Any who come prepared to take part in this way, who have not previously signified their intention, will kindly give their names to the Secretary, Mrs. S. W. The Rev. D. Griffith, of Quebec, who went down to Anticosti, in relation to the above matter says that he is fully satisfied with the result of his visit to Anticosti, whether he went bearing a message from the Dominion Government. Sir Walter Besant begins in the December Century a series of papers illustrating life in East London, as it is today. His manner of treating the subject is that of the novelist, rather than the journalist, for he takes as his point of departure the birth of a typical girl of the East End—"One of Two Millions in East London,"—and traces her career to the time of her marriage at seventeen to a young countryman who has come up to town to make his living as a porter. Liz is a "beard school" girl and Sir Walter holds that what the average East Londoner learns from books at school he afterwards forgets; but that the civilizing influence of the schools is inculcated, and has marvellously transformed the East End within the past thirty years. No one knows more of the life of the poor in London than the author of "All Sorts and Conditions of Men," and his is better known as their pictorial interpreter than Phil May, who collaborates with Joseph Pennell in illustrating Sir Walter's article.

LIFE'S SPRING IS POISONED

IF THE KIDNEYS DO NOT CARRY OFF ITS BLOOD IMPURITIES—SOUTH AMERICAN KIDNEY CURE KEEPS THESE ORGANS HEALTHY—PREVENTS DIABETES, BRIGHT'S DISEASE AND BLADDER DIFFICULTIES.

Every drop of blood in the body goes through the kidneys for the removal of its impurities—every three minutes—night and day—while life lasts. The kidneys are the filter—and it stands to reason that if the filter is out of order the impure matter in the blood goes to every part of the body at every heart beat. When the first indications of kidney disorder present themselves, resort at once to South American Kidney Cure—the tried, tested and proved specific for Bright's disease, diabetes and bladder complications. It never fails. Sold by J. L. Mathieu.

In Some Places.

Shooting Tenant (just arrived for the grouse)—What a beautiful place to live, Douglass!

Douglass—It's no a bad place to live. But what was he thinking of having to travel 15 miles for a glass of whisky?

Shooting Tenant—But why don't you buy some and keep it?

Douglass—Ah, mon, but whisky will ma' keep!—Punch.

Dogs Growing Weaker.

Experts agree that the life of a dog is shortened by close breeding and exhibition and that we are gradually raising dogs that will be so long lived as the semi-wild mongrel types.

The best thing to be done when evil comes upon us is not to resort to lamentation, but to act; not to sit and suffer, but to rise and seek the remedy.

Bakers' Bad Backs.

We little know the toll and hardship that those who make the "Staff of Life" undergo. Long hours in superheated and poorly ventilated work-rooms is hard on the system, gives the kidneys more work than they can properly do, throws poison into the system that should be carried off by the delicate filters. Then the back gets bad—Not much use applying liniments and plasters. You must reach the kidneys to cure the back. DOAN'S Kidney Pills cure all kinds of Bad Backs by restoring the kidneys to healthy action.

Mr. Walter Buchanan, who has conducted a bakery in Sarnia, Ont., for the past 15 years, says:

"For a number of years previous to taking Doan's Kidney Pills I suffered a great deal from acute pain across the small of my back, pains in the back of my head, dizziness, weary feeling and general debility. From the first few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills I commenced to improve, and I have continued until I am to-day a well man. I have not got a pain or ache about me. My head is clear; the urinary difficulties all gone; my sleep is refreshing and my health is better now than for years."

Doan's Kidney Pills sold in Sherbrooke by all Druggists.

COW FARMING.

Difference Between Old and New Methods—Where the Profit Comes In.

Every farmer should have a specialty, says the Boston Cultivator. There are probably more who find this specialty in breeding cows or producing dairy products than there are in any other branch of the farming business. This has resulted in making cow farmers more enterprising and successful than those who merely keep one or two cows for their own use and make dairy products of only secondary consideration. This was to be expected. All kinds of business that are successful are made specialties. There is more reason for this in the case of the farmer, whose business involves closer attention to details than any other. The man who makes a specialty of fruit growing or gardening may keep good cows, but it is impossible for him to give close attention to the manufacture of dairy butter and cheese to secure the best results. The large creameries sell their product somewhat higher than the average farm butter, though if the latter is well made from ripened cream it will keep better than the creamery or separated butter made from cream that has never soured. It is, we think, a perverted taste that gives preference to butter made from cream that has never soured. That from the creamery should be kept a few hours until souring begins. Then the curd can be better separated from the butter, and it will keep better.

The separation will take more of the butter fats out of sweet milk than can be got by the creamery or by natural rising of cream in the pan. But this increase of quantity is at the expense of keeping quality. Such butter is very much liked by many people. It is the kind of butter that is especially liked by our English customers. But it is a poor keeper and must be eaten soon after it arrives or it becomes rancid. In the years before the creamery the writer well remembers seeing his mother and grandmother put up four gallon crocks of butter, covering it with a layer of salt an inch thick and setting it away in a dark and cool room to be used next year. The favorite months for putting up butter in those times were June, September and October. The best of all the butter was made in June, though if there were plenty of fall rains to start the grass butter made in September and October was about as good. And as good butter can also be made from green corn fodder fed with the grain in the milk stage and supplemented with pumpkins, which, excepting carrots and parsnips, are almost the only vegetable that will not impart some inferior flavor to the butter. Wherever cows are kept more pumpkins, carrots and parsnips should be grown to supplement the corn fodder and grain which are the dairyman's main dependence.

The creamer should always be used to raise cream, for with the addition of cold in the ice surrounding the milk it causes the cream to rise while the milk is ice cold and of course sweet. It gets more of the cream that can be secured from pan rising, though if the milk is heated to a temperature of 130 to 140 degrees and then set in a cool room the cream will rise nearly as well as in a creamery. But this heating of the milk is apt to make the butter come soft. It cannot be successfully practiced during hot weather. Then ice must be used, and if it is used the creamer it is preferable, as the milk beneath the cream will be sweet and is preferable for feeding to young stock while it is very young.

After 5 or 6 weeks old a calf will drink curdled milk as readily as it will drink sweet milk, and the curdled milk is really better for calves and pigs than sweet milk, because it has taken the first stage of digestion. It is true it does not contain quite as much nutrition, as there is always some waste whenever fermentation occurs. It is a slow decomposition, destroying nitrogen and carbon by uniting them with oxygen the same as in burning.

The difference between old and new methods of keeping cows is in nothing more noticeable than in summer and winter feeding. We can well remember when grass in summer, with dry hay and cornstalks that toward spring were almost as dry, was the main dependence for cow feed. Then the dairy regions were those natural to grass, where there was plenty of pure spring water, and the cows were pastured in summer in localities where, if corn could not be grown to supplement summer feed, green fodder of any kind seemed hardly to be needed. But the time has long gone by when the grassland hills of Vermont and of the Massachusetts valley, with Alleghany and Chautauque counties in the same state, could make the boast that they were so much the best dairy producing regions that they could fix the price of butter. The Little Falls dairy market is, however, still the greatest in the world for the best butter. But even in those localities grass is far less important than it used to be, though we get more grass butter from these old dairy regions than from any other.

Wrong Kind of Skimming.

Butter making, like everything else, requires close application and study if continued success be met with. Too many butter makers overlook this fact and are inclined to skim over their work.—Creamery Journal.

Dry Too Soon.

Some cows promise extremely well when in the first flush of milk, but go dry too soon, so that the real test of a cow is her performance after three or four months in milk.

How Dairying is Conducted on a Large Scale.

In the village of Arden, Orange county, N. Y., 44 miles from New York city, is the Arden Farms Dairy company, which owns 15,000 acres of land, 5,000 acres of which are tillage, says Up to Date Farm and Garden. The central portion of the main barn is three stories high, with two wings in which the cows are kept. Nothing is stored over the animals. The floor where the animals are kept is concrete, hot and cold water is supplied by a system of pipes, and troughs and floors can be flushed with water and kept scrupulously clean. In this barn are kept at all times upward of 100 milkers, although 375 cows are owned by the company. The rest of the milkers are distributed in the other barns. When a cow is dry, she is sent to one of the outlying farms. The herd is a mixed one, Guernsey and Ayrshire blood predominating. The company sells two grades of milk, one of 4 per cent and one of 5 per cent. Everything is kept scrupulously clean. The cattle are carried and brushed twice a day. The milkers, after thoroughly washing, don a milking suit of white duck and wash their hands after each cow. The milk is strained four times before reaching the consumer. The milking pails have closely fitted covers, with a six inch disk strainer, through which the milk enters the pail. There is a large cooling room of the most modern pattern. Milk is put up in bottles. The lowest price at which any milk is sold is that which is disposed of in bulk, which is 10 cents per quart. Milk in bottles is sold at 12 cents per quart.

This is only one of many similar enterprises that have sprung up near the large cities and seems to show a tendency for the business to drift into the hands of corporations or individuals with sufficient capital to carry it on a high grade plan.

Bottling Milk.

The scheme of delivering milk in bottles is now almost a universal custom, and the only drawback is the inconvenience of carrying and handling these bottles. Henry E. Wright of Massachusetts has invented a metallic handle to meet this case. There is a neckband which is firmly clamped around the neck of the bottle, and another one around the body of the bottle, and a regular pitcher handle extending from one of these to the other.

MILK BOTTLE HANDLE.

Checking Oleomargarine.

The Chicago papers report that the Illinois Dairy union is considering the plan of having retailers put a descriptive and only copyrighted label on all packages of genuine butter sold by them. No particular brand or grade of butter is to be advertised, says Hoard's Dairyman, the only requirement being that it shall be genuine butter. Poor butter advertises itself, and the label will simply guarantee purity. Of course no dealer will dare put such a label on oleomargarine or any other kind of counterfeit butter, and the absence of the label will therefore be presumptive evidence that the article is spurious.

It is proposed to have wholesalers and commission men furnish these labels to their customers. The expense will be trifling, probably not more than 20 cents per thousand. It is also proposed to have the labels and their uses freely advertised.

Such a scheme would seem to be not unworthy of trial, but we predict that the oleomargarine promoters would very soon put out something which would be so nearly like these butter labels that only a close examination would detect the difference. The sale of oleomargarine in many considerable amounts is possible only by resorting to deception and fraud, and when any set of men commence to cheat and lie they are very apt to keep at it until they find themselves face to face with prison doors.

Co-operative Dairying in Holland.

According to the German paper, Milck Zeitung, an extraordinary development has of late years taken place in co-operative dairying in Holland. For several years, says that paper, much attention has been paid to the manufacture and marketing of butter, now nearly all carried out on co-operative principles, peasant proprietorship in that country being almost universal. Large butter factories, too, are the rule, where the most advanced methods are adopted. For instance, with a view to making first rate butter, the cream is often pasteurized and separated by the Schwartz process instead of by the centrifugal system. Artificial cultures are often used, and the result is most satisfactory. So are the simple but very businesslike methods of marketing. At Maestricht a combined association disposes of the great bulk of the butter and cheese made by the members. It not only sells the produce for its members upon co-operative principles, but endeavors to put the individual dairies into direct business relation with foreign firms, particularly in England, with the aid of the Dutch consular agents.

Keeping Sweet Potatoes.

"Some of the best stored sweet potatoes successfully do not believe in drying them before putting them in the bins," says The Country Gentleman. "Waldo F. Brown of Ohio, who keeps the crop without fire heat, takes the tubers from the field to the storeroom or cellar as soon as possible after they are dug. He sorts, as he picks them, into three sizes—merchantable, seed and culls—and puts them into bushel baskets, whence they are poured into the bins. Of course the sweet potatoes heat and sweat in the bins, but this he believes greatly improves their quality, and after having gone through the sweat they are easier to keep than Irish potatoes, for they are never injured by sprouting. Mr. Brown uses forest leaves to protect his potatoes from cold. He prefers a temperature of 40 to 50 degrees, but is not afraid of one much higher or lower for a short time. Even below the freezing point, with a good leaf covering, does no harm. If it is staying low too long, two or more kerosene lamps burned in the cellar will quickly send it up again. Never cover the potatoes before they are through sweating, as any covering will condense the moisture and lead to rot. If in heating the potatoes reach 80 degrees or above, ventilation should be given."

CATARH RELIEVED IN 10 TO 60 MINUTES.—One short puff of the breath through the Blower, supplied with each bottle of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, affords this powder over the surface of the nasal passages. Painless and delightful to use, it relieves instantly and permanently cures Catarrh, Hay Fever, Colds, Headache, Sore Throat, Tonsillitis and Deafness. 60 Cents. At J. L. Mathieu's.

FARM FIELD AND GARDEN

CONCERNING FROST.

Every Man His Own Prophet. With Aid From the Weather Bureau.

As the conditions which produce damaging frost are subject to modifications which are as numerous as the kinds of crops raised and as varied as local topography, local climate and local soil conditions in the various sections of the United States, the writer, E. B. Garriott, in farmers' bulletin No. 104, in attempting to treat briefly a subject which is so diversified in its aspects, is confronted with many difficulties. Suffice it to say that with other atmospheric conditions favorable for its occurrence frost may, as a rule, be expected when temperature, as reported by stations of the weather bureau, falls to a point 8 to 10 degrees above the freezing point. The surfaces upon which frost is deposited must possess freezing temperature, although the temperature of the air a few feet above the surfaces may be several degrees above freezing, and it is the temperature of the air, in some instances many feet above the ground, that is given by the weather bureau observations.

Another atmospheric condition favorable for the occurrence of frost is a clear, cloudless and comparatively calm night. The presence of clouds retards radiation or loss of heat from plants. The clouds act as a screen in preventing the heat collected from the sun's rays during the day from escaping into the upper air. When clouds are not present and a withdrawal of the sun's rays causes a rapid cooling of the air at moderate elevations, the warmer air which collects near the surface of the earth during the day rises, and the cooler upper air, owing to its greater density or weight, settles to the earth. It will be noted that clouds not only prevent the escape of the warm air in immediate contact with the earth, but also blanket, as it were, the upper part of the lower air stratum.

Calm or comparatively still air is a condition which favors the formation of frost. On windy nights the air is disturbed and is not permitted to arrange itself in layers according to its density, with the densest and coldest air near the surface of the earth. It is kept mixed up by the wind.

Cold air settles by its greater weight to the surface of the earth and allows the warmer air to assume higher levels, causing frost in low grounds and granting to the higher grounds a comparative immunity from frost. Frost may be expected on low ground at times when higher grounds escape the visitations. Therefore early and tender crops should, so far as practicable, be confined to crests, hillsides and mountain sides, and later and harder crops to the lowlands and valleys.

Local climate as it is influenced and regulated by the proximity of bodies of water must be given great weight in calculations regarding frost. Frost is less likely to occur in localities swept by moisture laden air which has crossed a considerable body of water. This is more especially the case in the fall of the year, when the temperature of bodies of water is reduced very slowly, and in the south, where the water temperature continues relatively high throughout the year, the influence of the water is especially marked.

During the colder months air is not only warmed in crossing considerable bodies of water, but it also absorbs moisture, which, although invisible in the form of water vapor, has the effect of retarding the radiation of heat from the earth. In fact, so pronounced is the influence of water and water vapor that localities which with reference to exposure to west and northwest winds are, as it were, in the lee of large bodies of water are comparatively free from frost visitations.

Along parts of the east Florida coast which are protected on the west by the Indian river frost is said to be unknown, and throughout the central and northern sections of the United States localities which are protected on the west and northwest by bodies of water of considerable size are not only favored, by reason of their position, with conditions which do not promote the formation of frost, but also receive the benefits derived from heavier falls of snow.

The Bet Won the Case.

"In one of the remote counties of the Panhandle of Texas," says Law Notes, "two lawyers were trying a case before a justice of the peace. It was 60 miles as the crow flies to the nearest law book, and the attorneys differed, of course, as to the law upon the main issue in the case. They were trying the case without the intervention of a jury, and his honor, who conducted a gambling house in connection with his hotel, saloon, livery stable, stud horse and jackass, was in doubt as to what his decision ought to be.

"Finally Miller, the plaintiff's counsel, offered to bet Hoover, the defendant's attorney, $10 that he was right. Hoover did not happen to have that much of the circulating medium concealed about his person, and was naturally at a loss how to parry this forcible argument.

"The court waited a few moments on Hoover, and finally said: 'Well, Mr. Hoover, the court has waited long enough. Miller's proposition seems to be a fair one, and, since you don't put up, I will decide this case in favor of the plaintiff.'"

Not Allowed to Read the Bible.

But few people know that in the sixteenth century an Englishman was not allowed to read the Bible, yet it is perfectly true. Henry VIII issued a decree prohibiting the common people from reading the Bible. Officers of state were exempt from this law. Probably the king thought these officials would be none the worse for perusing the sacred work, and noble ladies or gentlemen might read the proscribed volume if they did so in their gardens or orchard, but no one was allowed even to read it to the lower classes.

During the reign of Catholic Queen Mary even more rigorous restrictions were enforced. Dr. Franklin, in his own "Life," preserves an anecdote which admirably illustrates this. His family had early adhered to the reformation, and they possessed an English Bible, which they concealed by fastening it beneath the lid of a close stool. When the doctor's great-grandfather desired to read to the family, he reversed the lid of the stool upon his knees and passed the leaves from one side to the other, each portion being fastened down with pack threads. One of the children was stationed at the door on the watch to see if an officer of the spiritual court came in sight. When such an individual hove in sight, the lid, with the Bible beneath it, was quickly replaced. This was in "Merry England."—Scottish Nights.

NO ONE NEED BE BALD.

Baldness is of two kinds—premature baldness and that which is the result of old age. However, both are curable. No man desires to be bald or is proud of his baldness. Especially is this so where one becomes prematurely bald in the prime of life. What one must endure as the result of extreme old age will be accepted with as good grace as possible, but where it is unnecessary will be refused until all hopes are gone. Premature baldness is unnatural and absolutely unnecessary. It is indeed remarkable that so many youths and men in the prime of life remain in that deplorable state, when by the use of proper remedies and the observance of the laws of health and nature, they can again become the possessors of as fine and luxuriant heads of hair as they desire by using Bunker's Hair Tonic. CLEANLINESS IN SURGERY.

The Cardinal Precepts of the Science of Operating in the Nineteenth Century.

There are three locations, so to speak, the absolute cleanliness of which must be above suspicion before the operator is justified in proceeding to his work, says the Nineteenth Century. These are the surgeon's hands, his instruments and the integument covering the part of the patient's body at which the operation is about to be performed. How is the requisite cleanliness in each case secured? So far as the hands are concerned, by profuse scrubbing with a nail brush in soap and hot water, followed by a thorough drenching in some antiseptic solution, as that of one in two thousand of perchloride of mercury, so far as the instruments are concerned, by sterilizing them, that is, by boiling them in water, or by passing them through the flame of a spirit lamp, or placing them in a steam sterilizer, and then, when the operator is ready to begin, by putting them into a receptacle containing an antiseptic solution, as, for example, that of carbolic acid. Lastly, so far as the patient's integument is concerned, by washing the part first thoroughly with soap and water, having previously shaved it if necessary and afterward with a perchloride of mercury solution, or if the part be greasy, by removing all the greasy material by scrubbing it with ether.

Without going into further details, these are the cardinal precepts of the science of operating in the present day. Of course each wound which in this manner is made under aseptic conditions, as it is called, is kept aseptic by the use of antiseptic dressings until healing has taken place. The results of this method of treatment of wounds are nothing less than wonderful in comparison with those which the earlier surgeons were able to obtain. What happens after, say, the amputation of a limb, nowadays? The rule is—nothing. Nothing, that is to say, beyond the uneventful convalescence of the patient. The dressings are not touched unless the temperature and pulse of the patient indicate by some disturbance that it would be expedient to examine the wound. The temperature and the pulse are the surgeon's guide; he takes his cue from them. Nothing can be amiss in the wound if these remain normal, and thus it follows that a large wound, such as that following an amputation, heals soundly from first to last, without any suppuration. What a contrast with that which obtained in former days! Suppuration was then thought to be an indispensable part of the healthy process of healing. In the present time, on the contrary, a surgeon is held to have failed in his practice of the principles of surgical cleanliness if, in wounds originally aseptic, suppuration occurs.

Authors' Homes.

Abroad, and especially in France, when a man makes a great literary or musical success, he likes to associate it with some permanent record. Dumas set the fashion sixty years ago by calling a little villa that he built outside Paris "Monte Cristo." It kept its name all through the author's life and retained it until a year ago, when it passed from the family into other hands. Similarly M. de Maupassant called the yacht so well known on the Riviera "Le Ami," from the most popular of his literary ventures. And now M. Planquette has had constructed for him a little cottage at Merville-sur-Mer, which he and his neighbors call the "Villa des Cloches." The neighbors are, in fact, very proud of it and him, and the Corneville people have just presented the villa with a medal of honor, a chime, so that the ring of the "Cloches de Corneville" may be independent of the caprice of the popularity of the footlights.—London Daily News.

Survivors of Napoleon's Army.

One of the French papers which have been devoting a great deal of attention to Napoleon Bonaparte of late has been entertaining its readers by having a census made of the survivors of Napoleon's grand army. Four of these men only are now left. The eldest is Jean Jacques Sabatier, who was born on the 13th of April, 1792, at Vermont L'Archeve, where he has lived in retirement for many years. Then come Victor Baillot, Jean Bonnet, and Joseph Rose, aged respectively one hundred and one month, one hundred years and one month and one hundred years and a few days. It is said that all are as hearty and vigorous as can be expected, in spite of their experiences as long as eighty-two years ago in that terrible retreat when the beggarly remnant of the greatest army the world has ever seen, worn out with cold and hunger, angrily called to the victor of Marengo and Austerlitz to get off his horse and share in the miseries of his men.

The Llana.

The Llana is a native of Peru and an animal of great importance to the Peruvians. It is a beast of burden, and at one time was the only quadruped in the country which could be used for that purpose, taking the place of either horse or goat; it also furnishes them with food and clothing. In South America the animal is commonly known by several names—llana, alpaca, vicuña and guanaco. The llama and alpaca are domesticated, but the guanaco and vicuña are wild. The flesh of the llama is good for food and the skins and wool for clothing.

The Shape of the Shoes.

A doctor says that it is a great mistake for all women to suppose that the pointed-toe shoe is bad for the feet. He adds that there are feet that should wear nothing else and that are hurt by the square-toed boot that is often substituted. The way to determine what is best for one's feet is to place the stockings on the foot and to notice where the big toe comes. If it is on a line with the others, then the square-toed shoe is required. If it decidedly projects beyond the others, the pointed toe is better.

Miner's Liniment Cures Colds, etc.

The ivy doesn't cling to the stone wall half as tenaciously as the man who is engaged in repairing it at so much per day.

St. Louis is reported to have a private school for females in which the place of honor in every class is at the foot. The reason is obvious.

HEART SONGS—

HYMNS AND THEIR WRITERS—

Come read! "I heard the voice of Jesus say
Some simple and heartfelt lay
That shall soothe this restless feeling
And banish the cares of day."

Not from the grand old masters,
Not from the birds sublime;
Whose distant footsteps echo,
Down the corridors of time.

But from some humbler poet
Whose songs gushed from his heart
As rain from the clouds in summer
Or tears from the eyelids start.

Such songs have power to quiet
The restless pulse of care,
And come like the benediction
That follows after prayer.

—LONGFELLOW

"HYMNS AND THEIR WRITERS."

Music is neither English nor French nor German. It is a speech we all understand. It is a kind of universal tongue which can touch all men in every land.

Some one has said that silence is music asleep. But had we an instrument to keep the ear, as the microscope keeps the eye, it may be we should find that silence is music awake, and that the "Music of the Spheres" may be not only a pretty poetic conceit, but founded on actual fact.

The hum of the bee, the laughter of the torrent, the rolling bass of the thunder—these are these sounds of the great anthem of creation!

Music is a very powerful influence. How the songs of the Troubadours soothed the Barbarians of the Middle Ages! The B. barons were more afraid of that thrilling French anthem the "Marseillaise," than of all the armies of Europe.

The Waldenses and Huguenots going bravely to the stake to die for their faith, sang praises to God.

Luther's chorales were as powerful as his sermons.

John Knox did enormous work in Scotland, but he was mightily helped by the music of the Covenanters, whose praises rang among the hills of Scotland on many a stormy night. God's people have always found refuge and help in a sacred song.

Martin Luther and Philip Melancthon, had a habit when the heavens were black, and the storms beating, of running to the 46th Psalm, "God is our Refuge," etc., and there they sang all their fears away.

But coming more directly to our subject, we may perhaps find it both interesting and profitable to know how some of our most popular and widely known hymns and songs originated. We have heard them sung from our very infancy, and they are so closely associated with the inspired writings that it is difficult to realize that these lines of living truth, and of helpful love, were actually written by mortals like ourselves, in comparatively recent times.

The hymn writers of the past two centuries, those who have had the true gift from above, and who have used it with the right motive, have done more to elevate and to aid their fellow-beings than they probably ever dreamed of, and are really only second to those who wrote under direct inspiration.

Who will venture to say that our hymnists have not been as directly and as truly inspired as were the evangelists themselves? Take for instance the B. and M. hymns, those wonderful four-lined stanzas, which include so much in so little, and which reaches the very height and depth of all religious reference and exaltation; does not the framing of such a compact wording go far to prove that divine aid may be sought, not in vain, by the true Christian poet and musician to-day.

It has been said of the Doxology that it daily echoes around the globe and has been probably more used than any other composition in the world, excepting the Lord's Prayer.

More than two centuries have passed since it was given to the world by its author, Bishop Doctridge, who was thus made great for all time. Born in England in 1637, chaplain to both Charles I. and James II, this good man suffered imprisonment in the Tower for refusing to read the famous Declaration of Indulgence. Death came to him while on a journey and found him ready even to the arrangement of clothing, for he always carried his shroud in his portmanteau.

He was buried at sunrise at his own request and as his body was lowered, his Morning Hymn beginning

"Awake my soul and with the sun, Thy daily stage of duty run," was sung.

To this day his Doxology is sung every Sabbath in the parish church of Frome, above the unmarked grave of its composer. Unless it be Old Hundred perhaps no hymn has been oftener sung, or with more devout, genuine, Christian hopefulness, than the one beginning—

"Lord dismiss us with thy blessing,
Fill our hearts with joy and peace.
Let us each thy love possessing Triumph in redeeming grace."

"Thine earthly Sabbath, Lord, we love,
But there's a nobler rest above."
Of Dr. Doctridge's 300 hymns a large proportion are still in use.

The Rev. Horatio Bonar has given us several beautiful hymns, but none better suited to please the ear, and to catch the tongue and heart than the one beginning:

"I heard the voice of Jesus say Come unto me and rest."

This Presbyterian clergyman was one of the most genial whole souled workers in the Lord's vineyard of this century, not only as a pastor, but as a writer in both prose and verse.

One of the sweetest of all the hymns he wrote is that of which the first and last stanzas are as follows:—

"I was a wandering sheep,
I did not love the fold;
I did not love my shepherd's voice,
I would not be controlled."

No more a wayward child
I seek no more to roam,
I love my heavenly Father's voice
I love, I love His home."

Who can tell how many hearts have been touched by these pathetic little lines and led by them to seek and to find the fold.

Dr. Lowell Mason once said that although Ray Palmer might live many years and do many good things, he would be best known to posterity as the author of the hymn beginning:—

"My faith looks up to Thee,
Thou Lamb of Calvary, Saviour divine
Now hear me while I pray,
Take all my sins away."

Oh! may I from this day, be wholly thine!

Ray Palmer wrote this beautiful hymn when only 22 years of age. He says of the hymn: "It was written because it was born in my heart and demanded expression. I recollect I wrote with very true emotions and ended the last line with tears."

Even after written the verses lay two years hidden away in a pocket book, when they were brought to light and published by Dr. Mason in a book of hymns. Hundreds of testimonials were sent the author telling of the happy effects produced by this hymn, and many interesting stories of the work it has done.

Longfellow's "Psalm of Life" is one of the finest hymns ever penned.

It was composed when he was but 31 years of age and was a sudden burst of song from his inmost heart as he sat one bright summer morning looking from his window upon the lovely world without.

Another poem which was written in similar fashion; has been set to music and sung often as a hymn is the familiar one beginning, "There is a Reaper whose name is Death." Wm. Cullen Bryant, another American, has written several fine sympathetic hymns. We are all familiar with the one beginning—

"Oh, deem not that they are blest alone
Whose lives a peaceful task no keep,
The power who pities man has shown
A blessing for the eyes that weep."

What more familiar hymn than this, and what more truly in the spirit of the Lord Jesus?

"Blest be the tie that binds,
Our hearts in Christian love, etc."

We all know it by heart. It was written by the Rev. John Fawcett, an Englishman who was converted at an early age under the preaching of Whitefield. Many women have written beautiful hymns which have been sung in several languages and which have turned many hearts to Christ. Frances Ridley Havergal, a name well known as the author of 77 hymns, is herself the daughter of a hymnist who has written even a larger number. The lines

"My precious blood is shed," etc., were thrown into the fire as soon as composed, as unworthy of preservation, but were luckily saved, singed and crumpled, to prove a blessing and consolation to thousands.

One of the sweetest of hymnists and best of women was Miss Phoebe Cary. The hymn in which her name will longer survive, perhaps is that much loved one beginning:

"One sweetly solemn thought, Comes to me o'er and o'er, Mrs. P. H. Brown wrote verses and essays of a religious character, the most familiar and sweetest being the hymn commencing—

"I love to steal away from every common care,
And spend the hours of setting day
In humble, grateful prayer."

What hymn in the English language is more beautifully touching, more strongly helpful than the one:

"Just as I am without one plea,
But that thy blood was shed for me," etc.

These verses were written by Charlotte Elliot and were the outcome of her own religious experiences. Her efforts to save herself by works being finally relinquished, she threw herself simply and trustfully upon the Saviour for help, which could be found in no other way.

Many other names come to our minds of worthy writers of immortal fame, but time and space forbid.

"Blessings be with them and eternal praise,
Who gave us nobler loves and nobler cares.
The poets who on earth have made us heirs
Of truth and pure delight by heavenly lays!"

We are sure our white ribbons will be glad to welcome the above characteristically interesting paper from the pen of "A member and will heartily echo Compton's wish for 'more to follow.' Will not some other exercise the gift that is in them and follow up this theme, giving us the history of "Lead Kindly Light," "Nearer My God to Thee," "Onward Christian Soldiers," and other familiar and well loved hymns.

STOMACH TROUBLE.

A Frequent Source of
The Most Intense Misery.

Mr. Harvey Price, of Bismark, Suffered For Years Before Finding a Cure—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Restored Him.

Those who suffer from stomach troubles are truly to be pitied. Life seems a burden to them; food is distasteful, and even that of the plainest kind is frequently followed by nausea, disordered pains and sometimes vomiting. Such a sufferer was Mr. Harvey Price, a well known farmer and stock grower living at Bismark, Ont.

To a reporter who recently interviewed him, Mr. Price said: "I have found Dr. Williams' Pink Pills of such inestimable value in relieving me of a long siege of suffering that I am not only willing but anxious to say a good word in behalf of this medicine, and thus point the road to health to some other sufferer. For five years I had been afflicted with stomach trouble and a torpid liver. I doctored and also denied myself many kinds of food pleasant to the taste, but neither the medical treatment nor the diet seemed to help me to any degree. In January, 1899, the climax of my trouble appeared to be reached. At that time I was taken down with a gripe, and that, added to my other troubles, placed me in such a precarious position that none of my neighbors look d for my recovery. My appetite was almost completely gone and I experienced great weakness, dizziness, vomiting spells and violent headaches. I shall never forget the agony experienced during that long and tedious sickness. Medical treatment and medicines of various kinds had no desired effect in relieving me. After existing in this state for some months, my mother induced me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In May last I purchased three boxes and before these were gone I was enabled to get on my feet. This encouraged me to continue the use of the pills, and with the use of less than a dozen boxes I was again enjoying the best of health. I can now attend to my farm work with the greatest ease. My appetite is better than it has been for years, and the stomach trouble that had so long made my life miserable has vanished. I have gained in weight and can safely say that I am enjoying better health than I have had for years before. I feel quite sure that those who may be sick or ailing, will find a cure in a fair trial of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make pure, rich blood, thus reaching the root of disease and thus driving it out of the system, curing when other medicines fail. Most of the ills afflicting mankind are due to an impoverished condition of the blood or weak or shattered nerves, and for all these Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a specific which speedily restore the sufferer to health. These pills are never sold in any form except in the company's boxes, the wrapper around which bears the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People." All others are counterfeits and should always be refused. Get the genuine and be made well.

Just before the average man succumbs in making a million out of wind his pipe goes out.

CROUPS, COUGHS AND COLDS are all quickly cured by Pny-Pectoral. It lessens the cough almost instantly, and cures readily the most obstinate cold. Manufactured by the proprietors of Perry Davis' Painkiller.

St. Andrew's Day.

SUPPER AND ENTERTAINMENT.

The lecture hall of St. Andrew's Church was well filled last evening with an appreciative audience who had gathered to celebrate the day dear to all sons of Auld Scotia. The ladies of the Church had prepared and served an excellent supper, to which full justice was done, after which a very interesting programme of music, song and recitations was rendered. The orchestra under Dr.
Bloomfield's leadership rendered several selections in fine style and helped materially to enliven the proceedings.

Miss Maud McKinnon rendered Kipling's
"The Absent-Minded Beggar" in good style, and was encored. Miss Hollingshead who was in good voice, sang with effect "My Home's where the Heather Blooms," "What the Chimney Says" and
"The Relief of Lucknow." The fact that she was enthusiastically welcomed at each succeeding appearance and heartily encored goes to prove that her numbers were appreciated. She also gave a verse of "Rule Britannia" as an encore. Mr.
Hugh Russell greatly amused the audience
by his recitation of a couple of humorous Scottish selections, "Hannu McLean's Wedding" and "Tam O'Shanter." The Rev. M. Shearer presided and the concert closed with the National Anthem.

The Rev. Mr. Shearer received the following telegram from the President of St. Andrew's Society, Rossland B. C., but too late to be read at the concert:

"The mountains here are full of guide,
The snow is falling down;
An' we'll tak a wily waltz the night
Wi' the chieft'ns o' yae bray town."
JOHN FERGUSON McRAE,
President.

"We are particulars"—briefly.
 "No, we are not," retorted the girl.
 "We are most decidedly generals. My father is General Carwithen, my grandfather was General Carwithen; your father is—a general dealer." This latter was said under her breath.
 The man did not contradict her; he merely asked her if it made any difference to themselves.
 "I think we are, and always shall be, as far apart as those two stars," she

"Hello! You look a bit down in the mouth, Needham. I knew this business wouldn't work satisfactorily," he said.

"It's working splendidly," answered

"She doesn't know?" he asked.

"Not she!" answered Needham. "She thinks my father is a general dealer in—only heaven knows what! But I'll make her own she loves me before she does know. No one here has ever guessed my story. I am a poor violin

"With you, and she wants to be there there," she turned up her lofty nose with scorn at the bare idea of you joining her select party at table. No one is good enough for Mrs. Ranter; she has her precious 'girls' future to think of, and you are not an eligible."

"Ranter!" echoed Needham. "Why, that's the name of my best pupil's mother. 'Are you going?'"

"Oh, the serpent a-dar!" returned

"You were always a rum chap, you know," said his friend, "I can't think

"Don't outlive them, old fellow," said Needham. "It is a mistake. When the real shines in the reflected glory of the ideal, it is always the better for it."

"Do you really think so?" asked Grosvenor as he got up. "I am off to bed now. If I stay up any longer you will be persuading me to follow your example, and I don't think I should find it as amusing as you did."

"I am tired," she said briefly.

"That isn't all," he replied.

At this moment Mrs. Ranter bore down upon them. She cut the girl, and bowed lily to Needham. It would not do for her to offend him, Kate was beginning to play the violin so well under his careful tuition.

"Cecil," said the man, possessing himself of her hand, "you know I love

The girl looked at him, and he read the answer in her brown eyes. Then she seized her violin out of his hand and fled, leaving him staring stupidly after her, with a whole world of joy on his face.

Needham came back the day after this charitable remark had been made. He was in deep mourning, and his first visit was to General Carwithen. Cecil was in the garden, and thither he wended his way after the interview was over.

"I have come to claim you," he said.

"What has made father consent?" asked the girl. "The tones of your voice?"

"Look at that," he said, thrusting a paper into her hand and turning away, so that he might not see her face. He need not have been afraid.

Cecil read the marked paragraph, "The funeral of Lord Conningham."

"There was also a likeness of the heir, and it and the man sitting beside her were identical."

They may run across such an umbrella and buy it, or they may search for it and find it, and when the umbrella to which it is attached wears out then very likely they have the handle of the new umbrella that they buy taken off and the old handle, that they like, sub-ward of, relates Julian Ralph in his reminiscences, was when I was on the staff of the New York Sun. I had been sent to look up some one in a suburb of the city. The address was a number on a Fourth street, but, to my amazement, I found three such streets in the place. The house I sought was not in any of them. Tired and almost discouraged I turned into a cobbler's shop.

Eastern Townships

IS THE

Sherbrooke Daily Record

It contains in one week more small "Want" advertisements than all other papers in the Eastern Townships combined.

If you want to buy, sell or exchange, want a situation, looking for help, lost or found anything, etc., watch the "WANT" COLUMNS of the Daily Record. Better still let your wants be known through this medium. Tell your story in 15 words and the charge is only 75 cents for six days, (1 day 15c). Those who use the "Record Want Column" get quick and satisfactory results, that why it leads all other papers in the Eastern Townships.

A New and Superbly Illustrated

LIFE OF CROMWELL

—BY THE—

Right Hon. John Morley, M.P.

THE conductors of The Century take especial pleasure in announcing this as the leading historical series of the magazine in 1900. No man is more competent than John Morley, who was selected by Mr. Gladstone's family to write the biography of Cromwell, to treat Cromwell in the spirit of the end of the nineteenth century.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS

will be remarkable. Besides original drawings, there will be valuable unpublished portraits lent by Her Majesty the Queen, and by the owners of the greatest Cromwell collections. Other features include:

ERNEST SETON-THOMPSON'S

"Biography of a Grizzly," delightfully illustrated by the artist-author, — the longest and most important literary work of the author of "Wild Animals I Have Known."

PARIS, ILLUSTRATED BY

CASTAIGNE.

A series of papers for the Exposition year by Richard Whiting, author of "No. 5 John Street," splendidly illustrated with more than sixty pictures by the famous artist Castaigne, including views of the Paris Exposition.

LONDON, ILLUSTRATED BY

PHIL MAY.

A series of papers on the East End of London by Sir Walter Besant, with pictures by Phil May and Joseph Pennell.

SAILING ALONE AROUND

THE WORLD.

The record of a voyage of 46,000 miles undertaken single-handed and alone in a 40 foot boat. A most delightful biography of the sea.

THE AUTHOR OF "HUGH WYNNE"

Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, will furnish a short series of remarkable psychological interest, "The Autobiography of a Quack," and there will be short stories by all the leading writers.

A CHAPTER FROM MARK TWAIN'S

ABANDONED AUTOBIOGRAPHY LITERARY REMINISCENCES.

Familiar accounts of Tennyson, Browning, Lowell, Emerson, Bryant, Whittier, and Holmes.

IMPORTANT PAPERS

By Governor Theodore Roosevelt, President Eliot, of Harvard University, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, Woodrow Wilson, John Burroughs, and others.

AMERICAN SECRET HISTORY.

A series of papers of commanding interest.

THE ART WORK OF THE CENTURY.

It is everywhere conceded that The Century has led the world in art. Timothy Cole's unique and beautiful wood blocks will continue to be a feature, with the work of many other engravers who have made the American school famous. The fine half-tone plates—re engraved by wood engravers—for which the magazine is distinguished, will appear with new methods of printing and illustrating.

Mr. E. Channell, of Stanstead, was in town on Tuesday.

Mr. F. Wadleigh, of Bishop's Crossing, was in town the first of the week.

Mr. A. J. Avery was in Sherbrooke on Tuesday attending the Masonic District meeting.

Mrs. W. L. Shurtliff gave a very delightful "At Home" to her young lady friends the first of the week.

Messrs. J. O'Neil & Son have moved into their new store this week, which, by the way, is up to date in every particular.

Mr. F. E. Lovell, who has been confined to his house by illness for some weeks, has so far recovered as to be able to ride out.

The Rev. Mr. McKillop delivered a lecture on temperance at Shurtliff's Hall last Sunday evening to a large and appreciative audience.

Mr. and Mrs. Otis Shurtliff and Miss

Nellie Shurtliff left for Boston on a visit the first of the week. They will be away about two weeks.

Mr. Charles Christie was in town over Sunday. He has been quite ill at one of the Montreal hospitals, but is now much improved.

Mr. Dennis Rainville has returned from Montreal where he recently underwent an operation on his neck, which has proved very successful.

We hear that Mr. A. O. Norton has closed the Child's Factory and will shortly commence the manufacture of his ball bearing jacks for Canada at this place.

Dr. Oadioux, of New York City, delivered a lecture at the Baptist Church last Monday evening, the subject being

"Women of To-day and Men of Tomorrow."

The much talked of new locomotives for the freight service of the G. T. R. have put in their appearance, and to use the expression of the small boy, "ain't they big dandies?"

The lecture at the Methodist Church on Wednesday evening by the Rev. R. A. Scott

(colored) of Tennessee was very well patronized. The subject was "Race

Surfrage in the South."

Mr. A. Hanou was at Sherbrooke on Wednesday evening. After the recent bank robbery at St. Thomas the E. T. Bank has decided to use the ounce of preventative in the way of putting a watchman on their premises to do duty during the hours that the staff is not there. A very wise move

we should say.

Death has entered our midst this week and claimed as its victim one of our oldest and most respected citizens in the person of Mr. Amos H. Cummings. Mr.

Cummings has always been a great benefactor, furnishing employment to a large number of people. He was a kind husband, a loving father, and will be much missed by his many friends. The funeral took place at the Methodist Church on Tuesday afternoon and was largely attended. He leaves a widow, one son and two daughters to mourn his loss.

HIBBY'S PAIN EXTERMINATOR

Never fails to relieve Pains in the Limbs, Side or Back.

Messrs. W. J. Irwin & Co. have opened a carriage and sleigh emporium on Main Street (opposite the Coaticook House)

Coaticook, where they have a fine line of Sleighs, Wagons, Harnesses, &c., also robes, whips, blankets, &c. Mr. Irwin is well and favorably known throughout the Townships where he has travelled for several years for Messrs. Haney & Co.,

of Montreal, and he is sure to keep none

but the best class of goods advertised.

Merchants, farmers and others who are in need of either wagon, sleigh or harness would consult their own interests if they will call and see Mr. Irwin's stock before buying elsewhere.

It is sometimes truthfully stated that "there is nothing so bad but what it might be worse" but there are exceptions to all rules, and this is one of them, and when we say, "one of them" we refer to the water that the Water Company has been serving up to some of its subscribers for the past two months. In some instances people have been obliged not only to strain

the water they used but to boil it and then filter it and let it settle before daring to drink it. We think that it is high time that something was done. We are quite willing to drink anything in the shape of water that we can swallow when it is unavoidably low, but at this season of the year we feel that we have a right to expect good water when total abstinence from anything stronger is advocated.

OLIVIER.

We are having very cold weather here,

but not any snow to speak of.

Mr. Dhu, who has been spending a few weeks in Maine, has returned again to Olivier.

Mr. Orval Ward lost a very nice horse last week, and Mr. Wayland Doloff has been round with a subscription paper for money to buy him another.

Mr. Lee Jenkins, of Smith's Mills, was the guest of Mr. George Bachelder over Sunday.

Mrs. Turner, of Magog, is visiting in this vicinity this week.

Mr. Lewis Carr, who has been away for a few weeks, has returned home again.

Mr. Homer Case has been very sick but is able to be out again.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Wells have been away to Sweetburg visiting friends.

There is talk of having a Christmas tree

at the Olivier school house.

Mr. Rice Rexford, who has been sick for a long time, is still failing.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Felton, of Beebe

Plain, visited at Mr. R. Rexford's last week.

Mr. Eddie Loney and sister of Magog visited here last Saturday.

Last Tuesday evening the friends and relatives met at Mr. A. P. Olivier's to celebrate their twenty fifth anniversary of their wedding. A good time was enjoyed by all present. Mr. and Mrs.

Olivier were the recipient of some very nice presents.
