Trudeau calls for Comm'wealth re-unity as conference ends

SINGAPORE (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau made what in effect was a Canadian call for the revitalization of the Commonwealth Thursday as the leaders conference of the 31-country community of nations staggered toward its end.

"We could, I suppose, get along without the Commonwealth, but we should not get along nearly so well," he said in a speech that called for discussion of specific world issues at future Commonwealth conferences.

The nine-day conference was to end today with the Commonwealth battered but still intact and the mother country still reaping the winds of anger.

British Prime Minister Edward Heath, who stood virtually alone since the start of the conference defending British proposals to sell arms to the South African navy—an issue that threatened to wreck the Commonwealth—came under pressure Thursday over British plans to join the European Common Market.

And today he will be in the centre of controversy as the conference deals with its last major item, a declaration of principles proposed by Zambia, and argues out a final communique.

Heath, weary from hours of criticism over the arms-to-South Africa debate that lasted until 4 a.m. Thursday, responded sharply to those who called for protection of their trade if Britain enters the Common Market.

He said that after the attacks on the British on the arms issue he wonders why some members still want association with London, let alone desire British aid in safeguarding their interests.

Trudeau, who leaves today for a state visit to Indonesia, touched on a number of subjects.

He supported strongly the Zambian-proposed declaration of principles for the Commonwealth which, among other things, says that countries should not provide aid to countries practising racial discrimination.

He touched on Canada's fears of British entry into the Common Market.

And he defended the Commonwealth while criticizing the conferences that he said smack too much of the talk sessions of the United Nations General Assembly.

In his call for revitalization, he said it is essential to build from what now exists.

He said "none of us in the Commonwealth, not the populous, the large, the wealthy, any more than the small and the impoverished are able to exist without the other."

"We could, I suppose, get along without this Commonwealth, but we should not get along nearly so well.

"No problem will be solved by the breakup of this odd association, not one of us will find it easier to advance our own interests in its absence."

Trudeau suggested that future Commonwealth meetings forgo set speeches and the usual general political and economic reviews and tackle such specific subjects as world economic disparities, racial discrimination, trading patterns, pollution and the population explosion.

While bleary-eyed officials struggled to put together a conference-ending communique—and the dispute over arms sales continued in these attempts—Trudeau said that such a communique should be dropped in the future.

"Do we want to talk to each other or to each other?" he asked.

To reporters he said "we didn't have to travel thousands of miles to sit for hours listening to speeches which, I repeat, are very identical to those we hear in the UN."

"You know: Isn't it terrible what's happening in the Middle East... isn't it terrible that the other side isn't understanding those fundamental truths that are so obvious?"

Trial witness Denies active involvement

MONTREAL (CP) — A young Manitoban testified Thursday that police slapped him and pulled his hair after his arrest last Oct. 24 to obtain a statement linking him with the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Portions of the three-page statement signed by Raymond Cormier, 23, were read in court by Prosecutor Gabriel Lapointe to "refresh the memory" of the witness, who came to Montreal seven months ago from his native St. Boniface, Man.

Cormier was testifying at the trial of his friend Come Leblanc, 23, an unemployed Montreal laborer, on three charges connecting him with the outlawed FLQ.

Cormier admitted that he met regularly last fall with Leblanc and two other young men "to drink beer and talk politics" and that they visited junior colleges to distribute copies of an FLQ "manifesto" calling for a workers' revolution to establish an independent Quebec.

But he denied having told police that he and his three friends plotted to rob gunshops to get weapons, or that they planned to take "direct action to support the cause, the FLQ movement."

MADE UNDER DURESS

"That statement was made under physical and moral coercion," Cormier said.

Police had interrogated him for several hours.

"They hit me in the face and on the back of the neck, and they pulled my hair like this."

Cormier also denied telling police that his brother Gilles, Jean Bojsjoli and himself had "planned" a training camp in northern Manitoba where they would practise with arms and explosives to return to Quebec and "blow up the offices of Household Finance" Corp. of Canada.

In earlier testimony, Cormier admitted that he and three companions—his brother Gilles Cormier, 20, Jean Bojsjoli, 21, also a St. Boniface native, and Leblanc—had distributed to students copies of the FLQ manifesto and another tract calling for a general strike by students.

He said he picked up copies of the manifesto at a student rally at the University of Montreal Oct. 14 and took them to junior colleges in the central Quebec cities of Shawinigan and Trois-Rivieres the next day.

FIVE TRAVELLED

With him on the trip were his three friends "and another guy who took no part in the distribution, Denis Quenneville."

The day after the trip, Oct. 16, the War Measures Act was invoked in Ottawa to cope with Quebec's two political kidnappings.

That day, Cormier picked up a black briefcase at Leblanc's apartment and took it home with him. The briefcase, presented in evidence Wednesday, contained copies of the two political tracts and a number of paperback books on the Cuban revolution, the Vietnam war and other political topics.

Police witnesses testified that it was found in the Cormier brothers' apartment Oct. 24.

Cormier said he had first seen the briefcase at Leblanc's apartment, but he thought it belonged to Bojsjoli.

"Jean (Bojsjoli) was teaching, he was probably the one who used it."

Air crash jury decides Canadians should be fingerprinted

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A coroner's jury investigating the July 5 crash of an Air Canada jetliner recommended Thursday that every Canadian consider submitting to voluntary fingerprinting by law-enforcement agencies.

The five-man jury, which investigated the crash of Air Canada's California Galaxy Flight 621 north of Toronto International Airport, earlier heard testimony that identification of the 109 shattered bodies was one of the most difficult investigatory procedures.

All police agencies should "provide facilities to enable any citizen to obtain a set of his own fingerprints" but police should not be allowed to keep a copy of the prints, the five men told Dr. H. B. Cotnam, Ontario's supervising coroner.

Only 20 of those killed when the DC-8-63 elongated passenger jet slammed into a farmer's field after losing an engine during a landing attempt were identified through their fingerprints.

Dr. Cotnam said in his summation to the jury that air-accident investigators would have been able to identify "almost 100 per cent" of the victims, had their fingerprints been on record somewhere.

As it was, 20 of the bodies were never connected with names on the passenger list and were buried in a mass funeral in Toronto July 30.

The jury, which was under orders not to investigate the cause of the crash because that was the subject of a recently-concluded federal inquiry, also said dental records and fingerprints of all air crews should be kept on record by airlines or by some central body.

Forty-four of the crash victims were identified through dental records.

Dr. Cotnam said the present system of identification "might break down completely in the era of the jumbo jet with three or four hundred people to a plane."

The jury also handed down a firm decision on one of the most controversial matters to arise at the inquest: whether or not Captain Peter Hamilton and First Officer Donald Rowland were sitting in their correct seats when the jet went down.

Preliminary reports by forensic scientists said the medical evidence made a strong case for assuming that Captain Hamilton was sitting in the co-pilot's seat on the right side of the cockpit. However, the specialists backed off their initial conclusions after hearing technical evidence by transport department investigators at the federal inquiry in December.

The jury said Captain Hamilton was sitting in the pilot's seat and First Officer Rowland was in the co-pilot's position.

Asbestos hit by second landslide in five weeks

ASBESTOS — About 10 families were evacuated from their homes Thursday when their houses and six business buildings, located in the downtown area along Bourbeau Street between St. Jean Baptiste and Noel Streets slipped about nine feet in as many hours into a hollow caused by a landslide in a nearby open-pit asbestos mine.

The sudden movements surprised everyone since the Johns-Manville officials had regarded the area as reasonably safe.

No injuries were reported from the early-morning slide which also caused the wall of the Continental Department Store to collapse.

This was the second landslide to occur in Asbestos in less than 5 days. A landslide last December 20 left 68 families homeless.

QUEBEC IN FOCUS

L'Allier denies report

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean-Paul L'Allier, Quebec civil service minister, says he returned Thursday from a conference in west Africa because of important cabinet business, not because of friction with federal government representatives at the same conference.

Mr. L'Allier surprised some government sources in Ottawa earlier Thursday by leaving the conference of French-speaking nations in Lome, Togo, before his scheduled departure next Monday.

Sovereignty must be kept

OTTAWA (CP) — Quebec should call itself a republic if it wants to, as long as the sovereignty implied is restricted to the provinces' jurisdiction under the British North America Act, the Commons-Senate constitutional committee was told Thursday.

J. A. Corry, former principal of Queen's University and an authority on Canadian constitutional history, said a new constitution should empower Quebec to replace the lieutenant-governor "with a formal head of state chosen in some other way and known by some other title."

Pleads 'not guilty'

MONTREAL (CP) — A plea of not guilty was entered in Sessions Court Thursday on behalf of Reader's Digest Association of Canada, charged with publishing "untrue, deceptive and misleading" advertising.

The charges, laid under the Combines Investigation Act by the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs, allege that Reader's Digest misrepresented the chances of winning prizes offered in sweepstakes promotions in 1969 and 1970.

Board fails to reach consensus -CBC dispute

OTTAWA (CP) — A conciliation board appointed in a dispute between the CBC and some 1,650 television production employees has failed to reach agreement on proposed wage increases.

In a report handed down Thursday, a majority recommendation would give production workers - cameramen, soundmen, cutters, carpenters and others - a 22-per-cent increase in a three-year contract.

The management nominee on the three-man board, however, recommends an increase of only 14 per cent over the same period.

Although strike action could legally be undertaken eight days after presentation of the report, the possibility appears remote.

A spokesman for the Canadian Union of Public Employees, which represents production workers, said a bargaining and strategy committee is considering the 39-page report and expects to make a statement early next week.

Import bill expected to get full Commons airing

OTTAWA (CP) — Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin outlined in the Commons Thursday his bill to allow the government to base protection of the Canadian textile industry on industry plans for self-improvement.

On second reading of the bill, Mr. Pepin said it met a pattern for other countries that could "go a long way to improve" the international clothing and textile market.

The bill would set up a three-member clothing and textile board empowered to investigate complaints from Canadian manufacturers of injury or potential damage from imports.

Actually, the board has been operating since November on the basis of cabinet regulations.

The board could recommend that the cabinet apply protection measures such as tariffs.

But along with its finding of potential damage, the board must pass on to the cabinet plans developed by the industry to improve its techniques to become competitive against foreign goods.

It would then be up to the cabinet to decide whether to supply protection.

Mr. Pepin said protection would only be resorted to when agreements could not be reached with supplier countries.

Canada imports more than a million dozen shirts annually, he said.

By making companies plan greater efficiency in their operations, the measure is considered better than outright protection of domestic producers against lower-priced imports.

With increased attention to promotion, exports of clothing to the U.S. rose to $55 million in 1970 from $42 million the year before.

Infant lung disease, pollution linked says expert

OTTAWA (CP) — Air pollution in Canada, at least in Montreal and Toronto, is so high now that babies are already suffering more lung disease than they used to, a medical expert says.

Adults must be suffering even more after years of breathing dirty air and smoking cigarettes.

Dr. David Bates, professor of experimental medicine and chairman of physiology at McGill University, drew this murky picture in a session on lung cancer and respiratory diseases at the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons' annual meeting here.

He said the public should know that air pollution does less damage to health than cigarette smoking. But he believes Canada should act now to prevent a slow drift into even worse air pollution.

He said the aim should be to rid the air as far as possible of floating particles and gases such as sulphur dioxide.

Separately they can be harmful, at high enough levels. Together, the particles give the gas a free ride right into the lung "and you have a much more dangerous situation."

A considerable share of the particles comes from industries and about 15 per cent from auto exhausts, he said. One metal plant upwind from Montreal poured 25 tons of microparticles into the air every 24 hours. He declined to identify the industry.

Studies in Britain showed that children below age two suffered more lung disease, especially chronic bronchitis and emphysema, as the floating particle and gas pollution increased.

Dr. Bates said when sulphur dioxide rises above .08 parts per million and particles above 200 micrograms per cubic metre, lung diseases in the community also climb.

In 1968, the average sulphur dioxide level at Toronto City Hall was .08 parts per million. He figured it at about the same in the Drummond-St. Catherine Street section of downtown Montreal.

The annual average of particulate matter in Montreal air comes near 300 micrograms per cubic metre. A particulate average of 200 produces a demonstrable effect on the population.

Dr. Bates said the British study alone should spur Canadians to action because this country already has worse air pollution levels than Britain.

A Montreal study of children admitted to hospital found a relationship between sulphur dioxide levels in the parts of the city where they lived and their illnesses.

Dr. Bates said cleanup action against particulates and gases should begin now because it takes up to 10 years to produce a significant reduction in particles alone.

He estimates that Montreal gets most of its sulphur dioxide from oil furnaces, about 10 times as much as from refineries.

Remote parts of the country have an annual average of nine micrograms per cubic metre of particles—"that's what good air is." Cities have 20 times that as an annual average "and it's all preventable."

The student ducked the first spade, but he had to win the second with his king. Then he went over to dummy with the queen of diamonds in order to lead the deuce of clubs toward his king. The king held and he led back a second club. West played low and after a slight period of thought the student played dummy's 10. East took his jack and led his last spade to set up two more spade tricks for his partner.

The student had to play a third club and West cashed his ace and the two good spades.

"Should I have guessed that West had ducked with the club ace?" asked the student.

"No," the Professor replied. "West made a very good play when he refused to take your king. You can't be blamed for going wrong. However, you did play the hand poorly."

Do you see what the student did wrong?

He should have played the king of clubs from his hand at trick three, instead of leading a diamond to dummy so as to play clubs from there. West might have been sharp enough to duck without going into prolonged study but it is doubtful.

However, for the one player good enough to make that play there are many more who could spot what declarer was up to when he goes out of his way to lead the suit from dummy. In that respect the student had helped the defense a trifle.

Management Institute announces changes

TORONTO — C. A. Kitchen, C.I.M., National Director of Education for the Canadian Institute of Management is pleased to announce that the Registration Committee of the Public Service Commission, Purchasing and Supply Career Development Program, has agreed to accept the Certificate Course in Industrial Management and Administration as a complete exemption of its Business Management Training Syllabus.

"Notice of this important step by the P.S.C. in Ottawa is timely", said Mr. Kitchen in a news release.

"Our newest C.I.M. Branch in Saskatoon has 22 Federal employees in year 1 of the 4 year University level course. Their fields of employment include Post Office Supervisors; Canadian National Railway Agents; Indian Affairs Supervisors; National Health and Welfare Officers; Dept. of Transport; Canada Dept. of Agriculture; Citizenship and Immigration and Central Mortgage and Housing."

The wide range of management enrolled in Saskatoon proves the wisdom in opening up the previously industrial association to include all Canadian Managers. A total of 141 Saskatoon and area first year students set a new record for the Institute.

Local Managers who wish further information on this non-profit program are asked to contact Mr. D. A. Maguire, Box 411, Sherbrooke, Quebec.

before, stronger support poles and a computerized nerve centre described by Councilman Gerard Deziel as "the first of its type in Canada."

The nerve centre is capable of setting up eight different phases to clear traffic at the intersection. It can program the required phases by measuring the density of traffic passing over magnetic detection strips hidden under the pavement at each corner of the intersection.

The nerve centre has been tested for two months at an intersection similar to the one where it will be permanently installed. After proving itself worthy to the task of unsnarling previously congested traffic, the nerve centre and complete system were installed at the King St. W.-Jacques Cartier Blvd. intersection. The installation will be completed today when Mr. Al Hayes, a technician from the firm which built the nerve centre, puts the system through its final tests.

The City of Sherbrooke describes the King St. West-Jacques Cartier Blvd.

intersection as being "one of the busiest in the city."

Municipal council, on the insistence of alderman Gerard Deziel, mandated the city's Technical Services at the end of 1969. "To study improvements...which would insure facility and safety to those who use King West and Jacques Cartier."

The Technical Services began their study early in 1970 and had it completed and accepted by Council before March of the same year.

The estimated cost of the project was $85,000 and all engineering, roads and electrical work was to be done by municipal employees.

Jacques-Cartier Blvd north and south were expanded so that each approach now consists of three lanes, one for left turns, another for right turns and another for traffic continuing straight ahead.

The three lanes on King St. West are arranged slightly different from those on Jacques-Cartier. One lane will be conserved each way for either turning or going straight.

The curbs of the four corners have been narrowed as much as possible but three of the four corners were taken up by gas stations at the time of council's ratification of the system.

Municipal administrators who played key parts in the realization of the project besides Council, Deziel are public works department director Roger Charland, Hydro-Sherbrooke superintendent Raymond Carrier, roads engineering division Chief Jean-Paul Lajoie and Technical Services director Frank Mascolo.

Adult agricultural training shows increase in enrollment

SHERBROOKE (CJ) — Since the beginning of this year, Quebec farmers have had the opportunity to follow audio-visual courses on farm management thanks to a vocational training program for adults organized under a federal-provincial agreement.

Officially inaugurated last December at the faculty of Agriculture, Laval University, the courses are foremost among measures intended to increase the farmer's income. They are designed for farmers with sufficient schooling and experience to benefit from them and are already being given — or soon will be to 130 groups in 44 regional school commissions.

The psychological-teaching method on which the course is based is a notable innovation in the extension methods hitherto used in agricultural instruction.

The content of the courses — really a pilot series — deals with all aspects of farm management. The series, on 40 half-hour video tapes, was prepared by Radio-Quebec in collaboration with the Department of Agriculture and Colonization and the Technical Educational Methods service of the Department of Education. It is based on information supplied by Laval University's faculty of Agriculture, the institutes of agricultural technology, the Quebec Farm Credit Bureau and Farm Credit Corporation.

The courses are in the form of dialogue by two farm management specialists with illustrations, comparative tables, well-documented reports and music. The nature of sound farm management, the reasons for it, and method of ensuring it are discussed and analyzed.

Each presentation is supplemented by textual material with the help of which farmers can study more thoroughly — either individually or in workshops — the information they have acquired, and thus understand its implications better.

From a practical standpoint, these courses form an ideal groundwork for the programs on field crops and animal husbandry which most of the present students will have an opportunity to follow.

Each course is presented by instructors trained in group leadership and study at Laval University and MacDonald College. Farm management specialists from regional agricultural offices are also available to supervise the instruction and deal with problems raised by the farmers.

This year, it is estimated that about 2,800 of the 8,000 students enrolled for the adult agricultural training programs will be able to take this new form of agricultural instruction.

Authorities at the Quebec Department of Agriculture and Colonization also state that, in addition to this series, the ordinary courses on various specialized branches of farming will be continued where they have customarily been given in the past.

Another audio-visual series on field crops and livestock, produced by Radio-Quebec and government personnel of the Lower St. Lawrence and Gaspé agricultural region, is also available to all school commissions.

'See Canada first' plan to be launched by bureau

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Government Travel Bureau, which spends about $11 million a year urging aliens to visit Canada, is planning a campaign to press the same idea on Canadians.

Bureau director Dan Wallace says the program, to be launched next month, involves more than see-Canada-first promotion. It is designed to get Canadians to invest in a major domestic growth industry.

In theory, cash spent at home will stimulate expansion of travel and tourism facilities — hotels, roads, restaurants, airports — that in turn should attract more foreign visitors.

The eventual payoff prospects are bountiful in terms of jobs, facilities and foreign-currency income that might easily triple within 10 years to $3 billion annually.

Mr. Wallace, who has just completed a tour of provincial and territorial capitals discussing the program, says few Canadians realize just how big the travel and tourism business is in this country. He reels off the statistics:

—Eight out of every 100 Canadian employees work in "this industry without smokestacks."

—Canada and France are neck-and-neck for fourth place — after the United States, Spain and Italy — in money earned from foreign visitors.

—The estimated $1.2 billion spent in Canada last year by foreign visitors puts travel and tourism in the top rank of industries with big earnings from abroad, behind only the $3.5 billion in auto exports, just ahead of newspaper and well out in front of petroleum's $700 million and wheat's $600 million.

Experts guess that Canadians spend between $2 billion and $3 billion a year travelling within the country. Canadians also spend more per capita travelling outside their own country than any other people — about $65 for each Canadian annually or $1.4 billion in all last year.

Winning fight against unemployment - Mackasey

TORONTO (CP) — Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey repeatedly assured interviewers Thursday night that Canada has "turned the corner" in the fight against both inflation and unemployment.

Questioned on the CBC television program Encounter, Mr. Mackasey said he is certain the trend toward full employment will become obvious in April.

"I think the steps Mr. Benson (Finance Minister Edgar Benson) has taken... to inject billions of dollars into the economy are the right steps," he said.

Mr. Mackasey said recent figures showing an increase in the importation of machinery and equipment, combined with a release of money after two years in which companies held back on expansion projects, indicate employment will be up.

He said the effects of Mr. Benson's policies are not immediately visible because "any step anybody has recommended or will recommend must allow for lead time."

Any move to reduce income taxes, a policy recommended by some economists, "would reduce the income of the government by a billion dollars... That wouldn't create jobs tomorrow."

He admitted he would have liked the government to tackle inflation a different way. "When and if we have another round of inflation... I would prefer to try selective controls," he said.

Court briefs

By DAVID MAGIL

SHERBROOKE — Fernand Vallieres, 36, of Sherbrooke received a suspended sentence from Sessions Court Judge Benoit Turmel yesterday, thanks to an eloquent appeal by defence counsel Roch Fournier and the presence of his employer in court.

Vallieres had earlier pleaded guilty to a charge of possessing a jacket stolen from the Austin Glove Co.

Mr. Fournier told the bench Vallieres was married, had two children, was gainfully employed and had returned the stolen merchandise. He also noted that Valliere's employer was in court and that he would lose his job if he were to be imprisoned.

An Asbestos resident was fined $100 after he pleaded guilty to charges of hit and run and impaired driving before Sessions Court Judge Benoit Turmel yesterday but did not have his driving licence suspended.

Judge Turmel was sympathetic to defence counsel Leo Daigle's request that 48-year-old Gille Lebleu's licence be suspended for a minimum amount of time since it provided the accused's only source of income.

Lebleu was severely injured and permanently disabled as the result of an automobile accident a year ago, Mr. Daigle said, and the only function he can now perform is driving a small truck.

Judge Benoit Turmel of Sessions Court rejected a charge of car theft against Armand Verner, 30, of Montreal, just as defence counsel Marc-Andre Soucy was beginning the accused's voluntary statement.

Testimony heard yesterday revealed Mr. Verner had been apprehended in a stolen car belonging to Gilles Blanche of Magog along with Clement Plant, 25, of Benjaminville, who is presently serving a sentence as a result of the theft.

Plant told the court he had stolen the car and drove it to Montreal. There he met Mr. Verner and was in the process of helping the accused move from one boarding house to another when he was apprehended by Montreal police. He had never met Mr. Verner before that day, he said.

Sessions Judge Benoit Turmel rejected a charge of creating a public disturbance against Arthur Bennett, 51, of Sawyerville yesterday. Sawyerville Police Chief Edward Lloyd testified at the preliminary hearing Mr. Bennett had sworn at him and tried to break the glass on the driver's side of his patrol car with his fist, on Aug. 31, 1970.

Judge Turmel ruled Mr. Bennett's actions "reasonable" in the light of the testimony put forward witnesses.

Mr. Bennett testified he had not made an excessive amount of noise and had "tapped" on the window of Chief Lloyd's patrol car because he wanted to talk to him.

Earlier testimony had revealed Chief Lloyd provoked Mr. Bennett by telling him his son Lloyd Bennett had caused a serious accident when the young man actually was at home and had not been involved in any accident.

Proposed bail reform act to alleviate police pressure

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — A toned-down arrest and bail bill that would put less pressure on the patrolman but still give suspected culprits an even break was introduced in the Commons Thursday.

Known as the bail reform act, it was introduced in Parliament last June, then redrafted after police said it would place too much onus on patrolmen for a quick decision on whether to arrest or summons.

Justice Minister John Turner, after the bill was given first reading, said in an interview that this was a valid criticism. The new bill provided "guidelines" for police.

He said the bill will "virtually exclude" cash bail as a consideration in detaining suspects.

Money would be required as bail only if a person lived more than 100 miles from where he was arrested or if he couldn't identify himself as part of the community.

Even then, a justice of the peace would review the decision to hold the suspect and might allow him free on his own recognizance.

FIRST DRAFT LENIENT

Last year's bill required cash bail only where a person wasn't resident in the province where he was accused.

The new draft would take time spent in custody off the sentence.

More protection would be given police in cases where an arrested person claims he should have been released on summons. Police feared possible lawsuits under the original draft.

For those who don't show up in court on a summons, a first offence would open them to summary conviction but subsequent offences would allow procedure by indictment and a penalty of up to two years in jail.

Mr. Turner reiterated that a main objective of the Criminal Code changes is "to avoid unnecessary arrest" and to ensure early release.

The present bail system has been severely criticized because it works to the detriment almost exclusively of those who are poor.

Soviet policy reacts

One of the great guessing games in international politics is that of seeking to determine just what the leaders of Soviet Russia are thinking. Thus there is considerable debate over the presence of two Russian ships, one with extra radio equipment, which anchored two miles off Singapore, the site of the Commonwealth Conference.

It cannot be considered as coincidental that the ships would appear off Singapore at the very time British Prime Minister Heath is arguing that the build-up of Soviet naval strength in the Indian Ocean justifies the British decision to sell arms to South Africa.

But the question to be asked are the Soviets being extremely clever or extremely stupid.

Some may argue that they are displaying long-term wisdom, that they are seeking to hasten the break-up of the Commonwealth by reinforcing Prime Minister Heath's intention of selling arms to South Africa.

But others contend they have made a serious blunder by making Russian naval strength so obvious to the conference delegates.

It is largely paying your money and taking your choice.

But the situation is not devoid of irony. Perhaps the African leaders who have been contending for so long that the Soviet naval presence is nothing to worry about will not feel less easy about defending their position.

In the final analysis, these two Russian vessels strengthen the British position that if freedom of the seas is to continue in potentially contentious areas like the Indian Ocean, some balance of naval power must be maintained.

And here is the real reason for the British stand and not South Africa's racial policies.

Drift policies backfire

One feature of the unemployment crisis in Canada today which seems to have been overlooked by the federal cabinet is that the half-million or more Canadians who are out of work are not interested in semantics. It means little to them whether the seasonally-adjusted index is up or down a decimal point from a year ago or a month ago. Rather what they do know is that as individuals they are not working at their normal trade and cannot find employment in the field they are accustomed to — or in any other field for that matter.

And the best answer they can receive from Finance Minister Benson and other cabinet ministers is that everything is following its course, that the Government had foreseen this problem last April and had undertaken certain policies to relieve the situation. But, says the Finance Minister, everything will take time and meanwhile the number of jobless will increase in actual numbers but by some form of reasoning the situation will improve because the seasonally-adjusted figure will be lower — or remain unchanged.

The jobless man or woman can well ask why it is that with all the expert advice available from professional economists, periods of great depression cannot be averted. Planner after planner has told us that with the experience gained in the Great Depression of the thirties such crises should not occur again.

One of the problems is that during the good times which have predominated since the end of the last war, governments have not used the foresight essential to prepare for the sudden emergence of bad times nor to prepare policies to prevent their occurrence.

Now that the emergency has developed, it can be met only by costly and largely ineffective emergency measures.

French press says:

Trudeau fiscal policies blamed

This is a selection of editorials from the French-language press of Canada.

Montreal Le Devoir: The Trudeau government has in matters of public finance followed one of the most reactionary policies we have witnessed since the last world war.

Obsessed by the objective of a balanced budget, it has forced provincial and municipal governments to increase their foreign debt while holding its own deficits at bay by fiscal stinginess, boasting at the same time of having achieved budgetary surpluses.

It has taken from the private sector such a portion of the gross national product that the dynamism of this sector has been weakened.

And finally it has reduced numerous groups of citizens dependent directly on state support to an income level that makes them beggars.

This government is today harvesting what it has sowed. Its stinginess is turning back on it. It has throttled inflation, but has done so by cutting off the breath of sectors of society which in no way deserved such treatment.

The time has come to return to a more dynamic concept of public finances. The government should offer new stimulants to economic agents whose decisions and creative action are essential to economic expansion.

These stimulants should take the form of immediate fiscal alleviation. For the kinds of citizens particularly affected by the economic slowdown, in particular old age pensioners and the unemployed, the government should... show it is resolved to interest itself in their plight in more than just words. —Claude Ryan (Jan. 18)

Montreal La Presse: For 10 years, Commonwealth meetings have been going on in a crisis atmosphere: apartheid in 1961, Rhodesia in 1961, the Biafran crisis in 1969. This year, the Commonwealth is holding its sitting in Singapore... and the tickliest question... deals with the arms Britain proposes to sell to South Africa, a country banned from the club for 10 years. The prime minister of Britain, Edward Heath... has decided to resume his country's arms sale to South Africa in spite of loud complaints from the Labor left as well as from Commonwealth member countries, including Canada.

Mr. Heath's arguments are hardly lacking in weight. First he calls on the 1955 agreement under which Britain agreed to supply arms to South Africa in return for the use... of the Simonstown (South Africa) naval base.

He also maintains that Soviet warships are becoming more and more numerous in the Indian Ocean, and henceforth threaten oil-shipping routes from the Persian Gulf to Europe via the Cape of Good Hope.

He laconically adds that if London persists in its decision to sell no more arms to South Africa, someone else, just across the (English) Channel that is, France and Italy will not fail to profit by the situation.

Furthermore, if London refuses to sell to it, South Africa could well arrange to make the arms she feels she needs by herself.

Canada and India oppose the resumption of arms sales to South Africa. The two countries consider that furnishing arms to the "apartheid" regime gives... moral support to Pretoria.

Tanzania and Uganda have threatened to withdraw from the Commonwealth if Mr. Heath carries out his plan.

Could the Commonwealth—the largest multi-racial community in the world—break up over so little? President Lee Kuan Yew of Singapore thinks not. He feels that if seven presidents, a vice-president, 17 prime ministers and five plenipotentiaries felt it useful to go to the conference, it is because they consider it a vital organization.

Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada cautions, it seems, play the role of arbiter in all this. In any case, he is considered a key man. With India and Pakistan, he can prevent certain African countries from slamming the door. He will succeed, because British institutions, like cats, have several lives.

They always seem to be on the verge of death. But from year to year, from decade to decade, from century to century, they survive modestly, despite all the prophecies of doom.—Jean Pellerin (Jan. 18)

Granby La Voix de l'Est: The intention of the president of the Progressive Conservative Association of Quebec is to bid for the Quebec nationalist vote in the next federal elections.

To this end, Fernand Alie will propose to the Canadian Conservative party a decentralized federalism, capable of pleasing "people as nationalist as the separatists."

Will Mr. Alie succeed in finding a formula less rigid than Mr. Trudeau's and flexible enough to rally supporters of sovereignty?

The last word on this subject has not yet been uttered. We will have to await the congress at the end of May in Quebec City to know about it.

But it would be astonishing if the Progressive Conservative party, because of its composition and objectives, could devise a formula flexible enough to hold the attention of partisans of independence. —Roland Gagne (Jan. 13)

Ottawa Le Droit: Bloody clashes between Jordanians and Palestinian Fedayeen are compromising the peace attempts between Israel and the United Arab Republic.

If the expulsion of the Palestinians from their native soil remains the principal cause of these murderous engagements, one wonders why the descendants of a single race have become enemy brothers instead of making common cause against Israel.

The explanation... is that the Palestinian refugees, aided by Syrian and Iraqi elements and armed by the Russians, have become powerful enough to impose their own law and threaten the throne of little King Hussein.

It took all the diplomacy of the late president Nasser to protect the young sovereign, accused of a lukewarm attitude toward the Arab cause.

To say that the situation is becoming volatile and precarious is almost a euphemism.

And while blood flows in the streets of the Jordanian capital, Arabs and Jews are invited to return to peace negotiations.

Under such auspices the UN peace mission undertakes discussions with the remotest chance of success.

Can reason prevail in this highly-charged atmosphere? That is an element that has a hard time making itself heard in the Middle East.—Fulgence Charpentier (Jan. 14)

THE ART BUCHWALD COLUMN

WASHINGTON — As the cities and states keep going broke, more and more politicians are suggesting legalized gambling as the solution to our financial woes.

New York State started with a lottery. New York City then came up with off-track betting, and a few weeks ago someone suggested that gambling casinos be permitted as a method of raising revenues.

If New York solves its problems through gambling, every state in the union is going to follow suit except Nevada, which will probably secede from the nation in a snit.

Even the federal government may decide that legalized gambling is the only answer to its deficit, and it's possible in the near future that placing a bet will soon be considered the most patriotic thing an American can do.

It is not unlikely that in a few years the President of the United States will give the following State of the Union speech:

"My fellow Americans, I am happy to report to you tonight that for the first time in modern American history the United States has a surplus of $35 billion in the Treasury."

"The new postmaster general, Nick the Greek, has just revealed to me that the crap tables we installed in U.S. post offices throughout the land not only wiped out the postal deficit, but brought in a profit of $12 billion."

"The Department of Commerce reports that betting on the World Series, the Super Bowl and basketball games doubled from the previous year, and I am asking Congress for authority to keep government buildings open at night so more people can wager on dog races.

"The Department of Transportation reports that the slot machines we installed along all the federal highways are bringing back a 50 per cent return and this figure will improve as traffic gets heavier and more drivers will have time to use the machines."

"For those people who prefer the outdoors, the Department of Interior has now placed blackjack tables in all our national parks, where Americans can gamble to their hearts' content while enjoying the great scenic wonders of this country."

"The secretary of the Treasury reports that more people are playing the numbers than ever before, and it's now possible for someone to win a billion dollars if he can come up with the exact figure of how many Treasury notes have been issued on the previous day."

"I am happy to report that the public rooms at the White House are now open to gambling. Howard Hughes has donated 15 roulette wheels to the redecoration committee, and we have booked some of the best acts in the country, including Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin and Sammy Davis Jr. to entertain in the East Room."

"I am also asking Congress to authorize funds to turn Cape Kennedy into a race track, as a painless method of phasing out our space program."

"As for foreign affairs, the State Department is now taking bets of six to five that we can come to some agreement with the Russians on nuclear disarmament."

"The Pentagon is giving two to one that we'll be out of Vietnam by 1983, and the CIA will bet to anyone even money that there will not be a war in the Middle East."

"While your President is doing everything he can, foreign and domestically, he still needs the support of every American in this country."

"So, if you will all get out your cards, the Vice President will now start reading the bingo numbers."

To begin with, the South Vietnamese army has at last got the number of the North Vietnamese army — if one may judge by the evidence of these last months. For a long time, whether in Cambodia or elsewhere, the Northern troops have either suffered heavy defeat, or have simply run like rabbits, when the Southern troops have tangled with them.

The Southerners have been continuously and aggressively tangling with the Northerners. But the results are other facts that have gone almost unnoticed, perhaps, once again, because these facts also make a great many pompous spouters look exceedingly silly.

Yet they are crucial facts. Here in Washington, there is the usual seasonal worry about Hanoi's annual "dry season offensive." Instead, all should now be watching for a very different and wholly novel development: a major dry season offensive by the South Vietnamese.

In important ways, the South Vietnamese have already begun their dry season offensive. The flamboyant but able Gen. Do Cao Tri, in III Corps, has long operated in Cambodia with a large part of his regular troops. And these operations are now being intensified.

In IV Corps, the outstanding field commander, Gen. Ngo Quang Truong, has not completed his program for cleaning out the last of the enemy's local base areas. He has made much satisfactory progress, however, that Gen. Truong has also begun to detach large numbers of his regular troops to help out the Cambodians. These were the men who reopened Route 4, from Phnom Penh to its seaport.

It is abundantly clear, moreover, that the South Vietnamese are only just beginning. If they go on as they have been going, with comparable success, it may well be that the Hanoi leaders will face, in 1971, almost the kind of ugly choice that Ho Chi Minh prematurely reported to Khrushchev in 1954.

The question, then, is whether we Americans are going to imitate the French. That means, at bottom, whether President Nixon's sound, sensible and highly successful Vietnamization program is going to be sabotaged by the President's own secretary of defense, or by the geese who guard the Capitol in the U.S. Senate, or by someone else.

As reported earlier in this space, Secretary Melvin Laird has a shrewd scheme of sabotage. American troops are correctly being pulled out on schedule. But Laird is not leaving the South Vietnamese with the helicopters, planes, artillery and suchlike, that they need to finish the job on their own. It seems a pity, on the whole, except for those spouters.

His Spera Foundation fights drug problems

To hell...and back. Ask Gerry, he's been there

By PRESTON GURD

LENNOXVILLE — Where a drug problem is concerned, Gerry Burton can never say no to anyone. Because he knows. He knows how addiction drives a man to lie, cheat and steal, to do anything it takes to get more drugs, leaving him without a friend, without a life, without a soul.

He knows that escape from this deadly existence is usually found only in death itself.

And he knows what it means to have a cry for help unanswered, or worse, unheeded.

He knows because from age 14 on, he spent more time inside prison walls than out, and developed a heroin habit over a period of 16 years that cost him up to $200 a day.

Only the miraculous and successful intervention of another man devoted to helping people like him rescued Gerry from 22 years of hell.

But today, at the age of 36, Gerry is a complete man. Happily married, devoted to his work and free of drugs, he is no longer the tough guy they nicknamed Cagney in courts and prisons across North America.

But this story is not about Gerry Burton's long and unbelievable experience with drugs and crime. The foregoing only serves only to establish that he knows drugs and knows what they do to men.

What is important is that Gerry is one of the few people around who can claim any success in treating the very severe drug abuse problems that have cropped up in recent years.

Gerry was in Lennoxville last week at Bishop's College School. He had been invited to give a week-long program aiming at prevention of drug abuse.

It was a hectic week. Gerry and the four boys with him — all addicted to amphetamines until recently — spent hours talking to students, from early morning until late at night.

But he did manage to take off a little time to tell The Record something about his work.

Gerry is the founder of the Spera Foundation, an organization conceived for the sole purpose of helping young people with drugs.

But it is not enough to say he founded it. He acts as teacher, policeman and father-confessor to those who stay at the foundation. He runs a drug prevention program in Montreal schools and in his spare time deals with a steady stream of people who have drug problems, personal problems, or who just want to talk.

He had no idea of going into rehabilitation work when he was released from prison the last time. In fact, he had no idea of what he was going to do at all. But tremendous changes were occurring within him and he was happier than he had ever been.

Working as a potwasher, he'd ride the bus home after work in the early evening, he says, and "halfway home I'd see a bunch of kids in a restaurant and I could tell they were on drugs. I could see in them all the problems I had as a boy."

"I had a feeling one night, got off the bus and before I knew it I was walking the streets and talking to kids."

As he got to know them better, he would invite some back to visit and talk. Soon, he and his wife would have up to 50 people sitting around their apartment, talking.

On night, on Nov. 22, 1967, all of them left but one. He asked me for help. And that's where Spera really got started. Soon, having 24 house guests in the five-and-a-half room apartment was a common occurrence.

As word spread, Gerry was asked to speak to business clubs and invited to talk in some schools.

He had some trouble finding a name to cover his ever-widening activities, he says, but after a few false starts one was provided by a young priest who offered the Greek word for hope. So Spera it was.

Sponsors were found to cover costs and an office was rented in Point St. Charles to serve as a meeting place. Recently, a farmhouse in Rawdon, Que., which now serves as headquarters was placed at their disposal by some grateful parents.

It received its charter as a non-profit organization a year-and-a-half ago.

The main work of the foundation goes on in Rawdon, where youthful victims of horrifying drug experiences are taken completely away from society until they are ready to re-enter it.

Spera bases its program on a nine-month period, he says, although this can vary according to individual needs.

When a boy or girl arrives at Spera, either through direct contact or through juvenile court, he starts with three months of total isolation. He is not allowed off the property at all and his social contacts are confined to 30-odd recent addicts who can see through any trick or con-job he may try to pull to get drugs.

The second three months are ones of partial re-entry — "part of a new growth of society", as Gerry puts it, including weekend visits home, usually in the company of one of the more trustworthy boys, and only visits would be good for them.

The final three months continue with near-total re-entry into society.

While at Spera, recovering youths are kept under strict regiment that begins with rising at 6.30 and keeps them occupied all day.

Good food and exercise rebuild wasted bodies and schoolwork keeps minds busy. Mixed in with this are healthy doses of group therapy of various types, including sensitivity training, singings and the like.

But what helps most is the talk. Everyone is encouraged to talk about their experience, both to subject it to group discussion and judgment and to ease the psychological repressions.

Those at Spera have another important duty which also serves as therapy. They must man the telephone "lifeline" 24 hours a day, taking calls from users with drug problems, parents worried about their children or maybe just people who need to talk to someone.

No call for help ever goes unanswered, he says, no matter what time of day or night.

In fact, while most of the country celebrated New Year's Eve, Gerry was called to Sherbrooke to pick up a badly disturbed 17-year-old.

After three weeks at Spera, the boy "has improved as much as can be expected," he says. Gerry is confident the youth will recover.

But Gerry believes it's not enough to take care of drug problems only after they have arisen.

To him, anyone who uses any drug other than alcohol is abusing it. And that includes marijuana, which he says has "nothing to offer except a miserable hour stoned."

Although many authorities, including the Commission of Inquiry into the Non-medical Use of Drugs, are apparently not ready to condemn marijuana, Gerry sees marijuana as the start of a series of steppingstones to increased drug abuse.

He feels drug abuse must be caught before it starts. "The only way to prevent drugs from spreading is to educate people about the true realities of drugs."

And someone obviously thinks he has the answer, because, after hearing of his work, the Montreal Catholic School Commission asked him to bring his drug education program into all their schools.

So this, too, is part of Spera's work. All through the school year, Gerry heads into different schools along with at least three Rawdon people of both sexes and with widely varying backgrounds, to give a week-long series of informal talks and question periods, capped by mass sensitivity training sessions at the end of the week.

And with former addicts who really know what is happening giving their story, the students really sit up and take notice.

With so much to do and so little time, Gerry works long and hard, but doesn't mind a bit. "People tell me I have knowledge and I must share my experience with the world. My work is worthwhile and I enjoy it."

The last time Gerry fixed up on heroin was on May 5, 1965, a date he remembers quite vividly.

In the past six years that have gone by since then, the former syndicate gunman, once labelled a chronic psychopathic maniac by prison officials, has found his personality completely transformed and gone on to bring hope — and sometimes more than hope — to countless youthful drug addicts.

Hope, but no cure for addicts

LENNOXVILLE — They say it all started with grass. Not the kind lawns are made of, of course, but the kind you smoke.

And Gerry says it led them directly to "speed."

"They" are Larry, Mike, Nicky and Peter. They come from widely varying backgrounds in big cities. The only thing they really have in common is that, as recently as one-and-a-half months ago, they were all addicted to speed.

Speed is a family of powerful stimulants which includes amphetamine, methamphetamine, dexedrine and benzedrine. Used medically to cut appetite or to maintain alertness, speed is not physically addictive, according to the Le Dain Commission.

But the speed-freak, which is what the four boys are, uses the drug in massive quantities, usually intravenously and for long periods at a time, with terrible effects on the body.

But the speed-freak doesn't really care what it does to him because of the psychological effects. As Gerry puts it: "Picture yourself standing on a streetcorner, speeding. Everything is moving very slowly and the whole world is silent. Everything is whatever you've always wanted it to be."

Also there is the rush, the overwhelming feeling that hits momentarily as the chemical first takes effect.

As one person puts it: "You can convince a heroin addict he has a problem because it costs him a lot of money but a speed-freak, thinks he's God."

Mike, a strongly-built 21-year-old, was always better off than most. He lived in an upper-class neighborhood and never lacked anything.

Three months ago, Mike was a prisoner in his own home, afraid to venture outside because he was in trouble with police and with people he had cheated.

Today, he is always pleasant and agreeable with everyone he meets. But he has a tendency to drift off into daydreams which Gerry says aren't daydreams at all. They are hallucinations.

Mike dropped out of grade 12 and got a job driving a truck which he says he liked. Through friends, he started smoking marijuana and hashish. A good friend of his offered him speed one day, so he tried it.

"I started thinking, why should I work when I can go out, have fun and do dope? So I quit my job, moved downtown and tried dealing speed." He went to the Spera Foundation three months ago.

Peter comes from a good home in a prosperous middle-class district of Montreal. He is only 16 now and has been at Spera for a month-and-a-half. Bored with marijuana, he hated LSD, so he started shooting speed.

Gerry remembers: "The first time I met Peter was when I went to visit him in a hospital with the probation officer."

"The probation officer is a nice enough guy, but I don't think he should be in the business he's in. He sat down on the bed and immediately became the same kind of person Peter was — that was his idea of communication."

"Right from the start, I could tell Peter was a real con artist. He sat up and told the man with a straight face, 'they won't let me call my mommy.'"

"I didn't believe it. When he was out on the street and his parents were worried sick, Peter wouldn't give them the time of day. But now he wanted to call his mother and the probation officer believed it."

Peter smiled at the recollection, then Gerry added, "I don't trust either Peter or Mike out of my sight. They have no willpower."

Nicky, 17, comes from a well-to-do family in one of Montreal's better districts. The slim, blonde youth has been at Spera for three months. Abuse of speed has left him with hardening of the arteries and an enlarged heart, disabilities which usually struck only the aged.

He talks about his experiences readily, almost compulsively, and he has a lot to say.

He says he started on drugs at the age of 12 and "after a while I got sick of smoking grass and dropping acid. They were the same old thing."

"I started using speed at a boarding school for children with learning disabilities. There were no other drugs around and a good friend of mine offered me some. I did it and it was beautiful."

"I hated coming down off speed, coming down was terrible. Besides, it felt so good I didn't want to stop. I used to go on runs of 10 or 11 days, shooting up every three hours."

"Speed wiped out my memory and destroyed my feelings, my mind and my morals. You notice something about us? We don't talk so good because of drugs."

"I did everything I had to do to get dope. I slept with pushers, sold Drano to 10-year-olds, attempted armed robbery, lied and cheated."

Larry entered the drug scene three-and-a-half years ago. He has been at Spera for four months now.

Gerry says Larry is furthest along the road to re-entering society. Larry acts as group leader in outings to schools and Gerry trusts him in just about any situation.

Speaking in his earnest and patient way, Larry has nothing but praise for the work of the center.

"I've tried just about every drug going; this is the first time I've managed to stay off for so long."

He plans to stay on at Spera and continue the work he is doing now.

All the boys were badly screwed-up by drugs and, although they are getting better, their experience will always be with them.

Gerry says he doesn't expect a cure. Instead, he classifies the boys as "non-practicing addicts." He hopes and expects they will not turn to dope again, but as he says, "no one really knows."

Philosopher endorses French struggle

MONTREAL (CP) — Existential philosopher Jean-Paul Sartre has endorsed what he terms the struggle of French-Canadians against an "oppressive society which is becoming repressive."

Sartre made his statements in an interview video-taped in Paris for the Quebec Committee of the Defence of Freedom.

The defence committee co-operated with the Movement for the Defence of Political Prisoners in Quebec in Wednesday's demonstration against arrests under the War Measures Act.

Sartre said the law was not aimed solely at the terrorist Front de Liberation de Quebec but at all groups with any kind of revolutionary tinge.

This repression, by a bourgeois capitalist society to combat forces which considered violence the only means to change the Quebec situation, ended by repressing a wider group.

New officers installed by Trinity Church U.C.W.

DANVILLE — The new officers for the coming year were installed by the Rev. Crowthers at the general meeting of the U.C.W. of Trinity United Church held Wed. Jan. 13.

The slate of officers for the year 1971 is as follows: Past President, Mrs. Manville Williams, president, Mrs. V. C. Lindsay; 1st vice president, Mrs. Roy LeDrew; 2nd vice president, Mrs. N. E. McNiff; treasurer, Mrs. Gerald Anthony; recording secretary, Mrs. George Horan; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Gordon Miller; with Mrs. Howard Lodge as Leader of Unit 1. All officers, with the exception of Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Lodge who were unavoidably absent, were duly installed.

A "Project Committee" consisting of Mrs. Allan Sutherland, Mrs. McNiff and Mrs. Crowthers was appointed to decide in what manner this church would help the needy of their faith in the Dominion. Mrs. J. Batstone is looking after a layette, which will be sent to a home for unwed mothers in the near future. Instead of the usual fund-raising projects, the pledge system will be used again this year, as it proved very successful in the past.

Tentative plans are being made for a card party in the near future, and all were reminded of the Annual Meeting which will be held Jan. 28. The Devotional part of the meeting was taken by Mrs. Sutherland, who chose "Love and Service" as her theme.

Mrs. Lindsay showed slides of a trip which she and her husband had taken to Williamsburg, Va. These were most interesting, some of a model village of the past, with hand carved furniture and many other items of interest to the ladies.

Lunch was served by the hostesses, Mrs. Wm. Rick and Mrs. Howard Frost.

BRIDGE CLUB Mrs. N. E. McNiff entertained the Bridge Club on Tues. evening, Jan. 12 when Mrs. Harriet Gardner won the prize for the high score. Mrs. McNiff had the consolation, with the travelling prize going to Mrs. Roger Beliveau. Mrs. Dorothy Thompson was a guest for the evening.

Pain at the Right Spot And Time Indicate Ulcer

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Often you can make a diagnosis of a peptic ulcer from the symptoms it causes. When the symptoms are sufficiently characteristic, the ulcer is usually there even if it cannot be seen by X-ray studies.

The most constant symptom of peptic ulcer is pain. It may be a burning ache, cramplike or gnawing pain. If the peptic ulcer is in the lower esophagus, the pain is at the lower end of the breastbone and may begin during eating or soon afterward.

The pain from an ulcer in the stomach usually starts within an hour after eating. It is usually just under the left rib margin and sometimes over the lower chest area. Duodenal ulcer pain commonly begins two to three hours after eating in a small area between the navel and the lower end of the breastbone.

Rarely, an ulcer will cause back pain or if it involves a portion of the small intestine quite some distance from the stomach, the pain may be in the middle of the abdomen or even in the lower left abdomen.

A peptic ulcer usually does not cause pain before breakfast. This more often is "burning" due to nervousness or anxiety. Ulcer pain frequently occurs at night—one to four hours after going to bed. If the pain is relieved by antacid or food, it usually does not recur until after breakfast. Pain at night usually means a severe ulcer or formation of large amounts of acid-pepsin digestive juice in the stomach.

The ulcer patient soon learns that his discomfort can be relieved by food. While the stomach churns, the valves at the inlet and outlet of the stomach are closed, preventing acid-pepsin juice from spilling out over the ulcer. The acid stomach contents bathing exposed nerve endings in and around the ulcer cause pain. The typical ulcer patient eats when the pain occurs and if he is having pain at night, he eats or drinks milk for relief.

Of course, antacids relieve peptic ulcer pain. Baking soda (not good treatment) usually provides some relief.

Some patients have a sensation of fullness in the pit of the stomach. Nausea and vomiting occur between meals but usually along with typical pain.

Among atypical symptoms of a duodenal ulcer is the occasional patient with diarrhea. The patient has an overactive digestive tract and the ulcer is only part of the picture. Eventually, a careful analysis of the problem identifies pain in the typical location above the navel or adequate X-ray studies show an ulcer.

It is true that an ulcer may not fit the "textbook" picture but most of them cause problems so much like those listed above that if you have these symptoms you can be fairly certain you have a peptic ulcer.

Dear Dr. Lamb—Would an emphysema sufferer who has plants in the room all day find it harder to breathe because of the oxygen used by the plants? Would it be best to keep flowers out also?

Dear Reader—Plants actually liberate oxygen. This is one reason ecologists have been so concerned about the loss of vegetation. The small number of plants that would be in a room, however, won't have any effect on the oxygen in the air. The only way plants can cause difficulty in breathing is if the person is allergic to them.

Allegro Unit plans calendar of events

STANSTEAD — Centenary United church Allegro Unit met at the home of Mrs. W. T. Greer the evening of Jan. 12. Despite the extremely cold night several members turned out.

Miss Arlene Probyn, co-leader, conducted the meeting and opened with a period of devotions using the Upper Room material.

The members made up a calendar of events for the 1971 year starting off with the Shrove Tuesday supper, Feb. 23 at the church hall from five until seven o'clock. April 24 was set for the Spring tea and sale, May 1 for the rummage sale, and Nov. 6 for the Christmas tea and sale.

It was voted to purchase greeting cards to be sold at the April 24 sale.

Plans were made and some soliciting done for the supper to precede the annual meeting of the church Jan. 26.

Four letters were read, three of appreciation for remembrances and the other from the Foster Child, Miss Lena Wallace volunteered to write the Foster Child's January letter.

Annual reports of the officers were read before these are submitted to the Rev. Mr. Joyce for the church annual presentation.

Mrs. Charles Merriman will hostess the February 9 meeting at her home at 8:00 p.m. Members are asked to bring in an apron for the Christmas sale booth.

Mrs. Greer and assisting hostesses Mrs. Richard Wallace and Mrs. William Stuart served refreshments.

Friendly Christmas
Club has Jan. meeting

WATERVILLE — Mrs. R. Fowler was hostess for the January meeting of the Friendly Christmas Club, with twelve members in attendance. The minutes of the meetings during the past year were read by Mrs. E. Ball.

500 was played at three tables. Prize winners were: 1st, Mrs. S. Reed; 2nd, Mrs. H. Nelson; 3rd, Mrs. D. Browning.

Mrs. Fowler served refreshments assisted by Mrs. Reed and Mrs. Ball. A social hour was enjoyed. Mrs. Crawford will entertain the February meeting.

COCKTAIL WEAR — A shawl fringed with silk adds to the femininity of cocktail apparel. Beneath it, dresses this spring will be soft, the bodice well fitted, skirt flared and the sleeves long and romantic.

Dedication Services
DANVILLE — At the regular Communion Service at Trinity United Church on Sunday morning, Jan. 16, the pastor, the Rev. Crowthers conducted a short but impressive dedication service for a Communion Cabinet in memory of the late Mrs. Albert Olney.

Given by the members of the U.C.W., the presentation was made by the president, Mrs. V. C. Lindsay. Mrs. Olney had been a faithful member of this church and a Life Member of the U.C.W., having held many offices in the various organizations of the church throughout the years, so it was this manner that the members chose as a means of perpetuating her memory.

Betsy takes Cup slalom

SCHRUNGS, Austria (CP) — Betsy Clifford, the 17-year-old ski whiz from Ottawa, raced to victory in the special slalom here Thursday. It was her second triumph in World Cup competition this winter.

Her confidence bolstered by a week at her parents' home near Hull, Que., Miss Clifford was clocked in one minute 33.50 seconds for two runs down the "cannon barrel" track on the slopes of towering Kapell Mountain.

The young Canadian, who returned to the amateur ski wars last Friday after a rest from the tensions of international competition, came from behind to win.

She tore through the 53 gates in the first 490-metre run in 47.20 seconds. Gertrud Gabl of Austria had a better time, however, 46.99 seconds.

Betsy was clocked in 46.30 on the second run, through 48 gates spread over 450 metres, and that was enough for victory.

Hi-Y cager tourney tops packed weekend at Galt

LENNOXVILLE (SA) — Alexander Galt Regional High School teams are in for two hectic days today and tomorrow.

The sports slate for today sees senior and junior boys' and girls' basketball squads facing their John Rennie High School counterparts from Pointe Claire on Montreal Island.

Also in from JRHS is an indoor track contingent, ready to test their Alexander Galt opponents. The Junior Piper hockey six skates against Loyola High School of Montreal at the Bishop's University rink at 7 p.m.

Tomorrow, the Piper, Junior Piper and Bantam Piper court crews compete in the Sherbrooke Hi-Y Boys' Invitational Basketball Tournament at AGRHS starting at 9 a.m. while the Bantam hockey Pipers play host to East Angus in an 8 a.m. contest.

The wrestling squad, which coach Doug MacAuley says is "looking forward to continuing a winning streak," travels to Bedford to tangle with the Massey-Vanier Regional High School matmen. The grappling action is scheduled for a 10:30 a.m. start.

Afternoon activity will feature the hockey Pipers heading to Stanstead for a battle with Stanstead College. The two teams tied 2-2 in a meeting earlier this season at Bishop's University.

John Rennie's basketball

Sherbrooke Beavers will entertain Three Rivers Dukes at the Sports Palace this evening with a lineup decimated by injuries and the flu.

The list of sidelined players comprises Gaston Boulanger, an emerging star, hardrock Bruno Isabel and flashy Michel Lefebvre.

In addition to those who will not dress, several other Beavers will be at less than 100 per cent efficiency.

Ray Bibeau, who returned to action in Wednesday night's contest in St. Jerome, an 8-2 loss to the Alouettes, will be in uniform but may not be at his best, while Denis Gagnon is coming back after a Quebec suspension meted out by Quebec Junior "A" Hockey League president Bob Lebel.

Boulanger and Isabel both skipped practice yesterday and nursed cases of the flu.

Lefebvre has been out for some time. The visit of the Dukes may present a threat to the Beavers' recent string of successes on home ice. The team has been winning at the Sports Palace and losing on the road.

The Dukes, however, have displayed a considerable degree of ability in finding ways to skin the Beavers.

Three Rivers has taken games by counts of 9-2, 8-3 and 5-0 at the Coliseum in Three Rivers and beaten the Beavers 5-0 in Sherbrooke. The local club has produced one 6-3 win at home against tonight's invaders.

After today's 9 p.m. affair, the Beavers will be on view again Sunday at 7:30 p.m. when Rosemount Nationals and former Sherbrooke star Gilbert Smith drop in for a league engagement.

For the Beavers, Renaud Duguay, obtained for Smith in a trade this season, will be facing his former mates for the first time.

The Beavers have taken a pair of 6-4 contests from the Nats, while Rosemount scored a 4-3 win over the Sherbrooke side during the club's transition period between the coaching tenures of Lou Poliquin and Ronnie Racette.

AMONG NEWEST SKI SCHOOLS — The Mont Elan Ski School at East Angus might be one of the region's newest, but showing great progress. Six of 12 instructors on the teaching team are pictured above. SKIING and Snowmobiling in the Townships

by Charles Catchpaugh

Today The Record carries its mid-winter skiing and snowmobile supplement. This is a fascinating and informative package which we are sure all those interested in these sports will find good reading. We would suggest you consider sending a copy to a friend outside of the Townships who is also interested in winter sports. There is no better way to describe your region.

The Nancy Green Little League will be operating again this winter in the Eastern Townships. However, it isn't certain how many teams will be participating. To date Orford has two squads, led by Claude Tremblay and Pierre Martin. Owl's Head will enter at least one team. Bromont is expected to field two and it's hoped there'll be entries from North Hatley, Mt. Bellevue in Sherbrooke, and at least one group out of Mt. Sutton.

The International Congress of Professional Ski Instructors is now meeting at Garmisch Partengirchen, Germany. Each country taking part has sent eight instructors who will demonstrate their nation's techniques and teaching methods. Through this exchange of ideas and ski theories, it will be possible to select the best methods to draft a unified teaching system that can be universal in the world's field of ski instructing.

Murray Yeudal of Bromont and Mario Poderieszsch of Orford are among Canada's eight delegates. They'll be returning Monday, Jan. 25.

Guys and gals of the Canadian Ski Patrol System are busy this winter, both from a duty point of view and socially. Last Saturday evening they held a party at Owl's Head to raise funds for their "service club-styled work." Tomorrow the Orford patrol holds a general meeting after skiing, and North Hatley's patrol has a party scheduled for Feb. 6.

Don't forget Feb. 6, the annual Ski-A-Thon date. Your money will be used to help the Canadian Ski Association and the various participating clubs. We have a full tabloid page on this project in today's ski and snowmobile supplement, and its success is to a great extent attributable to the co-operation given us by Don MacAuley of McLeod, Young & Weir Ltd. Don and Pat MacAuley both work very hard for skiing and the CSA, and it was largely due to their efforts last winter that Orford registered the biggest receipts from Ski-A-Thon in this region.

Thanks for the enthusiasm, Don and Pat. Skiing needs people like Mr. and Mrs. MacAuley, and we who wave the flag for this sport appreciate their help!

Just a reminder: the Adams Memorial will be held at Orford Thursday and Friday, Jan. 28-29. The event will include a controlled downhill off Orford on Three Creeks and a slalom on Mt. Giroux's 45.

Mt. Orford officials ask that special mention be made of the fact that there won't be races on the weekend of Jan. 30-31. In fact, the trend is to hold competitions during the week so as not to interfere with the larger weekend crowds.

In that comment corner, we have several bitter remarks that should be directed to the Quebec Police Force. A number of skier cottages have been broken into this winter, and the culprits can't ever seem to be found. Most of these cottages are owned by Montrealers who spend a lot of time here and with them bring extra money to our region. Their interests should be better looked after, and, at this stage of the game, the afflicted are wondering why our authorities aren't making arrests, or at least locating some of the stolen loot.

We will sympathize with the people complaining about lunch counter lineups. They insist adults are inconsiderate of children trying to get served. These people and, we believe, ski centre restaurant operators should be more aware of this fact and try to resolve the problem.

It can't be said that snowmobile makers aren't concerned over the accident count being registered with this new fast growing winter sport. In fact, stories like the one out of Skiroule-Ltee. are encouraging. This Eastern Townships-based company, whose plant is in Wickham, said this week they'll be reducing the power of engines in their machines.

A voluntary measure, and a pioneer one in an industry which has often emphasized power at the expense of other important considerations, this forward step will, it is hoped, encourage the sane and safe use of these popular vehicles.

This response to widespread expressions of growing concern regarding snowmobile safety will be reflected in Skiroule's 1971 production, all of which will range from 250 c.c. to 440 c.c. compared to last year's big 793 c.c. machine. These new machines will be quite fast enough and powerful enough for all ordinary purposes.

Skiroule Limitee, a growth leader in an industry that has expanded fantastically in the last five years, recognizes that prosperity and public goodwill depend on the manufacturer's sense of responsibility and on his concern for the welfare of those in whose hands he has put a powered vehicle that cannot be treated merely as a toy.

Not long ago Rejean Houle, president of Skiroule Ltee., made a public pledge. He said, "Our concern is the family man, and we'll endeavor to protect him as far as possible. That means we will provide a machine excellently designed and excellently built. While we guarantee the ability of our snowmobile, the human element is an intangible. Our control ends there, though we wish it didn't."

"Snowmobiles themselves have no bad habits," he continued. "They can be driven badly or they can be driven well. Recognizing this, 'safety' is the biggest word in our vocabulary."
