Baseball rep views of strike state differ

NEW YORK (Reuter) — A strike that everyone said they didn't want was the major event on today's major league baseball schedule, and many fans were up in arms.

Major league baseball players, who earn an average of $360,000 U.S. a year, went on strike over salaries and pensions.

Lee MacPhail, the owners' labor representative, expressed optimism after a bargaining session ended early today. "I feel we are ironing things out, but it is far from done," he said.

The two sides will resume negotiations this morning.

During a break in the bargaining late Tuesday, Donald Fehr, head of the Major League Players Association, told reporters the two sides were not close to an agreement. He said the major issue was salary arbitration.

The strike was the second in the last four seasons, and it infuriated fans who accused both players and team owners of greed.

"We're getting slapped in the face," said Eric Yaverbaum, head of a Washington group called Strike Back, which is seeking a boycott of the sport when it returns. "We need revenge."

The strike came as most of the 26 major league teams had completed 105 of their 162-games scheduled in the season, which runs from early April until the final playoffs in early October.

Two games were cancelled in Canada on Tuesday — the American League's Blue Jays vs Baltimore Orioles in Toronto and in Montreal the National League's Expos vs New York Mets.

A strike over money in 1981 interrupted the season for 50 days.

It has been estimated that the players will lose an average of $2,500 for each unplayed game. Unlike 1981, the team owners no longer have strike insurance.

Bourassa makes meek integrity call in PQ race

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Liberal Leader Robert Bourassa has called on the four ministerial candidates running for the leadership of the Parti Québécois to not use their personal staff and government services in their campaigns.

Bourassa said Tuesday that the political staff members of ministers Pierre Marc Johnson, Jean Garon, Bernard Landry and Pauline Marois should resign.

As well, he said, the ministers should stop using their limousines and government telephones lines in the contest.

"One must not use public funds for personal political ambition," Bourassa said in an interview. "It's a fundamental principle of political morals."

Guy Bertrand, a Quebec City lawyer who is also running for the leadership, has called on the provincial auditor-general to investigate the spending of the four ministers.

Bourassa declined to say which of the candidates he would like to campaign against in a Quebec election, expected this fall.

No water forcing Shermag out of Ascot Township?

SHERBROOKE (CB) — Shermag may move elsewhere rather than rebuild its Lennoxville truck-body factory in Ascot Township, where the lack of a municipal water supply has driven the company's insurance rates from $35,000 to over $200,000 in one year.

The fiberglass-moulding shop, located on Route 108 east of Lennoxville, was destroyed Monday night in a fire which caused over $500,000 in damage. Firemen on the scene said hydrants wouldn't have helped save the plant, but a convoy of borrowed bulk-milk transport trucks shuttled back and forth for several hours between the fire and nearby Alexander Galt Regional High School, bringing hundreds of thousands of gallons of water to the scene.

Serge Racine is president of the Shermag furniture company, which owns Lennoxville and also operates a large woodworking plant (currently idled by a strike) on the same 26-acre Ascot Township site.

BETTER-SERVED SITE?

Racine said Tuesday the water supply question may cause the company to look for a better-served site for both the 42-worker truck shop and the 150-employee furniture plant.

The Lennoxville fire was caused by an explosion in a faulty production machine. Racine said it is almost certain to be rebuilt, but it will take time to replace the custom-built fiberglass production moulds and other specialized machinery destroyed in the chemical-driven blaze.

Truck bodies are a profitable sideline for Shermag, which is Quebec's biggest producer of household furniture, with Quebec plants in Lennoxville, Scotstown, Disraeli and Thurso, and Athol, Mass. Racine said the company will spend at least a week examining its options for rebuilding — including the possibility of abandoning the Ascot Township location altogether.

WELLS NOT ENOUGH

Although company officials have long complained to Ascot authorities about the water shortage, there are no signs that the township will do anything to alleviate the problem. Shermag has dug wells to supply its own water, but they can't provide sufficient volume to supply either a fire-control sprinkler system or hydrants for firemen.

"We will ask council (again) to bring municipal water up to the plants, where we employ over 150 people," Racine said. "There is lots of room for expansion there, but it would all be compromised by the water problem."

Racine said Shermag's insurance premiums soared from $35,000 to over $200,000 in a single year. Following the fire, he added, the company is wondering if any insurance company will take the risk.

Angels' court battle continues

As usual, a heavy police guard surrounded the Joliette courthouse during the Hell's Angels' brief appearance Tuesday.

Hell's lawyers continue stalling tactics

By Gary Regenstreif

JOLIETTE (CP) — Legal efforts to hamstring an inquest into the deaths of Six Montreal-area members of the Hell's Angels continued Tuesday as lawyers for the motorcycle gang sought the dismissal of the second coroner appointed to handle the case.

Lawyers Jacques Bouchard and Léon-René Maranda told Quebec Superior Court that Sessions Court Judge Jean-B. Falardeau cannot act as coroner at the inquest into the slayings last March because Quebec law forbids full-time Sessions Court judges from holding a second job.

"A judge cannot depart from his magisterial duties," Bouchard told Mr. Justice Jean Crepeau, who heard three hours of legal fine points over a defence request to have Falardeau ousted as coroner.

Crepeau said he would decide today whether to keep Falardeau as coroner.

The 10 bikers being held as material witnesses in the six deaths appeared briefly behind a clear plastic shield in the courtroom, handcuffed by the wrist and ankles.

They were guarded by a half-dozen Quebec Police Force officers. The courthouse itself has been surrounded by tight security since proceedings in the case began several weeks ago. As usual, dozens of heavily armed members of the QPF tactical squad formed a security perimeter outside.

Falardeau told the bikers to return for the inquest this afternoon if Crepeau upholds his appointment as coroner. He also extended the warrants for the bikers by a day.

Maranda argued that Falardeau had revealed a bias against the bikers when he ordered them to appear before the court before he had convened the inquest.

Maranda plans to present the court with a written report on why his clients are being unlawfully detained. Crepeau said those arguments wouldn't be heard until next Tuesday.

Tutu calls for end to violence

JOHANNESBURG (CP) — Black Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu, who defied a government ban to address mourners at the funeral of South African unrest victims, says he is ready to go to jail for preaching the gospel.

But onlookers at a funeral in Daveyton township near Johannesburg said Tutu played a vital role Tuesday in preventing violence between mourners and large security forces.

The bishop of Johannesburg and Nobel Peace Prize winner pleaded with the white minority government to lift restrictions on the way blacks could bury their dead.

"Please, I don't want to go to jail," he appealed to the authorities in his address. "But if I am to go to jail for preaching the gospel, then so be it."

The purple-robed bishop urged angry mourners to avoid violence against the government forces. "Let us comport ourselves with the discipline of those who know they will be free," he said.

Tutu told Reuters news agency: "These (township) children scare me. They have a recklessness that is incredible. Most of them think they are going to die. Not that they have a death wish, but they think if this is the way we are going to get freedom then so be it."

A black was killed Tuesday near the port of Durban when a policeman fired on rioters who had set fire to his home and car.

At the remote farming town of Brandfort, police hurled tear gas grenades into the home of Winnie Mandela, wife of jailed black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela.

Police said they arrested 30 people there who had attacked them with a gasoline bomb and rocks in Mrs. Mandela's absence.

Mrs. Mandela was banished to Brandfort, 426 kilometres south of Johannesburg, more than eight years ago for her opposition to the government.

Today, the state-controlled radio praised U.S. President Ronald Reagan's comment that the 17-day-old state of emergency imposed by authorities may reflect a need to reduce racial violence.

More than 500 blacks and two whites have been slain in almost a year of violence against apartheid, South Africa's system of racial segregation under which five million whites rule 24 million blacks.

Police say 1,436 people have been arrested without charge since a state of emergency was decreed in 36 cities and towns July 21 in an effort to quell the violence. Police say 255 of those detained have been released.

Shadows of The Bomb

By The Canadian Press

Thousands of ghostly white shadows, their arms and legs flung outward as if in despair or their hands clasped in a parody of prayer, covered city sidewalks across Canada on Tuesday, grim memorials to those killed in the atomic blast that levelled Hiroshima 40 years ago.

The images, sponged with white paint by an army of artists in the pre-dawn hours, were part of a worldwide paint-in that heralded a day of rallies and demonstrations to protest the dropping of the nuclear bomb on the Japanese city on Aug. 6, 1945.

Dubbed Little Boy, the bomb killed up to 140,000 people and left thousands of others crippled and poisoned with radiation. About 10,000 people and countless animals were instantly vaporized and left as atomic shadows — black silhouettes ringed by white halos that were etched on the sidewalks, steps and walls of buildings of Hiroshima.

A second bomb — nicknamed Fat Man — was dropped on Nagasaki three days later and killed up to 70,000.

About 35 Canadian cities and towns coast to coast joined about 300 other municipalities — including Hiroshima and Nagasaki — in 20 countries in the international shadow project.

In Montreal, where artists scattered about 600 white symbols throughout the city, police were less than sympathetic to their message and arrested 92 people for defacing public property. In Regina, three women were charged with wilful damage in connection with the shadow-printing program in that city.

About 1,000 volunteers using calcium carbonate and water transformed downtown Toronto sidewalks into a war zone of about 25,000 chalky outstretched forms representing children, adults, cats, dogs and even bicycles.

Although the city issues a permit allowing participants to paint spectres on sidewalks, where they can remain until Aug. 20, five shadows sketched in front of Toronto city hall were quickly scrubbed away by municipal workers.

Meanwhile, two men were charged with mischief after a demonstration at the suburban Toronto plant of Litton Industries Ltd., which makes the guidance system for the U.S. cruise missile.

In Winnipeg, about 50 artists brushed the life-sized human outlines on pavement with water-soluble paint after receiving permission from the city works committee.

"It's my hope — indeed, expectation — that people seeing these shadows will take action to avert our collective disintegration," said Martin Zeilig, spokesman for the Winnipeg Co-ordinating Committee for Disarmament.

The shadow-painting concept was developed three years ago by New York artist Alan Gussow, director of this year's international paint-in, when he saw a photograph of a human shadow left on the steps of a Hiroshima bank.

More than 150 Vancouver artists also got in on the act, spreading a whitewash made of water, whitening and powdered milk to form close to 2,000 human impressions on the city's walkways.

Censorship strike stops BBC news for 24 hours

LONDON (AP) — An estimated 120 million listeners around the world tuned in to their favorite BBC radio or television news program today, only to hear music interspersed with a recorded notice of a 24-hour journalists' strike.

It was the first time in its 53-year-old history that the BBC's World Services had been silenced.

"We are sorry that we are not able to bring you our usual programs," the BBC began announcing at midnight Tuesday night. "This is because many members of staff in the external services and throughout the BBC are striking for 24 hours."

Journalists at the BBC and many of Britain's other TV and radio networks went on strike to protest alleged government interference in the BBC's editorial independence. Newspapers and news agencies were not taking part in the strike. On July 30, BBC governors cancelled a TV program on political extremism in strife-torn Northern Ireland following a request by Home Secretary Leon Brittan for it not to be screened.

After a 4½-hour meeting Tuesday, the 12 government-appointed governors issued a statement reaffirming their decision to cancel the program, but denied having bowed to government pressure.

Nevertheless, they asked for an urgent meeting with Brittan to discuss "these serious matters relating to the total unacceptability of censorship."

That meeting was set for today.

PROTESTS DECISION
 BBC's World Service, in announcing the blackout, said: "As you may have heard earlier this week, this action is in protest against the decision by the BBC Board of Governors to withdraw a television documentary about extremism in Northern Ireland following a request from the British Home Secretary.

"Our normal programs will resume with our transmission at 2300 hours Greenwich Mean Time (9 p.m. EDT) on Wednesday."

The blackout covered the English-language World Service and BBC broadcasts in 36 other languages ranging from Arabic to Vietnamese. The BBC says that together they are heard by a world audience of 120 million people, including 14.5 million in the Soviet Union.

The Soviet government is among those who jam BBC frequencies in a bid to blot out world service reception.

The BBC is financed by licence fees paid by TV viewers, apart from external services, which are funded by the government.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Brittan had urged the BBC to suppress the documentary because it included an interview with Martin McGuinness, an alleged leader of the Irish Republican Army, which makes him a terrorist by official definition.

Opposition politicians and civil libertarians said the affair damaged the credibility of the BBC as an independent news source and gave the outlawed IRA far more publicity than if the documentary had been shown without argument.

Protestants outnumber Roman Catholics 2-1 in Northern Ireland. The IRA is fighting to drive the British from Ulster and unite it with the Irish republic under a socialist government.

About 2,500 people have been killed in Northern Ireland in 16 years of sectarian violence.

Hydro won't foot caribou clean-up tab: We are not responsible

By Dennis Bueckert

MONTREAL (CP) — Hydro-Quebec has stopped all runoff from a northern reservoir into a river where 9,600 caribou drowned last fall, despite a subsidiary company's rejection of responsibility for the disaster.

Hydro spokesman Marie-Anne Robady said Tuesday the publicly-owned utility has stopped all runoff from the Caniapiscou Reservoir until Oct. 31 as recommended in a study of the drownings by SAGMAI, the provincial office responsible for native affairs. SAGMAI concluded in its report in June that the main cause of the drownings was the decision to release huge amounts of water from the reservoir into the Caniapiscou River about 450 kilometres upstream from where the animals died.

The report said responsibility for the disaster belonged to the James Bay Energy Corporation and recommended that the corporation, a Hydro-Quebec subsidiary, repay the Quebec government for the $760,000 spent cleaning up the caribou carcasses. "We reject a certain number of conclusions in the SAGMAI report as being false," said Jean-Paul Fontaine, public relations manager for the James Bay Energy Corp.

REJECTS CHARGE
The corporation was responsible for the James Bay hydroelectric project during the construction phase, but since last year the Caniapiscou Reservoir has been completed and turned over to its parent company, Hydro-Quebec. "Since we don't believe we are responsible, we don't think we are responsible for cleanup costs," said Fontaine, who predicted future drownings because of the size of the caribou herd.

"If we don't do something, we can expect other catastrophes," said Fontaine.

The 300,000-strong George River herd has grown so rapidly in recent years it is being forced to cover more territory and take increasingly dangerous migration routes such as Limestone Falls where the caribou died attempting to cross the river.

Even without runoff from the reservoir, the natural flow of the river makes it "completely possible there will be another accident just as big or even bigger than last year," he said.

"If you study the topography of the site (at Limestone Falls) you will see it is very dangerous for caribou, even with no runoff from the dam," said Fontaine.

TIME RELEASES
The SAGMAI report recommended that no extra water be spilled from the reservoir between Aug. 1 and Oct. 31, the period when the caribou migrate. Fontaine said that before the accident last September, the corporation was releasing water from the reservoir at 1,400 cubic metres per second. He said this was still less than if there was no dam.

He said last fall's release of water was a one-time operation involving the start-up of the generating system. Releases would be required about once every 10 years, said Fontaine.

Future releases will take place in early summer, not during the caribou migration season, he said.

Teenager saves child from jaws of cougar

SOOKE, B.C. (CP) — A teenage camp counsellor who rescued a 10-year-old girl from a cougar's jaws by hitting it with a log said Tuesday she felt an "unreal calm" at the time.

It was only afterwards that the counsellor felt dizzy from the encounter with the 85-pound cougar, which attacked Alyson Parker, 10, Saturday at a camp run by the YM-YWCA near Sooke, about 40 kilometres west of Victoria.

"It was an unreal calm; I couldn't believe I was so calm," said Lively, 19, a University of Victoria student in charge of seven children at a Camp Thunderbird outing.

The group was preparing lunch at an outlook called Crow's Nest when the children suddenly started squealing and running, she said.

"Wild cat!" one of them screamed.

"I ran down and there was a cougar mauling Alyson," Lively said. The animal was holding the girl by the head with its mouth and paws, she said.

"I yelled and it sort of backed up a bit but it still stayed there. So I looked around and I somehow found a quarter of a log and I hit it on the head and it backed up."

HIT COUGAR TWICE
The cougar stared at Lively, as if warning her to stay away from its prey and then attacked Alyson again.

"I guess I broke a big piece of a tree off and I hit it again, and it really took off," she said.

Lively, of Fruitvale, B.C., said her own safety never crossed her mind as she approached the cougar. "I guess a part of you wants to say 'get out' but you don't check your step. You just go. I never even thought about it."

With the cat gone, Lively started first aid on Alyson, putting her own T-shirt on the wounds to stop the bleeding. The counsellor also started shouting for help.

"The kids must have thought I lost my mind because I took off my shirt, so I was running around in my bra, had a big stick and all this blood running down my legs and screaming, running up the hill," she recalled with a chuckle.

Alyson was in good condition but will have to stay at least several more days at Victoria General Hospital, a spokesman said.

Delta flight recorders studied by investigators

GRAPEVINE, Tex. (AP) — Investigators examined recordings and wreckage Tuesday from Delta Air Lines Flight 191 as Dallas-area funeral-home owners squabbled over division of the corpses from the crash that killed 133 people.

The Lockheed L-1011 wide-bodied plane hit short of a Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport runway Friday evening, bounced off the ground and smashed a car on a highway before it clipped two water-storage tanks and exploded. The crash killed 132 people aboard the plane and the driver of the car.

Dr. Charles Petty, Dallas county chief medical examiner, said the victims all died of trauma or burns and would not have survived "if they crashed right next to a hospital."

Investigators said that, according to the cockpit voice recorder, the crew of the ill-fated jet gave no indication anything was wrong. And while the machine picked up the sound of the control tower's radioed order to abort the landing, it came after the start of sounds of the jet disintegrating.

A group of about 20 business owners charged racism and favoritism in the distribution of bodies to area funeral homes.

"We're not demanding anything. We just want our share," said Nat Clark, a Dallas funeral home owner. "It's greed on the part of a few owners, flat greed."

The group says the president of a mostly white funeral home association deliberately left them off a list of seven homes authorized to prepare and transport the bodies of crash victims. The homes on the list will charge Delta $390 for each body.

Challenger back on the ground safe and sound

SPACE CENTRE, Houston (AP) — Challenger's astronauts, safe on the ground after a successful eight-day mission, said a heart-stopping engine shutdown in the first minutes after launch "held our attention," but they're glad it happened when it did.

"I felt very lucky we didn't just get a quick trip to Spain," space shuttle pilot Roy Bridges said Tuesday night after the crew returned to Houston from Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., where Challenger completed its 5.3 million-kilometre voyage.

The seven astronauts knew immediately when one of the shuttle's main engines shut down just mi-minutes after the July 29 launch, said mission commander Gordon Fullerton.

The emergency "held our attention," he said. "Most of it was just trying to figure out what to do. We were glad it happened when it happened. There was no doubt then that we'd make it to orbit."

The shuttle could have been forced to land in Europe or the ocean if a second main engine shut down as it had threatened. Instead, the crew was told to override a computer-controlled sensor. The crew also burned fuel to lighten the space plane and fired the remaining engines an extra 86 seconds to ensure that it reached orbit.

Police force lifts ban on beards

MONTREAL (CP) — Whiskers are welcome on the Montreal police force.

Chief Roland Bourget has lifted his department's long-standing ban on beards — and several officers have already taken advantage of it.

"Put it down to evolution — different times, different mores," Bourget said Tuesday.

The new policy, in effect since July 10 for a one-year trial, includes restrictions. Beards may be no longer than two centimetres, and an officer's cheeks and neck must be clean-shaven. Officers will have to grow their beards during their holidays.

Reporter tests bathing suit ban

MONTREAL (CP) — A newspaper sent a reporter wearing only a bathing suit into a park in suburban Outremont Tuesday, but officials refused to enforce a newly-imposed ban on bathing suits.

"My bosses told me not to do anything," a park attendant told the reporter from The Gazette who was accompanied by a small group of scantily-clad strollers. "They said it was staged, a trap."

But he said that under normal circumstances he would give a warning before calling police.

Bus driver thought he was dead

MONTREAL (CP) — A bus driver testified Tuesday he thought he had been killed after a hunting rifle was fired a few inches from his head during a struggle with a passenger.

"I couldn't see anything or hear anything," said Jean Deslauriers, driver for the Montreal South Shore Transit Commission. "I rely believed I was dead."

Deslauriers testified that a passenger carrying a long bag boarded the bus at a subway station on July 27. Later, a man ran to the front of the vehicle and jammed the barrel of a rifle into his neck.

Insult may cause resignation

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Superior Court Justice Kenneth Mackay said Tuesday he will resign from the Canadian-South African Society because its president called Prime Minister Brian Mulroney a "pipsqueak."

Mackay, who said he has a great deal of respect for Mulroney, said he is appalled by South Africa's policy of apartheid and he understood the society to be interested in promoting dialogue between South Africa and the rest of the world.

He said he did not feel he was in a conflict of interest as a judge because the society had nothing to do with Canadian politics.

Boy loses arm after wolf attack

TORONTO (CP) — A six-year-old boy mauled by Arctic wolves Tuesday after entering a restricted area of the Metropolitan Toronto Zoo had his right arm amputated later during emergency surgery.

Scott Connor of suburban Scarborough was conscious and in serious condition after surgeons at Centenary Hospital removed his mangled right arm.

His eight-year-old brother Adam also underwent surgery and was in fair condition with cuts to his right arm and face after he tried to pull a pack of wolves off Scott.

Lougheed an issue in appeal

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed's successful fight against a subpoena ordering him to testify at Jim Keegstra's trial will be part of the former Eckville, Alta., teacher's appeal, says Keegstra's lawyer Doug Christie.

On Tuesday, Christie said he will argue the court was wrong to set aside Lougheed's subpoena to attend the trial.

Christie said he will also challenge the judge's ruling that freedom of speech was not an issue at the trial.

A number of tactics used by the Crown in the course of the trial will also be cited in the appeal, Christie said.

Province gives French ruling

REGINA (CP) — A court of Queen's Bench justice refused Tuesday to grant a Baie-Comeau, Que., man bail in Saskatchewan's first ruling written in French.

Mr. Justice S.J. Walker refused to grant bail to Michel Tremblay, charged with robbing a Regina stationery store, pending his trial this fall.

From the page-one mention of La Cour du Banc de la Reine (the Court of Queen's Bench) to a closing reference to l'article 457 of the Criminal Code, the judgment contains only a word or two of English.

Bomb joke costs Quebecer $268

LONDON (AP) — A 20-year-old Canadian was fined $268 Tuesday for joking to airport officials that he had a bomb in his luggage.

Real Champagne of Pointe-aux-Trebles, Que., told a magistrate's court his remark to customs officers at London's Heathrow Airport was a horrible joke.

But the joke was taken seriously, and the Montreal-bound plane's baggage was searched before takeoff while Champagne was arrested.

U.S. praises Soviet offer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An offer by the Soviet Union to open two nuclear power reactors to international inspection would still keep sensitive facilities off-limits, but is drawing Reagan administration praise anyway.

"Certainly, we are very pleased," a State Department spokesman said Tuesday in response to the Soviet move to open two civilian nuclear facilities to inspectors from the International Atomic Energy Agency.

With final details still to be worked out, U.S. officials said it was clear Moscow would not permit monitors at facilities used for enriching or reprocessing nuclear material.

Former reporter jailed for fraud

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Wall Street Journal reporter Foster Winans was sentenced to 18 months in prison and five years' probation Tuesday for using his position at the paper to make quick profits in the stock market.

U.S. District Judge Charles Stewart found Winans guilty of conspiracy, securities fraud and wire and mail fraud in June after a lengthy non-jury trial.

Winans was one of the writers of a column that offers stock tips to investors, and which many analysts believe has an effect on the price of stocks.

Prosecutors charged that Winans tried to capitalize on those price moves by tipping a top broker about the contents of forthcoming columns, so the broker could take advantage of the price changes those columns could be expected to produce.

Drowning victim found

ESSEX, N.Y. (AP) — The body of one of two Canadian men presumed drowned in a Lake Champlain boating accident last week was recovered Tuesday near this Essex County village, state police said.

The body of Pierre Petit, 28, of Longueuil, Que., was found by divers in about 14 metres of water. Troopers at Westport said divers were continuing to search for Petit's companion, 36-year-old Michelle Paul of Montreal.

Both men were last seen alive last Tuesday in a rubber life raft not far from their sailboat, which was anchored near the Essex Marina.

Comet dimmer than expected

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Astronomers have sighted Halley's comet again, three months after it disappeared behind the sun, and it isn't as bright as expected, scientists said Tuesday.

"It has been picked up following its conjunction with the sun," said astronomer Daniel Green of the Smithsonian Astronomical Observatory's Minor Planet Centre. "We've got photographs from two professionals and one amateur (astronomer) we can verify."

The comet, basically a dirty snowball of dust and ice that orbits the sun every 74 to 79 years, was first observed on its current journey in October 1982.

Man survives eight days in woods

WENDELL, Mass. (AP) — A 79-year-old man with a heart condition survived eight days lost in the woods on 225 grams of saltwater taffy and creek water.

Arthur Harrington, a retired maritime engineer who suffers from hardening of the arteries and underwent quadruple bypass heart surgery last November, was found Monday by two loggers near a reservoir in New Salem. They took him to a niece's home.

Harrington endured heavy rain and chilly nights without medication for his heart condition.

Afghan soldiers tortured, killed

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Rebels tortured 264 captured Afghan government soldiers, then killed them and many villagers before fleeing over the border into Pakistan, a Soviet television report says.

Unusually detailed film lasting 20 minutes Tuesday showed dismembered bodies lying in a ruined village about 70 kilometres from Afghanistan's border with Pakistan.

Reporter Mikhail Leshchinsky said the captives were held in cramped underground prisons where they were tortured with what he described as medieval instruments.

Caribbean leader Burnham dies

GEORGETOWN (Reuters) — Forbes Burnham, the longest-serving and reputedly toughest political leader in the English-speaking Caribbean, died Tuesday following a throat operation. He was 62.

As Socialist leader of the People's National Congress, he had served as Guyana's prime minister after independence from Britain in 1966 and became its president in 1980.

He was replaced by former prime minister Desmond Hoyte.

Hoyte said in a radio address Burnham was hospitalized last night for throat surgery but died at midmorning Tuesday. The new president said the world had been diminished by Burnham's death.

Bolivian president urges sacrifice

LA PAZ (AP) — Victor Paz Estenssoro assumed the Bolivian presidency for a fourth time Tuesday and urged "the sacrifice of all" to revive the poorest economy in South America.

Paz Estenssoro, 77, donned the red, green and yellow presidential sash for a four-year term, one day after his election by the 157-member legislature. He succeeded Hernan Siles Zuazo, a leftist who was forced by congressional opposition to leave office a year early.

Guerrillas ignore ceasefire call

KAMPALA (Reuters) — Pressure is mounting in Uganda for a conference to end bloody rebel wars in the south and northwest of the country, but the key guerrilla faction has yet to respond to calls for a ceasefire.

The Democratic party, which draws its political support from the Baganda heartland where the main rebels operate, called for a ceasefire and a conference Tuesday on ending the war, as well as ways of forming a new army.

The appeal was made to the rebels as well as to Lt.-Gen. Tito Okello, head of the ruling Military Council that seized power after a July 27 coup that toppled President Milton Obote.

South Pacific declared nuke-free

RAROTONGA, Cook Islands (AP) — Eight Pacific countries including Australia and New Zealand signed a treaty declaring the South Pacific a nuclear-free zone, and said they would ask the United States, France and Britain to abide by its terms.

The signing took place Tuesday in a ceremony that fell coincidentally on the 40th anniversary of the atomic bomb attack on Hiroshima, Japan, at the end of the Second World War.

Five other countries of the South Pacific Forum will sign the treaty after it goes through constitutional processes at home, said Prime Minister David Lange of New Zealand, a spokesman for the group.

Candidate Pauline Marois in Sherbrooke: Programs must be integrated to improve Quebecers' lives

By Laurel Sherrer

SHERBROOKE — An improved quality of life for Quebecers has to come through the integration of social and economic approaches, Parti-Québécois leadership hopeful Pauline Marois said Tuesday.

Marois, also Manpower Minister and the first woman to declare her candidacy for leadership of a major political party in Quebec, is in Sherbrooke for two days to meet with businessmen, workers and party supporters, as well as those who support her in her leadership bid.

An example of this kind of integration, she explained in a press conference, would be government incentives for job-sharing.

"There are people who don't want their whole life governed by their profession, but would like a guaranteed income," she said. "In many cases the family has two paycheques, and people would not mind giving up part of one paycheque for some leisure time."

Marois cited a recent study of public servants that showed about 30 per cent would be willing to share their job, even if it meant a cut in income.

"Some people want to do it," she said, "but in their business it's impossible." The problem is often in integrating the new worker into the job, in many cases a younger, less experienced person looking for a start in their profession.

SHARING COSTS

The government could help by sharing the costs of training new workers, Marois said.

Quebec has already instituted this kind of program on an experimental basis, she said.

For those who are ready to share their jobs, the cost of subsidizing new workers would be small, Marois added.

It has to be on a voluntary basis, however.

"I don't believe we'll get there by obliging people to take one route or another," Marois said. "This way they will be limited in their freedom of choice."

"I don't perceive it as a step where people will be obliged to do it, but it gives them the conditions in which they can do it," she said.

Full employment for the province has to remain a top priority, Marois said. "We can't accept and remain inactive in the face of the unemployment problem. We would all be winners if we could break this vicious circle we're in right now."

Marois refused to comment on the policies of her opponents in the leadership race, saying only that "naturally, some of the things my colleagues propose displease me," but "I have a lot of respect for them all."

Asked if the number of candidates in the leadership campaign meant a lack of solidarity in the party, Marois said "there exists at least a basic consensus" on the major issues.

As for her own campaign, Marois said "It's going well. We're in a very good second place."

PQ members vote for their new leader Sept. 29. If no candidate emerges with an overall majority after the first ballot, a run-off vote will be held a week later.

PQ leadership hopeful Pauline Marois says Quebecers should share their jobs to help fight unemployment.

Local péquistes curious at reception for first female leadership hopeful

SHERBROOKE — Over one hundred people gathered at the Centre Communautaire Ste-Jeanne d'Arc Tuesday night for a buffet followed by a speech by Parti-Québécois leadership candidate Pauline Marois.

It was clear she was preaching to the converted at this affair, although some challenges were brought up by the 10 to 12 people who got up to question or comment.

One man asked her position on the use of public funds for the leadership campaign, referring to accusations by Guy Bertrand, a Montreal Lawyer running against Marois, that the candidates who are cabinet members have an advantage over the others thanks to the resources at their disposal.

"SAME RULES"

"Each of the candidates has exactly the same rules to follow," she responded. "There is a fixed amount of money we can spend." However, she said, she still has the duties of minister to carry out and it's impossible at times to strictly separate campaign expenses and those related to her job.

During her two days in Sherbrooke, for example, along with her campaigning, she had some business to take care of for the Ministry of Manpower.

Besides this, she said, any advantage she may have is tempered by the fact that in political campaigns most of the work is done by volunteers. While she might save money by campaigning on a ministry-related trip, the non-ministerial candidates save by having volunteers drive them around.

The questions and comments at the dinner were largely related to employment and the economy, and the people attending seemed to like Marois' ideas.

"She seems to be a woman who is very solid, well-informed and experienced despite her age," said Jean-Guy Labreque, a Sherbrooke electrician who has been a member of the Parti-Québécois since 1980. "I believe she is a person capable of governing the province."

ADMIRABLE IDEAS

Renée Gilbert, a young mother and university student, said she attended the meeting because she was attracted by Marois' image, but now admires many of her ideas.

"I found it very important that she stressed that if people want change, they have to participate — they have to do something," she said. Marois' emphasis on consultation impressed her, she said.

Jean Civil, a Haitian native who teaches at the high school level, said he feels she will be a leader who will work "at the level of the people", and that being a woman, she will have a good understanding of the needs of the disadvantaged. "If she has a chance for power," he said, "she will remember women's experiences with discrimination and that there are minorities who have the same experience."

In an interview Marois said she was pleased with the turnout and the questions that were asked.

"You have to decode the questions," she said. "In the questions they give you their preoccupations." Meetings yesterday gave her a good idea of what's on the minds of people in the region, she said.

About two-thirds of the attendance was female, but more men got up to speak. Marois said this shows women still have a ways to go in making their voices heard.

"Women haven't yet taken their right to speak," she said. "They still have hesitations in this regard."

Quebec 'now sure' CPR oversprayed along tracks

By Merritt Clifton

SHERBROOKE — Environment Quebec has now officially confirmed that herbicides were applied improperly along CP Rail rights-of-way in the Eastern Townships late last month.

"We have received lots of reports and have done lots of investigation," explained Jocelyn Roy, Environment Quebec's Eastern Townships bureau pesticide expert. "We are now sure that in several places the terms of the authorization to spray were not respected. There are more of these places on the Beebe line," which parallels the Tomifobia River.

According to Roy, "The Newport line," running through Farnham, Brigham, Cowansville, West Brome, and Sutton, "seems not too bad. Obviously the crew has not respected all of the watercourses, but the authorization was respected around Lac Davignon," the Cowansville reservoir. Although herbicides were apparently applied specifically to certain individual bushes within 60 metres of the lake, the sprays were not directed at all trackside vegetation, as they were along the Tomifobia.

FEWER DEAD PLANTS

Where virtually everything is dead now along the Beebe line, dieback along the Newport line is quite selective.

"We have taken lots of photos and lots of samples," Roy continues. "Now we are putting all of the documentation together, discussing with our lawyers, and consulting with the people in Quebec who issued the spray permit to CP Rail. This was not done locally, in Sherbrooke," Roy notes.

"After that," Roy promises, "we will discuss the case with CP Rail. It's sure that we have the facts about what happened," but Environment Quebec also wants to know why.

Meanwhile, results of chemical analysis are still pending, including checks on plant samples taken near Lac Davignon. It is still possible that the herbicides involved will be found in the Lac Davignon samples, even though few of the plants died. Torrential rains a few hours after the spraying could have rinsed most of the herbicides off before they did enough damage to kill the plants.

Liberal launch PR blitz

By Michael McDevitt

SHERBROOKE — Two Eastern Townships Liberal Members of Parliament, upset by what they perceive as a lack of concern for Quebec issues by Conservative MPs, have launched a massive public relations campaign aimed at "provoking public response."

Shefford MP Jean Lapierre and Richmond-Wolfe's Alain Tardif, two Liberal survivors of last year's Conservative electoral sweep, were in Sherbrooke Monday announcing their 'Operation Contact' through which they hope to meet with constituents to discuss "issues of regional importance that they (the Conservatives) seem to have forgotten."

"We will be meeting with our constituents individually at their homes, if they wish," Lapierre said, "and with groups representing women, farmers and municipalities — groups who were promised great changes during the course of last year's campaign. Well, we haven't seen any of these changes and we believe people feel that after almost a year in office it's time for them to deliver the goods."

CORNROAST FINALE

Lapierre and Tardif will spend the next month in their ridings meeting with constituents in the over 90 municipalities within their districts and will culminate their project with an open-house cornroast at the Grandy Zoo September 1. "We just want to get people's impressions about the way the government is living up to its promises," Tardif said.

According to the two MPs, Quebec Conservative Members of Parliament have betrayed the promises they made during the 1984 campaign and have since become mere lackeys to the federal party. Citing such regional issues as the Sherbrooke Cartography Institute, the asbestos industry and the economic problems facing the Lake Megantic area, the MPs say the Conservatives have failed miserably in keeping their campaign promises.

"In the cartography dossier, for instance," Tardif says, "not one Quebec Conservative MP has raised his voice saying that it is needed. One gets the impression that there is one guy defining the line of conduct for the government and all the rest are just following."

MONEY FOR MANICOUAGAN
"We don't have the money for a cartography institute in Sherbrooke," adds Lapierre, "but we have plenty for Manicouagan (Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's riding where the government has recently announced several million dollars worth of projects). It's simply a matter of two different scales being used."

Tardif also complained of government inaction concerning both the shoe and textile manufacturing industries. "Last year the Conservative party emphasized that both these industries are in need of support from the government, but since then they have done absolutely nothing to help."

Residents of Shefford wishing to meet with Lapierre are invited to contact him by calling his office at (514) 378-7987 in Granby or by asking the operator for Zenith 54660. In Richmond-Wolfe, those wishing to meet with Tardif can call his Asbestos office at (819) 879-5189 or a toll-free number 1-800-567-6017.

Hatley resident vows to fight for his scrapyard

By Peter Scowen

HATLEY TOWNSHIP — A local scrapyard owner says he'll go to jail before giving in to a municipal bylaw that prohibits his type of business in Hatley Township.

Clifford Roy said Tuesday his only income comes from his scrapyards and antique car lot on the Sherbrooke Road. "I've got to live, you know," he said. "If worse comes to worst, I'll go to jail and let them feed my kids."

Roy's problems started when a neighbor complained to town council that the car lot was unsightly and the source of a lot of noise.

The neighbor also complained that the lot and the scrapyards, which is 500 feet behind Roy's house and hidden from view, is on green-zoned land — land reserved for farming only under Quebec's Bill 90.

Roy says the car lot is on the half hectare of land around his house which the law permits green-land owners to use as they please. An official from the Farmland Protection Commission visited his property, he says, and measured off the area where his old Buicks and Chevrolets are now.

"NO RIGHT"

At a regular town council meeting Tuesday, Mayor Garnet Card told Roy the official was not a surveyor and had "no right to measure anything." Card said the council would ask the commission for a written confirmation of the official's visit.

Roy's scrapyards is a different matter. Card says there is a 1964 bylaw that prohibits scrapyards in Hatley Township, but added the council wouldn't look into the matter as long as Roy's land is zoned green.

"It's not up to us," the mayor said.

Roy says he applied a month ago to have four acres 'de-zoned' for his scrapyards. All such requests are supposed to be backed by a council resolution, however. Card said Tuesday the council couldn't back Roy since it knew he was operating a scrapyards.

Roy says that if his de-zoning request is turned down he'll apply for spot-zoning — a temporary de-zoning that would end if he moved away.

One councillor told Roy that if his scrapyards is near a waterway he may get into trouble with the provincial Environment Ministry. Roy says there is a dried-up brook beside the yard, and that the land is swampy.

Roy bought the 85-acre property on the road that connects North Hatley to the Stanstead highway last summer. He says the land hasn't been farmed in years. He has been operating the lot and the scrapyards for over a year.

He used to own a gravel pit on the Stanstead Highway but sold out after business went bad. He has a wife and two children. He says they have been told they are ineligible for welfare because the land and cars make them worth too much.

A complaint may put an end to Clifford Roy's antique car lot on the Sherbrooke road in Hatley Township.

Lawyers argue over inquest

There is no precedent in Quebec legal history of a Sessions Court judge acting as coroner, Bouchard argued.

He contended that Falardeau didn't receive the proper authorization to take the coroner's job and said a letter signed by Justice Minister Pierre Marc Johnson allowing Falardeau to act as coroner was insufficient without permission from the full cabinet.

"He (Johnson) has got no right to do it," said Bouchard.

Crown lawyer Louis Crête, however, said cabinet did provide authorization and permission from Johnson was sufficient.

The inquest has been plagued by procedural wrangling since Judge John D'Arcy Asselin was named the first coroner June 21 by Johnson. Bouchard and Maranda scored a legal coup late last month when Superior Court ruled Asselin could not act as coroner after a court action was filed alleging he detained the bikers illegally because he had been improperly sworn in.

The bodies of the six slain bikers, members of the suburban Laval Hell's Angels 'North' chapter, were pulled from the St. Lawrence River in early June. The bodies were stuffed in sleeping bags and weighed down by cement blocks.

A QPF detective testified last week at the inquest the Laval gang members were targeted for death after they tried to cheat the gang's Halifax chapter out of $200,000.

We deserve better

As the legal circus involving the coroner's inquest into the murder of six Hell's Angels Motorcycle Club members continues its lunatic dance in Joliette this week, Quebecers cannot help but wonder how a once-elegant legal system could ever have become so confused. And there seems to be no end in sight.

Fundamental to the problems that have combined to prevent justice being served in this sordid affair is Quebec's outmoded Coroner's Act — a legal anachronism that has already been replaced by new legislation which the justice department inexplicably has delayed putting into effect. Under this old law, Quebec coroners are given extensive powers to investigate deaths to determine their cause and allows them to assign criminal responsibility at the conclusion of their hearings. They possess judge-like powers of subpoena and can order witnesses detained in order to ensure their presence at the inquest. Witnesses must testify before a coroner and to refuse to do so invariably leads to contempt of court charges — and imprisonment.

Naturally, defence attorneys despise this process because it denies suspect 'witnesses' the fundamental right to refuse to incriminate themselves. Fully aware of this, police forces frequently use the coroners inquest as a means to coerce information from witnesses in the furtherance of their investigations.

While it is true that the men being detained while their lawyers dither are not the type of individuals most Quebecers tend to feel sympathy for, it is equally true that through all of this, the Quebec legal system is no closer to the end of this case than it was three weeks ago. In the meantime an expensive and destructive comedy continues to unfold.

If the Quebec Police Force believes it has a viable case against any or all of the bikers it accuses of taking part in the murders, it should get on with it and press charges against them, bringing the affair before a duly appointed court where it belongs. The continuance of the charade in Joliette can accomplish nothing further than to delay the cause of justice and to further undermine Quebecers' already shaky confidence in our legal apparatus. We deserve better.

Radiation warfare planned in WW II documents reveal

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Fearful of a radiological attack by Nazi Germany, U.S. scientists plotted ways to poison 500,000 Germans and Japanese by putting radioactive material in food and water, government documents show.

The plans apparently foundered because of technical problems and the emphasis on developing the atomic bomb, Stanford University history professor and nuclear weapons specialist Barton Bernstein said in a report Tuesday based on the recently declassified documents.

"Dotted through the partly declassified wartime British and U.S. documents is a rich tale linking defensive and offensive uses of radiological warfare," Bernstein wrote in the August issue of the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists.

The plot was initially disclosed earlier this year by a Massachusetts Institute of Technology periodical, which published a letter from J. Robert Oppenheimer to Enrico Fermi, two pioneers of the atomic bomb.

Seven months before the 1941 bombing of Pearl Harbor, a panel of scientists headed by Nobel physicist Arthur Holly Compton proposed radiological attacks and gave it top priority over nuclear-powered ships and atomic bombs.

On Dec. 10, 1941, three days after Pearl Harbor, a top-secret U.S. report concluded that a large enemy area could be made uninhabitable by dumping a pile of radioactive material, Bernstein said.

BECAME CONVINCED

"We have become convinced that there is a real danger of bombardment by the Germans within the next few months using bombs designed to spread radioactive material in lethal quantities," Compton wrote in 1942.

Compton assigned a small group of scientists to develop a defence against radioactive attacks or at least a system for quickly identifying them.

In 1943, Fermi, who worked under Compton at the Chicago Metallurgical Laboratory, "secretly proposed using fission products to poison the enemy's food supply," Bernstein wrote.

Oppenheimer proposed that "we should not attempt a plan unless we can poison food sufficient to kill a half million men, since there is no doubt that the actual number affected will, because of non-uniform distribution, be much smaller than this."

Bernstein said it is unclear whether the target was to be troops, civilians or both.

Oppenheimer and Hamilton wrote to each other about the plan, but there is no evidence that they or Fermi went much further in the venture, Bernstein said.

The ongoing saga of Dunkin McMansenville

Where the pavement ends

have had about the origin of the name. You're welcome, and same to you fella!

Their first child was named Perkins McMansenville. He was so ugly that he took to wearing a discarded potato sack over his head in the form of a veil. He quickly became known as "veiled Perkins". At the tender age of seven, after tiring of his nickname or "that ugly fat kid with the pimples", Perkins moved away from home and settled on the East shore of Lake Memphremagog in a site that would later bear his name...although misspelled, perhaps on purpose.

The foregoing was in the form of a review for those who have been following the series with baited breath (that's breath that smells like old worms) or for those of you have had the good fortune to miss the last three episodes. You might want to take notes from here on though, I might be asking questions later.

Perkins was given the job of organizing a native commercial fishing industry on the lake. It was an early job creation project of the government at the time. Chief Owl of the local Abenaki tribe was quickly tiring of all his braves hanging around Dunkin McMansenville's road house and getting tanked-up on cheap illegal potato vodka. He decided to start a massive fishing industry to get his tribe off that bad fare and onto the lake. (As opposed to welfare the modern day term). It was quickly discovered that simply by sticking his head under water Perkins could cause hundreds of large fish to leap into the air, into boats and onto the shore. The Indians simply collected the fish, many of which were ready to be cooked having actually been scared out of their skins. He was held in great reverence by the tribe except for those who caught a peek of his face before he veiled it, they immediately turned to stone, fell into the water and were never seen again. This explains the hundreds of life-sized indian statues that can be found on the lake bottom only a few hundred yards from the wharf at Perkins Landing. Incidentally this name came from the old Indian phrase "Stay away from the wharf when Perkins landing!" You can well imagine the relief when the lookout would shout... "It's in the bag!"

The fishing industry made great progress and was doing very well until one day Perkins, in a moment of indiscretion, took off his bag to shave, looked in the mirror, and turned himself to solid stone. It was his most monumental decision. His wife was very upset however as from that moment on, although he was solid limestone, everybody took him for granite.

The tribe laughed for years by walking up to the now immobile Perkins and asking in loud voices

"Hey, is stat chew?" However the joke waned and they carried him off to hide somewhere on Owl's Head where he is lurking even today waiting to make some unwary skier even more bolder. (little play on words there). Eventually however he was forgotten, the fishing industry died along with his memory, the Indians moved away (some with reservations) and the area settled by other less interesting people. Now and then however mothers still warn their children, when they are bad, that "Perkins will get you" although most people think it's Dave and not poor old Veiled Perkins to whom she refers.

Perkins wife, a wasted old lady of fourteen, was so moved by the whole experience of being married to the world's ugliest man, took up with a bullfrog and moved to Hemmingford from where she never bothered to write, perhaps hoping to forget the entire episode, not unlike many of my readers. As I related earlier his two children "Hey there" and "Commerce" remain in the area cemented into the wharf. Perkins either forgot they were holding up a timber when he poured the concrete or perhaps he let them take a peek before he poured.

In future articles I may be convinced to relate how Dunkin McMansenville travelled to Quebec City to set up our present day legislative assembly (as much a joke as anything) or how the Righter Ruitter and his two brothers Writer and Rider were responsible for the Canadian Pacific Railway (everybody else trying to get as far away as possible), on the other hand perhaps I may not.

No great urge

Editor,

I am renewing my Record subscription for one more year. I am happy to say that the delivery of the paper has improved greatly.

Thought I should let you know that we were in Sherbrooke a few weeks ago, and was thoroughly disgusted with what is happening to the Sherbrooke Country Club. Having lived for nearly fifty years on Prospect Road (when it was known as Poverty Peak). I am glad that the development of this area happened after we left there. We have no great urge to come back there.

Sincerely,

Just a brick short

The Editor,

I would like to express my opinion on the complaint made by Edward Miller about the write up of the Brookbury Women's Institute meeting published in Thursday's Record July 25.

If you are such an intellectual person, why would you be bothered to read the Women's Institute Report?

Likely you don't realize the Women's Institute is world-wide and it is a 45,000 member organization.

Your point 1 — What is the Broobury W.I.? There isn't such a society, if you care to know. Mirror Lake happens to be in Bishopton, Brookbury happens to be on Rte 255 north between Bury and Bishopton. So don't look for a street, there isn't one.

I am sure there are many other items that might be of interest to you in the Record, if not, try Doonesbury.

You signed stunned subscriber, let me suggest just a brick short of a local.

Canada Post woes pose problems for Tories

OTTAWA (CP) — Almost everyone agrees mail service is deplorable, but there is no consensus on what should be done to ensure Canada Post delivers on time without taxpayers taking a financial licking.

Few tears are being shed over the departure of the Crown corporation's president, Michael Warren, who leaves his $165,000-a-year job this month for the private sector.

Most see Warren's exit as an opening for Prime Minister Brian Mulroney to name new managers with orders to improve service and balance the books.

Warren can claim credit for cutting the corporation deficit to $350 million in 1984 from $1 billion in 1981 when he took over as the first president after administrative revamping.

And he has won praise for restoring labor peace in the $3-billion agency that has one of the most militant unions in the country — the 23,000 member Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

Yet critics charge that his cost-cutting zeal has led to poorer service, higher postal rates, and lower productivity.

There is more than a grain of truth to the charges.

On-time mail delivery is dropping dramatically, absenteeism is twice that of private industry and postal rates have doubled since Warren took over.

Whoever gets Warren's job will have more than his or her share of headaches, but not a lack of advice on what is needed to get mail delivered on time without higher stamp prices.

REPORTS DUE

There is the report of a private-sector task force, set up earlier this year by Revenue Minister Perrin Beatty, to review productivity in the agency that employs 60,000. It is to report in October.

Cross-country hearings began this week in Vancouver.

Also to come is a report by a Toronto management consultant firm investigating charges that the post office squandered $100 million of public money on items such as sorting machines that are slower than manual sorters.

The allegations were levelled by Ad Varma, a productivity specialist for the corporation in Toronto. He was fired last year for leaking information to Tory MPs when the Liberals were in power. He has since been reinstated at the insistence of the Prime Minister Mulroney's office.

Perhaps the most important bit of advice will come from Auditor General Kenneth Dye, who has been examining post office practices for the last three years.

And then there is the advice from business leaders, union bosses and politicians of every stripe.

Politicians such as Liberal postal critic George Baker and his New Democrat counterpart, Cyril Keeper, don't see any point in worrying about the postal deficit. The say reliable service is what constituents want.

"You've got to treat the post office like a public service and put aside the idea that it can be treated like a private, profit-making corporation," says Baker. "In this country there is no way the postal service can make a profit."

But John Bulloch, president of the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, says it's simplistic to treat the post office as a subsidized service.

CITES WASTE

"There's enough waste and inefficiency in there that they could meet their deficit without any increase in price," he says.

Bulloch says the way to improve mail service is to change the legislation that created the Crown corporation.

Strikes should be banned, wages held at the same level as the private sector, postal operations farmed out to sub-contractors and postal rate increases reviewed by an independent agency, he says.

Roger Hamel, Canadian Chamber of Commerce president, agrees the post office can turn a profit and still provide good service if properly managed.

"It has to cut the cost of some of its operations, bring in mechanical equipment, get into the electronic age," he says.

Bill Findlay, vice-president of the Letter Carriers Union, says it's impossible for the post office to be self-sufficient and still do a good job.

"There's definitely a lot of ways it can be streamlined so the burden won't be so high on the taxpayers, but it's never going to be self-sufficient. It never was meant to be."

Findlay and Jean-Claude Parrot, the postal workers' union president, readily admit postal service is dismal, but they won't shoulder responsibility.

Parrot says "The post office is managed by everyone but run by no one."

Service is bad because it closes on weekends to save money and is plagued with sorting equipment that doesn't work, they say.

TOO MANY MACHINES

Findlay says "We must go back to the seven-day operation . . . and go back to manual sorting of third- and fourth-class mail. We're overmechanized."

Both union leaders scoff at suggestions that service could be enhanced by removing the right to strike or privatizing part of the corporation.

Australia banned postal strikes, but has more strikes than any other country in the world, they say. And sub-contracting work will cost taxpayers more money.

"They did sub-contracting up until 1972 and it was ludicrous," says Findlay. "These people all got fat and rich because only political friends got the jobs."

Winnipeg Tory MP Dan McKenzie, an outspoken critic of Warren, and largely responsible for getting Varma reinstated, believes Canada Post is managed by incompetent bureaucrats.

McKenzie won't say what the Tory caucus wants the government to do about the post office because MPs want to see proposals from Beatty's task force and the other two reports due this year.

But he says improved mail delivery is a political priority — one Mulroney can't put on the backburner if he doesn't want to face a caucus revolt.

"There is certainly no way our caucus is going to accept these three documents from these three groups and do nothing."

Beatty, who is responsible for Canada Post, isn't saying what cabinet intends to do about mail delivery until it hears from his private-sector task force.

In the meantime, Canada Post's board of directors will meet in mid-August to appoint an interim president and set up a committee to search for a Warren replacement.

There may be few takers for what has to be one of the toughest jobs in the country.

E.T. berry growers may not be covered

GRANBY (CP)—More than 125 strawberry producers hit by a hailstorm last week probably won't be compensated for an estimated $6 million in lost produce.

Guy Berthiaume, spokesman for the Quebec civil protection office, said Monday there is no program of financial assistance for farmers who lose crops as a result of natural disaster.

Berthiaume said the provincial agricultural insurance board only provides compensation for such things as lost equipment or animals.

The hail struck five communities last week in the Eastern Townships. The farmers have applied for federal and provincial disaster relief.

Latin debtors trying hard to cut deficits

CARACAS (Reuters)—Major Latin American debtor countries have begun new efforts to make austerity stick in the face of rising inflation and inability to control public spending, foreign bankers and economists say.

The new initiatives follow increasing concern that debtor countries have not been doing enough to discipline their economies in the context of adjustment plans agreed on with the International Monetary Fund.

Argentina recently announced a tough, upgraded anti-inflation plan and Mexico followed with public spending cuts and a 16.7-per-cent devaluation.

Mexico, like Venezuela, faces budget problems as a result of falling oil prices, although bankers say neither is yet in difficulty with their debt agreements.

Meanwhile Brazil, whose IMF program was suspended early this year, is locked in tough negotiations with the fund on a new package that would facilitate a debt rescheduling agreement with banks.

REDUCE INFLATION

Brazil's new president, Jose Sarney, says he will take steps to eliminate wasteful bureaucracy and reduce inflation but will resist any "fiscal shock."

"We can't allow the dogmatic intransigence of world financial organs to impose on the country an unnecessary recessive policy," he said.

Argentina, whose President Raul Alfonsin has until now taken a hard line on IMF austerity, recently announced a new package that goes far beyond goals previously attempted.

Government spending cuts are aimed at reducing the state sector deficit to 4.1 per cent of gross domestic product this year from 12 per cent in 1984.

Bankers say Argentine success will depend on Alfonsin's ability to fulfill pledges on cutting expenditure, while maintaining a truce with business and labor over wage-price freezes. Inflation rose to 1,129 per cent in the year that ended in June.

Mexico's austerity plan, local bankers said, reflected both dwindling confidence in President Miguel de la Madrid's ability to manage the economy and also the drop in oil prices.

INFLATION RISING

The government has so far failed to control either the budget deficit or inflation, expected to hit 55 per cent this year compared to the official target of 35 per cent.

Mexican oil income is expected to dip this year to $13 billion from last year's $15 billion, but bankers say this should be compensated by lower interest rates on its $97-billion foreign debt.

Venezuela, also hit by declining oil income, is expected to cut heavy crude prices soon. It is bracing for budgetary problems despite its $13.4 billion in reserves.

President Jaime Lusinchi has announced plans to cut five to 10 per cent of public sector current expenditure, and new measures obliging state enterprises to hand over all their profits to the central government.

Venezuela, which exports roughly the same volume and type of crude as Mexico, is likely to suffer a $2-billion loss from the target of $13.7 billion in oil income this year.

But Ecuador, a fellow Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries producer, says it intends to compensate lower oil prices by raising oil output to 300,000 barrels a day as against its 183,000-barrel-a-day OPEC quota.

Domtar mill in Windsor may result in paper surplus

MONTREAL (CP)—Canadian newsprint capacity is expected to experience only modest growth through 1987, but production of groundwood printing and specialty papers will show a marked upswing, the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association reports.

Although additional newsprint capacity is expected as a result of mill improvements and a new machine coming on stream, this will largely be offset by machine retirements and conversions, says an association survey of the domestic industry.

Carl Ellingsen, who compiled the figures, said Monday that some older and smaller mills are moving into a survival mode by shifting from production of newsprint to other grades of paper.

Some of these mills have converted to catalogue papers, which are in growing demand, particularly in the United States, for production of advertising mailers and flyers.

Newsprint production, the survey says, is expected to increase only 180,000 tonnes, or 1.8 per cent, from 1984 to 1987. By comparison, the 1980-83 period saw an increase of 840,000, or nine per cent.

Groundwood printing and specially papers will register an increase of 280,000 tonnes, or 30 per cent, in the 1984-87 period, the survey adds, mainly as a result of machine conversions.

Book, writing and miscellaneous papers will rise by 124,000 tonnes, or 11.2 per cent, over the period. The survey notes that continued increases in capacity in this category are a result of previous installations of new machines and improvements to older ones.

DOMTAR MILL

While the survey does not cover mills under construction, the new Domtar fine-paper operation in Windsor, scheduled for completion in 1987, may result in excess capacity for a time until the industry adjusts or the market grows sufficiently.

Containerboard capacity is the only other category of paper expecting to show a significant increase, partly because Domtar is replacing an old paper-making machine with a new one at its Trenton, Ont., mill and because of improvements at other mills.

In market pulp—pulp sold by manufacturers to other buyers, instead of being used internally for producing paper—overall capacity is expected to increase by 387,000 tonnes, or five per cent.

Dissolving pulp capacity will drop by three per cent. Sulphite paper grades will increase by nine per cent, sulphate by 3.8 per cent and mechanical pulp by 23.4 per cent.

The survey says the increase represents a yearly growth rate of 1.7 per cent in overall capacity. The substantial percentile increase in mechanical pulp capacity is attributable to a new mill being built by Tembec in Temiscaming, Que.

Eccentric Canadian inventor stumbles across acid rain cure

VANKLEEK HILL, Ont. (CP)—A 74-year-old inventor, who says he has a formula to neutralize acid rain, may be on the brink of recognition.

Bill Haines, a former aeronautical engineer with Canadair, stumbled across what he believed was the solution in 1977 but the eccentric, affable ex-Londoner had not been able to get anyone to take him seriously.

That is, until Donald Cox, head of the National Research Council's industrial research assistance program, heard the inventor on a CBC radio program several weeks ago.

Cox is prepared to have government scientists look into the theory.

"I'm enthusiastic as hell," Cox said Wednesday. "I've seen really good stuff coming out of people like Haines."

The NRC physicist interviewed Haines and had him demonstrate the formula. He says the inventor's claims may be oversimplified but are certainly worth looking into.

Now Haines, who resides in this community about 75 kilometres east of Ottawa, has issued a challenge to politicians and scientists to disprove his theory and Cox plans to assign government scientists to look into it.

A major ingredient in Haines's formula is silica, one of the most abundant natural elements.

SECRET FORMULA

Silica is mixed with sodium, extracts from tree bark such as tannin and lignin, "and a secret element or two," Haines says.

His proposal for recovering acid lakes starts with soaking a large quantity of crushed limestone with his solution and dumping the gravel into lakes.

Ontario is already using limestone to neutralize acids in some lakes on an experimental basis, but Haines says this isn't enough. Limestone loses its ability to neutralize the acid, while "my silica solution doesn't."

The limestone takes the acid into it, he says. His formula neutralizes the acid when it is leached out of the limestone into the water.

After the limestone is dumped in, the lake must be agitated with boats using drag lines to stir the solution through the water.

He estimates it'll take only several weeks, depending on the size of the lake, to bring it back to life.

However, he doesn't know how much limestone would be required or how much it would cost.

Haines says his solution will continue to battle the acid rain because it will maintain its alkaline strength.

Alkaline solutions when combined with acid produce water and salt, thereby neutralizing the acid.

Once the water quality is acceptable, biologists must reintroduce aquatic vegetation to produce oxygen and keep a lake healthy.

MP Stan Darling, chairman of the federal government's acid rain committee, has put Haines in touch with executives at Inco Ltd., whose operations in Sudbury, Ont., produce emissions thought to cause acid rain.

Haines also says his formula can get rid of the cause of acid rain at the source.

"I've sent his proposals to the minister of the environment and to Charles Ferguson, Inco's environmental director in Toronto," Darling said.

Darling has also met Haines and considers him a serious, if somewhat eccentric, inventor.

"In my view, his product is certainly a legitimate invention."

STUMBLES ON FORMULA

Haines, who came to Canada from England in 1966, says he stumbled across his formula while trying to find out how to keep tree bark from rotting.

He noticed a backyard bean pole had fallen into a solution he was experimenting with. When he examined the part of the bean pole with the dried solution, he found it was hard. It was also fire resistant.

He says the solution can also strengthen and accelerate plant growth and he displays his vegetable garden and house plants sprayed with the mixture. They appear large and healthy.

As well, he says the solution could control grasshoppers.

He points to a 1983 issue of Science News, which says silica-laden leaves wear down an insect's mouth parts when it chews.

Haines's mind clicked when he read that.

He has given several litres of the solution to MP Len Gustafson of Assiniboia, Sask., and Darling said Gustafson intends to have the formula tested on grasshoppers which with a Prairie drought has devastated much of the western grain crop.

All-woman Swiss bank breaks male management monopoly

By Dorothee Jung

GENEVA (Reuters)—The first bank in Switzerland run by and for women has broken a male monopoly of bank management and is advising clients on everything from Eurobond investments to contraception, divorce and children's sailing clubs.

Marie-Antoinette Huguenin, 44, is Switzerland's only woman bank manager. She thinks her bank—a branch of the Banque Hypothecaire du Canton de Geneve, founded almost 140 years ago—may be the only one of its kind in Europe.

Bank director General Henri Delaraye was inspired to set up the special service after a visit last year to the 10-year-old First Women's Bank in New York.

When Huguenin's bank opened in May, she quoted in her speech the late French poet Louis Aragon: "The woman is man's future, may it also be ours."

ADVISE CLIENTS

With pastel walls and paintings of poppies, the bank welcomes women clients in search of a more personal ambiance than that available in Geneva's many more daunting, high-powered temples of finance.

A woman interior designer was called in to create "not a candy-box atmosphere, but a place women feel at ease in."

The seven staff members, hand-picked by Huguenin from the bank's other branches, are all women, though not necessarily feminists, she said.

They counsel clients in wealth, business and investment affairs as in any other bank.

But, when invited, they also dispense advice on careers, pensions, insurance, matrimonial law, divorce proceedings, children's nurseries or schools, drug problems, medical services, housing problems and local sports facilities for children.

"We are not a social services office, but we are able to offer any help or information we can," Huguenin said in an interview, adding that the staff has taken special courses provided by a local women's organization on non-banking matters.

FOUND DEMAND

She said the bank had found a real market gap for the special services.

A small salon, as she calls the consultation room looking out on a balcony adorned with plants, is set aside for those untraditional, personal services.

"You cannot really discuss some problems in front of a security-glass counter," she explains.

The bank has no figures yet on how successful the venture is, but a bank spokesman said a local radio station that picked two women clients at random this month found they were both heads of companies.

Many of Huguenin's target clients of students, housewives, managers and women entrepreneurs have stopped by, if only out of curiosity or to get details on the range of services.

Men, she said, are also welcome as customers.

SUPPORT WIFE

"One American woman, who read about us in the newspapers, even dropped in just to say 'Bravo!'" she said. Such a response does not bring in money, but it is evidence of widespread support for what the bank still considers an experiment.

"One does not change one's bank account from one day to the next, but we are working on it," Huguenin said.

Married, with a 23-year-old daughter, Huguenin has been in the banking business since 1957 and with BCG for 13 years—for the last six in charge of another branch.

With total assets of $1.6 billion, BCG employs 380 people in the Geneva area. Nearly 150 of them are women, but only three women have high-level posts.

Switzerland granted its women the right to vote only in 1971 and passed a referendum enshrining equality of the sexes 10 years later.

Business briefs

MONTREAL (CP)—Cascades Inc. announced a net profit of $11,051,000 for the six-month period ended June 30, compared to a net profit of $6,239,319 for the same period last year.

The net profit per share for the paper manufacturer totalled 98 cents per share compared with 62 cents per share for the same period last year. Sales rose 44 per cent from last year, to $122,517,000 from $84,806,753.

MONTREAL (CP)—Valleyfield and Trois Rivieres in Quebec and Chatham, Ont., are among 20 Canadian cities are bidding for the Toyota Canada auto assembly plant, an official with the automaker said Tuesday.

Toyota Canada senior vice-president Hector Dupuis said most of the cities seeking the plant were in Quebec and Ontario. The Japanese automaker announced the planned $150-million plant two weeks ago.

The campaign in Trois Rivieres is being spearheaded by the local television station, which has produced a video trumpeting the city's virtues. Chatham bought ads in major Japanese financial publications last week extolling the Ontario community's advantages.

MONTREAL (CP)—Six North American cities—including Montreal and Toronto—are in the running for a giant $2-billion recreation centre developers say will attract more than 15 million visitors a year.

Tentatively titled Fantasy City, the plan devised by Edmonton-based Triple Five Corp. includes a man-made lake complete with nine recreational submarines, a miniature golf course, rides and a domed water park for water skiing and body surfing.

Other cities in the running include New York, Boston, Washington, Minneapolis-St. Paul and Niagara Falls. Triple Five official Deane Eldredge said Tuesday preliminary discussions had been carried out with some of the cities under consideration.

He said the amusement centre is similar to Triple Five's West Edmonton Mall, billed as the largest mall in the world.

Q. A month ago, the union to which I belong went on strike and it is still not settled. As a result, I have been out of work ever since. My debts are adding up and I am unable to pay my bills as they become due. One of the stores to which I owe money has turned the account over to a collection agency. The credit agent has been calling me at all hours of the day and night, even on Sundays and threatening to put me in jail if I don't pay up. Is he allowed to do this under the law?

A. No. An Act respecting the collection of certain debts prohibits a collection agent from harassing, threatening or otherwise intimidating a debtor. The law states that an agent must communicate with a debtor between 8:00 a.m. and 6:00 p.m. and he does not have the right to disturb you in the evening or on holidays. Neither does he have the right to communicate with other members of your family except to obtain your address.

Furthermore, the agent must act discreetly. The law states that the collection agent does not have the right to reveal to others that the debtor is in arrears with his payments or to give out information which could cause harm to him or a member of his family. He is also prohibited from using false pretenses or leading the debtor to believe that his inability to pay makes him liable to arrest or legal proceedings. Any promise by the agent to arrange for a further delay for the debtor to pay if he pays the agent a percentage or a collection charge is illegal. A receipt must also be issued by the agent for all cash payments.

Forces to be at Fair

OTTAWA — The Canadian Forces display trailers are on the move again, and will be at the Sherbrooke Exposition from August 9 to 18, 1985.

Two all-new 45-foot highway trailers have been modified as walk-through displays depicting the many aspects of the Canadian Forces. They will be visiting regional fairs and exhibitions across Canada this year from June to October.

Visitors to the trailer this year will see new displays commemorating the 75th anniversary of the Navy, the 100th anniversary of the participation of women in the military, and the new CF uniforms identifying members of the sea, land and air elements. Night vision goggles will permit visitors to experience the advantages this new equipment gives to soldiers at night. Models of a navy supply ship, a submarine and the army's new 1/4-ton military truck will be on display as well as some of the armaments used by the Canadian Forces. There will also be a Telidon computer terminal giving information through the use of graphics and texts.

The Canadian Forces display trailers offer an excellent opportunity for young and old alike to get better acquainted with their armed forces.

Parent is often the kidnapper

Dear Ann Landers: How wonderful it is to see the photographs of missing children on milk cartons. But I wonder how many people realize that few of these missing children were abducted by strangers. Some are runaways, but most have been snatched by a divorced parent.

I spent two years interviewing victims of parental kidnapping for my book, "Children in the Crossfire". I was stunned to discover that many boys and girls had been physically and sexually abused by the "loving" parent who had abducted them.

Some children were forced to dye their hair and change their names. The fortunate three out of 10 who are found almost always suffer long-term trauma. Surprised? Read on: It is 10 times more likely that the kidnapper will be a mother or a father and not a stranger. —Sally Abrams

Dear Sally: Thanks for an eye-opener. I urge anyone who suspects that a child in your neighborhood may be such a victim to report it to the police at once.

Often these children are told, "Your Mother (or Dad) died (or didn't want you or is in jail or on dope) and I want to make a home for you in another city".

I also urge any abducted child who may be reading this to dial 0 and say, "I am in trouble and want to make a collect long-distance call to my home. Please help me."

Dear Ann Landers: I read with interest the column from "Depressed in Alabama" about the high school kids who were permitted to share a bedroom when the boy's parents threw him out. "The mother said she'd rather have her 16-year-old daughter sleeping at home with one guy than making out in parked cars with Lord knows how many."

How do you feel about divorced women who sleep with their men friends when their teenagers are at home and can hear the bedsprings creak and everything that is said?

I hope you'll print my letter because there's a lot of it going on in —Torrance, Calif.

Dear T.: Same answer. It's terrible — destructive and sad.

Dear Ann Landers: I am enclosing Page 1 of the newspaper so you will know I am not making this up.

As you can see, the headline reads, "WORLD'S OLDEST MAN WEDS AT 130." The subtitle says, "90 year-old son says Dad is a fool." Under that it says, "We want lots of babies," exclaims his 37-year-old blushing bride."

Is this possible? My wife insists it has to be because newspapers can't get away with printing lies. What do you have to say about this, Ann Landers? —Waiting for your reply in N.Y. City.

Dear Waiting: Newspapers are not supposed to print lies but some papers are a bit more reckless with the facts than others.

The story, as reported, does not square with a source I trust implicitly.

According to the Guinness Book of World Records (whose facts are carefully researched and documented), the oldest living man is 119 years old. He resides in Japan.

30th Wedding Anniversary

It is always hard to keep a secret but that's just what John and Elane Wilson's children did when they invited about 100 relatives, friends and neighbours of their parents to come to the Curling Club in Beebe on Saturday, July 27, for a surprise party. Expecting to go out for dinner, they were surprised when their daughter Laurel and her husband Jack Kilmurray stopped at the Curling Club. They had no idea what was going on, as the real date of their anniversary is September 3rd.

Bridal shower

A miscellaneous shower was held for Tammy Bellam at the Community Centre in Sawyerville on July 7. Tammy was taken completely by surprise when she entered the hall with her sister Trudy, to find 30 relatives and friends to greet her. A corsage of baby pink miniature roses and baby's breath was pinned on her by hostess Carol Gagnon and she was seated in a prettily decorated chair beside her mother, Mrs. Ross Bellam, grandmother, Mrs. Maud Bell and her future mother-in-law Mrs. Paul Labranche.

They were escorted to the head table with their three daughters and sons-in-law, Janice and Richard Keet, Joy and Danny Wallace, Laurel and Jack Kilmurray. Danny gave the blessing before a turkey dinner was served and enjoyed by all. Dessert was a double-ring cake made and artistically decorated in blue and white by Janice Keet and Candy Cote. It was cut and served with ice cream. A beautiful cut-flower centerpiece of sweet peas, daisies, roses, bachelor buttons and baby's breath adorned each end of the head table. Also on the table were two photos of John and Elane taken in their courtship days. John's sister Pat Stevenson acting as M.C. did a good job of telling humorous Relatives and friends were from East Angus, North Hatley, Cookshire, St. Isidore, Sherbrooke, Island Brook and East Clifton. Piano music by Janice Graham was enjoyed by all. Tammy received many lovely gifts. She wore a hat made with the bows from the packages, and thanked everyone for coming and for the lovely gifts. A buffet lunch was served by the hostesses, Carol Gagnon and Sherry Marquis. The beautifully decorated cakes were made by Diane Berwick.

anecdotes about the couple before calling on Larry Ritter, George Kennett, Glenn Hunter, Art Thomson, Danny Wallace and Lisa St. Hilaire who presented a speech written by her husband Michael who was unable to attend. Each one spoke in a humorous way of their friendship with the couple, but all agreed John and Elane were always fun to be with and ready to lend a helping hand when needed. The celebrants of 30 years thanked their guests for coming and especially their children, for all the work they had put into making the party for them. Everyone went outside while the tables were cleared away, then the remainder of the evening was spent dancing to music supplied by Bert Lang. A light lunch was served about midnight to end a very pleasant evening. Cindy Keet, granddaughter of the couple, was in charge of the guest book.

Those attending were from Toronto, Oshawa, and Kingston, Ont., Greenwood, N.S., Puyallup, Washington, Hatboro, Penn., Worcester and South Grafton, Mass., Sherbrooke, Montreal and the border area. Many pictures were taken during the evening, including a video tape. On Sunday a barbecue was held at the Wilson home in Stanstead for 31 relatives and friends who had spent the weekend with them.

Allard — St. Martin

The marriage of Odette André, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul St. Martin, Cowansville, Que., to Marc Allard, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Allard, also of Cowansville, took place at 3 p.m., on June 29, 1985, at St. Thérèse-de-L'Enfant-Jésus Church, Cowansville. Rev. Father Gaston Giguère performed the double ring ceremony. Appropriate wedding music was played by Edouard Guité, with Suzanne Leduc as soloist. Large baskets of summer flowers decorated the altar.

The bride wore an ankle length gown of white tulle, fashioned with elbow length puffed sleeves. A large flower, of the same material, draped across the bodice and over the left shoulder. The skirt was in four petal-shaped panels, over a satin underskirt. Trimming was of lace and tiny pearls. Her shoulder length veil fell from a crown decorated with miniature flowers. She wore pearl earrings and necklace. Her bouquet was of red roses, baby's breath, stephanotis and orchids. Martine Allard Romaire, matron of honor, wore a full length, peach polyester crepe dress and carried long stemmed red roses. Julie Gagné, as flower girl, was in a lilac chiffon dress and carried a bouquet of rosebuds, stephanotis and tiny poms. Dominique Roussel, ring bearer, carried the rings on a dainty cushion, made by the bride's mother, from materials of her wedding dress. Sylvie Allard and Alexandre Roussel were the priest's attendants during the Mass. Louise Ostrowska did the first reading and Louise Allard, the second one. After a drive around town, the reception was held at the Métairie, Dunham, Que. During the receiving line formalities, the guests enjoyed punch and hors d'oeuvres. Many pictures were taken on the lovely grounds. Later, the 140 guests entered the dining area, where a delicious supper was served before the orchestra began the entertainment for the evening. The bride's table was adorned with candles and a three tiered wedding cake decorated with tiny pink roses and topped by birds holding rings. Mr. Christian Romaire acted as master of ceremonies and proposed the toast to the bride and groom. Before leaving on their honeymoon, the bride threw her bouquet which was caught by Nathalie Tremblay. The groom tossed the garter, which was caught by Gerald Allard. The bride and groom left Sunday at 7 a.m., from Dorval, to spend a week in Florida. Odette's brothers, Pierre and François and a group of friends, accompanied them to the airport. For travelling, the bride chose an off-white polyester and acetate pant suit and hat. Her blouse was melon colored and she wore a corsage of yellow and orange carnations. Gifts were many and beautiful, including money, linen, silver, glassware and pictures. Guests were from Lac St. Jean, Long Island, N.Y., Montreal, Cote Nord, St. Iles, La Malbaie, Dolbeau, Knowlton, Mistassini and Cowansville. Prior to her marriage, Odette was entertained by her friend, Mary Strange, at a miscellaneous shower. A second shower was given by her aunts, Mrs. Marie Laguë, Mrs. Pauline Stowe, Jacqueline and Lois Lahue. She received many useful and lovely gifts. Odette chose to be married on her parents' 28th wedding anniversary. The happy couple now reside in Acton Vale.

Four days of celebration mark Danville's 125th anniversary

By Janet Element

The town of Danville celebrated its 125th anniversary starting Thursday, August 1 and continuing through to Sunday.

120 residents of Danville were present at a cocktail party opening the 125th anniversary Thursday, at which time the mayor, Donald Roy, handed the key of the town to the President of this association, Mr. Gilles Girard.

Friday there was a disco at the community center in Danville. Denis Bourassa was in charge of the evening for the young people of the community.

The big day was Saturday with many activities. The day began with the Parade which started at 1:30 p.m. The parade did many streets of this town with all the townspeople and many others from outside the community coming out to see this grand event.

The parade consisted of a motorcycle group leading it off followed by the official car containing the guest dignity who was Justice Minister Pierre-Marc Johnson and ex-mayor Gerard Lafrance. Following was his brother Daniel Johnson, deputy finance critic for the Liberal party of Quebec.

ATTRACTIVE FLOATS

There were several handsome horse and buggies, a caravan and a stage coach carrying the mayor and mayoress, councillors and ex-councillors, administrators and deputy Yvon Vallieres. Following this there were many attractive floats representing the local organizations, antique cars, etc. During this period, people were entertained at the point of arrival of the parade by the Harmonie d'Asbestos.

As the parade descended upon the town hall, the people participating in the parade disembarked at the town hall for a speech by the mayor, who stood in front of the monument dedicated to Timothy O'Hea, and welcomed the distinguished guests.

Pierre-Marc Johnson said, "I am glad that I have had the opportunity to follow my father (ex-premier Daniel Johnson, a resident of Danville until the age of 7) to Danville on several occasions to visit the Clovis Thibault family. I apologize that we are only three here today, my aunt Doris, brother Daniel and myself."

"I was so touched by this invitation," he said, "that I postponed all my duties for this memorable day because of my being a candidate for the Parti Quebecois leadership." In closing he thanked everybody and wished Danville a very happy 125th anniversary.

CONVEYS BEST WISHES

"This has been the first time that the youngest brother has spoken first," said his brother, who was next to speak. "I am the oldest but I look younger. I have only been here on a couple of occasions but I sincerely hope to bring my family in the near future. I also convey my best wishes to the town of Danville."

A red ribbon which had been placed across the street, was cut by the two brothers to officially name the street Daniel Johnson (in honor of their father).

Vice-President Gerard Element spoke on behalf of the councillors and administrators of the 125th anniversary, to the population, giving best regards to Pierre-Marc and Daniel's mother who was unable to be present. He presented each one with a painting of their father's home, which is located on St. Aime street as it is today. Due to obligations the three members of the family had to leave at 4 o'clock p.m.

A light lunch was served to the participants of the parade on the Terrasse of the Danville hotel.

Following this a delicious supper was held at the community center for 100 people, catered by the St. Jean Baptist Society. After the meal a dance with live music was held for the young and old.

PERIOD COSTUMES

Sunday was like all the other days, absolutely beautiful, with all the churches participating in a service at 10 a.m. Bells could be heard just prior to the church services. People were invited to dress in period costumes for the mass with many taking part including the clergy in St. Anne's Catholic Church, which was filled to capacity. The mass was said partly in Latin.

Following the mass all the people were invited to attend an auction which took place at the Donald Roy ball park with mayor Donald Roy buying the first article auctioned off. Prizes for costumes were given out at this time, the first prize going to Mr. Paul-André Bergeron ($100), and the second and third to Mrs. Normand Desharnais and Mrs. Sylvie Picard (commemorative plaques).

A brunch was held after the auction at the community center with 242 people in attendance. The brunch was catered by St. Regis.

A ball tournament, which went on all day, was hosted by the Optimist Club at the Optimist Ballpark.

A slide show was held in the evening at the community center which showed how the beautification process of Danville was achieved over the last few years. Last year Danville came in second in the Sherbrooke region for having the best looking town, and hopefully will come in first this year.

The activities resume on August 9th.

Daniel Johnson Jr. signs the "Golden Book" in the town where his father grew up, as brother Pierre-Marc looks on.

Chatfield—Massé wedding

On July 13, 1985, at 4 p.m., Debra Chatfield and Michel Massé were united in marriage at the United Church of Richmond and Melbourne with Rev. Watson Glover officiating.

The organist, Miss Audrey Millar, accompanied Mrs. Heather Barrie, soloist, in providing the traditional wedding music.

The church was decorated with baskets of flowers, arranged by Mrs. Pollock of Melbourne, Que.

The bride, daughter of Frank Chatfield, of Montreal, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a mid-calf length, ivory coloured gown overlaid with antique lace and in her hair she wore a crown of baby's breath and tiny pink flowers. She also wore a string of pearls which had been her grandmother's and were a gift from her aunt Mrs. Barbara Chatfield. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations, daisies and baby's breath.

The matron of honour, Mrs. Linda Quinn, sister of the bride, was dressed in white linen with a pink sash and accessories and carried a bouquet of pink carnations and daisies.

The bridesmaid, Mrs. Mary-Ellen Houde, cousin of the bride, wore a white eyelet dress dotted with pink flowers and carried a bouquet of white daisies.

The groom, eldest son of Leopold Massé, of Rock Island, Que., wore a three-piece grey suit, white shirt, blue tie and had a white rose boutonniere.

The best man, Tim Whitehouse, of Missisquoi, Ont., and ushers Ryan Quinn, Richmond, and Yvon Massé, Montreal, were attired in grey suits.

After the wedding, the guests drove to the Belleview Golf Club, Melbourne, for the reception which was prepared and served by Mrs. Olga Barrie and helpers. Grace was said by Gordon Knight, uncle of the bride. Everyone enjoyed the delicious meal.

The guest book was attended by Sheila

Quinn and Lynn Chatfield, nieces of the bride. Other nieces and nephews in attendance were Tracy and Catherine Chatfield and Darren and Chad Quinn.

The hall was decorated for the occasion, and following the reception, a dance was held with music supplied by Bert Lang.

The bride's bouquet was caught by her niece Sheila and the garter by John Cathcart.

The bride's travelling outfit was a pink and grey ensemble, with a white carnation corsage. The groom wore grey slacks and coordinating shirt. The happy couple honeymooned in Montreal and Vermont.

Please note that all social notes must be sent to The Record in writing. They will not be accepted by telephone. For all submissions please include a telephone number where you can be reached during the day.

Marriage announced

Mrs. Jim Lynn is pleased to announce the marriage of her daughter, Mary-Elizabeth (Maysenhoelder) to J. Thomas Kempton of Baltimore, Maryland. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Jane Aikman in the United Church, Waterville. A reception for family and friends was held at the home of Mrs. Ann Beaulieu, North Hatley.

Cancer Society: a vital service

The Townshippers' Association wants you to be well informed about the health and social services which exist in your community. When a crisis arises, it is important to be aware of the choices available, and who to contact for assistance. In this column, we would like to share with you information on the Canadian Cancer Society, a vital service for cancer patients and the general public.

PREVENTING CANCER

One of the priorities of the Canadian Cancer Society is to educate the public on preventing cancer. There exist many different theories on the causes of cancer, but one thing is almost certain: many forms of cancer could be avoided. Some medical authorities state that as much as 80% of all cancers today could have been prevented. You can protect yourself against cancer of the throat, lungs and mouth if you abstain from smoking. The Canadian Cancer Society reminds all smokers that it is never too late to break the habit!

Contrary to popular belief, it is not true that pain is an indication of cancer, therefore it is important to see your doctor when you notice any significant changes in your health. The Canadian Cancer Society recommends that all Canadians undergo an annual medical examination. Early diagnosis of the disease is still the best preventative method available, as due to scientific progress in Canada, nearly half of all diagnosed cancers are now curable.

THE CANADIAN CANCER SOCIETY

Composed of dedicated volunteers in all communities, the Canadian Cancer Society offers services to cancer patients, informs the public about the newest developments in cancer research and raises funds for future research. Services to patients include having hospital beds, comfort mattresses and numerous aids available. As well, a fund has been set up to help defray costs for low income patients who must travel great distances for radiation treatments.

FUNDRAISING

During the month of April, volunteers throughout Canada organize door to door fundraising campaigns in order to finance scientific research. When you make a contribution to the Canadian Cancer Society, 52% of your money goes to research, 19% goes to patient-related costs and the remainder is spent on publicity and administrative costs. Last year, over $4 million went towards cancer research projects in Canada. Several important discoveries have been made by Canadian scientists, such as the use of cobalt and vineblastine in the treatment of cancer.

INFORMATION SESSIONS IN WATERLOO

Recently it has come to our attention that the Cancer Society in Waterloo holds monthly information sessions on cancer. Presently there is little demand to have these sessions in English but, if interest is shown, the Canadian Cancer Society would be pleased to organize a series in English. Other communities might also be interested in requesting this service.

Publicity is a major part of educating the public about what is going on within their community. Waterloo is interested in finding a bilingual volunteer who would help publicize events concerning the Canadian Cancer Society. If you are interested in helping out please call Mrs. Milaenen at (514) 539-2726 or contact the Waterloo Volunteer Centre at (514) 539-2395. Perhaps your community needs help to inform the English-speaking population about the Canadian Cancer Society. If you would like to find out who your representative is, or make a donation, or volunteer your services please contact your nearest Canadian Cancer Society. Their offices are located at:

Serious bargaining taking place, but 2nd baseball strike continues

NEW YORK (AP) — The first day of no major league baseball games also produced the first serious bargaining.

Now, negotiators for players and owners are looking to the second day for clues as to how long the second baseball strike in four years will last.

"We are hung up still," said Don Fehr, head of the players association. "If the matter proceeds very long, the players won't be willing to settle for what they would have settled for earlier."

The strike wiped out all 13 games Tuesday, and today's 12-game schedule was in equal jeopardy. Already, some players have cleaned out their lockers and begun to scatter.

But Fehr and Lee MacPhail, chief of the owners' Player Relations Committee, scheduled another negotiating session for 9:30 a.m. EDT today. And both indicated they were more concerned about salvaging the rest of the season than losing a day or two worth of games that could conceivably be made up later.

The idea, they said, was to avoid a repeat of 1981, when a strike eliminated seven weeks of play. "The object now is to find a way to end it as fast as we can," Fehr said.

Fehr and MacPhail squared off for about 10 hours during four separate meetings Tuesday — by far the most intensive bargaining since both sides started meeting nine months ago.

'SOME PROGRESS'
"Lee expressed the opinion that they had made some progress, not overwhelming but some progress, especially in the area of salary arbitration and the benefit plan," Bob Fishel, a spokesman for MacPhail, said after Tuesday's final meeting ended around 11 p.m.

"I think there's an attempt being made, but we ought not to minimize where we are, and where we are we've got a strike," a tired Fehr said shortly before midnight.

All day the central issue remained salary structure, particularly the rules governing salary arbitration. On that issue, "at the moment, I don't see a way out," Fehr said during the evening. "We've tried every avenue."

Ballard Smith, president of San Diego Padres, said management was prepared "to lose the rest of the season" rather than abandon its position on the issue.

The two top negotiators began Tuesday with an 8:45 a.m. meeting, one that was prompted by the urging of commissioner Peter Ueberroth. The meeting was supposed to be an "informal" one and neither side said it expected to present any new proposals.

"It could all fall apart in two minutes or it could last all night," MacPhail said before it started.

As it turned out, that first meeting lasted about three hours and started players, owners and team officials on a day-long seesaw.

Kent Tekulve of Philadelphia, the National League player representative, "heard on the radio around 5 or 5:30" that the Phillies' game at home against Pittsburgh was not going to be played, and took a train to union headquarters in New York; Pat Gillick, vice-president of Toronto Blue Jays, asked Baltimore Orioles manager Earl Weaver whether the teams could move back their starting time from 7:35 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. in case of a late settlement; Houston Astros owner John McMullen, a member of the PRC executive committee, said during the afternoon that he thought the chances of playing games Wednesday had improved from "90-10 against" the day before to "50-50."

Neither Fehr nor MacPhail, however, expressed that kind of optimism during the day.

A settlement seemed to hinge on salary arbitration procedure, even though the two sides insisted the issue of the owners' yearly payment to the players' pension fund was also important.

The owners would like to increase from two years to three the amount of time before a player can file for salary arbitration, and would also like to limit any arbitrator's award to double a player's current salary. The players insist on no changes in the rules.

In 1981, the players struck for 50 days over the issue of free-agent compensation.

Playing cards, munching hamburgers, reading mail - baseball '85

MONTREAL (CP) — A little advice from a former teammate may help pitcher Bryn Smith endure the baseball strike better than some of his Montreal Expos teammates.

"Can I afford a long strike?" Smith responded to a question from a reporter. "I've been setting aside some money for it."

The New York Mets were supposed to be the Expos' opponents at the Olympic Stadium but the players union went on strike about three hours before game time Tuesday, shutting down major league baseball.

While the Mets checked out of a downtown hotel and headed to the airport for a flight to New York, some of the Expos gathered in their clubhouse.

They played cards and read their mail. Others munched on hamburgers. A few cleaned out their lockers, but some didn't bother.

Smith recalled spring training when teammate Steve Rogers told him to save his money because a strike was possible. The Expos released Rogers earlier this year but he is still on salary and he gets paid regardless of the strike.

Rogers refused to discuss his situation when reached at his home in Oklahoma.

"This is a weird feeling," said Smith. "I've never had a summer vacation since I was in high school ... and I've never walked off the job before in my life."

FANS' MOOD UGLY

While Smith seemed to take things in stride, the mood of die-hard baseball fans in Montreal was ugly.

Necia Williams, a self-professed baseball addict who says she has seen every Expos game on television or at the Olympic Stadium in seven years, vowed she would never go to the Big O again.

"Summer is baseball and under no circumstances should they forget that they're playing for us, for the fans," she said.

Another fan, Agathe Cere, said the strike will come back to haunt the baseball players and owners.

"They're cutting their own throats," said Cere.

Terry Chadwick was equally unimpressed.

The players are "betraying us — and all for a lousy few bucks."

While Smith may have saved some money, other Expos did not and they are worried.

Herman Winningham, a rookie center fielder, said he will hang around Montreal for a little while and then head to South Carolina to hunt deer with his brother.

"If it goes on for a long time, I'll get a job. I always find something," he said. "I've worked in warehouses ... But it'll be a long winter if they don't come to a settlement."

NO BIRTHDAY CAKE

Catcher Steve Nicosia, who brought his two children to the clubhouse, was depressed about the situation.

"I figure if they're going to go without eating they should at least know what's going on," said Nicosia, who turned 30 on Monday.

"I'm not allowed to have a cake until we go back to work."

Andre Dawson said he will stay in Montreal until the end of the week before heading to his home in Florida.

"I'll work at home, take care of my legs," he said.

Jeff Reardon was another Expo planning to hang around for a few days before leaving for a while. But Reardon, who has the most saves of any relief pitcher in the majors with 28, is unhappy about the strike.

"This is just my luck, to have this happen during my best season," said Reardon.

Keith Hernandez, the Mets first baseman and player representative, said he wasn't sure whether his teammates would remain in New York or disperse to their home towns.

"But I have all their numbers, both in New York and in their home towns," he said.

One Met who didn't accompany the team back to New York was catcher Gary Carter, a former Expo who is still trying to sell his home in Montreal.

Navratilova says she's number one

By Mike Rutsey

TORONTO (CP) — Martina Navratilova, who has shown little mercy on her fellow competitors on the women's tennis tour, now wants to have it out with the Women's Tennis Association computer in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla.

Navratilova believes the computer is showing her no respect, no respect at all.

The computer says that she's No. 2 this week and Chris Evert Lloyd is No. 1. No way, says Navratilova who held the No. 1 ranking from June of 1982 until Lloyd's victory in this year's French Open.

"Ask the players who's No. 1, they'll tell you," Navratilova said after she returned from a month-long vacation to score an easy 6-1, 6-2 second-round victory over Japan's Etsuko Inoue in the $365,000 Player's Challenge tennis championships Tuesday night.

"If you look at the record just for the past 12 months, I've won 14 of 18 tournaments and Chris has won eight out of 16," the Czechoslovak-born American said. "She's lost eight matches, I've lost four."

"Head-to-head this year I'm 3-2.

So I do have a better record."

NOT SOUR GRAPES

Navratilova, who went on a furlough following her recent Wimbledon triumph, said it isn't a case of sour grapes.

"I've been complaining about it (computer rankings) for two years when I was number one," she explained. "Now when I say something they'll say, 'Now you're bitching because you're number two.'"

"But that's not it at all. I've been talking about it for a long time."

Against Inoue, she flashed her usual brilliance and needed just 45 minutes to win the match.

"It's nice to play somebody who hits a nice, straight ball, comes in some and stays back some," Navratilova said. "She wasn't able to hit the ball that hard and doesn't have much spin on it."

In the only other second-round match, No. 7 Gabriela Sabatini, the 15-year-old wonder from Argentina, defeated Leigh Thompson of the United States, 7-5, 6-0.

BLACKWOOD OUT

Canada's hopes in the singles draw, meanwhile, are reduced to Jane Young, the national champion from Waterloo, Ont., who defeated Marjorie Blackwood of North Delta, B.C., 6-4, 6-2, and No. 8 Carling Bassett of Toronto, who meets her first opponent tonight when she faces American Terry Phelps.

Bassett and Lloyd were unsuspectable in their first appearance in the tournament as the duo was ousted from the doubles competition in the first round by the Argentine team of Mercedes Paz and Adriana Villagrán 3-6, 6-4, 7-5.

Jill Hetherington of Peterborough, Ont., the other Canadian in the singles draw, was bounced 7-6 (7-2), 6-4 by No. 10 Bettina Bunge of Monte Carlo.

Gigi Fernandez of the U.S., seeded 13th, became the second seed to fall when she lost to the tough West German Eva Pfaff 6-4, 6-1.

Other top seeds to see action today in second-round play include Lloyd, who plays fellow American Tina Mochizuki; No. 3 Hana Mandlikova who plays Rosalyn Fairbank of South Africa; No. 4 Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia who plays compatriot Iva Budarova and Kohde-Kilsch, the fifth seed who will face Sabrina Goleis of Yugoslavia.

National basketball tourney starts in Sherbrooke today!

The Canadian Junior Men's Basketball Championships get underway today (Wednesday) at the Collège de Sherbrooke. The Quebec team, pictured above and coached by Peter 'Doc' Ryan and Varouj Gurunlian, play at 1:00 this afternoon against Saskatchewan, and at 7:30 this evening against Prince Edward Island. Other matches scheduled today: Alberta vs. Newfoundland (9:00 a.m.); Manitoba vs. Nova Scotia and B.C. vs. P.E.I. (11:00 a.m.); Ontario vs. Alberta (3:00 p.m.); New Brunswick vs. B.C. and Newfoundland vs. Manitoba (5:30 p.m.).

Cyclist Lovell wants out of wheelchair

By Eaton Howitt

TORONTO (CP) — Jocelyn Lovell is determined to get rid of his wheelchair. But if he fails, he hopes others with spinal cord injuries might someday be successful.

Lovell, formerly a world-renowned cyclist, was injured two years ago when he was struck by a truck while training near Milton, west of Toronto. He was near death for several weeks at Sunnybrook Medical Centre.

"The media first reported I was hit by a garbage truck, but I've got more class than that," said Lovell, who held 48 Canadian championships and won gold medals at Commonwealth and Pan-American games as well as being named Canada's top male athlete in 1975. "It was a dump truck."

However, his speech Tuesday at a reception for the Sports Hall of Fame — into which he will be inducted Aug. 23 — was not all fun and laughs.

Lovell said that in the early days of his recovery when he was quite depressed, his wife Sylvia Burka-Lovell, a former world speed skating champion and also a world-class cyclist, said to him: "Maybe this was done for a reason."

"I looked at her and said: 'What in God's name could be the reason for something like this?' And she replied: 'You may be the person who finds a cure for spinal cord injury.'"

DOES HIS BEST

Lovell, 35, intends to do his best to make this happen. He now runs the Jocelyn Lovell Foundation, a registered Canadian charity aimed at rehabilitating people with spinal cord injuries.

Most of his determination for the project comes from the disappointment he felt when he was told after the accident that he would have to get used to the wheelchair he would be in for the rest of his life.

"You're not taught cure, just that you're in a wheelchair and get on with it," he said. "The research this foundation is doing is to find a cure.

"You may be thinking, look at him in his nice suit, and looking so well. I must admit it helps if you are a Jocelyn Lovell. This $6,000 wheelchair I could get because of help from others and all the other expensive things I need and have."

"But I tell you I hate being in a wheelchair, that's what bugs me. I cry a lot inside and I want out of this wheelchair."

At the reception Tuesday, Lovell was presented with a portrait of himself and a cheque for $25,000 for the foundation.

The painting and cheque were presented to him by the Jackman Foundation, an agency which distributes funds to be used by registered charities.

Provincial track meet at U de S

SHERBROOKE — The third annual Provincial Outdoor Track and Field Championships will be held at the Université de Sherbrooke this weekend (August 10 and 11).

The competition, which is for cadet and juvenile classes (17 years old and under) is expected to attract over 500 young athletes from various clubs across Quebec, as well as Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Ontario.

The first event begins at 10:00 a.m. on Saturday, while the last event is scheduled for around 3:30 p.m. on Sunday.

Strike coming in NHL as well?

TORONTO (CP) — The deadline for a new collective bargaining agreement in the National Hockey League is one year away but the chances of an amicable agreement between owners and players are already diminishing, players' representative Alan Eagleson said Tuesday.

Eagleson, executive director of the NHL Players Association, told members of the association executive Tuesday he sees no chance of reaching a new agreement until the conclusion of the 1985-86 season.

Eagleson also said he had noticed a tendency by owners to act against the spirit of the existing agreement, which ends with the 1985-86 season.

"Things we used to be able to solve with a telephone call are now taking six or seven months to resolve," Eagleson said. "Everything is being shoved off to lawyers."

"There is also a concerted effort by general managers to offer every player a two-way contract. Players are being offered termination contracts by registered mail, then they send it back by registered mail and the owners say, 'Sorry, it has to be delivered personally.'"

"Then they claim that they have no obligations at all. It's immoral."

TARGET TRAINING CAMPS

Should a strike develop, Eagleson said it would happen during training camp next year. Owners would suffer financially from a pre-season strike because they charge full price for exhibition games while only paying the players training camp wages and expenses.

The players had originally decided to meet among themselves before talking with owners to discuss a new collective agreement. But Eagleson said the owners' response to earlier player proposals had been so poor the players had decided to meet again today and then return home.

Eagleson said the players want an improvement in the compensation system and a significant increase in the owners' contribution to a post-career benefits package.

INCREASE DEMANDS

Eagleson warned the players would upgrade their demands if the owners continued to be unyielding.

"If we're going to play hardball, we might as well say we're going for total free agency," he said. "The owners can be just as hard and maybe by next Sept. 14, they'll realize we're not kidding."

He said the major source of disagreement between the two sides is compensation agreement.

"There was no offer of change in the equalization and compensation system," Eagleson said of the owners' offer.

Mansonville Golden Age Club enjoys many activities

MANSONVILLE (JJ) — Golden Age Club members, eighteen to be exact, enjoyed a bus trip to Compton and Eaton Corner on Thursday, July 25.

At Compton, we visited the Louis S. St-Laurent National Historic Park, where we were warmly greeted by park guides.

The park commemorates the life and work of our former Prime Minister, the R.H. Louis S. St-Laurent (1948-1957).

We visited the house where he was born and where his sister Laura lived until 1969.

The store had been operated in the late 1800's by his father. It was fully stocked with groceries and staples, a stove and chairs in a circle around. Here the men did their shopping, swapped stories, news of the day and talked politics, also Mr. St-Laurent read their letters for them, as he read in both French and English, as well as spoke both languages. Not many were as well educated in these early days.

Upon the father's death, one of the Prime Minister's brothers took over the running of the store, which was in full operation until 1969.

In the warehouse, an audio-visual presentation guides you back through the life and times of St-Laurent. This is well presented and well worth a visit. I might add that it's ideal for those not able to do a lot of walking.

We bid adieu, thanked our guides and were on our way to Eaton Corner to visit the Compton County Museum. Here again, friendly guides greeted us and made our visit a most interesting and pleasant one.

We saw the Eaton Academy which contains a collection of local history and happenings. Indian Relics, memorabilia from the first Gaelic settlers, home furnishings, from bygone days — some of these items were housed in the Congregational Church.

Both buildings proved to be very interesting, thanks to our genial hosts.

The drive itself from our area to Compton and Eaton Corner and back to Lennoxville and Sherbrooke was most restful and enjoyable, seeing another part of our beautiful Eastern Townships.

In the afternoon we returned to Sherbrooke where we did some shopping at the Carrefour de l'Estrie, then home, with another trip of pleasant memories to store away.

Evans' Family descendants hold their first reunion

SAWYERVILLE — Dreams do come true. Gordon Hodge and Elsie Shaughnessy had a dream of having a Family reunion with as many of Jennie and Annie Evans' descendants attend at possible. Two years ago they decided to do something about it and put some action into their dream.

With Gordon living so far away in Louisiana, it was difficult for him to get in touch with all his family members, so with the help of his mother, Ernestine (Evans) Hodge, they contacted the members of their family. Elsie contacted her brothers and sisters, the children of Annie (Evans) Dawson, also the only daughter of Florence (Evans) King.

The dream finally became a reality when families began to arrive at the property of Burton McConnell, the former Billy Graham Campgrounds. Eleven of Kenneth and Annie Dawson's 12 children were able to attend, 29 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren. Seven of Herbert and Ernestine Hodge's eight children, 21 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. Florence and Alden King's only daughter and two grandchildren. Total of 92 descendants of Henry and Jennie Evans, and of course not forgetting all the guys and gals who have married into the family, this makes a total of 118!

All were delighted to have two first cousins of the three sisters join them, Freda (Steer) Daigneault of Lennoxville and Ernest Evans and wife Ellen, of East Hebron, N.H., as well as some second cousins from this area.

Families arrived from the West, North, and South. Travelling the longest distance were Gordon and Brenda Hodge, son Todd and daughter-in-law Lynn of Bossier City, Louisiana, and son Scott of Adak, Alaska, Joan (King) Fisher and husband Wayne and children, Natalie and Wade of Fernie, B.C. and Ed Dawson and daughter Bonnie, Yarrow, B.C. Others attending came from Windsor, Hamilton, Burlington, Smithville, Kitchener, Milton, Rexdale, Toronto, Ottawa, Simcoe, Cambridge and Smiths Falls, Ont., East Hebron, N.H. and Goshen, Mass., Valleyfield, Montreal, Ville La Salle and Waterloo, Que., as well as many families from surrounding areas.

Each evening was spent around a campfire with music, singing and much reminiscing. One evening Gordon and Suzanne dedicated a special song to the three Evans' sisters, Annie, Ernestine and Florence. "I wouldn't change you if I could". They did a beautiful job and all enjoyed it thoroughly, especially the three ladies.

Another evening we were treated to a nice display of fireworks provided by Mike and May Hodge. It was great having so many friends drop in to say hello. A total of 214 signed the guest book.

The oldest member of the family was Annie Dawson, 76, and the youngest, her great-grandson, Adam Dingman, 14 months.

A second reunion is planned for July 1988, and will be known as the Evidahoki reunion, Evans, Dawson, Hodge and King. The credit goes to Gordon for naming our group.

After a week together, our reunion came to an end, all agreeing it was a beautiful dream come true.

Golden Age Club meets

KNOWLTON — On July 8 a bus load of 44 members left Knowlton at 8 a.m. to tour the Granite Quarry at Barre, Vermont. A stop was made for coffee at Howard Johnson's in Burlington, and then on to the granite location just outside Barre. All boarded the train and toured the route in this manner, while a narrator explained the formation of the granite and how it was cut. Lunch was enjoyed at the Hilltop Restaurant. The next stop was at a Burlington Shopping Centre. Our dinner stop was at a near-by Howard Johnson's where service and food was good, and then on to arrive home at 9:30 p.m.

The meeting of July 11 was attended by 44 members who enjoyed the customary game of 500. Prize winners: Ladies (1) Eva Carrara (4460); (2) Marjorie Osborne (3780). Gents: (1) John Gibbon (3300); (2) Norman Jones (2660).

Door prize: Vivian Beakes, Lucille Ashton, Mrs. Schneider, Kathy Gorham, Lillian Godefroy, Norma Owens, Ernest Ladd, Nelson Langevin, David Mason, Mary Pille, Guy Booth, Eva Westcott, Grayson Cousins, Marie Gravel, Hildred Gibbon, Elvia Johnson, Ardell Mason.

Another meeting with an attendance of 44 members took place in the Legion Hall on Thursday, July 18, with ten tables of 500, and one game table.

Top scorers in 500: Ladies (1) Irene Boyce (4400), (2) Ardell Mason (4140). Gents: (1) John Gibbon (4690), (2) David Mason (3920).

Door prizes: Trixie Ladd, Rose Benoit, Mrs. Schneider, Suzanne Quilliams, Joyce Jones, Emilie Boucher, Hildred Gibbon, Bernadette Foster, Ernest Ladd, Nelson Langevin, Lee Lawruk, Evelyn Potter, Kathy Graham, Friedel Jaquusch, Marguerite Fortin, Lucille Ashton, Lillian Godefroy, Elvia Johnson, Helen Campbell, Eva Westcott, and Janet Squires.

Attendance at the meeting on July 25, numbered 48. The 500 prize winners: Ladies (1) Elsie Royea (4200); (2) Ardell Mason (4000). Gents (1) A.G. Morfee (4040), (2) John Gibbon (3000).

Door prizes went to Trixie Ladd, Marguerite Fortin, Elvia Johnson, Friedel Jaquusch, Lillian Godefroy, Jeanette Egli, Preston Crittenden, Janet Squires, Eva Westcott, Norma Owens, Hilda Luce, Marion Crittenden, Ebba Parkes, Lillian Barber, John Syberg, Harold Little, Lillian Brown, Evelyn Potter.

A sympathy card was sent to Syd and Reba DeSolla on the tragic death of Mr. DeSolla's brother Peter.

All meetings opened with a warm welcome from president Elsie Royea, and the pleasant afternoons came to a close with tea and social hour.

Your Birthday

Aug. 8, 1985

Stronger than usual ambitions will be aroused within you in the year ahead. It's OK to drive yourself hard to get what you want, but also try to take time to smell the roses.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It's best to count to 10 today before responding angrily to the boss. Bear in mind that she or she might not be right, but he or she is still the boss. Major changes are ahead for Leos in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The results of events are likely to turn out as you envision them today. If you picture yourself as a loser, don't expect a trophy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Others may try to impose upon you today. Keep your guard up, even if you're with a close pal who is normally reticent about requesting favors.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Objectives may not be achieved today if you and your mate are not in complete harmony. Be sure both of you are tuned into the same wavelength.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This could be the wrong day for you to attempt a do-it-yourself project where you lack expertise. Bent nails and frayed tempers may be all you produce.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't be too openhanded today and lend something to another that isn't yours without first consulting the owner. You'll be held accountable for damages.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's imperative that your mate have an input into decisions today that affect the family. His or her thoughts could correct flaws you'll overlook.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be careful today that you do not ask others to do things you wouldn't choose to do if the roles were reversed. Put yourself in their place.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Subdue temptations today to take long-shot financial risks. If you're heading for the track or bingo parlor, don't carry more than you can afford to lose.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Others may find you difficult to comprehend today in situations where you are in a position of authority. You might ask for one thing but expect something else.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In a conversation with another today, you might find the perfect opening to repeat something told to you in confidence. Don't betray a trust.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Have fun and enjoy yourself today, but try to adhere to your budget. If you dip into funds you've earmarked for other purposes, they'll be hard to replace.

An eastern route to the north

By James Jacoby

Look how the lack of bidding methods propelled South into a rather mediocre slam contract. The two-diamond response by North was temporary and artificial. After two hearts by South, a bid of three clubs by North would also have been artificial, denying any significant high cards. In tournament parlance, this is called the "double negative." Because three diamonds did express values in the diamond suit, South threw caution to the winds and bid six hearts. He might have been better advised to try for slam by bidding five hearts. In this auction, with South holding the strong hand, he could hardly be asking for a black suit control. Instead, five hearts logically would be asking, "Partner, how good are your diamonds?" North might still have bid six.

Even bad contracts must be played out, and declarer gave himself his best chance. He won the spade king, drew trumps in four rounds, and played the A-K of clubs. Next he led a diamond to dummy. West signaled even distribution with the nine and East properly held off. Declarer played a club from dummy and trumped it. That was one key play. Now came another: He played the ace of spades, making West's queen a winner. Finally the second diamond was played. East won but had nothing left to play but another diamond, allowing South to ditch his losing spade and make the contract.

Prosperity Rebekah Lodge 32 welcomes President

COWANSVILLE — The regular meeting of Prosperity Rebekah Lodge No. 32 met in the Fraternal Hall on July 15 at 8:15 p.m. Lodge opened in form with Sister Mabel Ingalls, N.G. and Sister Eileen Pettes, V.G. Sister Mabel welcomed all by reading a poem. There were 15 officers, five supporters and 17 Past Noble Grands who answered the roll call.

Sister Mabel asked Sister Donna to introduce the elective officers, who were Brother Donald Macmillan, Grand Patriarch of the Grand Encampment of Quebec, Brother Harry Redmile G. Rep. of the Gr. Enc. of Quebec, Sister Roberta Macmillan, P.P., and I.A.R.A. Rep. of the Rebekah Assembly, Sister Thelma Picken, Warden of the R.A., Brother Douglas McClay, Gr. Junior Warden of the Gr. Enc., Sister Laura Burnham, Vice-Pres. of the R.A. and Sister Margaret Sanborn, Treasurer of the R.A. They were given the honors. The N.G. read a poem and they were then seated.

Sister Irene Williams, P.P. introduced the President of the R.A. Sister Marilyn Adams, who was also given the Honors and the N.G. read another poem. She was escorted to the dais where Sister Mabel presented her with a wristlet corsage of yellow roses.

Communications read by Sister Donna Luce, Secretary, was a thank-you from Brother Marcel Beaulieu, Sister Marion White of Orillia, Ont., had sent dues and a donation and from Wilhelmina Lodge No. 23 notifying us they still had cookbooks for sale, excerpts from the Bulletin and about International Night to be celebrated July 20 at Highgate, Vt.

Sister Isabella Beattie reported that our Chicken Pie supper would be on October 20, instead of Oct. 6, as previously reported.

Under new business, a donation will be sent to the United Church for the use of their hall for our Flea Market.

Under Good of the Order Sisters put on a Puppet Show pertaining to the President's program, which proved very amusing. The puppets also sang "Let There be Peace on Earth", the President's song.

After lodge reconvened, Sister Roberta Macmillan read a list concerning the special awards the Sovereign Grand Lodge were handing out this year. She also mentioned that the International Rebekah News was a good paper to subscribe to. At this time, the Grand Patriarch Donald Macmillan spoke a few words, saying how he had enjoyed the meeting and the floor work, and congratulated Sister Mabel for conducting her meeting without a ritual. He brought greetings from the Grand Encampment, his own personal greetings and thanked the lodge for all courtesies.

The President, Sister Marilyn Adams then spoke and also congratulated Sister Mabel and said how she had enjoyed the floor work. She brought greetings from the Rebekah Assembly of Quebec and her own personal greetings and also thanked the lodge for all courtesies and for the owl plaque that Sister Mabel had presented to her.

A silver collection was taken, after which lodge closed in form and retired to the dining-hall where the walls had Sister Marilyn's watchwords inscribed on them. Green and pink candles adorned the tables with pink and green streamers and vases of yellow roses. Lunch consisted of sandwiches, pickles, ice-cream, strawberries and iced tea.

Once again the President thanked Prosperity on behalf of all the guests for a memorable evening. She presented Sister Mabel with her certificate of perfection. She was given a round of applause, which ended another night of fellowship.
