Ormstown Locals

Bright sunshine and cool breezes favored the Garden Club for their drive on Wednesday, August 30th. They accepted an invitation to attend the Flower Show of the Montreal West Horticultural Society. This show is held in the City Hall and there was a great display of plants, cut flowers, vegetables and some fruits. A unique feature was the children's bouquets of wild flowers. The grounds are well worth visiting, being artistically planted with shrubs and flowers. Before leaving the building the club members were entertained to tea in the "Salada" tea room.

Then a visit was made to the 1st prize garden belonging to Mr. Vernon, after which there was a drive through the principal streets to see other beautiful homes with their lawns, gardens and shrubbery.

The picnic lunch was enjoyed at Stoney Point, a picturesque spot on the banks of the river and then all returned homeward feeling that the day had been most profitable and entertaining.

Ste. Martine Agricultural School

NEW STE. MARTINE AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL OFFICIALLY OPENED

Mgr. J. A. Langlois, Bishop of Valleyfield, Presided at Religious Ceremony. Hon. Honoré Mercier, Minister of Lands and Forests, and Hon. Adelard Godbout, Minister of Agriculture, Two of Speakers

P. N. APRIL, DIRECTOR, PRESIDED AT MEETING

Members of Parliament, Legislature, Representatives of Agricultural Colleges, Clergy, Swell Attendance to Approximately Three Thousand Persons

The official opening of the new Ecole Moyenne d'Agriculture at Ste. Martine took place on Sunday afternoon and attracted nearly 3000 people mostly from the counties of Chateauguay, Huntingdon and Beauharnois but as well numerous delegations from the counties of Laprairie, Napierville, St. Johns and Iberville. The diocese of Valleyfield was represented by its Bishop and approximately 125 members of the clergy.

The new school is unique in the province. It is an intermediate agricultural school, where sons of farmers aged 17 years and over will be given a two year course which will not interfere unduly with their work at home. The school term will open in November and close in May.

Associated with the school is a farm of 160 acres where practical work will be done, while in the school rooms the theory of farming, problems of marketing and education in wood work and in repairing agricultural machinery will be given. There will be no degree at the close of the term, for the intention is that the pupils return to their father's farms, and there show the benefit of their education by practical work. This is in contrast to the work of the agricultural colleges such as Oka, Macdonald and Ste. Anne de la Pocatiere, where the courses lead to degrees and the agricultural teaching profession, and where a high standard of education is required for entry. This new school is so designed as to make it possible for the average farmer's boy of 17 to qualify for admission.

There is another agricultural intermediate school in the profession, that at Rimouski, but it is not a government-owned school, being part of the seminary of Rimouski establishment, whereas the new school here is entirely government-owned, and operated. Its head is Nolasque April, agronomist of note of this region. A feature of the school is that the furniture was made in the Montreal Technical School under the personal direction of Jean Marie Gauvreau, head of the wood work section of the technical school. Much praise was bestowed by the visitors upon this equipment.

The blessing of the institution was given by His Lordship Mgr. J. A. Langlois, Bishop of Valleyfield, who was assisted in this ceremony by Mgr. J. C. Allard, chaplain of the new college, and Canon Bissonnette, parish priest of Ste. Martine. Following the religious ceremony the officials repaired to the balcony off the first floor where the addresses were given.

Those noted in seats of honour were Mgr. Langlois; Hon. Honoré Mercier, Minister of Lands and Forests, and Mrs. Mercier; Hon. Adelard Godbout, Minister of Agriculture, and Mrs. Godbout; Mgr. G. M. LePailleur, Mgr. J. C. Allard; Antonio Grenier, Deputy-Minister of Agriculture, and Mrs. Grenier; Rev. Elie Auclair,

by Mrs. W. L. Carr

Many expressions of appreciation were heard in regard to the W. I. meeting. One woman in referring to the uplifhting character of the addresses and the kindly reception accorded everyone by Mr. and Mrs. Rowat, said it was just such things that were needed to give one inspiration and courage to go on in these times. When you know, as I did, that this woman had risen at three o'clock that morning and taken her butter, eggs, vegetables, etc., to an open city market for sale and then returned in good time, eager for the meeting, it is gratifying to think that such compelling interest was so completely satisfied.

Mr. and Mrs. Ashley Elder, Mr. Chas. Gordon and Miss Marjory Carr, Asst. Supt. of Sherbrooke Hospital, were guests over the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Smellie. The Misses Kate and Addie Caldwell of Malone were also Sunday visitors at the Smellie home.

Mr. W. L. Carr and Mr. W. E. Lefebvre left Tuesday for Quebec City where they will attend the Provincial Exhibition, and motor on to Lake St. John District.

The little boy was seeing the sea for the first time. He gazed at it earnestly for a while and then, turning to his mother, remarked gravely: "I 'spects it's the fishes that make it wobble."

SEDAN STOLEN IN HUNTINGDON

Owner Looking on When Whippet Was Removed From in Front of Bank of Commerce Building

A car was stolen from in front of the Canadian Bank of Commerce on Wednesday night and no trace of it has as yet been found.

Eddie Goodfellow came to Huntingdon on Wednesday night and as was often customary parked his Whippet 6 sedan in front of the Bank of Commerce building leaving the key in the car. He went over to C. H. Lamb's store where he spent some time talking to friends. While standing there he noticed someone drive away with his car but thinking that it was one of his sisters he paid no further attention to the matter until he later saw his two sisters. Then thinking that it might have been a cousin who took the car he went in search of him but found that he had not seen it. He then realized that the car had been stolen.

A search was immediately undertaken for the stolen car but so far all efforts have been unsuccessful to locate it or secure any information as to the identity of the robbers.

The Daily Battle

The world has no room for cowards. We must all be ready somehow to toil, to suffer, to die. And yours is not the less noble because no drum beats before you when you go out into your daily battlefields, and no crowd shouts about your coming when you return from your daily victory or defeat.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Chateauguay Heights Bowling Tournament Won by Valleyfield

J. W. Stark of Huntingdon Wins Consolation Games Over Outremont—16 Tables Participate in Progressive Bridge—Ladies Serve Delicious Supper in New Club House to Participants in Bowling and Tennis Tournaments

The Chateauguay Bowling Club is fortunate in having a handful of men who are very much financially interested in the welfare of their Bowling Club. For this club an excellent club house has been erected providing spacious quarters.

To mark the official opening of the new club house a bowling bonspiel was arranged for on Saturday. Representative teams were sent from Valleyfield, Ormstown, Huntingdon, Verdun, Outremont and Montreal West. During the afternoon and evening the greens were kept busy. In the final game Eben F. Potter of Valleyfield won over J. Buttress, also of Valleyfield. Consolation games were played, and in this competition J. W. Stark of Huntingdon won over R. W. Weir of Outremont in the finals.

At the supper hour the ladies served a delicious supper in the club house to the bowlers, their wives and to the young men and young ladies who participated in the tennis tournament.

During the evening the dining tables gave place to small tables at which a progressive bridge was inaugurated, 16 tables participating. Around 11 o'clock Miss Gall distributed the prizes: Ladies, 1st to Mrs. J. Gilmour, 2nd to Mrs. P. G. Dance, 3rd to Mrs. M. Brady; Gents, 1st to Mr. P. G. Dance, 2nd to Mr. F. C. Orr, 3rd to Mr. Bert Warren.

Until midnight dancing was the order of the programme. The singing of Auld Lang Syne brought the happy day to a successful close. Huntingdon, Wednesday, Sept. 6th, 1933

Dundee Extends Educational Classes Previous to 1812, the population of what is now known as the Municipality of Dundee was inhabited by a few American families. In 1816 a number of Scottish arrived at Glengarry. The people learning that they could acquire farm lands from the Indians across the river at Dundee, made the journey. Seven families acquired land early in 1817 in that portion of the municipality known as the Isle of Skye. The settlers at that time called the place "New Skye" as they themselves came from the Isle of Skye in Scotland.

Gaelic was the common tongue spoken by the settlers, yet they had a keen desire to learn English. Each winter these settlers would make it a point to make one trip to Montreal. To make this trip English was an asset, the same as we regard being able to speak the French language today. To teach the rising generation English, Patrick McGregor was the first teacher engaged for that purpose in Dundee. According to Sellar's History he was crude as to disgust his scholars with learning, of which he had little to impart. He moved about from house to house teaching the children. The second teacher was one Alex. Crawford, who was sadly given to drink. The third teacher was successful in having a shanty erected on McDonald's Point in which to teach. This teacher was Duncan Campbell. After teaching here for some little time the first school house was erected a little further west.

Today Dundee boasts a modern consolidated school. The farmers of Dundee in the early days acquired their farms from the Indians through lease. The lease for 100 acre farm would be $5 a year for 99 years. Dundee was then referred to as the "Indian Reservation of Kintail." Though Dundee is still located near an Indian Reservation, it is not akin to it in any respect. The Township of Dundee is one of the most fertile of the Beauharnois District. Its inhabitants are people who have prospered, not alone by the sweat of the brow, but by being keen farmers who have farmed their lands with intelligence. The farmers of Dundee and their wives to a very considerable extent have attended Huntingdon Academy in its balmy days. They saw what advancement was to be gained through attending the higher grades of the day school at Huntingdon and Fort Covington, so they set themselves to have a consolidated school right in Dundee where every boy and girl might get that very same opportunity at home.

Dundee opened its new Consolidated School in 1928. It has operated with apparent success, and now that the scholars have advanced in their every day education to a point where Grade 11 is essential, it is gratifying and indicates progressiveness to see that this grade is being provided.

Dundee Consolidated School with its eleven grades and teachers, not the type of the three pioneers we have referred to, will forge ahead. Dundee has a population that has shown unanimity time and again, and the forming of the Consolidated School with eleven grades is just one more case where such ideals and courage are exemplified.

The English population of the Municipality of Dundee now stands at 280. The entire population stands at 630. The English-speaking population hope to continue living in this cherished municipality, and what could cause its populace to dwindle faster than the lack of school facilities for the children. The fact that the Consolidated School will now teach Grade 11 and fit pupils for furthering their education by attending a university speaks but words of commendation for the School Board, and its ratepayers. May the pupils who graduate from that edifice become worthy sons and daughters of Dundee. Become better citizens, better Canadians, and to those who continue in the path of their forebearers, better farmers, due to their having received their education within the bounds of the municipality which swarms with people of vision and integrity.

Brighter Days For Canada With the return of Premier Bennett to Canada on Thursday, and his address at Montreal has had the effect of making many people feel that Canada is now making strides towards the goal of success and not to more days of depression. The Premier's address at Montreal on the wheat situation in the world, proved illuminating to even those regarded as well-informed on wheat crops of Canada and the world at large. More Canadians now realize that Canada is not "the grainery of the world," that we too often thought we were.

Visible evidence of business improvement in Canada may not be excessive, but unmistakable signs indicate that the darkest days are past, with the business barometer indicating a gradual but certain return to a brighter period.

Looking across Canada from east to west, we see wholesale and retail trade in the Maritimes showing encouraging improvement. The same holds good in Quebec where a number of factories are working to near capacity, while in Ontario, manufacturing activity has reached the highest level in three years. Though the three Prairie Provinces have received a check through damaged crops, grain prices have registered a substantial gain, resulting in improvements in retail and whole sale trade. The wheat agreement consummated through the efforts of Premier Bennett makes it that the export price for wheat will be 92.2c per bushel. A very favourable price when considered what was offered at a similar time a year ago. In British Columbia the products of the forest have been in greater demand with better prices prevailing, while the general business tone continues to improve.

The Canadian business index was at 67 in February; by June it had risen to 82.2. There are many signs pointing to national rehabilitation without resorting to any such inflation scheme as the N. I. R. A in the United States. Canadians have learned to work, it is not good that we become a people with too much idle time as will be the case with our American cousins. The N. I. R. A. encourages shorter hours of industrial labour, and as soon as a firm agrees to such a regulation some employees will immediately demand still further reduction in hours of employment.

Canada with its 10,000,000 of people must necessarily be an exporting country. We will profit by producing quantity at a low dollar mark. Inflation prices, high wages and short hours would surely work havoc with Canada's possibilities of remaining an exporting country. It is comforting to hear that Premier Bennett is not intending to introduce any such National Recovery Act in Canada at this particular moment.

Watchfulness And Alertness Required Today It is difficult to make cases against an individual who enters our district and commences to sell. He may be here to sell good merchandise, securities that are a sound investment, or a dozen and one other things. In connection with the security salesman, we can always go to our bank managers for advice as to whether the investment is commendable. The bankers make money matters their business, and they are in a position to secure inside information on investments that is perhaps not possible for the man on the street to observe. At the present time we have salesmen offering securties for sale that are to earn big interests, beware of the allurement and seek advice from your banker before investing; and not after you have turned over good bonds as payment for dubious stock certificates.

What is equally aggravating to a farmer is to have a man come along and endeavour to sell something at exorbitant prices and in a strange manner of approach. Today we hear of a man selling nursery stock from a reputable house. That fact is quite acceptable, but why should be approach the possible buyers in the manner he is adopting. He pretends to be from the Federal Dept. of Agriculture. He seeks contact with the customers through the parish priests. The parish priests have directed him to the agronomists. Here is where our master salesman quits, he says Federal Government employees do not work in conjunction with the agronomists. That is not the case. He is also posing as being indirectly connected with Macdonald College, as they are endorsing and recommending that his nursery stock be purchased. This cannot be true. On the other hand he is selling the nursery stock at prices that seem excessive. Buying nursery stock at excessive prices is equivalent to buying stocks for their high interest rate that cannot be consistently maintained. The idea of apple trees selling at $1.00 a piece and up is ridiculous, especially when the agronomist can advise you where trees can be purchased at about 32 cents a piece. If salesmen approach you offering goods in an unusual manner, investigate. If the deal concerns money matters, see your bank managers; if pertaining to farm matters see your agronomist. In these days of so much trickery, be alert and careful, else you may suffer an unnecessary loss.

Two Fairs Next Week District people are asked to attend two agricultural society fairs next week. That of Havelock is on Tuesday and Huntingdon on Friday. These days coincide with the Chautauqua dates in Huntingdon which are from the 12th to the 15th. Local people certainly cannot complain of lack of entertainment during the next week. First of all let's attend the two local fairs and give all the encouragement possible to our district farmers. To the latter should be given our prime consideration and in these times of depression when they are suffering from the low agricultural returns we should heartily applaud their efforts when they compete at these fall fairs. There is no greater way of making better farmers than that they see better produce than their own, better cattle, better horses. When these farmers are honoured for their efforts it gives stimulation and enthusiasm and on succeeding occasions they try for greater honours. Perfection is almost impossible to attain but there is great satisfaction in traveling along the way. The kind words said by friends, their congratulations, and the inner satisfaction of having been to a certain degree successful is something which cannot be taken from us.

Huntingdon and Havelock Fairs and the Huntingdon Chautauqua offer good programmes. Those of the Fairs and the Chautauqua will be distinctly different but both educational. Again how could a more enjoyable day be spent than at both these fairs. It gives us an opportunity which we have about once a year to meet a multitude of friends who are all out for the same purpose: to have a good time the day of their local fair. These are the days when political and religious differences are forgotten and interest is entirely taken up in cattle, horses, farm produce, flowers, and domestic science of all sorts; not to forget the contests and the ball games.

Back to School, Holidays Over On September 5th the call went forth from the old school bells announcing that the holidays were over and the grind would start again for another year. Many children entered school for the first time. Others went back to try and make good the year just wasted. Some entered upon higher classes and new studies. To all it was the opening of the door of opportunity. Boys and girls were just placed in classes and given over to teachers to impart knowledge and fit them for the great life work. Is this all? Should there not be a more direct effort put forth to see what are the special needs of development for your boy or girl? You should secure contact with the school and staff. You can interest yourself by knowing something of the class work and teacher of your child. This is the way in which you can get results. School days are days of opportunity. If you neglect to give that child the full opportunities that are within reach, then you are handicapping the child. Co-operate with the schools, the staffs, and the children.

Taking Chances A tourist visiting the Alps, not long ago tells of an example of taking chances. A great glacier had been moving for centuries, at the rate of ten inches a year. The lower end of the glacier was now approaching a precipice and at the foot of the precipice nestled a tiny village. Thousands of tons of ice might at any time be hurled upon the little settlement below, and the government had given warning to leave the village. Most of the villagers had gone, reluctant no doubt to leave their homes, but taking no chances with the danger which threatened their very existence. In spite of this, a small group of settlers lingered on, ignoring the menace, paying no heed to the warning. They had lived in security in that same spot for years. They thought it would be time enough to move after the accident happened. They were deliberately running the chance of being buried alive under tons of ice, rather than seek safety at an earlier date. Perhaps they would escape, and at any rate they were willing to take the risk.

There are many examples in our own daily life, of people who seem to be thrilled by the idea of taking unnecessary risks. They deliberately court danger and trouble. They bring pain and disaster eventually, both to themselves and others. Playing with fire may be an interesting sport at first. But the chances are always against us, and sooner or later we get burned. The game of taking chances, is one we cannot beat, the odds are always against us.

Young people should guard against taking unnecessary risks. Sometimes the idea of showing off before the crowd, urges a boy to take some desperate chance, which may wreck his whole life. The thrill of a moment, may mean the ruin of a life-time. The wiser ones play safe, while the foolish one provides the thrill for the onlookers.

To avoid taking chances, does not mean that a child lacks ambition. It means that he thinks before he acts, and that he direct his energy into usefulness and worthwhile channels. He has then, no regrets in later life, for foolish deeds of his youth.

Brings Back $10.00

A. Morrow, manager of a Brownsville, Pa., grocery, approached a customer with that what-can-I-do-for-you look. The customer handed him a $10 bill, saying: "One of your clerks gave me $10 too much in 1918 when I bought a sack of flour." Then he walked out.

Counts Your Steps

The "automatic door-opener," which takes count of the speed at which each individual approaches it, is a feature of an exhibition at the Science Museum, London. The door remains open long enough to allow a person approaching slowly to pass through in comfort, and yet is not kept open necessarily long for a quicker walker.

Rings Own Alarm

Stricken while working in the belfry of St. Peter and Paul church, Jamestown, Pa., Thomas Sullivan, 62, clutched a rope while falling and rang the bell in the tower. An attendant in the parish house, noting the ring of the bell at an unusual time, went to the belfry and found the stricken man.

What Teacher Needs

"I should like, if it were possible, for every teacher to be one of a large family and certainly to have brothers, to have had some social life as a girl—dances and the like—and to have been at least once in love." So said Miss E. Addison Phillips, of Clifton High School, at the conference at Liverpool, Eng., of the Association of Headmistresses.

Bathtubs Win Out

Less than 100 years ago a doctors' convention in Cincinnati declared bathtubs a menace to health. In 1842 Philadelphia's city council passed an ordinance prohibiting the use of bathtubs between Nov. 1 and March 1. Even highly cultured Boston made it unlawful to bathe except when prescribed by a physician. Virginia tried to stop installation of bathtubs by placing a yearly tax of $30 on every one in use.

24 Baby Boas

If some kind herpetologist will tell the keepers of the big snakes at the Chicago World's Fair what to do about baby boa constrictors they will appreciate it. Twenty-four were born at the fair last week, and the keepers said they were in a quandary how to keep them alive. The mother snake arrived in Chicago from Yucatan three weeks before the exposition opened.

Bought and Paid For

After the stork brought a baby boy to the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Taylor, of Roswell, Maryland, their three-year-old daughter, Charline, heard her parents talking about paying the bill at the doctor's. A day or two later the little girl called at the doctor's office pulling her express wagon. In the wagon she had 3,500 pennies she had saved up and offered them as payment for her baby brother.

First Autos Menace

"The travelling motorist is ordered to telephone to the next town, notifying them of his intended arrival, of the probable route through town, and of the length of his intended stay." So read an ordinance in force in Denison, Idaho, for many years, passed because cars were a public menace then. A drive through the country was marked by a trail of runaways and wrecked wagons and buggies. The ordinance has been repealed.

Two-Job Pastor

To hurry along payment for the new chuch building, costing $4,500, of the Lutheran Church of God with 45 members, near Columbus, Ohio, Rev. John Meeks offered to serve as pastor without salary until the church was paid for. He has stuck to his promise working at odd jobs, principally painting, to make a living, and now the church debt is down to $2,500.

In-Laws Take Bed

Frederick M. Hathaway, Jr., of Detroit, was willing to be accommodating up to a certain point, but when his wife's visiting relatives kept getting into his bed time after time, forcing him to sleep on the floor when he got home, it finally made Hathaway tired in a double sense. He appealed to the court, and the judge issued a restraining order to the effect his wife must not permit any more in-laws to crowd her husband out of his bed.

Dog Guiders

A recent dow show in Berlin, Germany, ended with a parade of dogs and their exhibitors in which there was a special section for blind men, each led by a trained police dog. The German government provide such a dog for every man blinded in the service of the fatherland. These dogs are marked with a large Red Cross as protection from traffic. In the parade men and dogs marched together in a long column, six abreast. Not once did the dogs let their charges become entangled.

Plough Brings Fortune

While ploughing in a field in the parish of Kropp, Sweden, Emile Johensson a farm hand, recently found ancient coins which are considered to be worth a fortune. His plough had turned up a rare piece of porcelain, and scattered the gold and silver coins it once contained. Johensson called his master, who called an archaelogist, and between them they unearthed 400 old coins and beautiful ornaments made by master silversmiths when their art was at its zenith. Among them are the mountings of a belt decorated with garlands of acanthus and carnations, and an exquisite little Madonna standing on a crescent moon. It is believed the treasure must have belonged to some nobleman. As the ornaments are among the finest specimens of their kind now existing they have been purchased by the State Historical Museum, and the farm hand is now rich.

Acrobat at Seventy

Although his day as a circus acrobat is long past, Ivy Baldwin, 70, Eldorado Springs, Colo., still keeps in practice. Since 1907, he has crossed a cable 635 feet long between two rocks 582 feet above the ground an average of once a week. The cable is more than three times as high as Brooklyn bridge, and two blocks long. It takes Baldwin six minutes to cross it, although he has done it in half that time. Once he was stranded in the middle of it, clinging to the cable for 45 minutes while a hailstorm raged about him.

Try to Ruin Food

Five men were executed in Moscow this week for putting wire nails, glass and hair in restaurant soup to make workers dissatisfied with conditions. Six others were sentenced to terms of imprisonment ranging from eighteen months to eight years. The men, charged as class enemies, were said to have spoiled food in other ways and stolen food supplies. Factory workers, in the court room, cheered loudly when the sentences were imposed. Four restaurants were affected. The leader of the strange sabotage campaign was said to be Oshkin Mikkhail, a former czarist army officer.

Legion Pays Cent a Day

Among soldiers of fortune no higher ambition exists than to join the Foreign Legion of France, but this ambition is based on love of adventure rather than remuneration received. Enlistment is for five years. Minors must have the written consent of father or guardian, also health certificates. Age limits are 18 to 40, minimum height five feet one inch. There are no other conditions. All nationalities are accepted. Knowledge of French is not necessary. A bonus of 1,000 francs, approximately $40, is paid, half on enlistment and the rest four months later. The pay is 25 centimes a day, or one cent in Canadian money, if service is in Algeria or Tunisia, and three cents a day in Morocco and the Levant because the climate is more rigorous there. Recruits have to pay their own transportation to France.

$100,000 Bubble Bursts

No wonder Reginald Charles Clarke, a farm laborer of Burfield, Reading, Eng., found neighbors ready, nay eager, to lend him as much money as he needed. He had just learned he had come into a fortune of $100,000 with five houses, clothes and jewelry. Gone in a flash were all his worries, and before him stretched a glittering prospect of a life of ease and plenty. It was a hoax. This was the extraordinary story told the court when William Frederick Bourne and Gladys Louisa Ewen, 16, were committed for trial. They were charged with obtaining £20 from Clarke with intent to defraud. Bourne and the girl drove up to Clarke's house and told him the money and property had been bequeathed to her servants by Mrs. Jane Burt, of Pangbourne, and Clarke was entitled to his aunt's share following her death. Evidence was given by the "dead" aunt referred to—Mrs. Elizabeth Hammond that she had never seen the two accused, and did not possess $100,000.

Farm Colony Debtless

In 1893 nine families from Holland and four Dutch families already in America formed a settlement at Manhattan, Montana, whose achievements in 40 years show what hard work, thrift and right living generally can accomplish on the land. The colony was started under most discouraging circumstances. Its members settled among alien and sometimes hostile neighbors, on alkali-spotted waste land which could be made productive only by irrigation. They first specialized in wheat, malting barley and livestock. Their barley became world famous and in time commanded premium prices. When prohibition came the barley market suffered such a slump these Dutch farmers added alfalfa, oats, peas and vegetables to their paying crops. In 1931 drouth and the depression came together, but the colony is carrying on. Not a member has lost his farm or home. There is not even a single delinquent taxpayer on the rolls. In 40 years the colony has grown to 135 families, but there has not been one divorce and only three court cases of any kind. In the prosperous years contributions to their church, benevolences, schools, missions and hospitals averaged $20,000 yearly.

Money Doubled

Up in Nebraska several farm neighbors killed and dry-picked 102 hens recently for a trial shipment to New York. These fowls were precooled in the local co-operative creamery, then graded and boxed for shipment with an iced car of eggs. The check came to $81.40. Deducting freight and other expenses, the co-operators netted $70. The hens would have brought $43 at the local market the day they were shipped.

Monkey and Dog at Wedding

Among those present at the wedding of Lady Mercy Dean and Patrick H. N. Gamble in Chelsea, England, recently, were a small, excited, chattering monkey and a Bedlington terrier. They are pets of the bride. "Bimbo," the monkey, wore a Red Riding Hood jacket, with a hat and white bow, "Peter," the dog, also wore a red coat and white bow. The animals attracted such a crowd that the police had to disperse it.

Coast-to-Coast Call Saves Children

To save the lives of two small boys in Rome, Ga., who had swallowed bichloride of mercury tablets in the belief that they were candy, a transcontinental telephone call was made the other day. The call was made by Dr. Robert Maddox, who was attending the children, to Dr. J. C. Geiger, Director of Health in San Francisco. Dr. Maddox, knowing the success of methylene blue in the treatment of poisoning, wanted further information from Dr. Geiger. The latter explained that the methylene blue had not proven successful in bichloride of mercury cases, but suggested other possible antidotes. These were successful.

Mission Band Meets.—

The Twinkling Stars Mission Band met at the home of Lucille and Helen Arthur on Saturday afternoon, Sept. 2. Call to worship by Bertha Taylor, after which a hymn was sung "Blest be the Tie that Binds." Collection was taken amounting to 32c. A story was read called "A West China Doctor." The work of the afternoon was making wash cloths. The meeting closed with the Mizpah. The members then went for a swim in the river, after which lunch was served by the hostess.

Home Sewing For Fall

Home sewing is very much back into popularity. Indeed it never went out for many mothers who like a well-made garment even though there many appear to be very little saving in making clothes at home.

May Cost More

With the prospect of higher prices this fall it may be wise to do one's winter dressmaking early this year, particularly if there are children to be outfitted for school before another term begins. It is not too soon to plan the school wardrobe now. These summer days are ideal for sewing and when school girls are home for the holidays they enjoy helping to make their own wardrobe. Let them do the basting, the hems and the simpler parts of the garments and they would like to do a little embroidery to trim them.

It will pay you over and over to purchase only fast colors of good quality. When making dresses allow ample seams so that alterations may be made later if needed. If making a dress now with no sleeves it would be a good plan to make a pair of sleeves to be inserted when the cold weather comes.

Wool jumper dresses to be worn with washing blouses are great favorites with young girls this year and make admirable school dresses. Plaids and check designs are more practical than those with white backgrounds and do not show the soiling so quickly.

It will also pay to make slips and bloomers of good quality; these will outwear any number of the factory-made articles. If you let the girls help to choose the materials and consult them in the selection of the pattern they will take a much greater interest in helping with the sewing.

Ready For Canning

Prevent some of the hurry and worry on canning days by getting all your equipment ready before you begin your canning. Be sure the jars, rubbers, covers or lids are at hand. Hunt up the screw bands, the jar lifters, and the wide mouth funnel. A few yards of cheese cloth come in handy if a wire basket is not available.

Wash the old and new jars in hot, soapy water, rinse well and test before using for canning. Fill the jar, adjust the rubber, cover, and seal. Shake vigorously. If the seal is not tight, adjust the clamp or use new covers. The automatic seal jars need new lids each time, and in using these jars, the seal is not complete until after the jar has been processed and cooled. Be sure the sealing compound on these lids forms a complete circle; if broken, discard the lid.

Just before canning, scald the jars, put covers and rubbers into a colander or wire basket, and pour boiling water over them.

If a pressure cooker is not available and a water bath cooker is used, boil jars and covers for 20 minutes before filling the jars.

Royal Titles Accorded Stately Forest Trees

The oak is spoken of as "the monarch of the woods," but the ash tree is "queen of the woods." Ancient stories tell us the gods held their council beneath an ash tree, on the topmost branch of which sat an eagle, watching the way of the world whilst a squirrel ran up and down the trunk, carrying messages from the bird to the gods. The ash is one of the easiest trees to recognize, with its straight trunk, the bark a pale grey color, its lower branches growing straight out from the trunk, curving gracefully to the sky. The tips are quite different from all other tree-tops, each ending in a stout grey twig, slightly flattened at the tip, and beyond this flattened tip two black buds, with smaller buds at the sides. Even when other trees have put on their spring dress of green, the ash tree stands bare.

The Forgotten Man

A DRIVE through the country would lead one to believe that the Forgotten Man is not a creature of imagination, but that he lies in the country cemeteries. In many burial grounds in rural districts cemeteries are an abiding place of weeds, shrubs and undergrowth instead of being the well-kept and restful places they should be, the abiding place of sweet and beautiful memories. It would seem that the departed in some rural communities do not command the respect that the deceased do in urban centres. They pass on hoping that their friends will pause some time at their graves and let the memory revert to the happy times that made the deceased a true friend and companion; but no one would care to plough his way through knee-high weeds and rank undergrowth. And so they pass on, leaving the Forgotten Man lying in his forgotten grave. It is a sad commentary on our Christianity that the graves of residents and pioneers of communities are left uncared for and unkempt. Even the pagans remember their members who have gone on to another land. They believe there is a hereafter, and that the departed are looking down on them to see if they are being remembered. The North American Indians are called savages by the cultured, but they can set a fine example when it comes to making their burial grounds attractive places. One of these is the Kit-Wanga cemetery in British Columbia, on the banks of the Fraser River. Even the train stops at this cemetery so that all who pass may view the well-kept graves over which are hung clothes of the departed, and sometimes corn for them to eat on their last long journey. Should residents of rural communities be less thoughtful than their pagan brothers? Governments spent thousands of dollars following the Great War in preserving the identity of those who paid the supreme sacrifice and crosses row on row are silent white symbols that at least their memory and deeds are not forgotten. It is pleasant to think that when one does have to be laid to rest it will be in some pleasant place which people will like to visit. It is time that every community should make an effort to restore the forgotten cemeteries to their original beauty, so that the departed cannot point their spiritual finger in condemnation, and cry, "They have forgotten me!"

Stevens Cheers For Starvation

JUST when we thought that there might be some intelligent governmental action in the matter of evolving a recovery programme for Canada, Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce in the Bennett cabinet comes forward with a rousing cheer for the out-worn policy of rugged individualism.

According to Mr. Stevens the thing for each of us to do is to pull tighter our belts if the strain to which they have been subjected in this way during the past four years will permit—and smile bravely, if a trifle wanly, until good times return.

From a statesman so-called this sort of tripe is almost on a par with the traditional, if apocryphal, saying of Marie Antoinette when the Paris mob cried out for bread—"They have no bread? Let them eat cake."

How does Mr. Stevens suppose that belt tightening at this late date is going to help Canada climb out of the slough of economic despond? Will gaunt if fatuous grinning help us to restore buying power? Can prosperity return to us if buying power is not restored?

Mr. Stevens has been highly successful in acquiring a store of this world's goods. He must know that he is talking economic rot when he advocates a continuance of the laissez faire attitude which brought us to our present state of economic hardship and social unrest.

Not that talking rot is an unusual attribute in members of Mr. Bennett's government. If the hall-mark of the Mackenzie King administration was a venal cynicism, that of the present government is a smug and stupid irresponsibility.

But talking rot will not save either the country or the Bennett government, the actions in this direction of the C.C.F. notwithstanding. The country will only be saved when our rulers come to a realization that the world is at the end of an economic era and that our whole future progress will be conditioned by the actions of Canadian politicians and businessmen during the next few months.

The choice of our path lies clearly before us. Either we enact the enlightened social and economic measures which have made Britain, Switzerland, Sweden, Denmark, Holland and Belguim modern leaders in the progress of man or we link ourselves with Mexico, Greece, Portugal, Bulgaria and Rumania in a descent into retrogression and decay.

There are two factors which tend to make this latest pronouncement of Mr. Stevens rather less important than his position would indicate. The first of these is that he was soundly repudiated by his own constituents in the last general election. The other is that Mr. Bennett may allow his ministers to talk occasionally but he dictates their actions. If the Prime Minister says that we are to have a forward-looking social and economic regime the decrepit political hacks with whom he has surrounded himself will jump through the hoop with the stiff-jointed docility of a pack of Hollywood movie lions.

It is clearly our duty, therefore, to see that Mr. Bennett is compelled to put forward some sort of enlightened programme for our salvation. He can only be made to do this if he is convinced by an aroused electorate that half measures or do-nothingness will no longer be tolerated.

Parade of the Fools

AN individual heading the Federation of Quebec Labour Clubs—an organization boasting of a membership of 80,000, but hardly numbering even 5,000 members in Quebec—was recently proclaimed the Mussolini Canadien, and was accorded the Fascist salute from a group of men and women attired in brown shirts. The scene was grotesque. It would seem that little would-be dictators are growing in this province. But they have one common fault, and it is that of being unable to rise above the initiative instincts of the monkey. Just so long as these individuals remain incapable of progressing under their own names and their own prestige, and are obliged to borrow the unwieldy costumes of the masters of Italy and Germany, they will be unable to rise above the ridiculous. Gorillas have never done anything great. But it is not only in Montreal that such movements are springing up. During the past few days in Toronto, young people flourished Hitler's swastika. The Jews objected, and there was strife. Authorities must not weaken enough to allow incidents such as those of Toronto to repeat themselves. They must use an iron-hand in suppressing such disorders which disturb national peace of a country where, up to now, all races have lived amidst the greatest of harmony.

A Change is Needed

ONE of the changes we need to make these days is in relation to our attitude toward debt. It might be a very healthful thing for us to regain the point of view which our grandfathers had in regard to it.

In the old days people had, if not a horror of it, at least a very real distaste for going into debt. The proudest boast of the solvent, successful man was that he owed no man a farthing. People borrowed only when they had to, and they did so, usually, with great reluctance.

No one needs to be told that we haven't got that viewpoint any more. In the last decade or so the hallmark of the successful man has not been his ability to keep out of debt but his ability to get into it. It became an accepted standard that the smart man used other people's money in his operations.

Not only did business firms borrow to expand their plants; rich men borrowed to speculate in stocks, poor men borrowed to buy automobiles, furniture and what-not; and while many of the results of this were very good, the way in which it made us willing to mortgage our futures to satisfy present wants was, all in all, anything but wholesome.

It led, furthermore, to a stultifying of our conception of the morals involved in the use of other people's money. Many a town can tell a tale precisely like the following:

A manufacturing concern goes against the wall. Officials are revealed as heavy borrowers from it. Their debts have not been paid, and because they are not paid, the stockholders are left holding the sack.

Just what difference is there, essentially between the official who borrows from his own concern to "invest" in stocks, hoping that his profits will enable him to repay the loan, and the little shoe shop cashier who takes money from the till to bet on the election or a horse race?

If a too-ready acceptance of debt had not blunted our concepts of right and wrong, we would not have had a society in which such things would have happened.

Labor Day

IT is highly fitting that the community should set aside one special day on which to consider the importance of the part played by what we loosely call "Labor" in our intricate civilization. "Labor" is a very inclusive and flexible term. Every man who makes his living by contributing to the common store of necessities and luxuries is a laborer, whether he be designated or not. But it has become a custom of late to confine the term to one general form of labor, which perhaps might best be defined as labor that lends itself to organization.

It is a truism that Labor must prosper if the community is to prosper. Unless the great mass of the workers have money to spend, the merchant displays his wares in vain, the professional man sits in his office with nothing to do, and even the landlord must whistle for his rent. It is the laborer who is the chief customer of the farmer—just as it is the farmer who is the chief customer of the laborer. When we are thinking of a purchasing public for any product, we are apt to be drawn aside to think of the lavish individual purchasers. But they are very few in number. A thousand moderate customers are worth infinitely more than ten Gargantuan consumers.

In this country, we have spoiled the beautiful image of "the cottage" as the typical home of the worker. He lives, as a rule, not in a cottage, but in a much more economical structure, so far as land and convenience are concerned. But if we may borrow the image of the cottage for a moment, we would like to say that it matters very much more how times are in the cottage than in the castle. (The castle, too, is an old world image, not applicable to North America). When a depression falls, it works its greatest mischief in the cottage; and because the cottage is compelled to practise a sharp economy, every other activity in the community suffers. And, by that same token, it will be by the recovery of the cottage that we will best mark and measure the recovery of business.

Our civilization is so intimately intertwined that one part cannot prosper without all parts sharing in the benefits. As we have said, lean commons for labor means reduced profits and earnings for everybody else. In the same way, a reduced trade, a slackened manufacture, a frightened capital, curtail both the work and wages at the disposal of labor. The different elements in the community do not gain by each other's losses, as if they were national enemies. They gain by each other's gains. The capitalist who imagines that he makes money by taking it from labor is a colossal fool. He makes money by enabling labor to make more money, and so increasing his returns.

The worker is a part of the same vicious circle. A closed factory hurts the worker quite as much as the owner—it may, indeed, hurt him more if the owner can retire on previous profits. It is to the worker's interest to keep the factory open and to help it to prosper. When the worker and the owner fail to co-operate to this end, they each damage themselves. The fact of the matter is that the wage-earner has a proprietory interest in the business that pays him his wages, and the wise worker does his work with this feeling spurring him on. Of course, his consciousness of this connection between him and the business must be recognized in all fairness by the owners or managers of the business. If they try to exploit him and so chill his enthusiasm, they stand squarely in their own light.

More and more, this is coming to be recognized. Management and Labor are becoming open partners. When this measure of reform has been pushed to a higher degree of efficiency, the comfort of all will be increased, the stability of business will be strengthened and the danger of periodic depression considerably lessened.

Quebec's Fisheries

THE decision taken by the Quebec Government to build two new cold storage plants for the conservation of fish, one in Matane and the other at Paspebiac, in Gaspé, will be hailed by those who are interested in seeing the steady development of the province's natural resources and, in particular, our fisheries. And it will be lauded by the inhabitants of the Gaspe Coast, who, realizing their living, for the most part, from fishing, thus see a new proof of the Government's steadfast encouragement of this industry. The Hon. Hector Laferte, Minister of Fisheries, returning from a tour of the fishery areas of that region, was able to note the great utility of the seven plants already built in the Gaspe and Matane districts. They serve to preserve fish and thus regulate sales according to market needs, and also to classify fish soon after being caught, and thus increase the value of the catch. It is not sufficiently realized that the fisheries of the Province of Quebec are amongst the world's richest. Why should we neglect their rational exploitation? The Government will not do so, and its decision is laudable. Let us build up our fisheries as greatly as possible, thus assuring an industry of a maximum of efficiency and development and enabling it to become one of the principal sources of wealth for the province.

The Busy Man

MODERN business has engendered several axioms which rival the rarest bits of wisdom of the ancients. Among the most frequently quoted is, "If you want something done take it to the busy man." A companion epigram reads, "A good workman never wants a job."

Axioms and epigrams that endure don't just happen. To go down through the generations they must express in a concise and vivid manner an obvious truth. The axioms of the busy man and the good workman fill this requirement.

There is a reason why one should patronize the busy man who has a job. The busy man is busy because he has earned a reputation of giving service expeditiously and satisfactorily. The best recommendation a workman can desire is the fact that he is not out of work. Very often employers are forced through a labor shortage to accept workers who do not come from another job, but when allowed to choose between the employed and the unemployed, they always pick the former.

The axiom of the busy man applies to the professional man, store, hotel, factory, office and every other branch and phase of business. The axiom of the good workman is applicable to all classes of labor. The world wants more busy men and good workmen.

Think For Yourself Today

IT is the duty of every citizen of the Dominion of Canada to stop short in the mad rush and scramble for power, to awake and ask where will it lead us. Mad rushes history shows are very disastrous to national growth and development. Those countries who have passed through revolutions and bloodshed had taken centuries to recover. Many have never recovered. All because the people have been letting some one else do their thinking. Today the people of Canada from coast to coast are being called upon to express opinions. Thousands are being won to causes because there is decry raised to put down power and authority. They seem to express the idea that all the ills of the present day are due to those in charge of affairs. Make a study of the conditions. Study economics of the world. Look over the pages of history. Read the actions of those in power in an unbiased frame of mind and see what is needed to right things. Is it a pooling of all wealth? Is it a centralization of all industry? Is it a throwing aside all banking systems that the world are looking upon with favor? Is it the curtailing of the power of the law and forces of administrations? No, the complete overthrow of these factors that has built Canadian life are not the solution. The solution lies in men and women using their own brains and thinking out the whole situation. Do not look at the start but visualize the end. Think the whole plan through. If all will do this there will be but one conclusion that can be reached. It will be this. Every man must realize that there is a universal brotherhood guided by a common fatherhood. When men and women are willing to obey His laws and teaching then there will be peace and happiness. Men do not be mislead. Think all the changes out before you express your opinions.

W. I. MEETING AT DEWITTVILLE

Ladies Entertained on Beautiful Lawn at D. M. Rowat's Summer Home

All nature seemed to be in a happy mood on Friday afternoon when the Huntingdon Women's Institute met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Rowat, Dewittville. The visitors were completely fascinated with the beautiful lawns and flower gardens now surrounding the historic old stone house. Under the majestic elms the meeting was called to order by the President, Mrs. T. S. Miller. Any one of the three addresses given would have been sufficient to mark an Institute programme as outstanding.

Mrs. John Ross of Powerscourt made tactful use of wit, wisdom and humor in her paper entitled, "Do we as an Institution do all we can to protect Women?' But little can be added to our knowledge and its practice in the care of children in infancy and early childhood. A great deal is still to be learned and practiced in our treatment of the adolescents. Some very good counsel was given by the speaker in this regard and she scored those who would continue to deceive their children. "What we call innocence, the world calls ignorance." In the matter of nursing, Mrs. Ross advocated strongly, in view of the serious times, a system of "hourly nursing" in towns where such is practicable. In this way the services of a professional nurse could be obtained at a nominal fee for the expert care when necessary only.

"Poetry," said Miss Janet Morris, "means the ability to put words together so that it will excite the imagination."

Poetry

If ever an audience has been spellbound and transported from reality, it can be said without reservation to have happened on this occasion. The scene was touched with exquisite harmony, green velvet carpet, flower bed of rose and red for background, stately elms hushed and attentive, tired, work-weary women on benches and chairs, and a fairy godmother to weave a spell! Without the aid of book or note of any kind the speaker explained and illustrated the subject of poetry with a true passion and ardor that could be obtained only by lifetime devotion to the subject.

The simple rhyme of childhood: "Star light, star bright, First Star I've seen to-night; Wish I may, wish I might, Have the wish I wish tonight," has the element of poetry. It touches the imagination and makes the child think of the great Universe and of the star as co-operating to bring about a wish.

The words of the Angel and of Elizabeth in addressing the Blessed Virgin: "Hail, Mary, Full of grace; Blessed art thou amongst women," have the basis of perfect poetry. They inspired in Mary a poetic response. "My soul doth magnify the Lord." A further example of poetic creation by the simple and humble, is recorded in the song of Zacharias. All these people when affected by a deep emotional experience, burst into poetic utterances that are immortal. Indeed, I have often wondered why the Protestant churches have discontinued singing the beautiful Magnificat and the Benedictus.

Poetry stands open to everyone who can read and think. Not many people can see great pictures, hear great singers or see great actors. Miss Morris recited several extracts from Shakespeare and Burns to illustrate points in her remarks. Canadian poets were not forgotten. Bliss Carman, Wilson McDonald and Marpory Picthall were among those deemed worthy of quoting.

In conclusion the words from Tennyson:

Sunset and evening star, And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning at the bar, When I put out to sea.

And from Wilson McDonald:

"As the stars go out, so let me go."

and finally a verse by Marjory Picthall:

The Code Napoleon

Mr. D. M. Rowat gave a most interesting talk on the Code Napoleon and the general effect of the marriage laws of France and Quebec. In a most able manner he brought out the fact that many of the so-called restrictions on women were in many ways advantageous. In the majority of cases the community status was more favorable to a woman than a marriage contract especially if the husband was successful in business. In a community a woman upon her marriage automatically becomes possessed of one-half of her husband's moveables and is entitled to dower in his property. Should she die in a year or two leaving a child, the child would inherit her share and also one-half of the farm. Should the husband marry again and have five or six children, nevertheless the one child of the first wife would receive one-half of the property, on death of the father.

The question of a woman owning property who marries and thereby loses control of it was discussed. Women of wealth, the speaker intimated, seldom lacked the best of advice in handling their affairs. Under the law it is impossible for a woman to sign a note or pledge her property in behalf of her husband. The greatest care is exercised in seeing that this law is not infringed. It is in fact, a "stop, look, listen" sign for a notary. In 1907 the law of France was amended so that it was made legal for a woman to collect her own wages. This was adopted in Quebec in 1930. Previous to passing this amendment a married woman could not give a legal receipt for salary or wages due. This fact was, however, said Mr. Rowat, constantly ignored by employers, even before the new law came into effect.

The speakers and the host and hostess were heartily thanked by Mrs. Houghton and Mrs. Graham. A pleasant social hour was enjoyed when delicious refreshments were served in the cedar nook at the west end of the house.

Presbyterian W. M. S. Sectional Meeting at Hemmingford

The fifth Sectional meeting of the Montreal Presbyterial of the W.M.S. was held at Hemmingford on Tuesday, Sept. 5th. The morning session was conducted by Mrs. S. Reddick, and opened with singing "Christ is Our Corner Stone." Mrs. McLeod of Riverfield read the Bible lesson from Matt. 6th, giving some very helpful thoughts on Prayer, after which Mrs. Turner of Ormstown led in prayer. The first item of business was the appointment of a Sec.-Treas. for 1933-34. As Mrs. Orr wished to be relieved, on motion of Mrs. W. G. Gibson, seconded by Mrs. Jas. Brims; Mrs. L. D. Watson was appointed to be new Sec.-Treas.

Words of welcome from Hemmingford Auxiliary were extended by Miss Marlin.

Most encouraging reports were then presented by the following Auxiliaries: Athelstan, Beauharnois, Covey Hill, Elgin, Hemmingford, Ormstown, Riverfield and Howick, Rockburn. On motion of Mrs. A. A. Smaill, seconded by Miss Kilgour, these reports were adopted.

Mrs. J. W. Dougherty of Montreal who was the next speaker gave a report of the enlarged Council Executive meeting held in the Canadian School of Missions, Toronto. At this meeting were present three of our returned missionaries, Dr. Jessie McBean, Miss Stringer and Miss Whatling, also our two Field Secretaries, Miss Pelton and Miss Lamont and also Dr. Margaret Strang. A few thoughts gleaned from Mrs. Dougherty's talk.—Every dollar contributed by auxiliary members pays for three minutes' time of our 88 missionaries at home and abroad. While there is a decrease in Auxiliary membership, there is a marked increase in Young Women's Auxiliaries and Mission Bands. No Home Helper's name was to be dropped on account of lack of contributions, as the interest of the women of our church was the first requisite. Mrs. Dougherty also stated the next Council meeting place to be Montreal, if it be decided to hold a meeting next year, this being the 70th anniversary of the organization of W.M.S. in Montreal.

Reports from Mission Bands, Athelstan report given by Christina Ross, Mission Band Sec'y, also Beauharnois, Georgetown, Ormstown, Riverfield, Rockburn reports given by those in charge. The new study book is entitled "Flowers in Far Fields."

A most excellent report of Huntingdon C.G.I.T. prepared by Miss Purcell was given by Mrs. Gibson.

Mrs. A. W. Lamb, in charge of the Book Shelf, spoke of the Stewardship of your time, with reference to the books you read, stating that the W.M.S. supplies books for every need, and especially books that help us in our praying time.

Mrs. Perry of Covey Hill read Psalm 111, Rev. P. McK. Sampson led in prayer, and the morning session closed with singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name."

The delegates then adjourned to the Town Hall where a bountiful dinner was served by the young ladies of Hemmingford congregation.

The afternoon session at 1.30 was presided over by Mrs. W. G. Gibson. In view of the fact that several of our Auxiliaries have been bereaved during the past year, Mrs. Gibson asked that we sing "For All the Saints Who From Their Labours Rest." Mrs. Geo. D. Elder, Elgin Aux. then read Psalm 103, and Mrs. John Ross, Athelstan Aux., led in prayer.

Reports from the Young Women's Auxiliaries were next received. Athelstan, Beauharnois, Elgin, Georgetown, Riverfield and Howick. It is encouraging to note that two of these, Beauharnois and Georgetown are but recently organized.

While the offering was being taken Mrs. Selby Dunlop sang "The Holy City," to the extreme pleasure of all present. The offering amounted to $19.86, after deducting some small expenses a balance of $14.98 was sent to the General Treasurer.

Mrs. A. W. Pae was the next speaker, and suggested that Auxiliary Secretaries try to make their reports more interesting and inspirational by telling of any unusual bit of work done, rather then stereotyped reports of attendance and finances, although the finances also play an important part in W.M.S. work. She left this message in closing, "Cheered by the presence of God, I will do at the moment without anxiety, according to the strength which He shall give me, the work which He has assigned to me." Do what comes to your hand—leave the rest, it is not your affair. Another hymn, "Jesus Shall Reign" was then sung.

Miss Annie Lee Whatling who is sailing on Friday to resume her work in Jhansi, India, gave a most wonderful address on her work there. Miss Whatling spent a week in our neighbourhood this summer and endeared herself to all by her lovely character, and her many friends feel sorrowful at the thought of her departure for India and the trials which may be in store for her there.

Mrs. Fred Bruce extended an invitation to hold the next Sectional meeting in Huntingdon, which was accepted with pleasure.

A vote of thanks to Hemmingford Auxiliary was moved by Mrs. Reddick, seconded by Mrs. Ross and also endorsed by Mrs. Lamb. Rev. Mr. Maitland replied, voicing his own appreciation and inspiration from the meeting, also speaking for the Auxiliary.

The meeting closed with singing "Take up Thy Cross," after which Rev. Mr. Maitland pronounced the benediction.

New Form of Thievery.—

A new form of thievery has been discovered in the neighborhood. One evening smoke was noticed in Geo. Patton's bush and a neighbor telephoned that something was happening in the vicinity of the sugar-house. When they arrived on the scene it was found that a tree had been freshly cut down. It turned out to be a "bee tree' and the section with the hive had been cut out. However, the approach of the car interrupted the woodcutters and they escaped. The owner of the tree had the pleasure of salvaging a pail of honey for his trouble.

Bootleg sugar and now, bootleg honey. That craving for sweets is almost as dangerous as the alcohol or cigarette craving!

The Hidden Chateau

A Canadian Story by Frank Giolma

As applause broke out and Dr. Tomlin stepped down from the chair, Miss Dwight came up to Hilton and took hold of his arm. "Please come along with me," she said, "and let me introduce you to Mrs. Smyth. She has asked me to bring you along."

With a word here and a word there and now and again a hurried introduction, Miss Dwight piloted Hilton to an inner seat of the inglenook. "Here is the gentleman who is going to solve the great mystery for you," she said. "Mrs. Smyth, Constable Hilton of the Interprovincial Police. Sit down on this comfy cushion, Constable, toast yourself before the blaze and answer every question Mrs. Smyth asks, and we will proclaim you the ideal policeman."

The little company Hilton found himself confronting consisted of some six or seven ladies, anyone of whom would have been a charming companion or delightful vis-a-vis; but even so, Hilton knew at first glance which was Mrs. Freyda Smyth. The others were ladies with that refinement of expression that only comes through breeding and early and continued cultured environment. Mrs. Smyth immediately impressed Hilton as a woman of marked individuality. She was probably just over thirty, had copper-colored hair and a lithe figure which even in repose as at the present moment, suggested an Italian grace that one might expect to find in a professional dancer of that race, or highly trained actress. A handsome woman, a fascinating woman, but at the same time, a woman of a different world rather than class, to the others sitting there with her. When she spoke there was a note of detachment in her voice which, it seemed to Hilton, suggested she was repeating a carefully studied part rather than giving voice to her own thoughts.

"I almost wish," Hilton heard her saying, "that my things hadn't been returned; it would have been so delightfully thrilling to have watched you searching for them and, of course, suddenly pointing to some quite unlikely person and say: "that is the man or that's the woman who has taken them,' or suddenly producing them from the most unlikely place like a conjurer bringing a rabbit out of a hat or something like that."

"But because the jewels have been returned is no reason why we should not still discover who took them," Hilton answered.

Mrs. Smyth allowed herself to shudder delightfully. "Oh, no," she replied. "I don't like that idea at all. Whoever took the things repented and put them back. No harm has been done. But if you trace down the thief, he or she will be put in prison and ruined for life. Oh, no, I think that would be too horribly cruel, and I don't want it done under any circumstances. Whoever did take them has learned his lesson. Let us forgive and forget."

As he listened Hilton could not help feeling that the words did not ring true, that the lady was speaking in an effort to hide her real reason for not wanting the police to follow the matter up.

"And," she continued after a short pause, "the matter is altogether too small and petty for the Interprovincial Police to worry about. Now do tell us of some of your really thrilling experiences. I mean with desperate criminals. All about tracking down for thousands of miles and adventures like that."

Feeling that here was at least an opportunity to sing the praises of Cartwright, Hilton soon had his hearers held breathless as he told a purely apocryphal tale of Haddie's tracking down and capturing three murderers, all of whom had sworn they would never be taken alive. He had told of the capture of one in a dance-hall in Rio Janeiro, of another in Paris, and was just beginning on the third whom Cartwright had traced to London, when to the great annoyance of his audience, Dr. Tomlin announced that Mr. Skeuse was ready to tell them the history of the building of the Hidden Chateau. Promising to finish his account at some other time, Hilton turned round to face Skeuse.

The club secretary was settling himself comfortably in an easy chair so that the light fell from behind him on to the sheets of notepaper in his hands.

"I am afraid Dr. Tomlin has led you to expect rather too much," he said. "I ought, of course, by this time to have produced a complete, written history of the Hidden Chateau. Unfortunately, I am afflicted with cacoethesscribendi, which should be translated as an irritating desire to write, combined with a nervous hesitation as to what particular word to use in each case, and above all at what point to begin one's story. The result is entirely, I am afraid, unsuccessful—a few unconnected notes and in my mind a skeleton of the story I want to tell you.

"I have always understood that for a story to be a success, the main thread or theme must run evenly throughout the narrative from the opening sentence to the last. Judged by such rules, the story of the Hidden Chateau as I have been able to learn it, must be a complete failure, for parts of it are overloaded with intimate detail, while there are intervening spans in the narrative so tenuous you have to build them up in your own imagination.

"My sources of information have been very meagre, just a few facts from one and a little legend from another. In short, I am indebted for practically all my information to an old lady who was housekeeper at the Chateau from the day it was opened until it was closed in 1914. From that date she lived in a little cottage near Parksville until her death early last spring.

"I hope therefore you will remember these disabilities and make due allowance as you listen to me. And now with these preliminary remarks I am going to plunge into my tale.

"In 1904 the chief character in our story, our hero if we have one, Richard Sheringham Crompton, left Oxford University. His paternal aunt, Miss Crompton, who paid for him, did not expect him to do anything to make the family name famous, and hoped he would not do anything to bring it into disrepute. As he did neither, she considered he had been eminently successful. 'Your grandmother always said your father was the fool of the family and as your mother showed no signs of mental brilliance, it would not be fair to expect much from you,' she told him. 'However, I have been able to increase the ample fortune your grandfather left despite predatory socialistic legislation and taxation, and as you are the only representative of our family of your generation, all you have got to do is to waste a few years of your life and then marry and settle down. And for goodness sake, when you marry, choose a wife who will supply the brains I expect you so sadly lack.'

"Rather a dour kind of woman this Miss Amelia Crompton. However, she then and there told her lawyers to pay her nephew five thousand pounds a year and to meet and settle any bills, over and above that amount that he presented, so long as they were satisfied they were of such a nature as a gentleman might be expected to incur.

"It seems to me that we have now brought our hero, Richard Sheringham Crompton, into a very interesting situation. Alone in London, or we might say alone in the world, with a yearly income of five thousand pounds and the right to spend very much more if he so desired. Personally I would like to know what he did with himself and the money, but I have no information. In fact, we lose all trace of him until he suddenly appears up here in the heart of the forest on Vancouver Island, over six thousand miles from London.

"Of course, if he had come here on a hunting or fishing expedition, or while making the grand tour of the world, no particular comment would be necessary. But Richard Sheringham Crompton had not come for any of these reasons but to found a home.

"Ie seems to me that here is the most approved style of a Fielding or Sterne, a Victor Hugo or Thackeray, I ought to explain our hero's seemingly strange action by a dissertation on, or digression, dealing with Englishmen in general as migrants and empire builders and founders. Not being an Englishman, although of course my people originally came from that country, I feel that I may be able to offer some interesting observations on that most extraordinary and much misunderstood race. But I had better hasten to assure you that I have no intention of inflicting any abstruse philosophical or other learned treatise on you.

"The Englishman as we know him today is as far removed from the natives who originally inhabited the British Isles as a race-horse is from its wild forebears, or a Wall Street magnate from an Australian bushman. The Englishman of today is not a Celt, or a Saxon, or a Norman, or a Dane, or a Latin, or a Teuton, but the sublimated result of a thousand years of crossing and recrossing of all those nations and others. It is true that a new race has been evolved, but strains from all these others have been left in the blood, some predominating in one generation, some in another. If one will only realize and remember that, so much that is otherwise inexplicable in the history of the race at once becomes logical and almost obvious.

"No doubt away back in the family history of the Cromptons one would find some particularly virile petty chieftain, perhaps in Normandy or Wales, Italy or Scotland, living in some fortified mountain castle or stronghold, lording it over the countryside, despotic monarch of all the immediate domain. Or perhaps we would find some warrior driven by religious fervor to fight the Saracen and redeem the holy sepulchre. Most probably some knowledge of what Crompton had done during those intervening years would afford us the key we lack. But alas we have no information whatever.

"So all we can say is that he suddenly appeared up here in this wild part of this wild island on the outermost marches of the British Empire, feverishly surveying and buying a thousand acres of land which he was warned was of very little practical value for agriculture and as feverishly having erected his great dwelling house big enough to shelter over a hundred people.

"Money seemed of no consequence. Everything must be of the best. Furniture was imported from England, loggers, carpenters and other artisans and workers from all parts of the continent. The workers were housed in great tents, every man being paid higher wages than he could get elsewhere and fed well. Supplies of all kinds were brought in on packhorses and a small army of unskilled laborers cleared over fifty acres of the plateau of the small stunted trees and brush on it.

"Considering the massive timbers used for the walls—entire cedars a hundred feet in height, trimmed to fit with an axe, being used—and the size of the building, its frontage is nearly three hundred feet and depth over seventy, it seemed to rise as if at the command of a magician's wand. Within two years the structure was completed, the last workman paid off and Richard Sheringham Crompton entered into possession with a retinue of fifteen men servants and maid servants, but it must have totalled a pretty sum. However, all bills were promptly paid, so presumably Miss Crompton's lawyers found no cause to refuse. Estimates made by men who have been here and ought to know, have run from half to three-quarters of a million.

"But while these men who should know disagree as to the probable cost, they are as one as to what one called the appropriate beauty of the building and its undoubted durability. The studding, joists and beams are throughout cedar trees trimmed by the axe to a uniform thickness of from three to six feet, according to the use to which they were to be put. These huge timbers rest on a cement foundation which in turn lies on bedrock. All timbers and, indeed, woodwork of every kind was taken from the surrounding forest. Nothing but timber is used throughout with four exceptions, the cement foundation, fire brick for the chimneys, cobblestones for the fireplaces and copper for the roof. No wonder it has been called 'the building indestructible."

"Now let us look at young Crompton as he sits at the head of his long dining table in this very hall.

"Mrs. Arden, who came to the chateau as housekeeper at this time, told me he was a typical English gentleman. 'Oh,' she exclaimed, 'you could not mistake him for anything else.' Which, of course, was not very illuminating. Women, as a rule, are more observant than men, and can almost invariably give a very good description of anyone, and I do not think that Miss Arden was any exception to that rule. Rather I fancy that Crompton must have been one of those men with elusive personalities, men who seem to leave a different impression on everyone they meet, even to the extent of apparently changing their physical appearance. Read the different descriptions of Napoleon by people who knew the great emperor personally and look at the different pictures of him painted by artists to whom he sat, and you will understand what I mean.

"However, by one means and another I have been able to gather the following definite facts concerning Crompton's personal appearance.

"He was between five feet ten inches and six feet in height, slight of build, with light brown hair and hazel to green eyes. His was what Mrs. Arden, I think, very graphically called an over-educated face, his hands small, with medium length nervous fingers. Not by any means an open air man, yet extraordinarily agile. He could spring Mrs. Arden said, up into the branch of a tree or climb a tree without branches as easily as a monkey and could run or walk along a two-foot beam high up in the air and spring from one to another without a tremor when the slightest slip meant broken limbs if not instant death.

"Now I leave it to you to explain why in view of the above details Mrs. Arden should have said he was a typical Englishman, or why these rather extraordinary traits should suddenly appear in an Engilshman of the rather prosaic well-to-do upper middle class. But I suppose a similar question might be asked concerning every man who has broken away from the common herd and beaten out a new trail for himself.

"Crompton found plenty of work for all his household. Each and every one had an allotted daily task. He himself, aided by a secretary, attended to the financing of the place and saw that his servants did not shirk their duties. He had the uncomfortable habit of suddenly and silently appearing here and there, now within the Chateau, now outside or in the cow-barns or stables and standing quietly and without any announcement watching the men at their work. Mrs. Arden said that his sudden unheralded appearance often seemed almost uncanny, so stealthily and quietly did he move. He was not a great talker and never upbraided or made any adverse comment. But if he thought anyone was not doing his work thoroughly or well, he would have him dismissed at the end of the month with an extra month's salary in lieu of notice, and transportation as far as Victoria or Vancouver, whichever he thered a loyal and hard-working wished. By these means he soon gastaff about him.

famous Canadian historian; the superiors of the seminaries of Rimouski and Valleyfield; Canons Nepveu, Bissonnette, and Lachapelle; a Christian Brother representative; Rev. Father Léopold of the Agricultural Institute at Oka; Prof. Alex. Ness, representing Macdonald College; Martial Rheaume, M.P. for St. John's-Iberville; Dr. J. C. Moore, M.P. for Chateauguay-Huntingdon; R. R. Ness of the Quebec Council of Agriculture; Martin B. Fisher, M.L.A., for Huntingdon; J. E. Charbonneau, M.L.A. for Laprairie-Napierville; Dr. Alexis Bouthillier, M.L.A. for St. John's, Dr. W. J. Black of the C.N.R. Colonization Department, and others.

Mr. P. Nolasque April, director of the new Agricultural School who is also Mayor of Ste. Martine and Inspector of Agronomists for district No. 12, presided at the meeting. In a few well-chosen words in French and English he welcomed the large gathering then continued to explain the aims and ideals of the new agricultural school. He extended thanks to all who had assisted both in the construction of the school and at the opening ceremony. During the course of his remarks he referred to the fact that already 40 pupils had been enrolled for this season which term opens November 6th, and terminates in May. He said that he was especially pleased that of that number there were 8 English-speaking boys, from Dundee in Huntingdon county to Howick in Chateauguay.

Mgr. J. A. Langlois, Bishop of Valleyfield, said that he really felt the representative of the church in honouring and wishing well to agriculture. It was to the land that the clergy looked in the matter of replenishment of national and spiritual life throughout this country, and the whole world. His Lordship had words of praise for Mgr. Allard recalling that he had been successful in having a domestic science school established at Ste. Martine.

In his opening remarks Hon. Honoré Mercier thanked the clergy for their manfest interest by the large representation at the ceremony. "A few years ago," he said, "the then Minister of Agriculture sent us a new agronomist for our county of Chateauguay. At first it did seem that few people had confidence in him. His early age was against him. But it was not long before his abilities were appreciated and he later on was acclaimed mayor of the parish and within the last year has added to his honours by the appointment to the inspectorship of agricultural district No 12, and more latterly to direct this new Agricultural School of Ste. Martine.

"Another man who played a very important part in the realization of this college is, as you all know, Mgr. J. C. Allard. After his successful organization of the Ecole Classico-Menagère at Ste. Martine he then turned his thoughts to agricultural education for the young men. This beautiful building which you see today and the ideals which it embodies are the fruitition of Mgr. Allard's ambitions and his indefatigable work.

"It is evident that people have a very keen interest in all matters pertaining to the advancement of scientific agriculture. Since in these days of depression it is difficult to get money for the most necessary enterprises he felt specially gratified that the building and opening of the school had not been retarded." He pointed with special pride to the fact that all the furniture was made of Quebec wood in the province of Quebec, mostly by pupils of the Montreal Technical School, and that the architect for the building was Blaise Marchand, of Chateauguay.

Hon. Mr. Godbout said that the principal role of Government, as far as the farmers were concerned, was in educational work. True, the Government had to aid to the best of its ability in co-operative movements, in marketing, and in other ways, but these were secondary considerations when compared to education. Mr. Godbout said that the present condition of agriculture in the province was not alone due to the general depression, but to what had been done in the way of discounting the future during the prosperous days, and even a return to normal times in the world would not of its own restore prosperity to the farmers.

The minister stressed the necessity for the farmers of today to see to it that their sons are better educated than they are themselves, for certainly this was no time to farm under any but the best conditions. The day of happy-go-lucky farming was over, he said. That way spelled ruin, he said. The Quebec farmers have too much competition in their own home markets as well as in foreign markets to be successful except by the use of scientific methods by which the cost of production would be cut down, and the cost of what the farmers have to buy also reduced in price.

"We have very heavy competition to meet in the foreign markets ,and if we cannot cut down the cost of production on our goods we will not be able to meet competition on those markets," said the minister. It was essential that the farmer of tomorrow realize that he cannot live to himself, but must co-operate with his fellows, and that entailed sacrifice of personal tastes and desires. The difficulty today, said the minister, is that too many farmers refuse to co-operate with their fellows. Still another class did nothing but complain of what was done at meetings which they had not taken the trouble to attend. They constituted a class of disorder, and disintegration. In the school being opened the young farmers would be educated along the path of unselfishness, would be taught that they must be good citizens, and think in terms of helping society, and not in individual terms. He hoped that in two years the school would prove too small for the number of pupils wishing to attend, and that he would be urged to add to the capacity.

Mgr. J. C. Allard spoke with gratitude to all who had helped in the construction and for the realization of the college. He was very eulogious of the help given by Hon. Honoré Mercier and Hon. Adelard Godbout.

Addressing himself to the farmers present he said he knew many realized the necessity of education in agriculture but that there were others who did not. A concrete example of what he meant was given in an account of a district apple grower who did not follow the advice of his agronomist last spring in spraying his apple trees and that as a consequence he will lose approximately $600. Another was that of two farmers living side by side, one who obtained a half-ton of hay per acre and the other two tons per acre. The latter, he said, had a brother who was an agronomist and he followed his advice as to the necessity and application of fertilizer.

Canada's export trade lies at the very basis of the Dominion's prosperity and, in order to maintain its position as the fifth exporting nation of the world, its people cannot for a moment forget that they must carry on that export trade.

Thus the Right Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister of Canada, who has just returned from attendance at two major world conferences, expressed his commercial faith tonight, when he addressed guests of the Board of Trade at a welcoming dinner tendered to him by that body in the Ritz Carlton Hotel.

Coupled with this statement was another of great significance as indicating the line of policy the Government is likely to pursue with respect to changes in industrial working conditions.

"This country," Mr. Bennett said, "is the fifth exporting country in the world. We must maintain our position as an exporting country. We are competing with every country in the world. To continue to do that must of necessity indicate on our part no experiments in the cutting down of hours of labor and in the raising of rates of pay. I say that because we must maintain our position."

Accepted by many in the gathering as giving official quietus to suggestions that Canada might follow the example of the United States and lay down a recovery programme along the line of the NRA, Mr. Bennett's declaration came at the close of an address devoted largely to a review of his work in Great Britain and Europe and to suggesting the benefits that may accrue to Canada from that work.

One other declaration of outstanding importance was made when Mr. Bennett, after discussing the deliberations of the wheat conference, declared that "Canada would endeavor to give effect to the restrictive provisions of the agreement reached." That is to say, Canada will attempt to decrease wheat acreage in accordance with the agreement.

A voyage to the Chicago World's Fair that began two months before its opening May 27 was over today and two Norwegian brothers, Hans and Harold Homran, were trying out their land legs after crossing the Atlantic Ocean in a 25-foot homemade boat.

"We started on March 26 from Christiansen, Norway," said Hans as they turned into Chicago harbor last night pushed along by a stiff breeze. "And here we are—to see the fair."

One look at their boat would convince the most skeptical that, after all, the voyage Columbus made 400 years ago was no adventure at all.

In the first place they said they made their craft themselves—and of boards less than an inch thick. It is only three and a half feet deep and nine feet wide on the beam. To conserve space in the tiny cabin for food they installed but one small bunk, making it necessary to sleep in shifts.

"We had some adventures, too," said Hans. "Off the West Indies the police came out and got us, thinking we were murderers because we looked the part. And in the North Sea an English ship captain wanted to 'rescue' us, thinking we were adrift in a lifeboat."

Upon reaching the St. Lawrence they followed the long course of the Great Lakes to Chicago.

Premier Edouard Daladier of France, assured his Cabinet today that France's new line of steel and concrete defence works which stretches for 125 miles along the German frontier, is adequate to block invasion.

The attitude of the United States toward disarmament at Geneva in face of Hitlerite activities along the border is worrying the Government, which is tightening up its military and economic structure.

Foreign Minister Joseph Paul-Boncour reported to his colleagues that London and Washington are nervous over tension between Austria and Germany.

M. Paul-Boncour is particularly anxious for confirmation from Norman Davis, United States disarmament representative now on his way to Europe, that the United States will make efficient control of armaments a necessary preliminary to arms limitation.

Davis' reported statement aboard the S.S. Washington that he would no longer insist on a connection between debts and disarmament is considered a reversal of American policy. The French consider it favorable to their view that the two questions be kept separate.

One hundred persons were injured during the tropical storm which swept Havana, early tonight.

Many homes along Havana's waterfront were abandoned and property damage in Havana was heavy with 100,000 rendered homeless. Communications were interrupted along the northern coast of the island and it was impossible to learn the extent of damage in that area.

Looters were reported active along Havana's waterfront and police, soldiers and sailors were ordered to patrol the area and shoot looters on sight.

The Week-End

A belief that a new "gadget" General Francesca de Pinedo had invented failed to work and sent him to his flaming death Saturday when he lost control of his monoplane, was held by several Floyd Bennett Field aviation experts.

Although no official investigaton has been made, it was disclosed the noted Italian flier had a T-shape crosspiece of tubular metal made as an extension to the joystick that would enable him to add leverage as he attempted to lift the plane into the air. Experts believe the extension slipped off the stick and de Pinedo drew it back and that the stick then wobbled crazily with the sharp swaying of the plane while the flier struggled to regain the control.

Several who saw the crash Saturday as the noted airman attempted to hop for Baghdad on a non-stop flight that was intended as a come-back after several years of comparative obscurity, said they observed de Pinedo standing upright at one stage of his spurt down the concrete runway.

Experts expressed the opinion that the flier was jerked to his feet when the cross piece pulled loose.

The heavily loaded De Pinedo plane, a "flying gas tank" containing 1,027 gallons of fuel, wobbled off the concrete runway at Floyd Bennett Field, New York, skidded into the dirt and plunged into an iron fence near the administration building at 6.20 a.m. E.S.T., Saturday.

It is three years ago this month that a special session of Parliament, promised by Premier Bennett in the preceding general election campaign, met to provide means to deal with the unemployment problem, and in that same month three years ago the unemployment relief branch of the Federal Department of Labor was established under the direction of the late Hon. Gideon Robertson, then Minister of Labor, whose close attention to the task resulted in a breakdown of health and compelled him to retire. During the last year or more the responsible Minister has been Hon. Wesley A. Gordon, Minister of Labor and Mines and acting Minister of Immigration and Colonization.

In the three years that the unemployment relief branch, of which Commissioner Harry Hereford is the immediate head, has been functioning the total Dominion disbursements for relief have amounted to about $88,000,000, with a number of accounts yet to be settled. In addition, loans have been made to the western provinces to enable them to finance their own share and to assist the municipalities in financing their share of relief distribution. It is probable that total expenditure of the Dominion, the provinces and the municipalities for unemployment relief, direct and indirect, in the three years is close to $250,000,000. The total expenses of administration of the unemployment relief branch at Ottawa from its opening on September 23, 1930, to September 1, 1933, amounted to $226,886.79, which includes travelling expenses, salaries, telegrams, telephone calls and stationery.

Saturday

Defeated in the opening heat of the Harmsworth Trophy race at Algonac, Hubert Scott-Paine, British Challenger, was hopeful Saturday night that smoother water would prevail for the second contest with Gar Wood Monday afternoon.

The British pilot said that throughout Saturday's opening heat he did not get accustomed to the water. "There was a roll in the water; no surface," he said. It was impossible to see where the roll began or where it finished."

In his little Miss Britain III. Scott-Paine, after a slow start, got his craft up to a speed of 82.265 miles an hour in the final lap of the course.

But a burst of speed somewhere above the 90-mile an hour mark gave Gar Wood in his Miss America X. a lead at the start of the first race that Scott-Paine, in his silver-hued craft could not overcome, and the victorious American defender finished throttled down over the St. Clair River course.

A crowd estimated, upwards to 325,000 saw the United States defender lead the challenger home by one minute, 31 seconds, or by an approximate distance of 2½ miles.

Denying rumors that he possesses fabulous sums of money outside Cuba, under the control of the new Government, and declaring that he and his party have barely sufficient pocket money to meet travelling expenses, General Gerardo Machado engaged the Royal suite of the Mount Royal Hotel Sunday, after slipping dramatically through the cordon of newspapermen on the dockside where he arrived aboard the Canadian National Steamships liner the Lady Rodney from Nassau.

General Machado also stated his willingness, his eagerness even, to return to Cuba to stand either military or civil trial, providing the country he once ruled gave him a guarantee for his personal safety.

Even before the General's arrival, there were scenes of excitement at the dockside. Police cordons, stationed at the doors of Shed 14 and across two of the driveways, worked hard keeping back newspapermen and photographers hailing from as far west as Toronto and as far south as New York. Strangers were questioned, and especially suspicious eyes were cocked at the sprinkling of dark-skinned Cubans or other Latin-Americans to be seen in the gathering crowd.

The General's departure by fast taxi from the driveway of shed 14 was only a matter of minutes after the ship had tied up and cleared. Cameras were being trained on the various exits from the shed when, with a sudden honking of horns, the automobile slid down the drive and out of the gates.

A tropical hurricane blowing at 100-miles-an-hour struck. the coast and south central interior of Florida last night and today, and left a trail of more than $1,000,000 property damage and one known dead. The lone fatality was a negro at Gomez, who was killed when his home collapsed.

Property damage was widespread, the greatest loss falling on the citrus growers, with estimates of 75 to 80 per cent. destruction of the crops in the rich citrus belt in the centre of the state.

The storm struck at Lake Worth, south of Palm Beach, roared along the coast as far north as Vero, damaging property at West Palm Beach, Palm Beach, Jupiter, Fort Pierce, Stuart and other towns. Later it turned inward and tonight the storm apparently had passed into the Gulf of Mexico north of Tampa. Storm warnings were displayed along the west Florida coast to Mobile, Ala.

Fine Professional Cast Presents "Sun Up" —Carolina Drama, Here Soon

Scene from Great Drama "Sun Up"

One of the outstanding attractions of the coming season here will be "Sun Up", vivid drama of the mountain people of North Carolina.

Here is a poignant drama of the simple, primitive people of the Carolina mountains, living a life untouched by the great world "beyond the hills". How the World War shatters this isolated existence and plunges the Widow Cagle, her family and neighbors, into a vortex of emotional conflict is powerfully enacted in this great play.

"Sun Up" has scored tremendous successes in London, New York, and other metropolitan centers.

DUNDEE SCHOOL NOW TEACHES ELEVEN GRADES

Hon. Walter Mitchell, A. K. Cameron and M. T. Robb From Board of Education, Were Honored Guests

Dundee Consolidated School was opened on Tuesday, Sept. 5th as a school ready to teach up to Grade 11 inclusive. To mark this occasion the School Board, presided over by Mr. W. D. Fraser, arranged the holding of a special meeting of scholars and ratepayers on the opening day of school. To mark this event the Hon. Walter Mitchell, Mr. A. Kirk Cameron and Mr. M. T. Robb, all members of the Protestant Board of Education of Quebec, were present.

The Hon. Walter Mitchell stated that every child should be given the opportunity to have an education equal to that taught in every part of the world. The bringing about of consolidated schools was a great forward step in this direction. In this province we now have 40 consolidated schools. No one thing has advanced our school education so greatly as has the Consolidated School movement. During my 23 years on the Protestant Board of Education this Consolidated School movement is the greatest asset inaugurated.

It has done for the little folks of the country districts. In the cities, it was not such a problem to educate the youngsters, but consolidation of schools in the rural parts has solved that problem in their respective townships. The Hon. Walter Mitchell congratulated Dundee upon its initiative, and further step in bringing about the teaching of all eleven grades in Dundee Consolidated School. Mr. A. K. Cameron is the Daddy of Consolidated Schools in this Province.

Today we urge the doing away with unqualified teachers. We now have 19 such teachers in this Province, those whom I am classing as unqualified, are teachers who do not hold a teachers diploma. Our children deserve more from us as the mothers and fathers of them, and we should supply them with qualified teachers. Five years ago we had 105 unqualified teachers in this Province, today there are 19.

The teaching of French has very materially improved, and may that teaching continue making further advancements. The children are largely under the care of the mother until 10 years of age, after that, it is the father's hand that guides, followed by that of the teacher and the government. If we all do our part in due turn we will have an educated populace.

Mr. A. Kirk Cameron was the second speaker and referred to the opening of the Dundee School in 1928. He then stated that Dundee Consolidated School would ultimately become a High School which it is doing today. I extend my congratulations upon this achievement.

The business of living is becoming more complicated every day we live. The interdependence of each community creates extraordinary situations. We have people today who want to destroy property, that we may have a temporary bit of prosperity. The celebration of the "harvest home" has been a notable event for generations. We have reached the stage in the world's history where we know that we have plenty of everything to feed one another, clothe all; and house all; but we have not learned what to do with that which we have. May the judgment of Providence fall upon those who aim to destroy for the sake of a false situation, tempting a bit of prosperity.

We have made advances in science, so why not educate the youth and avoid the unethical actions of those who live to destroy. Today we must give our children better opportunities to receive their education, or as Roosevelt would term it " a new deal."

Now that you have erected this school and created the higher grades, including grade 11, you have taken one more step towards pursuing that course. 44 years ago a school of this nature was opened in Ontario which I attended. From it have gone boys and girls who have scored high positions in the world today. It proved an outlet for men who became prominent.

In closing may I say to you one and all, support your teachers, to the parents I say listen to the tales told by children but use your own reasoning before taking further steps. It is well to be slow in pronouncing judgment in such cases.

Messrs. M. T. Robb and Adam Sellar were both called upon, and spoke briefly.

The teaching staff for the Consolidated School of Dundee is composed of Principal C. Chapman, Miss Bernice Fraser, Miss Edna McRae and Miss Marjorie Salter.

The Rev. C. A. Haughton acted as chairman of the meeting and presented the prizes to the children that were earned through their passing the June examinations.

The Hon. Walter Mitchell offered a special prize of a book upon the "Life of Andrew Carnegie" to be awarded to the pupil adjudged the best all round pupil in the school during the next term.

At the noon hour the ladies entertained the guests of honor, the teachers and the school board to a chicken dinner in the Community Hall. The Hon. Walter Mitchell on behalf of the guests extended the vote of thanks to the ladies.

Electricity on the Farm

Electricity has revolutionised many of the things in our work-a-day world if we compare it with the days before the war. Few people imagined twenty years ago that the farmer would ever have his cows milked in any way other than by means of the milkmaids who make such a pretty sight on picture post-cards. But as all who read these notes know, electricity does this job today perfectly and hygienically. Still fewer people thought that it would be possible to induce fowls to get off their roosting perches earlier in the morning and keep scratching later at night in order that egg production could be increased. Yet, this practice is widely prevalent today as a result of simulating longer hours of daylight by means of electric light. Even only ten years ago, it was not regarded as feasible, except in one or two well-informed circles that electricity could be enlisted to so stimulate Nature that strawberries would be available weeks ahead of their normal season, and that we should get lettuce and cucumbers well in advance of the time we ordinarily look forward to green salads. But electricity nowadays puts such a spurt into Nature that she is induced to give us all sorts of fruit and flowers and vegetables long in advance of the calendar as we generally understand it with regard to our native crops.

The Shawinigan Water & Power Company made its first electric hotbed installation in January 1932. There are now 21 installations in the territory comprising 200 beds which are giving quite good results.

Nor is that all. Electricity has been applied successfully during the past three or four years to the solution of many problems which have long vexed those engaged in agriculture, introducing new methods into the oldest of all industries—new methods representative of modern efficiency demanded by the exacting economical circumstances of the times.

Just how far electricity has penetrated into this most conservative of industries, and is revolutionising it, is shown to-day in the clearest and most convincing way at the Rothamsted Experimental Station and Farm at Harpenden—the oldest agricultural experimental institution in the world, and the largest and most famous in the British Empire.

One by one electricity has brought city conveniences and comforts to the farm. Modern lighting—water supply—Electrical cooking and refrigeration—radios for evening entertainment and electrical power for household and farm work are but a few of the more important.

Many farmers for the first time in four years, are planning purchasing new equipment. The ones who have the advantages of electricity on the farm can find many new uses for that tireless worker "Electricity", employing farm equipment especially designed for electric drive.

Electricity eases the burdens around the farm, shortens the hours and brightens the home—truly, there is no other means by which so much can be accomplished through a like investment.

The relief from drudgery and the making of farm household truly a modern home for both young and old are but two of the many benefits derived from electricity.

Wedding Anniversary Celebrated.—

A very pleasing function took place on Monday evening, Aug. 28th, when neighbours and numerous friends from a distance surprised Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Churchill by gathering at their home to celebrate with them the 20th anniversary of their marriage. As the interested couple had been the guests of Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Maitland on a trip to St. John's with a picnic tea their surprise on returning home was genuine and complete. Dancing and social intercourse were enjoyed and after the serving of refreshments, Mr. Maitland on behalf of their friends, presented Mr. and Mrs. Churchill with a well filled purse. In the course of his accompanying remarks he gave expression to the general sentiment of esteem with which they were regarded as valued members of the community, and referred to the generous manner in which Mrs. Churchill had relieved distress in her professional capacity.

The following teams appeared for play: Beauharnois, Woodlands, Aubrey, Riverfield, Howick, Huntingdon, Beavers, Valleyfield Canadiens, Valleyfield Cardinals, Brysonville, and three teams from Ormstown.

The final game found Beavers of Glenelm and Valleyfield Cardinals battling for the silverware and after a real game of softball resulted in a win for the Valleyfield Cardinals by the score of 13 to 11. This game was just as close as the score indicates and was in doubt up to the last out.

At the finish of the game both teams were called to the home plate, where Dr. Stalker with a few well spoken words of praise for the sportsmanship of both teams presented the Cardinals with both cups.

Mr. L. Osmond had donated $5 for the player making the most home runs during the days games, and this money was split between S. Gavin of Beavers and J. C. Lefebvre of Huntingdon.

HOW ONE MAN LOST 19 lbs. FAT

Now Feels Absolutely Fit

A fat man is commonly supposed to be good-natured, easy-going. But there is many a fat man who finds the going far from easy. The following letter describes one typical instance.

"I began to put on weight this year, and developed stoutness in the stomach which was very ugly. I took Kruschen Salts each morning for a month, and reduced my weight 13 lbs. So I kept on, and have now reduced 19 lbs. altogether. Apart from that, it has also relieved me of headaches, and I feel absolutely fit each morning, ready for a hard day's work."—H. M.

Taken every morning, Kruschen effects a perfectly natural clearance of undigested food substances and all excessive watery waste matter. Unless this wastage is regularly expelled Nature will eventually store it up out of the way in the form of ugly fat. Once Kruschen gets into the blood you will soon see the double chin begin to go, and that too prominent abdomen begin to disappear.

TEA RESTRICTION

In April a restriction was placed on tea exports from Ceylon, India, and Java, in order to raise prices to growers, who, for almost four years, had been suffering devastating losses. Higher prices have resulted, not only at the gardens, but also here on our own markets, and many package teas already cost more than they did six months ago. Some of the finer quality brands are as yet unchanged, however, and are, consequently, even better value than at last April.

Yeast Cakes From Hops

Take a handful of hops and boil in 1 quart of water. Strain liquid and pour it over ½ cup wheat flour. When lukewarm, add three cakes of dry yeast that have been soaked in warm water. Set the yeast in a warm place until light, then add corn meal until thick enough to roll out like dough. Roll and cut into 3-inch squares. Dry in the shade and under a strong wind. When thoroughly dry, place in a paper bag and hang in a cool room. When drying the yeast, turn the cakes often to prevent souring. They can be dried near the stove in winter. When used for baking, use one cake, which will make 3 medium-sized loaves of bread. This yeast will keep six or eight months.

Sugar Yeast

To start sugar yeast, take any kind of ordinary bread sponging. Place seven tablespoons of the sponging in a glass jar and add 6 tablespoons sugar. Put that away until your next baking for your starter. The evening before baking, put the yeast into 1 pint of water and enough flour to make a stiff batter. Let this stand until morning and put back 7 tablespoons of this sponging into the jar with 6 tablespoons of sugar. This is for your next baking. To the remainder of the sponging add 2 tablespoons of sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, lard the size of an egg, and flour enough to make a stiff dough. Set this away in a warm place to rise. When light, mold into loaves and let rise again and bake in a moderate oven. This amount will make two good-sized loaves or three smaller ones. If a larger baking is desired, just add more water when the pint is added in the morning, but do not add more of the other ingredients.

Dizzy, sick headaches and a weak stomach made me feel perfectly wretched. Now thanks to your wonderful 'Fruit-a-tives', I am enjoying life again."

Canning Without Sugar

Canning without sugar may be specially recommended for some fruits, namely saskatoons, blueberries and rhubarb, as the resultant product is even better than that done in the usual way. Raspberries and pitted cherries yield a fairly satisfactory product when canned without sugar. All other fruits may be canned successfully without sugar, but it cannot be claimed that the product obtained is quite as good as that done with the sugar.

Since sugar acts as a preservative, special attention must be given to soundness of product and to sterilization if the sugar is omitted. Except where special recipes are given as below, the usual method of canning without sugar is to follow the regular canning instructions, adding boiling water instead of syrup. An effort should be made under these circumstances to can the fruit the same day it is picked.

Saskatoons—Pick over and wash. Place one or two quarts of fruit in a cheesecloth bag and lower into boiling water. As soon as spots of color begin to show on the cloth, about 20-30 seconds, remove from the water and pack into clean dry jars as tightly as possible without crushing. Seal tightly. Process for 20 minutes for pint jars and 25 minutes for quarts. This same method may be used for blueberries and raspberries. For pitted cherries the blanching may be omitted and the berries pressed so they will be covered with their own juice.

Berries canned in this way may be served with cream and sugar, or they make excellent pies and puddings.

Rhubarb—this is best canned in June, though it may be done later. Wash the rhubarb, dry, and cut into ½-inch pieces. Sterilize the food chopper and cool. Sterilize the jars and cool. Pack jars as tightly as possible with the pieces of rhubarb. Fill completely with juice which has been extracted by putting some of the rhubarb through the chopper. Run a sterilized knife around the inside of the jar to let the air bubbles escape. Refill jars if necessary. Seal tightly and store in a cool, dry place.

If no chopper is available, some of the rhubarb may be crushed in a crock with a wooden potato masher. Gooseberries may be done in this same way. The product is much superior to that done by the cold water method.

If for use in beverages or pudding sauces, fruit juices should have sugar added in the proportion of one cup of sugar to one gallon of juice. If to be made into jelly, do not add any sugar at all. A satisfactory method is the following:

be made into jelly,donotaddanygbm.

Select sound, ripe fruit, crush and heat slowly to simmering point. When cooked sufficiently, strain. If a perfectly clear juice is desired, allow to stand for a few hours to settle. Pour juice into clean, hot jars. Partly seal, and process in a water bath at simmering temperature for 30 minutes. Remove from the canner and seal immediately. The simmering temperature helps to prevent loss of flavor. Bottles may be used to can fruit juices—dip tops in parrafin or sealing wax.

Rearing Fine Children

A woman, whose sons and daughters are a crown of glory to her, was asked the other day by a group of mothers for her recipe for bringing up children.

"For the proof of the pudding is in the eating," said one of the women, "and I never saw as nice well-behaved, well-mannered children as yours. And they are obedient in a day when an obedient child is a museum curiosity."

"Oh, I have no formula for bringing up children," replied the woman, "but I did rear mine according to a theory that I had and it has worked out pretty well. I have always had an idea that we undervalued childrens' intelligence, and especially that we undervalued their sense of justice and personal dignity, and so from the time that mine could understand anything at all I have respected them as human beings and tried to treat them, as nearly as I could, as I would grown-up people.

"I have always tried things out on myself to see how I would like them before I subjected my poor little helpless children to them. For instance, discussing a child before its face and having all of its faults and weaknesses dragged out into the open. What one of us would endure being pilloried before a roomful of people and have some one say how unfortunate it was that we had inherited the Smiths' big nose or that we didn't get the Jones' mouth or that we looked pale and sickly or that we are overbig or undersized?

"And which one of us could endure it if we told the person that we loved and trusted above all others in the world the most sacred secret of our souls, and that person laughed at our dreams or made a funny story out of our confidence and told it as a great joke to a lot of guffawing people? I have never committed these atrocities against my children.

"As for my children being obedient, it is because, in the first place, I have never put too many restrictions on them. I have never been one of these don't mothers who forbid everything a child wants to do. I have given mine just as much liberty as was possible and then when I had to forbid a thing they knew there was a good reason for it and respected it.

"A great many people keep all of their troubles and worries away from their children, and especially they never talk to their children about the lack of money. They say they do not wish their youngsters to be burdened with the cares of life so early. We have pursued the opposite tactics and have explained to our children that we are not rich people and cannot afford to give them the luxuries that wealthy parents give their children.

"This has not only made our children content to have plainer clothes and fewer treats, but it has made them want to help us.

"People often wonder at our children doing cheerfully and with enthusiasm chores that they wear themselves out trying to get their children to do. It is because we have made them partners in the home. It is their house as much as ours and they are responsible for doing their definite part, not only in making it comfortable, but in making it pleasant. So Mary does one thing and John does another and Sally something else, and if any one falls down in his task the others make him feel a quitter.

"We have taught the children good manners by being as polite to them as we desire them to be to other people. You can't yell at a child and expect him to return the soft answer. Good manners are simply a matter of habit. We have taught our children good ones instead of bad ones, and they eat with their forks and use the right spoon and are suave and courteous because they don't know that they could do otherwise.

"In a word, we have treated our children as if they were intelligent human beings instead of puppets or slaves or playthings, and the result has been satisfactory—to their parents at all events."

CANADIAN AUTHOR MAKES BIG HIT

The literary hit of the year has been made by Frederick Niven, an author residing near Nelson, B.C. whose novel entitled "Mrs. Barry" is described by Compton Mackenzie in the Daily Mail as a profoundly moving book, and is hailed as a classic worthy to stand beside Sir James Barrie's "Margaret Ogilvy".

Although Frederick Niven has a long list of books to his credit, and has always enjoyed a following among the critics, this is his first appearance among the "best sellers". He worked his way through Canada early this century, and at one time handled baggage and freight for the C. P. R. at Nelson, B.C. He eventually took up a small holding on Kootenay Lake twenty years ago, where he has secured excellent local colour for his western stories.

"Mrs. Barry" is a novel of life in Glasgow, where at one time Frederick Niven edited a newspaper.

Quick Repairs in Hosiery

Emergency repairs to hosiery can often be successfully accomplished by utilizing, in the ordinary way, a carefully picked-out needleful of the necessary darning material from the selvage at the top of the stocking. Even though the thread or silk in this part of the hose is heavier in texture, the shade will be found a perfect match for the lower part of the stocking. If a single thread is carefully clipped as a starting point and the necessary needlefuls are picked out, horizontally of the weave, there is no probability of injuring the firmness of the selvage or of starting a run below the line of the welt.

When Travelling

In travelling, this little suggestion is worth remembering, especially when one's limited sewing kit is not fully stocked and the hosiery to be repaired is of a hard-to-match shade. In fact, some women have found this little mending trick such a convenience in the exact matching of shades that when discarding a pair of stockings of a favorite tint, the selvage is clipped off and slipped into a sewing bag, for convenient future use.

Sausage Meat Canning

Some people have difficulty in canning sausage meat successfully, but there need be no failure if this method is followed. First of all sterilize the jars thoroughly and set a pan of water on the stove to get hot. Be sure the jars are hot when putting in the sausage meat as hot fat is hotter than water. Place a dish of lard on the stove also to cover the meat with. Place the frying pan on the stove and make your sausage meat into little cakes, fry brown on both sides, but not thoroughly done. Put these into the jars and pour over very slowly the hot lard to cover. Pour in any fat that fries out of them, too. Seal the jars tightly, keep in a cool place then they will keep sweet as long as the lard does not go rancid. I have never lost a jar this way. When you open a jar heat in the frying pan or the oven and they are as nice as when first cooked.

Be sure to pour the lard in slowly or you may crack your jars.

Here is a good sausage meat recipe: Use one-third fat and two-thirds lean pork. Put through the food chopper and to every 12 pounds of pork take 12 teaspoons salt, 6 teaspoons pepper and 9 teaspoons sifted sage. Mix well with the hands. If liked finer put through the chopper again, but this makes it rather soft. If used entirely while fresh keep in a cool place.

Spices Affect Catsup Color

It is not necessary to use artificial coloring matter to make bright red catsup of fine flavor and body, says Dr. C. S. Pederson, bacteriologist, who has made a special study of spoilage problems of catsup and other tomato products. The trick of making good-colored catsup is simple if a few precautions are observed, declares this authority.

Good Recipe

"First, select fine, red, ripe tomatoes," says Dr. Pederson. "Second, avoid the use of cloves, allspice and other spices containing tannin, because they darken the catsup. In their place use cayenne pepper and paprika and other spices which, used in the proper combination, give an excellent flavored catsup. Third, add the salt, sugar and vinegar near the end of the cooking so as not to cause darkening of the catsup or loss of vinegar during the cooling. Fourth, boil rapidly in a large open kettle so as to thicken the catsup as quickly as possible."

Home-made catsups may have the body and keeping quality of commercial catsups, if they contain sufficient sugar, concentrated vinegar and salt, it is said. The following recipe is especially recommended with the necessary precautions outlined above: Thirty pounds of tomatoes after removing skins, seeds and green spots; 1½ cup of salt, 3 1-3 cups of redistilled vinegar, 6 1-3 cups of white vinegar, 8 cups of sugar, 6 teaspoons of celery seed, 3 teaspoons of mustard, 2 teaspoons of cinnamon, 3 teaspoons of paprika, 2 teaspoons of cayenne pepper and 4 onions.

Now that the circusses are all out on the road, with the elephants in a different place every day, one wonders what the millinery houses use to step on derbies to make these pancake hats.
