WHO'S WHO

A good Jolly is worth whatever you Pay for it

By Tadeusz Letarte

"I pray Thee make my column read, And give me thus my daily bread."

Don Marquis

Was there once a Golden Age of newspaper columnists? Or as the golden scribblers of today simply drowned in the Dreadful Sin?

That thought comes from re-reading three of the masters — Don Marquis, George Ade, Ambrose Bierce — and suddenly realizing they all sprang from the American midwest — Marquis from Illinois, Ade from Indiana, Bierce from Ohio — and all wrote about the same time — Marquis in New York, Ade in Chicago, Bierce in San Francisco. Must have been something in the soil.

Marquis created Archy for the New York Sun when he returned to the office late one night and found a gigantic cockroach using his typewriter;

"He would climb painfully upon the framework of the machine," he wrote, "and cast himself with all his force upon a key, head downward, and his weight and the impact of the blow was just sufficient to operate the machine one slow letter after another ... He could not work the capital letters, and he had a great deal of difficulty operating the mechanism that shifts the paper so that a fresh line might be started."

"We never saw a cockroach work so hard or perspire so freely before. After about an hour of this frightfully difficult literary labour, he fell to the floor exhausted and we saw him creep feebly into a nest of the poems which are always there in profusion."

Archy, of course, is a metaphor for the perspiring columnist — banging his head on one slow key at a time, the most despicable of vermin, the free verse poet yearning for expression and recognition and doomed to be unsatisfied in both, barely finding enough to eat yet contemptuous of the rich and successful.

Archy's inspiration was Mehitabel, a disreputable alley cat long past her prime, no better than she should be yet "tours gai."

"dance mehitabel dance
caper and shake a leg
will fizz like wine in a keg."

But Archy was speaking of The Boss, Don Marquis himself, when he wrote of someone "so lucky that he runs into accidents which started out to happen to somebody else," because Marquis struggled with the daily newspaper grind, with alcoholism and poverty almost all his life. He lost a small son, then a wife, lost a daughter, and a second wife, made a fortune on his play, 'The Old Soak', but lost it on another and was never convinced his work would outlive him.

George Ade made a fortune writing plays, too, but started out scribbling columns for a Chicago paper called the Record. The columns became so popular that collections were published as 'Fables in Slang'. They contain such masterpieces as The Fable of the Caddy who Hurt his Head While Thinking which begins:

"One Day a Caddy sat in the Long Grass near the Ninth Hole and wondered if he had a Soul. His Number was 27 and he almost had forgotten his Real Name.

"As he sat and Meditated, two Players passed him. They were going the Long Round and the Frenzy was upon them..."

Another was The Fable of Sister Mae, who Did as Well as Could be Expected:

"Two Sisters lived in Chicago, the Home of Opportunity."

"Luella was a Good Girl, who had taken Prizes at the Mission Sunday School, but she was Plain, much. Her Features did not seem to know the value of Team Work. Her Clothes fit her Intermittently..."

And The Fable of the Statesman who Couldn't make Good:

"Once there was a Fluff whose Long Suit was Glittering Generalities."

"He hated to work and it hurt his Eyes to read Law, but on a Clear Day he could be heard a Mile, so he became a Statesman..."

"The Habit of Dignity enveloped him. Upon his brow Deliberation sat. He wore a Fireman's moustache and a White Lawn Tie, and he loved to talk about the Flag..."

Ade insisted he was a realist and not a moralist while kidding the pretension of fables teaching moral lessons: "Moral: For Parlor Use the Vague Generality is a Lifesaver... Moral: To Insure Peace of Mind, Ignore the Rules and Regulations... Moral: If the Woman thinks he's All Right, you keep on your own Side of the Fence."

Ambrose Bierce was the eldest of the three and fought with such distinction in the American Civil War that he was brevetted major — which meant he had the job but not the pay. In San Francisco, he became the centre of a literary circle which included Bret Hart e and Mark Twain, wrote short stories and poetry, and a column for the San Francisco Examiner where he dipped his pen in despair and compiled his Devil's Dictionary:

"Liar, n. A lawyer with a roving commission."

"Lickspittle, n. A useful functionary, not infrequently found editing a newspaper..."

"Quill, n. An implement of torture yielded by a goose and commonly wielded by an ass..."

"Hearse, n. Death's baby-carriage."

Bierce was forever backing up his outrages with bogus experts and citing verse by such famous names as Gorgo Repsky, Sukker Uffro or Pollo Doncas.

"Existence, n.

A transient, horrible fantastic dream,

Wherein is nothing yet all does seem:

From which we're awakened by a friendly nudge

Of our bedfellow Death, and cry:

'O fudge!'

Bierce married a wealthy miner's daughter but divorced her in 1904 (Women would be more charming," he wrote, "if one could fall into her arms without falling into her hands"), cut himself off from friends, family and finally his country in 1913 when he disappeared into Mexico seeking "the good, kind darkness."

One of Pancho Villa's bandits reported Bierce had joined them, received a fatal wound in a battle with the federales and was buried in the desert. Another said he committed suicide by walking straight into enemy fire, another that Villa ordered him executed for criticising his tactics with his acid tongue, another that he had drifted on to South America and disappeared into the Brazilian jungle.

"Moral: A good Jolly is worth whatever you Pay for it."

Book fair, art auction to benefit Hatley's library

By William Westley

HATLEY — Some 15 well-known artists have donated their works for a fund-raising auction to be held this Saturday to benefit the new library in Hatley.

The art auction takes place at the Anglican Church Hall at two o'clock. It forms the high point of the all-day book fair — the village's first public step towards setting up a permanent library and cultural centre.

The artists include Normand Hudon, painter Anthony Hobbs, and sculptor Loni Campbell of Hatley, sculptor George Foster of Way's Mills, Mary Martha Guy of North Hatley, Townships photographers Marguerite Bladon and Louise Pelland, découpeur Nora Dutton, watercolorist Betty Ann Affleck, painter Gavin Affleck, Gill Côté, Franklin Satterthwaite, and many others.

People in the area have already donated over 1500 books, and more arrive each day.

Hatley's 80 families have long dreamed of running their own library and community centre. Everyone desired a local source for good books and a centre to hold stimulating cultural events. Parents, especially, wanted their children to have access to nearby reference books for school papers and have good books to read.

Two years ago, a group of Hatley citizens formed a library committee and the dream began to take shape. The committee consists of Marina Sheldon, president, and her sister Ellen Bailey, Paul Boiteux, secretary, and Marcelle Boiteux, Bibliothèque centrale de prêt de l'Estrie inc. (BCPE) liaison, Bill Westley, treasurer, a retired McGill professor; Geraldine Parker, nursery-school teacher Kevin Jensen, Leslie and Doris Heath and Loni Campbell a local artist.

The Anglican Church leased the committee a large attractive room in the church hall for $100 a year. Committee members then moved over 4000 books from the town hall to this new room. Leslie Heath built 600 feet of shelving and insulated the windows.

All committee members donated materials and provided labor to paint the room and bookshelves. People from the community donated a fine large table and chairs, a desk, filing cabinet and periodical shelving.

Paul and Marcel Boiteux provided material and labor to insulate the ceiling — the materials and labor to run a heating duct from the furnace to the library room.

The next problem was to find a source of up-to-date books in English and French. The committee discovered the BCPE, a private, non-profit corporation, set-up and financed by the province of Quebec to assist small towns (under 5,000) in establishing and stocking libraries. Municipalities that establish a free public library may receive a minimum of 1,000 recent books which are rotated annually, plus periodicals, audio cassettes, films, and works of art. The village needed only to sign a contract with the BCPE and pay a yearly fee equivalent of under $2 per inhabitant.

The committee immediately approached Hatley town councillors who agreed to join the BCPE and make an annual donation to help pay for the costs of heating and electricity.

The committee must now

Well-known Normand Hudon is among one of the many artists who will contribute to Saturday's art auction in Hatley. A gigantic booksale will also be held to benefit Hatley's new library.

build an endowment fund of $50,000 so that the interest can pay a part-time librarian. All past attempts at establishing a library failed because the community depended on volunteer help.

This time, committee members are determined to have a permanent, paid, part-time librarian. They believe that if the library opens two half-days a week, and holds special cultural events they will meet the community's needs. The committee members realize that the village cannot pay even a limited salary and so it must raise the endowment fund.

The first event in this fund drive will be a book fair and art auction to be held in the Anglican Church Hall in Hatley this Saturday. See What's On for details.

Meet world-known Canadian porcelain doll artist

This Saturday from 1 to 4, one of Canada's most popular doll artist, Heather-Anne "Meggan" Moriarty — founder of Meggan's Doll House — will be at the Knowlton's The Homestead collectibles boutique to meet with the public.

"Meggan" is among one of the first women in North America to revive the almost-lost art of porcelain doll-making. She has been developing her craft for 20 years now, and since 1986, her dolls have been winning the hearts of collectors across Canada.

Since 1989, she has been the only Canadian doll artist to be invited to represent Canada at the most prestigious doll collecting event in the industry, The World Showcase of Dolls, produced by the Walt Disney World company in Orlando, Florida. This event draws doll lovers and creators from all over the world during four days every December.

"Meggan"'s works of art have also been displayed in Japan — shown as examples of fine Canadian craftsmanship.

This weekend, "Meggan" will be previewing this year's World Showcase collection: a group of three dolls she has been commissioned by Disney to create. The first is Sugar and Spice, a limited edition doll of which only 10 will be made; the second is Peaches and Cream, an edition of 150 dolls; and Zoe and Cresta Bear, a one-of-a-kind doll to be auctioned during the World Showcase of Dolls.

All visitor to The Homestead will have the opportunity to participate in the draw to win "A Special Day" doll.

The Homestead is located at 11 Lakeside Rd. in Knowlton. For more information, call Bev or Henry Musty at (819) 569-2671 or (514) 243-4153.

"Meggan" Moriarty appears with her 1991 world showcase collection of porcelain dolls: Zoe and Cresta Bear, Sugar and Spice, and Peaches and Cream. She'll be in Knowlton this Saturday.

This $400 "A Special Day" porcelain doll made by "Meggan" Moriarty will be given away to the lucky winner of the day's draw in Knowlton.

Canadian stamps depicting paintings: great collectibles

In a previous article of paintings on Canadian stamps, the painters of the Group of Seven and Tom Thompson were the main people discussed. There are, of course, many other fine painters whose works were used in the design of Canadian stamps.

One such artist was Emily Carr. She was an eccentric person who studied art in San Francisco, London and Paris. Canada, which was a young nation at that time, was just too busy to pay attention to painters. Those Canadians who did, still preferred the European style of art. This didn't seem to bother Carr at all for she went on about her life as she liked. She was attracted to the Indian way of life, and many of her best works are taken from west coast Indian's carvings and totem poles.

In 1971, Canada Post issued a stamp to commemorate the 100th anniversary of Emily Carr's birth. The design is a reproduction of one of her paintings.

tings entitled "The Big Raven".

Recently, Emily Carr was once more honored when Canada Post issued the fourth stamp in the Masterpieces of Art series featuring one of Emily Carr's finest canvases entitled "Forest, British Columbia".

Stamp Corner

By Peter McCarthy

This painting, painted between 1931 and 1932, hangs in the Vancouver Art Gallery. Like the remainder of this series, the stamp is printed on foil covered paper — making it a delicate stamp to handle.

One of my favorite paintings on stamp is entitled "Return From the Harvest Field". This costly and very much sought after stamp was issued in 1969 to commemorate the birth of one Aurèle de Foy Suzor-Côté (1869-1937). Suzor-Côté spent a great deal of his early life studying and painting in France. On return to his native town of Arthabaska, Quebec, he painted his interpretation of rural life in Quebec.

His work was even honored by the French Academy in 1901. The stamp itself is a collectible item because of two distinct varieties. The first is the bird in the sky variety that is located in the upper left portion of the sky and the other variety is the Green Line At Knee. A wide variety of shades also exists. For interested parties, the original painting hangs in the National Art Gallery in Ottawa.

Cornelius Krieghoff adopted Canada quite by accident. Krieghoff landed in New York in 1837 where he met a little French girl, Louise Gauthier, who was visiting that fair city from Longueuil, a town on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River opposite Montreal. Krieghoff had a difficult time making a living as a painter because, here again, the people of the area just weren't interested in paintings of Canadian landscapes. In order to put food on the table, Cornelius was forced to take a job as a sign painter.

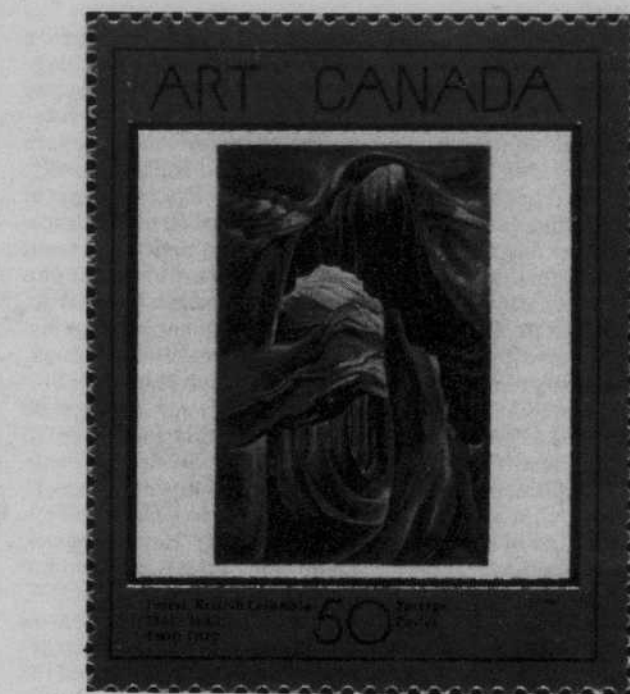

In 1853, John Budden entered Krieghoff's life. John Budden urged the Krieghoffs to move to Quebec City where he felt the people would respond to Krieghoff's work more favorably. Budden had apparently sold some of Krieghoff's paintings through an auction firm.

The years 1854 to 1860 were the artist's most productive years. Then for some reason or other, between 1860 and 1867 Krieghoff lost all interest in painting and his work declined in both quantity and quality. Finally, around 1866, Krieghoff moved to Chicago to live with his daughter and son-in-law.

Krieghoff came back to Canada in 1871 for a visit. His old friend John Budden urged him to take up the brushes once more. It was during this very short period that inspiration once more took hold of Krieghoff and saw him produce his best work, among them, "The Blacksmith Shop" which is reproduced on the stamp honoring this fine artist. Shortly after, in 1872, upon returning to Chicago to be with his daughter and son-in-law, Cornelius Krieghoff died of heart failure.

The stamp itself is a real gem to collect. It offers collectors several varieties, the most prominent being the broken door-frame. This is a constant variety that appears on every stamp in the second vertical row from the right. In addition there is the extra log variety, the hole in the roof, blue ice on roof, and the branch under the sleigh variety. Each of these comes tagged and untagged. Then comes the shades. A close study will reveal in the coloring, especially in the yellowish portion of the sky. That could be the result of the different degrees of fluorescence found in this stamp. It's a beautiful stamp in the study of a topical or thematic collection.

Although Krieghoff's paintings are claimed to be a depiction of Quebec rural life, many of his severest critics however, do not concur. The painting "The Blacksmith Shop" hangs in the Ontario Art Gallery in Toronto.

Another famous Canadian artists is Paul Kane. Kane came to Canada from Ireland as a young boy, and settled in what was York, which is now Toronto. He had a natural talent to drawing and worked as an apprentice in a furniture manufacturer as a decorator. He, like Emily Carr, was interested in the Indian's way of life in Canada.

Kane returned to the major European art centers in 1841 and didn't return to Canada until 1850. His interest in the Canadian Indian brought him to travel the country. He depicted their lives and cultures on canvas. The governor of the Hudson Bay Company eventually became one of his patrons and George William Allan commissioned him to paint 100 canvases. The bulk of this work now hangs in the Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto.

Kane also wrote a book entitled Wonderings of An Artist Among the Indians of North America about his travels across Western Canada.

Paul Kane died in 1871 at the age of 61. Canada Post issued a stamp in 1971 commemorating the 100th anniversary of his death, depicting one of his finest paintings as the design, entitled An Indian Encampment Among the Islands of Lake Huron.

This too, is a fine stamp to collect. Not only does it have shade variations but, there is also a variety known as the Torn Teepee. This can be found in the top of the foremost teepee to the left.

Canadian stamps that depict paintings of Canadian artists are absolutely fabulous collectible items. In two articles, the surface has barely been scratched of the material available and of the great artists that produced it. At some future date, we'll explore the subject a little deeper.

Mountain Dew keeps people two-stepping

By Catherine Cheng

SHERBROOKE — Last Saturday, the Mountain Dew Country Band set their own record: they played from 8 p.m. till 4 a.m. during a dance benefit for Sawyerville's fire department.

"We played for eight straight hours, taking 15 minute breaks every hour. There was about 300 people coming in and out; they kept cheering on so we kept playing," says band leader Peter Mackey.

He and three other high school friends, now aged 25 and under, have been performing together weekly for over four years — in bars, at weddings, private parties, fairs, or benefit dances — throughout the Eastern Townships.

"We had pretty good luck. We hit the market at a good time," said drummer Chris Drew. "We like to get people involved and see them enjoying themselves," songwriter and guitarist Wendell Pehlemann adds.

"We're very dedicated to our practices that I'm almost impressed. If one misses a practice, he better have a good reason. I'm the one who usually misses them because of my job," said music composer and lead guitarist Cliff Hutchison with a laugh.

Hutchison is an underwriter for London Life Insurance, Pehlemann is a draftsman for Everest Equipment, Drew works as a carpenter for his father and Mackey works as a carpenter and blacksmith for contractors.

They still find time to play music because for them, belonging to a band is a dream come true.

"It's every musician's dream," Pehlemann says.

YOUNG AND SENSITIVE

Although each of these four, young, sensitive men have full-time jobs, each has faithfully managed to show up every Thursday evening at Pehlemann's house in Bury where "it's secluded and we can play as loud as we can. Nobody bothers us," Hutchison said.

"If we practice in town, it (becomes) an impending party," he explained.

The members of the Mountain Dew Country Band, who usually wear jeans, cowboy boots, hats, and different-colored shirts when they perform, chose a name that hope "sounds country," but don't just play country music, says Mackey. They also play country-rock and rock music.

"We play the crowd. We play for everyone regardless their age. If there are more young people we play more rock music, if they are older, we play more waltzes," Drew explains.

"We just want them to have a good time and get everyone dancing," Mackey adds.

Each member contributes different talents to make up the band: Hutchison, of Massawippi, composes music by ear and makes his guitars; Pehle-mann, of Bury, composes lyrics "day and night;" Drew, of Lennoxville, is the only one who can read music; and Mackey, also of Lennoxville, is a self-taught lead singer.

They play everything from songs they compose to songs by Randy Travis, Garth Brooks, Travis Tritt, Kentucky Head Hunters, and George Strait's, just to name a few.

"We play the best we can — as close to the artist as possible," Drew says.

"Country music," Pehlemann said, "is about feelings and emotions."

"The songs relate to every day life," Mackey added. "People can relate to the songs and probably had the same experience," Pehlemann continued.

Most of the songs Pehlemann writes are sad. He says his source of inspiration is "personal experience," including the times he breaks up with a girlfriend.

Hutchison says that the songs they sing are mostly sad "because when you're happy you're too busy to write, therefore we don't write happy songs."

Pehlemann says he compiles words and feelings together on paper and then shows them to the three others.

"He plays it according to how he feels, and then we give our opinions and try different beats," Mackey said.

"Country music is designed for the lyrics. Rock music is more for the instruments and sound," Drew explained.

During the four years they've been together, their greatest challenge was "to get Cliff to like country music," says Pehlemann.

Hutchison says that "at first I had a strong preference for rock music. I guess playing country is different. Now I've acquired the appreciation for it."

Hutchison now admits that he likes country music a tiny bit more than rock music. He says he even bought a Ford pickup truck, cowboy boots, and "a felt cowboy hat for 50 bucks, a year-and-a-half ago."

Drew, who is the only one who doesn't own a cowboy hat, still has a preference for rock music because "from a drummer's point of view, it's more challenging."

It was Mackey, though, who made their dream come true; he's the one who called the others up.

"I sang in church choirs and always thought it would be nice to become famous in music," he said.

"We were all athletic but more music-oriented," Drew said.

Hutchison recalls he "used to walk around with a guitar all the time." In 1985, when the principal of Galt High asked Hutchison to play the guitar for their annual musical, he waited until he was before a full-dress rehearsal before he told the him he 'couldn't read notes.' His solution was, 'Let me hear it and I'll follow.' So he learned over 20 songs on the spur of the moment.

Because Mackey sang in the musicals at Alexander Galt High, Hutchison found out Mackey could sing.

Meanwhile, Pehlemann played base in another band, and Drew took four years of percussion classes.

Drew is the youngest and most recent member of the band. He replaced their first drummer Sam Evans three years ago.

Drew had played solo in a Galt concert and was "the only one who had a full-set of drums," Mackey said. It wasn't before long that they got together.

Pehlemann says that one thing that distinguishes them from other bands is that they "have a real drummer."

"Usually, bands have electronic drummers. They have less members and have a bass player," Drew said.

The advantage of having a "real" drummer is that it leaves them more room to improvise, said Mackey.

They say they "would love to go on tour for a year" and guess they would probably have more opportunities in the States.

"But we would have to have a guarantee," Pehlemann says. The others nodd.

Life after Anne: Meagan Follows 'happy' in Hollywood

By Stephen Nicholls
CP Arts-Life Editor

LOS ANGELES (CP) — With a blue jeans kind of style and a hankering for film work, Meagan Follows has taken to California like a coyote to the desert.

The freckled-faced, auburn-haired 23-year-old, who became a household name in Canada by portraying Anne of Green Gables in two TV mini-series, has begun a new chapter in her life.

She has left behind the dreamy storybook world of Green Gables and has set down roots in Los Angeles — not just as a resident actress but as a wife and homeowner.

On April 21, she tied the knot with film technician Christopher Porter, whom she describes as "a really great guy" from Chester, N.S., in his early 30s.

She and Porter met a couple of years ago while working on the feature Deep Sleep in Vancouver.

In January, they bought a 77-year-old hilltop home in the Silver Lake district of east Los Angeles, where they live with their eight-month-old black lab, Jessie.

"I'm happy here," says Follows, looking California casual in jeans and a baggy cotton sweater, lounging in her living room on a lazy Saturday afternoon. "I really like where I'm living."

IN ANNE'S SHADOW

Sitting under the chocolate-colored wood beams that characterize the California craftsman style, Follows reflects on her new lifestyle and on the Green Gables role that seems to have overshadowed just about everything else she's done.

The daughter of Toronto actors Ted Follows and Dawn Greenhalgh, Follows notched her first role at age nine in a Bell telephone commercial where she made faces in a school-bus window.

She starred in the series Matt and Jenny, and had numerous other TV performances before appearing in the Academy Award-winning film Boys and Girls.

At 14, she appeared in a special Facts of Life episode intended to serve as a pilot for a new NBC series, which would have starred Follows as the lone girl in an otherwise all-male household. The series didn't fly.

She was later cast in a short-lived CBS series called Domestic Life, in which she played Martin Mull's daughter.

Next up was Hockey Night, where she played a lonely female goaltender in a somewhat hostile environment in Parry Sound, Ont.

THEN CAME ANNE

And then came Anne of Green Gables, for which she won a Gemini Award, followed by the sequel, which earned her another Gemini and an American ACE cable-TV award.

Since then work has been a little sporadic — a couple of feature films, a bit of theatre, some TV movies — but she feels she has been forging a strong personal life, which is just as important.

"I think self-esteem is often built when you are successful and when you have people telling you how wonderful you are, what a great performance that was," says Follows.

"If people all of a sudden don't like you because you're not the flavor of the month — your hair's not right or your height's not right — if you don't really have a good sense of yourself outside of that, you're in trouble."

Acting, she says, can make things worse by blurring fantasy and reality.

"It's such an unreal career in one sense because you're always playing someone else. You're interacting with people that don't exist."

When Green Gables wrapped up, she found herself longing for the likes of Rachel Lynde and Marilla Cuthbert.

"I actually missed those people as if I'd known them. It was like there was this place that existed with these people in this time, in this innocence, and it would be nice to see them again."

'GREAT CHARACTER'

Still, she's pleased to have played Anne — "such a great character."

"People who try to sum her up always think of her as a Pollyanna, but to me she was always so much more than that. She was neurotic. She had a foul temper. She was inappropriate. She was almost a bit nuts."

Her post-Anne projects have included a TV remake of Inherit the Wind, which won an Emmy, and a Canadian feature called Termini Station, in which Colleen Dewhurst played her troubled mother in Kirkland Lake, Ont.

Termini Station was largely panned in Canada but won praise from some U.S. critics — Stephen Holden of the New York Times raved about Follows.

Meanwhile, Follows has become a screen idol in Japan, where readers of a popular movie magazine this spring voted her female actress of the year. She was flown to Tokyo for a reception at which hundreds of fans chanted her name.

"I was breathless." This inspired Follows and her husband to write a film drama with a Japanese-American theme. They plan to work on that before she returns to her real love — film acting.

Despite her success as Anne, Follows is distancing herself from the role, and is emphatic that Megan Follows is not Anne of Green Gables.

"Anne is Anne. It had a life before me. It had a life after me."

Singer Vikki Moss still hurt by breakup with Gretzky

By Stephen Nicholls
CP Arts-Life Editor

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Tears glisten in the corners of her aquamarine eyes and her silky voice cracks.

Picking at a steaming dish of Szechuan chicken at a trendy eatery, singer Vikki Moss has been talking about her breakup four years ago with hockey superstar Wayne Gretzky.

Until now she's been cool. But as talk turns to Gretzky's apparent bitterness over the breakup, she loses it.

"Something that will never be in the past is how he dealt with it," she says softly, peering childlike through straw-blond strands of strategically straggling hair. "I'm very hurt about that."

Gretzky, she says, hasn't spoken to her since the two called it quits in June 1987 — a move Moss says resulted because she wasn't ready to get married and start a family.

A year after the breakup, Gretzky married American actress Janet Jones and, soon after, was traded by the Edmonton Oilers to the Los Angeles Kings.

"I've written him several congratulatory notes — his feats with L.A., or his kid, or a condolence card 'cause I heard his grandma passed away," says Moss.

"He acts like I never existed in his life. To a lot of our mutual friends, my name is never mentioned."

"How can someone obliterate a piece of their life — seven years?"

Meanwhile, for 28-year-old Moss, life after Gretzky has meant a new husband and a music career in Los Angeles.

DOES 'SHOWCASING'

She recently began "showcasing" her work in hopes of landing a record deal.

To showcase, a singer pays to appear in one of several clubs on Hollywood's Sunset Boulevard where record executives go to scout new talent.

"In L.A., you can't just sit back and be an artist, you have to sell yourself," says Moss.

That means perfecting a "sound," targeting an audience, putting together a marketing scheme and getting a good lawyer — one who's connected with the music industry ("the lawyers run the business in this town").

"It's not enough that you're a good singer, you have to have a whole package."

She describes her sound as pop rock — "mainstream but cool, intelligent, it's not trite."

It's been quite a journey for Moss, who started singing at four as a member of her family's musical group, the Alaska Highway Birthquakes.

TOURED WEST

Growing up in Edmonton, Moss toured Western Canada with her parents and 12 brothers and sisters, often performing on a stage that folded down from their bus.

Those early years gave her two things: an outgoing personality ("In a family of 13 children, you have to fight for attention") and a love of music ("I would skip school but I would never skip music class — it was my life").

At 17, she was offered a position in a rock band. She jumped at the chance and quit school.

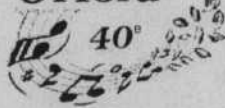

It was about then that she met Gretzky.

"I was singing in a club. He came in with (fellow Oiler) Kevin Lowe and he offered to buy me a drink. I said, 'I can't, I'm under-age.'"

Nevertheless, the romance blossomed.

"We were two big kids who were silly, always loving people around us, always having little gatherings or barbecues. People say that I was the one in his life that kept him grounded in a sense, where I wouldn't let him be Wayne Gretzky the celebrity as opposed to a normal guy."

THEATRE REVIEWS

Edith Piaf comes back to life at The Piggery

By Catherine Cheng

NORTH HATLEY — Canadian songstress Joëlle Rabu has won the hearts of many critics throughout the world in her tour de force one woman shows.

It's no surprise — her voice is impeccable; her acting is outstanding.

Rabu plays in Tonight... Piaf

Rabu: Remarkable singer

(CC) NORTH HATLEY — When Joëlle Rabu's brother told her that an artistic director (Ray Michel) was looking for a bilingual singer and actress to play Edith Piaf in 1983, it took her a whole week to 'get enough nerves' to audition, she says.

Rabu was happily waitressing then, in the city of Vancouver, and had not seriously thought of performing professionally.

"My brother always encouraged me; he said, 'Va chanter...' so I told Ray I knew three Piaf songs by heart and I told him 'I'll accompany myself on the piano.'"

"I was raised with Piaf songs; My parents are from France," she said.

QUITINLINGUAL

Today, Rabu speaks five languages fluently: French, English, German, Esperanto, and sign language.

"I'm a language buff; the at The Piggery Theatre, impersonating the famous Edith Piaf performing in New York's Waldorf Astoria in 1961 — her final appearance in North America.

In the play, Piaf has just had surgery and goes on stage against the will of her doctor.

"You will have your concert. I will be fine in a few minutes. The doctors fill me with pain-more languages you know the better you are."

She remembers singing in a 3,000-foot-long hall in China in 10 languages and speaking in three languages.

"It was jam packed; they applauded after every verse," she says with a laugh.

She hopes to perform in Russia some day soon.

When asked if she could relate to Piaf's life, she responds, "I had an excellent life." She now lives in Vancouver with her husband and 20-month-old son. Unlike Piaf, she doesn't have to drag him along everywhere she goes.

One thing Piaf and Rabu have in common though, is that they highly regard the public. Piaf said once that her audience was "the most important thing in my life," and Rabu says that "if a show is successful, it has to do with the public."

killers — as if one can kill the pains of life," she begins.

PAINS OF LIFE

Pains of life — that's what Piaf's life was all about: she was born on a bench in Paris by a prostitute mother who later left her with her bordello-operating grandmother. Later, she sang to street people while her acrobat father pickpocketed the public....

She says that rue de Belville in Paris was stinky but exciting, that prostitutes and sailor were her friends, that she would go to sleep at five in the morning.

Rabu adopts the Piaf character and voice with tremendous ease and immediately captivates her audience's attention with her moving, sad, emotional songs and dramatically intense monologue.

She leads the public into a journey into Piaf's turbulent, painful life — recalling memorable events in her life — the tragedies and battles she confronted.

Rabu sings in both French and English but the monologue is in English. Among the favorite songs are Je ne regrette rien, Sous le ciel de Paris, Milord, and the amazing Exodus.

Most of her songs are about love: wanting to share her love and not let go or about lost loves and her fight to start over again and go on with life.

The emotional songs are her

Rabu says her parents, who have been married 53 years, are her best friends. They told her marvelous stories about European life — so much so that she "ran to" Europe at the age of 16, travelled through 30 countries, and came back at 19.

life; it recalls the story of a woman who lived to love.

In her song C'est l'Amour, she sings a song of love, saying that those who pretend to love will never cry and that she cried instead of loved:

Ceux qui font semblant d'aimer ne pourront jamais pleurer dans l'amour il faut pleurer, *j'ai donné mes larmes d'aimer

j'ai payé tant de larmes
pour le droit d'aimer j'ai pleurer au lieu d'aimer.*

Rabu is able to reproduce Piaf's life on stage. She leaves the audience in reflecting about their lives with astonishment, rapture, or sadness — depending on what they've been through.

Play portrays how hope can restore the human soul

LAKE BROME — The theatre is at once a place to escape and confront life. One of Broadway's longest-running musical classics, Man of La Mancha, which is now playing at Lake Brome Theatre, offers the chance to experience both aspects of theatre.

Lead character Don Quixote declares that the greatest madness of all is to be living life as it is, rather than the way it should be experienced.

Montreal-based Foolhouse Theatre Company gives a first-rate performance of this musical. Set against the desperate backdrop of the Spanish Inquisition, Man of La Mancha portrays how hope can restore the human soul.

Theatre Director Nicholas Pyne says audiences are enthusiastic. He says that repeated curtain calls are a common feature at the end of the evening. This version of the musical play is livened with excellent singing.

Man of La Mancha is a departure from last month's comic production, Bill Bishop Goes to War. Mirror reflections of ourselves are not always pleasant and yet Man of La Mancha is a life-sized mirror of our lives. As a spoonful of sugar helps the medicine go down, light humor eases the discomfort we feel when the question why have we lived is asked.

Man of La Mancha runs until August 3 nightly Tuesdays through Saturdays at 8:30. Tuesday and Thursday matinee performances are held at 2:30. Tickets are available at the door or can be reserved by calling 243-0361.

Jack Langedijk, Glenn Roy, and Karen Angle perform in the dramatic play, Man of La Mancha at Lake Brome Theatre until August 3.

TRAVEL

Tours des Art: chance to peer into artists' private lives

By Marlene Caplan

SUTTON — Tucked away in magical valleys and tiny villages, the muse is at work in barns, lofts, gardens and sheds — the light-filled studios of local artists.

Stanley Lake, a potter in the hamlet of Dunkin, usually works in solitude in the converted barn that is his studio. Nestled in the mountains by Ruitter Brook, the setting doesn't necessarily inspire his work, says Lake, "but it creates a haven, a peace."

A person could do this in the city, but artists here have chosen this environment.

"Seeing how we have surrounded ourselves — in our gardens, homes and workspaces, gives people an understanding of where our work emerges from," adds Lake. "It's a chance to peer into the private creative life of the artist."

From tomorrow until July 28, 30 artists and artisans of the Townships will open their workspaces to the public during the third annual Tours des Arts. These creative spaces nurture the ideas that result in the murals and mugs, the paintings and clay pots that enhance our homes and our lives.

A meandering trip along the backroads of the Townships and through the studios of committed artists, the Tours des Arts gives the public a rare opportunity to see the artist at work, to observe the process and craft that create the objects we admire.

From Glen Sutton to Mansonville, through Bolton Center, Knowlton, Brome, Sutton Junction, Sutton and over to Dunham, potters, painters, sculptors and bookbinders, woodworkers, clothing designers, papermakers and weavers will explain and demonstrate their works of art. The artisans will discuss the origins or symbolism of their work — free of charge. Their works will be on sale.

The Tour gives everyone a chance to see and speak to some well-known Canadian artists at work.

John Ballantyne of Sutton Junction, known to be a hyper-surrealist artist, will open his private studio to the perusal of curious art lovers.

"People love to see me working, to see a 'painter in action'," says Ballantyne, whose works sell for $5,000 - $8,000. His work is shown exclusively through a Montreal gallery, but during the Tour, Ballantyne will offer one painting for sale, as well as four or five drawings ranging from $500 - $1000.

WATCH ARTIST AT WORK

Visitors will be able to watch the painter working on his new piece "Wonders of the World". Posters from previous shows will be on sale and Ballantyne will be happy to sign them.

In the studio adjoining Ballantyne's, the captivating designs of sculptor and fabric artist Liz Davidson celebrate the magic of color. Davidson and Ballantyne, who share their home and studios with two cats, don't usually encourage visitors to their workspace.

"The studio space becomes different for this time," says Davidson, who is one of the Tours des Arts' organizers.

Two years ago 10 artists participated in the tour. Last year the number grew to 20. Most participants had between two and three hundred visitors to their studios during the nine-day tour.

"The first year it was low key, but lots of fun. Last year it was incredibly good. It's gotten much bigger faster than we expected," says Davidson, who expects the number of visitors to increase this year. Local businesses have sponsored the Tour for the first time, increasing the budget for publicity. The Chambre of Commerce in each town has expressed interest in supporting the event next year.

WORD OF MOUTH

But the best publicity is word of mouth, according to Sharon Cole, a bookbinder and bookmaker in Sutton. "We're off the beaten track," says Cole, "but people find their way here, they tell other people, they come back with friends."

Bookbinding partner Marsha Taylor says the Tour is demanding but worth the effort. "It forces us to keep a regular schedule," grins Taylor, who admits the creative duo sometimes keeps odd working hours.

"Usually we're open by appointment only," she says. Taylor says the Tours des Arts establishes ties with the community. "We tend to be an unknown quantity."

Taylor and Cole find a lot of people have no idea what an artist's studio might be like, or what goes on in one.

"It's a chance to show people what I do instead of telling them," says Cole, pouring oil paints into a vat of water.

The paints form swirls of patterns on top of the water. Fabric and paper is then dipped into the swirling colors, creating intricate and unique designs that are used as book covers and pieces of stationary. The process is called marbling, and is a traditional book-art.

"It's nice to demystify the craft," says Taylor.

The women's studio is draped with fabric and paper in fantastic patterns, and antique wooden tools used in bookbinding line the worktables. Outside, tall grass and orange day-lilies wave in the breeze.

INSPIRING REGION

All along the route of the Tour, winding rivers, wildflowers, the mountains and the meadows show visitors why this area inspires artists and artisans. The region is gaining reputation for the arts, and the participants in the Tours des Arts want to encourage their communities, as well as visitors and tourists, to patronize regional talent.

Performing artists will also be participating in the Tour. Special events include an evening of jazz and popular music in Mansonville, and two nights of dance performance at the Pinnacle Mountain Center for Performing Arts near Abercorn.

The Tour covers 81 kilometres. Along the way, great picnic spots, swimming holes, bed and breakfasts, and cafés and restaurants can be found. Brochures with maps and details are available at Infotourists in Montreal and Sherbrooke. Here's a list of where else to find them:

Redford, Streep, scenery highlight 'Out of Africa'

BY FELICIA A. FEASTER

Meryl Streep stars with Robert Redford in the 1985 film "Out of Africa" (CBS, July 21 and 23), based on the life of Karen Blixen (a.k.a. Isak Dinesen), who travels from Denmark to Kenya to start a business with her husband. But the author's love for Africa and an English adventurer, Denys Finch-Hatton (Redford), soon supplants her puts the "fun" back in prostitution. The bucolic musical features Dolly Parton as the town brothel's madam and sheriff Burt Reynolds as a favored customer trying to keep the "chicken ranch" from being shut down. The only thing going for this good-ole-boy hokum is the effervescent Parton.

• Jack Lemmon is John M. Slaton, the governor of 1913 Georgia who jeopardizes his political position when he reopens a sensational murder case in the fact-based miniseries "The Murder of Mary Phagan" (NBC, July 21-22).

• The final episode of the critically acclaimed series "China Beach" (ABC, July 22) will air as a two-hour movie. In 1988, the China Beach survivors reunite and pay a heartfelt visit to the Vietnam War Memorial in Washington, D.C.

• In the 1960s, Berkeley was the starting point for the civil-rights movement and later for the anti-war, women's rights and Black Panther causes. The 1990 documentary by Mark Kitchell, "Berkeley in the Sixties" (PBS, July 23), traces the rise of activism at the nation's most progressive state university and its impact on American politics. Kitchell uses "witnesses" — participants in the demonstrations and sit-ins of the '60s, who recount the time in glowing and often naively idealistic terms.

superficial ties to an unfaithful husband and the strained civility of British colonialism. The one hitch in an otherwise sublime film is Streep's studied Danish accent and Redford's failure to muster even a slight British pronunciation. The characters of "Out of Africa" are otherwise as detailed as the scenery is breathtaking.

• In typical cinematic tradition, "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" (ABC, July 21)

IN FOCUS

The life and vision of physicist Albert Einstein, by many accounts the greatest scientific mind of the 20th century, are examined on "A. Einstein: How I See the World." Among the topics touched on in the portrait, which uses speeches and writings to focus on Einstein's later years, are his outspoken advocacy of individual liberty and nuclear disarmament. It airs on "American Masters," Monday, July 22, on PBS. (Check local listings.)

IN FOCUS

The plot continues to thicken in the episode of Stephen King's "Golden Years" airing Thursday, July 25, on CBS. As Harlan (Keith Szarabajka, pictured) continues his reversal of the aging process, Terry Spann warns him and his wife, Gina, that their lives are in danger: Those who know the truth about Harlan are being killed one by one. She persuades Harlan and Gina to flee with her. But can they elude the relentless Jude Andrews?

TV DIALOGUE

BY TONI REINHOLD

KEEP ON TREKKIN' — Does William Shatner have any plans for another "Star Trek" motion picture? Can you give me any info about his private life? — H.R., Seattle

William Shatner

"Star Trek VI" will beam into theaters later this year. In the meantime, in addition to hosting the CBS series "Rescue 911," Shatner has become a successful science-fiction novelist. In 1989, his book "Tekwar" was published, and more novels will follow. Shatner tapes "Rescue 911" on weekends; during the week he writes and works on developing TV movies and features. The 60-year-old Shatner also breeds American Saddlebred show horses on his Kentucky farm, Belle Reve, which means Beautiful Dream. He is married to actress Marcy Lafferty, and he has three grown daughters from a previous marriage.

L.M.B., Clyde, Ohio

I believe you're referring to Ray Teal, who played Sheriff Roy Coffee from 1961-71 on the Western series. Teal also appeared in a number of film Westerns beginning in the 1930s. He was born on Jan. 12, 1902, in Grand Rapids, Mich., and died on April 2, 1976.

HEY, CISCO — I recall the promotional hoopla surrounding one of the old Westerns, in which the announcer said, "Here's adventure! Here's romance! Here's O'Henry's famous Robin Hood of the Old West!" Who is O'Henry, and of what show was this a part? — F.L.R., Waterbury, Conn.

"The Cisco Kid" (1950-56) was the Western with this memorable introduction. It starred Duncan Renaldo as Cisco and Leo Carrillo as his sidekick, Pancho. The character, who originally stole from the rich and gave to the poor, was created by famed short-story writer O. Henry in his tale "The Caballero's Way." In the TV series, he was transformed into a more conventional crime-fighting caballero. The Cisco Kid was also the hero of a number of films, a radio series and a comic strip.
