CHATEAUGUAY AND HUNTINGDON COUNTIES W. C. T. U. CONVENTION

Thirty-First Annual Meeting of Counties Organizations Displayed Renewed Vigour and Enthusiasm For Cause of Temperance

MRS. ROY BLAIR MADE LIFE MEMBER
Rev. W. T. Prittie, Rev. J. O. Baron, Dr. H. R. Clouston and Mesdames Henry Wilson, Lang, Robert Sellar, and Miss M. I. Bazin Among Speakers on Programme

The 31st annual convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of the Counties of Chateauguay and Huntingdon, met on Thursday, June 25th, in the United Church at Chateauguay Basin. There were three sessions, morning, afternoon and evening. The County President, Mrs. Roy Blair, presided at all sessions. Each session was opened with a devotional period, the morning period being in charge of Miss M. I. Bazin, of Ormstown. Miss Bazin based her remarks on the beautiful things of nature, by which we were surrounded, the wonderful goodness of God in making the world so beautiful, alike for the evil and the good. Although discouragements may come, because of the many mistakes that are made, there is encouragement from God's promises of renewed strength and courage for His work. The W.C.T.U. is organized for a great purpose, to make the whole world a safer and a better place for all who live in it, in our own land and all others. The hymns sung at this and all other devotional periods, were carefully chosen and most appropriate for the occasion. Miss Bazin's prayer was for guidance and help in the deliberations of the day.

The Convention having been declared open for business, reporters were appointed for the local papers, and conveners for the different committees. The Rev. Sec. Mrs. Geo. A. Rennie, read the minutes of the "School of Methods," which had been held last autumn in Dewittville, and of the mid-winter meeting of the County sub-executive, also held in Dewittville.

A committee had been appointed to prepare a programme for the work of the Unions during the year, and this committee announced that the programmes had been prepared and explained that any Union or "Y" must be one year old, before being eligible to compete for medal for increase in membership.

Treasurer's Report Read
The report of the treasurer, Miss Florence Bryson, was concise and explicit, of which the following is the summary: Total receipts for the year, $501.91; from the 33rd year, $392.90; to the Provincial treasury, $62.88 for county expenses, with a balance of cash on hand, $46.13. The report of the Cor. Sec. showed that there are with a total membership of 364 active and 39 honorary members. Five members have died during the year. Mrs. J. White and Mrs. D. MacFarlane from Huntingdon, Mrs. (Rev.) D. W. Morrison from Ormstown, and Mrs. G. Rutherford from Ormstown. Seventeen letters of sympathy or greeting had been written. Motions carried were that there would be no County picnic this year, and that all resolutions for medal contests be of temperance subjects. An adjournment was made for lunch. Delegates brought lunch which was eaten in the basement dining-room of the hostesses, where tea was served by the hostesses to the members of the Chateauguay Basin Union.

Memorial Service
The afternoon session opened with a memorial service, led by Mrs. R. Sellar, in honor of the five members who had been translated to higher service. Mrs. Sellar spoke of the love between David and Jonathan, of the death of Jonathan, and of David's lamentation for his friend. We also have lost these friends, and we mourn their loss. And now, who is going to fill the gaps? Are we going to carry on, and do more and more, do our very utmost to carry on God's work, and let our sisters have laid down? Mrs. Reese sang a solo, "Only a little while till we meet in the dawning," and Mrs. Sellar led in prayer. It was reported that in Hemmingford a recent and long illness had resulted in the prohibition law which is in force in the County of Huntingdon. The reason for this prohibition by-law had not been signed and ratified by all the mayors of the different municipalities in the County.

Department Reports
Several reports on the different departments of the work were given. The report of the children's hour, The members of the Chateauguay L.T.L. with their Secretary, Miss Rhoda MacFarlane entered, and rendered a very pleasing programme of songs and recitations, which were much appreciated. Rev. J. O. Baron, of Bedford, spoke a few words to the children. The report of the committee on credentials gave the voting strength of the convention to be 100. All the officers were re-elected, but there were a few changes in superintendents. Mrs. Wilson, Prov. Pres., gave notice of motion, as follows: "That at our next county convention, I, or some one in my place, will move that Article III of our County constitution be amended to provide for the election of officers by ballot, from a slate prepared by a nominating committee composed of a representative from each Union or Y.P.B. convention. This committee to be appointed at this annual meeting, but in after years, by this said nominating committee. Carried. Adjournment was made for supper, which was served by the members of the local Union, assisted by a number of ladies from other organizations in the town. The tables were loaded with a profusion of beautiful flowers and food which was of unexcelled excellence and variety. The hungry guests did ample justice to the feast, and when it was ended, Mrs. Sellar while paying eloquent tribute to the kindness and hospitality of the people of Chateauguay, moved them to a hearty vote of thanks, which every one seconded by a vigorous clap.

Welcome to Visitors
Mrs. Lang, President of the Chateauguay Union, in welcoming the visitors, said that this was the 41st anniversary of the organization of the Union there, and that it was just 100 years since the first Protestant Ser-

The Devotional Period
The devotional period of the evening service was in charge of Rev. W. T. Prittie, and music was by the choir of the church and their organist. The first speaker was Rev. J. O. Baron, whose text was God's command to Joshua, "Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed, for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest." The same command is given to us. The true test of courage is to stand up in spite of fear, because a man who knows nothing, fears nothing, dares, "I have a gracious and seen friend," was sung by Mrs. Reese and Mrs. Wm. Wilson. Mrs. Henry Wilson, Prov. Pres., gave a résumé of the World's Convention held recently at Toronto. The Convention held recently at Toronto. The Convention held recently at Toronto.

Dr. Clouston Spoke
The last speaker was Dr. Howard Clouston, who was asked to speak on the scientific fact about alcohol. The doctor read a few quotations from noted medical journals from London, Eng., from Berlin, Ger., and from New York, U.S.A. All of these expressed the same terms, the fact that it is harmful, and not to be used for any form of sickness or disease. He also said that you cannot legislate away an evil. It is necessary first to educate the mind of the people, to create public sentiment against the evil, and then it can be driven out. The doctor referred to the ever-increasing number of motor accidents directly attributable to strong drink, and said that something must be done, and done quickly to stem this awful tide of crime and danger. Mrs. Lang, in her gracious manner, spoke of the different places which claimed Dr. Clouston as his birth-place, the fact that he received his education in the place which now claims him as a citizen and a physician, but it is Chateauguay Basin which has the honor of presenting him to the public as a public speaker. After singing the National Anthem, Mr. Blair declared the convention closed.

There were several swings in the grove which were kept in constant use. The ball game being an added attraction this year between Beavers and Hinchinbrooke, had a large following of baseball fans. It was an exhibition game which proved interesting, Beavers winning 15 to 7. MAN, RIDING ON MUDGUARD DEAD

Bellevue Young Man, Albert Boisvert, Caught by Truck and Rolled Under Wheels

Plucked from the mudguard of the automobile on which he was riding when his clothing was caught by a passing motor truck, Albert Boisvert, 21 years of age, of Bellevue, was fatally injured at 9 o'clock on Saturday night at Melocheville. He died Sunday morning at the Beauharnois Hospital at six o'clock. Information given the hospital authorities was that Boisvert was driving with a number of friends. The vehicle was crowded and Boisvert elected to ride on the left mudguard. Boisvert's clothes were caught by some protruding part of the truck and he was pulled off. He fell on the road and rolled beneath the wheels of the truck which passed over him. His legs and arms were fractured, and he suffered internal injuries.

O. Dupuis, driver of the car had his licence cancelled for allowing the victim to ride on the mudguard of his car. At the inquest on Monday morning under Dr. A. Besser, the driver of the truck, as yet unknown, was held criminally responsible for the death of Boisvert.

Mr. and Mrs. Serviss Feted by Friends

About thirty members of Coteau Lodge, Maintenance of Way, No. 123, gathered at Coteau for the occasion of presenting Mr. P. C. Serviss and Mrs. Serviss with a gift of appreciation, on his transfer from the Alexandria Sub Division to the Cornwall Sub Division. Mr. Serviss came as a stranger, and has made many friends in all departments in the number of years he has been here.

About 8:30 p.m. we journeyed to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Serviss, where we had their eyes on another player or two to plug up the leaks in the Huntingdon aggregation. Playing for Huntingdon last Saturday at Rockburn were Lewis, pitcher; A. Watson, catcher; D. McCormick, 1st base; E. Martin, 2nd base; F. Fortune, 3rd base; L. Chambers, s.s.; D. Macfarlane, r.f.; S. Mose, c.f.; and M. Ross, l.f.

The Hinchinbrooke team included F. McCormick, catcher; A. Robert, pitcher; A. Hampson, 1st base; A. Rowland, 2nd base; G. Goldie, 3rd base; G. Taylor, s.s.; G. Goldie, r.f.; H. Steele, c.f.; and M. Matther, l.f. The Beavers played last Saturday at Ormstown, walloping the "show city" team to the tune of 19 to 9 without any over exertion. Paul Reid was the star of the occasion, being able to stop the Beavers from knocking out safe hits, some six or seven runs being scored by the Elgin nine in the first inning.

The standing of the four teams was not affected by last Saturday's games. The Beavers and Hinchinbrooke are tied for first place, both having won two games and lost none. Ormstown gets second place with one win and two games lost, while Huntingdon brings up the rear with three games lost.

Miss Elizabeth Beaudin, student in Toronto, Ont., is home for the summer vacation. Mr. Joseph McWhinnie of Montreal, spent the week-end in Ormstown with relatives.

New Milk Factory Started

At a meeting of the Executive of the Huntingdon County Farmers' Co-operative Society held on Friday evening, the tender for the construction of the new milk factory was given to George Emerson of Ormstown, at $7800. The new factory will be built on the Frank Allard lot between the New York Central and Canadian National Railways stations, with frontage on York street. Mr. Emerson's first tender at $8000, was further reduced to $7800, when some changes in the plans were made at the meeting. The building will be of cement block construction. As far as possible local labour will be used. The work started on Monday morning. The building must be completed within six weeks.

Huntingdon, July 1st, 1931

To the Editor of the Gleaner.

Dear Sir:—I wish to draw your attention to the deplorable condition of the Park, two lamp standards with no shade on them, dead trees, north end of park with weeds higher and thicker than the popples grow in Flander's Fields—row by row, around the monument base weeds measuring 12 in. across, railing lamp standards, guns, need a coat of paint.

If you have any doubt about the above statement take a walk through the park and see for yourself.

Respectfully,
J. D. BICKNELL.

BEAVERS AND ROCKBURN WIN

Elgin Nine Still Undefeated While Huntingdon Loses on Errors

Local baseball is staging the biggest comeback in recent years with three teams, Huntingdon, Ormstown and Hinchinbrooke, doing their utmost to upset the long series of victories by the Beavers. The Huntingdon nine, with new material and extra batting practice, will attempt to hand out a beating to the Elgin team in a league game Saturday afternoon at the Fair Grounds.

The Huntingdon aggregation came to grips with the Hinchinbrooke nine Saturday afternoon at Rockburn for the first time this season and were only nosed out of what looked like a certain victory by errors in the last certain innings of an extra inning game. The final score was 10 to 8 for Hinchinbrooke.

The Huntingdon team is gaining new material every week and is fast becoming one of the hardest teams of the league to beat. Mike Ross celebrated his arrival in town by clouting out the only circuit hit of the evening game and, as well, picked off a neat outfield hit after spiking half way across the field. Mike says he is going to be around for some two or three months. The Elgin team in a other home runs chalked up for the Huntingdon nine this season.

Chick Fortune has also joined the Huntingdon team and is scheduled for a permanent berth. Team scouts have their eyes on another player or two to plug up the leaks in the Huntingdon aggregation. Playing for Huntingdon last Saturday at Rockburn were Lewis, pitcher; A. Watson, catcher; D. McCormick, 1st base; E. Martin, 2nd base; F. Fortune, 3rd base; L. Chambers, s.s.; D. Macfarlane, r.f.; S. The Hinchinbrooke team included F. McCormick, catcher; A. Robert, pitcher; A. Hampson, 1st base; A. Rowland, 2nd base; G. Goldie, 3rd base; G. Taylor, s.s.; G. Goldie, r.f.; H. Steele, c.f.; and M. Swimming

Occasionally competent swimmers drown, victims of cramps or some other accidental circumstance; but the vast majority of the hundreds of persons who drown in this country every year are poor swimmers or no swimmers at all. There is little excuse for that.

The art of swimming is so agreeable and so easily mastered that no person should grow to maturity without being able to swim. There are many instances, or occasions, where a knowledge of swimming would be of great advantage. True, it may be hard to learn to swim in a deep river, or without some guidance. But, there are multiple safe swimming places in our district for beginners, and experienced swimmers who are willing to help these beginners, usually consider it a favour to coach a younger person.

Swimming is not only a pleasure in itself. A knowledge of it adds to the pleasure of boating and other water sports through the feeling of security it imparts. The man or woman who goes through life without learning to swim misses a great deal of recreational enjoyment; and potentially risks being added to the heavy economic wastage the country suffers every season by drowning accidents.

Better Fall Fairs

A new attitude towards the fall fairs and a keener appreciation of their value to the community has come into being. For many years, the fall fair, except in a few notable instances, appeared to have passed under a cloud. Attendance dwindled and buildings were allowed to fall into disrepair. It is hard to account for this, though it may be laid to a feeling among the public that directors of these events were getting away from the primary purpose of the exhibition: the assembling for judging of the best livestock the district could produce; the display of articles grown on the farm and of the handicrafts of the home, and stimulating among the people of the district a friendly rivalry in these exhibits. Patrons of the fairs of a couple of decades ago will recall the keenness of these contests for supremacy, and the pride of any section of the country that brought home a champion horse—or even an outstanding aristocrat of the hog pen.

This admirable spirit appears to be returning. In the instance of the Ormstown Exhibition which was held only a few weeks ago, never was such interest exhibited heretofore. In the case of fall fairs, there seems to be a still further interest from the fact that farm produce can be exhibited in greater variety.

The signal success of Ormstown Show this year is a wholesome sign of the times, and an indication that rural communities are taking more interest in matters with which they are vitally concerned. This success will undoubtedly pave the way for greater success at Valleyfield Exhibition, and at our local fall fairs at Havelock, St. Louis, Ste. Martine and Huntingdon, when they will be held within the next few months.

Railroad Crossings and Penalties

At some railway crossings in the Old Land one may see a sign with this warning, "It is dangerous to cross the tracks, penalty fifty shillings." There is a certain humorous side to this. One would imagine that the danger to life and limb would be a sufficient deterrent without the penalty of the fifty shillings.

Translated into plain language the notice would read, "You may get maimed or killed in crossing this track, but if you are determined to risk your life, we must by law fine you fifty shillings." All of which seems absurd until we give the matter a little consideration and find that there is quite a bit of homely philosophy behind this apparently ludicrous notice; because of two penalties we frequently fear the lesser. Let us examine the situation: I am, let us say, a man with a moderate income. I cannot afford a motor car, or a number of other desirable things such as men in better circumstances can afford; yet, impelled by one motive or another, I purchase a car and the numerous other accessories to a family such as this modern age demands, though I know I cannot meet my obligations. I do all this because I fear more the lesser penalty of the disapproval of some of my friends, or of my own weak and foolish ambition than I do the greater penalty of putting my butcher and baker and candlestick maker to inconvenience and possible loss. Or I am tempted to scamp my work, but I do that work with some degree of efficiency because I fear that I may lose my job, or I fulfil my contract because there is an architect who inconveniently scrutinizes my work. The loss of the job, or the cancelling of the contract is the lesser penalty, the greater is the work badly done which may result in loss to my own self-respect as well as loss or damage to those who depend on me to do that work well.

I have a violent antipathy to some person. Perhaps, he has never done me an injury, but he has offended me and I would dearly love to cut loose and publish all manner of things about him. I cannot do so because I fear an action for slander; in other words I fear the fifty shilling penalty, while I am willing to risk the greater penalty of murdering a reputation—which is the meanest kind of murder although no actual blood is shed.

There is a law and a higher law, an allegiance and a higher allegiance. What is law? It is but a set of rules arrived at by the consensus of a body of people who see the necessity for order and lay down certain requirements for the common convenience and the common safety. For the common weal, they say, we must enforce these requirements; therefore we must have law officers and law courts and penalties; but this kind of law, after all, does not go very deep, and is an artificial and useless thing without the consent of the community.

There is, however, another law, not a thing of placards and statute books and conventions, which is much more to be feared. It is the law laid down by honor, chivalry, decency and humanity; it is dictated by what a man is. The breach of the lesser, the more conventional requirements, is nothing compared with the breach of this. Frequently one hears it said in reference to some questionable transaction, "he gets away with it." That is not so, one never gets away with anything in this sense. He may fool others but he never fools himself. He may not pay the lesser penalty but every time he falls below himself, something in him dies.

It is allegiance to this higher law that has been not only a preventive force but has made heroes; that has lifted men above the common run; that scorned ordinary rewards and common penalties because they must needs be true to an imperative that spoke within them, telling them that if they did this, or failed to do that, they would be untrue to themselves, which is quite a different thing from disappointing the estimate of their fellows. The one thing is external, which may bulk large but which in reality is very small, the other is vital, for a man must live with himself. To contravene the lesser law may mean inconvenience, to break the higher law is to commit suicide in all that is ultimately worth while.

"To thine own self be true," said one of Shakespeare's characters. That is the great thing; rules, regulations, conventions, temporary impulses are less than nothing in comparison with this. Never mind the lesser penalty—the paltry fifty shillings; think rather of the possible loss of life—not physical merely—but of the death "of all that makes a man." It is dangerous to cross the track, penalty—?

The New Parking By-Law

A new parking by-law under the number of 214 has been formulated for the control of traffic on Chateauguay street. Notice of the advent to force these rules and regulations has been made in this newspaper. It is unfortunate, however, that the complete by-law instead, had not appeared. To people accustomed to large town and cities no explanations of parking regulations need be given, for these are much the same anywhere. To country people, unaccustomed to such rules, the matter of observing them in their completeness is somewhat difficult.

Zones have been marked off for parking, each car required to be within the belt line. Some advocated that the one-way system on Saturday night, as practised last year, had given good results. True, it was, and perhaps more effective, as far as trouble is concerned, than the present one. The Town Council is taking this parking matter in hand very seriously for tags have been printed warning the first offender of his infraction. A second offender incurs the penalty of the law with a fine.

Loses Voice, Wins $15,000

Charlotte Lottie Switzer received $15,000 from the city of Seattle for the loss of her voice, which she was robbed of when a street car mowed her down July 22, 1927. The money was formally turned over by the city to Stanley Padden, attorney for Charlotte, who sued the city successfully for compensation. Charlotte, Vancouver, B. C. high school student, was struck by a street car as she stood on a loading platform. The Supreme Court, in upholding the verdict, set a new principle of law, that a person waiting on a loading platform, who has signaled for a street car, may be deemed a street car passenger.

What the Pickler Did

After hooking a pickler. Hugo Volkam of Hammond, Ind., sprained his ankle, fell to the bottom of the boat, injured his scalp, wrenched his back and neck in arising, lost his false teeth, then toppled into the lake. When fellow fishermen pulled him out he was holding on to the fish.

Pilgrims Visit Mecca

About 200,000 pilgrims from all the Mohammedan countries visit Mecca every year at the pilgrimage season, said Mr. Eldon Rutter before the Manchester Geographical Society. But if any but a Moslem approached within 20 miles of Mecca at any time he did so at the risk of his life. No unbeliever, as such, had been to Mecca in the last 1800 years. In spite of the risk several Europeans, by first learning the Moslem ritual and customs, had managed to get into the city in disguise and to come safely out again. On the other hand, a considerable number of unbelievers appeared to have got into Mecca and never to have come out again.

Met, Wooded, Married on Bus

Patrick Henry, Henryetta, Okla., cattleman and Daisy Frame, Chicago, were married in Los Angeles the other day. They met in Texas, shortly after Henry boarded an overland bus on which Miss Frame was riding from Chicago to Los Angeles. They became friends in New Mexico shortly after Miss Frame's sleepy head dropped to Henry's shoulder.

Pretending to Die

Pretending to die after taking a harmless powder which a chemist had supplied to his wife in place of arsenic, a Japanese husband in Tokyo came to life rather dramatically. His wife had summoned her lover and they were preparing to drag the supposed body to the river. There was a sudden and startling revival, followed by a sound thrashing of the conspirators and the summoning of neighbors who called the police. The conspirators are in jail.

Parks Gum in Ear

Five-year-old Jack Farrell of Buffalo, N. Y., was not quite through with his stick of chewing gum when dinner was ready, so he parked it in his ear while he ate. Doctors had to operate to get it out.

Bronze Medal for Setter

For giving warning to his master, Alexander Smith, Stewarton, Ayrshire, Scotland, of a fire, Roy, a three-year-old Irish setter, was given a bronze medal. Roy was kennelled outside the house, and when the fire broke out he managed by a great effort to squeeze through an incredibly small opening into the scullery, and made his way to his owner's bedroom door. Aroused by Roy's barking and scratching, Mr. and Mrs. Smith awoke, and escaped with only a few seconds to spare.

Mother Begs Dope Cure

Leading her 2-year-old son by the hand, an attractive young Seattle mother, held fast in the bonds of narcotic addiction, walked into a trap when she called at a room in the Seattle Hotel to purchase morphine. When awaiting officers informed her of their identity, the woman broke down, the agents said, and begged for a chance to take the cure, for the sake of her baby.

Ties Brother in Pole Vault

Monroe High School track fans of Monroe, Mich., have seen Capt. Ray Stein vault well over 11 feet numerous times, but in a dual meet with River Rouge High recently Stein vaulted only 10 feet 3 inches, only tying his younger brother, Harold, who vaulted the same height. Young Harold had to tie for first place to earn a letter, having failed to qualify in the state meet where competition was keener.

Wasn't as Well as He Looked

Seeing her brother in the doorway of his home in Camberwell, Wales, on returning from a walk he had suggested, Miss Hubble greeted him with "You are looking well." There was no answer for he was dead, with a rope around his neck and stretched over the top of the door. Mr. Hubble, it was stated, had become depressed at the death of his wife.

Boy's Kidnap Tale an Alibi

Several hours after his father had reported him "mysteriously missing," 15-year-old Chester Madiem, 4023 Fremont av., Seattle, Wash., walked into police headquarters. "I've been kidnapped," he said, and proceeded to unfold a tale that had his hearers gasping before he finished. Two men, he said, picked him up on the street, bundled him roughly into their car and sped away into the night. For several hours they held him prisoner in a Rainier Valley shack, he related. But the police were skeptical. And after two hours of grilling the youthful adventurer admitted he had attended an all-night show, and felt he needed a suitable alibi before returning home.

Thieves Stole His Paraphernalia

Unusual activity busied Jack L. Schmelbel, who is mayor, policeman, special deputy sheriff, blacksmith and bank guard at New Athens, Ill. Thieves carried away most of his official paraphernalia, including a set of handcuffs, a policeman's star, three rifles and two pistols. The loot also included a harmonica, a fountain pen and "numerous odds and ends."

Two Hyenas Kill Wolf

A wolf might have been a match against one hyena, but he couldn't withstand the charge of two. Salt Lake City, Utah zoo keepers found that out the other day when they discovered the door between the hyena and wolf cages open. Inside the wolf's home was found the body of its inhabitant. The hyenas had managed to open the door and simultaneously, sprang upon the wolf and killed it.

Shark Takes Fishermen For Ride

Pat Horton and Ray Petree of Ucluelet, B. C., got thrills, speed and action when they hitched their heavy trolling boat to a four-ton shark off that coast, but the direction was opposite that which they desired. They harpooned the shark and the ride started with the sea monster heading for the open sea, dragging the troller at a speed never before attained with its motor. The shark tired after a long run and the men succeeded in stabbing it to death, but only after it had fought desperately. Horton and Petree sold their catch for $20.

Wet Pavement Results

Skidding wildly on the wet pavement of Kenmore street, Glasgow, a heavy motor truck crashed through garden railings, ploughed up a strip of grass, and knocked down the stonework under the window of a house. Masonry was hurled into the room, which was empty at the time. The truck was firmly jammed in the building and only after strenuous work with crowbars was it brought back to the road, dragged by a steam tractor.

$50,000 Pearls Found Later

After lying all winter in the grass by a sidewalk, in St. Louis, Mo., and later being picked up by a woman, who did not know its value, a $50,000 pearl necklace was sent back to its owner, Mrs. Warren Chandler, and the finder, Mrs. M. M. Cohn, had received a $3,500 reward. The pearls were lost while Mrs. Chandler was on a shopping tour. The insurance company paid the owner $37,000 after a wide search.

Floor Collapses During Funeral

19 Miles at 102

Jay R. Brown, who began chewing tobacco when he was 9 years old, but who took his first drink of liquor when he was 80, died at his home in North Adams, Mass., recently in his 102nd year. The centenarian, believed the oldest man in Berkshire County, fell and struck his head on a wood box and never regained consciousness. He was born in Berlin, N. Y., October 27, 1829. Last year he started for Berlin to visit a brother. Reaching a nearby town he found he would have to wait six hours for a train to Berlin. So he walked to his brother's home, covering the nineteen and one-half miles in seven hours.

Fire at Race Course

Prior to the heavy downpour of rain, fire broke out in the ladies' room of the grandstand at Dufferin Park, Toronto, race track. Attendees quickly discovered the blaze and while an alarm was sent in for the fire reels, the police and track employees succeeded in forming a bucket brigade and had the flames out when the fire sections arrived. There was no danger of the flames spreading and a number of women under the stand were asked to leave the building until the fire was out. The sight of firemen dashing into the track failed to arouse any anxiety among the thousands of fans in the grandstand. The damage by fire was only slight.

Designates Himself Traffic Officer

Burglar Alarm Arouses Firemen

A burglar alarm sounded early one morning in a Rochester, N. Y., jewelry store, fooled firemen of Pumper 2. Thinking there was a fire, they jumped out of bed, dashed into their clothes and slid down the brass pole. The man in charge of the fire alarm tapper gazed up in astonishment. "There's no fire," he said. The alarm has sounded when some one shattered the store window.

Baby Brought to Life

Said by doctors to have been born lifeless, an infant was rushed to a hospital in Milwaukee while the father forced his breath into the baby's lung. The baby was placed in a "mechanical lung," and, doctors said, its respiration became normal. The baby was born to Mr. and Mrs. Mano Westendorf, near Fox Point. Dr. F. H. Schultz used every known artificial means available to induce life. Then Dr. Schultz ordered the father to run with him to his automobile and he speeded to Milwaukee with the infant, while the father kept his mouth glued to the baby's.

Child Forced to Cry

Pitiful cries of a child on the street wrung the hearts of the crowds at San Francisco. They saw an elderly blind man twanging a guitar, a youngster but ragged and haggard woman also. When the boy's cries subsided, a policeman saw the woman pinch the youngster and start him off on a fresh burst of wailing. He then placed the man and woman under arrest on a charge of using a child in the occupation of begging in violation of the criminal code. The man and woman divided the proceeds of the beggings.

Venerable Scotch Jokes Pall

Justice cast an official frown upon stale Scotch jokes. William E. Schur and his wife, Janet, appeared in divorce court at Spokane, Wash. It seems that William had asked his wife if she knew who invented swimming. She didn't. "I told her," William explained to the judge, "that swimming was invented by a Scotchman who came to a toll bridge. And, judge, she got mad. She nearly always got mad when I told her jokes." "You mean when you cracked such stale chestnuts, don't you?" asked the woman's attorney. She won a decree.

TONSILS

One of the questions which parents most frequently put to their family doctor is—"Should our child's tonsils be removed?" It would seem, therefore, that parents should be informed with regard to the tonsils, and that is the reason why this article has been written.

The tonsils are glands situated on either side of the back of the throat at the opening from the mouth into the pharynx. The pharynx is the cavity behind the mouth and is the passage along which food moves into the digestive tract.

The use of the tonsils has never been precisely determined. It may be that they serve, in childhood, to protect against the passage of disease germs down the throat. Because of their location and because of the number of germs which enter the body through the nose and throat, the tonsils necessarily receive many germs.

The result is that, in many cases, the tonsils, instead of serving as a barrier to disease germs, become diseased themselves and are then a centre or focus for these germs and their products. The tonsils are not infrequently a focus of infection.

The important thing for parents to know is not what is the function of the normal tonsils, but rather how serious a menace diseased tonsils are, and what should be done when they are diseased.

Parents may wonder why so much attention is given to tonsils. They know that the condition is not uncommon and yet children do not appear to die from diseased tonsils. It is true that you do not hear of deaths from diseased tonsils, but you do hear of deaths from rheumatism, heart disease, and kidney disease, which, in many cases, are the end results of diseased tonsils.

It is generally agreed that diseased tonsils are dangerous because they conceal pockets of germs and pus. They poison the body in this way and do only minor damage, but may cause the spread of the germs which they harbour from the diseased tonsils through the blood stream and set up disease in the heart or kidneys.

The results of this may not be seen for years, but an adult who today is handicapped by heart trouble or diseased kidneys owes his condition to diseased tonsils in childhood.

In general it may be said that the only way to treat diseased tonsils is to remove them. The doctor who examines the child will decide, first of all, as to whether or not the tonsils are diseased, and then as to whether or not their removal is indicated in this particular case.

We wish to bring to the attention of parents the importance of having diseased tonsils removed promptly once the decision has been made by the doctor. Every day's delay increases the chance of having serious and permanent harm result from their presence. They can be removed at any age and the operation should not be postponed because the child seems too young. Children do not grow out of such conditions, and once the harm is done it cannot be undone.

SAFEGUARD THE BABY

During the hot weather, the baby is more apt to have digestive upsets than he is during other seasons of the year. This applies particularly to the artificially-fed baby. Digestive disturbances occur much less frequently in babies who are being naturally-fed. The value of breast-feeding and its superiority over artificial feeding are chiefly evident during the summer months.

Care should be taken the year round, but extra precautions are necessary during the summer if the baby is to be properly safeguarded and kept healthy. There is a greater chance for milk to become contaminated in summer. The safe pasteurized milk which you buy may be contaminated in the home. Flies and other insects which carry infection are present during the hot weather, and they do not hesitate to bathe in the milk if they get the chance to do so. Milk must always be kept covered and protected from these pests. Milk is a food. In order that they may multiply, germs require food and warmth. When milk is warm, it fulfils the very conditions required by germs for growth, and they do grow and multiply at an amazing rate. If such milk is given to the baby, the heavy dose of germs which he receives together with the milk is very apt to set up diarrhoeal conditions. It is obvious then that not only should milk be kept covered, but also that it should stand in a cold place, and this means on ice. Never should milk be allowed to stand around in a warm room even for a short time.

Do not overfeed the baby in summer. In hot weather, less food than usual is required, and this rule applies to the baby as well as to the older members of the family. Do not urge the baby to finish his bottle if he seems inclined to leave part of it. When the weather is really hot, it is better to reduce the amount of milk given, do not forget that the baby is often thirsty during the hot spells, and that he should be offered cool water between feedings. If there is any doubt as to the purity of the water, it should, first of all, be boiled. The baby may suffer from excessive perspiration and a heat rash may appear as a result of the hot weather and also because he is over-clothed. The way to help the baby to avoid this discomfort is to clothe him lightly.

Digestive upsets in the baby should always be regarded as serious. If a diarrhoea does occur, all feedings should be stopped, cool water given for a drink, and the doctor called.

We cannot overlook the fact that nearly four thousand babies die in Canada in one year from diarrhoea and enteritis. Everything should be done to prevent the condition, by means of proper care, but if it does occur, then it must be treated promptly and properly if the lives of our babies are to be preserved.

Here's Job That Might Really Be Termed Soft

As life becomes more complex, new and unusual professions are created overnight. And there is always someone ready to step in and fill the post, even if no previous training is available.

For instance, there is the "professional hospitality critic." One New York hotel has such an official on its staff, and those who labor over desks or in manual lines will envy him. His duties, as explained by the manager, are as follows:

"His job is to sleep, eat, dance, get shined, pressed and shampooed at the house's expense, provided he renders a critical report of what takes place. For a year at least he must periodically play the part of a guest, with the eye of one who knows hospitality at its best. By this arrangement the hotel has first call on new ideas and services discovered in the profession of eating and sleeping." And he probably gets paid for it!—New York Sun.

THE NEW HONEY GRADES

With their publication in the Canada Gazette for May 30, 1931, regulations for the grading and marking of honey offered for sale in Canada in 1931 became fully operative. These regulations received statutory authority under the provisions of paragraph "C" of Section 4 of the Live Stock and Live Stock Products Act, administered by the federal Department of Agriculture.

The regulations made provision for four classes of honey with three grades in each class. The respective classes are (1) White; (2) Golden; (3) Amber; and (4) Dark. Each of these classes is graded (a) Fancy; (a) Choice; and (c) Manufacturers. All grading is done on a liquid honey basis and where any question of grade in graded honey arises grading is determined by liquefied sample.

Provision with respect to marketing requires the name of class (colour) and grade in the container to be clearly marked on its face or side. In the case of honey imported into Canada for resale in any form, it requires to be distinctly marked with the name of the country of origin.

Provision is also made for inspection of honey at such points and in such manner as may be deemed necessary to ensure proper observation of the regulations.

War Medals of Canada

South Africa (Boer War) 1899-1902. On October 15th, 1899, the clouds which had hung over South Africa since the disastrous Jameson raid 1896, burst into storm when President Paul Kruger, invaded Natal and attacked the British garrison. The Canadian Government announced on October 11th, 1899, that troops not exceeding one thousand men would be sent to South Africa. This first contingent, 63 officers, 998 n. c. os and men, including two hundred French-Canadians, sailed from Quebec October 30th, 1899, via the Sardinian, arriving Cape Town November 29th, 1899.

The news of reverses in South Africa caused the Canadian Government to offer a second contingent on November 2nd, 1899, which was gladly accepted by the Imperial Government on December 15th.

At the end of the "Golden book of the Canadian Contingent in South Africa," by Gaston P. Labat, will be found an account of the departure of each contingent, as well as the names of all who formed part thereof.

The Boers surrendered in May 1902. The Boer War was considered over by many, but the following I have found so far, issued to Canadians. No. 30 Obv. Crowned and veiled effigy of Her Majesty Queen Victoria to the left, legend VICTORIA REGINA ET IMPERATRIX. Rev., fine rendering of Britannia welcoming a khaki army, and offering the men a wreath of laurels, legend South Africa.

Silver. On the edge name and number of recipient also name of unit in which he served. G. de Saulles was the engraver. The ribbon was red, blue, orange, blue and red. Breton No. 88. This medal awarded for duties between 1899 and 1902. The first medals awarded, including those issued to the Canadian contingent had the date 1899-1902 printed on the field to the right of Britannia. The medals were quickly rubbed off when the medal was worn. Medals, however, in mint condition, are sometimes found with the date still clearly showing.

Few medals are provided with so many bars as is the Queen's South Africa award, having twenty-six in all as per Imperial Army Order 94, April 1901.

Regarding the actions in the South Africa War 1899-1902 for which bars were issued, and in which the following units were engaged, I have traced the following: South Africa 1901, South Africa 1902, Belfast, Diamond Hill, Johannesburg, Driefontein, Orange Free State, Paardeberg, Relief of Mafeking, Cape Colony.

As to the various different combinations into which these clasps were issued I have very meagre information. Records of ex-members of the Canadian Forces who were awarded medals for services rendered during the South African War are kept by the Department of National Defence (Military Service) and it is not the policy of this Department to furnish information regarding ex-soldiers, without the authority of the individual concerned.

Should any of those who may read this article notice an omission, I shall be happy to correspond with them upon the subject.

No. 31 Obverse and reverse same as No. 30-4 bars. Diamond Hill, Johannesburg, Cape Colony. Inscribed on the edge: Cpr. C. Wyatt, Canadian Scouts.

Her Majesty Queen Victoria died January 22nd 1901, and was succeeded on the throne by her son Edward VII, coronation taking place 20 June 1902.

By Imperial Army Order 94, April 1901, King Edward VII confirmed the Order given by the late Majesty Queen Victoria, that a medal be struck to commemorate the military operations in South Africa.

In October 1902 was authorized the issuance of the King's medal to all those who had served for eighteen months at the front, and were still in the ranks on June 1st 1902, that is just one month after the terms of surrender were signed.

No. 32 Obv. Head of His Majesty King Edward VII in Field Marshal's uniform to the left, legend EDWARDUS VII REX IMPERATOR. Rev., fine rendering of Britannia welcoming a khaki army, and offering the men a wreath of laurels, legend South Africa.

Silver. On the edge name and number of recipient also name of unit in which he served. The ribbon was green, white and orange, in equal stripes.

There were two bars "South Africa 1901" and "South Africa 1902" with this medal but it should be noted that recipients of these bars could not receive the Queen's award with the same bars. Breton No. 89.

THE LATE CUCKOO
In England they say that when the cuckoo is heard that spring has come. This year the cuckoo has been a very late bird, even in his most privileged quarters in the south of England he has come later than ever before, and even delayed his coming until after the swallows made their appearance. Again, the cuckoo is generally heard long before the nightingale; yet this year the nightingale has made his melodious song a nuisance ere even the cuckoo has earned the curses of early risers because of the noise it creates.

MILITIBUS PER MARE TRANS-VECTIS ADJUTAM.
The medal, 1 2-5 in. in diameter, is suspended by means of a straight white bar from a red ribbon, with two blue stripes each 1/4 in. broad. The names are impressed round the edge of the medal in capital letters. Bar, "South Africa 1899-1902."

Next article, "Coronation King Edward VII, June 26th, 1902, and Coronation King George V, June 22nd, 1911."

VALLEYFIELD MAN KILLED BY LIGHTNING

Philippe Hudon, Employee of Beauharnois Electric Co. Narrowly Escaped Death

Mr. Joseph Tessier, aged 57, of St. Cecile St., Valleyfield, died suddenly during the storm of Friday last. Responding to the call of his daughter to close one of the windows he was struck by a blinding flash. Directly opposite, on the other side of the room, another window was open and it is surmised that the unfortunate man stood in the way of the current. Death was almost instantaneous. He died at 2:40 a.m. An inquest under Coroner A. Besner, returned a verdict of death from nervous shock. The funeral took place on Monday the 28th at 1 o'clock.

The deceased man was employed by the Bruppacher Silk Mills Ltd., Valleyfield, as day watchman, in which capacity he was highly esteemed. A good number of people attended the funeral. The cortege was headed by Chief Lemieux of the city police, followed by a guard of boys dressed in white. Widespread sympathy is extended to the widow and three children who are left.

Beauharnois Electric Employee Narrowly Escapes Death.— On Monday afternoon the 28th around 3 o'clock, Philippe Hudon, residing at 2 Lambert St., an employee of the Beauharnois Electric Co. came very near being electrocuted while repairing wires, along with three other men, in the vicinity of the Cathedral.

He was endeavouring to reach his position when his left shoulder touched a "cut-out" one side alive and carrying 2200 volts. He fell and hung suspended by the belt he wore attached to the pole. Mr. Henri Houde, supervisor for the company, was passing at the time. He ascended the pole, brought the man down and applied artificial respiration. Mr. Hudon recovered and later returned home. Mr. Houde and his men are to be commended for their prompt and valuable service. A little longer in the position and Mr. Hudon would have been beyond recovery. The current burned through his clothing and into his shoulder, as also the left foot. The shock has left him dazed and weak.

United Church Lawn Social.— On Friday last a very successful and well attended afternoon social was held on the lawn of Mrs. J. A. MacDonald. The weather was perfect and the Ladies' Aid under whose auspices the affair was given, rose to the occasion and royally entertained a gathering who readily responded to the generous welcome accorded them. A number of friends and visitors had the pleasure of meeting new acquaintances.

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed in the United Church on Sunday morning last. The annual Sunday School picnic took their outing to Lanniot's Island on Saturday, leaving the school at about 1:30. The afternoon was considered one of the best and gave the children a real treat. The island is an admirable spot for a school picnic, surrounded as it is by beautiful scenery. Charming weather added to the enjoyment of games, and when supper time came a community table was provided for all. A number of new friends were present who had recently come to our city. To these a hearty welcome is extended and we hope that they may find congenial and happy surroundings.

"The Printed Word"— "The printed word is more powerful than the spoken," stated a prominent editor during a recent address at the annual dinner of a radio manufacturers' association. "I object to that," shouted a man from the back of the room. "It's not true."

"My dear sir," replied the speaker, "the fact that you are able to interrupt me proves the inferiority of the spoken word. You cannot interrupt one of my leading articles."

The printed word possesses, too, an undoubted confidence-building power. No one has ever entirely explained just why people are inclined to believe what they see in print. But there have been thousands of examples to indicate that such a tendency does exist.

Possibly people feel that your statements would not be so permanently recorded and they bear the closest scrutiny. But regardless of why the public tends to believe the printed word, the important fact remains that it does.

Take advantage of this in your advertising. Show the reader that you have "put yourself on record"—that you stand back of your word and product. . . . Make extensive use of the power of the printed word.

FEED MEAL FOR MILK The final judge of the old familiar argument as to the amount of meal which can profitably be fed to the dairy cow must be the dairyman himself, and his decision must depend on the purpose for which he is using the dairy herd. If he wants volume of milk for direct sale then the more meal he feeds the more he gets, but if his revenue comes from butter-fat production then the feeding of increased quantities of meal over a certain minimum do not pay sufficient returns to cover the cost of feeding.

At the Cap Rouge Experimental Station of the Dominion Department of Agriculture during the past five years a special study with respect to the relation of meal to milk and butter-fat production has been conducted. These show conclusively but slight increase in the volume of butter-fat produced through the feeding of extra meal. They show with equal conclusiveness that where raw milk was the revenue producing product that the more meal fed the greater the volume of milk produced.

What Is The Corn Borer?

It is an insect accidentally imported from Europe into the United States about the year 1910. Within ten years, this ravager multiplied in an astonishing manner...

What Are Its Characteristics

The butterflies appear in July and the females lay their eggs on the leaves of the earliest corn. Some days later, the little grubs hatch out and penetrate the stem...

How It Is Harmful

We have seen how the insect appears in the course of its life in the form of an egg, larva, grub, worm or caterpillar...

Signs of the Presence of the Corn Borer

The grubs, hardly out of the eggs, bury themselves in the stem generally in the upper part. Sometimes the flower stalk is the first to be attacked...

How the Invasions Occur

The invasions are due to the corn borer is brought about in two ways. In the first place the butterflies fly with ease and are attracted by the wind for considerable distances...

Is the Scourge Dangerous for Quebec?

Yes, it is very dangerous and may very rapidly become uncontrollable. The cultivation of corn would then be impossible or ruinous...

Married Women Not Wanted Any More

"By one of them"

Consider the plight of the deserted wife. There are many of them, inexperienced and unaccustomed to the business world, suddenly faced with the necessity of earning their own living, and, possibly, the added responsibility of supporting one child or more.

What can they do? How can they get a job? It's no joke, I know because, as one of them, I have been trying to get work. Everyone is sympathetic, willing to give suggestions and advice but, when it comes to the job nothing doing. They are all too busy trying to hang on to their own these days.

In my endeavor to secure work, I applied to financial institutions, factories, hair-dressing establishments for the time being, and I have not been able to get a job. I have not been able to get a job. I have not been able to get a job.

I had a time. I had a home of my own, a maid to do the work and a husband who was paying the bills "as far as I knew" and then one day I had no more of these things. It was suddenly up to me to support myself and child, and I don't know what the business world was all about.

I am a product of a ladies' college which doesn't mean much in my case, because I didn't matriculate. I had taken a business course before I married, but that had made use of it and, while I could type a little, my shorthand was but a shadow of its former self. So much for my qualifications—or, rather, so little.

Fortunately, I had friends to turn to for the time being, and I was able to get some work as soon as possible. Like a good many women in my position, I tried the department stores first, and I was warned by a friend who had been "through the mill" that a job in a department store is a strenuous start. She said I would find the constant standing on my feet all day too hard, and she was right. I had to seek an office position to begin with, until I had broken in.

"You will never stand it, and I know what I am talking about," she said. "I went into a store at first because it seemed easiest, and I thought I could sell if I couldn't do anything else. I nearly went crazy standing all day, and once when I was particularly exhausted and leaned against a chair just for a moment, the manager reproved me, and said it was against the rules of the store. I told him I was so tired it was a case of sit down or fall down—and he said I would have to be fall down. I had to leave the store and get an office job."

Any part in a storm, and I decided to try my luck and strength in the department store. On applying at the employment office, I was told that married women were given only part-time employment, unless they were self-supporting. That was my problem, and then the young woman in charge asked me into which department I would like to go. There were no vacancies, but later I might go on the reserve staff, which means being called on for some days to sell, at the end of the year he will know the number he had had during the year."

"Without this knowledge," said Mr. Kirkwood, "I might have made a 15 per cent increase in your business." There was the general overhead, including salaries. "What," asked Mr. Kirkwood, "shall we assume is the average sales transactions in all articles?"

Again, "What is the average gross profit on, say, a two-dollar article?" Again, "There are 25 working days in a month; then how many sales transactions must be had in a day?" "By this method," said Mr. Kirkwood, "if you know your average sales transactions and know your expense and gross profit, you can calculate the number of sales transactions you have."

"Putting up a board," said Mr. Kirkwood, "I put up my objective and my achievement, and can measure my day's profits every single day of the year, and don't have to wait till the end of the year to know where I am. When a man becomes absolutely alive to what he is doing, he is going to watch things every hour. He can measure his profits and can see daily whether he is going behind or going ahead."

It was, declared Mr. Kirkwood, the same no matter what kind of business the strength of the encouragement of all to measure the number of sales transactions which absolutely must be had to continue in business. "Who among you," was another question, "on the first of the year makes up a budget based on the previous year's expense of what it is doing to cost you to keep open in 1931?"

"Unless," said Mr. Kirkwood, "you do these things and put down what it is going to cost you for the year, you make a mistake." Mr. Kirkwood reminded his auditors that the business employed them; they did not employ the business. The business owed to them a salary just as much as an employee of the business, and they should pay for what they took out of the shop just as employees did. If it were the practice to take articles home without charging, the business was being robbed.

Mr. Kirkwood contended that the customer should at least be given the opportunity of refusing a note of goods, and sounded a note of warning against decrying the cheaper class of goods once the customer had decided to purchase something high-priced. The salesman should say, "That is excellent value, but this is something better."

A warning was sounded by Mr. Kirkwood against gum-chewing girls behind the counters and he said business men made a mistake who did not encourage their clerks to learn as much as possible about goods. Mr. Kirkwood held that there was a lot of lost time in shops—that only 20 per cent of the time was spent in serving customers, and that commercial travellers spent but 15 per cent of their dollars on customers. He also took the position that business men spent much valuable time at work which could be as well done by cheap labor.

Asking the name of a good residential street in Renfrew, Mr. Kirkwood asked how many houses were on that street; also how many customers the girl students learning the business, and I availed myself of this service.

Five-year Plan for Merchants

Better Methods—More Business

A very interesting and instructive evening was enjoyed recently by the business men of Renfrew, when at the invitation of E. Roy Sales, the editor of the Mercury, some two score merchants met around the dinner table and listened with much enthusiasm to an address made by John C. Kirkwood, editor of Marketing, on "How I can double my business in five years." Reporting this occasion, the Mercury says:

Mr. Kirkwood did he did not know whether it was true of Canada, but during his residence in England he found that nearly every town had its Merchants' Association or Chamber of Commerce. The men there met in associations not only for legal business, but also to protect their own interests against legislation and also to carry on work of advantage to themselves. He thought the suggestion made by Mr. Sales good that the business men of Renfrew should meet together from time to time.

"Doubling your retail business in five years" was announced by Mr. Kirkwood as the subject of his address. His belief was that a retail business could be doubled in five years. He was not going to say every one could do that, but was speaking broadly. He did not want anyone present to think that his business was an exception, but thought it would be possible for each one present to double his business in five years. His job on this occasion was to persuade all that this was possible.

He would like to see each retailer strive to increase his sales 15 per cent over the previous year's achievement. It would be 115; at the end of the next year, 132; at the end of the third year, 151; at the end of the fourth year, 175; at the end of the fifth year, 200. That was the rate of progression at 15 per cent compound interest.

It was possible to do it, Mr. Kirkwood was persuaded. Having this as an ambition and making it a definite purpose in the mind of the merchant, there were different ways by which it could be done. If business men could get 15 per cent more people into their stores each year, and taking the normal history of sales in relation to the number of people coming in, then there was assured an increase of 115 per cent in business. And if there could be minimized the lost sales by 15 per cent, here was an equivalent of 15 per cent more business.

Mr. Kirkwood said he wanted to ask a question which he thought was at the basis of the retail business. "Who among you knows what is the average sales transactions in terms of money in your stores? Is it 25 per cent, is it 50 per cent, or more?"

It would, said Mr. Kirkwood, depend on the nature of the business. Each proprietor should know what was his average sales transactions spread over a year, because he felt that nobody could do business successfully if he did not know the facts about himself, and it was absolutely necessary that a firm should know its average sales transactions.

Asked a question by Mr. Kirkwood, "Who knows how many sales transactions he must have each calendar year, so that at the end of the year he will know the number he had had during the year?" "Without this knowledge," said Mr. Kirkwood, "I might have made a 15 per cent increase in your business."

There was the general overhead, including salaries. "What," asked Mr. Kirkwood, "shall we assume is the average sales transactions in all articles?"

Again, "What is the average gross profit on, say, a two-dollar article?" Again, "There are 25 working days in a month; then how many sales transactions must be had in a day?" "By this method," said Mr. Kirkwood, "if you know your average sales transactions and know your expense and gross profit, you can calculate the number of sales transactions you have."

"Putting up a board," said Mr. Kirkwood, "I put up my objective and my achievement, and can measure my day's profits every single day of the year, and don't have to wait till the end of the year to know where I am. When a man becomes absolutely alive to what he is doing, he is going to watch things every hour. He can measure his profits and can see daily whether he is going behind or going ahead."

It was, declared Mr. Kirkwood, the same no matter what kind of business the strength of the encouragement of all to measure the number of sales transactions which absolutely must be had to continue in business. "Who among you," was another question, "on the first of the year makes up a budget based on the previous year's expense of what it is doing to cost you to keep open in 1931?"

"Unless," said Mr. Kirkwood, "you do these things and put down what it is going to cost you for the year, you make a mistake." Mr. Kirkwood reminded his auditors that the business employed them; they did not employ the business. The business owed to them a salary just as much as an employee of the business, and they should pay for what they took out of the shop just as employees did. If it were the practice to take articles home without charging, the business was being robbed.

Mr. Kirkwood contended that the customer should at least be given the opportunity of refusing a note of goods, and sounded a note of warning against decrying the cheaper class of goods once the customer had decided to purchase something high-priced. The salesman should say, "That is excellent value, but this is something better."

A warning was sounded by Mr. Kirkwood against gum-chewing girls behind the counters and he said business men made a mistake who did not encourage their clerks to learn as much as possible about goods. Mr. Kirkwood held that there was a lot of lost time in shops—that only 20 per cent of the time was spent in serving customers, and that commercial travellers spent but 15 per cent of their dollars on customers. He also took the position that business men spent much valuable time at work which could be as well done by cheap labor.

Asking the name of a good residential street in Renfrew, Mr. Kirkwood asked how many houses were on that street; also how many customers the girl students learning the business, and I availed myself of this service.

each merchant had there. At the same time he asked whether it would be possible by direct solicitation to secure 15 per cent more customers there. He suggested the use of a map divided into squares, showing quotas.

Business men could, Mr. Kirkwood held, get 15 per cent more sales in many cases by selling pre-sold merchandise, merchandise which people were accustomed to asking for. It was harder to sell unknown goods. He was a pleader for goods made known through advertising. It was the swift-moving merchandise that made the profit, and if the pre-sold merchandise gave so much more opportunity to make sales.

Everything asked for and not on hand should, Mr. Kirkwood said, be noted and the manager informed. "If," he said, "you are not sure you will do some of these things I am recommending, if you will make a budget of your annual expense, if you will begin the practice of finding out your annual sales transactions, if you will find your average gross profit and calculate the number of customers required in every department of business and measure your profits as I have suggested, with this knowledge you can do a great deal better. I am not putting before you any dream; it is a cold fact; it is being done. The department stores you see in your competitors are doing these things. If the independent retailers have been beaten in the race for trade by department or chain stores, they have been beaten by better management, not by better men. The weakness of business enterprise today is in management, not in men."

Some department houses, said Mr. Kirkwood, forecast their sales in every department in every month. And some of them were not five per cent out at the end of the year. Business was a thing to be measured, it was not a matter of guessing. Business men should work in the light, not with bandages over their eyes.

"I hope," said Mr. Kirkwood, "I have left with you this conviction; that there is a great deal that can be known about your business operations that should be known, and that to know will be a spur to you to run your business in the light of knowledge, and you can get your staff working along with yourself to reach objectives. Sheets can be kept every day which will give you an index to the position you are in, and it is not until you have this knowledge of your business that you will try to get your business 15 per cent over the previous year's achievement. You will become keen if you will use this method."

DO'S AND DON'TS To study the interior architecture of your living room, and strive for harmony between it and your furnishings. Don't put deep, man-sized pieces in a French and feminine room, or pink and gold ones in a wood-paneled English interior. Don't dwarf a small room with large pieces, or lower an already low ceiling with a low secretary. Don't overcrowd a small room or let a large one look under-furnished.

Don't hang pictures too high to be seen readily. Don't hang large ones or tapestries in small wall panels so that they overlap. Don't hang any at all on scenic or elaborate walls.

Do use the magic of color—the yellow of sunlight, the blue of happiness, the warmth of red and rose, the serenity of green. But don't use too much of any one shade, or too many different ones.

Mental Malady Seeds Sown in Early Life

Research Suggests Ignorance of Parents and Teachers Responsible For Ills of Later Life

Unless something is done to prevent it, four out of every hundred of the children now going to school will one day enter a mental hospital. Some will stay there for a greater or less time before returning to their homes improved or cured, but many will remain within hospital walls until they die.

The burning question is: What can be done to prevent this terrible human wastage? Scientific study of mental processes is comparatively new and much remains to be done. Some facts, however, seem now quite evident. One is that mental disorders do not come on suddenly. In certain cases it might appear that they do, but upon expert investigation a fairly plain train of circumstances can usually be found in the person's past life which should have given warning of the danger to come if any one with sufficient knowledge of mental disturbances had been on hand to recognize them.

Most recent studies suggest that the seeds of mental disorders are sown early in childhood. It is quite probable that many of the mental breakdowns which come upon people later in life can be charged directly to the ignorance of their parents. Others, again, can be traced to the schools, the carelessness or unfriendliness of teachers and the rigidity and unsuitability of the courses of study.

Consequently such efforts as are now being made to offset the inroads of mental maladies are mainly directed towards the prevention of improper trends in child development. The first of these is a study of child development itself to discover if possible just what may be considered normal childhood. Special nursery schools for the scientific study of children as young as two years have been established. There are two such in Canada, one at the University of Toronto and the other at McGill. These schools are providing a considerable amount of carefully observed and tested information which is by means of books and pamphlets being passed on to parents and others concerned with child training. School children are also being studied scientifically, and their teachers with them. Two schools are now being so studied in Canada, one in Toronto and the other in Saskatoon.

Not much in the way of results can yet be shown, but there is good ground for the hope that with the information now being gathered to build upon, future generations may be better able than we to prevent a great part of the toll of mental diseases.

(Information on any point not covered here will be given in later issues if you will address your questions to Mental Health, 111 St. George Street, Toronto, Ontario.)

It is annoying when one goes to the theatre and has one's views obstructed by the hat of a woman seated in front.

Nobody has much sympathy for those who choose to wear their largest hats while seeking amusement. But on the other hand, there is the crusty old man who finds fault with everything, and pretends he is unable to see the stage even when the hat in front of him is of the smallest variety.

One of these was at the theatre when, after fidgeting for some time, he growled in a loud voice to the girl in front of him: "Do you mind removing your hat? I can't see through woods."

The girl turned and looked at him quietly for a moment. Then she said calmly: "Very well, change seats; I can."

Matrimonial

Hoover-Patton The marriage of Eunice Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh B. Patton, of Ormstown, Que., to Mr. Edward Philip Hoover, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hoover, of Akron, Ohio took place Saturday, June 27th, at twelve o'clock, at St. Paul's Church Ormstown, the Rev. A. F. Pollock, officiating. Pink and white roses and ferns were used to decorate the church, the guest pews tied with bunches of roses, ferns and pink tulle.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore her mother's wedding gown of ivory silk and lace, fashioned in period design, the skirt lengthening to form a train; her veil of egg-shell tulle, arranged with a head-dress of old lace, also worn by her mother on her wedding day was held in place by a narrow bandeau of orange blossoms. She wore a string of pearls as her only ornament. Her slippers were of ivory brocade, and she wore long lace mitts and carried a colonial bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and forget-me-nots.

She was attended by Mrs. Thomas Moffat, as matron of honor, and by Miss Dorothy Macrae and Miss Inez Patton, sister of the bride, as bridesmaids. They wore old fashioned frocks of satin, with very long flounced skirts, the matron-of-honor in pale green and the bridesmaids in pink; their slippers and lace mitts to match their frocks. They wore chiffon bandeaux on their heads with contrasting shaded gardenias at the sides and carried colonial bouquets of pastel-shaded flowers tied with contrasting ribbon. The little flower girl Miss Phyllis Gadd, niece of the groom, was frocked in pink and green and carried a bouquet of old-fashioned style, and she carried a nosegay of pastel-shaded flowers. Mr. Thomas Moffat acted as best man for Mr. Hoover, and the ushers were Mr. Jael Jardine and Mr. Matthew Patton brother of the bride. During the signing of the register Miss Vera Reid sang "Because."

Mrs. Patton, mother of the bride was gowned in black lace, with matching jacket, wearing a black hat and corsage bouquet of Templar roses. Mrs. Hoover, mother of the groom, wore a black printed ensemble, with hat to match and a corsage bouquet of Tallman roses. The groom's gifts to the bride consisted of a fitted travelling case and to the attendants pendants to match their gowns.

The reception following the ceremony was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the decorations were carried out with pink ferns and early summer flowers. Later Mr. and Mrs. Hoover left for a motor trip through Gaspé and the Maritime Provinces, the bride travelling in a navy blue and white ensemble, with hat, shoes and bag to match. On their return they will reside in Montreal.

A woman was displaying her first car to a friend.

"My dear," she said, "it's perfect. But there's just one little thing I must get altered—this mirror here." And she pointed to the driving mirror. "Do you know, I positively can't see my face in it without getting out of the car. Isn't it too silly?"

Choice Red Salmon,

ARE YOU FOND OF SUGAR?

Sugar is an indispensable article of diet. It is a muscle food and highly fattening.

Before it can be made use of by the body, all sugar has to be converted into glucose, or dextrose. This chemical change is accomplished by the digestive juices, and the end-product is absorbed into the blood stream to be carried to the liver, where it is stored as glycogen until the tissues need it.

Cane sugar (or sucrose) requires chemical alteration into dextrose before it can be utilized. Cane, beet, and maple sugar are indistinguishable from a chemical point of view.

That Tired Feeling Other fruits contain another sugar known as laevulose. Honey is a mixture of dextrose and laevulose.

Children who have been stuffed with fat with the object of increasing their weight often require sugar as a corrective to the "acidosis" which has been engendered.

FISHING IN INDIA

In some of the hilly districts in India the inhabitants adopt strange and ingenious methods of fishing.

The strong rays of the sun compel the fish to seek the shelter of the rocks. The wily hillman crawls silently to a boulder against which he knows the fish is nesting, and, raising his heavy, iron-tipped club, gives the rock a smashing blow.

The fish, which is touching the rock, is momentarily stunned by the jar, and, dipping his hand under his prey, the fisherman clutches it before it can recover from the shock.

Silver Wedding Anniversary at Howick

June 27th, 1931, was made important to many in the Howick community as the evening on which Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kerr celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary.

Relatives and friends put their heads together and planned a surprise party which came off most successfully.

Mr. and Mrs. Kerr and daughter Margaret had motored to Plattsburg Saturday and arriving home about 3:30 p.m. were welcomed by over fifty friends and relatives.

A delicious supper was served, small tables being placed in the spacious rooms which were decorated with roses, peonies and orange blossom.

The head table consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Kerr with white roses and tall white candles while in the centre of the table a three storey wedding cake drew exclamations of praise from everyone.

At the close of the beautiful repast, Dr. Williams made a notable speech congratulating Mr. and Mrs. Kerr and on behalf of the gathering presented them with a couple of luxurious easy chairs and a Little Miss Shirley Waddell, presenting Mr. Kerr with a beautiful bouquet of white roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Kerr, although much surprised, made short speeches, expressing their appreciation and gratitude for the kindness of their friends and relatives in remembering them so generously.

Other gifts included a linen tablecloth, one half dozen silver butter spreaders and a tall graceful Futoria vase.

Afterwards a social evening was enjoyed by all, the older people conversing while the young fry danced.

Guests from a distance who attended the celebration of the silver wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kerr, were Mr. Bert Allen of Newport Centre and Mr. I. H. Oumet and son William, both of Newport, Vermont. Also Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Watson, their daughter Ellen and sons Donald and Ralph, all of Montreal.

POET HAS FREEDOM RICH MAN GETS JAIL

In a certain city there lives a man who believes he is the greatest poet in the world. This is a perfectly harmless delusion and does no one any harm. He writes his poems in pieces, and some of them are really quite good. Other poets smile indulgently—many of them know who the greatest poet is. So everybody is pleased.

Now in another city there once lived a business man who came in time to believe that he was the richest man in the world. In most other respects he seemed perfectly normal and he had no occasion to be put down by his friends as merely an amiable eccentricity. But when he tried to cash a cheque for $1,000,000 that was too much! He soon found himself in jail. After examination by a mental hospital, where he still is.

From a medical standpoint both these men are insane (doctors prefer the term "psychotic")—they both have about the same degree of mental derangement. But they differ in the social consequences of their behavior. It is necessary, of course, to remove from the community persons who can not or will not observe the rules of society. Those whom we consider sane go to jail, the insane go to a mental hospital. Some people unconsciously think of mental hospitals as places of punishment, when, of course, their real function is treatment. But unfortunately in most cases, patients do not reach the mental hospital soon enough—we wait until they have committed some anti-social act.

In each province there should be a complete system of out-patient clinics where persons afflicted with any sort of mental disturbance can go for treatment or advice long before their cases become serious. And the public must learn that mental disorders do not come on suddenly, but usually develop slowly; that, taken in time, they can often be prevented; and, lastly, that there should be no more stigma or sense of shame associated with mental disorders than with any other form of disease.

Information on any point not covered here will be given in later issues of "Mental Health," 111 St. George St., Toronto, Ont.
