Viewers ride Eagle to surface

HOUSTON (AP) — For seven minutes television viewers rode the lunar module Eagle to a landing on the moon.
They watched movies Tuesday of the moonship as it descended to the pockmarked surface July 20, veered away from a hazardous, gaping crater and touched down amid outflung lunar dust.
And they saw Neil Armstrong go cautiously down the ladder, pause, and then plant man's first footprint on the moon.

This was the first of the Apollo 11 movie footage in color and it captured much of the drama of the landing by Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin.
The color films were shown to representatives of news media at the Manned Spacecraft Centre and transmitted simultaneously by network television. Part of the adventure was televised live July 20, but that was in black and white.

The first still photographs, also in color, were sprinkled with footprints and eerie silhouettes of the spaceship, and showed the U.S. flag perched on the beach-like surface.
A second set of stills, released Tuesday night, caught Armstrong inside the lunar module, showed the landing site from above and rocks on the lunar soil. This set also included a picture of earth with Europe, Africa and Asia visible.

The 16-millimetre movie film opened as the Eagle approached the landing site, cratered and glowing and visible through Aldrin's right-hand window.
It was at about this point 10 days ago that a worldwide audience, tuned in to the space conversation, heard this exchange: Mission control: "Eagle, looking great... you're go!"

Hopes rise for peace in Nigerian civil war

KAMPALA (Reuters) — Prospects for a new peace initiative in the Nigerian civil war gained momentum Tuesday when a Roman Catholic conference of bishops decided to consider the question of peace in Africa as one of the major topics at their four-day meeting in this capital of Uganda.
Speculation mounted that Pope Paul, scheduled to arrive here Thursday to close the conference and consecrate a shrine to 22 Ugandan martyrs, might attempt to bring federal Nigeria and the secessionist state of Biafra to the conference table here. Ugandan President Milton Obote was mentioned in the role of mediator if this happened.

Although the all-African bishops conference was originally scheduled to discuss only church matters, it now appeared that the Nigerian war will be among the major points under discussion. Bishops from both federal Nigeria and Biafra are attending the meeting.
The speculation of a peace move was strengthened Tuesday when it was learned that a federal Nigerian delegation of six officials was due here. Biafra is sending a three-man delegation.

The Nigerian federal government Tuesday rejected a proposal Monday by Biafran leaders Gen. Odumegwu Ojukwu for a temporary truce in the civil war during the Pope's visit to Uganda.
The Pope was understood to be anxious to pave the way for peace between federal Nigeria and Biafra while on the first visit to Africa by a reigning Roman Catholic pontiff.
But observers said the Pope's 52-hour schedule here is crowded and opportunities for possible peace talks will be limited.

More than 500,000 pilgrims are expected to arrive by Thursday. Several thousand persons were already camped on the outskirts of the city near the Namugongo shrine which commemorates the memories of the martyrs who died on Ascension Day, 1886, at the orders of Kabaka King Mwanga.
At the bishops conference, the seven cardinals and 33 archbishops and bishops attending said the question of peace throughout Africa should be considered including trouble spots such as Rhodesia and the Sudan.

Nixon arrives in Saigon

SAIGON (AP) — President Nixon flew into the heart of Saigon today, then took a helicopter to visit a U.S. Army outpost during a 5½-hour stay in South Vietnam.
Without advance notice and under tight security and secrecy, Nixon and his wife interrupted a three-day stay in nearby Thailand during their round-the-world trip for the quick dash into South Vietnam by presidential jetliner.
It was the first visit ever by a U.S. president to Saigon. Nixon's visit differed in that respect from the two quick journeys former president Johnson made to the war zone in 1966 and 1967.
The suddenness and the security-dictated secrecy of Nixon's Vietnam travel arrangements were reminiscent of former president Lyndon B. Johnson's two brief visits while he was on Asian trips.
Johnson flew into Cam Ranh Bay, a big, relatively secure U.S. base some 180 miles northeast of Saigon in October, 1966, and again in December, 1967.
Nixon, however, was described as wanting to follow a different pattern from his predecessor, partly to avoid being identified with Johnson's war policies.
The informants said Nixon planned a more extensive Vietnam visit than Johnson and also arranged to take along his wife.
It was also reported that the area around Saigon, which includes a large U.S. Army base at Long Binh and an airfield at Bien Hoa, had the lowest level of Viet Cong guerrilla activity last week since 1965.

Nixon's announced schedule for today had left open time for a dash to Vietnam and back. Aside from staff conferences, his only listed appointment was for dinner this evening as guest of Thai Premier Thanom Kittakachorn.
HAD NO PLANS
The president and White House spokesmen had been saying right along that he had "no plans" to go to South Vietnam — without ruling out the possibility.
The Bangkok visit was midway in Nixon's journey that began with the Philippines and Indonesia and continues Thursday. He goes on to India, Pakistan, Romania and England.
His Thai visit is probably the most important of his stops in laying the groundwork for U.S. policy in this area after the Vietnam war, both because of Thailand's cornerstone position in Southeast Asian security and because of his meetings with senior U.S. officials here.
Gen. Creighton W. Abrams Jr., commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam, and U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker flew in from Saigon and briefed Nixon Tuesday afternoon on the latest developments in South Vietnam. Nixon has said those talks would help in considering further troop withdrawals.
SHARED VIEWS
In the diplomatic field, Nixon huddled privately with Thanom, who also is Thailand's defence minister, and top aides from both sides in what both portrayed as a helpful sharing of views.
The Thais have been seeking assurance that Nixon's start on withdrawing U.S. troops from Vietnam does not signal potential U.S. abandonment of Thailand, a staunchly anti-Communist ally under the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization.
Nixon stressed in Bangkok, as he has at other Asian stops, that blueprints for shrinking the U.S. military presence in Asia after the war does not mean the U.S. will drop the treaty commitments it has undertaken.
The American forces now in Thailand will be kept there as needed to help Thailand's efforts against subversion and for support of activities in other parts of Southeast Asia.

Oldsters put on Fudger Home Follies

TORONTO (CP) — The Fudger Home Follies is a variety show with a difference. For one thing, the singer in the opening act of this annual Toronto performance has 43 great-grandchildren.

The cast, all residents of the Fudger Home for the Aged, range in age from 65 to 93 years.

Interest among the residents is so strong the show's producer, arts and crafts director Roy Passano, plans to expand into Little Theatre productions.

In the first performance of the Follies, the cast ignored paralyzed limbs, arthritis and assorted ills to sing old ballads, perform vaudeville humor acts and playlets.

David Stephen sat in his wheel chair with an arm in a sling and a leg braced, cracking jokes in Gleason and Hope style. A former concert singer, 65-year-old Edith Ogden, revealed her professional voice still intact by singing Beautiful Lady.

Florence Ward, 80, strutted across the stage with a cane and knapsack, leading the audience in The Happy Wanderer.

RECALLS WAR DAYS

Isabel Gray, who comes from the "Pearly People" district of London, England, performed a skit with Mr. Passano depicting an air raid shelter scene from the Second World War days.

Off-stage, 72-year-old Albert McKenzie, a former mining engineer from Cobalt, Ont., accompanied on the piano and Flora Vermeulen, 80, stood for 70 minutes at the lighting control panel.

The show had a professional touch with a well-known former radio personality as master of ceremonies. "Slim" Freckleton, a Toronto radio disc jockey for 27 years, exhibited a still smooth voice reciting Albert and the Lion and telling stories during costume changes.

The spirit of the cast was told best by the oldest performer, 93-year-old Alice Whiting. In a one-liner, she said "Remember the kettle is up to its neck in boiling water all the time, but still sings."

THREE CAR PILE-UP — A vehicle stopped to let out a passenger, when the three vehicles following in line, bumper-to-bumper, piled into one another. The injured were taken to the CJM Clinic by Lafrance Ambulance. Damage was estimated at $3,000 by the investigating officer. The vehicles involved were operated by Miss Alice Poirier, Asbestos; Jean Guy Duchesneau and Rene Martel of Cowansville. The photo shows the damaged vehicles. (Record photo: Wm. H. Lunan)

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Academy Makes Report On Artificial Sweeteners

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Because there has been a great deal of confusion about the safety of artificial sweeteners, a committee of the National Academy of Science made a thorough study of the matter. They found that, although saccharin and cyclamate are both used, the consumption of cyclamate is about five times that of the former. About 70 per cent of the cyclamate consumed is found in carbonated soft drinks. A 12-ounce can contains 0.25 to one gram of this substance.

The Academy reported that, while an adult might safely consume five grams of cyclamate a day, prudence would limit the daily intake to 3.5 grams and for a child about 2.5 milligrams per pound of body weight a day. Even at higher levels of intake, however, the only soft effects observed are a softening of the stools and an increased risk of sunburn (increased photosensitivity).

Occasionally, one hears that, because these products are derived from coal tar, they are harmful. This is illogical, because aspirin and several other products that cannot be described as poisons in the usual sense are also derived from coal tar. If they were poisonous, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) would prohibit their sale. The coal tar derivative that has caused cancer in mice is in no way related chemically to the artificial sweeteners.

After reviewing the Academy's report, the FDA recommended that products containing cyclamates be labeled to show the suggested limits on its daily intake and the total cyclamate content of the bottle or can. This should reassure the users of their safety—an important measure in view of the fact that the per capita consumption of sugar in this country is now five times as great as it was 100 years ago and the fact that this is a contributing cause of the increased prevalence of diabetes, dental decay and hardening of the arteries.

Q—I am a diabetic. Does saccharin destroy any of the food value in what one eats? Does it have any harmful side effects?

A—No to both questions. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Please send your questions and comments to Wayne G. Brandstadt, M.D., in care of this paper. While Dr. Brandstadt cannot answer individual letters, he will answer letters of general interest in future columns.

BOB THOMAS The movie column

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — There was Dustin Hoffman, waist-deep in a muddy pond on a movie location ranch, being introduced to the rigors of a film Western.

Hoffman, playing the title role in Little Big Man, a fanciful story of the sole white survivor of the Custer massacre, was being baptized by a frontier preacher. This particular preacher believed in exorcism of the soul as well as total immersion. The result was that Hoffman was held under water for a lengthy period while the churchman pleaded forgiveness of his many sins.

Breathing hard, Hoffman came to shore between takes to dry off and don another baptismal robe. In talking with a reporter, he fitted the pattern of anti-hero that has marked his brief, meteoric film career.

OWN STUNTMAN

"This business of doing your own stunts is not for me," he said. "If you can get by with a double for me—fine. Trouble is, I've got to do a lot of my own action in this picture. Like riding a horse."

"I never rode a horse before. Never. But this character I play was captured at 14 and brought up by the Indians, so I've got to look natural on a horse. It's not easy. Especially when I've got to ride bareback most of the time."

"Horses weren't made for guys with short legs like me. The whole thing is holding on by clamping your legs around the horse's belly, and mine don't reach. I've had about 12 lessons from this girl stunt rider Stevie Myers. Two days of it and I'm saddle sore."

"The trouble with doing your own stunts is that you get a feeling of monipotence. You figure nothing can happen to you as long as the camera is on you."

"That happened to me on The Graduate. I had this scene where I was driving along the freeway in the Alfa Romeo. The camera was on the front of the car and I switched it on when I got the signal from a helicopter overhead. So I turned on the camera and was driving along when I looked down and saw I was going over the speed limit. You can get killed!"

RECALLS LEAN DAYS Hoffman has returned to his homeland a star, which might surprise those who knew him as a runty, pimpled kid in his early Los Angeles days.

His success might also startle those who knew him in his starving New York days. "The worst thing then was not knowing if you'd ever work as an actor again," he recalled. "I'd finish a season of summer stock and say, 'God, is this the last job until next summer?'"

"Once when I was 25 or 26, I quit acting altogether for a couple of years. I figured I couldn't make it."

At 31, Dustin Hoffman has it made. He is incorporated, and producers line up to offer their best properties at his price.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Beamish have returned home after enjoying a holiday trip to Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hodge, Suzanne and Andy, Ottawa, spent several days at the Beamish home, called here by the death of Mrs. Hodge's aunt, Miss Minnie Beamish.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Moulton, Bim Brook, Ont., are guests of Mrs. Moulton's sister, Mrs. Evelyn Fisher and Mr. Wm. Fisher.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Taylor, Beebe, were recent dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Beamish, Miss Suzanne Hodge, Ottawa, is spending two weeks with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Beamish.

Sympathy is being extended to Mrs. Donald Smith and other members of the family in the loss of their husband and father, Mr. Donald Smith, who died on July 21 after an illness of several weeks. The funeral was held in Beulah United Church with interment in the Ayer's Cliff Cemetery.

Therefore, the odds that West holds the queen of hearts are 10 to six.

In rubber bridge, of course, South wastes no time thinking about the heart finesse. You don't risk the slam for 30 points extra.

In match point duplicate, South would be just about as silly to try for the overtrick. It would be good policy if South could be certain that every other North-South pair would have contracted for six spades, but the one thing that South can be sure of is that most pairs will have settled for game.

South's jump to three spades was a slight overbid, if anything, and North's five-spade call a distinct overbid.

At best, South would be risking a very good score for bidding the slam in an effort to get an extra half match point or so for the overtrick.

East Clifton United Church

East Clifton Church closes after 100 years of existence

EAST CLIFTON — The United Church service on Sunday morning, July 13, was well attended by the congregations of Sawyerville and Randborc joining with East Clifton. It was the last service to be held here as the Sawyerville charge. It was a service that marked the end of an era which had been in existence for over 100 years.

It marked the beginning of a new era when on Sept. 1 the East Clifton congregation will join the newly organized Eaton Valley Pastoral Charge.

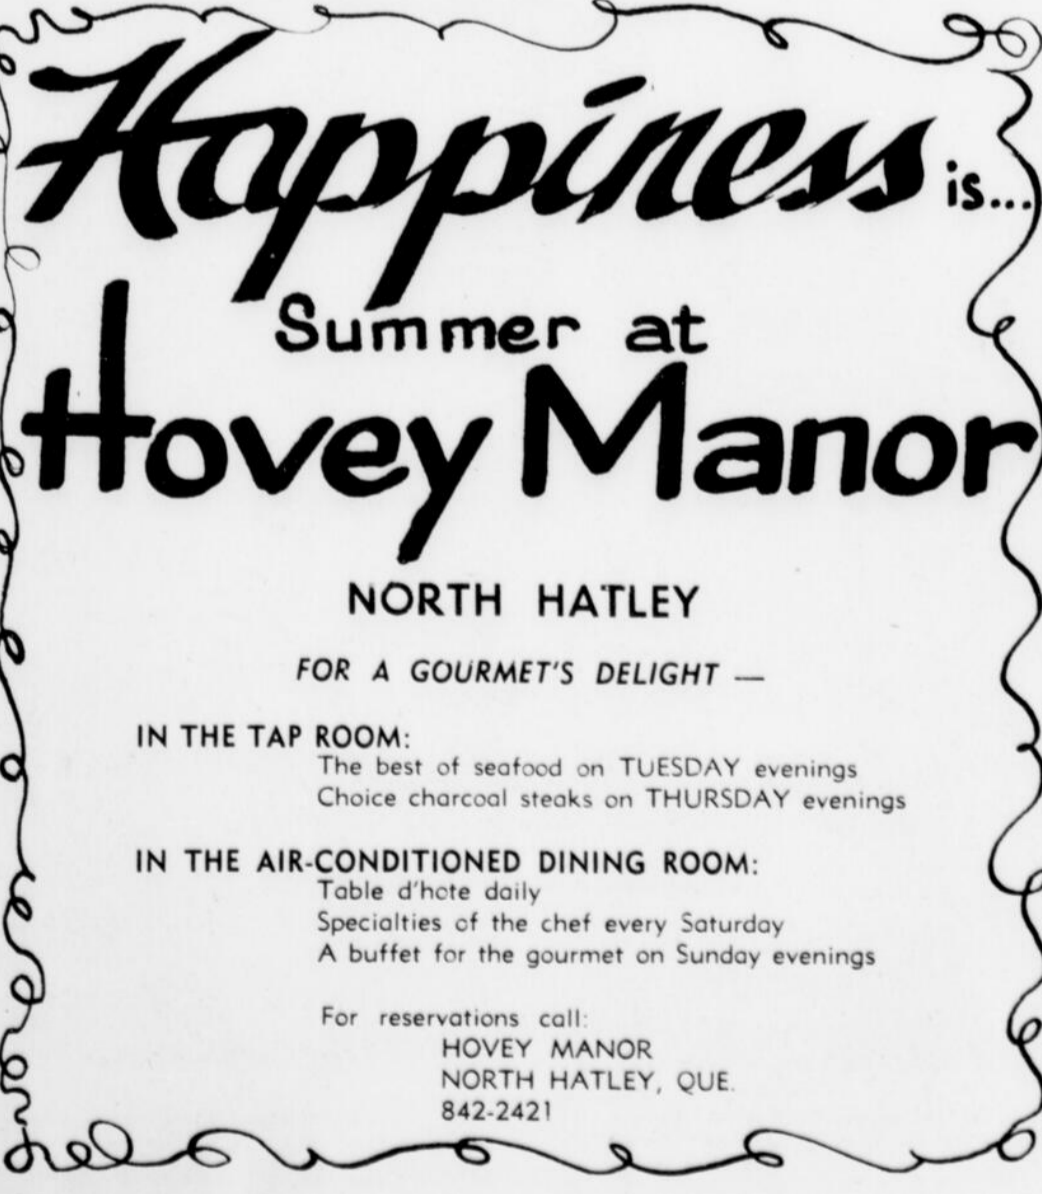

Rev. C. J. Arnold, in his last service here prior to his departure, spoke appropriately on Count Your Many Blessings. It was a sermon of thanks for the past and prayer for the future. The past was the time of the pioneer who came and took the opportunities placed here, the present is an ideal time in which to live, a time of wonderful discoveries, medical and mechanical, as well as a time of unrest and dissatisfaction. "A Man's Life is a gift. Is it his own to do with as he wishes? Man's Life is a gift of God to be used in dedication to God and his work on earth and only then will man have satisfaction that he has received the Gift of Life."

The Sawyerville choir, under the direction of Mrs. Claris Phillips and organist, Mrs. Clinton Smith, led in the singing.

Flowers were placed in the church by Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Bell.

The Church will be maintained by the local trustees for special services for the present time.

City will ask province to pay for pool covering

Drawings for a dome over the Claire Fontaine swimming pool and pocket arenas prompted Alderman Raymond Bergeron to seek an audience with the minister of Fish and Game and Tourism.

Well aware of the fact that the Quebec High Commission on Sports had helped other cities in the region, Mr. Bergeron feels the city could receive some financial assistance in the realization of certain plans.

The alderman would like to obtain some money to help build a dome over the Claire Fontaine swimming pool, in East Sherbrooke, making the pool a year round location instead of the seasonal service it is now.

The proposed shelter over the Claire Fontaine swimming pool could cost as much as $300,000, to build, Mr. Bergeron said.

The alderman said the plans submitted to council had been done seriously by the architectural firm Demers, Delorme and Morin, following frequent visits to their localities in the province.

Mr. Bergeron told council, as president of the city's sports commission, that may be the Quebec government had a few thousand dollars to dispose to help the city build pocket arenas in the different wards.

Equally interested in the venture, Alderman Marcel Savard asked his colleague to prepare a report on the general aspects of the construction of such arenas.

Mr. Bergeron said he would be in a position to present such a report within two weeks, to help guide council on the possibility of erecting ward arenas, and inform the public of the measures involved, he added.

Student cleared by court following conflicting testimony

An 19-year-old Cookshire student, Real Gendreau, was acquitted of theft yesterday by Sessions Judge Roland Dugre, following what he called a reasonable doubt.

Gendreau was detained by police in connection with the theft of a tachometer, luggage and a transistor radio from a car belonging to 22-year-old Pierre Goulet of Sherbrooke, during the night of July 19-20.

In his testimony to the court, the car owner, Pierre Goulet described the circumstances in which the above articles were stolen.

Mr. Goulet said that he and two other friends, Serge Gosselin and Jean Lemieux, both from Sherbrooke, had parked their car at the rear of the Moulin Rouge Hotel, late during the evening of July 19, returning from a trip to Atlantic City.

"After leaving the hotel to head for home," said Goulet, I discovered my car had been broken into and different things stolen.

In their testimony, both Lemieux and Serge Gosselin identified the articles seized by police as belonging to them.

Testifying for the Crown, 18-year-old Clement Roy of Cookshire, a friend of the accused who had pleaded guilty to possession of stolen goods the previous week, said he met Gendreau on the morning of July 20.

Roy told the court he had purchased the goods from an unknown character the same day at Jardins Prevert in Birtchton, for the sum of $25.

He added the accused had helped him carry the goods to his home in Cookshire with his car.

Acting in his own defense, the accused told the court he had proof that he had never stepped foot in Sherbrooke on the night of the theft.

Testifying for the defense, Hughes Turcotte of Cookshire told the court he had spent the entire evening with the accused in Lambton at a local dance hall.

He added they had left Lambton around 12:30 a.m. that night and gone directly home.

In establishing the circumstances leading to the arrest, Sherbrooke police constable Richard Bernard said that on the night of July 23-24, he spotted a car at the corner of Kennedy and Biron Streets and decided to search it.

"One of the occupants, officer Bernard explained," had gone for gas.

During their search, police found a transistor radio reported stolen earlier and called in one of the men in to identify it.

With the help of Serge Gosselin who identified the radio as his, police set out to find the rest of the stolen goods. Constable Bernard said.

Testifying in his own defense, Real Gendreau told the court he had no knowledge that the luggage and other articles he helped his friend Clement Roy transport home from Birtchton were stolen.

Referring to the morning of July 23, when he and Clement Roy were arrested by municipal police, Gendreau said his car was out of gas and that he himself was not present when the police officers searched the car.

"Considering the evidence and the circumstances, said Judge Dugre, there is a reasonable doubt," and he rejected the charge.

During the trial, the Crown was represented by Michel Cote.

QPP under orders to drive out hippies

PERCE, Que. (CP) — Provincial police were under orders not to assist townspeople in clearing out a group of hippies and motorcyclists, a spokesman for this resort town on the Gaspé Peninsula said Tuesday.

Louis Doiron, legal counsel for the town, said in a formal complaint to the Quebec justice department its refusal to act created an explosive situation.

British students eat up ET fun and games

Exchange students from England enjoyed the great outdoors in the Eastern Townships yesterday. They were the guests of Camp Wilvaken, on Lake Lovering.

The British students are currently spending three weeks in Canada as part of an exchange program known as the West Island - Cumberland Student Exchange. The program is working out of the West Island in Montreal where the 14 English students are staying in private homes.

They have been in Canada for two weeks now and have travelled to Toronto and Quebec City as a group. They have been entertained by the Montreal Board of Trade and have visited many points of interest with the families of their Canadian hosts.

The exchange program is run over a two-year period. The English students who are visiting Canada this summer will entertain their hosts next year. All the British students are from the county of Cumberland in the north of England.

The visit to Camp Wilvaken was co-ordinated by the camp directors Dr. and Mrs. K. R. Willis. Dr. Willis is a teacher at Lindsay Place High School in Pointe Claire during the winter months and he has collaborated with D. G. Smith, who is the

Protection or extortion

Magog's police chief, Telephone Lavoie, voiced a fundamental concept when he pointed out this week that the efforts of his force were directed towards the control of speeding, rather than filling the coffers with the income from fines.

This is a point that sometimes seems to be missed. An example is to be found in another community through which Route One passes (near Montreal and not a part of the Eastern Townships.) Here the 30-mph-limit signs are posted far beyond the edges of the town, so far in fact that it is easy for the unsuspecting motorist to overlook them or to forget by the time he approaches visible appearances of human habitation that he is travelling in a speed restricted area.

In the best traditions of Speed Trap Gulch, however, the hapless motorist is soon reminded with a flashing red light, and a hefty-sized ticket, that he has become an involuntary contributor to the community's prosperity.

Policies like this obviously defeat the purpose of speed control. Besides being a source of irritation and financial loss to the victims, efforts to make money through speeding fines require a steady supply of speeders. It follows that if speeding is controlled, then the town's income drops.

Chief Lavoie, however, displays a true understanding of his profession and its purpose — the protection of the citizenry rather than harrassment.

As obvious at this point would seem to be, it is apparently misunderstood or deliberately overlooked by some officers less competent than Chief Lavoie.

Our secretary's motto: It's every man for herself.

Cows losing stomachs

Does tension keep your stomach tied up in knots? Do you suffer from acid indigestion or an ulcer? Then consider the poor bovine with its multiple stomachs.

For even the contented cow has fallen victim to the hectic pace of modern life. The outwardly placid cow or steer may, in fact, be a hide full of jitters as a result of new feeding and farm management techniques according to Dr. Richard V. Bristol, professor of veterinary clinical medicine at Iowa State University.

"Modern farming has converted the cow from a hay burner into a simple stomach animal," he says. "This is desirable to obtain maximum feeding efficiency, but at the same time we have created problems."

New methods of confinement feeding, in which cattle are held in feed lots instead of being allowed to roam the pasture was producing nervous and digestive disorders and disease which formerly went unrecognized, says Dr. Bristol.

This poses a problem, not only for the farmer, or for the cow, but may also have public health implications, inasmuch as some diseases of the central nervous system in animals are transmissible to man.

And this is one more worry we really do not need.

The difference between hard-won success and blind luck is in who is experiencing it.

TODAY in history

July 30, 1969 . . .
William Penn, the founder of Pennsylvania, died 251 years ago today—in 1718. Penn, a Quaker, came to America in 1682 to establish a colony for persecuted religiousists on a grant of land received from the British Crown in payment of a claim he had against the Crown. Penn himself had been persecuted for his faith and imprisoned in the Tower of London. His friendship with James II brought some advantages to the Quakers.

1656—The Battle of Warsaw ended.

1898—Prince Otto von Bismarck, the "Iron Chancellor," died.

Peter the Great, famous for his attempts to Westernize Russia in the 18th century, was attracted not by Western culture, but by Western military power and industrial productivity. To increase Russian productivity, Peter started by encouraging sobriety. The World Almanac says, "He made all men jailed for drunkenness wear a 'medal for hard drinking' around their necks during their imprisonment. The medal weighed 18 pounds."

Second World War
Twenty-five years ago today—in 1944—New Zealand troops reoccupied San Michele; the North Italy and Yugoslav committees of national liberation formed combined units; 1,000 Allied bombers attacked south of Caumont aiding the British offensive in Normandy.

The 42-mile canal carries the waters of the Yarmouk River, which separates Jordan from Syria, and rain water gathered in valleys.

The canal, now being extended southward by five miles to irrigate additional land, came under Israeli shelling several times in June. It also was the target of a sabotage operation by Israeli army commandos.

Although life appears to be normal in some villages in the Jordan Valley such as Deir Ala, Maada and Sawalha, others in the region appear almost deserted.

People of inhabited villages, which lie below sea level, say they are trained in popular resistance and have built shelters near their homes.

"Lyndon warned me there'd be days like this . . ."

Ninety-nine per cent against

Ontario's French-Canadians fear separation

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's 650,000 French-Canadians are reported to be 99.9 per cent against any separation of Quebec from Canada.

"Secession would be a catastrophe for us," says Dr. J. DuBois of Welland, a prime mover behind winning acceptance of his city's single French-language public high school. "We would lose all the privileges we have gained."

The high school serves the Niagara Peninsula's 10,000 or so French-speaking residents.

And in Kapuskasing, some 400 miles north of Sudbury, one man said: "Theoretically we'd agree with many of the things that are happening in Quebec—it's a change to see the English getting it for a while. But it can only hurt us."

In Kapuskasing a French-language high school is said to be "just a matter of time."

At Toronto, which has an estimated 60,000 French-Canadians and a French-language radio station, CJBC, Fernand Guindon, minister without portfolio in the Ontario government and chief spokesman for the French-Canadians in the province, says English attitudes "have changed incredibly since I first arrived" years ago.

WANTS NO BETRAYAL
"Things used to be very different," he told an interviewer. "There are no difficulties now."

He said he feels strongly about what is happening in Quebec. He has told the French-language CBC network that any move for a French-only Quebec represents "a turnabout and a betrayal of Franco-Ontarians."

"Franco-Ontarians are conditioned to the difficulties of preserving their culture," said Mr. Guindon. "They've been doing it under difficult circumstances for 100 years and they're doing it still."

"But 99 per cent—at least 99 per cent—are against Quebec separatism."

"It's always been my feeling that the French-Canadians outside Quebec should be given a voice in the dialogue that is going on."

"I feel that the French-Canadians outside Quebec should unite, should speak with a unified voice, should speak more strongly. If they become more vocal I believe it would have a good effect within Quebec."

NOW SHOW RESPECT

Franco-Torontonians "come from Manitoba, other parts of Ontario, New Brunswick, Quebec, France and Belgium—there is even a small community of Sephardic Jews from Morocco.

These groups are said to have little in common but their language.

In Kapuskasing, Dr. Roger Paquin, who is a member of a committee pressing for a French-language high school, says things are definitely changing for the better.

"The change in the attitude of the English even in the last three or four months has been great."

They have come to respect us instead of just pushing us aside. And this is good—only out of respect can you get harmony."

"But Wait! We See the Other Guy!"

OTTAWA OFFBEAT

BY RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Something is happening to job security in the federal civil service.

Just yesterday, "permanency," as they call it, was one of the most glittering attractions of a government job. Once on the staff you were there for life — no matter what — come war, depression, and of course, those periodic "economy waves" so dear to the hearts of finance ministers.

Nobody was ever fired — come what may — it was just too much trouble to take it through the long and complicated process of civil service appeal boards.

It was always so much easier, if a civil servant wasn't wanted, even needed, just to forget about him.

He could get lost in the great army of — at last official count — precisely 398,928 on the federal government payroll.

It was so simple to vanish without trace into the ever-increasing ranks that one former civil service departmental public relations officer was able to spend the last productive years of his career before retirement secretly behind locked doors in his office writing a book.

CHANGED AND CHANGING:

He was only one of hundreds — who knows, perhaps over the years, thousands — who disappeared, becoming one of the faceless and forgotten pieces of civil service flotsam, stranded on the lonely beach of some long-abandoned branch of a neglected departmental division years away from the mainstream of government operations.

But all that is suddenly — and for those caught up in it, frighteningly — changed and changing.

Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister Benson, those hard-headed "pragmatists," as they call themselves, have taken charge.

And things are happening in the until-now great and always-growing federal establishment that haven't happened in more than 30 years.

Some civil servants — certainly hundreds of them — are being told they no longer are needed.

The last time within living memory that such a revolutionary thing shook this customarily quiet and complacent capital was back in the early 1930's — the "dirty thirties" of the great depression — when the feared and hated Conservative prime minister, pompous, pious Richard Bedford Bennett overnight closed out the old department of the interior.

So many hundreds of civil servants joined the legions of the unemployed, old-time federal employees still pale at the haunting memory of it.

Since that black day so long ago, it has been forever onward and upward with the civil service in size of staff and heft of payroll.

But now, bright young sharpshooters, the dreaded "economizers," turned loose by Trudeau and Benson, are busy writing names to lengthening "redundancy" lists.

WHO'S NEXT?

"Redundancy of the bureaucracy for 'unnecessary.'"

It means, bluntly, that if you're "redundant," your job is duplicated, triplicated with who-knows-how-many-things doing the same unnecessary thing — and why don't you do the decent thing, make it easier for everybody, and go.

Some are being offered the choice of getting out or taking a pay cut. And there is even talk in high places of layoffs where job transfers just aren't possible for the redundancies."

Only one hard figure so far has emerged — with 200 "redundant" in the amalgamation of the departments of industry, and trade and commerce.

Five new departments are being set up, through inter-departmental consolidations reaching into scores of federal agencies.

Things may never be the same in this once safely secure and snug Land of the Afternoon.

The PRAYER FOR TODAY FROM The Upper Room

Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts. (Psalm 139:23)
PRAYER: Heavenly Father, give us a sound heart and free us of any wickedness that might lead to decay as individuals and as a nation. Teach us love for humanity everywhere and compassion for those near at hand whom we can help. In Jesus' name. Amen.

Rebel designers feature topless, bottomless and spotless

PARIS (AP) — A topless Teal. The two girls designed bridal gown and fashions inspired by the Apollo moon landing brought gasps from the audience at the showing of Mia and Vicky, the rebel designers backed by actress Elizabeth Taylor.

Erotic symbolism was the keynote of the collection shown by Mia Fossagrives, wife of Paris couturier Louis Feraud, and her English partner, Vicky display of models in way-out clothes dancing their way along the rostrum to the beat of African jungle drums.

The bride stole the show. Wrapped demurely in a floating white crepe mantle, she opened it to reveal a completely bare bosom over a miniskirt supported by a jewelled halter.

The bridegroom wore a diamond necklace in the form of a Maltese cross, said to be worth $300,000.

OUTLINE BOSOM

Other styles raising whistles and eyebrows included jumpsuits or "unitards" featuring different colored section outlining the bosom and derrier and often with a chasty belt effect.

The most photographed model other than the bride wore a topless outfit in brown leather fringes—a takeoff on the popular Hiawathas seen around town, but worn with a simple hood and cellophane sun mask. Thigh-high cellophane top boots were a frequent feature.

The jumpsuits and unitards were done in various weights of jersey, wool, viscose and velvet. Mia and Vicky said their inspiration for the collection came from the Apollo 11 moon landing.

Some of the more deliberately erotic items included multi-colored crocheted tunics on jumpsuits in a stitch recalling grandma's sofa throw, but featuring large hands placed on the wearer's derriere and bosom. One blue and orange unitard had two large, presumably masculine arms climbing all the way down on each side.

A beautiful black girl wore a gold silk panne velvet barebacked evening pyjama, with a gold scallop shell concealing each breast.

The girls' escorts were fully covered, dressed like knights in a Renaissance mood, leaving the moon age to the girls.

One can lessen night driving hazards

Night driving. It's precarious. More than half the fatal accidents happen at night. And the crux of the problem as any professional rally racer will tell

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hammond and family, St. Petersburg, Fla., are visiting Mrs. Hammond's mother, Mrs. Stella Veilleux, London Street, as well as other relatives and friends in the area.

Visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Fairbrother, Queen Street, Lennoxville, were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bowen and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Kerr, Galt, Ont. Karen Ann, Marlene Ula and Mervin James Colby of North Hatley Road spent a week at the same home.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Moore, Madeira Beach, St. Petersburg, Fla., were calling on friends in Lennoxville. Mr. and Mrs. Moore have taken a cottage in North Hatley for the summer months.

you are seeing. You simply don't see as well in the dark. But knowing some of the problems of night sight can make your driving safer.

First, learn how to use your eyes. They have different types of nerve cells for daylight and darkness. For daylight there are some seven million "cone cells" located in the central portion of the retina which is why you look directly at something to see it. None of the 130 million night vision "rod cells" are in the center, however, they circle the retina so you don't see clearly looking directly ahead. The secret of good night sight is to keep your eyes shifting.

Also vital to night vision is a retinal chemical known as "visual purple". When you're momentarily blinded by oncoming headlights it's because the intense glare uses up the "visual purple" faster than the body can supply it to the retina. How fast your eyes readjust again to the dark depends on the individual. To lessen the effects of the glare, shift your eyes to the right shoulder of the lane or focus on the dark area down the center of your lane.

And give your eyes a break by keeping the windshield and headlights clean. Vision is cut by fifty percent when they're dirty. Bugs and grime on the windshield also reflect light causing dazzling reflections. Tests have shown that one little smudge creates flashes which cause the iris to open and close four or five times every time a single car passes. Drive on a crowded highway, therefore, and your eyes may be making four to five thousand adjustments an hour which invites fatigue and headaches. So take the precaution of keeping the windshield and headlights clean.

Never touched by gas station attendants, wipers collect grime which gets smeared over the windshield the minute they're used. If you don't have an automatic windshield washer, therefore, be sure to wipe off the blades regularly with soda and sponge.

And don't forget the inside of the windshield. Smoking fogs it up with a film

Women's removal of inequities welcomed

In giving her support to Bill C-165 covering amendments to the Estate Tax Act, Senator Muriel McQueen Fergusson, an honorary president of the Canadian Federation, speaking in the Senate chamber on March 27 had some pertinent things to say about the bill and the principle on which it is based.

The bill, which specifies that gifts and property passing from one spouse to another will be free of tax, has already passed the House of Commons but had not received approval of the Senate as THE BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL WOMAN went to press. Disagreeing with practically all of the speeches made by her fellow Senators during the debate to date on Bill C-165, Senator Fergusson said that for many years she had been concerned over what she considered a very inequitable situation in regard to widows under the Estate Tax Act and welcomed with delight the announcement made by the Minister of National Revenue on October 22 of last year that thereafter gifts and property passing from one spouse to another would be free of tax.

(The amendments to the act involve a transfer of some estate taxes to other persons liable under the act so that the amount of money raised through the Estate Tax Act would not be diminished.)

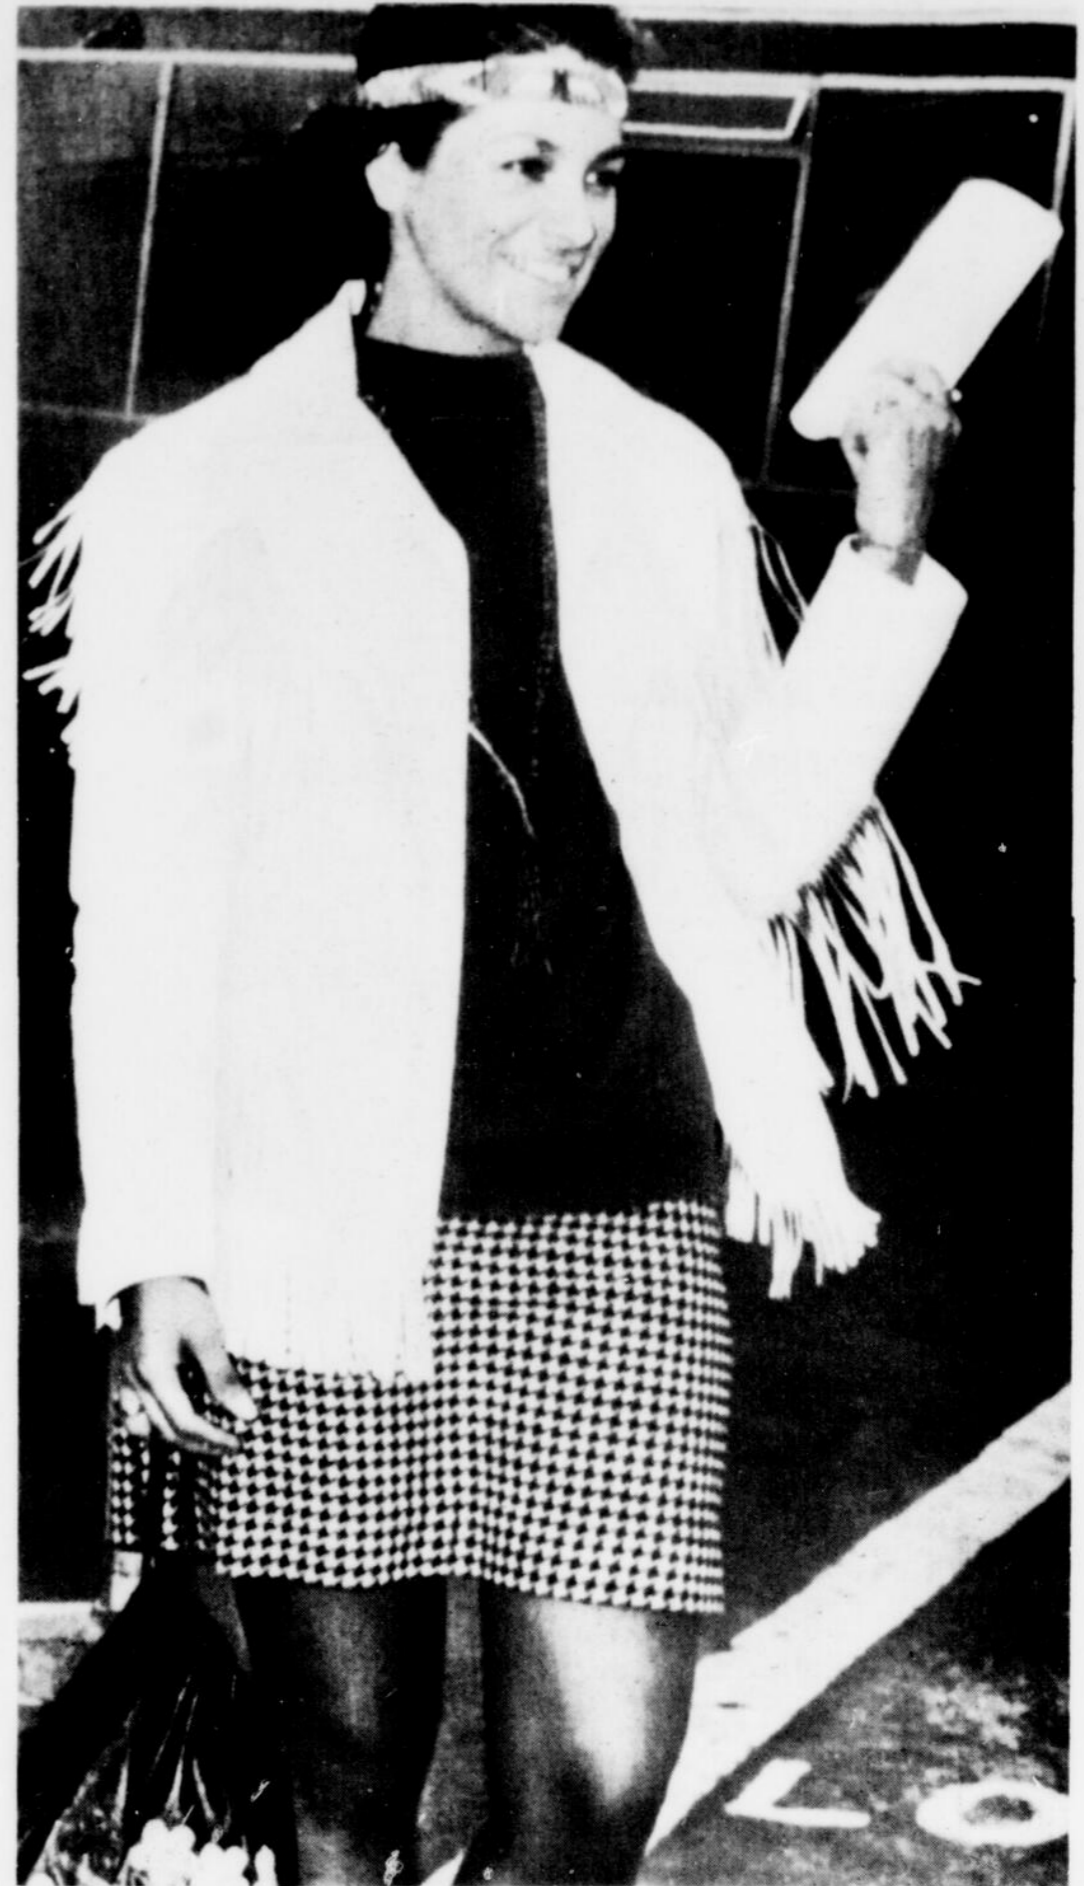

Voicing her surprise that the legislation was not universally acclaimed by her colleagues in the chamber, Senator Fergusson reminded them of the unfair situation which led up to the introduction of the amendments to the Estate Tax Act. (Her review will be of great interest to members of the Canadian Federation which has long sought amendments to the act.)

Prior to the announcement of the proposed amendments by the Minister of National Revenue, Senator Fergusson noted that —

"a wife who had contributed equally with her husband to the building-up of his estate, on the death of her husband was required after certain limited exemptions to pay estate tax when the family property passed to her. The situation was aggravated when the property she inherited on the death of her husband was an annuity or a pension, for in such a case she was required to pay estate tax on the commuted value of her future pension or annuity. That is, she paid estate tax on the amount it was calculated she would receive over the period she would probably live. If she died very soon thereafter, or at any time before the end of the period used in the calculation, she would have paid estate tax on money she never received. The estate tax, particularly that levied in relation to annuities or pensions, often left such widows in very straitened circumstances. Some widows even found it necessary to go into the labor market to provide for the current expenses of themselves and their children, and in some cases even to raise the money to pay the taxes. This, even though the husband, in contemplation of death, had considered that he was leaving his wife well provided for.

"Another result of the provisions of the former act was that the widow was not only required to pay the estate tax on the property she might never receive, but if she did live and did receive the annuity, she was required, when she received it, to pay income tax on it also. In this way she was taxed twice on the same money.

"Over a number of years these inequities have again and again been brought to the attention of the Government and of the Prime Minister of the day by various groups, especially the National Council of Women, the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women and other similar groups, who have asked that this situation be rectified.

MOHAWK IN A MINI-SKIRT — Kahn Tineta Horn, 27, wants justice for her people, the Mohawks, near Quebec, and she's gone to London to get it. The pretty mini-skirted young woman wants the British government to persuade Canada to let Indians cross the border into the United States without paying custom duty.

Buckskin, birchbark and features

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian white society, said Nedra Greenaway, pictures the Indian surrounded by buckskin, birch bark canoes and colored feathers.

Mrs. Greenaway, a graduate of Simon Fraser University in suburban Burnaby, is out to tell her countrymen what the Indian is really about.

She received a $4,000 fellowship from an oil company to study the role of the Indian in Canadian society when she completed her arts degree in 1968 and the fellowship has been renewed for 1969.

Above all she hopes her thesis will be published as a readable book.

"I don't want my book to be filed away in a university library. Over the past 20 years there has been a knowledge explosion in the social sciences but very little of this has filtered down."

Mrs. Greenaway said she is collaborating with a Nootka Indian, John Thomas, to write the book.

Mr. Thomas, 55, from Ucluelet on Vancouver Island, is a hereditary chief of the Nitinat band.

In conjunction with her book, Mrs. Greenaway is working with the department of education at the University of British Columbia.

She is preparing kits to be used in primary school grades designed to give a truer picture of the Indian.

"The kits contain the latest audio-visual teaching techniques including maps, tapes, pictures and even a play.

"We hope this will counteract inaccuracies in text books currently part of the school system."

Distinctive Gem

Moss agate is a variety of agate containing brown, black or green mosslike or dendritic markings, due in part to oxides of manganese. The dendrites or branching designs make moss agate the distinctive gem it is.

Bonsai

In general, creation of a genuine Bonsai tree takes from 50 to 100 years. However, by twisting the trunk and restraining growth of tops and roots, a comparatively young tree can appear aged.

Watch those eyes, they don't lie

Although eyes are said to be the mirror of the soul, there's no doubt that they are a sure giveaway of stress, overwork or too many late nights.

If you often get that dark-circled look around the eyes that suggests you haven't slept for weeks, lack of fresh air might be the cause of your problem. It is important to take a walk outside every day if you want to keep your eyes clear and healthy.

Use your eyes but don't abuse them; they will only retain youthful clarity and sparkle if you make a habit of getting enough sleep and eat the right sort of foods that are rich in protein and vitamins.

One of the quickest ways to freshen tired eyes is to place soothing compresses over them and lie down with your feet propped higher than your head.

A Top Priority: Feed Slum Tots

The child in its first few weeks is the major target in our fight to banish malnutrition and its results from the American scene.

"Modern research reveals that prenatal and postnatal malnutrition can affect its future. Yes, a starved or severely malnourished infant

Soak a cotton pad in Lemon Jelvyn Freshener, wring nearly dry, and place over eyes. Ten or fifteen minutes later the bright, clear-eyed look will be yours once more.

That very delicate skin surrounding your eyes is particularly prone to wrinkles and dermatologists readily admit that at a very early age a girl begins to collect a number of tiny lines that will develop into wrinkles and crow's-feet as she gets older. You can't start too early to pat a few drops of tropical moist oil of Olay into this skin at night before retiring. Feather-light nourishment is exactly what tender tissue needs to maintain its elasticity and fresh, moist bloom and the fine-textured moist oil is excellent because it is easily assimilated in the area around the eyes.

Tenth annual reunion held by MacLeod, MacDonald families
MILAN — The 10th annual reunion of the MacLeod and MacDonald families was held on Sunday, July 20 in Canterbury at the farm of Mr. and Mrs. William G. MacLeod, gracious hosts for the occasion. Guests started arriving around 10 o'clock and were still arriving on the scene as late as 2:30 p.m.
Chairs and tables were set up on the spacious grounds while several made use of blankets to enjoy their picnic lunch.
The register was in charge of Duncan MacLeod who reported approximately 115 having registered, with guests coming from Westbrook, Me.; Dearborn Heights and Detroit, Mich.; Baltimore, Md.; Wells River, Barre, N. Hartland, Lyndonville, Montpelier, Newport, Vt., Littleton, N.H.; Toronto and Smiths Falls, Ont.; Montreal, Drummondville, Thurso, Windsor, Sherbrooke, Lennoxville and the immediate area, as well as one from as far afield as Dublin, Ireland.
The oldest guest attending was Mrs. K. N. MacDonald of Bury, formerly of Scotstown and Keith. The youngest was Brian Matheson of Gould. The one travelling the farthest to attend was Gordon MacLennan, coming from Dublin, Ireland, though a native of Glasgow, Scotland. Suitable mementoes will be given to these guests.
Plans for next year's get-together were not completed but it will be held on the third Sunday of July, with place to be decided on later.

Breeder retiring cattle dispersed

Mr. George H. Innes, internationally known Jersey breeder, has announced the complete dispersal of his renowned "Fairmount Jersey" herd at his farm yesterday.

Through the years the name of "Innes" has been synonymous with top quality livestock. His father, the late James Innes, was well known for the outstanding herd of Holsteins, at City View, which accounted for seven out of 21 All American awards one year in the early twenties. All of George's brothers, also, including the late Durno, and Gordon, Sandy and Bruce have distinguished themselves as Holstein breeders and judges.

Over 40 years ago, the present Fairmount farm was purchased, along with a herd of Jerseys, George having chosen the Jersey breed in which to make his mark. The numerous trophies and banners from shows throughout North America attest to his success. Foundation cattle purchased from B. H. Bull and Son, the late E. W. Nesbitt, and John Pringle, as well as from other well-known herd of the day, laid a firm foundation for the future of the Fairmount herd.

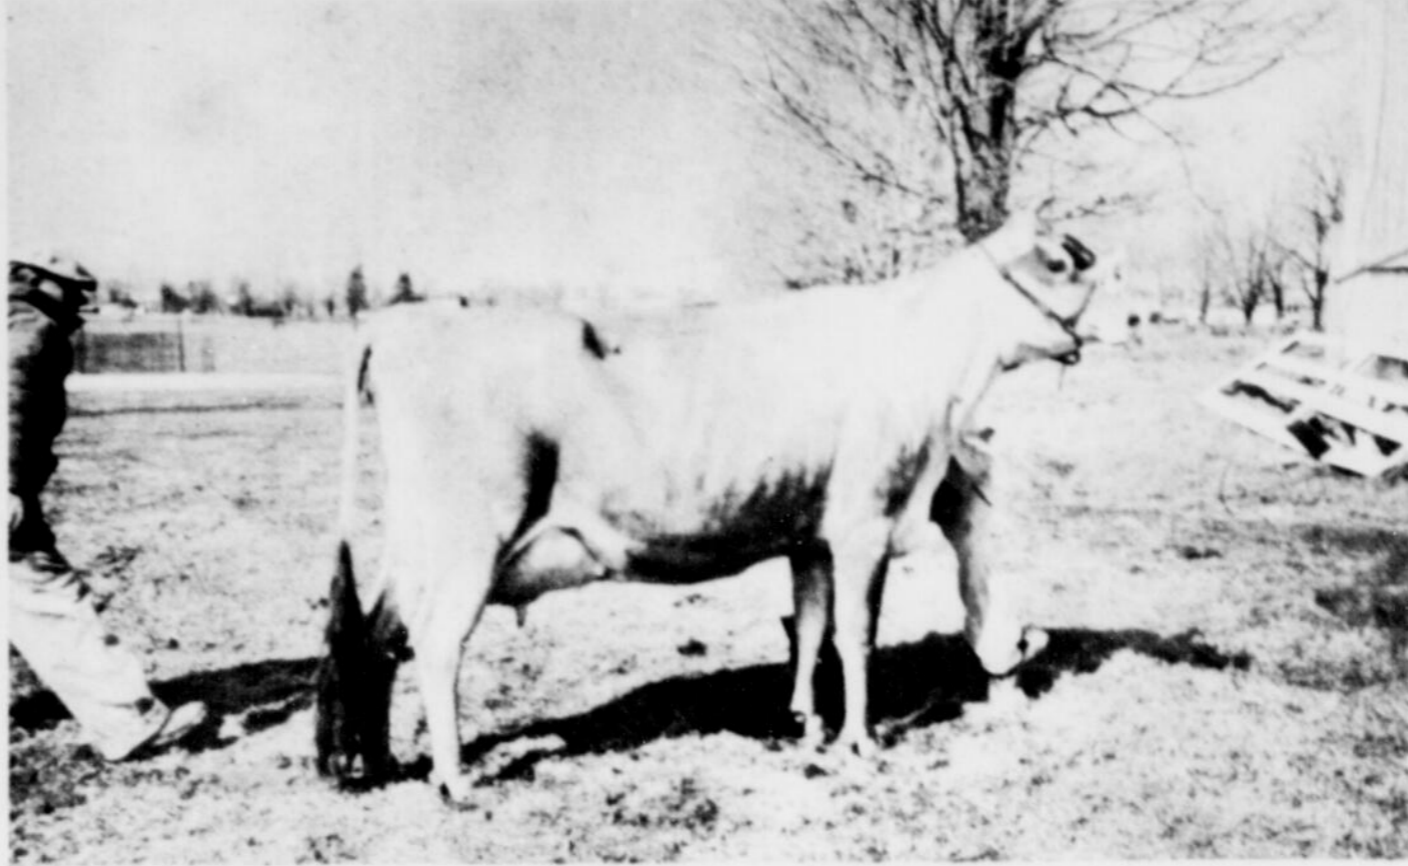

George has been a familiar figure at the major livestock shows on the continent for half a century, sometimes as a spectator, often as a judge, but more often in his familiar role as a master showman. It would be difficult to enumerate all the achievements of Fairmount Jerseys over the past 40 years, but a brief review of the triumphs of the past decade adequately reflect his success.

Included in the last 10 years are his winning of Premier Breeder and Premier Exhibitor banners at Chicago and at the Eastern States Exposition. He bred and exhibited the Grand Champion cow at the Kentucky Show and Sale in 1966. In 1968 his twice Junior Champion heifer sold for $1,025 in the Sale of the Stars. His consignments to auctions over the years have been consistently near the top.

While Mr. Innes' personal achievements have been many, none has given him greater satisfaction than a win by a Fairmount-bred animal that he had sold to another breeder.

George has served as a director of the Canadian Jersey Cattle Club, and is a past president. He is also a past president of the Woodstock Rotary Club and active in church and community affairs.

The dispersal of the Fairmount Jersey herd has been called for Tuesday, July 22, to be held at the farm, in view of George's decision to retire from active farming after so many years of carrying on a successful Jersey breeding operation.

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. — Few farmers manage to match pasture grass production perfectly to feed requirement for their cattle.

The problem results from a paradox. In the spring, when pasture is lush, beef cattle are young and don't need as much feed as they do later on. In the late summer and early fall, pasture is relatively sparse, yet the cattle have grown and need more feed.

At the Canada Department of Agriculture's Lethbridge, Research Station, Dr. D. B. Wilson has studied the problem as it applies to irrigated pasture and yearling beef cattle.

Farmers there normally turn their cattle out on pasture about May 20 when the grass is producing about 60 pounds of dry matter an acre a day. The yearling steers weigh about 600 pounds and need about 15 pounds of dry matter a day. Irrigated pasture at this time of the year will carry about four steers an acre.

In late May and early June, pasture growth is rapid and amounts to about 100 pounds or more of dry matter an acre a day. That's enough to support six yearling steers an acre.

But, by early July daily dry matter production can drop to about 30 pounds an acre and will continue to drop into mid-September to about 10 pounds an acre.

British Columbia research station attracts world visitors

SUMMERLAND, B.C. — work to visitors from Argentina, France, Australia, Portugal, Switzerland and South Africa. In addition, the Research Station has been involved in programs in South Africa and New Zealand. In recent months, the Research Station has outlined its fruit growers helped New Zealand to establish their apple processing industry.

New Zealand growers sent their fruit to British Columbia where it was processed and shipped back to New Zealand for product testing on the market.

And British Columbia experts, including some staff members at the Summerland Research Station, designed the entire New Zealand setup, including processing techniques and factory.

Station scientists also helped South Africa to establish an apple processing industry.

John Kitson and Dugal MacGregor of the fruit and vegetable processing unit are among the top attractions because visitors are keenly interested in new products and processes their team of scientists has developed.

In recent months, the team has developed instant fruit flakes, frozen pourable applesauce, a powdered fruit flavor, and the Rolltherm cooker.

Canadian inspectors check Dutch bulbs

OTTAWA — Three Canada Department of Agriculture inspectors from the Plant Protection Division staff left recently for the Netherlands to inspect some 35,000,000 bulbs destined for Canadian gardens. H. H. Krushel of Winnipeg, who heads the team, J. M. Mulders of Ottawa and A. C. Schmidt of Guelph, will remain in The Netherlands for 10 weeks.

All bulbs coming into Canada must be inspected for disease by CDA's Plant Protection Division inspectors.

For this reason it is easier and more efficient, as well as more economical, if this check is made in the 40-mile area between Amsterdam and The Hague where the bulbs are grown and prepared for shipment than it is at more widely spaced Canadian customs points.

From the Dutch point of view, the pre-inspection of bulbs in Holland means faster clearance at Canadian customs points and speedier delivery to Canadian buyers.

Bulbs coming into Canada are very closely inspected by both Dutch and Canadian inspectors. Dutch authorities examine them thoroughly to make sure they are certified to meet Canadian standards. Then after the shipments are crated or bagged — just before sealing — CDA representatives take over.

The CDA inspectors do sample checks which involve cutting and opening bulbs. For equipment they prefer a good hand lens although when something is suspicious they take the sample to a laboratory for closer inspection.

As it is the job of the Plant Protection Division to keep on crocus. There is a great deal of co-operation between members of the Canadian team and the Dutch scientists who operate a special laboratory in the bulb area and the Americans who have year-round inspectors in The Netherlands.

If the Canadians find anything unusual the Dutch scientists are interested and will identify it in their laboratory; the Americans keep them informed about diseases detected in the fields.

When inspectors started to find nematodes on the bulbs, many Dutch growers began fumigating the lands before planting bulbs. Many nematodes are soil-borne and for this reason all bulbs coming into Canada must be free of soil. Most rejections from Holland have been because of excess soil rather than disease. Growers prepare the bulbs for export by washing or by hand brushing. In some cases kitchen spoons are used to remove soil from the bulb roots.

The amount of bulb damage varies from year-to-year. In a wet season inspectors might find a lot of rot but in a dry season insects become the problem.

In 1968 the Canadian team checked 35,377,166 bulbs valued at close to two million dollars. These included the many thousands of tulips planted by the National Capital Commission

Expos dumped 4-2 by Cincinnati

Cincinnati Reds edged within three games of Atlanta Braves Tuesday, in the scramble for the National League baseball Western Division lead, after a 4-2 decision over Montreal Expos.

San Francisco Giants stopped Chicago Cubs 4-2 in the only afternoon contest while the Los Angeles Dodgers split a doubleheader with Pittsburgh Pirates, losing 4-2 in 10 innings before winning the second game 6-5.

The third-place Giants are two games behind the Braves while the Dodgers are one game off the pace.

St. Louis Cardinals blasted San Diego Padres 10-4 and a scheduled doubleheader between Houston and New York was rained out.

At Cincinnati, lefthander Jim Merritt posted the first complete game by a Reds' starter since July 8, and only the 13th complete game of the season by the Cincinnati pitching staff. Merritt owns five of them as he raised his record to 10-4. PRODUCES BOTH RUNS

The Expos tagged Merritt for three of their hits in the fourth inning with Jose Herrera's double producing both Montreal runs.

The Braves exploded for seven runs in the second inning and were leading 8-0 after three innings over the Phillies in Philadelphia when the rains came. After a wait of 52 minutes, the umpires called off the game and the Braves' avalanche of base hits was washed out.

The rain stopped a good night for several Braves.

Phil Niekro lost what appeared to be an easy victory, which would have given him 16 for the year. Hank Aaron had two doubles wiped out, Orlando Cepeda three runs batted in and two singles, and Tony Gonzalez had two RBI and single go down the drain.

The Philadelphia fans saw Richie Allen in his first appearance before the home crowd after a 26-day suspension and showered him with a chorus of boos. He responded by blowing kisses toward the stands.

BREAKS TIE

Willie Mays tripled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning for San Francisco and Willie McCovey, who earlier cracked his 32nd home run, scored Mays with a sacrifice fly against the Cubs. Jim Hickman had a solo homer for Chicago.

Tom Hutton cracked a two-run single, leading a four-run sixth inning rally, helping the Dodgers to their second-game victory over the Pirates after Willie Stargell's two-run 10th-inning homer had won the first game for Pittsburgh.

Reserve catcher Dave Ricketts, making his fourth start in three years, knocked in three St. Louis runs, including the tie-breaker in a seven-run seventh inning. The Cardinals moved within nine games of the Cubs in the Eastern Division with their victory over the Padres.

The streaking Cardinals, winning for the fifth time in their last six starts and for the 17th time in 22 games, were 15 1/2 games behind Chicago July 4.

Tangling with a fever and Minnesota Twins on the same day can bring the toughest Tiger to his knees. Denny McLain isn't even certain which hits harder.

McLain was sent home from Minnesota Tuesday night with a fever after being shelled for nine runs in 4 1/3 innings as the Twins completed a 5-2, 11-5 doubleheader sweep over Detroit Tigers.

Dr. Len Michienzi, a Minnesota club physician who examined McLain, prescribed rest for the Tigers' 15-game winner, who was running a high fever.

"I haven't felt very good for three or four days and knew something was wrong," McLain said before leaving for Detroit.

The Twins cuffed McLain for 11 of their 17 hits in the nightcap after prevailing over 14-game winner Mickey Lolich in the first game. They hadn't beaten either of the Detroit aces since the 1967 season.

Elsewhere in the American League, Oakland Athletics nipped New York Yankees 6-5, Baltimore Orioles downed Kansas City Royals 4-1, California Angels topped Boston Red Sox 4-3, Washington Senators trimmed Seattle Pilots 4-2 and Cleveland Indians won a pair from Chicago White Sox, 4-3 in 11 innings and 9-5.

McLain, won 31 games last season and has sparked again this year despite arm trouble and dental problems. He was "quite ill" before the Tigers left Detroit Monday, his business partner, Stan Drall, said Tuesday night.

"McLain's no baby about pain, though," Drall added. "I wouldn't be at all surprised if he takes his next regular turn."

Provincial League scene

Als lose to Royals, move out of 2nd

The Thetford Miners, having acquired the knack of losing one or two run ball games went down again, 7-6, to the Plessisville Braves, in the worst showing of attendance this season.

The Miners have now lost nine of their last eleven ball games after having built up a skin of ten victories in their first twelve games.

The win for the Braves enabled them to jump into second place.

REMEMBER WHEN . . .

Gene Tunney, world heavyweight boxing champion, announced his undefeated retirement from the ring 41 years ago today—in 1928. This was five days after he knocked out Tom Heeney in the final defence of the title he held for two years. Tunney is the only boxer to have defeated Jack Dempsey twice, both times in a 10-round decision in the League standings, five games behind the Drummondville Royals.

The offensive stars for Plessisville were Rafael Gomez with a homer and a double, and giving way to reliever Enrique Gutierrez in the seventh inning.

The Granby Cardinals walloped the Quebec Indians 10-3, in another scheduled game. The Cardinals poured in eight runs in the first inning in a match marred by five Quebec errors.

In the night cap, the Indians came back to squeak out a 3-2 victory.

In scheduled games tonight, the Drummondville Royals will play a double header at Thetford Mines.

Swarm makes CFL debut

WINNIPEG (CP) — Terry Swarm made a brilliant Western Football Conference debut Tuesday night but he doesn't wonder why he didn't get a standing ovation.

In fact, many of the 18,000 Winnipeg supporters may have cause to regret a refund on grounds of no-show as the Edmonton Eskimos exploded into the 1969 WFC season by blasting the Blue Bombers 33-0.

Highly instrumental in the defeat was Swarm, the 21-year-old speedster the Eskimos found at Colorado State University.

The six-foot-three, 205-pound flanker caught three touchdown passes in the season opener, including one from halfback Jim Thomas who everybody expected to run with the ball but didn't.

Thermus Butler took some of the spotlight with his touchdown. Linebacker Dave Cutler had two field goals, two converts and a single.

One of the field goals accounted for the 3-0 first-quarter lead and a single and converts on both of Swarm's second-quarter touchdowns helped Eskimos to an 18-0 halftime edge.

SHAVING STROKES

8-Sand Shots

The sand wedge is not the best club in my bag. Almost everybody has a weakness in their game and mine happens to be sand shots. I am not alone, though, for I have heard many golfers admit the same thing.

Much of hitting good sand shots depends on your mental attitude toward this particular kind of lie. There are, however, basic elements that have to be performed.

Two of the finest sand players on the tour, in my mind, are two of its oldest members—Julius Boros and Sam Snead. Both styles are smooth and easy and worth watching.

Most golfers seem to mysteriously develop strange new stances and swings when they walk into a bunker. Snead, however, uses the same arc and same fluid swing. He makes but a few minor adjustments to compensate for whatever position the ball is in.

Sam buries his feet in the sand with the traditional wiggle. This serves two purposes: first, to give him firm footing and, second, to feel the texture of the sand's immediate sub-surface. Sometimes the sand may appear loose, but less than one inch below the top layer it may be wet and hard.

Boros opens the blade of his sand wedge in order to slice under the ball and lift it out of the trap. Then he decides how far he wants to hit behind the ball and then concentrates on that spot.

Julius always tries to hit through. You've got to finish the swing in order to get the ball out of the trap.

Western doctor purifies water

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver physician has come up with a simple solution to the age-old problem of water that is not fit to drink.

Dr. Gordon W. Robertson described in an interview a purifying device that sterilizes polluted water and can be bought in a small household size for $199.

The device opens up the possibility of an economical supply of disease-free water for communities throughout the world that have no public water facilities.

A Vancouver plant is turning out 1,000 units a month and a wholly-owned subsidiary to be opened in San Francisco in November will have a capacity of 15,000 units a month.

A prime target for the San Francisco operation will be the Mississippi River flood basin, where more than half the communities are without public water facilities.

Dr. Robertson started thinking about a device to purify water about 10 years ago, when he was a member of a group of Vancouver citizens interested in problems of pollution.

DEVICES BRUSH ACTION

He knew that one method of purification involved exposing it to ultra-violet radiation.

He also knew that the method was not effective, because electrolytic action with the water formed a deposit on the radiant tube emitting ultra-violet rays. The deposit gradually clouded the tube and cut off the rays.

Dr. Robertson solved the problem by putting a simple hydraulic-action brush in the ultra-violet ray tube. As water comes into and goes out of the tube, it spins the brush up and down and keeps the tube from clouding.

Patent rights were granted in Canada in an unprecedented four months and the department of trade and commerce, sensing export market possibilities, helped out by giving a research grant of $125,000.

CHECKS RADIATION

Dr. Robertson went on to develop a second gadget to control radiation. A sensing device ensures that a trigger snaps off the entire supply if the radiation rises above the danger level.

The device is available in commercial sizes for up to $399. An under-the-sink unit is being developed for mobile homes. It will cost about $100.

The device cost the Vancouver group about $500,000 to the testing stage and the company promoting it, Acquacare International Ltd., sold 360,000 shares to the public at $3.25 last December.

Since then the stock has risen to $40, split 4-for-1 and settled down, in a falling market, to $8 or about 10 times the issue price.

BLUEPRINT IN HAND, Arline Ringer takes a check ride on a test facility she designed—a high-speed, five-mile circular track which can be used to test vehicles beyond the demands of normal usage. Mrs. Ringer, who holds a degree in mathematics, heads a group that analyzes auto accidents for ideas on safety improvements in addition to her work designing automobile test tracks for General Motors.

Child teacher's son blames riots, unrest on education

TORONTO (CP) — Education systems are to blame for turning campuses around the world into weed patches of rioting, says the son of a world-famous teacher of children.

Mario Montessori pins the blame on a neglect by the systems to teach one thing—human respect.

Mr. Montessori, an Italian whose mother—Maria—left him the job of carrying on her recognized method of free-movement education, says too much teaching of human rights and not enough on the duties of life is what has watered the roots of today's crisis.

Interviewed at nearby Thornhill during a visit to a 250-pupil Montessori school, one of "thousands" throughout the world, the congenial head of the Montessori schooling system revived his mother's warning that complete freedom gives birth to chaos.

On the other hand, Mr. Montessori objects to rigid school rules.

His mother, who died in 1952, never liked the idea herself. She worked against it after discovering during an examination of European school systems that classroom discipline—more like annihilation—had reduced children to "rows of butterflies transfixed with a pin."

Her son says if teachers did not throw obstacles in the way of pupils they could develop into spontaneously obedient, loving and non-violent people.

But the first place to start eliminating some of the barriers is at home—where the ambition of babies to climb stairs before being able to walk should not be thwarted purely for the purpose of safety.

Mr. Montessori says adults tend to stop the self-development of babies just to protect them, and that "all we really do is starve them, not protect them."

He says the Montessori non-profit education system in use in various parts of the world, has had more success with children than most other systems "because we give children the opportunity to develop into human beings."

Mr. Montessori, who has lived in Amsterdam since the end of the Second World War, is a father of four children. He also has 11 grandchildren.

Boston band, The Chain Gang grace the Eastern Townships

The Chain Gang is a rock and roll band from Boston that has graced the Eastern Townships for the past month. They are now playing the last week of a gig at the Rockcliffe Hotel. It's a pity they can't stay longer.

There are five boys in the band. All are good friends and the friendship shows in their playing. Bass player John Capron and lead guitarist Larry Power have been playing together since Boston prep school days and the Chain Gang itself has been in various stages of formation since 1963. Carl Paleschi plays a Rickenbacker twelve-string lead guitar for the band and has been doing so for a long time. Drummer Jack Brooks joined in 1966, before being captured by the Selective Service. He has only just recently regained his freedom.

Garry Earle is the latest addition. He had been playing organ, and some guitar and harmonica for other bands in the Boston area and met the Chain Gang in 1968.

Garry has possession of a 1935 Hammond organ, serial number 133, which he feeds through an ancient Lesley amplifier. The Hammond is a beautiful and near-extinct machine. Its sound fills the air with a richness and warmth missing in the mass-produced instruments built today.

The band is composed of a fine bunch of middle class boys. Until now their musical life was subjugated to the importance of getting an education, being financially secure, and the like. They have decided to stick it out this time. No more frustrated Septembers breaking up when they're just getting together. And the musical world is the better for their decision.

The Chain Gang's music has nearly universal appeal. They play to please people, not just for their own ego satisfaction. They play fast numbers, songs that you can't help but dance to, they play dreamy numbers that bring you close to your friends, and they play everything in between. They write a lot of their material and it reflects the universality of their influences. John Capron, who as spokesman for the band is quoted as saying he digs the Monkees, plays a very fine electric bass, something along the lines of Paul McCartney, very melodic and sustaining, and a telling foundation on which the other musical lines are built. Carl and Larry play lead and never seem to get in each other's way although their styles are very individual. Garry has a much tougher sound, searing line that cuts through the backing on a break. Carl's work is much more subtle, he moves in and around the melody without disturbing anything and yet when he stops you realize there is something important missing.

Organist Garry is difficult to categorize, if only because his Hammond needs more power and some of his notes get lost. He strikes me as having something of the hardened, alienated youth—who-digs-blues-and-Mick-Jagger in him, and the match with the mellow Hammond is a bit incongruous, but you'd never know from his playing.

And Jack puts down the beat. He is just out of the services and occasionally he will miss a beat, or rat one too many in, but his drumming is good and solid and captures the mood of the song.

The strongest part of the band lies in their vocal abilities. Everyone seems to do some singing and each has his own bag. Garry sings the most incredible James Brown on "Cold Sweat", and on a rock and roll medley. John has a massive voice, rich and full, that does more than justice to the slower numbers like "By The Time I Get to Phoenix". Garry is tough and lets you know on "Calvary is Coming." All fill out numbers with fine chorus lines which make such a difference to the power and volume of a song. Four lead singers can make any song appear sung by the Mormon Tabernacle or the Edwin Hawkins Singers.

The Chain Gang is a very professional outfit. They treat their onstage appearance from a business-like position. They always stand in the same places, and end their sets with the same theme from "atwave" and John always says "We'll be right back". They treat their music with a professional respect. A great number of their best songs are written by Larry, Carl and Garry, yet even this first hand relationship with their music is never going to blow the reserve they exhibit. They generate excitement and can electrify an audience but they're never going to start a revolution.

This professionalism was a little heavy going at first. It is so easy to equate expertise with establishment values. And the Chain Gang are a commercial band. What has been taught me by the experience of their music is that there is commercialism and commercialism. The Chain Gang plays music for the people. They play only what they would be proud to play and they play it well. Their structure is very comforting, and anyway they do some dynamite dance numbers.

The band is playing at the Rockcliffe until and including this Sunday. They then go to St. Jean where they will be enconced for an indefinite length of time. If you can get a chance to see them please try and make it. They can make you feel good.

Opportunity grows in the theatre arts

The overcrowding which has existed in the acting field for many years is expected to persist in the future.

Because of the development of television, radio and motion pictures, employment opportunities for actors in the theaters has been reduced greatly, although the recent growth of summer stock companies has somewhat increased employment during the summer months.

One possibility for future growth in the legitimate theater lies in the establishment of year-round professional acting companies in more cities. In the acting field as a whole, however, employment opportunities are expected to change little through the 1970s.

Since an actor learns mostly through practice, young people aspiring to acting careers should get as much acting experience as possible by taking part in high school and college plays or working with little theaters and other acting groups in their home towns.

Formal training in acting may also be helpful. Such training can be obtained at special schools of the dramatic arts. The dramatic arts are also taught in about 500 colleges and universities.

Outstanding talent for acting and great interest and determination are essential for success in the theater. Ability to memorize a good speaking voice, good health and the physical stamina to work long hours are necessary. Ability to sing and dance is also an asset for those who seek an acting career.

In all media, whether the stage, motion pictures, radio or television, the best way to start is to make use of local opportunities and to build on the basis of such experience.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics is presently engaged in updating income figures, but in mid-1967 the minimum weekly salary for actors in Broadway productions was $130. Those in off-Broadway productions had considerably lower earnings. For shows on the road, the minimum rate was $167.50 a week. Motion picture actors and actresses had a minimum daily rate of about $100 in 1967. For extras, the minimum was about $30 a day. On network television, the minimum was $165 for a single half-hour program and 10 hours of rehearsal time. On radio, actors and actresses receive $49.60 for a half-hour performance, including one rehearsal hour.

Young people considering the performing arts as a career are urged to consult with school counselors.

SURE FOOTED as a WILDCAT

PREMIUM QUALITY NYLON TURNPIKE SAFETY '4'

Safety '4' Wildcat has a lot going for it. Much more than you'd expect to find in medium-priced nylons. Where else would you get the tenacious grip of a great cat, the racy look of a Grand Prix tire? Yet that continental look runs more than skin-deep. Built to set your car closer to the road, Safety '4' has the high-speed stability and easy handling that take highway problems in stride. Like a Wildcat, it has the instinct for swifter stops, faster take-offs. Its inner strength and stamina spring from a Dupont Nylon 4-ply cord body that measures up to the toughest road tests. A great tire—a great value! And it's not alone. If long mileage is on your mind, take a look at its running-mate—Turnpike '78' Nylon. This one has the low, wide proportions of tires you'll soon be seeing on the new 1970 high-performance cars. And this is a Whitewall at only $2.50 more than the regular Safety '4' Blackwall.

Couple are surprised guests

STANSTEAD — Edward Hyatt, of Stanstead, Grand Patriarch of the Grand Encampment of Quebec, IOOF, was on Saturday evening, July 26 the surprised guest of honor at a reception which was held in the IOOF hall in Rock Island. He and Mrs. Hyatt had been invited to attend a dance in Birchton.

Arriving at the hall with Lawrence Dewey, Noble Grand of Tomifobia Lodge, Rock Island, and Mrs. Dewey, Mr. Hyatt was greeted by about 100 men and women of the Old Fellow and Rebekah Fraternity, relatives and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Hyatt's daughters, Mrs. Alfred (Thelma) Middleton and Miss Joyce Hyatt presented their parents also Harold Lockwood, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Quebec IOOF, and Mrs. Lockwood with corsages of roses and boutonnières of carnation. The foursome were afterwards escorted by Mr. and Mrs. Dewey to four chairs reserved for them in the hall.

Thornton Cleveland, Deputy Grand Master, was emcee for the program prepared by Mr. and Mrs. Dewey. Rev. R. W. Peirce opened with prayer. A sing song, with Mrs. Alfred Middleton, at the piano took place and the program terminated with singing.

Two readings were given by Mrs. George Hatch. The introduction of Mr. and Mrs. Hyatt, Mr. and Mrs. Lockwood, by Mr. Cleveland was followed by Mr. Cleveland reading an article on "What does the Work of the Order do?"

Kathie Wright played a flute classical selection. Wendy Stuart, from Sherbrooke, wearing Scotch kilts played bagpipe and presented a march demonstration with the music.

Mr. Lockwood, G. M., in his remarks said "it is our intention to have more of these social gatherings during the year", he wished Mr. Hyatt a very successful and happy year ahead of him.

Mr. Hyatt, said it is a pleasure to see so many here and especially his mother, Mrs. Charlie Hyatt from Lennoxville. "We have a full year ahead, harmony is our theme", he noted.

He mentioned the IOOF Home for senior members of the Fraternity in West Brome as one of the major projects and said a group meeting is planned to be held at the Home on August 10 at 2:30 p.m.

Speaking of the work of the Order, he said, "we are pledged to do good to others, to assist the widows and orphans. The three link emblem of the IOOF means unity in three parts, Friendship - Love - Truth," he made reference to what each of these words stand for, and with a note of humor said "after tonight I'm not sure about truth!"

"There is great reward to oneself in doing the aims established by the Odd Fellows and Rebekahs".

He thanked everyone for the wonderful evening and all who had contributed to it.

Mr. Longeway from the Edith Kathan Home in West Brome spoke on behalf of the people present and unable to come from the Home. "The Home has been a God sent to me in my golden age" were Mr. Longeway's closing remarks.

The program continued with Randy Dewey and his cousin, Miss Jeri Dewey as Country Cousins presenting a delightful contribution. Randy, in overalls and straw hat, Jeri in Daisy Mae costume. Jeri played (the player piano, they sang and joked and concluded with Randy playing his banjo and both singing a duet.

The Scotch Lassie, Wendy Stuart presented a second number. Elton Bennett, a Past Grand Patriarch, Grand Encampment of Vermont, brought greetings from the Vermont Lodges and made reference to this year as the 150th anniversary of Odd Fellow which will be observed by events and programs both sides of the Boundary.

Frank Hansford, N. B. Coaticook, presented Mr. Middleton with a gift from Harmony Encampment. Mr. Hyatt voiced his appreciation.

Buffet refreshments were served by Mr. and Mrs. Dewey, assisted by Henry Brock, Senior Warden, Grand Encampment of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, IOOF, and Mrs. Brock, and others.

Miss Joyce Hyatt was in charge of the guest book, afterwards presented to Mr. Hyatt by Mr. Dewey. Guests included Mrs. Gwen True, District Deputy president, Rebekah Assembly, Richard Middleton, Sr., Immediate Past Grand Patriarch and Mrs. Middleton, and members of the Fraternity and guests from Compton, Lennoxville, Sherbrooke, Derby, Vt., Sutton, Hatley, Ayer's Cliff, Coaticook, Dixville, Montreal, Drummondville, Granby, Richmond and the Boundary Villages.

The hall was attractive with summer garden flower arrangements blending with the many IOOF emblems and so forth.

Church buys the youth center

THREE VILLAGES — (Special) — In the presence of members of the Stanstead South church, Rock Island, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Beane and J. M. Thomson, the latter representing the Youth Center, a cheque for $5,000 was turned over to Mr. and Mrs. Beane by the church treasurer, Lloyd Selby and the pastor, Rev. G. Joyce, who is also Director of the Center, at a gathering held in the banking rooms of the National Bank in Derby Line. For the past two season the Center has been leased by Mr. Beane to Mr. Joyce for youth. Several renovations have been made and it has been a place for teenagers to have fun, dance, play games and so forth. Sections are also separate for Senior groups.

The United church Presbytery gave its support to the project and a sum of $2,500 was authorized on loan from the Home Mission. A lady who wishes to remain anonymous has offered a thousand dollars to have the building painted, she says she will welcome anyone who will match this dollar for dollar.

When the Center opens this fall there will be little change other than it is now owned by the church for community use, the directors hoped for increased teenagers, also for senior citizens to make it theirs, a group are interested in square dancing, in fact it is available for all age group and various forms of entertainment.

Lady playwright is socking it to them Winnipeg transients cause mixed feelings

By ROGER DOUGHTY
NEA Staff Correspondent

Rochelle Owens
"Maybe there's hope for me in 400 years."

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Mrs. George Economou and Shakespeare have something in common. At least, that's the way Mrs. Economou sees it. "If the Bard were alive today," she says, flashing a sardonic smile, "we'd probably be good friends. He'd be writing for the so-called 'new theater,' just like me."

Mrs. Economou, it should be noted, is not some dowdy housewife from the Bronx with a fondness for Avon's leading literary light. She's better known as Rochelle Owens, super underground lady playwright. She has also been called The High Priestess of Shock and a lot of other things that can't be printed, at least in this paper.

In the opinion of Miss Owens, Shakespeare is "bawdy, sexy and dirty," all of which she in turn has been labeled by one critic or another during the last few years. She has also been called brilliant and a host of other adjectives by many of those who have seen her plays, which include "Beelch," "Futz" and "He Wants Shih."

Rochelle's writings have been especially well-received by college audiences, which seem more willing than the off-campus variety to accept her kind of thing. All of which is quite understandable to Rochelle, who spends plenty of time on campus since she's the wife of a professor of medieval literature at Long Island University.

With "Beelch" currently running off Broadway, "Futz" being made into a movie by director Tom O'Horgan (he's the man who teased "Hair" into a hit), "He Wants Shih" being considered for a run in New York and many of her plays being presented by local theater groups around the country, Miss Owens is very hard to ignore, whether you like her style or not.

"My plays," the author explains, "are wrapped in metaphoric symbolism. You can't just take them straight. If you do, 'Futz' comes out being a drama about a guy who falls in love with a pig. When the show was running here a lot of people wandered into the theater expecting to see somebody kissing a pig. It served them right."

Getting back to Shakespeare, Miss Owens, who has done some digging on the subject, says, "The reviewers of his day said his stuff was filthy and useless, but it stood the test of time. Today most people have an inauthentic reverence for the old masters. Maybe there's hope for me in 400 years."

While she's waiting, Miss Owens hopes to see Broadway crumble. "Broadway has had it," she claims. "It represented the theater of lies and it's gasping its last breath."

But Broadway is not alone when it comes to getting a rap from Rochelle. She also doesn't dig movies or television. "There are a few good TV shows," she admits, "but you have to look hard to find them. Personally, I like Bullwinkle Moose and Rocky the Flying Squirrel, although I do feel that Rocky deserves better billing."

Miss Owens' knock on the forms of entertainment as we know them today is that all offer, or so she feels, "nothing more than titillation in the most perverse and dishonest manner. I get sick of the sly winking and the solicitousness."

If there's one thing Miss Owens plays don't have, it's sly winking. She tells it like she thinks it is and with gusto. Too much gusto for a lot of people.

"I get letters complaining about the terrible things I'm doing to my poor, innocent audiences," she says, "and they make me laugh. I'm out to slaughter the theater of lies with my art, with immense virtue. People do get hurt when they're caught in the middle of a slaughter."

Despite her rugged outlook on life, Miss Owens has her soft spots, too. It didn't bother her when one reviewer claimed that symbolism had to be used in "Futz" because the director couldn't find a pig willing to play the part. "Not a bad line," she admits, "but some of the nastier things written about 'Futz' and now 'Beelch' have been known to get her down."

"When I get mad," she claims, "I throw chunks of rock candy against the wall. I have the stuff all over my apartment. Sometimes the whole place is granulated."

When it comes to commenting on other playwrights of the new theater, Miss Owens is unusually still.

"I'd rather not discuss them while they're still alive," she says. "She really means that in a nice way. But, like every other else Mrs. George Economou says or writes, it has to be taken with a large dose of metaphoric symbolism."

Winnipeg transients cause mixed feelings

Winnipeg (CP) — feelings generated by the influx of young transients to Winnipeg and revived a controversy over whether to encourage them or try to keep them out of the city.

Every Canadian city knows the phenomenon of youth on the move in summer. In jeans, army jackets, ponchos and carrying knapsacks slung over their shoulders, they are just "passing through."

Two years ago young people, many of them from out of town, erupted in a demonstration in Memorial Park, in front of the legislature in central Winnipeg.

It was a balmy evening and some youngsters jumped into the park fountain. Garbage cans were overturned, traffic was briefly snarled, a window or two was broken. There was more noise than violence.

The endeavor to find a solution to the problem of transients is being led by the Committee Representing Youth Problems Today, an organization which grew out of the confusion and bad youth problems, said in a brief to the health committee that civic authorities must "call a halt to this rape of our country by irresponsible youth."

Under their prodding the council committee decided not to grant a permit for a hostel in the church. The members also turned down a C.R.Y.P.T. proposal for a hostel in a school scheduled for demolition.

City Health Officer Dr. Roper Cadham said in a report to the committee: "These transient youths, commonly referred to as hippies, by their very way of life present a core for the possible spread of infection of our citizens."

Despite these setbacks, a C.R.Y.P.T. spokesman said he expected a hostel will be established before the summer ends.

BIG BUSINESS
An estimated average of $115 is spent annually on each of the 26,000,000 canine pets in the United States—a total of about $3,000,000,000.

DO-IT-YOURSELF

A BRICK HOUSE NEEDS PERIODIC CARE, TOO

By MR. FIX

Mortar can become loose in brick steps, too. But this presents another problem since the constant weight on the steps may loosen bricks. A loose brick also will crack easily.

If wear is slight, just patch as you would for a wall. But bricks that are starting to crack or wobble should be attended to differently.

First, break away the mortar so that you can remove the brick. Then clean out the rest of the mortar and whatever hardened mortar is on the brick. Set the brick to soak in a bucket of water. Cover the brick, except for the face that will show, with mortar and set it back in place carefully. Finish filling the joints with mortar.

Allow the replaced bricks to stand for a time, then smooth the mortar. Wet thoroughly and continue to do so for several days. Avoid using the steps, at least in the area of repair, until the new work is thoroughly set.

Danes wary of mineral wealth

COPENHAGEN (Reuters) — Danish officials are wary of making quick decisions about prospecting and oil inspection rights in Greenland despite requests by a growing number of international companies.

The huge Arctic island, a Danish province with a population of about 40,000, is believed to be rich in mineral resources both on its mainland and its continental shelf.

Greenland's geological structure is similar to that of Arctic Canada where big oil and gas finds have been made.

So far, 10 companies have been granted prospecting concessions on the mainland. With the exception of two Danish companies and the Danish Atomic Energy Commission, all are Canadian or backed by Canadian capital.

Denmark has not yet granted any extraction rights to foreign companies.

"This oil situation is very new to us and we have no experience with mining in Denmark," an official of the ministry for Greenland said. "We must spend at least a year looking into things in other countries to see how they handle the problem."

"We are afraid—to put it frankly—of being taken for a ride by the prospecting companies who have much more experience in the matter than we do."

Signs for mineral discoveries in Greenland are promising. A report published by the Greenland Geological Institute described the prospects as "very encouraging."

FIND URANIUM

While oil is the main attraction for the international companies, a big search for other minerals is going on. The Danish Atomic Energy Commission has discovered about 24,000 tons of uranium ore and plans to start extracting it in about six years.

A Canadian company, Grenex Ltd., has discovered "very considerable quantities" of lead and zinc, the ministry official said. But he declined to specify how much.

Other minerals known to exist in Greenland are zirconium, a rare metal used in the fuel elements of atomic reactors, and copper and chromium.

The law fixes a basic criterion by which the Danish state receives a 50-per-cent royalty on the net profits from utilization of deposits, but this still leaves the Greenland ministry with the problem of defining net profits.

Main interest from the oil companies is centred on the continental shelf off west Greenland. "Personally I believe this is where the prospects are best," said the official.

French, Italian, British and American firms have applied for prospecting concessions.

Moose Jaw parents check into retarded adult care

MOOSE JAW, Sask. (CP) — When a retarded child has lived at home all his life, what happens to him after his parents die?

Concerned parents in the Moose Jaw area are looking for an answer with representatives of the Association for Mentally Retarded Children, the Saskatchewan Training School and the school auxiliary.

"What is the point of a family keeping the child at home and making the adjustments for a nearly normal life when there's nothing in the end but an institution?" says Mrs. H. R. Lane, head of the association in Moose Jaw.

Even if an institution were the ideal solution, they have formidable waiting lists.

The group sent out questionnaires to families with retarded children and found their major concern was a place for the child and his support in later years.

The answer as the group sees it is a community home for retarded persons over 18 who have no one to care for them. Such a home, with room for 12 permanent and three temporary residents and house parents, would provide an atmosphere much like that of a private home.

Similar ventures in Saskatoon, Victoria and various Ontario communities have proved successful.

Mrs. Lane said the size of the proposed home is dependent on the number of people willing to support it and the amount of money available from provincial and municipal governments.

To be eligible, the group decided, a person must be able to care for himself basically and be free of any severe emotional problems.

Such a house would be large enough to cope with three temporary residents who might come in for a day or a week if their parents went out of town or if there was illness in the family. As well it could serve as living quarters for other young people, perhaps employed at the sheltered workshop, to drop in for lunch or to spend the afternoon watching television.

"We want it to be as close to home as possible in environment with a house mother and father," she said.

The response from parents has been overwhelmingly favorable.

Mother, daughter make model team

TORONTO (CP) — Keeping abreast of the times is the key to success in modelling, says a 38-year-old Toronto model who shares her profession with her 19-year-old daughter.

"Don't stand still and say 'I like it the old way,'" advises Jean Williams, in private life a housewife and mother of two. "You've got to keep trying new styles and hairdos. Be flexible. Change with the times."

She says that when she "first saw the ugly clunky shoes, I thought I would never wear them. They looked so cumbersome. I changed my mind about them, though, and was one of the first to wear them."

Mrs. Williams and her daughter Wendy will model fashions at this year's Canadian National Exhibition opening in mid-August.

"We've modelled together in fashion shows before," says Mrs. Williams. "The difference is that I've been modelling for 23 years and Wendy started a year ago."

"I started modelling when I was 15, married at 17 and had my first child at 19. I don't feel hesitant about mentioning the fact that I'll be 39 in January."

"The way I feel is that if you think young, you feel young. A healthy body and attitude of mind reflect in your face."

Wendy says growing up and seeing her mother modelling on stage made her decide to be a model. "It was always so exciting seeing my mother up there and I grew up wanting to be a model."

"I love having a fresh hairdo, getting made up and then wearing all those lovely clothes in front of an audience," says Wendy.

How does her mother feel about Wendy entering the same profession?

"I'm proud of her, naturally. She hasn't had any training and I've never had to show her how to put eyeliner or make-up on. She watched me and applied the same techniques."

Brown-haired, green-eyed Mrs. Williams, who stands five foot 6 1/2 inches and measures 34-24 1/2-34 1/2, earns up to $35 an hour as a model. Her brownhaired, blue-eyed daughter, who is five foot eight with 34-23-35 statistics, earns $20 an hour.

Mrs. Williams advises that "to be a highly successful professional model, one must have ambition." A girl must also be aggressive, a bit of an exhibitionist and have a little acting ability, she says.

"A very shy reticent girl could never make it in modelling."

SEARCHING THE SHORE for enemy snipers, a patrol boat is silhouetted in South Vietnam. One of the many responsibilities of Navy river boats is to provide protection for the unarmed ships of the Military Sea Transportation Service which use the narrow Mekong Delta waterways to deliver supplies.

A BIG JOB FOR A LITTLE GIRL. Using a pole which probably is four times her height, a small Vietnamese girl helps propel four soldiers across a river near Can Tho. South Vietnamese troops usually borrow the sampans or pay civilians to get them across the streams and canals in the Delta area.

Fenian raid is to be remembered in 1970

BEDFORD — A meeting was held July 24 in the town house to discuss arrangements for the holding of the Eccles Hill Centennial in 1970, to commemorate the Fenian Raid. It was at Eccles Hill just across the Vermont border in Canada when the militia and the Red Sashes, as the farmer volunteers were called, united with the militia in the battle, which resulted in the defeat of the Fenians. It was only one of the spodic raids made by the Fenians at various points along the Canadian border, following the American Civil War, and was second in this district. About 60 years ago a monument was erected at Eccles Hill.

Members of both the Brome County Historical Society and the Missisquoi County Historical Society were present, the meeting being chaired by William Taylor, president of the latter society, the celebration will be a combined effort of the two societies. Special invitations will be sent to the descendants of those men, who took part in the battle. The Franklin County Historical Society will also take part in the celebration, as it was through Vermont that the Fenians came.

Tentative dates were discussed for the celebration, the actual battle took place on May 27, 1870, among dates suggested were June 27 also July 5 but consultation will be made with the Franklin County Historical Society.

Glen Brown MLA for Brome has been most active in furthering the project, a grant will be forthcoming from the Federal government, while the CBC has been contacted in regard to giving the celebration coverage.

At the community school in Cowansville, the Brome County Historical Society and the Missisquoi County Historical Society will present lectures on the Past, Present and Future of the Eastern Townships, there will be three lectures dealing with the different aspects. The Misses Lila Primmerman and Marion Phelps are in charge of the arrangements and obtaining speakers.

Committees from the two societies will be appointed at a future date to look after the arrangements in connection with the Centennial.

Life gone out of Britain's spas

BATH (AP) — The sparkle is going out of Britain's spas—once playgrounds for the rich and rheumatic but now nearly out of date as the hoop skirt.

With the valves closed on the 88 mineral springs at Harrogate, there remain only five of the scores of posh watering places where Britons danced and drank their way to health for nearly four centuries.

Two of these may shut down in the next few years.

The likeliest to survive is Bath, the most celebrated British spa, where thousands of patients still slip into steaming, green pools enjoyed by Roman Legions 1,900 years ago.

Spas can't make money in devalued Britain. Modern hospitals are taking over their medical services and young vacationers prefer the seaside to salt springs. Worse still, British spas are losing the government subsidies that keep spa proprietors abroad too busy to dream of the turn-of-the-century days when the sick lists read like rosters of European royalty.

In West Germany, where workers can get the government to pay for a three-week cure costing up to $250, spas drew 3,800,000 visitors in 1967, 58 per cent more than a decade earlier.

COSTS PAID

Belgium's three spas, on a rising attendance curve since the Second World War, gave 256,000 treatments last year nearly all treatment costs—up to $4 a day.

Attendance at spas in France is down—fewer than 350,000 last year compared with 450,000 in 1966 but still near the level of 1957, when the government began paying for cures. The French have begun an advertising campaign to regain clients lost to more modern centres in Germany and Italy.

Most of the more than 1,000,000 treatments given annually at the dozens of spas in Italy are financed by workers' insurance plans.

British spas—the name comes from the famous Belgian resort—sprang up in the 16th century around wells whose waters had unusual qualities. At Bath, they come up hot—250,000 gallons a day at 120 degrees. Droitwich's water is said to be saltier than the Dead Sea. The bitter substance discovered at Epsom became known as Epsom salts.

Physicians found that the often sulphurous waters were good laxatives and set patients to drinking up to 10 quarts a day. Lords and ladies who came down with arthritis in their cold castles learned that bathing in hot springs eased the pain, although not everyone enjoyed the treatment.

CURES MANY ILLS

Spa waters gained a reputation for drying out the brain, killing worms removing fat, increasing sexual desire and promoting fertility, although the babies who appeared probably resulted more from social customs at the rolling resorts. One establishment at Hempstead kept a minister on duty around the clock for on-the-spot marriages.

Spas soon became centres of society outside the royal court in London. Customary diversions included dancing, gambling, flirting and lawn bowling.

Spas took on features that the elegant deemed essential to taking the cure—elaborate gardens for strolling and a "long room" for serving tea.

The spas' peak popularity lasted through the 18th century. A hundred years later, tastes had changed and the 60 or so that remained largely were respectable rest homes for the aged. Then came modern hydrotherapy—arrays of steam baths, whirlpool tubs and mud packs.

PIONEERED IN CLEANING

Stockholm, in Sweden, had its first municipal cleaning department in 1861.

Foster social notes

Miss Sandra Inglis is spending a pleasant holiday in Hawaii.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Allen, Montreal, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Allen, Two Mountains, and Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Allen, Granby, were guests at the Allen Johnson home.

Misses Karol and Karen Morrisette, Lennoxville, are guests of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Claude Whitcher.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Marshall, Melbourne Ridge, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Strange.

Mrs. M. C. Martin and Mrs. E. Martin, South Stukely, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Mizener.

Friends are pleased to see Mr. Lester Mizener out again after his recent surgery in the Sherbrooke Hospital.

Mrs. Albert Young, Stanstead, was a recent guest of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Taylor.

Mrs. E. MacIver has returned to her home in Belmont, Mass., after visiting her sister, Mrs. A. C. Carter and Mr. Carter. While here Mrs. Carter and Mrs. MacIver were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Marsh, Waterloo.

Mr. Horace Taylor, Winnipeg, Man., has returned to his home after visiting his nephew, Mr. Clifford Taylor and Mrs. Taylor. While here they visited Mr.

Taylor's brother, Mr. Howard Taylor, Magog. Mr. and Mrs. John Taylor, Austin, his sister-in-law, Mrs. W. R. Durrell, Granby and niece, Mrs. Graham Bockus and Mr. Bockus.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wright of Fort William, Ont., are here visiting their brother, Mr. Gerald Wright and Mrs. Wright and also their mother, who is a patient of the Waterloo hospital.

Mr. Irving Snodgrass was calling on Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Williams on his return from Conway, N.H., where he was a guest of his sister, Mrs. Stanley Woolley and Mr. Woolley, and brother, Mr. Arthur Snodgrass.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Inglis have returned from a motor trip to the Canadian West, where they spent some time the guests of Mrs. Inglis' brother, Mr. Chauncey Hamilton and family. Miss Jean McIver, Boston, Mass., is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. A. C. Carter and Mr. Carter.

It was with great satisfaction the citizens here noted the long needed work being done at the Gables Corner. It has been a hazardous place for many years, and several serious accidents have occurred here. The corner is being cut down and widened so that motorists coming off the Brome Lake Road and turning onto the Waterloo-Bondville road can see if cars are approaching, instead of the blind corner it has always been.

A successful food sale and sale of work was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Baxter Williams on July 25. Mrs. Lionel Allen and Mrs. Stuart McLean were in charge of the food table, assisted by members, while Mrs. Hugh Strange and Mrs. M. B. Williams had charge of the work, assisted by Mrs. Thibault.

Knowlton

The Rev and Mrs. Alfred Smith were vacationing in Peterborough, Ont., when they received word of the death of Mrs. Smith's uncle, Mr. Donald Champoux. They were not able to attend the funeral which was held in Magog.

Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Hessie and son, David, Farnham, also The Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Smith, all of Montreal were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Lemaire.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hamilton, Brome, Mr. and Mrs. John Morson, Montreal, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Morson, and grandson Larry, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Blake, Ayer's Cliff.

First ET settlers remembered

Homage was paid to the early settlers of the Eastern Townships by concerned historians last Sunday afternoon. Visitors gathered at Christ Anglican Church, Canterbury, before proceeding to visit the cemeteries of the pioneers. Christ Anglican Church is the only remaining of three churches built by the British American Land Company in an endeavor to encourage settlers in this area.

After a fine afternoon spent visiting the cemeteries, which included Gould-Lingwick, Tolsta, Scotstown, Riverview and Echo Vale, history lovers met at the Winslow cemetery at Stornoway Hill for a picnic supper. This was followed by a service conducted by the Rev. Donald Gillies who is presently in charge of the Lake Megantic-Milan and Scotstown Presbyterian churches. Mr. Gillies paid tribute to the faith in their God which stood the brave settlers' so well in the early years of hardship.

The day's activities closed with the hope that a long-term committee might be set up whose function would be to study ways and means of preserving the pioneer cemeteries in the Eastern Townships.

In an age which sees progress upsetting one after the other of the traditional institutions, we now and then ask ourselves with a certain anxiety: "What will be left in a few years as enduring reminders of the generations which have preceded us?" The old dwellings which were built about ninety years ago have been torn down, or are falling down in ruins. Neglect respects nothing, not even the humble cemeteries where rest many of the pioneers of the region. The fences, in many places, have fallen, weeds have overrun the grounds, trees have forced their roots under the tombstones. In certain places, the exact location of the cemeteries is traceable only through the help of older people who have cleared the land and have faithful memories of those years.

Within a radius of about twenty miles of Lac Megantic there are at least half a dozen of these cemeteries whose existence is evident only through our memory of someone buried there, or of a few tumbled down monuments.

In these cemeteries are to be found the remains of the pioneers — English, Scottish, French, Swiss, Belgian, for the most part.

On the third range of St. Jean Vianney there are buried some twenty-five persons originating in Alsace-Lorraine, who settled there about 1879. These people belonged to the following families — Chaplain (also written Chapelain), Bedoiseaux, Mertrude, Bouchard and Danze (also Dansez). After the Franco-Prussian War in 1870, they fled the yoke of the Germans to emigrate to America. Then they followed the progress of the railroad, the International Railroad at that time, as far as Lac Megantic, and from there to the land that they would settle.

A cross has been erected at the spot where this cemetery and a Presbyterian Church had been built. This mission was served regularly by a minister from Sherbrooke, Mr. Cruchon. In this region are also found two family cemeteries; these are well taken care of, but difficult to get to. They are near Spider Lake and hold the remains of the Boyle, Braddock and Paxton families. It would seem that these locations were chosen because of the distance from the cemeteries of the community, especially in Winter. The Megantic Manufacturing Company is presently taking care of these cemeteries. In Milan, a few miles from the village, along a road which is travelled only by hunters and lovers looking for privacy, can be found Gisla Cemetery, where rest the remains of Donald Morrison, the celebrated Megantic Outlaw, who died in 1894 after having been condemned to prison for the murder of Lucien "Jack" Warren, an American hired killer engaged to arrest him, after a dispute over the purchase of some land. The affair caused a lot of excitement at the time, and the memory of Donald Morrison is still deeprooted and respected by the English people of the region.

Other abandoned cemeteries are to be found in the area of Dell, part way between Milan, Scotstown and Stornoway. Between Nantes and Stornoway, a few years ago when building route 34 where it now runs, it was necessary to dig up several bodies. A number of monuments recall the memory of the Scottish settlers who settled in this part in 1875.

If Echo Vale, Mount Pleasant, in the 4th. range of St. Jean Vianney, and the cemetery at Lake MacKenzie, are well taken care of, others, in contrast, are really abandoned. Why does not some organization, whatever it may be, put pressure on the Commission of Historic Monuments, for example, that these places be declared historical sites and be treated as such. A fence, a hedge, a plaque showing the names of the people buried, a little care and some grass. It would not cost much and would safeguard these sites whose memory will be lost if nothing is done to keep it alive.

The pioneers of the region well deserve this posthumous homage — those who toiled on their rocky land to make of Lac Megantic and its surroundings a place for people to live.

Sherbrookers train at Valcartier camp

Some 60 military personnel, including seven doctors, belonging to Medical Reserve Units from the Province of Quebec and the Maritimes are undergoing training this week on the grounds of "Dube" Instruction Camp in CFB Valcartier, near Quebec City. The majority of these medical personnel come from 8th Medical Coy (Sherbrooke), commanded by L. Col. C. J. S. Papageorges, 2nd Medical Coy (Halifax), commanded by L. Col. W. A. McJannett, and 6th Medical Coy (Sidney, N.S.), commanded by L. Col. R. Matheson.

The personnel from 2nd Field Ambulance, a regular unit, is acting as instructors during the week long manoeuvres. Amongst the doctors from the Sherbrooke area taking part in these exercises, are L. Col. Papageorges, a specialist in physiatry, and Major Paul Lachance, a specialist in nuclear medicine and an expert in this field attached to the International Atomic Energy Agency

Richmond

Activity director, Mrs. K. Patrick, has been off duty for some time, due to an accident in which she fractured several bones in her foot. Mrs. Patrick expects to resume duties shortly.

Due to the construction and renovations being carried out at the Home, it has been decided not to have the Annual Reception Day. The Home is sorry to have to disappoint residents and friends, who looked forward to the annual event.

Mrs. A. Peterson, formerly of Waterville, has been admitted to the infirmary.

Mrs. John Day has left for a short holiday at Brockville, Ont., where she will be visiting her son, Mr. Wilton Day and Mrs. Day.

Miss C. Carriere, of the nursing staff, has resumed duty, after having been away, due to an injury to her hand.

Miss K. Christie, of the nursing staff is holidaying at Lake Massawippi.

Mrs. Mabel Morrill, formerly of Richmond, has been admitted to the infirmary.

A gala occasion took place recently for 30 of the ladies at the Home who were invited by Mrs. John Stokoe and the U.C.W. of Ulverton, for a tea held at the Ulverton Church basement. The event first took place when Rev. and Mrs. Stokoe were residents at the Ulverton Manse, and has taken place each summer when Mrs. Stokoe returns for a visit. It includes a drive, a visit, and tea, mid-pleasant company, and certainly makes a day the ladies will long remember.

Thanks are due to Mrs. Stokoe and the Ulverton U.C.W.

Danville

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Johnson have returned to Ulysses, Pa., after spending their holidays with Mr. Johnson's brother, the Rev. J. A. Johnson, and Mrs. Johnson. Weekend guests at the manse were the Rev. Floyd Powers and Mrs. Powers, who are on furlough from Japan. Mr. Powers was the guest speaker at the Advent Christian Church at both of the services on Sunday, showing slides at the evening service in regards to their work as missionaries in Japan. On Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Kiser arrived here from St. Cloud, Fla., to visit Mrs. Kiser's brother and sister-in-law. Presently Rev. and Mrs. Johnson are at Camp Bethel, Beebe, where Mr. Johnson is in charge of the Book Store and Mrs. Johnson will assist in many ways at the Camp. From there Mrs. Johnson will journey to Haddam, Conn., to attend still another camp. The latter part of the month Mrs. Johnson will attend the Eastern Regional Women's Home and Foreign Mission Convention at Alton Bay, N.H., as a delegate from this area. The conference will have charge of the decorations and favors for the banquet which will be held there. During Mr. Johnson's absence the services will be taken by the Rev. Phyllis Adams, who is here on holidays and by Mr. Philip Reynard, student of Berkshire College, also on vacation with his parents.
