'Quit rocking boat' de Gaulle told

THE HAGUE (AP) — NATO foreign ministers met today in a closed session at which Belgium's Paul Henri - Spaak planned to challenge President de Gaulle's campaign to revamp the Atlantic alliance.

Spaak told colleagues of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization he would call on the French to "spell out just what you think is wrong with NATO—and how it should be righted. Otherwise quit rocking the boat."

U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk averted a public clash between Spaak and French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville Tuesday at the opening of the ministers' annual spring meeting.

Rusk stopped in Brussels en route to The Hague and was reported to have persuaded Spaak to lay aside a speech attacking Guallism and all it means for the alliance.

Today the 15 ministers met with only two aides present for each of them. The aim was to limit the risk that divisive exchanges would be leaked.

Hanging over the alliance are such basic questions as:

How is NATO to be reshaped to accommodate the growing strength of Europe without spreading or weakening control over nuclear weapons?

How will Britain be linked with her continental allies in developing industrial, social and military institutions?

HOW TO CLOSE THE GAP

How are the allies going to work together to close the gap between have and have-not nations, keep world peace, reorganize trading patterns and cope with the Communist world?

Are Europe and the U.S. to move closer together in defence of the non-Communist world or drift apart?

De Gaulle contends NATO's system of integrated commands should be dismantled.

He wants Europeans, preferably under French leadership, to recast their defence on the basis of a planning staff which would co - ordinate national forces.

De Gaulle also still would like some sort of American-French-British high command to chart Allied strategy on a global scale. But he has warned that in a crisis, the United States might abandon Europe rather than risk nuclear devastation.

The United States, Britain and several other European nations want closer integration of their forces and policies. Only thus, they contend, can the peoples and institutions of the new world and the old co-operate effectively.

The United States has stressed its readiness to give the European Allies a voice in nuclear weapon management through the project for a fleet of Polaris surface ships manned by crews of mixed nationalities.

This would keep the U.S. finger on the nuclear trigger and still insure against the rise of a German nuclear armory.

Quebec needs business English

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Even if Quebec province decides to adopt French as its only official language, Quebecers will still have to learn English because it is the business language of the North American continent, the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism was told Tuesday night.

This view, and others like it, were expressed in Rimouski—a centre of the Lower St. Lawrence region 170 miles northeast of Quebec City where 98 per cent of the population is of French origin.

Meanwhile in Moncton, N.B., a French - speaking Protestant minister told another session that religion is a major cause of French - English friction in Canada.

About 500 community leaders attended the evening session in Rimouski of five commission members under co - chairman Davidson Dunton. The other half of the commission, led by co-chairman Andre Laurendeau, drew an estimated 300 participants in Moncton.

Optometrist Jean-Louis Desrosiers of Mont-Joli, Que., told the Rimouski meeting that Quebec should consider becoming a unilingual state.

Quebecers have no objection to learning English on cultural grounds, he said, but it is frustrating to have to learn it for economic survival.

Guy d'Anjou of Mont-Joli said Quebec might well become unilingual but this would not eliminate the need to learn English, North America's business language.

The Moncton Protestant minister, Rev. Maurice Boillat, expressed concern over the close relationship between language and religion in Canada.

He said people object to learning French because the history of the French-Canadian coincides with that of the Roman Catholic Church.

Mr. Boillat was challenged by Gerard Marcoux, chairman of the discussion group, who said there is strong reaction to Confederation in Quebec and "there may be more atheists in Quebec than in any other part of Canada."

Dr. Lea Allenach, a member of the Moncton school board, said bilingualism in Canada is possible.

"The New Brunswick Home and School Federation is pressing for French earlier in the schools," he said. "English and French must act now with bold, new and fast-moving steps."

Prof. Charles Humphrey of Mount Allison University at Sackville, N.B., said "bilingualism in New Brunswick means the French can speak English."

Fewer jobless

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian unemployment in mid-April stood at 403,000—six per cent of the labor force, the bureau of statistics estimated today.

This was a decline from April last year when the jobless total was estimated at 462,000 or seven per cent of the labor force. It also was a drop from a month earlier when 456,000 were jobless—a 6.8-per-cent jobless rate.

The seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate for mid-April rose slightly to 4.7 per cent from 4.6 per cent in mid-March. In April last year it was 5.5 per cent.

Approve code

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec government's revised labor code won unanimous approval in second reading before the legislature Tuesday.

The revised text of the bill incorporates 18 amendments introduced last month after Quebec's largest labor groups threatened a general strike in protest against the original measure.

Talks end

SAIGON (AP)—Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara held a final round of talks with U.S. military officials in Saigon today under heavy guard.

Before leaving by plane for Washington, McNamara also was to meet with Maj.-Gen. Nguyen Khanh, South Viet Nam's premier, to review the general military, political and economic situation in the Communist-beset country.

SYDNEY (CP)—President J. D. Leitch of Upper Lakes Shipping Limited said Tuesday permanent peace will come to shipping in the Great Lakes only when the upper echelon of the Seafarers' International Union (Ind.) is ousted.

Removal of Hal C. Banks as president of the SIU had not cured the problem, Mr. Leitch said. The men around Banks had simply moved up a notch when he departed.

President-elect

PANAMA CITY (AP)—Government candidate Marco A. Robles is Panama's president-elect, on the basis of nearly complete returns. The pre-election favorite, former president Arnulfo Arias, denounced the outcome as a "most scandalous fraud."

Returns from 1,039 of the 1,144 voting districts gave Robles an 11,066-vote margin over Arias—124,830 to 113,764. With seven candidates in the field, Robles got about 40 per cent of the total vote.

MPs finally vote

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons law-making mill sputtered into action Tuesday after stalling repeatedly in the 62 sitting days since the session opened.

In a 90-minute spurt at the evening sitting, MPs passed the fourth government bill cleared since Feb. 18. The Commons took these steps:

1. Gave second reading—approval in principle—over Conservative opposition to a bill creating a single defence staff chief, signalling the eventual complete reorganization of the defence department.

2. Passed with little debate a budget measure awarding the provinces a larger slice of estate taxes; the province's share goes up to 75 from 50 per cent.

3. Gave first reading to a bill authorizing federal Crown corporations to pay up to $3,500,000 annually in provincial sales taxes and automobile licence fees.

4. Gave first reading to a measure providing for a fourth judge on the Exchequer Court of Canada, who will specialize in divorce cases from Quebec and Newfoundland, the only provinces without divorce courts.

Today, debate continues on the divorce bill. The same measure was whipped through the Commons last year but was killed in the Senate on the last day of the session.

Most of the Tuesday sitting was devoted to a repetitious defence debate. Attendance at one point dropped to 21 MPs, one more than the quorum.

Second reading was given to a bill creating the post of chief of the defence staff—already earmarked for Air Chief Marshal Frank Miller—and abolishing separate chiefs for each service.

The bill now goes to the special committee on defence for study. Conservative MPs shouted "on division" to register their opposition, but the three other Opposition groups supported the bill.

Defence Minister Hellyer closed the three-day defence debate by flatly denying Conservative charges that he has weakened Canada's military capability with several spending cutbacks.

Canada's Red China position to change?

THE HAGUE (CP) — Canada's Paul Martin reviewed world problems at the NATO spring council Tuesday and indicated that Canada's position on one of them—recognition of Communist China—may change early next year.

Canada doesn't recognize Red China, but the external affairs minister told the opening session of the three-day ministerial meeting that the Peking government could not be excluded indefinitely from world councils and world acceptance.

Canada opposes any solution to the Chinese problem at the expense of the Nationalist government of Chiang Kai-shek on the island of Formosa.

But Martin said "a grave danger exists that chances for a solution that would make provision for Formosa and its inhabitants might disappear if we do not move soon from the present static position."

The implication was that Red China may be admitted to the UN. The 1963 General Assembly voted 57 to 41 against seating Red China with a dozen abstentions. Since then France has recognized the Communist regime.

MAY MODIFY POSITION

Martin declared "while we have no intention of doing anything which would add to the difficulties of our friends, the realities of the situation may require some modification of our position following the 19th session of the UN assembly." The 19th session ends early in 1965.

A Canadian spokesman declined to expand on Martin's statement and said there was no immediate reaction to it at the meeting.

Sessions of the council, made up of the foreign ministers of the 15 NATO countries, are secret and summaries of speeches are made available to the press.

Gas inquiry disappoints

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec provincial inquiry commission on gas distribution wound up public hearings Tuesday with the chairman, Judge Jacques Vadboncoeur, lamenting a lack of co-operation from public and private bodies alike.

"It will be noted," he said, "that with the exception of the cities of Montreal and Sherbrooke, where gas is presently available, no other municipality has shown, either directly or indirectly, the interest which could have been expected.

"With few exception, all representations were made by companies or corporations directly interested in the gas business."

Trans - Canada Pipe Lines, completing its testimony, reiterated its position that "extension of gas service to new market areas in the province of Quebec east of Montreal is not feasible on the basis of present market estimates."

The firm, which pipes gas from Alberta for sale to distributing companies, estimated the deficiency in revenue in the fifth year of operation of service as far as Sherbrooke and Quebec City, including a return of 7½ per cent, would range from $6,100,000 to $6,600,000 depending on the type of system.

Education department open today

QUEBEC (CP)—The province acquires a new model education department today, replacing the vehicle that has been puttering along since the mid-19th century.

The cabinet was scheduled to get the department rolling by order-in-council and the man in the driver's seat was expected to be Paul Gerin-Lajoie, 44, at present minister of youth.

The new ministry, designed to co-ordinate the fragmented Quebec education system, was created over a tempest of opposition.

Legislation was presented last June—only weeks after a royal commission recommended it—then withdrawn following howls that the government was going too far, too fast. The legislation was amended and reintroduced last January.

Political authority over education has been a traditional bugbear in Quebec. Politics and education do not mix, said some of the bill's opponents.

But Mr. Gerin-Lajoie said no education minister would dare take education measures that would be unpopular. And he said it would be better to have education policy adopted in the open, rather than behind closed doors as it has been up until now.

BISHOPS APPROVED

Another argument was that the church should retain authority over teaching, but the Roman Catholic bishops approved the ministry in principle and several of their suggested changes were incorporated in the new legislation, which now is on the statute books.

Up until today, the public education department, headed by an official appointed for life, administered education policy and the government paid the shot—or most of it. Officially, the government had little say and no responsibility for education policy.

Now, however, the minister will have utimate authority for all but religious and moral education.

Vietnamese war could go north but under uncertain conditions

(Last of three dispatches)

By COL. RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — "Let me tell you about that flap over carrying the war to North Viet Nam," said the Pentagon planning officer.

"We thought for awhile, from the reports we were getting, that the Viet Cong were bringing in a lot of bigger weapons, recoilless 75s, machine guns, antiaircraft and antiarmored vehicle weapons. It looked like the stuff might be coming in in large quantities. No one really knew, but we had reports.

"So people here got excited. This could have changed the balance of the war. So we began to think of ways to stop it—cut off the flow. We began to revalue the whole war effort. That's when people here got to talking about carrying the war to the North.

"Then we found that very few of these new weapons had been shipped in after all. They didn't show up in the numbers we'd begun to expect.

"We now think that most of the weapons the Viet Cong are getting, they're capturing from the South Vietnamese. So our problem is right in South Viet Nam.

"The way it looks today, it wouldn't do any good to bomb North Viet Nam. In fact, it might do more harm than good.

"That doesn't mean things won't change. If the Reds would move in with a lot of equipment, or move in sizable numbers of troops, we'd have to reconsider. But right now we're not expecting that."

However, since this Pentagon officer spoke those words, the Viet Cong have, in fact, just begun to commit larger numbers of troops into more or less pitched battles. Their resulting heavy losses, though, may see a discontinuation of this tactic.

The general Pentagon feeling is that the war in South Viet Nam must be won in the South.

But the Pentagon and State Department strategists learned a tough lesson from Korea: it doesn't pay to let the enemy think he has sanctuary.

"If the Red Chinese and the North Vietnamese thought they could get away with a heavy movement of arms or a massive influx or 'volunteers' into South Vietnam without retaliation, they might try one or the other," says one military man.

The recent bombings of a U.S. helicopter carrier and wounding of several GIs are regarded as examples of increasing Red boldness.

"So," says the military observer, "it must be made clear to them that under certain conditions we would carry the war to the North.

"But we don't want to define our conditions too clearly. We want to leave them guessing. That way they may play it on the side of caution. If they don't then we can give them a well-planned scare or two."

The first likely step: lay a few well-placed bombs on the supply lines out of North Viet Nam to the South.

The second step: take out a few key targets in the North, being careful to avoid casualties among North Vietnamese civilians and soldiers wherever possible.

ELECTORS OF WINDSOR

I would like to express my most sincere thanks to all the population of Windsor for the mark of confidence that has been given to me for my election as alderman for the Town of Windsor. With six years' experience in the council previously, I really believe I can be useful to my citizens.

A special thanks also to my organizers, and to all who gave any of their precious time to cast a vote in my favour, also to the ones who voted for my opponent. It was their privilege.

As long as the Lord gives me good health, I will work with all my strength to make the Town of Windsor a nice place in which to live.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It was a sad sight as I watched a towering crane swing its destroying ball against the last wall of the last stage of the old Educational lot.

The wall collapsed, and the gateman's shack was the only structure that remained on the three-acre site.

The sight was especially melancholy to a reporter who had seen the non - levelled stages alive with the bright lights of film making. For more than 40 years the studio had clung to life. It finally died to make way for that symbol of modern times, the shopping centre.

In 1919, King Vidor built a barn stage on the property next to what now is Goldwyn Studios. In 1925, Educational Films, backed by the Hudson's Bay Company, took over the place and created a modern film studio.

MADE COMMERCIAL FILMS

Educational had started making commercial films, but turned out to be anything but what its name connoted.

"We were struck with it," says Jack White, onetime studio head and now retired in Palm Springs. He converted Educational in to a fun factory that produced two - reel comedies with such figures as Larry Seman, Thelma Todd, Al St. John, Lupino Lane and Lloyd Hamilton.

"Shirley Temple was discovered on our lot in the baby burlesque series," White recalled. "Fatty Arbuckle worked for us after the scandal. He was through as an actor, but I changed his name to William Goodrich and he directed comedies for two years at $1,000 a week."

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

LOSS OF TRICK ASSURES CONTRACT

North's two-spade response is modern expert practice. It produces a four spade rebid from South. Had North happened to respond one no-trump, South would have raised him to three no-trump.

Ernie Rovere, who writes books about bridge, uses the hand to illustrate an advanced safety play. The play is the same whether the contract is spades or no-trump and involves protection against a bad spade break.

Playing at four spades, South wins the opening diamond lead and promptly lays down the ace of trumps. If both opponents play low, he will have no better play than to continue with the king. But West drops the jack and South must find a sure fire winning continuation.

The play is a low spade toward dummy. West shows out and dummy's ten forces East's queen. South later goes over to dummy with a heart or club and finesses against East's nine of spades in order to hold himself to one loser in trumps.

It should be noted that this particular safety play would have cost South a trick had West held the doubleton queen-jack, but South could well afford to lose that trick. His contract was four spades, not five.

It also should be noted that if West held doubleton queen-jack of spades and six diamonds, the safety play would have cost South his contract because West would give his partner a diamond ruff.

2 men charged with holdup of Garthby caisse

Two men were arraigned in Sherbrooke Court of Sessions this morning on charges arising out of a holdup of the caisse populaire in Garthby April 29 which netted two masked gunmen $1,500.

The pair, Gilles Breton, 30, of Stornoway, and Paul Emile Beaudet, 34, of Montreal, also face a charge of armed robbery in Quebec City.

Three charges were laid here against each man: armed robbery, theft of a car and entering a public building wearing a mask.

The men will re-appear in court for a preliminary hearing on May 21.

Cpl. Rene Simard of the Sherbrooke QPP was in charge of the investigation and was assisted by the Cookshire and Lake Megantic provincial police.

On April 29 two armed and masked men held the manager of the caisse at gun point while they went through a safe emptying it of its cash.

An abandoned car was later found in Stornoway, about 10 miles from the Garthby holdup site. An investigation showed that the car had been stolen there the previous night.

The caisse is situated at the rear of a barber shop in Garthby. A second safe in the barber shop was not touched because it works on a complicated timing mechanism and the manager told the bandits he would be unable to open the safe at that time.

Garthby is about 10 miles from Ham South, where two weeks earlier another caisse populaire was held up. No arrests have been made in connection with the latter holdup.

City's C of C pleased with autoroute news

The Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce has expressed its "great satisfaction" with the new highway projects, recently announced for Sherbrooke by the Provincial Roads Department.

In a statement this morning, the directors of the Sherbrooke Chamber said they were "particularly happy" to learn that the government had finally decided to extend the Eastern Townships autoroute to Sherbrooke city limits. A suggestion to this effect had been made to Guy Peloquin, chairman of the Quebec Autoroute Authority when he spoke at a general meeting of the Chamber in August, 1962.

Also the object of the Chamber's congratulatory remarks were plans to link the autoroute with U.S. Interstate No. 91, which terminates at Rock Island, the projected Sherbrooke-Drummondville expressway and the possible improvement of the Sherbrooke to Lennoxville section of Route 5.

These new projects underline the "incontestable importance" of the City of Sherbrooke as an urban and metropolitan centre of the South Shore, the Chamber says.

"The Directors of the Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce are assured that the city will witness an extremely promising future and that the greatest hopes are now held for the progressive development of the City which will be more than ever the third city of importance in the Province of Quebec," they conclude.

It was also announced this morning that the annual general meeting of the Chamber will be held June 6 in the Sherbrooke Social Club, at which time members will hear the annual reports of the president and outgoing treasurer.

Members and their wives have been asked to attend the meeting, which will include dinner and dancing. This will be the only mixed meeting of the Chamber year.

Johnson to speak

Opposition Leader Daniel Johnson and a number of his Union Nationale supporters in the Quebec Legislative Assembly will address a public meeting in East Angus Sunday evening.

This gathering will be of a regional nature and in addition to Mr. Johnson the speakers will include Claude Gosselin, MLA for Compton; Rene Levoie, MLA for Wolfe, and Eloi Guillemette, MLA for Frontenac.

The meeting, which is scheduled for 8 p.m., will be held in Notre-Dame-de-la-Garde church hall, East Angus.

Magog meeting

MAGOG — (Special) — The City of Magog will resume its May council meeting this evening, which was adjourned from last Friday evening. Several items of business remain on the agenda, among which were the hearing of tenders.

The meeting, which is open to the public, is scheduled to start at 8 p.m.

Schedule band festival

AYER'S CLIFF — (Special) — A directors meeting of the Ayer's Cliff Fair Board took place on Monday at the hall of the county building.

The tentative program for the August fair features a band festival on the Wednesday opening night.

Thursday night will feature a horse-pulling contest and oxen-pulling competition. Friday night events are still being planned but it is expected the Coaticook majorettes will present a demonstration. Saturday night, the Hell Drivers will be back.

Clark Jones of Tomifobia is donating a pony for a girl's competition to be announced and the Fair board will give a bicycle for a boy's contest, also to be announced.

Mrs. M. B. Corey, secretary-treasurer announced the prize committee have met and she is now preparing the prize list.

A request from a man in Coaticook to rent the fair grounds track for car racing is to be studied by the grounds committee.

The directors discussed new barns and the decision is to build a barn suitable for swine exhibit at one end and sheep at the other. This will be erected at the back of the cattle barns. After the directors adjourned their meeting the Building and Grounds committee met to plan the building.

It was reported improvements are being made to the exhibit ring. A director will clean up the remains of a barn that was burned and another director will be chairman of a few repair jobs on the various buildings on the grounds.

It was decided to allow the Massawippi Light Horse Association to use the grounds for a period of two weeks to a month for the purpose of teaching riding lessons to a group who are interested. It was decided that the association should be responsible for their own insurance and they should clean the field when they are finished the course.

To honor ET-born minister

An Iowa Episcopal priest, born and educated in the Eastern Township's, will be honored May 15 and 16 at the 112th annual convention of the Diocese of Iowa in Sioux City.

Rev. Robert Arthur Cowling celebrates his 60th anniversary of his ordination this year.

Rev. Cowling was born in Bury, February 19, 1880. His family moved to East Angus and Father Cowling attended school there until he was 14. He later lived with great-aunt, Mrs. Elizabeth Trigg and attended school at Cookshire. After graduation at 16 he worked for a year and then entered Bishop's College at Lennoxville. He graduated with honors from the five-year course at 22.

Too young to be ordained in the diaconate, he spent waiting time at Grosse Isle in the Magdalen Islands in the St. Lawrence River where he taught school and conducted services on Sunday. In June, 1903, he was ordained a deacon, at Lennoxville and the next year served missions at Chicoutimi and Lake St. John. He was ordained to the priesthood June 19, 1904 at Sherbrooke.

In the years that followed he served in many Ontario areas and after his retirement moved to the Morningside section of Sioux City.

The handling of bombs, threats taught at city police course

Instruction in the handling of bombs and preparations to be made by police forces in the investigation of bomb threats was the topic of a lecture given yesterday by an agent of the FBI at the Fourth Annual Regional Police School being held here.

"Bombing and threats of bombing have caused law-abiding citizens to hold grave fears for the welfare of themselves and their loved ones and people look to the police for protection and relief from actual and threatened violence," said Special Agent J. A. McGraw.

Explosive materials discussed and defined included "low" explosives such as black powder, high explosives, dynamite, safety fuses and blasting caps.

Upon discovery of a bomb or a suspected bomb certain steps should be taken by police:

(1) Clear the danger area of all occupants.
(2) Establish an organized guard outside danger area.
(3) Arrange for medical aid to stand by.
(4) Shut off power, gas and fuel lines leading in.
(5) Remove inflammable materials.
(6) Notify local fire department and rescue squad.
(7) Obtain services of a competent explosives expert.
(8) Check and have available fire extinguishing equipment.
(9) Arrange for use of portable X-ray equipment.
(10) Avoid moving any article which may be connected with bomb or could act as a trigger mechanism.

The police officers were also given instruction in the principles of defensive tactics by Special Agent J. C. Mee of the FBI. Later a conference was held with representative of the R.C.M.P.

Today the program consisted of a detailed explanation of the cooperative services of the FBI followed by a conference with a representative of the RCMP.

The fugitive felon will be the topic of a lecture by Special Agent E. A. McShane of the FBI.

On Thursday a lecture by E. A. McShane on the investigation of stolen cars, will be given followed by a film entitled: Salvage Racket, A panel

Truck rams freight train in Richmond

RICHMOND — (Special) — A. E. St. Laurent and his helper, Marc Peloquin of St. Simon de Bagot narrowly escaped death Tuesday when their truck hit a passing freight train at the CNR crossing near the MacKenzie Bridge.

St. Laurent, who haul animals in his heavy truck, was crossing the bridge from Melbourne into Richmond when his brakes apparently failed. He tried to make a turn in order to avoid hitting the Sherbrooke - Richmond freight, but rammed the boxcars.

The truck received some damages, but the two men escaped unscathed.

Constable Claude Lupien of the local police investigated the accident which happened at 5:45 p.m.

Vocational service Rotary talk topic

Examples of what vocational service can do for a community were outlined Tuesday night to members of the Sherbrooke Rotary Club by chairman of the Montreal Rotary Club's vocational service committee, banker A. Maver.

"There is always some need in a community where vocational service can help," stated Mr. Maver as he outlined what the Montreal committee undertakes.

The committee in this club of over 400 members is divided into sub-committees. Duties include the lining up of classification talks which, followed by a question period have proved to be "some of most informative and entertaining of all the speeches we have ever had," he said.

Visits to manufacturing and industrial plants and trade schools have informed members of progress in all fields, Mr. Maver said and plans are now underway for visits to the Place des Arts and Sir George Williams University.

A third subcommittee plans inter-club visits, some to clubs in the United States. Mr. Maver pointed out the international co-operation and assistance the Rotary Club has.

He outlined the Junior Achievement program which began in the 1920s to give high school students a better understanding of the business world, and to provide them with a form of economic education.

Another program has to do with Canada's two cultures, said Mr. Maver. A summer exchange program is underway to bring English and French - speaking people into areas where they will receive a better understanding of each others cultures.

School dropouts are another undertaking said Mr. Maver. "We hope to get a pilot operation of this program underway," said Mr. Mayer.

The program will not only include the encouragement to keep students in school, he said, but also seek vocational training for those "others" who will not go on.

Management training, vocational guidance career days and auto-driving were also programs outlined last night by the speaker.

Seated at head table were Emilien Gingras, Jim Wark, Howard Moffatt, Mr. Maver, club president Frank Pearson, Doug Stevenson, Art Kerridge, George St. Pierre and John Gendron.

Bird watcher's notes

By J. GRAHAM PATRIQUIN

It takes more than intermittent rain and thunder-showers to spoil a morning at the headwaters of the Watopeka, where Canada Paper Company has its extensive and well-developed woods limits. 32 observers identified 51 species, including 8 Warblers, in the area. Flycatchers were not too prominent, but Winter Wrens vied with the ubiquitous Oven-bird for top rating on the noise meter. The McLenahans provided good food for all, and each field man and woman got a Lansdowne calendar as a memento. Good show!

Having vivid memories of our own first-views (and hopes of more to come), we get a charge from the reaction shown by field-trippers and others to their first sights of rare or uncommon birds. Probably the Brown-capped Chickadee on Saturday morning did not notice what David Smith was wearing, but what a difference a cap made to that highly-pleased observer! And a few nights ago, a banker, whose intelligent and precise description was worthy of a veteran field man, learned that he'd seen his first Evening Grosbeaks.

Freeman Sutton, who lives between Barnston and Kingscroft, inquired about Club interest in nesting Great Horned Owls. The reaction he met was excitement, and the nest and young Owls have been under close scrutiny since his thoughtful communication. This incident points up a request for help in field research. If anyone in our area has definite know

Building and teaching advances highlight past year at U of S

Important advances in construction and teaching highlighted the 1962-63 academic year of the University of Sherbrooke, the university's annual report shows.

Professors specializing in the same discipline were, for the first time grouped in departments, so that specialists will not be dispersed and isolated in the different faculties and to permit them to conduct research in groups as well as to establish programs of study.

The Faculty of arts was divided into the following departments: philosophy, French, English, latin, history, geography and economics.

The Science Faculty consisted of chemistry, mathematics, physics, biology, electrical, civil and mechanical engineering departments.

The Faculty of Commerce was classified into two departments—Accounting and business administration.

The Faculty of Education Sciences was divided into psychology, pedagogy, physical education and methods.

A 20 per cent increase on the number of students registered was recorded during the year as well as 27 more members of the teaching staff.

In construction of new buildings, a library was completed during the year which will serve as a general library, supplementing the exisiting faculty book collections.

A 460 room students residence was completed and operations began in two important buildings—The Central Administration Building and the Faculty of Education Sciences Building.

The library has space for over 300,000 volumes and a lecture hall seating 1600. The annual report says that the latest facilities, and the landscaping of grounds which surround them complete phase 1 of the university's building program. They were financed by $2,914,000 in grants, bringing the total assets of the University to $13,304,420. This figure includes $891,787 for land owned by the university, $10,269,661 for buildings, $1,933,582 for instruments and laboratories $207,900 for libraries and $1,490 in bank funds.

The University of Sherbrooke ran up a $45,283 deficit during the 1962-63 fiscal year. During 1961-62 a surplus of $126,749 had been recorded. The worsening financial situation is attributed to a $640,000 increase in expenditures.

A total of 6,616 students were registered at the University during the year (excluding summer courses). There were 4,579 men and 2,037 women in this total. Full time students accounted for 2,827 of the 6,616 registered students. In 1961-62 academic year, 2,304 full time students studied at the university.

Summer courses added another 699 students to the year's total, 385 of whom were men and 699 women.

The faculty consisted of 753 members, 569 full time and 184 part time members.

Degrees awarded included 110 Bachelors of Arts, 10 in Technical Education, 297 in Educaiton, 18 in Household Science, four Bachelors of Commerce, 27 Bachelors of Engineering, 17 licentiates in Law, 33 Masters degrees in Education, 11 Masters degrees in Business Administration, 17 Masters degrees in Accounting, three licentiates in Education, and seven licentiates in Secondary School Education.

Johannesburg tells whites how to treat African servants

JOHANNESBURG (AP) Most white families in South Africa have at least one African servant. Johannesburg's 70,000 households use 76,000 domestic servants—about 55,000 of them male.

Many of the whites had black playmates as children, and they are inclined to say something like: "I understand the African. I grew up with him and I know him inside out."

Not necessarily true, says a booklet issued by the city to advise whites how to behave with Africans.

It tells white women:

"Never appear before male African servants in a state of undress. This never happens in tribal society.

"Never get angry and lose dignity. Never let children speak to servants in anything but a courteous manner."

It is suggested that the African retains his own teachings and customs, no matter if he is living in a predominantly white city.

Strapping African males, who would have been tribal warriors less than 100 years ago, often resent being ordered around by white housewives.

In their tribal setting they would not dream of complying if asked to make beds, wash or iron women's underclothing or wash soiled linen. That is regarded as women's work.

Another tip is not to use common names like "Mary" or "Jim" for just any African. The African's attitude is: "I have a name like anybody else, use it." Whites also cling to the habit of calling even full-grown African men and women "boy" and "girl."

Hot water heats new diving suit

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — A new diving suit equipped to sustain body temperatures in icy water has been undergoing day-by-day tests by navy frogmen here.

Designed by Leading Seaman W. Nehrinf of the navy's Pacific Command, the suit is insulated with warm water and can be refilled through a pipe while the diver remains underwater.

Frogmen wearing the suit have stayed in icy water 20 feet below the surface practically motionless for 40 minutes without discomfort.

"It's a wonderful suit and we are looking forward to the day it comes into regular use in the service," says Lieut. Alan Sagar, a senior navy diving officer who has tested it himself.

The suit doesn't cover the arms or feet but Lieut. Sagar says the body warmth is spread to the hands through normal circulation.

Sea water is just as good as fresh water, so that all that is needed is a heat source on board.

A trials and research team in Ottawa is to make the final decision on the suit.

Exam-cram class meets success

VANCOUVER (CP)—An educational experiment by the Vancouver school board has turned out "a whopping success."

The experiment is "exam cramming classes," held on Saturdays for high school students preparing to write university entrance examinations. Enrolment totalled 1,200 on the first night, and rose to 1,800 in the first week.

The courses, held for two-hour periods on nine successive Saturdays, cover the highlights of Grade 12 instruction in English, mathematics, social studies, chemistry and physics.

"Students can come for one session or for the entire nine days," says Sherry Walmsley, night school director and co-ordinator of the Saturday program.

Cost for one session is $1 while the fee for the whole program is $6. Adults taking night school or correspondence courses are also eligible for enrolment, Mr. Walmsley says. Instructors are teachers from city schools.

Tourist promotion in the Townships

The Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce's suggestion that more promotion material about the city be supplied to publications that have wide and general circulation is a sound one.

And it is heartening to note that city council, discussing the suggestion at its weekly meeting Monday night, has acted upon the thought with promptness.

Sherbrooke is situated in one of the richest potential summer tourist areas in Quebec. Development of the holiday industry, confined in the past to only a few localities, is beginning to become more widespread. The motel business is more common in the Townships than it used to be.

Within a few years, three major autoroutes will criss-cross, the Townships, with Sherbrooke acting as their hub. More visitors than ever before will be coming into this area.

And of course, there is a world's fair coming up less than 100 miles away in 1967.

All of these things will represent a tremendous stimulus to the tourist industry in the Eastern Townships. But it is important that we be prepared to respond properly to it.

Promotion of the city in provincial and federal travel literature, and in all other media specializing in travel information is one of the best ways to prepare.

And it need not be confined to Sherbrooke. There are literally hundreds of communities and districts in the Townships that are eminently worth promoting. There is no reason why they could not emulate Sherbrooke in making sure their attributes are made known to the travelling public.

Dentists may advise against tooth pulling, but why do they have to drill it into us?

Bitter alternative to Khrushchev

When reports, later proved false, spread around the world that Nikita Khrushchev had departed this life, concern swept the various world capitals. And the reason for this concern is understandable from recent utterances by Boris Guldenwasserky whom many regard as one of the probable successors to Mr. K.

Boris, who apparently has strong support of many of the left-wing Communist leaders, has delivered a series of blistering attacks on the Russian Premier, whom he regards as being "soft" on capitalism. He condemns Khrushchev for being "cowardly" in backing down during the Cuban crisis and calls his "peaceful co-existence" as a "loose policy.

Guldenwasserky has indicated that if he ever becomes premier he would put the Americans in their place. He would give the Russian field commanders the right to set off a hydrogen bomb if they felt it justified and he would return nuclear weapons to Cuba.

On the domestic front he would do away with every modification of Communism in the past forty years and return to the principles of Marx and Lenin.

Unfortunately there are indications that Boris finds many backers in Soviet high places, especially among one-time leaders who have been relegated to the background during recent years.

For the sake of the whole world it is to be hoped that Khrushchev, for all his faults, will be able to concentrate the position of the moderate element in the Communist hierarchy before being called upon to lay down the burden of his office.

Even a homely man can get safely through all traffic lights on his good looks.

Confounding official confusion

One of the beauties of official pronouncements is that they can say a lot but tell very little.

Recently the Canadian Importers Association asked the Tariff Board at Ottawa to define a machine for import duty purposes.

The following answer was forthcoming:

"In the technical language of mechanics, it would appear, such a simple device as a lever, a wedge, a wheel and axle, a pulley, a screw or an inclined plane is called a machine; however, in ordinary language, an article is not commonly called a machine unless it is more complex than any of these — according to one dictionary, unless it is a more or less combination of mechanical parts.

" . . . It is well established that the words of the Customs Tariff are to be construed as they are understood in ordinary language unless there is clear indication to the contrary."

Well, who asked?

Other papers say:

Good intentions vital to reform

Toronto Globe and Mail

Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker complained in a speech in Toronto this week that much of the criticism directed by the press at the performance of Parliament is cynical or ill-informed.

Prime Minister Lester Pearson has said on several occasions that things in the House of Commons are not really as bad as they seem, but if they are bad, he is ready to do his part in putting them right.

Now comes Mr. Stanley Knowles of the New Democratic Party to tell us in a Canadian Broadcasting Corp. program that things were not what they should have been a few weeks ago, but now they are getting better all the time.

Which of the three should we believe? Perhaps Mr. Knowles is the most straightforward, for he admits past sins before explaining present virtues. He says that the committee on procedures has already succeeded in speeding up the business of the Commons without encroaching upon the rights of MPs, and promises more reforms in the future.

This is encouraging, but procedure is not the only problem. Reforms in the machinery of the House will not work unless there is a willingness on all sides of the Commons to make them work, and Mr. Diefenbaker shows no sign of changing his ways. Indeed, Mr. Diefenbaker sees no need to change his ways, and anyone who criticizes waste of time in the Commons is dismissed as cynical or ignorant.

The test of good intentions will come when the committee on procedures produces its proposals for limiting debate on each piece of legislation. This would require the leaders of the parties to agree on an orderly timetable for the conduct of business. Those who agree to such a reasonable procedure will demonstrate goodwill and respect for Parliament; any who decline will reveal that their true interest is in obstruction and abuse of Parliament.

Mr. Knowles got to the root of the matter, in his broadcast, when he said that what Parliament needs most is parties whose members know what they stand for. When politicians have strong principles and clear programs they are only too anxious to express them in vigorous debate; when they waste time with petty bickering and opportunistic manoeuvring, with procedural squabbling, it is because they have nothing better to do.

The PRAYER FOR TODAY FROM The Upper Room

Take heed lest by any means this liberty of yours become a stumblingblock to them that are weak. (I Corinthians 8:9.)

PRAYER: Our Father, help us at all times and in all places to acknowledge Thy lordship over all. May those whom our lives influence be made aware of Thy presence and power and lordship. In Thy Son's name we ask these things. Amen.

The readers say:

Genius is compensated stigmata

Dear Sir:

The occasional individual emerges from the dull mass of mediocrity, which constitutes the vast majority of all humans, with wisdom, understanding, creative ability, foresight and sensibility, to the extent that there is almost as much difference between him and the ordinary human, as there is between the latter and the animal kingdom.

A definition of genius has been: an individual, who has outstanding ability along certain specified lines, and a corresponding weakness in others. The philosopher Schopenhauer has given another which might be considered more descriptive — A genius is one who sees the world as in a mirror. He has an understanding of the motives and actuating forces which have always motivated human action.

It would appear that the term genius is misapplied unless the resulting thinking or actions of such an individual have been along useful, worthy, and liberally humane lines. It has been applied undeservedly to military leaders and others whose sole achievements have been destructive, and even criminal. Alexander the Great, Caesar, Hitler have all been of that type. The great writers whose efforts have been of such a nature that they have influenced the course of history along worthy lines are the real geniuses, along with those of scientific achievement.

Havelock Ellis in his notable work "British Genius" which is a study along these lines of 1000 representative British geniuses, finds their notable characteristics as being, timidity, illness during childhood, tendencies to neuresthenia or melancholia. They were either large or small in stature, they were handsome, they were forever stumbling or falling, unfortunate love affairs, or married life, a sense of oppression by the world.

Another authority has stated the characteristics of genius as being apathy, lack of common sense, doubt, lack of activity, desire for solitude, impulsiveness, tendency to neuresthenia or melancholia, physical or mental stigmata, vanity, egotism, mysticism, symbolism, sensibility.

There are two schools of thought concerning the nature and cause of genius. One contends that he is a final fruition of the development of man. He does not differ from the ordinary man except that his normal abilities are intensified.

Another would contend that there is a definite connection between genius and degenerative conditions, and that genius has been the result of these defects.

In recent years the terms neurotic and inferiority complex have come into quite common use. A neurotic can be described as an individual, who, due to actual physical or mental stigmata, or some less apparent cause is out of harmony with life. He is a dreamer of dreams while the psychotic is one who attempts to turn them into reality. The neurotic can be obsessed with a feeling of ineffectuality, and it cannot be wished or willed away, because it is based upon the facts, that he has defects or differences which set him apart from the mass. He is a direct result of the stress, strain, insecurity, and the generally barbarous ways of any civilization, even up to and including our own. This, by the process of natural selection, has resulted in superior ability in the upper strata and the degenerative and diseased in the lower.

All world systems have been based upon the oppression of nation by nation, and in the internal life of nations, of man by man. It creeps into any world system.

The ordinary individual has a strong tendency to accept the world which he sees around him at its face value, particularly if his own position is reasonably fortituous. The neurotic, particularly, if he be of the more intelligent type will have a strong tendency to not only examine himself, but the world which he finds around him. He can be surprised to discover that he has been a victim of the propaganda of ulterior interests and motives. That there is much that can be justifiably criticized, and that there can be much justication for his own instinctive reactions.

A true neurotic has great difficulty in adjusting himself to life, where he must mingle and compete with his fellows. We rarely understand in others, qualities and attributes which we do not possess ourselves, and here is one of the neurotic's principal problems. He will be misunderstood. As a rule he is generally more loyal and conscientious than the general run of people. He will, however, generally be suspected at first sight of being inefficient, disloyal and fickle. His instinctive impulse is to achieve, develop skills or attain to knowledge, in order to bolster his self-respect and justify his ego, aside from the urgent necessity for survival.

This intensive urge to justify himself can, in some cases and after prolonged struggle, result in superior ability and wisdom. In fact, in overcoming his inferiority complex he can develop genius. There is a widely held theory that this is the source of genius. It is likened to the formation of the pearl by the oyster, which is caused by the irritation of the small particle of sand which has embedded itself within its shell.

Genius and neurosis are both the result of the physical or mental stigmata. When the handicap has been compensated for by intensive effort, genius results, and when he succumbs to his defects neurosis supervenes, and from the ranks of those who have succumbed, are recruited the inmates of our jails, asylums, and other institutions of public welfare, or he joins the ranks of those who have led ineffectual lives, perpetuated themselves, and handed on their disabilities to other generations. An extremely large proportion of the criminal classes are composed of such. To this factor can be attributed much of the ills of the world. We are skilled in the breeding of live stock, but in the human it is largely left to chance.

Sensibility is the one quality which distinguishes us from the animal, and just in proportion as we have it are we human. It is not something that we are born with, but which we must acquire in the crucible of suffering and sorrow. It is the one quality which enables us to acquire understanding and wisdom. The ordinary man has some discrimination, but no real sensibility, and the neurotic by the possession of it can console himself with the thought that he may have the marshal's baton in is knapsack.

Adler, the great German psychologist, was one of the first to propound this theory of genius, Havelock Ellis in his work "British Geniuses" examines one thousand British Geniuses, and finds that they all fall within this category, particularly all literary and artistic genius.

The image is 'work'

LBJ, the great noncandidate

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — In this year when noncandidates figure so prominently in the contest for the White House, Lyndon B. Johnson is endeavoring to be the greatest noncandidate as long as possible.

The reasons are made plain by Democratic leaders: Incumbent presidents traditionally hold the posture of sticking to the nation's business. Election history indicates it is highly effective at the polls.

Johnson has a particular need to follow this course, since he has so short a time in office in which to make a record and give himself a "presidential image."

The President and his top political aides have concluded that 1964 is a year in which American voters for the most part do not wish to be bombarded with heavy political gunfire, but rather prefer to be "left alone."

He and his associates have watched closely the popular response to Republican campaigning by New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and Arizona Sen. Barry Goldwater. Their New Hampshire outing struck the Johnson forces as especially persuasive that voters this year are not in a mood to be collared on street corners and in supermarkets.

But if the President's public posture is that of the busy statesman, his behind-the-scenes attitude is totally in tune with political necessities — and has been from the start.

Political memos at a pace of three or four a day began finding their way to Johnson's desk months ago. Early talks with his political helpers indicated he was quickly aware of his need to build strength in the northern big-city states, rich in electoral votes.

The most impressive evidence of that concern: Johnson's designation of Kenneth O'Donnell, a major holdover from the late John F. Kennedy's regime, to be his key man for all the large northern states.

This choice demonstrates something else, that O'Donnell has the President's full trust, despite his still-continuing strong links with Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy and the "Kennedy Group."

In similar high standing is Lawrence O'Brien, whose political organizing talents will be put to use the moment he is freed of his congressional liaison duties.

Whatever Johnson's public utterances about Goldwater's delegate strength, the Democratic leaders are operating on the general assumption that the President's 1964 rival most likely will be a moderate Republican.

They count on Johnson the Southerner winning most if not all of the Old South. They believe a moderate Republican of the Nixon-Scranton-Lodge stripe will have to contest them in the northern industrial zones.

One top Democrat rates Ohio the President's biggest problem, since Kennedy lost it by 275,000 in 1960. It has been more or less continuously beset by Democratic feuding.

This man would place in descending order of "trouble" these other states:

- Illinois, where incumbent Democratic Gov. Otto Kerner is under heavy challenge from GOP nominee Chicago organization of Mayor Charles Percy and where the Richard Daley shows signs of age and neglect.
- Pennsylvania, if GOP Gov. William Scranton should become his party's presidential nominee.
- Michigan, where Detroit's heavy Negro population may not be easily persuaded that Johnson is the civil rights battler they want.

Democratic strategists fully expect the President's phenomenal popularity, as measured in opinion polls, to be modified sharply as soon as the Republicans get their presidential horse in mid-July. One man guesses the President's lead percentage will drop to the range of 58 to 42. He adds:

"I can see the headlines saying Johnson has slipped. But it has to come. The present figures are completely unrealistic for a presidential contest."

These same strategists understand further that Johnson's popular status is not of the same order as the late John Kennedy's. Polls show that much of Johnson's support is still thinly based. Fervent attachment is not often evident.

Kennedy, on the other hand, stirred either great emotional support or great dislike. Few were lukewarm about him. He clearly would have been far easier to "sell" in the big cities though a harder problem elsewhere.

A Democratic leader sees one supreme advantage in this

"Nobody is very mad at Lyndon. He is acepted by all kinds of people who would not accept Kennedy."

Leo Sweeney

From football field to cassock

VANCOUVER (CP) — Leo Sweeney, a football player turned Roman Catholic priest, was no saint as a youngster.

"He liked to box and roughhouse around," recalls the mother of the 31-year-old former professional athlete.

Now known as Brother Sweeney, Leo played football with the University of British Columbia in 1951 and found he had a flair for the game. He signed a contract with Calgary Stampeders for the 1952-53 season, then joined British Columbia Lions for their opening season the next year.

Later he decided to become a priest and entered Holy Rosary Scholasticate in Ottawa in 1957 for his training. He will be ordained here June 20 by Most Rev. Martin Johnson, Roman Catholic archbishop of Vancouver.

"We didn't bring him up to be a priest or an athlete," says his mother, Mary Sweeney. "Leo was a regular youngster. He and his brothers got into the normal amount of mischief."

STILL PUZZLED

She is still just a little puzzled over how she came to have two sons enter the priesthood. Leo's eldest brother William is priest-administrator of Prince George Roman Catholic College in the British Columbia north.

"We are just an ordinary Catholic family," she says. "We don't sit in church all day. But the boys just seem to feel that only by serving God could their lives be real.

"We always told them, 'We don't care what you do. Dig ditches if you like. But whatever you decide, do it as well as you possibly can. Then you'll be happy and you'll make us happy, too.' "

BREWED COFFEE

Desert caravans brought Yemen's famous coffee from the mountains where, according to tradition, the beverage was first brewed.

Soon Sweetsburg ward?

Sweetsburg owners vote annexation to Cowansville

By TED BEAUDOIN
(Record staff reporter)

SWEETSBURG — Seventy-five Sweetsburg property owners voted publicly in favor of annexation to Cowansville yesterday morning.

In all, 80 property owners turned out for the vote, and five of them voted against annexation. There were 178 voters eligible. The law required that only 50 per cent of the present eligible voters be required to make the vote stick.

Now, secretary-treasurer of Sweetsburg, Gerard Turmel, has eight days in which to notify J. R. Ouellette, secretary-treasurer of Cowansville of the vote.

"This is being done now," said Mr. Turmel.

Mr. Ouellette said that once the notice is received, Cowansville Council will then give its third and final reading to By-law 410, which is the total annexation of Sweetsburg.

The whole kit then goes to the Department of Municipal Affairs in Quebec for final approval, and if granted, an order-in-council by the legislative assembly will make the decision final. And Sweetsburg, the village, will be known as the Sweetsburg Ward of Cowansville.

If the annexation is made total, Cowansville present nearly 8,000 population will jump another 1,000, said Mr. Ouellette. "Before the first partial annexation was made, Sweetsburg claimed 1,200 residents. Those affected in the first annexation were small in number."

Yesterday morning's meeting, which was officially closed by Dr. M. C. Mooney, mayor, at 12:03 p.m., was attended by Mrs. M. Fregeau, a representative of the Sweetsburg Citizen's Committee — a body originally formed to protest any annexation move, and to fight the original partial annexation.

Mrs. Fregeau assisted Dr. Mooney, Mr. Turmel in checking the electors' list.

The vote itself took two aspects. At first, Dr. Mooney asked for a single public expression on the by-law. All but five persons went to one side of the room as directed. The vote was "declared unanimous."

Then Dr. Mooney asked if anyone would contest his decision, thus assuring a recorded vote — (as demanded by some property owners).

Once the move is made official by publication in the Quebec Official Gazette, Sweetsburg residents will be represented by Norman Browning, alderman for Cowansville Ward 3, until the next civic election in January, 1965.

Advisor for Cowansville, Claude Noiseux, said that during that period, the other wards in Cowansville would be re-shuffled, "some increased and others decreased, and Sweetsburg would then remain a separate ward."

Cowansville Mayor Rolland Desourdy, who also attended the referendum, said "All went as expected and hoped for. We had a feeling that the people had been pro-annexation for a long time. This will allow us to plan for a larger and more beautiful town and provide better futures for our youth."

Sweetsburg Mayor Dr. Mooney said "it is quite evident that the majority is in favor of annexation," and expressed his satisfaction of the results.

SCOUTS — Shown above are the 31 Scouts from Cowansville that took part in the annual Yamaska Valley Boy Scout district camporee held in Warden Friday night and Saturday. The Scouts had to leave the campsite Saturday night because of high winds. They were originally scheduled to leave Sunday morning.

Boy scouts have "good time" on camporee

COWANSVILLE —(Staff) — Cowansville and Yamaska Valley District Boy Scouts spent the better part of Saturday planting trees, clearing brush and burning brush piles to prevent future possible forest fires.

H. Redmile, assistant district commissioner, reported yesterday that all Scouts had "an extremely good time, and we can consider the camporee a success."

The highlight of the short week-end (cut off Saturday night because of high winds, and Sunday because of Mother's Day) was a roastbeef dinner, "cooked over open fires and served to 200 people. It was prepared by 15 Scouts."

Special dinner guests included Ken Birch, district commissioner, S. Shanks, assistant DC, Carle Dane, district council president, and Ralph Boright, host at Happy Valley in Warden.

Mr. Redmile said the conservation theme proved to be highly successful, and urged that such conservation projects be continued.

Meeting at Bedford High School tomorrow will consider regional school proposal

BEDFORD — (Special) — A meeting has been called for 8.00 p.m. tomorrow at the Bedford High School to discuss the building of a regional high school to serve the counties of Missisquoi, Brome and Shefford.

This project has been under study for some time in conjunction with officers of the Department of Education, Quebec and the feasibility of such an institution has been investigated by a firm of techinical consultants appointed for this.

A resolution was passed on April 27, at a special meeting of Bedford School Commissioners asking to be included in the formation of a regional school board under the name of the Protestant regional school board of the District of Bedford."

In order that property owners in the school municipality may have the opportunity of learning more of the project in hand, it has been arranged that W. C. McCullough, Assistant Inspector General and E. H. Annett, Technical Adviser, both of the Department of Protestant Education, Quebec, attend an open meeting with the property owners, when it is expected that the speakers will give a full report on the merits and progress to date of the undertaking.

As this project is a matter of vital importance to the education of present and future pupils of this area, it is hoped that all those - interested will be able to attend the meeting, as it is felt that all concerned should be as fully informed as possible of the reasons for and advantages to be gained from the establishment of a composite regional high school which also will include the teaching of technical courses in a wide range of subjects.

Smethurst-Taylor wedding

The marriage of Shirley Margaret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Edward Taylor, of Lennoxville, to Mr. Norman Edward Smethurst, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Smethurst, of Noranda, took place on April 25, 1964, at 2 o'clock in the Lennoxville United Church. Rev. A. B. Lovelace officiating. Mrs. F. Fox played the wedding music and Mr. Robert Hughes-Games sang during the signing of the register. White, pink and flame colored gladioli were used to decorate the church.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length bell-shaped gown of white silk, fashioned with a fine lace bodice, having a scooped neckline and long sleeves ending in points over the hands. Her shoulder length veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a circlet crown of corded silk, trimmed with small droplet pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of red and pink roses.

Miss Sharron Fleming, as maid of honor, wore a dress of pink nylon, with matching coronet of tulle. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink carnations.

Mr. David Cude acted as best man and the ushers were Messrs. Bill Taylor, brother of the bride and Gary Smethurst, brother of the groom.

The bride's mother was attired in a double knit two-piece royal blue suit, winter white accessories and a corsage of red roses.

The groom's mother wore a turquoise suit, white accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Mrs. V. James, the bride's grandmother, wore a navy blue dress, paler blue hat, and a corsage of red roses.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the King George Hotel, where the bride's table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake.

Later the couple left for Toronto, Ont., travelling by plane, the bride wore a two-piece turquoise double knit suit, with beige accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Guests attended the wedding from Montreal, Noranda, Quebec, Toronto, Town of Brossard, St. Lambert, Cornwall, Ont., Lennoxville, and Sherbrooke.

The couple will reside at 24 Lilywood Road, Toronto, 19, Ont.

Bride elect honored

Miss Thelma Graham, bride-to-be of the month, was guest of honor at a linen shower, at the home of Mrs. G. Jaquith, Portland Avenue. The hostesses were Mrs. G. Jaquith, Mrs. E. Wheeler and Mrs. J. Rugg.

Following greetings to the guest of honor, she was escorted to a seat of honor, decorated with pink and white streamers, and presented with a corsage of pink carnations.

Many gaily wrapped gifts were then presented to the bride elect, by Miss L. A. Smith. After these had been opened and duly admired, the guest of honor expressed her thanks and invited her many friends to her home.

Later games were played and several prizes won, followed by a buffet lunch, the table being decorated with pink candles.

Mrs. P. Gilmartin, mother of the prospective groom poured tea and coffee.

Polly's pointers

by Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — When teaching a baby the art of drinking from a glass, hold a sponge under his chin. This is real help for new mothers like me and encourages one to keep on pursuing what could be a messy task. The baby comes out without a drip. It is really great!—JANET

DEAR POLLY — My darling 10-month-old boy's favorite pastime was to throw all of his toys out of the playpen. A sure cure was to put a large cardboard box in the playpen, put all of his toys in the box and he has a ball. Yes, he still throws all of the toys out of the box but they stay in the pen. Hope this saves other mothers from having aching backs as it has saved me.—MRS. J. E. M.

B of M employees attend senior staff study group

Miss Rita Houle, accountant at the Bank of Montreal's Victoriaville branch, and Miss M. P. Rousseau, second officer at the Cookshire B of M, have been chosen to attend the bank's staff study group for senior women bankers, in Montreal.

The course will be held from May 19 to 29, and Miss Houle and Miss Rousseau will be among 14 senior women bankers from across Canada selected to attend.

Miss Houle has been accountant at the branch since September, 1962, when her appointment became the first of its kind in Quebec. She joined the B of M at Victoriaville in 1950, and later served at branches in Montreal. She returned to Victoriaville in 1960, and served in several posts before being appointed accountant, in 1962.

Miss Rousseau is a native of Cookshire. She joined the B of M there in 1942, as a typist clerk and later served in a number of posts before being appointed second officer at the branch in January, 1961.

The course is the second of its kind to be given by the B of M and is designed to recognize the growing role being played by women in the daily operation of the bank.

Lectures, workshops and discussions are planned to prepare the ladies for further responsibilities at their branches and to acquaint them with the bank's operations at more than 935 branches in Canada.

The course will be held in the B of M's new staff training centre in the new 34-storey C-I-L House building in the heart of downtown Montreal.

MADERA, Calif. (AP)—Melvin Belli, chief defence lawyer in the Jack Ruby murder trial, said Tuesday he will defend Ferdinand Waldo Demara, known as The Great Impostor, who is in jail on charges of grand theft, child molesting and contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Belli made his announcement in San Francisco only a day after Demara said he would act as his own lawyer.

"He's been a client and a friend for a long time," said Belli.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Boxcars of freight, unloaded because of a longshoremen's strike now in its 20th day, are piling up in Canadian National Railways yards here but the fact that the freight is still in the cars seems to have caused few shortages for shoppers.

"There is just as much in the stores as there ever was," said one St. John's resident Tuesday. "I was at the supermarket a day or two ago and I got everything I wanted. There may be a shortage coming, but there's none now."

MONTREAL (CP) — George R. Berry of Ottawa, president of the Canadian Health Insurance Association, said today the medicare storm in Saskatchewan has abated but underneath the "quiet conceals bad-feeling and considerable concern in many quarters about the future."

He told the association's annual meeting the 1963 report of Saskatchewan's medical care insurance commission showed the compulsory scheme was imposed on a medical problem limited in extent.

Only 40 families received benefits of $1,000 or more and only 1,400 families drew $500 or more in benefits.

NEW YORK (AP)—Columbia Broadcasting System News and the American Broadcasting Company announced Tuesday they are withdrawing support from television's Emmy awards and would not accept any awards they might win.

ABC's announcement charged the awards were not determined "on the merits of the programs."

KITCHENER (CP) — The Kitchener-Waterloo District Labor Council Tuesday night voted unanimously to turn down an invitation of membership in the Kitchener Chamber of Commerce, extended by the chamber Feb. 29.

The council's executive committee brought the question to a vote after a study had been made on the chamber's constitution. A council spokesman said the invitation was rejected on the grounds that objectives and beliefs of the two bodies differed too much.

However, the council recommended that they co-operate with the chamber whenever possible on projects where there is no conflict of interest.

TIMMINS (CP) — International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. has filed an appeal with the Ontario Mining Commission, hoping to substantiate its claim to mineral rights under the Timmins Airport.

The company staked 41 claims in the airport after Texas Gulf Sulphur Company made a copper-zinc-silver strike in nearby Kidd Township, but C. D. Egerton, local mining recorder, has refused to file them.

He said Tuesday he considers the mineral rights on the property to be vested in the federal department of transport, which owns the land and operates the airport.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Dr. Albert B. Sabin, developer of live virus oral polio vaccine, said Monday night he has discovered a virus he hopes to prove can cause cancer in humans.

"It would be too good to be true, but it could be true," the famed virus specialist told a meeting of physicians and scientists at Mount Zion Hospital.

"No human cancer has yet been proved to be caused by a virus," Dr. Sabin said. But he and his colleagues, he said, have isolated a virus from the thymus gland of an 18-year-old Cincinnati youth suffering from chest cancer.

Free vote on flag hinted

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson says he hopes MPs will vote as their consciences dictate when the government brings in its design for a national flag.

He also said in the Commons Tuesday that he hopes the flag issue would not carry with it any question of a non - confidence vote in the minority Liberal government.

The government is committed to presenting before Parliament a design for a national flag within a year.

Replying to Robert C. Coates (PC—Cumberland) who asked if there would be a "free vote" —not along party lines—on the government choice, Mr. Pearson said:

"When the time comes to submit the decision of the government to the House of Commons I would hope that every member of the House would vote as his conscience dictates and that there would be no question of confidence or non-confidence in a party sense."

"Another retreat," said Opposition Leader Diefenbaker.

Outside the House, Mr. Coates told reporters that he did not construe Mr. Pearson's remark to mean there necessarily will be a free vote.

However, Barry Mather (NDP —New Westminster), in a statement, interpreted the prime minister's comment to mean that Mr. Pearson favored a free vote.

SUGGESTS PLEBISCITE

Mr. Mather suggested a national plebiscite on the flag issue should be held in conjunction with the next federal general election. The question should be "do you favor the Red Ensign or a distinctive Canadian flag as our national emblem?"

In Tuesday's Commons sitting, a flag preferred by the Creditiste party also sparked a bitter exchange.

The flags—small silk standards of red and white divided diagonally and superimposed by a green maple leaf—decorated each of the Creditiste desks in the Commons.

Nicholas Mandziuk (PC—Marquette) drew official notice to them when he asked Mr. Pearson if he could identify "the foreign symbols or flags displayed on the desks of some honorable members."

"Monstrosity," cried another Conservative MP.

Convicted of impaired driving

A 19-year-old Bulwer youth, convicted in Sherbrooke yesterday of impaired driving, had his driving permit suspended for six months and was fined $100.

The sentence was handed down by Judge Pierre Beaudry in Municipal Court after the youth, Earl Stanley, pleaded guilty as charged.

The charge arose out of a Monday night accident on Belvedere Street South in which three cars were implicated, one of them Stanley's. One person received minor injuries and is still being treated in Sherbrooke Hospital.

Break into freight cars

Three Sherbrooke boys, aged 11 and 12, who had broken into a freight car on the siding at the CPR Terrace appeared in Social Welfare Court before Judge Roger Bouchard yesterday morning.

The boys had broken a seal on the freight car door and upon entering had cut into a number of sacks of grain and flour with a sharp instrument causing an estimated $38 to $40 damages. The produce was the property of the Societie Cooperative de Agriculture of nearby King Street West.

The boys were placed on probation and were released into the custody of their parents because of their ages, said Welfare clerk Gerard Bessette.

GOT A PROBLEM? ASK THE PRO

Q On TV a Pro always waits until the other fellow has putted before he even starts to line up his own putt. Is there some rule that prohibits more than one golfer from lining up their putts at the same time? It sure would speed-up play for us weekenders if we were ready to putt one right after the other.
—Asks Earl Wakser, Dallas, Texas

A There is no rule prohibiting a golfer from lining up his own putt while another is putting. In fact it is recommended provided it does not in any way bother or distract the player who is putting.

Pete Leblanc named president of E.T. Golf Association

Last night's meeting got off on a sad note as Bart Holtham, who has held the post of secretary-treasurer for the past 40 years, handed in his resignation owing to personal reasons. Mr. Holtham has for years been the guiding hand in the Association and his retirement will be a great blow to the group.

In consideration of Mr. Holtham's untiring efforts in handling the affairs of the Association it was unanimously approved that he be named a life member of the group. A total of 35 representatives were on hand for the annual meeting. Only three clubs, Waterloo, Farnham and Granby, were not represented.

Ed Martin of Sherbrooke was named vice-president while the post of secretary-treasurer was left for the incoming executive to decide upon. Five directors were elected, Paul Bruhmuller of Coaticook was re-elected with four new members, Russell Reid of East Angus, Jean Roy, Victoriaville, Bert Cotterell, Mt. Orford, and Jim Innis, of Drummondville.

Drummondville was awarded the E.T. Amateur along with the E.T. Senior and will be played on Aug. 1-2. The E.T. Junior will be played at Mt. Orford, Friday, July 10, while the Southern Canada Power event goes to Richmond, Saturday, July 11.

Granby-St. Paul will be the scene of the E.T. Mixed on Sunday, Aug. 9, with the Father and Son taking place at Coaticook, July 19. The Coogan Mixed takes place in Lennoxville on Sunday, July 15, with the Joe Colby at the Sherbrooke Country Club Saturday, June 27.

Russia may get chance of playing against top Canadian pros if plans for Centennial come through

OTTAWA (CP)—Can Russia ice a hockey team capable of beating a National League club? Or are the experts right in saying that Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens are at least five goals better than the Soviets or any other of the European world amateur hockey powers?

The answers to these questions might be available in 1967.

Putting the Leafs on the same rink as the world's amateur champions is one suggestion for the centennial year that is getting consideration at the National Centennial Commission, the government agency planning Canada's 100th anniversary of Confederation.

It might come off, says Arnold Charbonneau, head of the sports branch of the commission.

There is already a move by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to have the world's amateur title decided in Canada in 1967. And the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto already has indicated interest in providing a rink if the Leafs could be persuaded into playing such a game.

In the long run, Charbonneau said Monday in an interview, the decision on what sports spectacles will be run off in 1967 rests squarely with the sports governing bodies in Canada.

Part of Charbonneau's job is to stir up interest among the sports fraternity in holding special events in 1967. He's been in touch with the 50-odd governing bodies and has been told by 36 of them that they do plan special competitions to mark the centennial.

Once the sports people make up their minds on what they'd like to do—and providing it's a national project of wide interest—Charbonneau will try to sell the idea to centennial commissioners.

On paper, the centennial year looks like a sports feast.

For sure, Canada will host the Pan-American Games and the North American ski championships. The skiers also might add a further international touch by inviting some of Europe's top stars to the event.

There are suggestions for world's amateur championships in boxing, wrestling, fencing, archery and other sports.

There's talk, too, of a marathon race between Marathon, Ont., and Ottawa. And the commission office is abuzz with the idea of a canoe race between Edmonton and Montreal following the trails of the famous explorers.

O'Malley Pond to open May 16 for fishing

The opening of O'Malley Pond, under the control of the Yamaska Conservation Association Inc., will take place May 16 and not as previously announced on May 23.

This is to coincide with the opening of other lakes and ponds which are under the control of other associations in the district. Provincial laws limit the daily catch to 8 trout and also forbid the use of dead or live minnows to be used as bait.

The Yamaska Conservation Association has obtained a right-of-way for the public over the land of Ovila Hamel and fishing from shore will not be allowed as it would not be appreciated by private property owners.

Parking space is available with a charge of 50c having been authorized. Some boats will be available for rental with the rates being 50c per hour for the first 2 days of the season and 35c per hour after that.

Orioles' McNally tosses two-hitter, Yanks lose

Are the chuckin' chicks—Dave McNally and Wally Bunker—ready to replace the kiddie korps as the meat of Baltimore's pitching staff?

McNally, at 21 the senior of the Orioles' fledgling fireballers, joined Bunker in the shutout circle Tuesday night by limiting Washington Senators to two hits in a 5-0 Baltimore victory.

It was McNally's third victory against a single loss and his first shutout since he made his major league debut with a two-hit job, Sept. 26, 1962. Bunker made his big league bow a week ago and pitched a one-hit shutout.

McNally, a left hander, and Bunker, 19, a right hander, now have accounted for five of the Orioles 14 victories while the three remaining members of the kiddie korps — Steve Barber, Chuck Estrada and Milt Pappas —have one victory among them.

McNally, who was 7-8 last year in his first full season, allowed the Senators only a first-inning double by Chuck Hinton and a scratch single by pinch-hitter Fred Valentine in the sixth. McNally walked three and struck out one.

TWINS WIN 11-1

In other sharp pitching performances, Detroit's Mickey Lolich set down New York Yankees with three hits for a 7-2 Tiger victory, Jim Kaat allowed only four hits while Minnesota Twins pounded 15 in an 11-1 walloping of Chicago White Sox and John O'Donoghue and John Wayatt collaborated on a two-hitter as Kansas City Athletics defeated Los Angeles Angels 6-2. Cleveland Indians edged Boston Red Sox 6-5 in the other game on the full American League program.

The Orioles used two of their five stolen bases to advantage in a two-run first against Washington starter Dave Stenhouse before Boog Powell took care of the rest of the scoring with a three-run homer in the third.

Luis Aparicio stole three bases and Willie Kirkland two. Each pilfered second base in the first inning and wound up scoring.

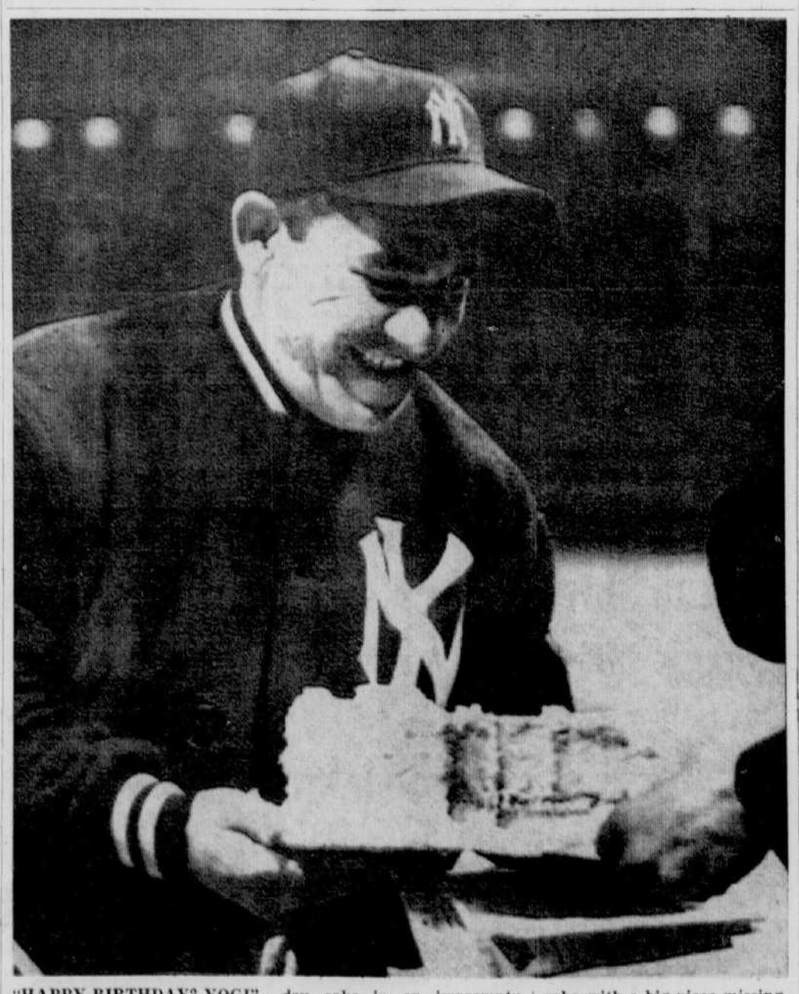

Lolich, now 3-1, gave up a two-run homer to Hector Lopez in the first inning, then set the Yankees down without difficulty, snapping New York's five-game winning streak and ending the Tigers' five-game losing string.

Willie Horton drove in two runs for Detroit with a pair of triples and Don Wert collected three hits, including a two-run double as the Tigers moved ahead to stay in the second inning.

Kaat, 3-1, did not allow the White Sox a hit after the third inning and retired 13 men in order at one stretch. Dave Nicholson's second-inning home run accounted for the Chicago run.

The Twins' offensive included Jimmie Hall's ninth homer and four hits each by Don Mincher and Zoilo Versalles. Mincher, playing first with Harmon Killebrew benched, hit his fifth home run and collected three singles. Versalles drove in three runs with two doubles and two singles.

O'Donoghue weathered four Kansas City errors—three by Wayne Causey — but needed Wayatt's relief help in the eighth inning. Wayatt finished up without allowing the Angels a hit.

"HAPPY BIRTHDAY? YOGI" — Yogi Berra, New York Yankees manager, celebrating his 39th birthday yesterday was presented this birthday cake in an impromptu greeting prior to game with Detroit Tigers. Yogi was all smiles as he was handed the cake with a big piece missing. No explanation was made as to who got the large piece of cake. (AP Wirephoto)

Whopping twin comes up again, $22,524.10 paid

WESTBURY, N.Y. (CP)—Another whopping twin-double payoff turned up at Roosevelt Raceway on the next-to-the-last night of the spring meet Tuesday night when the 4-1-3-3 combination returned $22,524.10 to eight ticketholders.

Country Rhythm, the third winner in as many starts for Stanley Dancer, took the finale to produce the payoff.

But for a fleeting instant it looked as if the world record payoff of $132,232.80, set last Apri' 28, was in danger. My Kid, a 10-to-1 shot driven by Billy Haughton, would have yielded $180,123.20 if he had won.

He loomed boldly turning for home but hung toward the end to finish third.

The winning horses were Hardy St. Patrick ($15.50), Hickory Adios ($8.10), Greentree Tony ($38.80) and Country Rhythm ($8.10).

YESTERDAY'S STARS

Batting—Willie Mays, Giants, hit 12th and 13th homers, added single and drove in four runs, extending his hitting streak to 19 games and lifting his batting average to .478 in San Francisco's 6-0 victory over Houston Colts.

Pitching—Dave McNally, Orioles, checked Washington on two hits for third victory against one loss as Baltimore whipped Senators 5-0.

Wee Willie runs his average to astronomical .478 as Juan blanks Colts, Cubs nip Dodgers 3-2

It's rough enough to cope with either Willie Mays or Juan Marichal by himself. But when San Francisco Giants' torrid two-some get together it's downright impossible.

Mays and Marichal persecuted Houston Colts Tuesday night as the Giants breezed to a 6-0 victory. It was Marichal's sixth victory in as many decisions, trimming his earned-run average to 1.73, and his second straight shutout.

Mays, who leads the National League in practically everything offensively, ran his average to an astromical .478 with his 12th and 13th homers and a single in five trips, driving in four runs.

In the seven games Marichal has started, Mays had 18 hits in 28 at bats with seven home runs, 16 runs batted in and a .643 average.

It is also a fact that Mays would have to go hitless in his next 53 at bats for his average to drop to a mortal .301. And, by the time Mays [illegible] swings, how many National Leaguers will still be hitting .301?

As for Marichal, the veteran right hander who won 25 games last year is 12 days ahead of the pace he set in 1963 when he didn't win his sixth game until May 24. And the season started a week later this year.

DEAN LAST TO WIN 30

For the record the last .400 hitter was Ted Williams in 1941 with .406. The last 30-game winner was Dizzy Dean in 1934 with 30-7. Modern baseball has never had a .400 hitter and 30-game winner on the same club.

In other NL games Tuesday, Milwaukee Braves blanked New York Mets 2-0 behind Frank Fischer's three - hitter; Pittsburgh Pirates nipped Cincinnati Reds 3-2 in a four hour, rain-interrupted marathon; St. Louis Cardinals topped Philadelphia Phillies 4-2 behind Curt Simmons; and Chicago Cubs nipped Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2 on Dick Tracewski's ninth-inning error.

Mays' three hi's extended his batting streak to 19 games. After flying out in the first inning he battered Houston starter Skinny Brown for a solo homer in the third and a two-run shot in the fifth. His seventh-inning single also drove in a run.

Marichal allowed just five hits and retired 14 in a row over one stretch while winning his 12th straight over a two - season stretch.

Milwaukee's Fischer faced just 29 batters and got all the runs he needed when rookie [illegible] ma- swings, how many National League homer against Met starter Al Jackson.

The Braves' right hander retired the first 12 batters he faced before Frank Thomas' fifth-inning double broke the spell. That was as far as any Met got all night.

Cincinnati's Jim Maloney pitched four perfect innings before rain interrupted the Pirates-Reds game at Pittsburgh. After a 1½-hour wait, play was resumed, and Maloney quickly lost his no-hitter and shutout when Smoky Burgess singled and ex-Red Gene Freese homered to tie it 2-2.

After another 28-minute delay, the Pirates won it without a hit in the eighth on an error, a fielder's choice and two walks off Maloney.

Curt Simmons beat the Phillies for the 13th time in 15 decisions since they released him four years ago but needed eighth-inning help from Roger Craig to do it.

Leading 4-1, Simmons gave up a single to Tony Gonzalez and Danny Carter with one out in the eighth. Craig came on and after Gus Triandos' double delivered one run, the lanky Cardinal retired the side and blanked the Phils in the ninth to save it.

Giants' Willie Mays seems headed for magic pinnacle of .400, has great possibilities, says Williams

NEW YORK (AP)—The odds against Willie Mays hitting .400 this year are about 400 to 1 but it is surprising how many knowledgeable baseball people think San Francisco Giants' superb centre fielder may accomplish the seemingly impossible.

Ted Williams, the last major leaguer to reach that magic pinnacle, has always maintained the .400 figure will be reached again. In a recent interview he picked Mays, Henry Aaron, Al Kaline and Mickey Mantle as those capable of doing it.

"The fellow who hits .400 must get off to a blazing start," said Williams, who batted .406 with Boston Red Sox in 1941. "Then he must avoid a long batting slump.

"He must get the breaks and he must have speed afoot. You've got to get your share of infield hits to keep that average up.

"The year I batted .388, (1957) I didn't get a single leg hit. If I had been able to beat out six infield hits, I would have hit .400 again."

Not even Williams in his .406 season got off to such a flying start as Mays this season. After his first 20 games in 1941, Williams was hitting .375. Willie, for the same period, was more than 100 points higher.

Stan Musial, perhaps the greatest of all National League hitters, thinks Mays has a chance.

"Common sense tells you that nobody, no matter how great a hitter he is, will hit .400 in this day and age," said Musial, whose highest average was .376 in 1948. "But if anybody can do it, Mays is the man.

"Willie is an extraordinary streak hitter and, who knows, he might just streak right through the season."

One of the least surprised by Mays' remarkable early season hitting is Jackie Robinson, a National League batting champ with .342 in 1949.

"A fellow asked me last winter about Mays and I told him that, in my opinion, Willie hadn't yet reached his peak," said the former Brooklyn Dodger star. "I've always felt that Mays had the qualifications to be the next .400 hitter."

Mays' bat literally has been aflame since opening day. Through the first month of the campaign Wondrous Willie hit a scorching .481. He has hit safely in all but one of his 22 games and through Tuesday's game he had connected safely at least once in 19 consecutive games.

Mays has had good starts before but never like this. Two years ago, he had four home runs in his first seven games. But this year 13 of his first 42 hits were home runs.

A writer's notes

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Memory has no boss.

You can't tell your mind what to retain as worthwhile and what to forget as worthless. It decides for yourself.

No one really ever has control over the grabbag quality of his history, no matter how compulsively neat and orderly he may be in his daily life. The older he grows, the more his memories rule him.

You've been through life's mill yourself, if you can look back and remember when —

You could be the life of any party by imitating Charlie Chaplin's duck-footed waddle.

Ladies were so delicate and fainted so often that every well-run household kept a bottle of smelling salts handy.

A wife who held a job outside the home tried to keep that fact from her relatives — as if it were a kind of disgrace.

You were a real movie fan if you knew that the last name of Theda Bara, the vamp, was Arab spelled backwards.

It was widely believed that business depressions were caused by sun spots and that, anyway, there wasn't much that man could do to prevent them or keep them from running their course.

HOW ABOUT CORSETS?

One of the things married men wondered about was how in tarnation single girls ever managed to lace themselves into their corsets without help.

A boy's dream of getting rich started by trying to sell home-made lemonade from an orange crate stand in front of his home at a cent a glass.

If your best girl held a spring buttercup under your chin and it reflected a yellow tint, this proved your were fond of butter — and she was fond of you.

The richest man in the community lived in the house that had the widest front porch.

If you couldn't afford to pay spot cash for it, you didn't buy it.

Those were the days! Remember?

Legion Ladies at Border set May date for sale

STANSTEAD — The regular monthly meeting of the Auxiliary of Stanstead Frontier Branch No. 5, Canadian Legion, took place in the Memorial Home, May 6.

The application of Mrs. Maureen (Miller) Harding was approved, she will be welcomed when attending her first meeting.

The reports showed a satisfactory sum of money realized from the serving of the dart team supper, May 1.

Plans were finalized for the rummage sale taking place in the Rock Island town hall on May 23, starting at 9 a.m. Several members volunteered to work on Friday evening to prepare for the Saturday sale, others offered to assist at the sale. Donations of rummage will be picked up if contact is made with Mrs. Keith Armstrong, Stanstead; Mrs. Gladys Chartier, lower and Center Rock Island; Mrs. George Hatch, east section of Rock Island; and Mrs. Maud Probert, Beebe.

The meeting of the Auxiliary on June 2, will feature a plastic demostration with a percentage of sales going into the Auxiliary treasury. Hostesses for the meeting will be Mrs. Vernice Middleton, Mrs. Mariam Osborne, Mrs. Aileen Roy, Mrs. Aileen Arbey and Mrs. Gladys Chartier.

The hostesses Mrs. Marion Cox, Mrs. Myra Armstrong, Mrs. June Leslie and Mrs. Nellie Cooper, served lunch in the downstairs hall, at the close of the meeting.

Spring bazaar, supper date set by Beebe U.C.W.

BEEBE — The United Church Women of Wesley United Church met at the home of Mrs. Beverley Haselton, on May 6, with devotions led by Mrs. Rogers, assisted by Mrs. Margaret Mosher.

Plans were completed for the annual spring bazaar and supper, which is to be held on May 23, at the church hall. Committees were named. The U.C.W., was approached by the Fish and Game Club with a suggestion that the group cater to a turkey dinner for the club. After much discussion, it was decided not to accept the offer.

The Christmas gift for the foster child, through the foster parent plan, was decided on and will be forwarded immediately to Toronto, where it will be taken care of.

Each year the church group has an allocation to fulfill, this year the gift is to be for a boy from five to nine years, and is to be sent shortly to a settlement, at Oka.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Haselton, bringing a pleasant evening to a close.

Busy session is held by U.C.W. at Birchton

BIRCHTON — The monthly business meeting of the local unit of the U.C.W., was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Latewood, with a good attendance. Mrs. Howard Picard, led the devotional period giving a Scriptural reading and talk.

The treasurer's report showed a balance of $253.56 on hand; the sunshine committee reported flowers and cards sent to members who were ill; the work committee turned in $75 to the General Fund proceeds from articles and materials sold to date.

The group voted to accept the allocation of a Christmas gift for a boy aged five to nine years.

Final plans were made for the catering at the Sayers-Jackson wedding on May 30, with Mrs. O. Bailey, Mrs. Stanley Taylor and Mrs. Robert Kirkby, appointed as the committee.

It was voted to cancel the postponed spring supper, and tentative plans were started for the fall supper, with an established date of Sept. 19.

The members are asked to gather on May 20 for the hall spring cleaning.

The June meeting will be held at the Desruisseaux home, with Mrs. Robert Kirkby, as assisting hostess.

Good speech takes sweat

HALIFAX (CP) — Almost everyone has the basic ability to speak well but "good sweating work" is also needed if you're going to improve your speech, says Jenny Archibald, drama adviser for the Nova Scotia education department.

"You can't get a pill, swallow it and expect to speak well."

The best way to learn good speech habits, she says, is to consult a speech specialist. This is particularly true if you are thinking of a career where effective speaking is especially important — theatre, politics, law.

But if you want to improve without the help of a specialist, you can "learn to listen."

Pick someone whose speech you admire — a television announcer or perhaps an actor or actress—and "listen hard and try to emulate same."

Miss Archibald, who also instructs classes in speech technique, emphasizes that "motivation is the basis of all education," and therefore the desire to speak well is particularly important.

GIVES CONFIDENCE

The advantages are obvious, even if your field isn't one where speech habits are evident to a large audience. In personal and business relations, for example, a person who speaks clearly gives his listener a sense of confidence in him.

And when you know you're giving others this sort of feeling, the chances are you'll be more self-confident as well, an asset whether you're a salesman or an office boy trying to work your way up.

Miss Archibald says adults have a duty to set an example for young people by showing an appreciation of the beauty of language.

Teachers can do much by making students aware of how attractive good speech can be but "I'm sorry to say this isn't being done."

With a bachelor's degree in music and experience in teaching and drama in addition to acting and directing herself, Miss Archibald feels good conversational speech is an advantage for singers because it is likely to be translated into good diction in singing.

Food situation better in China

By ADAM KELLETT-LONG

PEKING (Reuters)—China's food situation continues to improve and now is almost comparable to the best periods since the Communists came to power in 1949, according to non-Communist Chinese sources.

A rationing system still is in force for the most basic foodstuffs but, with the notable exception of rice and grain, nearly all are available off the ration at slightly higher prices.

Particularly big increases are evident in pork, fish and eggs. The last two items now are being sold completely ration-free in most cities.

In Peking, Shanghai and Canton, vegetables have been in plentiful supply and unrationed for more than a year.

Official reports said that 2½ times as much pork was sold in China during the first three months of this year as during the corresponding period last year while egg consumption rose more than 40 per cent.

If this is accurate, the percentage increases over 1962 must be staggering.

MONEY LACKING

Many Chinese sources said lack of purchasing power now is the main factor inhibiting fuller and more varied meals.

Despite some wage increases last year, the amount of cash in people's pockets is not keeping up with the increase in food supplies or, for that matter, consumer goods.

With the food situation under control, at least for the moment, the government is paying more attention to the other big problem-clothing.

Plans for expansion of both the scope and output of the textile industry were announced recently.

Cotton cloth still is strictly rationed but synthetic shirts and materials are beginning to appear in Peking shops at fairly-stiff prices.

China's synthetic fibre industry still is in its infancy but many foreign observers here believe it will be the eventual answer to the country's clothing problem. China's own cotton production, they said, will never be adequate to provide more than 700,000,000 people with plentiful ration-free clothing.

MULTILINGUAL NATION

Uganda's native inhabitants speak four different groups of languages, each built up on different principles and all mutually unintelligible.

'Ham' operators talk and whole world talks back

By DAVID WEBSTER
(Record staff reporter)

To a small room whose window overlooks the houses and hills of Sherbrooke's north ward come voices from the four corners of the world.

The room contains the transmitter and radio equipment of 'ham' operator Ken Ellis.

Different parts of the world come in strongly at different times of the day, he said in a recent interview.

And so, as the afternoon sun shines warm in the south-facing window of Mr. Ellis apartment, European voices are heard on the set. Later transmissions from Africa are heard. In the early evening, when the sun of the dying day bathes the hills of the St. Francis Valley with its soft golden light, the set brings strange voices from South America. And later, when Sherbrooke is marked under the black night sky by a thousand electric gleams, the all-hearing receiver broadcasts sounds from the far-away Pacific.

"Sometimes I stay up here all night listening to messages," he said.

Mr. Ellis said that he has been a licenced amateur for six years and has sent and received from operators in over 160 countries. One wall of his radio room has a large notice board covered with QSL cards — cards sent to acknowledge two-way communication. There were cards from such far-flung and exotic countries as Peru, Madagascar, New Zealand, Australia, Vatican City, Russia, Iceland, and St. Pierre and Miquelon.

"I also contacted an operator at Christmas Island in the Pacific, Ocean," he said. He was with the US armed forces when they were conducting atomic tests there.

Russian "ham" operators are very active on the air waves, said Mr. Ellis. "Amateur operating is considered a sport in Russia", he said, "and is highly promoted by the government." I've received dozens of cards from Russian operators."

There is no chance of spying though, he said, for amateur broadcasting is strictly controlled in all countries. Any messages sent can be monitored so one has to keep messages strictly non-political.

One makes some very unusual contacts sometimes," said Mr. Ellis. "When the ship was built as a replica of the Bounty in Nova Scotia and sailed to the Pacific to make a movie, I was in contact with the ship half a dozen times while it was in the Pacific."

There is a CBC employee in Ghana who often sends messages, he said, and some American military bases in the Antarctic. He showed a card from one of them.

There is no language problem to an English-speaking operator, he said, for it is surprising how much English is spoken on the air waves. The Europeans especially, he said, have a flawless command of the language. About the only place where English isn't spoken, is South America and that too is changing.

He said that he had also had conversations in French with African operators.

Mr. Ellis sends about half of his messages by code and half in conversation by speech on his radio-telephone, he said. Code is easier to receive when conditions are bad, he said.

In the room are receiver, transmitter, and amplifier. Above the apartment, looking like a large television aerial is an adjustable aerial that can be turned mechanically for communication to different parts of the world. The farthest distance he can communicate is to Australia transmitting northeast, he said. Conditions are best for this in the early evening.

Every operator has a call sign by which others can identify him and his location, said Mr. Ellis. "For instance my own call sign is VE2BCK. VE stands for Canada, 2 stands for Quebec, while BCK is my own call." Thus, anyone who receives my call letters knows that I'm calling from the province of Quebec."

Mr. Ellis said he took up radio operating some years ago when he was working in the bush near Dawson Creek, B.C., and, as he said, there wasn't much to do.

Sawyerville man rebuilding his equipment

SAWYERVILLE — Sawyerville has a jig-saw puzzle.

It stretches from the Armon McBurney's basement to his second-floor radio room, and out behind his house for 275 feet.

It consists of the parts of "ham" radio that he plans to reassemble between now and the fall.

In the radio room the receiver is set up and in operation.

"Wherever you look in this place there's radio stuff," said Mr. McBurney as he showed the radio room during a recent interview.

He was right.

The floor covered with all sorts of parts—wires, metal frames, dials, and radio tubes.

In another corner of the room was a desk similarly covered with papers and periodicals, gizmos and gadgets. And radio tubes.

More electronic equipment was kept down in Mr. McBurney's cellar. A 15 foot long work bench is piled with TV tubes, wires, parts, dials, and (what else but) radio tubes.

Mr. McBurney displayed what looked like just another block of metal "I got that transformer war surplus for $5," he said. "The government originally paid $100 for it but then, they have more to pay with than I do."

The radio aerial extended out behind the house for 275 feet. When finished it will be strung at an average height of 70 feet above the ground, Mr. McBurney said.

"I was always interested in radio," said Mr. McBurney, "but first took it up when I was working five miles north of Murray Bay, many years ago. There were only 10 families there that spoke English and I became desperately anxious for an Anglo-Saxon, Scottish, or Irish voice."

"I learned radio by myself," he said, "for I've been a loner all my life."

"The most satisfying messages I sent there," he said, "were for a fellow named Braithewaite who patrolled alone as a fire watcher 150 miles north of me. He had a motorcycle battery with which he would transmit for an hour, then have to recharge for the next two days. I was the only contact he could reach and through me he kept in touch with his mother in Montreal for the whole summer."

"I've operated radio in many parts of Canada," he said, "but probably the most satisfying message I ever sent was St. Valentine's Day message from an American boy in the Antarctic. I relayed it to his girl griend in Washington, D.C.

It was a pretty warm valentine," recalled Mr. McBurney. "It nearly burned out my transmitter."

"I've been a licenced amateur since 1939," he said, and broadcast on the 160 metre wavelength to Europe, North Africa, and South America.

Mr. McBurney showed call cards from such distant points as Moscow, the Hawaiian Islands, and New South Wales, Australia.

"I've never had the famous pink slip for improper operation," he said proudly. "Someone who gets this slip from the Department of Transport is asked to take his station off the air until his fault has been corrected.

"I am fully licenced," he said, and have no restrictions except to follow government regulations."

"I send and receive by both code and radio-telephone," he said, "But prefer the code. It can be almost as fast as speech and cuts out a lot of senseless yakaty-yak."

"We are allowed to transmit on wavelengths of 160 metres, 80 metres, 40, 20, 10, and so on down," said Mr. McBurney. "Years ago there wasn't too much traffic, but now the air waves are just jammed."

Every so often someone makes a determined bid to take over our channels. Recently the Russians have been beaming very high power English-language broadcasts at North America on the 40 metre band. These programs come in with a tremendous sock," he said, "and will drown out our transmissions.

"The set will be portable when finished," he said. "I will be able to mount it on my tractor and take it into the bush in case of forest fire or other emergency."

Helped in Alaska quake

Organize to provide emergency service in Sherbrooke area

Amateur radio operators performed a vital service during the recent Alaska earthquake, said Sherbrooke 'ham' operator Ken Ellis, for they provided the only means of communication for several days.

Sherbrooke amateur radio operators are organizing to provide the same emergency service in case of a disaster here.

Most of the Alaska traffic consisted of messages for people trying to find their relatives and requests for first aid and other supplies, he said.

The service, which falls under the Amateur Radio Emergency Corps, of the Amateur Radio Relay League is being reorganized across the province, he said.

Mr. Ellis himself has been designated emergency co-ordinator for the Sherbrooke area, which includes Brome, Sherbrooke, Stanstead, and Compton counties.

This work will consist mainly of finding out what amateurs are active in the Sherbrooke area, where they are located, what equipment they have, and at what times they would be free to offer service in an emergency, said Mr. Ellis.

"Then," he said, "we will advise the civil defence and other public service organizations of our availability."

Besides home sets, it might be possible to get mobile sets and set up a portable radios on disaster scenes, he said.

"There are 25 licenced operators in the Sherbrooke area but I don't know how many of them are active now," he said.

"We feel that we have something to offer to the public," said Mr. Ellis. "This is voluntary service, freely offered."

The emergency corps is being reorganized across the province, he said, and is under the provincial coordinator in Montreal. Every Sunday morning there is a drill between the Montreal headquarters and the area coordinators. The broadcasts are mainly sent in English, he said, but coordinators can check in either language.

At present, he said, there are 13 area coordinators in the province.

Nigerian plant to cut imports

PORT HARCOURT (Reuters) Nigeria's petroleum imports were expected to be cut by 70 per cent in 1967 when the country's first refinery begins full production.

At present, Nigeria spends millions of dollars every year on imports of gasoline alone.

Nigeria's new $28,000,000 refinery is under construction on a 300-acre site 12 miles southeast of here, near the areas where crude oil has been discovered in commercial quantities.

When it opens in April, 1965, it will be capable of refining enough crude oil to meet all home demands. Just under 2,000,000 tons of "sweet crude," as experts call Nigerian crude oil, will initially be processed to meet the 1967 demand in the country.

The demands are: 325,000 tons of gasoline in two grades; 210,000 tons of dual purpose kerosene; 593,000 tons of diesel oil; 315,000 tons of fuel for home use; and 466,000 tons of fuel oil for export.

Last year the output of crude oil reached more than 3,500,000 tons. It was hoped 4,500,000 tons will be produced this year, rising to 6,000,000 tons in 1965. By 1970 production is expected to reach 10,000,000 tons a year.

US congressional committee ends quarter-century battle for fortune

WASHINGTON (CP)—The judiciary committee of Congress has gently closed the door on a quarter-century battle by two brothers—a Canadian and a former Canadian—seeking $15,000,000 redress from the U.S. government because of federal seizure of their father's oil-rich land in California 31 years ago.

The entangled case, resting mainly on a controversial interpretation of a single phrase, was vigorously pursued by Charles Fairbank of Petrolia, Ont., and his brother, Robert, now a naturalized American citizen living at Morro Bay, Calif., and Jefferson, N.H.

Despite a court of claims ruling that the Fairbank estate, of which the 60-year-old Charles is executor, has neither a legal nor an equitable claim against the government, the 48-year-old Robert continued to press his fight, firing off letters to all members of the judiciary committee and anyone else who would listen.

But on April 16 the committee wrote him that though it sympathized with his disappointment over the court's decision—a decision which Robert said he would not accept—the committee saw no ground on which it could properly concern itself with this issue any further.

PETROLIA SETTLER

The two brothers are the grandsons of John Henry Fairbank, one of the early settlers of Petrolia and, as a Liberal, the first member of Parliament for Lambton East when this constituency was established in 1882.

Their father, Col. Charles Oliver Fairbank who was one of the first graduates of Royal Military College, tried prospecting and in 1909, in partnership with another man, purchased 158 acres of California land at $20 an acre.

Then began a period of frustration, sudden wealth and despair. Originally, California had obtained the land from the federal government, with the central administration retaining title to all "known mineral land." In 1903 a federal commissioner ruled the land was non-mineral. The state tried to get rid of it at $1.25 an acre. There were no takers.

Later oil was discovered in the surrounding area and the price rose. But even when Fairbank got title to the land, there was no indication of oil. For years he and his partner tried to dispose of the land. Even the U.S. Navy turned it down on the grounds it showed no evidence of the black gold.

But in 1919, Standard Oil of California stepped in with exploration. After extensive drilling, out came the gushers—and in stepped the federal government. The disclosure of a huge oil scandal—not connected with the Fairbank land—sent the government in an intensive review of land titles. Harold Ickes, then interior secretary, ruled that the Fairbank land was "known mineral land" at the time of the original transfer and seized it. The courts upheld him.

CONTINUED FIGHT

Undaunted, Robert Fairbank kept up the fight. He wrote to editors, legislators, lawyers. He parked in the anterooms of dozens of bureaucrats. He buttonholed congressmen, repeating his argument that under the constitution, a man's property can be taken from him by the courts but not by administrative fiat.

Finally, in 1956 a California congressman got the approval of his colleagues to turn the case over to the Court of Claims. The court was asked to advise Congress whether in fact the government should be forced to pay up. Last January the court concluded that all that was necessary to sustain the finding that it was known mineral land was "reasonable belief" at the time that it could be developed profitably later.

That was the end of a $15,000,000 dream. But Robert keeps hoping, claiming he and his relatives are the victims of injustice.

Veteran of the war with insects now advocates selective pesticides

KENTVILLE, N.S. (CP)—Dr. A. D. Pickett is a veteran on the Annapolis Valley front of a war waged by man since clouds of locusts laid waste the land of Job in biblical times.

As one of North America's foremost entomologists, Dr. Pickett is in the vanguard of man's unceasing competition against insects for food.

At 64, he is contemplating retirement within a year to round off a quarter century fighting pests and insects in the Nova Scotia fruit belt for the federal department of agriculture.

His views on pest control have undergone a marked change since he was graduated from Montreal's Macdonald College in 1929, a span that included 13 years working in the agriculture department laboratory at Annapolis Royal until 1952.

As a fledgling entomologist, he recalls, he believed firmly in chemical compounds such as DDT as the answer to countless agricultural problems involving control of pests.

CHANGED MIND

But he began to see how some pests built up a resistance to chemicals or flourished when their natural enemies were destroyed by pesticides. He experimented with biological controls—using natural predators against harmful insects and pests.

"Species of insects that were no worry before began to reach densities where they could be considered pests."

Dr. Pickett became concerned that "wide spectrum" pesticides and the widespread, indiscriminate use of chemicals, were killing off parasites and predators that were the natural enemies of destructive insects. The finely-drawn balance of nature was being disrupted.

"In Annapolis Royal, we were working on chemical sprays for apple trees. The poisons were effective, but at the same time they began to kill off the natural enemies of the oystershell scale.

"The scale became a pest and we had to begin work on a new compound to combat it."

Dr. Pickett says the answer was found in selective sprays—ones that were designed to kill a particular insect or fungus. And within two years the oystershell scale was wiped out.

With this success with selective pesticides, Dr. Pickett became a firm advocate of the idea of minimum use of chemical sprays and maximum use of biological, or natural, controls.

Rachel Carson's best - selling book, Silent Spring, on which Dr. Pickett was an adviser, alarmed naturalists with its description of wholesale destruction of birds, fish and animals by indiscriminate use of pesticides.

Dr. Pickett, who regards Miss Carson as "the attorney for the prosecution" against dangerous agricultural poisons, has become an expert on biological insect control.

He has accumulated impressive evidence to show the harmful effects of pesticides on wildlife, but mostly he has taken the stand that all too often chemical sprays are only effective temporarily.

NO ALARMIST

Dr. Pickett is not an alarmist. He claims he does not overstress the danger of sprays, but is insistent that more satisfactory solutions can and are being found to control pests without spreading destruction to large areas of wildlife.

"I believe in integrated control," he says. "The combination of biological control and chemicals.

"We have been told so often that mankind would soon run the risk of starvation if the use of chemical pesticides was seriously minimized that most people have come to believe it."

He says biological agents "are what constitute the checks and balances which tend to maintain animal populations at relatively steady densities."

Dr. Pickett says most naturalists are not "crackpots, alarmists and emotional people." Insects and pests are a great problem, he asserts, but so are the poisoning of fish in the streams and the birds in the air.

Reports given, executive named at Brome County WI annual convention

SUTTON—The Brome County Women's Institute held its 44th annual convention on May 5, in the Grace Church Hall, Sutton, with the Abercorn Branch as hostesses, assisted by the Sutton ladies.

The meeting was called to order at 10:30 a.m. by the president, Mrs. W. Westover, one minute of silence being held in tribute for those bereaved.

Minutes were read by the secretary, Mrs. Hollis Page, who reported a total of 91 members in the five branches. As a county project these branches are sharing the expense of adopting a small girl in Italy.

The treasurer, Mrs. Garland, reported a balance on hand of $218.36; receipts for 1963-64 were $393.26; expenditures $409.81, leaving a balance of $201.81.

The auditor's report was given in writing by Mrs. Vincent and Mrs. Hoyt.

Reports of all conveners showed the branches had worked extremely hard during the past year.

Mrs. Westover introduced Mrs McGibbon, Provincial first vice-president, who explained that the short course had been canceled due to the resignation of two technicians. The executive hopes to continue it next year.

The Q.W.I., convention will be held June 23-26 and all branches are urged to send a delegate.

The meeting adjourned at 12 noon for dinner.

At 1:30 the meeting resumed with Mrs. D. Sherrer giving the address of welcome, which was responded to by Mrs. Patterson.

Mrs. B. Russell presented the slate of officers as follows: President, Mrs. Walter Westover; first vice - president, Mrs. George Patton; second vice-president, Mrs. Eric Sherrer; secretary, Mrs. Hollis Page; treasurer, Mrs. H. J. Garland.

The contest, a tablecloth worked in cross stitch from each branch, were judged by Miss Felson and Miss Amos, with prizes going to Abercorn first Sutton, second and South Bolten third.

As a treat for the afternoon, Mrs. McGibbon showed articles from her trip around the world, which included shoes and purse from Hong Kong, made from the cocoons of the silk worm; Japanese wrapping paper, boomarang from Australia, etc.

The semi-annual convention will be held on Sept. 23 at 1:30 p.m.

Town council to study cost of paving street

AYER'S CLIFF — The mayor reported on the progress of the Centennial Committee at the May 4, meeting of the town council.

Investigation is being made into the cost of paving the extension of Rosdale Street as far as the Catholic School and the government will be approached to ascertain the amount of the grant available. Costs of a concrete or asphalt sidewalk for the street are under study.

The fire committee chairman reported that the one remaining property owner concerned had granted permission to the town to widen the brook at the lower end of town in order to create a better water supply in case of fire.

It was decided to contact the municipal engineers immediately to have preliminary report prepared on the cost of installing water works and sewers in the town, a move which is considered necessary to prevent further pollution in the surrounding waters.

Metalcraft older than expected

LUSAKA, Northern Rhodesia (Reuters) — Thousand-year-old skeletons, arms and legs encased in copper and iron bangles, are throwing new light on the pre-colonial history of central Africa.

Recent scientific dating of graves discovered near the Zambesi River proves that in about 850 AD people here were wearing gold and other metal ornaments, spinning and weaving their own cotton, and trading in copper.

The actual age of the finds, established by carbon - dating tests, came as a surprise to people here. When laborers first accidentally unearthed the graves in 1960, they were believed to be at the most 400 years old.

Dr. Brian Fagan, Northern Rhodesia's keeper of prehistory who has been in charge of the diggings, commented: "Never was it thought that 1,100 years ago people were living in such wealth."

The graves are situated about 30 miles downstream from the Kariba Dam, at a place in the Gwembe Valley called Ingombe Ilede—"where the cows sleep."

BEADS AND BANGLES

In the richest graves, the skeletons wore tight rows of copper and iron bangles on their arms and legs. Around their necks were gold and colored glass beads.

One of them had bracelets of twisted gold and a necklace of seashells, a traditional African currency. One of the shells was set in pure gold.

The finds included finely decorated pottery, hoes, iron gongs, and a sheathed copper razor.

The people living there evidently grew their own cotton, and were skilled in spinning and weaving it, a craft which has since died out in Northern Rhodesia.

RICHMOND

Recent guests of Dr. D. Dykeman and Mrs. Dykeman were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Holmes and family, of Montreal.

Industries treat their alcoholics

NEW YORK— (AP) —A 40-year-old office worker at a big corporation, called from his desk, walked uncertainly into the company's medical office. Inside, a doctor motioned him to a seat and closed the door.

A physical examination bore out what the worker's absentee record and supervisors reports had indicated: that the worker was an alcoholic, one of an estimated 2,000,000 compulsive drinkers who work in U.S. offices and factories.

His company, for which he had worked for more than 10 years, gave hom a choice: Either stop or control the drinking or face the eventlual loss of his job.

Thousands of workers, confronted with the same choice, in recent years have quit drinking. The success of rehabilitation programs in more than 80 majora companies ranges from 50 to 80 per cent—a significantly higher success ratio than in non-industrial programs.

Pioneered almost 20 years ago by the Du Pont Company, alcoholic programs are in effect now at such U.S. companies as Eastman Kodak Company, Corning Glass Works, Dow Chemical Corp., Consolidated Edison of New York, Metrolitan Life Insurance Company, International Harvester, and Great Northern Railway.

DRINKERS COSTLY

A big reason, after humanitarian considerations, is money. The National Council of Alcoholism estimates that problem drinkers cost American industry $2,000,000,0000 a year.

Since Jan. 1, of this year, according to the national council, 12 to 15 large corporations have begun alcoholism programs. By 1965, estimates Council President Merle A. Gulick, more than 160 major companies will have such programs.

The programs vary in size and in scope. Few companies actually treat alcoholics, but refer them to Alcoholics Anonymous, hospitals and psychiatrists. The company keeps close watch on the drinker's progress or lack of progress, standing behind him with support when he needs it, and pressure when circumstances demand it.

Committees, conveners reports given at Spooner Pond W.I. meeting

SPOONER POND — The May meeting of the Women's Institute was held on the 7th, at the home of Mrs. Roy Harrison, with Mrs. I. Lariviere, Mrs. N. Noel, and Mrs. H. Vigneault assisting.

On display was the recently finished quilt, made for inter-branch competition, on which tickets will be sold and a drawing held later.

A letter was received from the Q.W.I., office at Macdonald College, stating that owing to a shortage of instructors, and the short period of time which would have been allowed for the courses, more would be held this year.

Reports of standing committees were given, interesting articles were read by agriculture, citizenship and home economics conveners. Welfare and heath convener had attended a meeting held recently in the Legion Hall, at which Dr. T. J. Quintin gave an illustrated address of work being done at the Sherbrooke Hospital. She also stated that a centrally-located room is being sought for use as store room for cancer dressings and materials.

The ways and means committee is planning a project for the white Elephant sale, at the next meeting.

Two members, Mrs. A. Stimson and Mrs. A. Coddington, are entering articles in the tea competition.

It was decided that if a bus trip can be arranged for the unveiling of the plaque at Dunham, the group would be in favour of going.

The regular drawing was won by Mrs. I. Lariviere.

A sale of plants, slips and bulbs was held, with Mrs. W. Coles acting as auctioneer, proceeds were $11.45.

Seeds were given out for the children's fair, and tuberous begonia bulbs were given to members for a conpetition later on.

The next meeting, held in the evening, will be at the home of Mrs. J. Gervais.

Members who were not at the May meeting are asked to note the change of hostesses for this meeting, and that it will be an evening meeting. Roll call, will be tell a joke, or pay 25 cents fine.

White social exclusiveness still live public issue in India today

BOMBAY (CP)—Though the white man ceased to rule India 17 years ago, white social exclusiveness continues to be a live public issue in this country.

After India became independent, hundreds of Britons remained in India as businessmen, engineers and teachers. There also now are more Canadians, Americans, Germans and Australians in India than there were during the days of British rule.

All of these people move in a world of their own and restrict their contacts with Indians to the minimum needs of their jobs.

This attitude led a few days ago to a public demonstration here against the Breach Candy swimming pool, an exclusive white club which has banned non-whites since it was formed more than 90 years ago.

The white trustees of the club later yielded and plan to amend the club's bylaws to permit "token" admission of Indians.

Some of the club's 2,000 members indicated sympathy with the Indians. One American girl joined the placard - bearing Indian demonstrators and The Times of India published a number of sympathetic letters from foreigners.

Anti - color - bar campaigners now are turning their attention to Calcutta, India's biggest metropolis, where there are three exclusive white clubs, including a boating association.

Calcutta's Democratic Socialist party has threatened to organize a passive resistance movement against the European clubs. The ruling Congress party has promised its full support of the campaign.

Chester Bowles, U.S. ambassador in New Delhi, has asked American residents in Calcutta not to patronize any club which has a color bar, and the envoys of many other foreign countries are reported to have tendered similar advice to their nations.

The Indian government is under heavy political pressure to outlaw the Calcutta clubs. But it has taken the line that such anachronisms will vanish under the impact of enlightened white and non-white public opinion.

Meanwhile, some Indians feel that if the whites in India want to be left alone nothing should be done to pressure them. They feel it is beneath Indian self-respect to be asked to be admitted into white society.

As one writer to The Times of India put it: "The campaign against the white baths shows our inferiority complex. I for one will never step into Beach Candy's water."

The Doctor Says

GERMS ARE HERE TO STAY, WE MUST LIVE WITH THEM

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT M. D.

Man has had a long battle with disease germs. Some of these germs have been vanquished. Others have merely gone into hiding and will strike again whenever we let down our guard.

Meanwhile, our success over many killers has made it possible for an ever-increasing proportion of the population to reach an advanced age. With old age, many persons become afflicted with chronic diseases; as these diseases weaken them, they become more susceptible to infections.

One of the factors that can upset the equilibrium is the attempt to eradicate certain infectious diseases from the population. Except in a few instances, this is virtually impossible. When antibiotics are used they kill the weaker strains of disease germs and leave a clear field for the growth of more resistant strains.

As these resistant strains spread throughout the population they cause infections against which the old antibiotics are powerless. Hence the continued search for new antibiotics.

A more rational approach is seen in the use of the Sabin oral poliomyelitis vaccine, now widely used and shown to be 100 per cent safe. Unlike the killed vaccine, the new vaccine confers a lasting immunity.

The live but harmless virus used has the happy faculty of overgrowing and crowding out the disease-producing virus and at the same time building up antibodies against the latter in the blood of those who take it.

Instead of the eradication of poliomyelitis, this accomplishes a replacement of one virus strain by another one with which many can live in harmony.

In other words germs are here to stay. Man must learn to select and encourage the ones he can live with.

Q—What is a neuroblastoma? Is it a fast spreading tumor? How is it caused? Has anyone ever been cured?

A—Neuroblastoma is a malignant tumor that is seen in early childhood. It starts in the adrenal gland and spreads rapidly to other parts of the body. The cause is unknown. If it is recognized early and completely removed and if this is followed by deep X-ray treatment, about 25 per cent of these unfortunate children can be saved.

Modern cowboys tote slingshots

WHEATLAND, Wyo. (AP) — Viewers of television westerns will find it hard to believe but some modern - day cowboys have reverted to using a weapon of the young—slingshots—while riding the range.

The slingshots are being manufactured from old beer and oil cans by a live - wire Wyoming company which has its eyes on the future but its fingers in the past.

The metal slingshots are being sold mostly to stockmen and Boy Scout troops, said Bob Lukens, president of Ranch Hand Products Company.

He said ranch hands have found the slingshots useful in flushing cattle and horses from brush or other tight spots, in handling unruly stock, for shooting tranquillizing darts into livestock and in banging away at rattlesnakes which cross a cowpoke's path.

Where does Lukens get his beer and oil cans for making the $1.25 slingshots?

"There's enough along any road," he said.

Lukens, the president of the Rocky Mountain Investors Association, set up the firm primarily to produce a couple of small pieces of ranch machinery and some specialized equipment used by rodeo competitors.

OUTSTRIP PURPOSE

He soon found, however, that needs for marketing, manufacturing and merchandising new and old ideas far outstripped the firm's original purpose.

The rodeo equipment is designed to help riders make better scores and better times in roping events.

Among the items are attachments to adjust stirrup lengths on various rodeo saddles, methods to adjust bridles to the different rodeo horses and a saddle snap lock which enables ropers to get their second loop away faster.

He picks through old files to find ideas which were good then and adapts them to present-day technology.

Bringing Up Baby

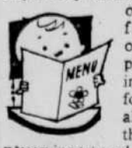

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN GERBER, MOTHER OF 5

Most baby sitters today know the fundamentals of baby care but even the most competent ones are only as good as mothers help them to be. Suggestions for successful sitting:

- Sitter should be acquainted with your household—location of light switches, supplies, possible hazards, etc.
- Duties should be made clear from the start, with emphasis on baby care, not household chores.
- Written instructions on special baby duties, feeding, etc. are more reliable than oral ones.
- Snacks and soft drinks for your part-time parent sweeten sitting time.

Full-time parents can sweeten eating time by offering a goodly variety of good-tasting foods. Gerber offers over 50 pleasing, appetizing strained foods for your baby . . . all prepared with the Gerber flair for preserving true colours and flavours. Everything from fruits to vegetables, meats to dinners, juices to desserts. And every one is individually processed by specialists with special know-how in preserving the utmost in precious food values.

Weaning exercise. A plastic measuring cup with a pouring lip will help baby manage those first cup tries more successfully. Spillage will be reduced if you start with just a splash of milk.

Menu magic starring some Gerber "greats." Strained or Junior versions.

RED GUERRILLAS CAPTURED IN VIET NAM — These are some of the 42 Communist Viet Cong guerrillas after their capture by South Viet Nam government troops before they could slip into neighboring Cambodia from Kien Phong Mekong Delta. Their capture took place last week after government soldiers landed by helicopters and moved in by night to operate along a river that leads from Viet Nam into Cambodia. A blocking force had cut off the border while aircraft flew overhead as observers to prevent the guerrillas running over the open paddies. (AP Wirephoto)

PARTNERS IN PERFECT PERFORMANCE!
MOFFAT HOME LAUNDRY APPLIANCES

Dryer DEE-1010 $179.00

Washer AWE-1010 $289.00

So simple to operate, the Moffat family size laundry appliances make a family size wash a breeze! And the result — a professional laundry look, with just as little of your time involved! Set your cycle for regular or delicate fabrics and the Moffat automatic washing machine takes over. Automatically selects your water temperature, washes, rinses and spins. Some performance! Then Laundromat's partner — the Moffat Electric Dryer — dries the clothes to a soft and fluffy perfection. Again — at just the selection of a temperature and the setting of an automatic time dial.
