Diploma Requirements, commonly known as HS 1, which ordered the credit system for high schools.

Under the system, a student needs 27 credits, taken at any level of difficulty, to qualify for a secondary-school graduation diploma.

The 1973-74 issues of HS 1 says: "A credit is defined as successful completion of a course containing work that normally would be completed after 110 to 120 hours of scheduled time."

It outlines four broad areas of study from each of what a student selects his courses: Communication, social and environmental studies, pure and applied sciences and arts. In an appendix, guideline publications are listed for 145 courses which can fit into the categories.

By law, it would be possible for a student to accumulate 27 credits, all at the Grade 9 level, and graduate with what used to be considered a "Grade 12 diploma," the secondary-school graduation diploma.

But Dr. King said most teachers and principals, "by breaking the law," have in effect retained a compulsory core of subjects in most high schools.

"Very few schools, about 18 per cent of our sampling, have honestly implemented the free-choice credit system of HS 1," he said.

He complained that newspaper reports often refer to a high dropout rate among students with high scholastic aptitude, and produced statistics showing it is the poor achiever from a lower-income family that is dropping out.

"Middle-class parents are delighted with the freedom and success of their children," he said. But he noted that a "dropout syndrome" was observed mainly in pupils from lower-income families.

United Church provides bail

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The United Church of Christ decided to provide $370,000 in bail money to gain release of nine persons appealing convictions related to racial disorders in Wilmington, N.C.

Rarely, if ever, has a United States denomination intervened directly in such a specific criminal case.

After considerable debate, the church's governing synod voted to borrow funds sufficient to arrange the bail for eight young blacks and a white mother. They were convicted last fall of arson and conspiracy to assault policemen and firemen in racial disorders two years ago.

The church estimated the bail would cost about $370,000.

SAYS SENTENCE UNJUST

The church said the nine persons "were unjustly sentenced" and that their continued incarceration under bail of from $20,000 to $45,000 each while their cases are on appeal "represents a serious injury to the concept of equal justice."

The church earlier had posted $50,000 bail for a staff member, Rev. Benjamin Chavis. He is a former organizer of the church's North Carolina-Virginia field office for racial justice who is appealing a conviction in a related case.

The eight blacks, aged 18 to 22, received sentences ranging from 25 to 31 years while the white woman, Ann Shepherd, 35, was sentenced to seven to 10 years in prison.

In another action, church delegates rejected demands that American corporations pull out of white minority African countries Tuesday and urged those firms to challenge "repressive and unjust conditions there."

AT THE PIGGERY — Sheena Larkin stars as Amanda and Tony Lloyd as Victor in Private Lives, the first in a series of Noel Coward plays being presented this summer at The Piggery in North Hatley.

At The Piggery

Coward's plays a wise choice

By Frances Westley
Special to The Record
NORTH HATLEY — The Piggery has made a wise choice this year in deciding to present a summer festival of Noel Coward's plays.

The choice is wise not only because Noel Coward's plays are consistently pleasing, but also because they sharp, dry wit makes a companion to a summer night in the Eastern Townships. The charm of the play and the charm of the environment as a whole blend so well that they are difficult to separate.

When the first play of the festival, Private Lives, opened last Saturday night the atmosphere was indeed festive. A capacity crowd turned out to see the four actors battle their way joyously through the performance. For, in essence, Private Lives is an ingenious and continuous round of lovers' quarrels and reconciliations.

Two honeymoon couples, the Prynnes and the Chases have both been married before to each other. Their marriage had been one of those love-hate relationships; tempestuous and violent, and the moment they lay eyes on each other again they realize, to their horror, that despite a separation of five years the flame is far from quenched.

Their new mates, Sibil Chase and Victor Prynne are respectively 'sweet' and 'twedy' and both Amanda and Elyot have married this second time to find 'peace.' Within five minutes of their accidental and momentous meeting on their adjoining balconies their 'normal' mates seem like plodders and the quiet life simply a bore. Impetuously they rush into each other arms and off to Paris, leaving their confused and outraged spouses behind to follow as best they may. The rest of the play is dedicated to resolving this delicate situation and revealing the intricacies and contradictions of the relationship between Amanda and Elyot.

Private Lives is essentially a period piece dedicated to the 20s and early 30s when such figures as F. Scott Fitzgerald were dazzling the Mediterranean high society with their style and their antics.

These were the days when the view of marriage was in transition. For the 'beautiful people' of the day marriage was not a question of 'duty' but rather one of excitement, variety and passion. With such expectations quarrels were inevitable, if only to avoid routine.

Yet, these were not the bitter quarrels of Albee's plays, they were refined, highly sophisticated repartees, which only occasionally got out of control and lapsed into brawling fistfights, and in any case were over as quickly as summer storms. It was all part of the art of relating, food and drink for a person like Amanda, who, at the beginning of the play declares proudly "I was born sophisticated."

As such the play is slightly dated. At the time it was written it was meant to be not only comical but outrageous, revealing the inner 'Private Lives' behind the facade of public behavior. It was a time when there were still proprieties to exceed, etiquette to outrage and it was daring and thrilling to do so. The facade no longer exists today but the quarrels and reconciliations still do and for this reason the humour rings true.

The cast at the Piggery have made no attempt to transplant Private Lives to modern times. They play it as the period piece it is, with some success.

Ms. Larkin as Amanda Prynne has perfected the slouch of the 20s and John Horton, as Elyot is a study from the Great Gatsby: white suit, one hand in a pocket, staring hopelessly out to sea, deadpan face under furrowed brow. However, both are a little too exuberant to be convincingly British, and at times this is a bit unsettling as the humor is so completely English.

The total effect of this exuberance is, however, not unpleasant. Roy Higgins exhibits equal energy in his direction of the play — and equal inconsistency. At times during the first act the actors' movements are stock comedy, stiff and clichéd.

In the second act (by far the strongest in the play) Amanda and Elyot are found dancing and cavorting about on the stage in a refreshing and totally unorthodox manner. The end result is not particularly polished but it is an enthusiastic production and the enthusiasm is contagious.

All four actors give good performances. Daphne Gibson is brainless and twittering (if excessively shrill) as young Sibil Chase. Tony Lloyd in contrast to the others is thoroughly British — 'twedy' to perfection.

As the leads, John Horton and Sheena Larkin are entertaining and charming. Unfortunately they chose to ignore the shadows of sadness which are present in the play, the hints of hollowness beneath the glitter which might have offset and accented their roles. Nevertheless they play their parts with appropriate style and humor, to which the script lends itself so well.

A special mention should go to Monique Legare, who, in her small part as the belligerent French maid in the third act, nearly steals the show.

Another mention should be made of this year's program notes. Those published last summer for Piggery plays were often scanty and insufficient. By contrast, this summer's is unusually good, complete and interesting in itself. One program has been published for all three plays and it gives background of the Piggery, of the author and of all three plays as well as information about all members of the Piggery troupe.

Finally, the old 20s records which were played before the play and during the intermission were a nice touch and set the mood well.

All in all, an evening at the Piggery is a pleasant experience and this first production, Private Lives bodes good things for the rest of the festival and for theatre-goers this summer.

The accoutrements of a year in CEGEP

By JOYCE HIBBERT
SPECIAL — If you have had a young person in your family attending college or university away from home, some of the following may sound familiar.

At our place, two of them landed home in early May with their personal accoutrements of the previous CEGEP year.

A metal trunk arrived first, split and battered with a pair of navy blue tights dangling from its ruptured inside. The $12.50 C.O.D. charges were paid to CNR for that trunk's final journey which had been from Lennoxville to Drummondville.

Bought in 1970, it had made only five trips in its brief lifetime — once to Fredericton and back, once to St. Anne de Bellevue and back and this last single journey from Lennoxville. Now, with corners missing, tray in several pieces and the rest of the damage, it was a writeoff. I heard of a similar trunk making it to Edmonton and home again by rail but damaged beyond further use.

So much for planned obsolescence and rough handling. In future it will be suitcases and boxes here, transported by our own vehicle and careful handlers.

There was a wait for several days until exams finished and our student would arrive home with the key. Then the trunk could be opened and the contents absorbed into the home.

As for Lennoxville to gather the student with key and remainder of possessions. That produced another minor shock. Boxes of heavy and expensive books were piled up. You could only hope that some would sell at half price to other students later.

Meanwhile they had to be totd home and then back again next term.

Into the car went record player, radio, typewriter, skates, tennis racket and a fair amount of clothes. When you complained about yet another trip up the residence stairs it was, "Well, you should have seen the stuff so and so had and they had to drive all the way to such and such in the States."

Anyway, car plus driver and helpers got it all home without a scratch — and in the same evening. That trunk had taken three days, express!

The next day was spent sorting and trying to find lots of closet space where very little existed. In the meantime, the second student in the family arrived home with three bags full, mostly of dirty washing. And next day went back to John Abbott College for three more.

Items such as more unavoidable heavy books and hockey equipment were left for father to collect later.

Then while students scurried about looking for summer work, mother became a washing machine freak for several days and many lines full. You never dreamed that they owned all those clothes in these days of simple jeans and tops.

Now you presumed that like worker ants, they'd been lugging their loads from home to colleges quite regularly. How on earth did one of them manage to cross Canada to Vancouver and back with only one change of clothes and a sleeping bag?

At the end of August the ritual begins again, in reverse. Added to shopping lists are things such as underwear, socks, looseleaf and pens. A few new things are bought to reinforce wardrobes at the start of a new year. Cupboards and drawers are depleted as the initial batch of college-bound gear is selected.

When the appropriate days arrive, the car is loaded up and pointed in the appropriate directions. If the students first year is behind them there is not the same excitement and apprehensiveness. They are going back to a different life but it's no longer strange.

Parents may entertain a brief and tempting idea to spread their own clothes and things around in the vacated space. But the thought of that awesome spring move-in, only a few months ahead, is enough to deter any temporary filling of cupboards and drawers.

Mother, full of falltime optimism, vows that spring-cleaning will be completed before the end of the college year. One lot of confusion at the time is enough for anyone!

Canada Day generally quiet

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
Despite heavy concentration on Canada's highways and hordes of visitors flocking to Prince Edward Island for that province's centennial celebrations, officials reported a quiet Dominion Day holiday weekend.

The Queen, Prince Philip, Prime Minister Trudeau and his wife presided at ceremonies as Canada's smallest province celebrated its 100th birthday and the 106th birthday of the nation.

A cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press showed favorable weather throughout most of the country—with the exception of Saskatchewan and Alberta—and as a result, residents took to the roads, parks and waterways in large numbers.

Stolen goods recovered

MONTREAL (CP) — Police said Monday they have recovered five diplomatic mail pouches, four "top secret" department of defence films and $880,000 in government and corporate cheques stolen last year at Montreal International Airport.

The items were recovered Friday by provincial police on public land near a Montreal cemetery.

The same day, police cleaned out a locker in the Quebec City bus terminal and found another $5,000 in government cheques taken in the mail robbery May 17, 1972.

A police spokesman said no arrests have been made, and meetings with postal officials will be held to determine how much of the stolen mail has been recovered.

The government cheques recovered include federal and provincial income tax rebates and family allowance cheques.

And despite warnings of caution, the nation's accidental death toll soared to 147 with 83 highway deaths and another 49 deaths through drownings.

In Ottawa, a two-year-old boy, hoisted on his father's shoulders, led thousands in applauding the efforts of musicians at Sunday's holiday spectacle on Parliament Hill.

Earlier, the boy danced to the chimes of Robert Donnell, dominion carillonneur, playing tunes on the Peace Tower bells—a prelude to the music and multi-colored fireworks display that highlighted the Dominion Day weekend in the capital.

For many, the stunning fireworks display designed by Toronto cartoonist Duncan MacPherson was the crowning event of the holiday.

DIPLOMATS ATTEND

Appearing at the concert—attended by Gov. Gen. Roland Michener, Mrs. Michener, Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner and foreign embassy officials—were Toronto jazz musician Moe Koffman and his quintet, a Montreal group called The Bells, fiddler Jean Carignan and singer Jean-Pierre Ferland.

Many residents of the Atlantic provinces spent the weekend in the country or at the beach. Some attended local events, but many went to P.E.I. to catch a glimpse of the royal couple and the prime minister.

Quebec was quiet, with the highlight a gathering of about 12,000 at a celebration at Montreal's Place des Nations.

In Ontario, police and ambulance operators marvelled at the lack of calls. Except for some holiday concerts and municipal programs, the province celebrated the holiday quietly.

It was windy in most of Manitoba over the holiday, ruining outdoor activities and keeping residents off the lakes.

Aside from regular local observances of the nation's birthday, it was quiet in Alberta and Saskatchewan with the weather not clearing until Monday.

Rev. Dr. Lovelace new conference president

LENNOXVILLE — Rev. Dr. A.B. Lovelace, of Lennoxville, has been installed as President of The Montreal and Ottawa Conference of the United Church of Canada. The service of investiture took place in St. James United Church, Montreal, at the concluding session of this year's annual meeting.

The Conference takes in the four Presbyteries — Montreal, Ottawa, Seaway, and Quebec-Sherbrooke — and includes about 300 Congregations.

Dr. Lovelace has just completed his third term as Chairman of the Quebec-Sherbrooke Presbytery. His successor in this office is the Rev. Gary Stokes, Minister of the United Church, Stanstead and Rock Island.

For the first time in its history the conference has a full-time executive-secretary and has a permanent office at Dorval, Quebec. The new executive-secretary is the Rev. Jeffery Joyce, formerly of Rock Island.

There are 11 conferences in the United Church and now each has a full-time executive-secretary with field-secretaries related to the various presbyteries. This development is in line with the re-structuring which has taken place in the Church during the past two or three years.

Dr. Lovelace has just returned from a meeting of the conference presidents in Toronto. He said he sensed an optimistic mood and great vitality in the reports from the presidents across the church. There is less rigidity and less formality in the congregational form of worship and organizations.

Many young people who previously found the institutional church too rigid and turned away are now becoming more involved in the local congregations and giving leadership on the presbytery and conference level.

The president thinks that the next few years will be crucial for the Christian church.

Will the church be able to recruit sufficient full-time workers with appropriate skills and dedication for times like these? How will the Church membership respond to the proposed plan of union between the Anglican and United Churches? To what extent will the membership focus its concern on the vital issues which affect the life of everyone such as pollution, poverty and housing? Will the Church be able to match its opportunity with devotion?

The manner in which the contemporary church deals with these and other vital questions will determine its destiny for generations to come, Rev. Lovelace concluded.

Rev. Dr. A.B. Lovelace

Holiday weekend claims 147

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
A Kitchener couple and their two-year-old son, asphyxiated by carbon monoxide fumes from a barbecue burning in their trailer were among at least 147 persons who lost their lives across Canada during the Dominion Day holiday weekend.

A cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press showed 83 died in traffic, 49 drowned, five lost their lives in fires, one person was electrocuted, another was crushed by a farm tractor, five were asphyxiated, one died in a skiing accident, a man fell to his death from the roof of his house and another lost his life when the light aircraft he was piloting crashed.

Ontario had the second highest count at 39—21 of these were traffic deaths including one pedestrian who was struck by a freight train. Twelve more were drowned, three were asphyxiated, one lost his life in a fire, one died in the skiing incident and another fell off his roof.

Alberta had 16 deaths, 11 in traffic, two in drownings, two by asphyxiation and another in the plane crash.

New Brunswick had eight dead—six in traffic and two in drownings.

British Columbia's eight fatalities were in traffic while all six deaths in Newfoundland were drownings.

Manitoba had two traffic deaths, two fire deaths and two drownings.

Nova Scotia had five deaths, two in traffic, two by drowning and another in a fire.

Prince Edward Island's only fatality involved a youth who was electrocuted when an aluminum pole came in contact with a power line.

A chronology of the Watergate events

By LEE BYRD
 WASHINGTON (AP) — At first, the unravelling of the saga of Watergate came bit by bit, each new clue serving to rekindle the suspense. But now the answers are coming in a flood of disclosure and contradiction. The key issue still is: what did Richard Nixon know and when? Here, in chronological order, is a look at the major parts of the puzzle—some disputed by the principals involved—as gathered from Senate testimony, news accounts and government investigators.

Jan. 27, 1972—Attorney-General John Mitchell, White House counsel John Dean and presidential aide Jeb Stuart Magruder gather in Mitchell's office, hear Gordon Liddy's proposal for a $1 million espionage operation. Dean and Magruder say Liddy envisions the kidnapping of radical leaders, the hiring of prostitutes to lure Democrats and electronic eavesdropping at the respective headquarters of the Democratic Party and its nominee. That plan is rejected.

Feb. 4—Another meeting in Mitchell's office. Magruder says Liddy has reduced the budget and scope of the scheme, but makes one notable addition: a break-in at a Las Vegas newspaper publisher's office, for reasons that remain disputed. No decision made.

March 30—Mitchell, Magruder and Frederick LaRue, Mitchell aide and later a senior campaign official, meet in Key Biscayne, Fla., and agree to allow Liddy to proceed with a $250,000 surveillance and break-in operation, Magruder says.

April 7—A new federal law requires full disclosure of campaign contributions.

April 10—Former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans, finance chief for President Nixon's re-election campaign, accepts a $200,000 cash contribution from Robert Vesco, a financier under investigation for securities fraud. The money is returned, after the election, and after news accounts disclose the contribution.

April 20—A $25,000 check and $29,000 in Mexican bank drafts are deposited in the Miami bank account of Bernard Barker's firm. Barker later withdraws the money in $100 bills for use in the Watergate operation.

May 27—A team directed by Liddy, former White House consultant Howard Hunt and campaign security chief James McCord breaks into the Democratic national committee to photograph documents and implant electronic listening devices.

June 17—Metropolitan police catch five men—McCord, Barker and three Cubans recruited by Barker—at Democratic headquarters in the early morning.

June 19—Mitchell, now campaign chairman, says he is "surprised and dismayed" at news of the break-in. By Dean's account, potentially incriminatory documents are destroyed by a White House aide and the cover-up is in progress.

June 20—Presidential press secretary Ronald Ziegler says he won't comment on "a third-rate burglary attempt." The president will say later that it was about this time that he was "advised that there was a possibility of CIA involvement" and he therefore became concerned that an investigation could lead to the uncovering of covert CIA operations.

June 23—Nixon says "the White House has had no involvement whatever in this particular incident."

White House aides H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman meet with CIA leaders Richard Helms and Vernon Walters and suggest, Walters says, that they influence the FBI along the lines that "since the five suspects have been arrested, this should be sufficient and that it was not advantageous to have the inquiry pushed." Walters calls acting FBI director Patrick Gray with this suggestion.

June 28—Ehrlichman and Dean are reported to have given Gray documents removed from Hunt's safe, including a dossier on Senator Edward Kennedy's accident at Chappaquiddick and a fabricated cable designed to implicate the late President John F. Kennedy in the 1963 assassination of South Vietnamese President Ngo Dinh Diem. Gray is told the materials "should never see the light of day," Dean says.

June 29—Nixon's personal lawyer and confidant, Herbert Kalmbach, calls upon Stans to give him all the cash he can get, explaining only that it is for "a special White House project." Stans said he turned over $75,000. Eventually, such collections total $500,000 to buy the silence of the Watergate defendants, testimony discloses.

June 30—Ziegler repeats that there was "no White House involvement."

July 1—Mitchell resigns as campaign manager, citing personal reasons.

July 3—Gray destroys the documents from Hunt's safe.

July 5—Gray calls Walters at the CIA and tells him of pressures that the FBI pursue the investigation despite CIA objections.

July 6—Walters meets with Gray. "In all honesty," Walters said later, "I could not tell him to cease future investigations on the grounds that it would compromise the security interests of the United States." Gray calls the new campaign manager, Clark MacGregor, who is with the president in California, and complains about White House manipulation of the FBI and CIA. Within the hour, Nixon himself calls Gray, and Gray repeats his warning. Nixon responds: "Pat, you just continue to conduct your aggressive and thorough investigation."

Aug. 29—Nixon says Dean has investigated and declares: "I can state categorically that his investigation indicates that no one in the White House staff, no one in this administration, presently employed, was involved in this very bizarre incident." In fact, Dean says he made no such investigation and never even heard of it until he heard the president's statement on the evening news.

Sept. 2—Mitchell swears he was "in no way involved" in Watergate.

Sept. 15—Liddy, Hunt, Barker, McCord and three other men are indicted by a federal grand jury for conspiring to break into Democratic headquarters.

Sept. 15—Dean says Nixon called him into his office and compliments him for his handling of the Watergate cover-up. Dean acknowledges under intensive Senate questioning that the cover-up was not discussed in any specific terms but says he believes Nixon knew then what was going on and was pleased that the case had been kept out of the White House.

Sept. 20—Federal Judge Charles Richey halts all proceedings in a Watergate civil suit filed by the Democrats until after completion of the criminal case—thus precluding any further court activity before the Nov. 7 election.

October—Investigative reporters, notably Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward of the Washington Post, report that sabotage and espionage efforts went far beyond the Watergate break-in. The Post reports that Donald Segretti had been hired by Nixon's appointments secretary, Dwight Chapin, for espionage activities begun in the Democratic primaries.

Another who controlled the espionage purse strings, the Post says, was Haldeman. Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler denounced the Post for "the shoddiest type of journalism."

Nov. 7—Nixon is re-elected.

Dec. 8—A Chicago plane crash kills Mrs. Howard Hunt. Found in her purse is $10,000 in $100 bills.

Christmas—McCord writes a letter to John Caulfield, former White House aide, and warns that if the CIA is blamed for the Watergate affair "every tree in the forest will fall. It will be a scorched desert."

Early January, 1973—Magruder tells Haldeman about his perjured testimony to the grand jury about the cover-up, along with other details related to Watergate.

Jan. 8—The Watergate criminal trial begins.

Jan. 9—McCord receives an anonymous phone call which leads to a series of cloak-and-dagger meetings in which he says Caulfield conveys a White House offer of executive clemency if he pleads guilty and keeps his mouth shut.

Jan. 10-11—Hunt pleads guilty and tells the court that no "higher-ups" were involved. Dean says White House aide Charles Colson had relayed a promise of clemency to Hunt after obtaining Nixon's approval. Colson denies this.

Jan. 15—Barker and three others plead guilty in the break-in.

Jan. 30—Liddy and McCord are convicted of all charges.

Feb. 2—Judge John Sirica says he is not satisfied that the full story has been told at the trial.

Feb. 27—Dean says Nixon tells him to take over the Watergate operation because Ehrlichman and Haldeman are spending too much of their time on it. Dean says later that he told the president that he was "not sure it could be contained indefinitely." He says Nixon responded that "We would have to fight back," and he was confident that he could do the job.

March 13—Dean says he "told the president... there were money demands being made by the seven convicted defendants... as high as a million dollars or more. He told me that was no problem."

March 19—In a letter to Judge Sirica, McCord opens the valve that eventually will blow the scandal wide open. He charges perjury at the trial, the involvement of higher-ups and pressure to keep the defendants silent.

March 21—Dean says he told Nixon the matter was "a cancer growing on the presidency." Dean says Nixon "did not seem particularly concerned."

April 17—Nixon announces that major developments had come to his attention on March 21, at which time he had ordered "intensive new inquiries." But Dean later tells the Senate there was no new investigation. Following the president's statement, Ziegler tells the country that all previous White House statements on Watergate are "inoperative."

April 24—The White House denies making any offers of clemency.

April 27—Gray quits the FBI after disclosure that he destroyed the documents from Hunt's safe. In Los Angeles, the judge in the Pentagon papers trial discloses government information that Liddy and Hunt had broken into the offices of defendant Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

April 30—Nixon fires Dean, Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Attorney-General Richard Kleindienst have resigned.

May 4—Segretti is indicted in Florida on charges related to disruptions in the Democratic primary campaign of Senators Edmund Muskie, Henry Jackson and Hubert Humphrey.

May 10—Mitchell and Stans are indicted in New York in connection with the Vesco contributions. They later plead not guilty.

March 11—The Pentagon papers case is dismissed in Los Angeles on grounds the government's case had been tainted by illegal evidence gathering.

May 17—The Senate's special Watergate investigating committee begins its public, televised hearings, taking testimony which produces or corroborates much of the detail now known about the affair.

May 22—Nixon again denies, in a long, written statement, any personal involvement in the scandal. But he admits that the administration has undertaken domestic intelligence plans including one, which he says was never implemented, that envisioned illegal burglaries and other surveillance.

June 15—Dean takes the Senate Watergate witness stand, says he believes Nixon was personally involved in the coverup, adds that he hopes the president will be forgiven. On subsequent days he faces—intensive questioning on his charges, sticks to it, but acknowledges that until late winter of 1973 he did not directly advise the president of his own Watergate and cover-up involvement.

June 27—LaRue pleads guilty in federal court to conspiring to obstruct justice. He is the first defendant in the cover-up aspect of Watergate.

Jack Anderson's Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON — Congressmen are so irate over the treatment they are getting from the airlines that they have called a House hearing to vent their feelings.

The final indignity, which touched off the hearing, occurred to Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y. Although he had reservations on an American Airlines flight, the door was slammed in his face and he was turned away.

Steaming, he wrote to all his colleagues who fly the New York City-Washington run, asking about their experiences. Almost to a man, they agreed the service was deplorable.

"Anything you can do to improve Eastern and American service, which is horrible as we both know..." wrote Rep. Edward Koch, D-N.Y. "would make you eligible for a congressional medal of honor!"

"INTENTIONALLY BAD"

Representative John Wylder, R-N.Y., citing his experience with American Airlines, said "their service is so bad that it has to be intentional."

"It is rare," complained Rep. Angelo Roncallo, R-N.Y., "that I have departed from New York on the announced time and rarer still to arrive in Washington on time."

Representative Frank Brasco, D-N.Y., rated the service between the two cities "subcaliber to horrible." Shirley Chisholm, the outspoken congresswoman from Brooklyn, called the service "unsatisfactory" and urged "congressional hearings to investigate the problem."

Representative John Hunt, R-N.Y., said the airlines had "priced me out of business as a commuter. I go by train now for less than half the price."

"NO LONGER FLY"

Congressmen from other areas joined in the protest. "Eastern Airlines service between Syracuse and the South," wrote Rep. William Walsh, R-N.Y., "has been deteriorating for several months and has now reached the point where I no longer try to fly between Washington and Syracuse."

Indeed, grumbling was heard from congressional commuters from Georgia to California.

Thus fortified, Murphy called upon Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W. Va., the powerful House commerce chairman, to hold hearings, which are expected to be scheduled within the next few weeks.

BUGGING BATTLE: Two House Democrats have formally accused Rep. Sam Steiger, R-Ariz., of bugging the same adversaries he has accused of bugging him.

This remarkable counterwiretap charge was made by Rep. Morgan Murphy, D-Ill., and Jerome Waldie, D-Calif., in defiance of the House back-scratching tradition that members of Congress must not take one another's name in vain.

Contending they wouldn't be hypocrites for the sake of tradition, Murphy and Waldie were stinging minority opinions to a still-secret House crime report charging Steiger with eavesdropping.

What brought up the controversy was an allegation in the secret report that Emprise, a giant food services chain with past Mafia links, had bugged Steiger.

The two congressmen complained it was hypocritical not to mention that Steiger had also bugged an Emprise representative. Steiger has admitted it was "unsavory" and both the FBI and California police are investigating to determine whether it was also criminal.

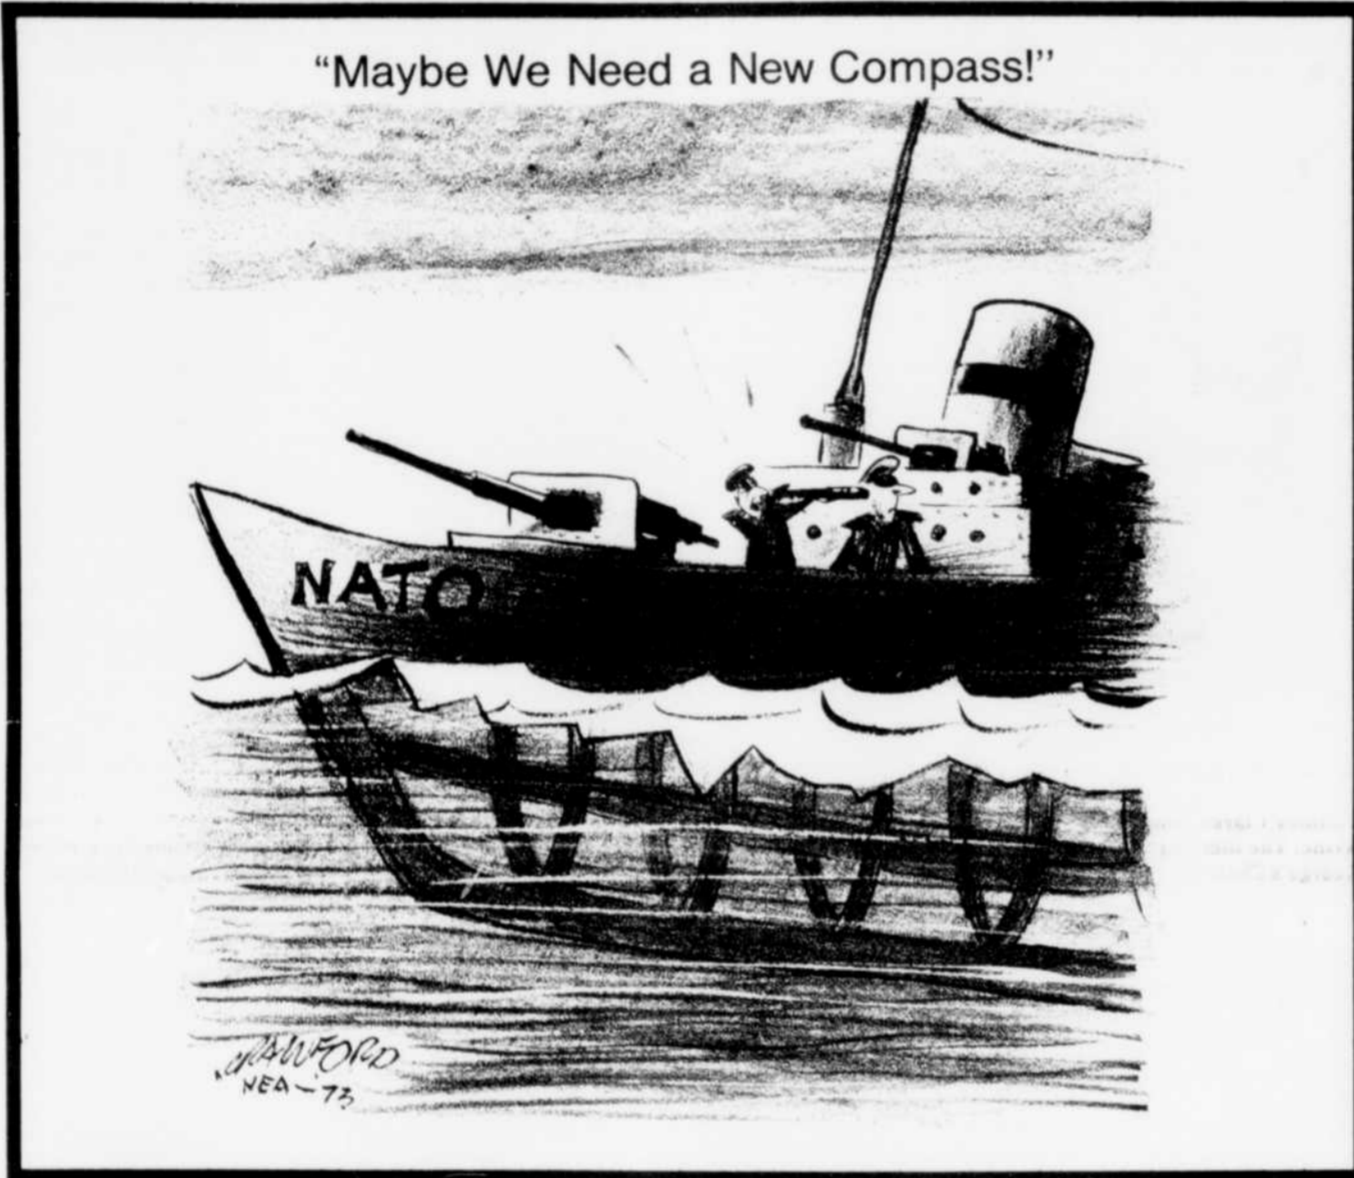

Footnote: The House Crime Committee's majority, though embarrassed over Steiger's snooping, stood by tradition and omitted any reference to their colleague. They didn't want the Steiger incident, they said, to overshadow the report's call for reforms of the nation's race tracks.

VESCO'S MANNERS: Robert Vesco, perhaps the world's fanciest fugitive, roared into Antigua, West Indies, last week on his private jet and nearly caused another international incident.

Eyewitnesses have told us that Vesco piled out of his plane, rolled up to the yacht "Romantaca" with three cabloards of bags, boarded the "horribly huge" craft and promptly snapped the anchor chain of the yacht "Ariels."

Several indignant witnesses chased after Vesco's yacht in their own boats. But Vesco sailed on and the anchor finally was lost at sea. The pursuers yelled at him to stop, but Vesco shouted back: "You know my address. Send me a bill."

Two witnesses complained to us by overseas phone that the millionaire had "bad manners." The FBI thinks Vesco has bad manners, too. He has refused to drop anchor long enough for them to bring him back to the United States to face an indictment in an international securities swindle, or to face Watergate questioning.

Opinion from the French press

This is a selection of editorials on current topics, translated from the French-language press of Canada.

Ottawa Le Droit: The prime minister of India, Indira Gandhi, did not come here to give lessons to Canadians, at least she did not intend to.

However, her speech to Parliament was a rousing lesson for all those who continue to deny the linguistic duality of our country.

Speaking in two languages which are not her own — French and English — two languages which she managed with ease and elegance, she demonstrated the living proof of richness created by diversity.

She did us the honor of believing that we Canadians all understand that "diversity does not only constitute a richness, but that it also constitutes a force."

If she had made no allusion at all to diversity, her message would still have come across. If she had just spoken of science, nuclear energy or trade, she would still have given us the same lesson due to the sole fact she spoke in both French and English.

Those who are not intellectually strong are not being asked to learn to speak French. What we do ask of them is simply the recognition of the French fact in Canada and its acceptance on a constitutional level.

We do not suggest that there is bad faith among all unilingual Anglophones.

Millions of them finally accepted the Canadian reality. Unfortunately, even among these people, what is accepted in theory is often forgotten in practice.

If by her message Mrs. Gandhi has been able to open up the minds of some people, she will have rendered a valuable service to the whole of Canada.

We prefer that this awakening come about without violence, just as did India's liberation from the heavy yoke of colonialism. We know that in countries such as ours and Mrs. Gandhi's, coexistence necessitates the art of compromise.

However, since 1867, this art has been exclusively practised by the Francophones in Canada. Our Anglophone counterparts have only been practising it since 1966, and since they have a long way to go before achieving our excellence in exercising this art, we must content ourselves with setting the pace for them — Marc Gingras (June 22).

Granby La Voix de l'Est: Canada possesses capital competent manpower and abundant resources, but this is all used to enrich others.

We furnish raw materials to several countries in the world, particularly the United States and Japan, which then sell them back to us in the form of finished products.

We could make these products ourselves by showing a little more initiative and in doing so we could be providing work for our manpower. We could sell these products on the world markets.

It would perhaps be to our advantage to send several hundred Canadians to Japan so they can see what the Japanese are doing with our materials and realize they are getting the better of us. As it is, Japan has become the third-largest trading nation in the world because of our raw materials scrap.

And if the government does not protect some of our industries, particularly textiles, the Japanese exporters will soon drive them out of business since it is possible to export to Canada at lower prices than Canadian cost prices.

We must also not forget that at the rate the United States and other countries are investing in Canada, Canadians will soon have very little control left. Nothing will remain for them but the leftovers of our extraordinary resources which could have made Canada one of the richest nations in the universe — Roland Gagne (June 20).

Montreal La Presse: Mr. Brezhnev's visit to the United States made one person very happy: Mr. Nixon himself. Didn't the visit provide him with temporary relief from the terrible pressures he has been under since Watergate?

The American dollar even found new wind during the lull which marked the visit of the secretary of the Soviet Communist party. International communism coming to the rescue of the American dollar!

All observers noted this year's meeting between the leaders of the two strongest nations in the world took place in a much more relaxed atmosphere than in 1972. Mr. Nixon must have been particularly conscious of the fact that, far from exploiting the mishaps of American internal politics, Mr. Brezhnev paid homage, during a televised speech, to the American president for his part in the establishment of new relations between the two countries.

Is this a new entente cordiale? A solid agreement? Only time will tell. If antagonism dies down in a lasting manner, one will soon be asking how a state of cold war could ever have existed between the two blocs. This question interests historians.

One could also consider the question from another angle and ask how the "melting" of the cold war came about. It seems to have been in the works for a long time along with a slow evolution of thinking and the spectacular recovery of Europe.

It remains to be seen whether these good intentions will be followed by concrete results. In the eyes of affluent Americans, the Soviet Union remains a treacherous power which is waiting for the United States to give it a free hand to realize its dreams of hegemony in Europe and the world.

Moreover, a great number of countries which lack the status of empire fear the two super powers will share the world between them.

Mr. Brezhnev and Mr. Nixon are only human and the president's power is particularly fragile at the moment. The new orientation requires a series of adjustments that cannot come about overnight.

In the last 30 years, all technological progress has served to drive men further apart. Even tourism with its planes capable of rapid transportation seems more likely to create gaps between people rather than to bring them really together. Now, at least we know that diplomacy remains capable of success. — Guy Cormier (June 26).

Bridal showers

COOKSHIRE

Miss Sharon Vintiner whose marriage takes place shortly is guest of honor at a miscellaneous shower given by her aunts Mrs. Nelson Wall, Mrs. Doug Evans, Mrs. Terry Rolfe and Miss Dora Gagne at the home of Mrs. Nelson Wall, Cookshire on Wednesday evening May 30.

Upon her arrival she was met at the door, and a corsage of hors d'oeuvres picks attached to a ribbon bow, was pinned on her. As pictures were taken she was escorted to a chair behind a table of daintily wrapped gifts. The table was decorated with streamers and paper flowers, with orange and blue flowers suspended from the table.

After the gifts had been opened and admired by the 28 guests present, Sharon graciously thanked them both for the lovely gifts and coming to make this such a happy event.

Delicious refreshments served by the aunts, consisted of dainty sandwiches, relishes of pickles, olives and celery, cake and ice cream, tea and coffee. Guests were present from Bishopton, Bury, Canterbury, Sherbrooke and Lennoxville.

MELBOURNE

Mrs. F. J. Newell and Mrs. E. J. Newell of Richmond and Mrs. C. O. Buzzell of Magog were hostesses at a miscellaneous shower for their niece, Miss Priscilla McCourt of Sherbrooke, which was held at the home of Mrs. F. J. Newell on Saturday, June 23. The living-room was decorated with vases of summer flowers.

On arrival, Miss McCourt was taken completely by surprise. She was escorted into the living-room by Mrs. Newell where she was seated at a table covered with embroidered cloth, laden with prettily wrapped gifts. Her mother, Mrs. Gordon McCourt and the prospective groom's mother, Mrs. Harold Towers of Greenfield Park, were seated on either side of the guest of honor, and assisted her in unwrapping her gifts. Mrs. Gary Quinn decorated a hat with the colored bows.

The gifts were passed around to be admired. Miss McCourt then expressed her thanks for the lovely gifts and to the hostesses for the shower given in her honor.

Delicious refreshments were afterwards served by the hostesses.

Around 20 guests were present from Montreal, Greenfield Park, Lachine, Sherbrooke, Magog, South Durham, Richmond and Melbourne.

SAWYERVILLE

Miss Karen Olsson, a June bride-elect was feted at a miscellaneous shower at the home of her neighbour, Mrs. James McVety with her aunt Earl Savage, as co-hostess.

Karen, who had been called over on an errand, was surprised to find 31 friends gathered in the basement playroom to honour her. Wedding bells, yellow and mauve streamers, bouquets of pansies, potpourri and cedar were used to give the room a festive look.

The buffet table was centered with a double wedding ring cake decorated in white, yellow and mauve, made by Mrs. Herbert Lassenba.

Karen was seated between her mother Mrs. Orlay Olsson and her future mother-in-law Mrs. Evelyn Laberee, who assisted her in opening the gifts which had been presented to her by Mrs. McVety, who expressed the good wishes of all present. Master Brent McVety took great delight in showering Karen with confetti from the balloons suspended over her head.

The gifts were passed around for all to admire after which Karen expressed her thanks and appreciation and invited everyone to visit her in her new home.

Karen then had her picture taken wearing a hat made of the colorful bows and ribbons from her parcels attached to two foil plates. The designers of this artful creation were Mrs. Bruce Olsson and Mrs. John Olsson.

A social hour followed during which a tasty buffet was served by the hostesses assisted by Mrs. Jack Garneau Jr. and Miss Carol Laberee.

Karen was married to Collin Laberee June 30, in the Sawyerville United Church.

LENNOXVILLE

Marian Porter was the guest-of-honor at a bridal shower, held on Saturday afternoon, June 23 at the home of Mrs. Fred Walker.

On arrival, Marian was presented with a novelty corsage by Gail Lloyd and was escorted to a decorated chair on the lawn where many relatives and friends awaited her.

On behalf of those assembled, Carol Crawford presented Marian with a decorated basket filled with many lovely and personal items. Assisting her in unwrapping the gift packages were Mrs. Florence Kerr and Amy Blackadder.

Afterwards, a flower game was enjoyed by all. Mrs. Maud King, Marilyn Ross and Lucille Wells were the lucky winners.

Flower arrangements of pink and white peonies, donated by Mrs. Gloria Bellam, of Cookshire, were used throughout the home.

Centering the table was a fruit cake decorated in pink and white and topped with a miniature bride and groom. Mrs. Gail Lloyd made and decorated the bridal cake.

Assisting the hostesses in serving the luncheon were Linda Jobel, Nancy and Marlene Wells.

Graciously, Marian thanked everyone for the gifts and pleasant afternoon held in her honor.

BURY

Mrs. Herbert Rowell entertained at a miscellaneous shower on Saturday evening, June 23, in honor of Miss Helene Guillemette of Montreal whose marriage to David Dougherty takes place shortly.

It was not a surprise to Helene as she had been told of it previously. It served the dual purpose of giving her the opportunity to meet several of David's relatives as well as for them to meet her. Among the guests were his two grandmothers, three great-aunts, several cousins and his aunt, the hostess.

Upon her arrival she was met by Mrs. Rowell who pinned a dainty corsage on her and gave her a seat beside her future mother-in-law, Mrs. Stuart Dougherty, before a table laden with attractively wrapped parcels.

As she opened the parcels and read the name of the donor, she thanked each one individually before passing the gifts on for others to see and admire.

When the last gift was opened she very graciously expressed her thanks for the lovely and useful gifts and the pleasure of meeting them all at such a happy occasion.

She had been assisted in opening the gifts by Mrs. Dougherty, who had meanwhile taken the bows and ribbons and made a colorful hat of them. Mrs. Rowell then held a contest of scrambled letters of items used in the kitchen. Mrs. Donald Parsons had all the correct answers and was given a prize.

Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Gordon Dougherty, Mrs. Dale Quinn and Miss Joyce Dougherty. A most attractive feature of the refreshments was the shower cake which was a real work of art. It consisted of five small round cakes arranged in a circle, each in white with a miniature doll on top, representing five bridesmaids. Each cake was decorated with ruffles of icing, each in a different color: pink, blue, yellow, green and orchid.

The whole surmounted by a dainty white net parasol decorated with small bows and bells in the same colors as those on the cakes. The cake was cut by the guest of honor.

Thumbers face terror and horror on the road

TORONTO (CP) — For the hitch-hiker, Canada's roads hold little but terror and horror, say many thumbers from Toronto.

This view has been overwhelmingly expressed since a film company advertised for experiences—good and bad—of local hitch-hikers here. The company plans to make an educational film about hitch-hiking to be distributed among schools and screened on television.

So far, more than 70 letters have been released and at least 90 per cent tell of how adventurous youngsters have faced sexual attacks, beatings, drunk and reckless drivers and threats of all kinds.

The film will be based on the letters whose writers will not be identified by the film makers. Summerhill Productions, a newly-formed Toronto group.

Attacks with broken bottles, sexual assaults on 13-year-old girls and several nightmare rides through downtown Toronto at breakneck speeds are a few of the experiences related by the writers.

Another tells of a motorist who pulled up without a stitch of clothing.

While the film is being made partly in response to a recent coroner's jury recommendation for "a vigorous program of education on the hitch-hiking peril." Summerhill Productions have run up against a stone wall in seeking financial assistance for the $9,000 movie.

Their plea for $3,000 has been turned down by the guidance branch of the provincial ministry of education, the youth and recreation section of the community and social services ministry and the youth secretariat, an extension of the premier's office.

"The film could save lives," stressed producer Ralph Tilkack. "If it were sheer entertainment I could understand it being turned down—but this is for the benefit of the community at large."

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED — Mr. and Mrs. Peter L. Parker of Lennoxville announce the engagement of their daughter, Aline to Mr. James Clarke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce P. Clarke, of Lennoxville. The marriage will take place on Saturday, August 25 at St. George's Church, Lennoxville, at 2 p.m.

Christening

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Jones of St. Lambert was baptized in St. Paul's church, Bury, on Sunday June 24, by his grandfather, Rev. Maxwell Jones of whom he is the first grandchild. The infant received the names Terence Allan. The sponsors were Mr. Clayton Allison, Mr. Arthur Cuming and Miss Judy Allison.

Niconchuk-Dunsmore wed

Recently joined in marriage at a double-ring ceremony, in St. Richards Church, Danvers, Mass., were Miss Mary Ellen Niconchuk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Niconchuk of Peabody, Mass., and Mr. Douglas Dunsmore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Dunsmore of Chelmsford, Mass., formerly of Waterloo, Fr. J. Masseena, a friend of the bride, officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of French lace and organza. Her long flowered veil was caught to a camelot flower headpiece. The bride carried a bouquet of white daisies with blue and white stephanotis.

Miss Susan Niconchuk, sister of the bride, was the matron-of-honor. The best man was Scott Dunsmore, brother of the groom. Ushers were William and David Niconchuk, brothers of the bride.

At the reception held at Glen Magna in Danvers, the bride's sister, Nancy Brown, was in charge of the guest book.

After a wedding trip to Nova Scotia, Mr. and Mrs. Dunsmore will take up residence in Phoenix, Arizona where Mr. Dunsmore will obtain his M.A. from Thunderbird International Business College.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

No book by Fred Karpin would be complete unless he showed a couple of hands where someone threw away an ace as the only way to make a contract or defeat a contract depending on whether or not the hero was defending or playing the dummy.

In today's hand played in a rubber bridge game at New York's Cavendish Club, Sonny Moyle, former editor of the Bridge World, found himself in a rather unsound six-heart contract.

Not that we don't all get into worse contracts and no one can blame Sonny for his six bid.

West opened the eight of clubs. After a low club was played from dummy, East played the 10. Sonny thought of ducking but decided that the club lead was a singleton and he had better take the trick.

He also saw a way to make the contract assuming he was right. He simply played out a few rounds of trumps; led a diamond to dummy's ace; cashed dummy's king and discarded his ace of spades.

Then he ruffed a diamond and led the four of spades. West was in with the king, but had to lead another spade to let Sonny get to dummy and discard his losing clubs.

The bidding has been:

You, South, hold:

▲ A Q 7 6 ♥ Q J 9 5 4 ♦ A 2 ♠ 6 3

What do you do now?

A—Bid four spades. If you have an expert and conservative partner you might jump to five spades. This should tell him that you are afraid of two heart losers. Only a conservative expert would figure this out.

TODAY'S QUESTION

You do bid four spades and your partner bids five hearts. What do you do now?

Petroleum shortage threatens plastic

VANCOUVER (CP) — The plastics industry, which has undergone an explosive growth in recent years, sees its very existence threatened by the global shortage of petroleum products.

"The long-term outlook is frightening," says Pete Devries, president of Marine Plastics, which produces reinforced plastics at its North Vancouver, B.C., plant.

The problem for Marine plastics and other firms in the industry is that petroleum resins are a main component in the seemingly endless multitude of items—from entire houses to flimsy wrapping for left-over food—fashioned from plastic.

It is one indication of the vast growth of the plastics industry that there are some 150 firms devoted to the production, wholesaling and retailing of plastic goods in the Greater Vancouver area alone, although it forms only the tiniest of cogs in the North American plastic industry.

All 150 are feeling the pinch of the petroleum shortage. Basic resins are more difficult to obtain and more costly. For some, deliveries now are on a strict quota basis and often subject to delays, which creates problems in maintaining production schedules. Long-term contracts for resins are no longer available. And because quotas are based on past purchases, it now is virtually impossible for a new firm to open up in what has become, in effect, a closed industry.

Price increases, as many as three in six months, have increased the cost of basic materials by as much as 20 per cent.

"We're not short of supplies yet, but obviously we are threatened," says Mr. Devries.

He says the scarcity and cost of the major component is making it difficult to remain competitive with non-plastic products.

John Mackenzie, head of Seaforth Plastics, a subsidiary of Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd., says prices charged by major suppliers in Canada and the United States have risen three times in six months.

Seaforth makes polyethylene bags and containers used in supermarkets and Mr. Mackenzie says the increased cost of the wrappings will eventually be reflected in the price of the food it encloses.

Wally Unger, secretary-treasurer of Poly-Chlor Plastics Industries Ltd., based in adjoining Coquitlam municipality, says deliveries on some materials used by his firm are subject to delays of two months or more. His firm uses a B. F. Goodrich compound from Los Angeles, obtained through a Vancouver warehouse. The cost of polystyrene, obtained in Montreal, recently went up 10 per cent with no guarantee of delivery.

OUTLOOK BAD

He describes the long-range outlook as "bad" for both raw material supply and production.

Don Mason, a technical expert with Canadian Industries Ltd., says the CIL plant in Edmonton cannot meet demands for polyethylene and is at peak production capacity.

CIL imports its resins from the U.S. to make polyethylene and Mr. Mason says the Canadian situation may not be relieved for three or four years and only then if Dow and Dome Petroleum go ahead with a $150 million project to build an Alberta plant to produce polyethylene from Alberta petroleum products.

Meanwhile some firms are putting sheet anchors to windward against the plastics storm. Flex-Lox Industries Ltd., of Abbotsford, B.C., which manufactures a line of plastic sewer pipes, is also manufacturing clay pipes. "I care, too, and I hope that young mother comes to her senses before something terrible happens. The possibilities for disaster are endless. It's strange how many people insure their homes, cars and jewelry. But their most valuable possessions — their children — they leave unguarded and trust to luck that some guardian angel will keep them safe and sound. When you see this column in the paper, please make sure she does."

Dear Ann Landers: I need help with our 15-year-old daughter. She is five-foot-four and weighs 160 pounds — at least. I am five-five and have weighed 125 pounds for the last ten years.

The girl has a beautiful face but she is enormous. I've offered her lovely clothes as an incentive to lose weight. I've bought her books on diet and nutrition, sent away for literature and reducing programs put out by weight-losing groups, offered her psychiatric therapy — everything under the sun — but she is completely uncooperative and will have nothing to do with any of it.

"D" is a quiet person, obedient, respectful, good in school, never seems to have any trouble with anyone, but she has few friends and is content to be alone with her books and records. The thing that baffles me is that I have never seen her eat bread, potatoes or desserts, and she doesn't snack all day the way some teenagers do. I can't figure out why she is at least 30 pounds overweight.

The girl is in good health but not interested in sports. Any suggestions you can offer will be greatly appreciated.

Dead End Mother

Dear Mother: The fact that you have never seen your daughter eat fattening foods does not mean she isn't eating them. There are closet eaters — as sure as there are closet drinkers.

Your attempted bribes give me a clue. Fat daughters who have slim mothers invariably have a special set of emotional problems. The fact that you mention your weight gives me another clue. I suspect there is some deep-seated hostility and competitiveness in her relationship with you.

Take "D" to a doctor for a complete physical check-up. Let him suggest a diet and counseling — and you stay out of it. When you stop talking about her weight she'll probably start doing something about it.

By Ann Landers

Loose life can depress

Dear Ann Landers: I am 20, in my third year of college and have come to the point where I must admit to myself that I always fall in love with men who hurt me most. I don't consider myself promiscuous. I just find it difficult to feel secure in a relationship without sex.

Since the age of 15 I have had ten affairs. They have become less and less satisfying. Almost always, my lovers grow tired of me and I end up begging them to take me back. Some try to avoid me. Others have conned me into having sex with no strings attached.

I must admit I don't have a single friend who is not using me. I keep resolving that next time it will be different — that I won't say yes to sex until I have established a solid friendship. But the fear of loneliness and rejection keeps fouling me up. I am too embarrassed to discuss this face to face with a counsellor. Thank you for any help you can provide.

Ann —

Desperate In Oceanside

Dear D.: The way you set yourself up for punishment, your stated fears of loneliness and rejection, the inability to believe that a person could like you for yourself and not for your body — this all adds up to a girl who needs therapy. You say you are too embarrassed to discuss the matter face to face. Why? Do you believe the therapist will think less of you than the men you fall into bed with on a first date? I urge you to get counseling before you find yourself at the bottom of a depression you can't crawl out of.

Dear Ann Landers: Is it possible that a couple who have been married for 17 years can run out of conversation? My husband never was what you'd call a ball of fire but he was at least alive.

I saw this coming five years ago and tried to interest him in duplicate bridge, folk-dancing, encounter group therapy and new friends. He asked me to please let him alone. He said his work and our two sons keep him as busy as he cares to be. When he wants a little diversion he goes to the garage and tinkers with his car.

I'm afraid I'm turning into a nag, Ann, but there must be more to life than this stick-in-the-mud existence. My mother says I should count my blessings and accept things as they are. (She was born in the old country). Can you think of something I ought to try to wake him up?

Dear Mrs.: If you knew how many husbands suddenly become too darned lively after 17 years of marriage, you'd be thankful that all yours wants to do for "diversion" is tinker with his car. You can't force new interests on people who don't want them. Do your thing during the afternoon and get off his back.

Dear Ann Landers: I am visiting here from South America and finding it difficult to understand what is considered correct in social situations. I plan to apply for U.S. citizenship after I have completed my education, but I wonder if perhaps you can settle something in my mind.

At a dinner party last night several women tried to get medical advice from a guest who happened to be a physician. They asked questions such as, "Which is better, the Pill, a diaphragm, or should a man get a vasectomy?" These questions were asked at the table between the salad and the soup. Are such questions considered good manners in America?

B.B.

Dear B.B.: Such questions are not considered "good manners" anywhere except in the office of a physician.

Dear Ann Landers: Please, please, please tell mothers, whether they live in big cities or small towns, that they must never leave their small children alone.

I have a friend who causes me untold anxiety. She has a six-year-old boy, a five-year-old girl and a 10-month-old baby. She runs to the Post Office (three blocks away), to the grocery store and to her girl friend's house for a two-hour coffeeklatch. All day long she is running someplace and her children are alone.

Her husband goes to school in a nearby city and gets home every other weekend. He condones her behavior. Last week they had dinner with some relatives and left their children by themselves until nearly midnight.

Their apartment is next to a gas station, across the street from a supermarket and a restaurant. Anything could happen. We have many mutual friends who know she leaves these youngsters alone but nobody will say anything. They insist it's "not their business." I thought I'd try you.

I know she reads your column all the time because she quotes you a lot. Please tell her, Ann.

Thank You.

I Care

Dear I.C.: I care, too, and I hope that young mother comes to her senses before something terrible happens. The possibilities for disaster are endless. It's strange how many people insure their homes, cars and jewelry. But their most valuable possessions — their children — they leave unguarded and WIMBLEDON (AP) - Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Ill., was to play his Wimbledon quarter-final match against Iley Metreveli today carrying a burden on his sturdy shoulders: He's been made a 3-1 favorite to win the title.

And it's all due to Alex Mayer, Mayer, of Wayne, N.J., pulled off the biggest upset of the All-England Tennis tournament Saturday, ousting top-seeded Iley Nastase of Romania. Nastase had been the favorite, and his defeat left the field wide open in the men's singles.

Connors, ranked third in the United States, has reached the quarter-finals both times he's played at Wimbledon. Last year, he was beaten by Nastase. This year, with the fiery Romanian out of the way, the fifth-seeded Connors has his big chance.

APPEARS SHARP - He's breezed through the first four rounds, losing only one set, and with his double-handed backhand working to perfection he appears extremely sharp.

Connors gets his ranking this year because of the defection of most of the top stars, including Stan Smith, defending champion John Newcombe, Arthur Ashe and Ken Rosewall, who decided to boycott the tournament in support of Nikki Pilic, the Yugoslav banned by the International Lawn Tennis Federation at the request of his national association.

In today's quarter-finals, Mayer was to meet Jurgen Fassbender of West Germany, No. 8 seed.

Mayer is unseeded and one of only two non-seeds to reach the final eight. The other is the 19-year-old Indian, Vijay Amritraj, who plays Kodes in a quarter-final.

The other quarter-final is between Britain's Roger Taylor seeded third, and blonde Bjorn Borg, the 17-year-old Swedish whiz kid.

TOP FOUR REMAIN - The women completed their quarter-finals Monday.

Australia's Evonne Goolagor, the 1971 winner and No. 3 seed was beaten by Nastase. This year, with the fiery Romanian out of the way, the fifth-seeded Connors has his big chance.

Smokin' Joe burning again

Expos avoid cellar

By GLEN COLE
 MONTREAL (CP) — The headlong dive by Montreal Expos into sixth spot in the National League's Division was halted Monday by the occupants of the cellar—New York Mets.

BOOTS DAY
 ...His homer wins it

A home run by Boots Day, pinch-hitting for pitcher Steve Renko, in the bottom of the 10th inning gave the Expos a 2-1 win over the injury-plagued Mets, snapping a five-game losing streak which saw the Expos tumble from second place into the scramble near the bottom of the division.

John Milner, Staub and Ed Kranepool, which produced the Mets' only run.

LONDON (AP) — Joe Frazier knocked Joe Bugner down in the 10th round and pounded out a 12-round decision over the tough Briton Monday night in Frazier's first fight since losing the world heavyweight title.

Savage finally succumbs to Indy injuries

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Swede Savage, the race car driver who twice survived critical injuries, died Monday, one month and three days after a fiery crash during the Indianapolis 500.

Savage, 26, of Santa Ana, Calif., who was critically burned in the wreck, was the third person to die of injuries at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway this year.

Doctors at Methodist Hospital said death was caused by lung and kidney complications.

judge, scored it 58½ to 58½ for Frazier.

The Associated Press gave Frazier eight rounds, Bugner two and called two even.

Frazier began to take charge in the third round and kept command for the rest of the way, bombing away with both hands to the body.

Several times Frazier would break into a wide grin and even Frazier, giving away height, weight and age—as he usually does, beat a swelling around both of Bugner's eyes and bloodied his nose Bugner, fighting to the end although he just couldn't match his opponent's fire power almost closed Frazier's left eye late in the fight.

The 29-year-old Frazier weighed 208, the lightest he's been since he weighed 205½ when he outpointed Muhammad Ali for universal title recognition March 8, 1971. He weighed 214 when he lost the title to Foreman.

The 23-year-old Bugner, who lost a 12-round decision to Ali in Las Vegas, Nev., last Feb. 14, weighed 221. He also has a five-inch reach advantage.

But the reach didn't do Bugner much good as the five-foot 11½ inch Frazier bulldozed past the left jab and other punches of his 6-4 opponent.

The first round before an estimated 15,000 at Earl's Court was even and Bugner won the second round in one of the toughest heavyweight fights ever seen in Britain.

In the eighth round, Frazier raised swelling around both of Bugner's eyes and bloodied his nose. Frazier also scored with several crashing hooks.

It was all Frazier in round nine, but Bugner, although rocked several times, would not go down.

Bugner finally fell before Frazier's relentless attack in the 10th, but he had the partisan crowd cheering as he traded punches in the last two rounds.

The final round had the crowd in a frenzy when Frazier scored with body blows that brought a glazed look to Bugner, but Bugner fought back and Frazier's eye began to rapidly close.

Victory was a must for Frazier, who had been clamoring for a rematch with Foreman since the day after he lost for the first time in his career.

qualifications. Teran died when he stepped into the path of a fire truck speeding through the pit area to Savage's burning car.

Thirty-six drivers and 26 other persons, including pit crew members and spectators, have been killed in accidents at the Speedway since it opened as a dirt track Aug. 19, 1909.

Savage and his wife, Sheryl, who is six months pregnant, have a daughter, Shelly, 6.

Swede, whose real name was David Earl Savage Jr., worked in a motorcycle shop owned by racer Dan Gurney when the creator of the Eagle decided to give him a chance at Can-Am racing.

He won his first championship car race in the 1970 season finale at Phoenix. He made every race on the championship circuit last year, finishing 25th in point standings. A sixth in the Milwaukee 150 was his best finish.

Savage was one of a handful of members of the 200-mile-an-hour club, turning a lap of 207 m.p.h. at Ontario, Calif., last Feb. 15.

United States Auto Club (USAC) officials have not listed an official cause for the Savage crash or the one which injured driver David (Salt) Walther in the aborted first lap of the rain-delayed race May 28.

Walther is in serious condition at the University of Michigan burns centre in Ann Arbor, Mich. Nine spectators were taken to hospital with burns suffered when fuel from Walther's car sprayed the crowd.

After the race, the USAC adopted several new rules designed to cut down the chance of serious injury in an accident.

Changes included limiting racers to one fuel tank instead of two and cutting the amount of fuel carried to 40 gallons from 75.

Potvin, third baseman, Paul Genereux, first baseman and Andre Labelle, pitcher. They put on a fine performance at Amedee Roy stadium last night, before the regularly scheduled Sherbrooke-Pittsfield game. They beat a local softball team, drawing lots of laughs in the process.

Royalty views Royal Chocolate's win

By GORD GRANT
 CP General Sports Editor
 TORONTO (CP) — Just four days ago, Royal Chocolate was just another horse in the Stafford Farms stable at Woodbine racetrack but now the colt could be the favorite for the July 15 Manitoba Derby in Winnipeg.

The sudden change of fortune is due to Royal Chocolate's victory Saturday in the Queen's Plate at Woodbine where a record crowd of 40,137 included Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip.

Even though Royal Chocolate was a division of the Plate Trial Stakes June 23, the crowd gave him little consideration and sent him off as a 23-1 longshot in the premier event for Canadian-bred three-year-olds.

Owner Jack Stafford was a little incredulous himself.

"I never thought we'd win that race, never," he said after he'd collected 50 sovereigns from the Queen. "I knew we would win only when we were five lengths ahead with only an eighth to go."

At the finish, Royal Chocolate, with Ted Colangelo aboard, was 5½ lengths up on Sinister Purpose, which finished second, and My Archie Bald, which was third.

HANDSOME RETURN
 Royal Chocolate paid a handsome $48.10, $14.50 and $9 to $2 bettors and $80,697 to Stafford. It ran as an entry with Good Port, which finished 13th in the 17-horse field.

Sinister Purpose paid $5.40 and $4.20 while My Archie Bald paid $5.50.

The $521, 336 betting pool was the largest in Plate history, eclipsing last year's $471,870 record.

Total purse was a record $124,150 of which Sinister Purpose collected $24,830, My Archie Bald $12,415 and Albert the Consort $6,207.

Stafford and trainer Gil Rowntree said the next race for Royal Chocolate and Good Port will be the Manitoba derby.

Mrs. Stafford sat in the Turf Club later counting her sovereigns—the race is advertised as $75,000 added plus a purse of 50 guineas, however, guineas are no longer minted.

"What are these worth?" she asked a reporter.

Told they were equivalent to one pound sterling, about $2.50 each, but worth much more as collectors' items, she said.

"Oh, it's nice to know that I'll save them for my grandchildren."

The winning time of two minutes, eight seconds was the slowest since 1923 when South Shore won Canada's top thoroughbred race in 2:11.

The track was listed as slow by the handicappers because of a rain shortly before post time. The heavy going was supposed to be an advantage to favorite La Prevoyante, but it didn't turn out that way.

The filly started well and was challenging for the lead rounding the last turn. However, she ran out of gas and finished a badly-beaten eighth. This supported the opinions of some handicappers who said she couldn't go the Plate's 1¼-mile distance.

On the other hand, Royal Chocolate, who had won only one other stakes race in his career—a division of the Plate trials—won going away after being as far back as 10th.

La Prevoyante and Impressive Lady, carried 121 pounds as the only two fillies in the Plate. The boys carried 126 pounds.

Of La Prevoyante, Canada's horse of the year in 1972, jockey John LeBlanc said:

"After I got to be second she was running beautifully. I asked her to run at the three-eighths pole and she responded a bit. I think I took the lead a bit. I thought she'd go on, but she just couldn't."

Stafford said of Colangelo, an Italian immigrant who had a tough job finding a mount last year:

"He's a hell of a rider. He's going to be another Sandy Hawley. He showed up at the track with a terrible toothache Friday and was worried he wouldn't be in shape for today. I told him to have it pulled and he did."

Dodgers drop 3 to Reds

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
 Tony Perez belted a two-run homer off Los Angeles relief ace Jim Brewer in the ninth inning Monday night, lifting Cincinnati Reds to a 4-2 National League baseball victory over the Dodgers.

In other National League games, St. Louis Cardinals topped Philadelphia Phillies 7-4; San Francisco Giants outslug Atlanta Braves 9-5 and San Diego Padres downed Houston Astros 8-5.

In the American League, Boston Red Sox blanked New York Yankees 1-0; Milwaukee Brewers defeated Baltimore Orioles 5-3; Detroit Tigers edged Cleveland Indians 4-3; Minnesota Twins stopped Kansas City Royals 5-3 and Chicago White Sox squeaked by Texas Rangers 5-4.

Johnny Bench opened the ninth in Cincinnati with an infield single off Brewer, who had just entered the game, and Perez followed with a home run over the left field fence, his 14th of the season.

By beating the Dodgers for the third game in a row, the fourth-place Reds, defending National League champions, pulled within eight games of the Dodgers in the West Division race.

Ted Simmons drove in five runs, three of them with a sixth-inning homer, to lead the Cardinals to their victory over the Phillies.

A two-run homer by Chris Speier in the eighth brought the Giants from behind for the last time in a see-saw game at Atlanta. The Braves' Hank Aaron hit his 21st homer of the season and No. 694 lifetime, putting him 20 behind Babe Ruth's career mark of 714.

Clarence Gaston smashed a three-run homer in the ninth inning in Houston with the score tied 5-5 to give the Padres their victory.

Mickey Stanley hit a hit a two-run homer for the Tigers and the winning run scored on a passed ball that got past Indian catcher John Ellis. Canadian-born John Hiller picked up his 18th save for Detroit.

New York's Fritz Peterson gave the Red Sox only two hits but one of them was Dwight Evans' fifth-inning homer. John Curtis won the pitchers' duel with Peterson.

George Scott blasted a tie-breaking two-run homer off Baltimore reliever Grant Jackson with two out in the eighth inning to give the Brewers their win. It laugh, something he has not done in the ring since the night he beat Ali.

SLOWS FRAZIER
 In the fourth round Frazier shocked Bugner with a savage right to the jaw, but Bugner brought the crowd, which included Foreman, to its feet by wobbling the American. However, Frazier went right back to the attack and won the round.

As the fight progressed, it became apparent that Bugner's lack of a big punch was too much for him to overcome.

In the eighth round, Frazier raised swelling around both of Bugner's eyes and bloodied his nose. Frazier also scored with several crashing hooks.

It was all Frazier in round nine, but Bugner, although rocked several times, would not go down.

Bugner finally fell before Frazier's relentless attack in the 10th, but he had the partisan crowd cheering as he traded punches in the last two rounds.

The final round had the crowd in a frenzy when Frazier scored with body blows that brought a glazed look to Bugner, but Bugner fought back and Frazier's eye began to rapidly close.

Victory was a must for Frazier, who had been clamoring for a rematch with Foreman since the day after he lost for the first time in his career.
