SELF-HEATING IRONS.

PATENTED, QUEBEC, AUGUST, 1852.

FOR SALE BY THE SUBSCRIBERS.

LADIES are invited to call and examine the IRONS. Those who have tried them acknowledge their superiority over every other description of Smoothing Iron, for all laundry purposes.

The large amount of fuel consumed in heating the common Iron causes an uncomfortable heat, and an extravagant expense, both of which are avoided by using the SELF-HEATING IRON.

With this Iron, three bushels of charcoal are sufficient to do the ironing of a common family twelve months. Once filled, you can use the Iron five hours without replenishing. While using it you do not require to suffer the annoyance of a heated stove or fire place. You need not labour so hard pressing with it as you do with the common iron. The Irons being finely finished, they are easily kept bright and clean, and cannot possibly soil the finest linen.

Manufactured in Canada East only at the Montreal Foundry and City Works.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Monday, May 23.

Mr. Chabot stated in answer to Mr. Robinson, that the government did not intend to propose during the present session any measure for the construction of the Sault Ste. Marie Canal.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson the report of the committee of the whole on the Bill to incorporate Prince Edward Railway Company was received.

Also, on motion of Mr. Richards, the report of committee of the whole, on payment of Judges, &c., in unorganized tracts of country. Also, the report of committee of whole on salaries of county Judges, Upper Canada.

The following bills were read the third time on motion of Mr. Richards:—

To facilitate duties of Justices with respect to Indictable Offences.

To facilitate duties of Justices with respect to Summary Convictions.

To protect Justices from vexatious actions.

On motion of Mr. Sanborn the bill to amend the law relative to patents was read the second time.

On motion of the Hon. Dr. Laterriere the House went into committee on the bill to amend the law relating to practice of Physic and Surgery in Lower Canada.

The hon. member spoke at some length in support of his bill but in a tone of voice that did not reach the gallery.

Mr. Robinson opposed the bill. He did not think it necessary.

Mr. Rose agreed with the hon. member (Mr. Robinson) but he opposed this bill with much reluctance as he believed the hon. member (Dr. Laterriere) had set his heart upon it. He (Mr. Rose) was in favor of free trade in medicine, and held that the people were the best judges of whom they should employ. While, however, he held that opinion, he believed a medical man ought to have a liberal education.

Mr. Gamble opposed the bill with reluctance, not however because he believed in free trade in medicine, but because he did not think it necessary to make the holders of certain diplomas to pass another examination. He mentioned the injurious effects of ignorant quacks practising medicine in his district, and contended that the public ought to be protected from such impostors.

Dr. Valois supported the bill, contending it was the only remedy to protect the country from quacks and impostors. He thought the hon. member (Mr. Rose) had very little regard for the lives of his constituents when he advocated free trade in medicine.

Mr. Dixon opposed the bill, but reprobated the doctrine of free trade in medicine.

Mr. McDonald was not distinctly audible, but was understood to speak against the bill, and to say, that he was supported in his view of the case by several distinguished members of the medical profession in Canada. He also read from various authorities in support of his view. Abuses had not occured under the present law, and that made him (Mr. McD.) think the object of the bill was not the protection of the public, but a crusade against a Canadian institution. He concluded by moving in amendment, that the committee rise.

Mr. Brown opposed the bill. He held that no case had been made out in support of it, and before such a bill was passed a clear case ought to be made out, to show that it was necessary. He read from the evidence taken by the committee, contending that it was not enough to induce the House to pass this bill.

Col. Prince, who seconded the motion that the Committee rise, explained his reasons for doing so. He proceeded to contend that there was no need to make the holders of medical diplomas from England undergo an examination before a Provincial board, as it would be insulting to them.

Mr. Drummond expressed himself strongly against the free trade in medicine theory; but, still he could not agree in the opinion that Canadian Physicians were inferior to those of the old world; and he held that a Canadian board ought to be the best judge of persons qualified to practice in Canada, and deal with the lives of Canadians. If Physicians at home refused to pass an examination before a Canadian Board, why let them stay at home. But the object was not to prevent competent persons from practising, but only to repress impostors. Reciprocity in medicine was not granted to Canadians in England, and until it were, he would never consent to give reciprocity in Canada. He would never consent to place Canadian Physicians in an inferior position to English ones, but if the reciprocity were granted in England he would then regard more favorably a similar proposition in Canada.

Mr. Brown said the Attorney General was mistaken. The licentiates of M'Gill College and others were allowed to practice in Britain, except within ten miles of London, the city of Edinburgh, and the city of London, and the city of Dublin.

Dr Valois said, not in the same manner as here, and he stated how, but the reporter did not hear his words.

Mr. Brown said it was thought degrading in England for a physician to deal out medicines as an apothecary.

Mr. Drummond said he held that a Canadian board of examination was necessary. So long as Canadian physicians could not go to England and practice upon shewing their diploma, he could not allow English physicians to come here and do so.

Mr Christie of Wentworth, made some remarks, but the noise around the reporter's box in the House, being louder than his voice, he was inaudible.

Mr. Cauchon urged postponement; saying that he looked upon this entirely as a Lower Canadian measure, and there were very few Lower Canadians present that evening, and he would not discuss the merits of the case that evening.

Mr. Sherwood spoke against the bill, as affecting the rights of Her Majesty's subjects within her dominions. Any subject, therefore, had a right to give his opinion. He had that day seen a proposition from the most respectable medical men, surgeons and physicians, in England, for putting the medical profession on a better footing, that proposition was to have one general board of Examiners, to examine all persons desirous to practise any branch of the profession.—He would be ready to adopt the same principle if that law passed and have one general board for both parts of the Province. He would then let any person, who had passed the English board come in and practice, and he had no doubt they would reciprocate in England. He contended that the London medical school was now the best in the world, and that any Canadian student might, by the proper step, obtain a diploma there by a short visit to Europe. Such a distinction would he believed have the effect of obtaining confidence for the person who possessed it.

Mr. Cauchon was not in favor of subserviency to English schools, though he was ready to do to them what they did to us. They would not let Canadians practice without examining, and why should people from England practice in Canada. He was in favor of protecting men who devoted themselves to science.

Mr. Hartman believed every man had a right to practice; if persons had sufficient confidence in him to employ him. He spoke at some length; but in a tone that seldom reached the gallery, he appeared generally to be maintaining the point already stated. He also supported it by reading several extracts from a work giving an account of the law regulating the medical profession in the United States.

Dr. Laterriere replied.

Mr. Brown opposed the bill declaring that it would cut off from practice in Lower Canada every licentiate of Upper Canada.

The motion for the committee to rise was then carried.

The House went into committee of the whole on supply on the estimates of 1852.

Some conversation arose on the item of £300 to James Higginson, for an old claim for lands sold to another that he was entitled to. The item was finally carried without division.

On the item of £10,000 for the Deaf and Dumb Asylums coming up, Mr. Hincks said, that £5000 were for Upper Canada, and £5000 for Lower Canada. He deemed it proper to state that this sum would not be sufficient, and the government intended to propose another £5000 on the estimates for 1853. The government had not determined upon the sites, as they did not want to pay for land, and they expected that some large towns would make an offer of land gratis.

Mr. Brown held that some detailed information ought to be given before such a large sum of money was voted. Voting large sums in that loose manner, was but giving the Government so much corruption money. He also thought it a petty affair, to hold the sites up to the competition of the different towns, to save the price of lands.

Mr. Gamble looked on this, in the same manner as the £30,000 vote of the other evening, and considered it as most improper. He contended that a committee ought to be appointed, and a plan and system adopted, and sites found before money was voted. Voting money in that way was accumulating power in the hands of the Government.

On the item of £10,000 for an Institution for juvenile offenders coming up, Mr. Hincks said it would be desirable to erect this at some central place, as Kingston, and that perhaps more than one might become necessary. The very system of railroads would affect the question a good deal. The item was carried after some conversation.

Committee rose and reported progress.

The Lake Superior Silver Mining Company's Bill was read a second time, on motion of Mr. Stuart, and referred.

The House resolved, into committee, on motion of Mr. Christie of Wentworth, on the bill to amend the Upper Canada Mutual Insurance Act which was passed through with some amendments.

And the House adjourned till Wednesday.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

May 21st, 1853.

The motion for the address to his Excellency of which the Hon. Mr. Boulton had given notice, coming up,

The Hon. Mr. DeBlaquiere called the attention of the Speaker to the fact that this motion was out of order, inasmuch as that House could know nothing of the proceedings in another place till they came before them.

The Hon. Speaker said that any assent or dissent to proceedings in the other House was out of order.

Hon Mr. Boulton could not conceive that there was any impropriety in taking notice of a proceeding in the House of Assembly which aimed at the very existence of that House.

Hon Mr. Walker expressed himself in a similar way, saying that when the other House was plainly violating the privileges of that House, was it not to be noticed till it came into the Upper House.

Hon. W. Morris thought that if the House of Commons interfered with the privileges of the House of Lords, that the Lords would remonstrate. A few years ago a member of the Commons moved some proposal tending to prevent the vote by proxy, and he was immediately called to order by a minister of the Crown, as pursuing a course highly subversive of the privileges of the second branch. If that was so, how much more true was it as respected a measure tending to subvert the entire constitution of the Legislative Council. There could be no doubt that any bill concerning the Legislative Council, the second branch of the Legislature, ought to originate in that House, and that any proceedings to that effect in the other was a high breach of its privileges. He called upon the hon. members, who were put into these seats as into places of honour to defend the rights which they were put there to maintain. In spite of the special pleading which he heard just before, it must be remembered that the House had last fall notice of what was to be done from the Provincial Secretary, and the resolutions that had been lately moved by that hon. gentleman had been laid on the table of the House. In Todd's Parliamentary Law it was laid down that all bills affecting the rights of the Peerage must originate in the Lords, and could not be amended in the Commons. At page 160 the same thing was laid down. The bill for settling the Peerage in 1719 began in the Lords, and in Blackstone it was said that bills affecting the Peerage must begin in the House of Lords. He might have noticed many things growing out of the irregular proceeding of introducing this bill in the other House, especially in respect to the unpleasant language which had been used in the other house with respect to that one—the Council. On this head he read an account of the means by which one House could obtain redress for words spoken in the other House, the authorities, however, remarking that certain circumstances, which they pointed out, made it difficult to succeed in thus obtaining redress. He then read various statements to show that it had been held that one House could not move for returns relative to the staff of the other House; could not move for the sale of the printed papers of the House of Lords, &c. Here, however, the House sat day after day, while its privileges were assailed by the other House. He recommended the mover of the resolutions to yield to nothing but a majority of the House. His resolutions were well drawn, temperate, and were not calculated to wound the feelings of any body. He thought they ought to be put into the hands of His Excellency, and that he might then search records, and find that the present measure was utterly opposed to the constitution. He then alluded to the fact that it had been more than insinuated that the hon. members of that House had only to be made sure of plenty of cash to induce them to come down, and not only to change its own constitution, but also to change that of the other House. All had been pressed to come, and many had come twice—more than could be hoped for, considering all the circumstances of the case; but this was not enough. It was stated that one hon. gentleman had been told he must come—that all his expenses would be paid. He then pointed out that a bill to secure the independence of that branch of the Legislature had been once before passed through the Council; and that, he said, was clearly the constitutional way of making a change, if a change were to be made. He thought it would not compensate members for subjecting them to this humiliation to give them some of the real California, as the price of the gibes and jests in the other House. He concluded by begging the Council to pass the address.

Mr. Boulton thanking the hon. gentleman who had just sat down, declared he wanted no exhortations to induce him to press his resolution to a vote, the resolution he thought was moderate, calculated to preserve good feeling between the two houses. In what other way was the Council to notice the clear breach of its privileges which was going on in the other House? It was no trifling matter for one branch of the Legislature to propose to annihilate another of its co-ordinate branches, and it would be sanctioned in no other Legislature in the world. He trusted too, that in spite of what was said of the Council elsewhere, they would let the other branch of the Legislature know that branch could express its opinion as formally and as firmly as elsewhere.

Hon. Mr. DeBlaquiere again called the Council to order and for the enforcement of the Speaker's opinion.

Hon. W. Morris contended that the Speaker's opinion was not to be given without the House hearing what had to be said, even perhaps to enlighten the Speaker.

The Speaker said that the Speaker decided without debate; then there was an appeal, if any hon. gentleman thought right, and on that appeal there might be a debate.

Hon. Mr. Boulton then respectfully appealed to the House against the Speaker's judgment. After repeating some of the arguments he had already used, he concluded by saying that he always desired to bow to the opinion of the Speaker; but that it must be remembered that the Speaker was a member of the Government and had of course given his opinion already, and perhaps it would be inconsistent in him to allow the resolution to pass.

Hon. Mr. Viger could not understand how the affair could be declared irregular now, when it had been already more than once before the House, as if it were in order.

Hon. G. Boulton said the hon. Speaker was certainly mistaken; it had been once before the House, and postponed.

The Hon. Speaker had forgotten that.

The Hon. D. B. Viger conceived it a most extraordinary thing, after the House had had regular notice of what was going forward in the other House, evidently for the purpose of their acting upon it, that they were now told they could do nothing in the matter after they had been called together from all parts of the country. He expressed himself, however, if we understood rightly, in favour of a further adjournment.

The Hon Mr Quesnel desired adjournment; on the one hand, they were told that the present motion was opposed to the privileges of the other House; on the other hand, that the other House was committing a breach of the privileges of that House. There was, however, a committee of privilege of that House, and he thought the first thing was to refer the question to that committee.

The Hon. Mr. Walker was convinced that the proceedings in the other House were not only a breach of the privileges of the House; but an attack on the constitution, which there must be some means of answering on the part of that House. He conceived the reason of the Council having in some measure declined in public opinion was the manner in which it had been swamped. If it desired to continue the check upon the deliberations of the other branch, the Council should be increased in numbers and limited to a certain number; but then the measure should come from the Upper House itself. If this were not desirable, the House should be dissolved.

The Hon. Speaker, from the floor of the Council, admitted that the one House could not interfere in the domestic concerns of the other, such as the payments of its employées, &c.; but he believed that in other matters of larger importance the thing was something different, and that the government would be prepared to defend their measure, on the ground that necessity had no law, and in times of necessity that must be done, which, in other times, would not be correctly done. However, at present, he had to do only with the point of order. Now the House regularly and officially had known nothing about this address till it came before the government that day, and it was because he was a member of the government that he did not interfere till his attention was called to the irregularity, for in that House, unlike the other, the Speaker was not bound to interfere till he was called upon to do so, being not the official guardians of the rules of the House. Then returning to the question of the rights of the House, he said that it was true that bills relating to the peerage were originated in the Lords; but the peerage was one thing and the House of Lords the other; and he denied that the constitution prevented either branch from originating any measure it thought proper concerning the constitution of the other. Let not hon. members fall into absurdity. Suppose the Council were as bad as it had been falsely represented. Was it likely that people so bad and so feeble would be the first to attempt their own reform. It was free then for any branch of the Legislature to propose measures with respect to the other, and it was certainly within the powers of the Council, even before any measure was introduced into the Assembly, to legislate on the supposed object of that measure; but what it had no right to do was to say it regretted—to praise or to censure the proceedings of the other House. What was there so wrong in the discussion of a question which had been before the country since 1791.—Pitt had declared the constitution of Canada to be an experiment, which, if a failure, might be changed, and in Upper and Lower Canada, the principle of an elective Council had always been discussed. The precedent, cited by Mr. Morris, were, therefore, very good, but not applicable to the case in point. Suppose that Council should one day think that it would be better for the Governor to be elective—would it be unconstitutional respectfully to express that opinion in an address to the Imperial Government? He thought not, and so he believed the Council had no right to express disapprobation of what the Assembly was now doing. He was ready, however, any day, and in any proper manner, to discuss the propriety or impropriety of a change.—Let the address then be dropped, and let resolutions be brought forward as strongly worded as the Council might please; he had not the least objection to take it. He believed that the Council was as well constituted as it could be by the elective principle. But would any one deny that some changes were necessary? If so, let the journals be examined, and let hon. gentlemen see how many times there was a failure to make up a quorum. He did not mention this to cast reproach on members prevented by imperious reasons from fulfilling their duties; he knew that members when they accepted their duties had no right to expect that they would be transported from Kingston to Montreal, thence to Toronto and then to Quebec. But still the fact was there, that a quorum could often not be found, and it was plain that this could not go on long. When the Government took the resolution to pay hon. members, they could not be consulted, because they were not present; but when hon. gentlemen now said that if they wanted pay they would have asked for it, they should remember that some change good or bad was necessary. This it was that destroyed public confidence in the Legislative Council, and now let hon. members say if this was not a good reason. If hon. gentlemen would consider the subject and would show that what had bitterly been complained of would not occur again that would be all right.—But he had always held that the way to be respected was to do right, rather than to insist upon doubtful privileges Upon the whole he persisted in his opinion; but should the decision be against him, he should submit not only as a duty but with pleasure.

After some further remarks from Hon. George Boulton,

Hon. Mr. McKay had formerly brought forward resolutions deprecating the manner in which the House had been swamped; not by this Government, but by all Governments. That proposition was then sneered at; but now seemed to be gaining ground, since there had been time to think over it. That there must be some change was plain. He thought, however, that the views of the hon. member who had moved these resolutions should have fair play for the expression of the opinions entertained by other hon. members. There ought to be no coercion. He was in favor of the elective principle, at least to a certain extent, for he was not pleased with the present state of things, when the whole council was gathered together by all sorts of exertions, and a poor minority—all that had been left by repeated creation—was left barely to give a faint expression to their opinions. That would not be the case if the House were elective, since members would feel themselves strong in the support of those who elected them. As to payment, he looked upon it as sheer robbery of the country, so long as the council were not elected. Let them get themselves chosen by the people, and then let them pay their way honestly;—till then, he for one, and he hoped the majority of the House, would be opposed to such a measure.

The Hon. Mr. DeBlaquiere again urged the point of order, contending that neither branch of the Legislature could possibly take action upon, or in fact know anything in an official way of the proceedings of the other branch, until the measure to be considered came regularly before it.

Hon. P. Moore moved the postponement of the debate. He was one of those who would not sanction an attack upon the privileges of this House by the other branch of the Legislature nor would he lend his hand to the overturning of the constitution. In fact he should be very ready to vote not for the address but for the resolutions expressing the same views, if such resolutions only went far enough; but he desired to have everything done at the right time and in the right way. He moved the postponement.

The Hon. Speaker said the postponement could not be put till the question of order was decided.

Hon. G. Boulton again spoke: saying that there was no necessity to decide against this resolution on the point of order, since if the word "regret" were out of order, or any other words, they might be altered.

The vote was then taken, contents 12, non-contents 15.

The Hon. P. Moore then gave notice of a series of resolutions on the constitution of the Legislative Council.

The Seigniorial Tenure Bill was postponed till Friday, and several private measures were proceeded with till the House adjourned.

THURSDAY MORNING, MAY 26, 1853.

The Bridge and its Site.—Having no knowledge in the noble art of engineering, we have refrained from offering any opinion upon the respective merits of the various sites suggested for this gigantic undertaking—an undertaking which promises, when completed, not only to be of incalculable benefit to our city, but which will be in itself one of the greatest triumphs ever effected by art over nature. But, while we acknowledge that we place the greatest reliance on the talent and experience, which their interest alone must induce the builders of so costly a work to employ in investigating the question, in all its bearings, before deciding upon the site of their operations; we, nevertheless, rejoice to see that question freely discussed by those among ourselves, whose local knowledge and experience in bridge-building in our climate, justly entitles them to advise the builders, and the public, on the subject. We say "and the public," because, as our contemporary the Gazette remarks, in introducing an extract, from a late letter of the Hon. Mr. Harwood's—in which he advocated the selection of the St. Mary's current site,—it is a great error to suppose that the site of the bridge is nobody's business but that of the company which is going to build it. Where there is danger from ice, flooding, &c., all people residing or owning property in the localities threatened, are clearly equally interested in the matter. Holding these views, and fully according to the writer, what he claims for himself, a greater amount of experience in bridge-building than, perhaps, any other individual in Canada, we republish and request the attention of our readers to the following letter:—

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PILOT.

Sir,—I observe, in your number of this morning, an excellent article on the subject of the Grand Trunk Bridge, and as you invite discussion on that subject, I avail myself of your invitation to offer a few observations on the important question referred to.

Public rumour declares that Point St. Charles has been selected and adopted by the Grand Trunk Company, and I have no wish to detract from the reputation of the engineers who may have selected that spot for the erection of the Bridge, neither do I pretend that the engineers connected with the Grand Trunk are incompetent to construct any form of bridge across the St. Lawrence; but what I do assert is that none of them are qualified by experience to predict the results consequent upon the building of a bridge at Point St. Charles. It will be but a slight consolation to the inhabitants of Montreal, at some future day, when a third of the City has been prostrated, and the mighty St. Lawrence has torn a passage through Craig Street, to know that all the science and skill of engineers had proved unavailing against glacial inundations.

I may assert, without any approach to presumption, that I have had as much experience in bridge-building, in the ice-encumbered rivers of Lower Canada, as any engineer in the country, and this assertion I am prepared to substantiate.

The Ottawa, at Sault au Recollet, is 1800 feet wide, and presents the same glacial phenomena as the St. Lawrence. The ice on the two rivers takes and breaks up simultaneously. The river Sault au Recollet is deeper than the St. Lawrence at Point St. Charles; the current is as impetuous; the ice as formidable and dangerous. I can furnish data, gathered during a series of years, which may be received with confidence by scientific men; they are the fruit of patient observation.

I can scarcely bring myself to believe that the distinguished engineers connected with the Grand Trunk Company will endanger their fame by hastily avowing their adoption of the Point St. Charles locality. Europe contains no river comparable in volume with the St. Lawrence, and in lower latitudes ice is unknown; they therefore lack that local experience which they must seek from practical men. It is a common observation in Lower Canada, that winter never sets in until the ditches are full; to some the fact may seem absurd, but it is nevertheless perfectly true, and familiar to our people. Another fact is, that the St. Lawrence at Montreal, and the Ottawa at Sault au Recollet, never take until the Autumn waters reach their highest point, and the ice invariably breaks up when the waters recede to the lowest point.

Shallow water is the most dangerous locality, and deep water the safest for bridge piers. This assertion may sound paradoxical, yet it is literally and absolutely true. I have constructed piers in shallow water and in water thirty feet deep, where the current is rapid, yet the piers that suffer most from ice are those built in shallow water; one of them especially suffers from the action of the ice almost yearly, and it lies in the shallowest part of the river.

There are two other bridges higher up the same river—one belonging to the Seigniors of Isle Jesus, and the other to the Heirs of the late Mr. Lachapelle—both of which have seriously suffered from ice, and invariably the damage sustained by the piers was in shallow water.

The reason is obvious, in deep water the ice is submerged, and floats away innocuously, in shallow water it packs in masses, and threatens not only the piers but the arches of the bridge. Without any artificial obstruction in front of the Town, Montrealers have seen ice piled forty feet high—In its course it demolished wooden buildings, broke into cut stone stores, and heaped up to the height of the roofs. I myself ascended one of these mountains of ice, and from it cut my initials in the spout of one of those stores in Commissioners' Street.

Mr. Harwood has very properly described what my Canadian countrymen denominate frazée, or anchor ice. This anchor ice forms more readily on rock bottoms. It is of the consistency of saturated snow, and, for long spaces, completely arrests the course of the water, filling the whole space between the bed of the river and the frozen surface. This naturally tends to increase the velocity of the water in the portions of the river which are free from this frazée. Hence we frequently hear of horses breaking through the ice and being saved. The fact is, where this frazée occurs it would be impossible to sink a horse beyond his middle.

I apprehend that a bridge at Point St. Charles may cause the ice to pack, and back the water until it resume the channel assigned to it by tradition—down Craig Street.

Many persons, now residents in Montreal, may recollect that the north-west canoes, some forty years ago or more, used to make the present Haymarket, in Craig Street, their point of departure in the Spring.

Every one knows that until a very few years ago, Craig Street, St. Paul Street, M'Gill Street, and nearly the whole of Griffintown, were regularly under water on the breaking up of the ice in the spring, and not unfrequently on the taking of the ice in the fall, on which occasions those parts of the city were only accessible to water carriages. These are facts which no one will presume to controvert, and be it observed, that all this occurred when there were neither piers nor bridges in the St. Lawrence to impede the course of the water and ice.

Your obedient Servant,
A. M. DELISLE.

Montreal, May 23, 1853.

We trust that Mr. Delisle's apprehensions, with reference to the consequence of building on the site, believed to have been already decided upon, at Point St. Charles, may be satisfactorily refuted by competent authority, as they, most assuredly, ought to be, before the work is commenced; but, in the meantime, it is no trifling corroboration of Mr. Delisle's views to find that they are participated by Mr. Harwood, a gentleman of great powers of observation and great practical experience in all matters connected with the action of the ice in our waters. The following is the extract from his letter on the subject, alluded to by us as having been quoted in yesterday's Gazette:—

"Time has proved that I was right in the views I expressed upon canals, and the Great Trunk Road is going on in the manner I have so long advocated, and thought it alone could be undertaken; and surely the editor of the Transcript does not make me think that I am wrong in my opinion of a proper site for the bridge, but only that he knows precious little about what he is writing; for he tells us "the great objection to the St. Mary's current is this, that the floor being a solid rock at a depth on an average of six fathoms, the difficulty seems to be finding foundations for the piers—for at that depth, and with a current of such velocity, we can hardly imagine that any stone which may be sunk may not be swept away." Does the learned editor think that stones are tumbled into the water pell mell to make the foundation of a pier? and has he never heard of such a thing as a coffer dam being made, and by it the bottom of the river being laid bare and dry? And it is the first time that I have ever heard it urged as objectionable, that the bottom of a river was a solid rock floor. What can be a better foundation on which to build the tower or pier in the centre to carry so great a weight?—But I am far from admitting that where the piers for the suspension bridge need be constructed, that so great a depth of water will be found; surely the editor of the Transcript must have been dreaming in his morning gown and slippers, or he would not write such arrant nonsense as this, and in so flippant a manner—accompanied also by such personal remarks quite uncalled for by anything I said in my letter to you, sir, on the proposed bridge.

English Law of Divorce.—The following remarks upon this subject may prove interesting to those who have taken part, or felt an interest, in the late Beresford case, before our Provincial Legislature—they are from the London Globe of the 4th instant:—

If there is one branch of our law in which, more than in others, confusion reigns, the Law of Divorce claims that ill pre-eminence. The dissolution of the bond of marriage has been a vexed question in far distant centuries. It has hitherto stood a tough siege in England against the encroachment of the Canon Law, and after much doubtful warfare has found refuge in the House of Lords. The merits of emancipation à vinculo matrimonii have been questioned on the score of collusion. But this fraus legis, whilst it has been designated by a great authority (Lord Eldon) as common, has been denied, on the other hand, to exist to any great extent. Objections are rife against both tribunals—the Ecclesiastical Court, and the House of Lords. The proposed reform points to a new tribunal, so that we are justified in affirming that the present condition of the Divorce Law is neither satisfactory nor settled. The subject itself, likewise is encompassed by no trifling difficulties. If we look back to the times of Justinian and Justin, we find their opinions as to the dissolution of marriage in complete antagonism. If we come to look at the bond of marital union as a religious contract, we find that before the ordinance of Pope Innocent the 3rd, it subsisted merely as a civil relation. If we view it still more closely, and submit it to the scrutiny of Holy Writ, we shall soon be at a loss to discover the religious origin of the divorce à mensa et thoro, which seems as strange a road to righteousness as the divorce à vinculo, with the prohibition of the wife's future marriage tacked as rider to the Act. From this complexity of principle and practice we can scarcely be expected to extricate our readers. If the recommendations of the Commissioners should find amalgamation in a Divorce Bill, it may then be time enough to offer some remarks upon their propositions, and to observe upon the contrast between their suggestions and the simplicity of ancient times.

But there is one point which seems to have escaped notice, and which deserves to be placed in comparison with, or rather in antithesis to, any cases of divorce causa adulterii, especially if they be tainted, according to the doctrine of Lord Eldon, with collusion. This is the calamity of lunacy when incident to the marriage state subsequent to the espousals. We are led to make this allusion in consequence of a modern, and, we fear, by no means a solitary, instance of misfortune. A Commission of Lunacy was not long since held on an unfortunate sufferer. He had been happily married, in full health, but shortly afterwards fell into settled mental derangement. We discern in the batch of the new Commission no relief for a mischief of this nature. It is not to be supposed that the visitation of Providence should consign an innocent person to endless celibacy—to the singleness, not of a spinster life, changeable at will, but to the forced abnegation of all marriage rites. Yet, under our code, such is the strange order of things, should this unfortunate gentleman continue in an imbecile state of mind. From the Canon Law but little relief can be hoped. It is a law which a dominant and grasping priesthood found it their interest to promulge; and which, for some time, kept the clergy themselves within the pale of legal abstinence. So stringent is that canon law, that Bishop Horsley was misled by its severity, and only discovered that a marriage might be capable of dissolution when he consulted the Scripture with more attention. The civil law was more liberal than the canon law, although even that system of ordinance did not reckon the loss of reason a cause of divorce, if it happened after marriage. Yet if lunacy should darken the joyous hours of union, it is difficult to believe that the reasoning survivor should be surrendered to hopeless solitude. Cases of this nature may not be uncommon, and their presence suggests sad reflections, not unaccompanied by a wish to mitigate the pang. We do not notice any remedy in the Commissioners' list. But it is difficult to surmise any just ground why a person so situated might not have the sanction of law to marry again, as well as one where the presumption of law absolves from the charge of bigamy after the absence of a marriage partner for a lapse of years.—The same law which would allow a second union would secure the interests of children, and only permit a supplemental alliance in process of due time, on the score of legitimate necessity.—Nor need there be the stumbling block of a divorce. That misery might be spared. An unhappy lunatic, if not religiously, is, at all events, civilly dead. The distance of time between the stroke of insanity and the second marriage should be sufficiently considerable to allow of the intervention of lucid intervals, or of actual restoration. We refer to cases of hopeless and perennial aberrations of mind as calamities which ought not, by law, to be irremediable.

The confusion of the authorities and the struggle for the dominion have caused the laws of marriage to be but little understood. The fastidious and licentious Jews were for every writing bills of divorcement. The "hardness of their hearts" occasioned this act of mercy to the woman and liberty to the man. It was subsequently forbidden under the Christian dispensation to put away a wife, saving for adultery; and the reason assignment was because "it causeth her to commit adultery." This cannot apply to a confirmed idiot or lunatic. It was declared further, that "whosoever shall marry her that is divorced, committeth adultery." This [illegible] is equally inapplicable to the melancholy issue of madness.

We incline to think that the Legislature might be able to deal wisely with these domestic visitations, and by a general Act, fortified with all precaution on behalf of the lunatic, whether man or woman, might confer a great benefit upon one party, without inflicting any injury upon the other.

We take much pleasure in calling attention to the advertisement, in another column, of Messrs. Torry & Co,. Agents for the Victoria Line of Australian Clipper Ships, and can only assure intending emigrants to that Land of Gold, from the highly respectable reputation of the owners of that line, that they will render justice in every respect, and have their comforts properly cared for, and that all wil prove as represented. We understand that they will despatch another clipper ship about the 15th July, and will keep up a regular monthly line.

We would remind the friends of the late Revd. Mr. Esson, that his funeral will take place this day, at three o'clock, from Mr. Campbell's residence, 37 Great St. James Street.

The Montreal and Bytown Telegraph Company have reduced the rate to Bytown from 1s. 8d. to 1s. 3d. per ten words, and a penny a word for every subsequent word. An office will also be opened at Carrillon, on the 1st June.

Theatre Royal.—The performances this evening, as will be seen by the advertisement, are for the benefit of the graceful and charming Mdlle. Caroline Rousset; which fact, independent of the attractive programme, will, undoubtedly draw a large audience.

The extensive estates in Lower Canada, belonging to the Gaspé Fishery and Coal Mining Company, which are announced for public sale in our columns, will shortly be brought into direct railway communication with Quebec and Montreal, and from thence to the United States. In these days of enterprise, these properties, which are in connexion with the Harbour of Chaleur, seem to present important means for the employment of capital.—London Globe May. 4.

The Arctic arrived out on Monday night, and the Alps on the night of the 11th.

News chiefly of commercial interest.

England.—Parliamentary intelligence interesting. The financial Budget was still debated. There had been a squabble among the Irish members on the subject of alleged government bribery, owing to recent dockyard exposures.

Lord John Russell had brought in a bill to disfranchise Admiralty and Ordnance employees. Lord Campbell, and five other judges, had pronounced a decision in the writ of error case of Salomons versus Miller, to test the legality of Alderman Salomons, a Jew, voting in the House of Commons. Their decisions confirmed the judgment of the Lower Court. Jews cannot sit in either House without taking the Christian Oath.

Newspapers to America containing manuscript writing, will be charged treble postage.

The voluntary conversion of Consols and reduced per cents, proceeds slowly.

The Dublin Exhibition was opened on Thursday the 12th by the Lord Lieutenant, in the presence of 15,000 spectators. Mr. Benson, the architect, was knighted, but Mr. Bargent, who advanced £80,000, declined the honor.

France.—The Empress recovers but slowly. The re-establishment of the death penalty for political crimes has been agreed to by the Council.

The expedition against the Cabyles is about to be sent out, under the command of the Governor General of Algeria.

Spain.—Reports unfavorable to the wine crops come from Catalonia.

Norway.—Seven hundred emigrants were embarking at Christiana for Quebec and New York.

Silver mines and traces of auriferous quartz have been discovered on Government lands near Koningsberg.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.

There has been a good demand throughout the week with animation. Sales of the week 46,860 bales. Spinners refraining from laying in stock. The Arctic's advices were considered favorable and gave a stiffer tone, without quotable change in prices.

LIVERPOOL GRAIN MARKET.

Breadstuffs firmer during the week, owing to late spring, and recurrence of wintry weather.—American Wheat dearer, and other descriptions improved. Flour in good demand and 6d dearer. Brokers Board quote white Wheat 6s 10d@7s 2d; Red do 6s 6d@6s 9d; Western Canal Flour 22s 9d@23s. More animation in Beef.—Pork continues languid and prices a shade lower, with a full stock. Ashes dull at 27s 6d for Pots and Pearls. Money in active demand.

PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY,

Quebec, May 25.

On motion of Mr. Morin it was resolved, that as to-morrow will be a statary holiday, when the House rises, it stand adjourned till Friday.

A motion of Mr. Brown's, to sit on Saturday, was carried. Yeas 13; Nays 12.

Mr. Brown moved for a Select Committee to inquire and report the terms and conditions of an agreement made by the Queen's Printer with the Finance Committee of the House in 1850, and the reasons why it has not been carried out.

On the request of the Government the matter was postponed till Friday.

Mr. Laurin introduced a Bill to regulate the proceedings at voluntary sales.

Mr. Leblanc inquired of the Ministry, whether they intend to continue, in the present session, their proceedings with regard to the Bill relative to the Municipalities and Roads in Lower Canada, introduced by the Honble. the Attorney General East.

Mr. Morin was understood to say yes.

Mr. Leblanc further enquired of the Ministry whether they intended to submit to the consideration of the legislature at the present session, or at an early period the next session, a measure for the better administration of the prisons and the penitentiary, and for the reformation of persons imprisoned in those places, by means of classification of moral and religious discipline, suitable to the religion of each, and of labour.

Mr. Morin was understood to say, not this session, but they did the next.

Mr. McKenzie moved for the appointment of a select committee to enquire into the issue of the debentures by the City of Toronto, in payment of stock in the Northern Railway, and proceedings connected therewith. He contended that an impression prevailed in the public mind that £10,000 had been unduly made by the Mayor of Toronto, a member of the government, and other persons, out of the issue of debentures for the Northern Railway. He did not say it was so, but only asked for enquiry. He held that the circumstances of the case justified —— that, and the report of the Committee of the Toronto Corporation very unsatisfactory.

Messrs. Sherwood and Ridout stated that the citizens of Toronto felt great interest on the subject, which they contended was not in a satisfactory state; but they held as the matter was before the Court of Chancery, that no action should be taken by the House until that Court had decided.

Mr. Hartman who had seconded the motion said, that seeing the lukewarmness of the members for Toronto, whether from interested motives or not, he would not say, he would withdraw his name, which he did, and the matter dropped.

The following bills were read a third time:—To incorporate the Prince Edward Island Railroad Company; To amend the Upper Canada Mutual Insurance Act.

The House in committee to widen the streets of London, as the report leaves.

Representation Bill passed Council—28 to 8.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Bogle's Hyperion Fluid.

☞ Prosy People.—Some folks have the faculty of spinning out a trifle of matter to a great length, more especially when some flaw in the premises depends on elaboration for security against exposition; but multiplied words are unnecessary to define facts—as, for example: Bogle's Hyperion Fluid for the hair, Amole for shaving, and Hebeaiona for the complexion, are unrivalled in quality.—Sold by William Bogle, the inventor, at 277 Washington Street.

To be had of Wm. Lyman & Co., Wholesale Agents for C. E.; and sold by A. Savage & Co., Alex. Urquhart, and S. J. Lyman & Co., Druggists, Montreal. In Quebec, of Joseph Bowles and Dr. Musson, Druggists. tts C—68

Bogle's Hair Dye.

☞ Beauty.—Those who would retain the youthful bloom of the complexion, can do so by using Bogle's Hebeaiona, according to directions on the bottle. This, with Bogle's Hyperion Fluid, for the hair, and his Premium Electric Hair Dye, for dyeing the hair, may be had of

Wm. Lyman & Co., Wholesale Agents for C. E. and sold by A. Savage & Co., Alex. Urquhart and S. J. Lyman & Co., Druggists, Montreal. I. Quebec, of Joseph Bowles, and Dr. Musson, Druggists. mwf C—68

Plantagenet Water.

Caution!—The proprietors of the celebrated Plantagenet Water having ascertained that parties in various parts of Upper Canada, and particularly in the neighbourhood of Brockville, are, under the assumed title "Plantagenet Water" offering for sale other descriptions of mineral water, beg to caution the public against such unfair misrepresentation. It is scarcely necessary to state that there is but one Spring known as the Plantagenet Spring, the extraordinary virtues of which have been attested by all the leading medical men in the Province, and by thousands of the principal citizens. This Water can only be procured from the Depot, 14 Place d'Armes, and of the different authorised agents throughout the Province.
