Drama students tackle Arthurian legend

Stamp series honor those who fought in World Wars

On the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month in 1918, an armistice was signed bringing to an end hostilities that prevailed for four years.

The first world war, or The Great War as it was more commonly known, was supposedly to be the war to end all wars. Never again was the world to know such ravages. In Ottawa a war memorial was erected, and in towns and cities across our nation, cenotaphs were built listing the names of those who didn't make it back.

Each year on Nov. 11, people gathered at these memorials to observe a two minute silence at eleven o'clock in the morning, in memory of those who had fallen.

In May of 1939, Canada issued a stamp depicting the War Memorial as part of a three-stamp issue to commemorate the Royal Visit of their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth along with their children Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret.

A short few months later, the peace was shattered with the outbreak of the Second World War in September of 1939. Once more Canada was called upon to send its young men to fight for the preservation of freedom.

In 1942-1943, Canada issued a set of stamps that became known as the War Effort Issue. The profits from the sale of the issue went towards badly needed war supplies. Included in this series were a one-cent, two-cent, two three-cents, a four-cent and a five-cent denomination depicting King George in the uniforms of the various services. A four-cent grain elevator and an eight-cent farm scene were to illustrate the food stuffs provided by this country. The 10-cent issue depicted parliament buildings while the thirteen and fourteen cents depicted ram tanks.

The 20-cent issue shows a corvette under construction, this proud little convoy escort vessel was built in Canada for both the Canadian and British navies. The fifty cent stamp depicts a munitions factory. The last stamp in the series, the one dollar stamp, shows a destroyer, queen of the seas under a full head of steam.

Canada not only supplied men to fight the war. She also provided much of the needed material.

Peace once more came to the world. However, the price was great. Many of the young men that went overseas didn't come back. And so, these names were added to the cenotaphs in the appropriate towns and cities across the country, and on Nov. 11 at 11:00 we remember those of not only the First World War, but also of the second and Korean Wars.

Philatelists have the opportunity of remembering more than just on the 11th of November. Each time the stamp album is opened, these stamps plus the 1968 fifty years commemorative stamp of the armistices of the first world war are always there in front of them.

This year, as we remember those who served in these previous conflicts, and especially those who died, let's also remember those who donned the uniform of our armed forces since the Korean conflict and those presently wearing it.

It's these men who were and are ready to guarantee our tomorrows as were our yesterdays and are our todays.

SAQ has done something right for a change

Although I hate to say it, the Société des Alcools has actually done something right for a change. This doesn't mean all is forgiven but it does mean there is hope.

Unlike many of their Quebec-bottled wines — including Feu Follet, Valpolicella and Chianti — which lack the distinct regional character of the native breed and which are invariably overpriced — two of the latest offerings are worth a try.

The first is the SAQ's white Anjou which sells at $5.45 and is generally available throughout Sherbrooke. Anjou is located at the lower end of the Loire River and although it has long produced many interesting wines they were generally ignored by North Americans. When the better-known wines of Burgundy and Bordeaux started their meteoric rise in price, however, the wines of the Loire — Anjou included — began to gain popularity.

This particular version is a clear, golden yellow with enough acidity to make it quite refreshing. It is also, like many Anjou whites, less than bone dry and somewhat Germanic in character — although lacking the finesse and balance of a good German wine. And although it makes an excellent aperitif, it would also go quite nicely with poultry or pork.

Also located in the Anjou region is the city of Saumur from whence comes the Domaine du Couvent now available in local SAQ outlets. Made from the Chenin Blanc grape — as is the case with all the best Anjou whites — the Saumur is dry, light and with just a taste of the sweetness found in the Anjou mentioned earlier. It also sells at a mere $5.45 and as such is an excellent buy.

Both of the above-mentioned wines are worth a try. Although neither is a 'classic', the price is definitely right and the value is considerably above much of what is normally offered by the SAQ. Cheers!

Puppeteer uses skulls, rags to bring legend to life

By Melanie Gruer

LENNOXVILLE — One of the newest muppets is directing a play at Centennial Theatre.

It's Basil the Bear, one of three new muppets created especially for the Canadian version of Sesame Street and he's written a play which will hit the stage next Thursday.

Actually, it's not Basil that wrote the play and he's not really directing it either.

It's Tim Gosley, a puppeteer who helps Basil come to life on the television screen. In his own life, Gosley is helping 11 third-year Bishop's drama students bring his creation to life.

The play is called Merlin and it's the story of an ancient Celtic tribe during the eighth century in Britain. Their world is changing around them and their gods are dying out. The play is their story, or perhaps a story about their story since the characters spend a great deal of time spinning yarns about ancient legends.

"It's something I've been working on for four years," said Gosley. "The show you'll see at Bishop's is just a workshop so it's only a portion of what it will become."

ONE-TIME SHOW

What Gosley means is that the performance you will see next week is a one-time show. Merlin may reappear again but it will never be the same as it was here. The show is called a "work-in-progress" because it's a stage creation which does not always follow the rigid confines of a script and blocking. Things are altered as rehearsals go along.

"Eventually I'd like to include dance but not yet," said Gosley. "You can only do so much at once."

The creator says it doesn't bother him that his ideas are being altered by the students and by director Greg Tuck. "You can only be creative for so long then you need input from other people," said Gosley.

"There are parts that are sacred to me — like the idea itself," he said.

Tuck adds, "It's not unusual when you're working with the playwright in the theatre to alter things. Sometimes the actors point out things that need to be changed."

Gosley says it doesn't hurt his ego to have his work changed. It was never his idea, he says, to run the show. Everyone has the same amount of importance.

"If this production works as it should, the playwright is as important as the choreographer and as the musician," Gosley said.

DROP DIALOGUE

The play uses a great deal of movement and sometimes, Gosley says, even the dialogue will be dropped in favor of a move.

"Depending on the actor's ability, sometimes they can move out an idea better than they can say it and it works better for the play," said the playwright.

The play is further complicated by the fact that the 11 third-year Bishop's drama students play a total of 22 characters. So how do 11 people become 22? With the help of skulls, old rags and wood.

Each of the 11 actors also controls a puppet with a head made out of a skull, some material for the body and a few pieces of interestingly shaped wood for the antlers.

The musician, is a synthesizer-player who has, like the actors, not worked from a script. He improvises the music and has come up with a score for the play.

Gosley says a great deal of the project belongs to the students. "The students had lots of input in the set. It's made up of things we found like old trees, chopped up old poles and leaves. The costumes are stuff we found or made ourselves," he said. "The project has become very much the students' project."

EASY TO UNDERSTAND

Gosley says the play is easy to understand and he doesn't think the audience will have any problem appreciating Merlin.

The actors generally agree but they have a few more concerns at the moment.

"It's tough," explained Chris McGregor. "I play a character named Emmet who controls a puppet. I have to be Emmet controlling the puppet so I can't be Chris. It's hard to be three people at once."

The cast and crew include Kate Robertson, Bruce Spinney, Kathy Mitchell, James Gordon, Willy Badger, Craig Lindsay, Heidi Web-

RECORD-PERRY BEATON

In a flash, the bone-puppets take on life-like features and become characters of their own.

ber, Collette Micks, Daron Millington, Chris McGregor, Hamilton Shippee and Sylvie Labelle.

Merlin opens Thursday, Nov. 13 at 8:30 p.m. Two other performances take place Friday, Nov. 14 at 10 a.m. and Saturday, Nov. 15 at 8:30 p.m. Tickets may be reserved by calling the Centennial Theatre box office at (819) 563-4966.

On the cover:

The 11 Bishop's actors who will present Merlin next Thursday through Saturday at Centennial Theatre show off their puppet co-stars.

Kate Robertson, Sylvie Lavelle and Tim Gosley show themselves and their masks made of skulls and other sorts of bones.

A long way from Marbleton

Eva Tanguay alarmed the prudes and drew in the crowds

By Bernard Epps

Eva Tanguay was born in Marbleton on August 1, 1878, the second daughter and the youngest of four children of Dr. Octave Tanguay and Marc Adele Pajeau. Her father had been born, raised and educated in Paris; her mother was a music teacher and precocious little Eva had her first singing lessons from her mother.

Before her sixth birthday, Eva and her family moved to Holyoke, Massachusetts, where she started school and mastered English. Shortly afterwards, her father died, leaving the family in straightened circumstances, and Eva began singing, dancing and winning prizes in local amateur shows.

She became a professional at the age of eight when the regular child star of Little Lord Fauntleroy became ill while the Francesca Redding Company was playing Holyoke.

Eva and her mother toured with the Redding Company for the next five years and she was so popular that offers began pouring in from other theatrical companies. She toured with The Merry World and won a Broadway role in 1901 in My Lady. In 1903, she attracted wide attention in The Chaperones where she sang the song of reckless abandon that became her theme and made her a star — I Don't Care.

SO OUTRAGEOUS

She went on to play Claire de Lune opposite Frank Daniels in

The Office Boy. In 1904, The Blond in Black opened with Eva playing Carlotta Dashington, the 'Sambo Girl' but she was so outrageous and so popular that the title was quickly changed to The Sambo Girl in acknowledgement of her drawing power.

She was now the undisputed queen of musical comedy and moved easily into the vaudeville circuit where she commanded as much as $3500 a week and became the highest priced star in the world. Mae West played opposite her on the old Keith Circuit and she — although not known for her generosity to rivals — had this to say in her autobiography:

"Eva Tanguay was strong opposition. She was a remarkable and wild personality who tore down a theatre, and she was an established star. A headliner for many years, she always looked great and was great. She was the greatest song seller vaudeville ever had as she shouted 'I Don't Care!', her theme song."

Of herself, flamboyant Eva said her success was entirely due to her ebullient, impudent personality. "That's all there is to it," she said. "As a matter of fact, I'm not beautiful; I can't sing. I do not know how to dance. I am not even graceful."

TWO PEARLS

She was, in fact, a tornado of unruly blonde hair, wide mouth always laughing, outrageous blue eyes, turned up nose and lithe figure. She did Salome's Dance of the Seven Veils that usually brought down the house and sometimes brought in the police. Her costume, she claimed, was "two pearls". Another costume she stitched together out of dollar bills spangled with Lincoln pennies.

They called her the "oomph girl". She was run out of Pittsburgh for flaunting the blue laws and responded by singing Nothing Bothers Me. She sang I Want Someone to go Wild With Me, Go As Far As You Like and It's All Been Done Before but Not Like I Do It. Nobody could belt out a suggestive song like Eva Tanguay.

Her philosophy, she said in a rare sober moment, "largely amounts to losing one's inhibitions and being natural. I know life and I know the meaning of my song 'I Don't Care' as applied to life."

CLASSIC STUNTS

She set the style for the Roaring Twenties, alarmed the prudes and drew in the crowds. Always aware of the value of publicity, it was Eva who originated some classic stunts — the fake kidnapping, the stolen $10,000 diamond necklace.

She became the star of Florenz Ziegfeld's 'Follies of 1909' and toured the country. In Louisville, Kentucky, a stagehand got in her way when she was rushing to take a bow and she assaulted him with her hat pin. Others joined in the fight, and the stagehand got knocked down a flight of stairs with Eva "slapping right and left." Taken to the police station, she was told she would have to post bail, whipped out a roll of bills and cried: "Take it all and let me go for it is now my dinner time!" Next day, she was fined $40 and costs.

In Evansville, Indiana, she cut a stage curtain to shreds with scissors after the house manager fined her for missing a matinee. In Sharon, Pennsylvania, she publicly chided a manager from the stage for his meanness in not giving her a larger mirror for her dressing room.

WORE TIGHTS

In Rockaway, New York, a plain-clothes policeman named James McVey was delegated to arrest her for improper dress on Sunday. A blue law required variety artists to wear only such clothes a stage on Sundays that could be worn on the street and Eva Tanguay wore tights. The policeman, aware of the delicacy of his task, politely waited until she had returned to her dressing room before bringing up the subject of her arrest.

Her piercing shrieks backstage alarmed the audience out front. They could plainly hear her screaming "Don't touch me!", "How dare you!" "Don't dare come near me!" Champions rushed to her rescue and poor McVey very nearly had a major riot on his hands until the house manager found a lawyer among the audience and Eva won release on a $500 bond.

In 1913, at the age of 35, she married her dancing partner, John W. Ford, but divorced him four years later. In 1927, she married her pianist, Alexander Book, but won an annulment within three months on the grounds that he had misrepresented himself — his real name was Chandos Ksiakewacz.

EYESIGHT FAILED

Then her eyesight began to fail. She was still a great star and carried on for a while with a red bulb among the footlights to mark centre stage and the audiences never knew she had to be led from her dressing room to the wings.

She had earned around $2 million but was always a reckless spender and wildly generous to friends and strangers alike. The stock market crash of 1929 left her virtually destitute, she could no longer work and became totally blind in 1933.

Her old friend, Sophie Tucker, paid for the operations that removed cataracts and restored her sight and she immediately threw herself into plans to raise funds for the endowment of a hospital for blind children — but then she was crippled by arthritis. She became permanently bed-ridden in 1937 in her small Hollywood bungalow.

Visitors, however, found her as irrepressible as ever. The walls of her room were papered with yellowing photographs of herself at the height of her career. She threatened to write the story of her hundred lovers and actually began work on an autobiography she called "Up and Down the Ladder," but she died of a cerebral hemorrhage on January 11th, 1947, aged 68.

She'd come a long way from Marbleton.

Collection shows Kesey's eye for comedy is still intact

Demon Box by Ken Kesey (Viking-Penguin): $19.95, 384 pp.

The early reports of the complete demise of America's psychedelic novelist, which maintained that Ken Kesey had sustained such heavy trauma in the creative area of his brain, thanks to controlled and random experimentation with various mind-expanders, that he would be reduced to a blithering idiot, have been thankfully proven false with the release of Demon Box.

Kesey, the darling of the counter-culture of the West Coast in the Haight-Ashbury days of San Francisco, when wearing a flower in your hair was one of the more innocent things you could do to your head, he of the Merry Pranksters' madcap assault on staid America, proved that his novels One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest and Sometimes a Great Notion matched just about any other contemporary novelist's oeuvre in quality and staying power.

Since that output of the 60s nothing much has been heard of Kesey, except for desultory appearances in print in such magazines as Esquire and a publication that he takes a personal interest in called Spit In The Ocean. Demon Box represents a gathering of assorted Kesey pieces which have appeared in Rolling Stone, Playboy and the above-mentioned venues, and they prove, beyond a shadow of a doubt, that Kesey the writer has merely been directing his unquestionable literary talents in unexpected directions.

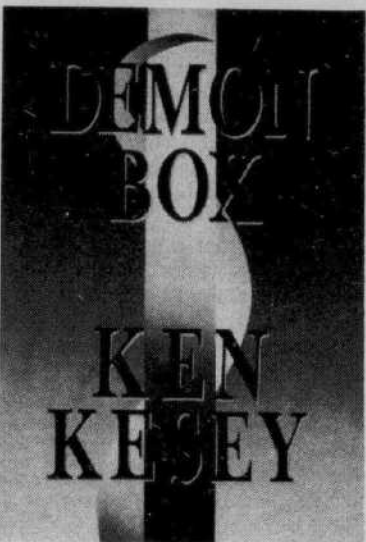

Many of the hilarious short pieces here might have been titled "Life Down On The Farm", or "Many Flew Over The Scribe's Nest", as they tell of Kesey's eccentric lifestyle, his devotion to the desperately hard life of a mixed farmer, and the wondrous attraction that his abode holds for unrepentant children of the Flower Power Age, whose assaults on his time and hospitality would keep any writer from getting down to the solitary task of out-staring the blank page before him.

Kesey's eye for comedy is intact and some of the situations that arise in these tales conjure up some hysterical visions of unlikely humour — such as the hapless Hell's Angel who rides into the Kesey barnyard, only to have his "hog", with him unhappily aboard, mounted by the oversexed, rampaging bull known as "Hamburger", who feels that his mission in life is to mate with anything that moves or even twitches. His back tire having been brushed by a heifer in hat, the unsuspecting Heller becomes a fitting target for Hamburger's aroused ardor.

But the farm is setting for only a few of Kesey's entertaining sketches, with others taking him to Mexico, Cairo, to the Great Wall of China and a marathon race he covers for an American publication, to Saville Row at the height of the Beatles' Apple Corps. Attempts at corporate befuddlement, or in the title story to the scene of the origin of his labors at a mental institution which were transmogrified into the powerful tale of "the Chief" and that unforgettable American "original", Randle P. McMurphy.

Kaleidoscope

By RICHARD LONEY

Whether he's documenting the stunning panorama of sounds, sights and odours of a Cairo street scene, or describing the strange delegation of Frisco weirdos who descended on John, Paul, George and Ringo at their Apple digs, or attempting to make sense of the post-psychedelic era in American cultural history, Kesey is a writer that should be read for the sheer fun of it.

There are sections of Demon Box that convince you that this amazing gentleman can write circles around just about any American writer toiling at a typewriter today, from Philip Roth to Ann Beattie; and there are some indications that just when Kesey was hitting his stride he was suddenly confronted with a tranny being thrown on his favorite tractor, or else he was conned into entertaining a perky, female journalist from Crawdaddy magazine at the same time as a delegation of Hell's Angels has dropped by to terrorize the farm animals and guests alike.

For now, it seems, devotees of Ken Kesey will have to be satisfied with his random assaults at the literary life and hope for massive crop failures in Oregon to force this gifted American writer back into his one true craft — literature.

RECORD REVIEWS

The Big Dash Swimmer (Virgin-A&M)

Named after a bowl of soup, this group with Scottish connections has all of the verve and flair for originality you might compare to that of the Band, with a Robbie Robertson style of songwriter in Steven Lindsay, who also handles the singing chores for the Big Dish. Basically a guitar band, the Big Dish sing sophisticated songs with interesting inspirations — "Prospect Street" is based on the American painting of Edward Hopper, while other tunes owe some of their depth to Lindsay's admiration for artists such as Andrew Wyeth. "Prospect Street" is a bubbly, optimistic song that shares the qualities on SWIMMER of making guitar sounds fresh and spontaneous, and vocal blends that are understated, surrounding these fine songs like perfect lacework.

The Beatles' influence on this band is manifest on every song they sing, but never so clearly as on a throwaway "Revolution No. 9" type of finale they provide here, called "Second Swimmer" as a type of coda to the title song that occurs as the opener to side two. This continuation features string quartet action played off against an insistent voice that intones "get in" in a hypnotically repeated reminder of Yoko's wonderfully inventive idea of repeating "number nine" ad infinitum on the White album. Call The Big Dish a second generation Beatles band, but do call them innovative and able to write striking melodies and sing them with such impeccable taste that Eagles & Stones producer Glyn Johns sat in at the production controls to oversee a track called "Another people's palace."

Boston THIRD STAGE (MCA Records)

Tom Scholz has put Boston fans through a six-year period of enforced withdrawal from the music of the band that had strong performances on the first two album outings and soaring hit records with songs such as "More Than A Feeling", culled from a debut album that sold more than six million long before the diminutive Jackson unlocked the piggy banks of teenie-bopperdom.

With liner notes emphasizing the long trek of six years in the studios — Scholz counts studio time in terms of light bulbs blown, 175 of them, and estimates that singer Brad Delp popped a "P" on his vocals about 300 times, or that the record button was hit about a million taps, each of which could have occasioned an erasure of something already on tape — and the pride that producer & engineer Scholz has in the fact that all digital, synthesized or state-of-art gadgetry used in most new recordings was eschewed in favor of all-analog recording on 2-24 track tape machines, one for vocals and one for instrumental backing tracks.

All of which doesn't amount to a row of guitar picks if the music fails to justify the means, but in Boston's case, and happily for the band's myriad fans, the output on THIRD STAGE is indeed worth waiting for.

Lead track on the record is a beautiful ballad, "Amanda", which gives some indication of the multi-tracked wonders to follow. Singer Brad Delp is put through the same kind of intensity that Scholz brings to shaping his guitar sounds until they are hard to tell from actual violin passages, forcing his voice into some searing, soaring bits of vocal workouts that have the sugary sweetness of the best Beach Boys blends.

Side two's "Can'tcha Say (You Believe In Me)" has all the punch of about three barbershop quartets with all of the voices being Irish tenors, as they spit out the infectious chorus of one of the album's absolute highpoints. Several cuts also feature some almost Wagnerian organ inserts, with "The Launch" employing a Conn theatre organ, which gives all of the feeling of an actual rocket launch as it surges into life and pumps up some incredible walls of organ sounds.

Tom Scholz has wisely spaced out the dynamic effects of this hand-crafted album, making sure that the pacing is right for such a collection of high-octane, powerful musical tours de force. Boston will be maligned for the excesses of Scholz's creative muse and for not producing an Abbey Road, given such an extensive gestation period for his ideas; all things considered, however, THIRD STAGE is state-of-the-art rock, done up with the care to detail that current bands such as Asia, and other British artsy groups boast about.

VIDEO SCREENINGS

THAT WAS THEN... THIS IS NOW (Paramount Home Video)

S.E. Hinton's novels have been a much raided orchard of teenage stories of violence and just plain growing up, providing the basis for such films as The Outsiders and several others, recently.

This latest of Hinton's works, That Was Then... This Is Now has been adapted for the screen by one of the stars, Emilio Estevez, who I am told is the son of actor Martin Sheen (of Apocalypse Now fame) — not that the genes have to be repeaters, keeping in mind that Art Linkletter's daughter tried skywalking at about 20 stories up in an L.A. spawn of celebrity incident of lesser note! But Sheen's son, he of The Breakfast Club notoriety, does a fine, understated, but entirely believable job of transcribing Hinton's tale of a perfect friendship between two lads in their late teens into a gripping and sometimes poignant story of youth.

Mark, the Estevez character, has been beaten a lot as a kid, and when his parents blow each other away with guns, he moves in with Bryon (Craig Sheffer) and his nutty mom, Mrs. Douglas, played by Barbara Badcock. (When one of the kids intones: "I've finally decided what I want to be when I grow up", she bites and says, "What?", and on his reply of "Rich", dryly notes, "Well, it's expensive!").

The teen friendship between Heller Mark and gentler Bryon is sun-drenched, as many are, by the discovery by the latter of a young charmer named Kathy (Kim Delaney), and this, plus a couple of other subsidiary but interesting plots, leads the duo into some perilous circumstances. In fact, with a murder by a couple of pool hustlers, deadly beatings, Kathy's kid brother M&M getting permanently in touch with Disneyland thanks to a drug trip that goes awry, and the usual teen angst, there's lots of chance that Estevez's screenplay could have gone overboard with the maudlin and trite. Instead, the various themes are handled with insight and an understated, un-hip, un-cool dialogue that is far more suited to actual teens than some of the hyperbolic, unbelievable trivia that is put into their mouths by studio hacks.

This movie did little business in the theatres, but it is superior to most of the stuff that passes for pages from teen diaries that attempts to make it, buoyed up by bold, rocky soundtracks. Definitely worth a viewing! (Video available at Le Club Video, Queen Street, Lennoxville, and at Treizeme Avenue, Sherbrooke)

Townships square dancers go to T.O.

By Laurel Sherrer

LENNOXVILLE — Step into the Lennoxville firehall any Friday evening and you'll hear a strange shuffling sound emanating from the upper floor.

That's because there are eight young square dancers up there practising their feet off to compete at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto in November.

Their teacher and caller Stewart Deacon had been hoping to take the group to Toronto ever since he found out two years ago that there was a square dance competition at the Royal Winter Fair.

This year he did all the preliminary footwork and got the group registered for the competition Nov. 16.

They are currently working on four different calls sent by the organizers of the competition. They have to be prepared to perform any two of these, decided by the judge on the spot, said Deacon.

GROUPS HELPED

With the help of community clubs and individual donations, they have been able to raise the $1000 to $1200 needed to get them there and back.

Stewart Deacon has been calling square dances for about 35 years and has been teaching square dancing off and on for the past 15. He says the group of young people, aged 18-22, are an exception among their age group, in that most of them have grown up with square dancing. Few young people today know how to square dance, he said.

"What we're trying to do is keep young people interested so they'll teach their kids," he said.

Each region of Canada has its own peculiar variations on square dance calls, Deacon said. "The square dances like we're doing come from Scotch jigs, Irish jigs right into the French Quebec reels and stuff like that," he said.

In Toronto, the eight young people will be judged on two of the four calls they've practised, based on their attitude, spirit, audience appeal, entrances and exits, accuracy and knowledge of the moves, uniformity, style, dress and neatness.

Their caller is also judged for his spirit, clarity and accuracy.

MUST RESPOND

Although the dancers learn the steps in the call, they still have to listen and respond to the caller, said Deacon. "If he says jump over a chair in the corner of the room, you do it," he said.

The square dance club began as a Quebec 4-H and Young Farmers group five years ago, but now includes dancers who do not belong to these groups. They are working people and students in high school and CEGEP.

For Lana Humphrey, 19, the trip to Toronto and the experience of the competition will be worth every one of the hours spent practising. "When you enjoy doing something you don't mind giving up the time for it," she says.

Donna Bray, 18, says a lot of young people don't understand the group's devotion to square dancing. "A lot of people think 'Square-dancing — that's just for farmers'," she said.

The group is not entirely new to competitions. For four years they have competed in a Quebec Young Farmers square dance competition in Howick, Quebec last year they took second place, but the two preceding years they were the champions.

Bottles found in lake have stories to tell

Bubbles

By JACQUES BOISVERT

of the Société d'Histoire du Lac Memphremagog Inc.

One day doing a dive I found a very nice bottle called Hutchinson type, (invented in 1879), with the name inscribed: "W.H. Darling & Son, Newport."

A few days later a diver friend, Daniel Quirion, told me of his finding of a bottle bearing the name Memphremagog Bottling Works, Newport, Vt. Let me try to share with you the story of these two bottles.

At first I went to Newport to meet with Chester "Chet" Carpenter, an old friend, also a famous bottle collector and he showed me six different bottles from these two companies. He also shared with me that he helped Mrs. Nelson in her information in her book "Frontier Crossroads Volume #1" pp. 216-217 and here is what I found:

"Another extensive institution of West Derby is the bottling works of W.H. Darling & Son who occupy a three-story building and was established in 1887 with H.W. Darling, son, as manager. This firm employs seven men (two of these are salesmen). The plant is operated by steam power and a very extensive business is done in bottling of all carbonated drinks such as coffee tonic, champagne beer, many fruit flavors and ice cream parlor concentrates. While they manufacture the celebrated Newport beer, a non-intoxicating drink, they also bottle "Wheatley and Bates" non-intoxicating hop bitter ale made in Sheffield, England, and for which the firm is sole agents for Vermont. Pure water came from a very deep artesian well.

"Harry W. Darling has had twelve years experience in this business and for three years had charge of the works of Begley & Sons of New Britain, Conn. who employed twenty men. He is a native of Canada. It is but simple truth to say that Mr. Darling has worked this business up from a small beginning to one of the most successful in Vermont." (From The Reformer-Brattleboro, Vermont, July 13, 1894).

This business was located in West Derby on the Causeway at the junction of East Main Street and Causeway hill. The ownership changed from the Darling name to Mr. and Mrs. John Rock some time after 1906 (maybe 1910) and was renamed Memphremagog Bottling Co. of Newport, Vt. Mrs. Rock was at one time bookkeeper and secretary for the Darlings. Under the new owners it was operated into the early 1920s.

An interesting sidelight of the Walter H. Darling & Son business was the type of soda water bottle that was popularly used. It was called a Hutchinson soda — with a patented internal closure that stayed inside the bottle and pushed in to fill and empty and was pulled tight against the inside neck to close it. The usual method of cleaning this type bottle for re-use was by steam pressure and inverting the bottle till dry. Hence the need for steam power in their plant. A very few of these are still in existence and at least one of the drying racks can be found in Newport.

This style of bottle had a short life with the advent of a much superior one called the crown-top soda — invented at the turn of the century and still in use today. The Darlings changed over to the crown tops, with their company name embossed, as soon as possible. When the name changed to Memphremagog Bottling, the bottles also changed to the new name — thus providing a visual record.

Not long ago I wrote about Maggie Little, the Newport fisherman. Chet showed me a photo of her drinking from a bottle at the bottling company. It does not look like "soft drink" according to her smile but probably an unpublished product that was sold on the sly and known to be strong enough to start a car in a very cold weather. Mind you this is only a rumor...

Gov't-commissioned artwork doesn't please everyone

This is the second part in a two-part look at the provincial government's program to integrate art and architecture. Last week artists talked about what they liked about the program. This week we look at some of its weaknesses.

By Laurel Sherrer

SHERBROOKE — "It's very difficult to talk of the integration of art and architecture. We always come to the same result: we leave a place for the art."

Louis Faucher, the architect designing the new courthouse in Sherbrooke, suggests that although the provincial government's Programme d'integration des arts à l'architecture et à l'environnement is a great encouragement for the arts, it may not accomplish all it sets out to do.

The program, set up in 1981, obliges any provincial ministry involved in construction and renovation projects to devote the equivalent of about one per cent of the cost to artwork — sculptures, murals and so on. Under this program, Sherbrooke artist Yvon Proulx has been awarded a $30,000 commission for a sculpture outside the new courthouse and about a dozen other projects of smaller proportions have been commissioned elsewhere around the Townships in 1985-86.

HUMANIZE BUILDINGS

The idea behind the program is to give artists the chance for exposure, as well as to humanize the often bleak, sterile appearance of public buildings. The way the program has been run so far, however, doesn't always encourage the true integration of artwork with the building, according to Faucher.

"There has to be a collaboration from the beginning when the architect starts to work on a project and he says 'I'll find an artist I know and have him work with me' so that the art and architecture are really integrated," he said. As it is, usually the architect has made all his designs when the artist is called in.

But this is hard to avoid, if the program is going to be fair, says Faucher. When a construction project comes up, committees are formed to choose an artist from a 'bank' of artists in the region concerned. Each of the artists' curriculum vitae and slides of their previous work is examined to determine their suitability for the commission.

The architect is only one voice on this selection committee, said Faucher, and this often means he ends up working with an artist he doesn't know, and whose work he doesn't understand. So instead of working together, the two design their separate projects, and try to reconcile them in the end.

And it's usually the artists who have to adapt.

FEEL OBLIGED

"There are architects who are 100 per cent for the program, but others feel they're obliged to do it," says Sherbrooke artist Diane Boudreault. "We often feel like we're put to the side."

Boudreault recently completed a $21,000 work of art at the Jardin-des-Lacs school in St-Denis-de-Brompton. Circul'air is both a sculpture and a piece of playground equipment, made of galvanized steel tubes and platforms for children to climb on.

Working with the school and the parents' committee involved was a good experience, she said, but there was, as always, a feeling of being left a space to work with, when everything else was done.

"What I find hard is the relationship with the architects and engineers, because often everything has been decided when we arrive and it's often we who have to change our plans a bit."

Another complaint of artists is that they just don't make any money doing these projects. In fact, they often lose.

"So far, in our experience the monetary benefit has been almost zero," says Satoshi Saito, a Way's Mills artist who, with his wife Louise Doucet-Saito, has completed three projects under the program in the past year. "In most of the cases we barely cover the expenses."

NOT ACCUSTOMED

The problem is that the artists are often not accustomed to doing the large-scale works required under the program, or to making sure their work will stand up to the elements. And even when they've done several, as the Doucet-Saitos have, each project is different and unforeseen costs arise.

Then there's the problem of maintenance. There have been stories in the past about the building's administrators failing to tend to the upkeep of a work of art, or making changes without consulting the artist.

Laurent Bouchard, the program's director, says this has been a problem, although the organization doing the construction signs a contract with the artist about maintenance. A system of annual inspections of the works is now being worked out, he says.

Added to the technical and financial problems is a certain dubiousness on the part of the public toward these works of art.

"It's not an easy program to defend," says Nicole Benoit, a regional representative for the Ministry of Cultural Affairs. "Often the choice of the artist is contemporary, and most of the public is not used to that, because they don't go to art galleries much. When the artists get out of the art galleries, it shocks people."

NOT RIGHT AWAY

Benoit takes the view that artists are researchers, trying out new visual forms and ideas, and that their work doesn't necessarily have to be understood or appreciated right away.

Diane Boudreault's $21,000 'Circul'air' sculpture at the Jardin-des-Lacs school in St-Denis-de-Brompton doubles as playground equipment.

Satoshi Saito agrees. "When the market is small, it needs a tradition of paying respect or attaching importance to a work of art," he says. It may take 20 years or more for people to appreciate a work of art, and that's why the government needs to support artists. "If you look at the private sector, I doubt many private enterprises would be willing to invest that one per cent."

Saito admits that often artists are unworthy of the tasks assigned to them through the program. "Many turn out to be mediocre work, unfortunately, and many works, let's say, so-so," he says.

"But if 10 in 100 become critically important works of art, then I think as a benefit to society it's tremendous."

The Record incorrectly identified part of an Orford Arts Centre building as the work of Louise and Satoshi Doucet-Saito last Friday. This new box office at the arts centre is actually the work we meant to show.

NOVEMBER 8 TO NOVEMBER 23, 1986

TUESDAYS TO SATURDAYS 10:30 A.M. TO 5:00 P.M.
SUNDAYS 1:00 P.M. TO 5:00 P.M.

BLUE ARMOIRE BLEUE 3740 MAIN ST. ROUTE 202 DUNHAM, QUEBEC

Music

The Vieux Clocher in Magog is calling this the month of Quebec songs, and is starting it off with Paul Piché, accompanied by Michel Hinton on the keyboard. This duo performed last night at 8:30 and will do the same tonight, Saturday and Sunday. Tickets are on sale at the Café aux livres at 66 Alexandre in Sherbrooke, the Les 3 marmites restaurant in Magog and at the Vieux Clocher itself. For reservations, just call (819) 847-0470.

Coming up next weekend in Cowansville is the second concert in the Jeunesses Musicales series. This one features soprano Lynne Fortin and mezzo-soprano Sonia Racine, and the program is described as "light and accessible". This takes place Sunday, Nov. 16 at 8 p.m. in the Ste-Rose-de-Lima Church.

For music of a more casual nature, there's Country Session at the Foster Hotel and Whiteline at Chez Ralph in Mansonville every Saturday night. Over at the Old Mill in Stanbridge East, there's country-rock music by Webb Thursday nights and music of the 50s and 60s right up to the present by the Montreal band Jet Black every Friday and Saturday night.

The Del Monty in Rock Island has the Montreal band Mirage playing rock and roll tonight and Saturday night, while over at the Maples in Stanstead it's country-rock with Central Park both nights.

Weekend Express plays the Shady Crest in Ayer's Cliff Fridays and Saturdays throughout the month, while in Waterville The Good Ole Boys will be pleasing the patrons Fridays and Saturdays after 9 and Sundays after 4 throughout the months of November and December.

At the Hut in Lennoxville, Long Shot plays for an Armistice Day dance Saturday. The F.L. Hideaway has the Stephen Barry Band with special guest Brian Monty tonight and Saturday night, playing rock, jazz and blues music.

Wiley and the Poor Boys continue to play their country, rock and bluegrass sounds to the people who frequent the Country Palace on Wellington St. in Sherbrooke, Wednesdays through Sundays throughout the month of November.

In Richmond this weekend and next, local folk-pop musician Dave Lapp is in the spotlight at the Bar de la Banque both Friday and Saturday night. In Danville, there'll be dancing at the Danville Legion from 9:30 to 1:30 Saturday night to the music of Rod Bray and the Countrymen.

Exhibitions/Events

This is the final weekend to see the exhibition La Forêt apprivoisée at the Leon Marcotte Exhibition Centre in Sherbrooke. This is a display that looks at the role of the forest has played in human life over the centuries, particularly here in Quebec, and it runs only until Sunday. The centre, at 222 Frontenac St. in Sherbrooke, is open Tuesday to Sunday from 12:30 to 5 p.m.

By Laurel Sherrer

There are two new shows starting at the Horace Gallery in Sherbrooke this weekend. Les Châteaux de Sable is Lorraine Fontaine's exhibition of mixed techniques on canvas and paper, which, according to the gallery's press release, "invite the spectator to discover an imaginary universe constructed around traces of the past, ancient, lost cities, temples in ruins." At the same time Cinéma d'ailleurs, an exhibition of work by Hélène Roy, combines film sequences and text by Jean Chatard to create images that appear and disappear like memories from the subconscious. Both exhibits open tonight at 8 with a vernissage and talk by Claire Gravel on Hélène Roy's work.

Over at the Caisse Populaire de Sherbrooke-Est, there are recent sketches and drawings by Claude Lafleur to be seen during banking hours until Nov. 28.

Two exhibitions finish this weekend at the Cultural Centre at the University of Sherbrooke, but you can catch both if you drop by before Sunday. One, entitled Pierres sculptables du Québec, brings together the works of Jean Brilant, André Lapointe and Réal Patry to form a catalogue of the types of stone found in Quebec that can be used for sculpture. The other, Installations continues no. 24, is Pierrette Mondou's exploration of the links between tapestry and sculpture. Mondou uses only acrylic tubing and thread in structures that explore texture, rhythm, form, transparency and volume. To complement Mondou's work, environmental music by Robin Minard will be playing in the gallery while the exhibition continues.

Also on at the Cultural Centre until Nov. 16 is an exhibition of drawings by Bernard Saul entitled Investigations secrètes. This is made up of about 20 small figurative drawings representing intimate scenes, exteriors, interiors and social situations, according to the press release. The press release goes on to say although Saul's work is figurative, it resists immediate identification, instead suggesting a psychological comprehension, moral judgement or even allegorical interpretation.

The long-awaited Mary Martin show at the Blue Armoire in Dunham begins this weekend. Martin, long known for her oil landscapes inspired by Townships scenery, turned her hand to watercolors with great success about a year and a half ago. The present exhibit is all recent watercolors, and can be seen until Nov. 23, Tuesday to Saturday from 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m. The gallery is at 3740 Main St. in Dunham.

New at the Arts Sutton Gallery this weekend is a show of photographs by Jean-Pierre Beaudin, Jim O'Regan and Dorothy Richardson. Beaudin's recent work draws from his experience doing graphic design projects, exhibitions and stamp designs for Canada Post. O'Regan does abstract studies of the Townships, exploring the forms and patterns found in nature, and Richardson depicts scenes from her recent travels in China and Peru as well as around the Townships. This show will run until Nov. 23 and the gallery is open 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekends only.

More photography is featured at the Centre d'interprétation de la nature du lac Boivin in Granby. Autour de lac Témiscouata is a collection of photographs by Alain Tardif, made between April and October 1983 while the artist was travelling around the Eastern part of Quebec. The exhibition continues until Nov. 20 at 700 Drummond in Granby.

Starting next Monday, Bernice Sogge's paintings will be featured in the foyer of the provincial government building at 77 Main St. in Granby. Sogge has apparently recently returned from a trip to Mexico, and, according to the gallery's press release, her four-month sojourn there has effected her use of color. This show is accessible during business hours.

Drawings and prints from the Atelier de gravure de Laval Inc. are travelling around the province all winter in an itinerant exhibition, and from now until Nov. 28 they can be seen at the municipal library in Sherbrooke (165 Bank).

Au delà du Masque, Sherbrooke artist Pauline Bressan's exhibition of paintings, continues this week at the Sherbrooke Museum of Fine Arts. Bressan says, in her work, she tries to "rediscover the spiritual state that animated 'primitive' people in their quest of the sacred" which often involved the use of masks. The exhibition continues until Nov. 29.

Recent painting-assemblages by Roland Bastien are exhibited until next Friday at the Bishop's-Champlain Art Gallery, upstairs in the Marjorie Donald Building on campus. Bastien's work is "post-formalist", says the gallery's press release, and it "negotiates a difficult boundary between social content and relationships of form." The gallery is open Monday to Friday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

If you're on the Bishop's University campus next Wednesday, Thursday or Friday, you might check out a student exhibition in the Norton Studios. The fine arts students' work includes painting, sculpture, drawing and sculptural relief. Visiting hours are 8 to 10 p.m. Wednesday and 1 to 10 p.m. Thursday and Friday.

Starting next Tuesday there will be watercolors by Luigi Tiengo on display in the foyer of the Memphremagog Library in Magog.

The Beaulne Museum in Coaticook is currently hosting an exhibit called La chasse traditionnelle au Québec in collaboration with the Museum of Civilization. This, as you might expect, examines the evolution of hunting techniques over the years, and how hunting has influenced other areas of life.

And then there's the exhibition opening tonight at the Galerie d'art La Falaise in Sherbrooke. Martin Gagnon, the artist featured, is from the Charlevoix region and his charming landscapes and village scenes are inspired by that part of the world, often in winter and often portraying children at play. "I paint what I love," he says. "I have always wanted to speak through my drawings, a bit like prehistoric man." This show goes on until Nov. 17.

Until Nov. 23 the Laurier Museum in Arthabaska has photographs by Claude Demers and drawings by Diane Lévesque on display. You can catch this show Tuesday to Friday from 9 a.m. to noon and 1:30 to 5 p.m. or from 1:30 to 5 p.m. on the weekend.

'In the Core's Sugarbush' is one of Mary Martin's recent watercolors to be exhibited at the Blue Armoire gallery in Dunham starting Saturday. See Exhibitions/Events column.

In the events category, there's a talk next Thursday night at Bishop's University entitled Features of Faces: Patterns or Parts? in which Dr. S.J. McKelvie examines the way in which we remember faces. This takes place at 7:30 p.m. in the red room in MacKinnon Hall.

Now, this final item has a lot to do with music, a lot to do with dancing, and some other stuff too, but I'll have to put it here under 'events' because they're all happening at one place and time. I am speaking of the variety show Dreamers' Holiday planned for Nov. 16 at the Lennoxville Elementary School. This is for the benefit of the Lennoxville Ascot Historical and Museum Society and will feature, among others, dance acts by L'école de danse Janann and the Centre Culturelle Pierre Lapointe, Ronald Sutherland on Scottish bagpipes, Irish folk music by Pendragon, Janice Graham playing ragtime piano, old-time fiddling by Gerry Haseltine and Les Beaulieu and a fashion show of yesteryear. It all starts at 2 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 16.

Theatre/Dance

After performances in Mégantic, Granby, Magog and Sutton, Michel Garneau's play Les Célébrations has opened in Sherbrooke. In this Théâtre du Sang Neuf production, Louise Dussault and Yves Labbé play a couple whom we see in various tableaux taken from everyday life. Each of these tableaux tells a story in itself, dealing with themes that touch everyone: love, death, life, jealousy, liberty, etc. Described by the Tribune's critic Pierrette Roy as a realistic and yet humorous look at these themes, Les Célébrations also features the music of Michel Côté. The play opened Wednesday at Le Pigeonnier, and will be performed Wednesday through Saturday nights at 8:30 until Nov. 22. To reserve tickets, call (819) 564-2060.

The classical comedy Le malade imaginaire (The Imaginary Invalid) by Molière is still on at the Théâtre le Doyen at the Pavillon Jacques Cartier in Sherbrooke. This play is being presented for the 400th time (I kid you not) by the Union Théâtrale. The theatre company embarked upon its career with this production 40 years ago and has taken it on the road all over the province over the years. Le malade imaginaire is performed Thursday and Saturday nights at 8:30. To reserve tickets, call (819) 569-2727.

The rest of the happenings in the Townships theatre and dance world are in the coming soon category.

Next Friday, Nov. 14, for example, the globe-trotting dance company Les Ballets Jazz de Montreal is coming to the Massey-Vanier High School Auditorium in Cowansville. The company of 16 dancers will perform their new ballet Libertango, which premiered in Paris, as well as five other current dances from their extensive repertoire, in a show beginning at 8 p.m. Tickets are $12 each and may be obtained through any Massey-Vanier student, or at the following locations: Sports Experts in Granby, Pharmacie Meunier or the Treasure Chest in Cowansville, the Christmas Shop in Knowlton, Tabagie Farnham, Voyages Bacchus in Bedford, the Blue Armoire in Dunham, Club Frélix in Frelighsburg and the Book Nook in Sutton. Proceeds from the event are going to Massey-Vanier High School.

The Bishop's University drama department is gearing up for a busy year ahead, starting with an intriguing presentation by third year drama students next Thursday and Saturday at Centennial Theatre. Merlin, a work-in-progress blending theatre, puppets and movement, is based on a concept by Tim Gosley, and the script is the work of Gosley and Rob Mills, both of whom work for Jim Henson's Muppets on Fraggle Rock and with the new Canadian Sesame Street characters. The story centres on an ancient tribe of pagan Britons who use puppet/masks to weave a magical version of the Arthurian legends. Brigitte Bourbeau of the Danny Grossman Dance Company has been working with the students and will also be guest performer. Greg Tuck is artistic director. Tickets for Merlin are $3 for adults and $2 for students and may be reserved by calling the box office at (819) 563-4966. Performances are at 8:30 p.m. You can get more insight into this production and the people behind it by reading Melanie's Gruer's story on page 3.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 14 to 16, the Bishop's University drama department will present a condensed version of the classic early 20th century play The Cherry Orchard, by Anton Chekhov. Set in the Russian countryside, the play tells the story of the fading aristocracy and the rising bourgeoisie. Presented by 2nd and 3rd year acting students, the play also benefits from the input of Herbert Whittaker, critic emeritus of the Globe and Mail, who has directed and designed amateur and professional production for over 50 years and has directed The Cherry Orchard in both Montreal and Toronto. Anna Cameron, who did some of her first professional work in Knowlton at the Brae Manor and has worked on stage and TV in Canada, the U.S. and England for 30 years will be involved in the production as well, playing Mme. Ranyevskaya for the Sunday evening performance. Friday, Nov. 14 and Sunday, Nov. 16 the performance is at 8:30 p.m. and Saturday it's a matinee at 1 p.m. Tickets, at $2 for students and $3 for everyone else, can be reserved by calling the box office: (819) 563-4966.

Movies

Upon finally seeing The Decline of the American Empire this week, I was more than a little disappointed. After all the acclaim, it turned out, in my mind, to be little more than "a movie that's all talk about sex" as one reviewer bluntly put it. I must admit it was wonderfully acted and stunningly photographed (great shots of Lake Memphremagog, for example), but even in this day and age a movie needs a plot, and this director seems to have set himself above this most basic of requirements. It's a movie about how society is deteriorating through the increasingly heedless pursuit of personal pleasure (I think), and it gets this point across by presenting a pretty decadent group of men and women, on the assumption that they're representative of society as a whole. Although initially disturbing, it eventually becomes clear that the writer had nothing more profound in mind here than the already worn-out tactic of shocking the audience with explicitness and candor on sexual matters. My colleagues, Melanie Gruer and Eleanor Brown, had quite a different reaction, however, more in line with what most of the critics are saying, so I guess you've got to see it yourself to decide. Le Déclin de l'Empire American plays at the Cinéma Capitol in Sherbrooke at 7 and 9 nightly. The versions with English subtitles are showing only Wednesday and Thursday at 9.

I've heard mixed reports on Children of a Lesser God, now playing at the Cinemas Unis at the Carrefour de l'Estrie. It's the story of a teacher (William Hurt) who uses some unorthodox methods to teach kids at a deaf school. It's also a love story between him and a janitor at the school (played by Hurt's real-life girlfriend, who happens to be deaf). One account I've heard has it that it's a wonderful movie, while another says it starts out as an interesting story about the courage and daring of a concerned teacher, but then disintegrates into a predictable sickly-sweet love story. To judge for yourself you can watch the movie at 6:45 or 9:15 nightly at the Carrefour, or Sunday at 1:15, 3:45, 6:45 or 9:15.

In Cowansville this week you can get your fill of Oriental combative arts with a $3 double feature special, The Karate Kid and The Karate Kid II, showing at 6:45 and 9:15 nightly. This ongoing tale starts when a peace-loving karate master (Pat Morita) teaches a scrawny kid (Ralph Macchio) to defend himself from bullies. The second part takes them to the master's homeland, Okinawa, where each has to fight for the love of a fair lady.

At the Merrill's Showplace Cinemas in Newport, Vt., The Color of Money shows nightly at 7 and 9:15 and Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m. as well. This is about a legendary pool player (Paul Newman) and his challenger, a hot-headed young upstart (Tom Cruise). Time Magazine's critic Richard Schickel seemed to like it, saying the two characters are caught up in "a situation that is rich in melodrama and comic misunderstanding."

Also at Merrill's is Jumping Jack Flash, showing nightly at 7:10 and 9:20 and Saturday and Sunday at 2:05 and something called Trick or Treat showing at 7:15 and 9:25 nightly and Saturday and Sunday at 2:10.

Television

There's a long list of guests scheduled to appear on the community affairs program Townships Magazine next week. To begin with, there's the Mestrys, a brother and sister singing act who will be appearing in a benefit variety concert in Lennoxville next week. Then there's Chef Serge Morin, who will cook up something for the occasion. Paul Camirand from Communication-Quebec will be back, and two people involved in the Bishop's University drama department production of The Cherry Orchard will be on hand to talk about and perform a scene from the upcoming play. Townships Magazine, of course, is seen on Cable 11 in Sherbrooke Tuesday at 9 p.m., Wednesday at 11 p.m. and Friday at 8 p.m. Magog residents can also see the show Tuesday and Thursday at 7 p.m.

PCs gained 650 votes in Montreal and lost a province

Is there no end to this madness! Sink Stevens, the man who doesn't talk to his wife, is not only being investigated for breaching the government's rules on conflict of interest, but you and I are paying for it!

That's right. Brian the Bold and his cabinet cronies have decided that poor old Stink should get public help to pay his legal fees to the tune of $350,000. That's like saying the Hell's Angels should get a subsidy for the purchase of camping equipment. If the poor man can't afford to pay for counsel — and God knows his business interests aren't doing too well lately, just ask his wife — then let the court appoint a lawyer to represent him like any other 'disadvantaged' Canadian.

Speaking of our enlightened government, what ever hapned to that good old Tory idea of awarding contracts on the basis of sound business principles. Winnipeg, which is feeling this week like the sailor who bent over to pick up his soap in the shower, did everything right recently in presenting a bid for the CF-18 maintenance contract and still came up empty-handed. The contract, the jobs and the money all went to Montreal's Canadair despite the fact that the lowest bid came from west of Wawa. I suppose the only surprising thing is that a consortium from Manicouagan didn't get the job. It appears that PCs have gained 650 votes in Montreal and lost a province in the process.

Obviously the Chinese have taken Prince Phillip's recent comments about "slanty eyes" to heart. According to a recent article out of Peking, operations to give Chinese women rounder eyes, thinner noses and bigger chests are becoming increasingly popular. One doctor says he alone has performed 10,000 eye operations since they became legal in 1981. Maybe the palace could loosen Phil's chain on his other forays around the world. Just think what he could do with frizzy hair, broad lips, big feet and that quintessential North American trade mark the beer gut. I won't even go into what he could do for Princess Anne.

When will people realize that toys don't make the tot. A local couple have started a campaign to ban violent toys and although I agree that the plethora of Rambo dolls is enough to make anyone wish Sylvester Stallone had taken up rug-hooking, I am not so sure children are quite as stupid as most of us would like to believe. I myself, a model of civility, played with toy soldiers throughout my childhood yet strangely enough didn't grow up with a fondness for guns, violence or war. As far as that goes, I also love John Wayne movies and I have never yet shot an Indian.

For those of you out there who are truly against obscenity and violence, I have personally asked The Record staff not to take any pictures of nude football fans this weekend in Ottawa. Although, anyone out there crazy enough to take their clothes off in November might be of interest to our readers as an endangered species.

Finally, I would like to offer my congratulations to Sherbrooke mayor, Jean Paul Pelletier who proved that doing nothing can be popular. Who cares if we have the worst roads in Quebec? Why bother following the Police Commission's recommendations? And above all, avoid those expensive elections.

Montego Bay, Jamaica:

More than an escape to the sun

A couple of weeks ago Record reporter Laurel Sherrer had the good fortune of being offered a week-long trip to Jamaica, all expenses paid by the Jamaica Tourist Board. Representatives of the tourist board took a group of reporters on a guided tour of many of the attractions of the northern coast of the island, from Montego Bay to Ocho Rios. This is the first in a series of articles on Jamaica to appear in the Record over the coming weeks.

By Laurel Sherrer

MONTEGO BAY, Jamaica — You could spend the whole week on the beach.

The powder-fine white sand, clear blue-green water and temperatures hovering around the 34 degrees Celsius mark make the thought of stirring from the beach or poolside less than attractive.

Judging by the sunburnt bodies lounging around the hotels, many tourists slip into the easy-going, slow pace of the island and never exert themselves to range far beyond the gates of their hotels.

And that's a shame, because there's much more to Jamaica than the sun, the sand and the sea.

Our group visited Jamaica during the slow season. It was October, a time when North Americans are neither in the summer vacation nor the winter escape mode. It was also supposed to be the rainy season, but we saw it rain only three times; refreshing half-hour showers that only served to make the lush vegetation brigher when the sun came back shortly after.

We landed in Montego Bay, the second largest city on the island with a population of 43,521. Facing north across the Spanish Main toward Cuba, this crowded city is a typical tourist trap, with dozens of hotels lining the seashores and all the stores and marketplaces geared to making money off spend-thrift travellers.

ENGAGING WAYS

The omnipresence of fellow tourists tends to make you suspect at times that everything from the engaging ways of the straw market vendors to the spectacular sunsets is orchestrated for their benefit.

It's picturesque, of course. The roads are narrow and winding, even in town, lined by trees that look like overgrown versions of our tropical houseplants, often in full, vivid bloom. The buildings, other than the posh hotels, are generally made of cement, often crumbling. There are no neon signs, just painted wooden ones.

Makeshift craft shops and booths are to be found on every corner. Visit the straw market and you can get lost for hours wandering amid the booths of wood carvings, clothing, jewellery and of course, straw articles, as eager vendors crowd around, vying with each other to make a sale.

Residents of Montego Bay may very well structure their lives around the tourist trade, putting on a bit of an act for the visitors' benefit, but it has its authentic features as well.

AMONG RUINS

Just outside the Jamaica Tourist Board offices, for example, you can tiptoe among the ruins of the oldest Jewish cemetery in the western world. In the middle of town you can see a monument dedicated to the memory of Sam Sharpe, a Baptist preacher who led a slave rebellion in 1831.

Venture into the side streets and you'll find a somewhat sobering view of the lives of many Jamaicans: 10-foot square shacks of plywood and tin with no plumbing, no running water. One particularly striking sight is the view from Richmond Hill, a hotel placed high above the town, overlooking the bay. From one side there's a spectacular view over the hotels and beaches and the sea, while around back, across a valley, is Canterbury, the city's largest ghetto — a hillside packed with wood and tin shacks.

The main allure of Montego Bay is its easy access to a wide variety of attractions in the surrounding countryside such as several plantation and great house tours, the Jamaica Safari Village, rafting excursions and more, all within a few hours of the city.

Next week: we visit two great houses and hear their lore and legend.

RECORD/LAUREL SHERRER
