Late Lord Atholstan Makes Bequest To High School

Scholarship To be Awarded Leading Pupil

Student Leading Grade XI in June Examinations Will Receive $1,000 to Further Studies

OTHER WINNERS

Principal J. B. Macmillan, of Huntingdon Academy, received this week from the Royal Trust Company, of Montreal the following intimation:

Under the Will of the Late Lord Atholstan there is a bequest of:—

"—the sum of one thousand dollars as a scholarship for a pupil of Huntingdon Academy to be chosen by the Principal of such Academy. This scholarship to be for one year only."

In consequence of this bequest Principal Macmillan has decided that the scholarship be awarded to that pupil who, having completed his entire course at Huntingdon Academy, leads Grade XI in the Government examinations which will be held June next, and, who proceeds to McGill University, continuing his studies there for a period of at least four years.

This scholarship will be paid to the winner at the successful completion of each year's course in McGill University in equal portions until the full amount is expended.

Should the student winning the scholarship fail to complete any or all of the four years' course at McGill University, the amount of the scholarship remaining will be paid to a student in Grade XI fulfilling the conditions of the scholarship. The full amount of the scholarship or the equal portions remaining thereof will be paid to such student.

Principal Macmillan also informed the Gleaner this week that the students now attending McGill University and holding the scholarships will be so taken care of under the provisions of the Will.

A Cigarette Causes Heavy Fire Damages

A lighted cigarette inadvertently thrown at the rear of St. Bridget's Church at Trout River Lines on Monday afternoon is believed to have been the cause of a fire which might have destroyed this Church had it not been for the quick work of the neighbors.

At about 3 p.m. on Monday, a neighbor noticed smoke emerging from the Roman Catholic Church at Trout River and immediately notified the parish priest. Neighbors rushed to the scene and noticed that the fire had set in between the walls at the rear of the church. Breaking open all sections which might endanger the building to a further extent, the volunteer firemen rapidly controlled the flames and the church was out of danger.

Troopers from Malone as well as the fire brigade from that village were summoned and although they were at the scene in a comparatively short time, their help was not needed. Fire extinguishers were extensively used and proved successful in mastering the situation.

Damages to the church are reported to be between $200 and $300 and are covered by insurance.

HUNTINGDON CHOIR UNABLE TO ACCEPT C.B.S. INVITATION

The Huntingdon Choral Society which won the William Irwin Trophy at the annual Musical Festival in Montreal during the month of March was offered the opportunity to sing several selections from its repertoire over a well-known network, it was learned this week. The program was scheduled for Friday evening, May 12th.

Due to the fact that the date chosen by the Canadian Broadcasting System coincided with the 100th anniversary of the founding of Huntingdon United Church, the offer had to be declined. On the occasion of this celebration in Huntingdon several members of the Choir would have been unable to participate at both functions. This is the reason why the committee decided to decline the invitation.

It was an honour for Huntingdon to receive such an invitation and one which should make Huntingdonians prouder than ever of their Choir. The Canadian Broadcasting Corp. informed the members of the local Choir that they would arrange to have them sing over the air next spring, shortly after the Musical Festival.

Valleyfield Council Passes Resolution to Obtain Grants For Unemployed in Valleyfield

At the weekly meeting of the Valleyfield Council on Wednesday evening the main topic of conversation dealt with the city finances. The fact that the Rogers agreement had not yet been accepted by the Provincial Government, the Valleyfield Council passed a resolution asking the Provincial Government to accept this resolution from Ottawa in the shortest possible delay so that a solution may be found to the unemployment situation in Valleyfield.

The "Syndicat National du Textile," through its secretary, asked the Council to make the identity cards obligatory for residents of this City. This letter was tabled for further study.

The Valleyfield Veterans' Association, who were invited to stand guard at Coteau Station on May 16th when Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth visit the Canadian metropolis, asked the Valleyfield Council to grant $1.00 to each member of this Association who are unemployed. The Council rejected the request.

The "Zouaves Pontificaux Canadiens", Company 27, were given permission to hold a tag-day on May 13th and 14th.

The Treasurer will send an account to the Parish of St. Timothée for the use of the Valleyfield fire brigade at the time of the fire at the Fortier hotel.

The City engineer presented an estimate amounting to $1,600 for the construction of a sidewalk at Village Billette. The Montreal Cottons granted the City permission to build this sidewalk. The estimate was tabled.

At Ald. Arthur Meloche's request, the City of Valleyfield will hold their Clean-Up week during the week of May 8th.

A letter was read from Maxime Raymond, K.C., M.P., for Beauharnois-Laprairie in connection with grants to be obtained by the City of Valleyfield for the unemployed.

Hon. Martin B. Fisher to Greet Royal Party

Extensive Road Building Programme For Huntingdon County Being Considered by Quebec Roads Department

The Hon. Martin B. Fisher, Provincial Treasurer visited with many friends in the constituency on Friday, including Dr. J. C. Moore. It is a matter of much gratification to know that Dr. Moore is now able to be out of doors, and from all appearances his physical condition is very much improved. Though Dr. Moore has been confined to his home for many months his interest in everything going on in the community is being maintained. We trust continued fine weather will mean more marked improvements and that at an early date he will be able to enjoy driving about amongst his many old friends.

The Hon. Mr. Fisher and Mrs. Fisher are scheduled to be amongst the party of Canadians who are to board the Empress of Australia at Quebec on Monday and welcome King George and Queen Elizabeth to Canada.

Mr. Fisher was much interested in the progress being made in regards to the laying of the big sewer on Chateauguay Street, which is a Provincial Government unemployment relief work. This work is to be concluded at an early date, but it is expected the work will continue until the Hunter St. Sewer is tapped, which is located near the Lalande butcher shop.

Mr. Fisher had nothing definite to state as to what would be done in the way of road work this summer. The Quebec Roads Department have been asked to consider having the Plank road surfaced this summer, and such will likely be done as the preparatory work was completed last summer.

Highway surfacing on other roads is desired and we believe the other roads under consideration include the Ridge road from Huntingdon to Arnold's factory, St. Agnes de Dundee, Highway No. 3 from Dundee Lines to the St. Barbe road Paul's sideroad to connect with Highway No. 4 and the stretch of road from Athelstan to Herdman. Another link of road that would be greatly appreciated is the four-mile stretch of river road between Athelstan and Huntingdon. If even a fair proportion of these roads are done this summer it will be welcomed by the taxpayers and afford much employment to labor.

In the Hemmingford area much work was done last year in the way of building a highway from the international boundary towards the Mercier bridge. The plan of continuing this work this summer is being considered by the Quebec Roads Department.

Bacchus Fails Help Friends Searching Car

Visitors Fail to Recall Visit of Provincial Police Over Week-end—Car Found After Much Effort

On Monday morning three adults were parading the streets of Huntingdon in search of their car which they had not seen since retiring the previous evening.

This party, after spending the week-end in Huntingdon, were preparing to return to their distant nome in Ontario during the early hours of Monday when they finally realized that some stranger in a uniform had ordered them to leave their car with him on Sunday evening.

After inquiring at different places, these persons finally asked passers-by where the Court House was located. There they were directed to get in touch with the Provincial Police, who, the Court attendant stated, might know something about the whole affair.

The Provincial officer was not available in the vicinity so they began telephoning at different places. After about fifteen calls were placed in the Town and Country, the car in question was located in a Huntingdon garage. On arriving there to claim their vehicle the Ontarians were told that on Sunday evening they had broken a Stop Sign at one intersection in Huntingdon. Later, the Provincial Police had met with them and as they refused to admit their guilt the officer ordered them to leave the vehicle with him. They were also told that they would have to pay the costs of repairing this sign as well as the storage for the evening before the car could be released.

They could not recall any of these facts. Apparently, Bacchus had been their best friend throughout the week-end but had failed to get them out of this predicament. Willingly, they paid the costs incurred and away they went, presumably well satisfied that they had not done more damages.

Protective Association Resumes Its Activities After Few Years Idleness

Association Which Was Founded in County Previous To 1912, Has Been Inactive For Several Years—M. T. Robb Appointed President

The Mutual Protective Association, which was founded in Huntingdon County in 1910 or probably a few years earlier, held its first meeting in recent years at the Huntingdon County Building on Saturday afternoon. This Association was founded at the time for the purpose of protecting the citizens of Huntingdon County from hen thieves, horse and cattle thieves, etc.

A few months ago, James E. Barrett, secretary of Huntingdon County and Godmanchester Council, found a booklet in his office at the Court which also enclosed a bank book showing a balance of some $300.00. Investigating, Mr. Barrett was informed that it was the property of citizens in Huntingdon County who had formed a Protective Association in the early part of the twentieth century to protect themselves from thieves which at the time were rather prevalent in the countryside. As no minutes of any of the previous meetings were available, some of the interested parties were notified and unanimously agreed to hold a meeting.

M. T. Robb presided at the gathering on Saturday and stated that this Association had not held any meetings, he believed, in the past six years or more. The cash on hand, which is the property of the interested parties of this Association, showed that they had over $400. This amount included the interest on the money at the bank.

Although the gathering on Saturday was not as large as might have been expected, the members present unanimously agreed to continue the activities of this Association and to elect their officers. The election disclosed that M. T. Robb was appointed president; Austin J. Kelly, vice-president and James E. Barrett, secretary-treasurer.

At the conclusion of the meeting, the members present passed a resolution addressed to Mrs. R. N. Walsh and W. J. Walsh, expressing the Association's regret in the passing of the late R. N. Walsh, D.Vs. a former president of the Huntingdon Protective Association.

It was the opinion of the members present that this Association should be kept intact and that the money on hand should be used for the protection of its members.

Residents of Quebec Seem More Fearful of War Than Those on War Fronts of France

So Finds Roger Turcq of Huntingdon Who With His Family Has Just Returned From A Two Months' Trip

Residents of the Province of Quebec, or of Canada in general, seem to have a greater fear of an impending world war than the people in France—which would in all likelihood be a battle ground should a world conflict occur. The French people are taking things calmly. If war is to come, then let it come. But until it does, there's no sense losing too much sleep over it.

Such were the observations of Roger Turcq, popular driver of the Provincial Transport Bus between Montreal and Huntingdon, who recently returned from a two months' trip to France with his wife and child.

Of course, preparations have been made should war become a reality. For example, every one has been provided with a gas mask and each home has a bag of sand with which to smother out a fire should it break out in a household from an exploding bomb or some similar element of combustion. Residents all have instructions as to what means of transportation to use and how to get it speedily in order to leave the city of Paris should it be found necessary to do so. Every householder in Paris is aware that in the event of war they will be obliged to provide board and lodging for so many soldiers. Should they be unwilling to do this they will have to pay for keep of so many soldiers at a hotel in the city.

Calmly Awaiting the Future

But despite all these preparations they do not seem half so worried about the war situation as do people in Canada. And the newspapers there are not continually appearing with screaming headlines telling of the nearness of war every few days or so.

Roger was inclined to compare the attitude of some people in Canada in regard to the war situation with a certain individual who felt he had a great deal of trouble all his life. This individual did much worrying and the greatest trouble was that of worrying about those things which never happened at all. Whether another world war will happen or not, is another question. But it would seem that the people of France are going through life these days in a tranquil way and are refusing to let the fear of war mar their everyday life. If it comes, O.K., but until it comes, why worry?

The Turcq family sailed from New York City on the "Isle de France" and landed at LaHavre. They were supposed to return by the liner Paris on April 20. This luxurious liner, as will be remembered by news reports in the daily newspapers some time ago, took fire and burned. Mr. Turcq expressed thanks that it burned a day before it was supposed to sail and not a day or so after at sea with he and his family on board. With the burning of the liner "Paris" it was found necessary to return to United States and eventually to Canada via the Champlain. This boat had just returned from a Southern cruise and was pressed into service to carry the passengers which the ill-fated Paris was supposed to have carried.

British Passport Helpful

While in France, Mr. Turcq and his family visited numerous places where relatives lived and well as other centers of historical interest. One trip was made to Brussels, Belgium, while a half hour excursion

The Week at Ottawa

Parliamentarians Rush Things Thorugh to Prepare For Visit of Their Majesties — More Defense is Urged

By Spectator

Parliamentarians are doing their utmost to complete the legislative programme and be ready for prorogation when the King and Queen arrive in this country. The aim is to be finished by the 12th. The chances seem to be more favorable for this than they were a short time ago. The alternative according to the government's idea is an adjournment to June 19th, and that would seem hardly advisable unless there is a good deal of work left over. A summer session is not pleasant. The main measures or rather group of measures that have raised doubt about early parliamentary prorogration have been those embodying the government's agricultural program. Good headway, however, has been made with these bills.

One of these measures which will aid cooperative marketing, provides for an initial guaranteed payment of sixty cents for wheat. But this is to be put into force only on proclamation. It will depend on the future course of the cooperative principle. In the meantime for the present crop year 1939-40, there is the guaranteed price for wheat of 70 cents; that is for number one, Northern, delivered Fort William. The government did not agree to the demands of sections of the West that the 80 cent guarantee should continue. Under the seventy cent guarantee not more than five thousand bushels will be accepted from any one farmer and penalties are provided for infraction of this stipulation by any producer. Another bill, one which will come into effect only on proclamation, provides for an initial payment for a wide range of agricultural products, the initial payment not to exceed eighty per cent of the wholesale price of the particular commodity for the three years previous to the year of production. This initial payment will be guaranteed by the government. If the cooperative or selling agency to which this guarantee is given by the government, secures a larger average price than the initial price, the difference will be distributed among the procuders after the selling agency has reimbursed itself townships where the yield is from zero to four bushels; from five to eight bushels $1.50 and from 9 to 12 bushels $1.00. These provisions apply to an "emergency" year and 1939-40 has been designated as an emergency year. There is a further provision in the amended bill, for selling, processing costs, etc.

There has been a change in the rates of payment under the crop insurance plan. The new arrangement is pay $2.00 per acre in which says that in a year not declared an "emergency" year but when 135 townships in a province have a crop failure through drought or grasshoppers or where a similar condition exists in 50 townships in two provinces, a payment will be made of $2.50 an acre to farmers in these townships whose ground yields less than five bushels an acre.

Calf Club Holds Meet

J. L. Pelletier Addresses Members of Huntingdon Calf Club

More than thirty members of the Huntingdon Calf Club attended the monthly meeting of this organization on Saturday evening in the County Building.

L. J. Pelletier, local agronomist, was the guest speaker of the evening. He gave an interesting address on the art of judging cattle and the manner in which to exhibit cattle for judging.

At the conclusion of his remarks, Mr. Pelletier urged each member of the Huntingdon Calf Club to exhibit as many cattle as possible at the Ormstown Fair which will be held from June 6th to 9th.

Before this meeting was brought to a close Mr. Pelletier asked one member of this organization to give a definition of what happens and what should be done in exhibiting and judging cattle.

Veterans, Boy Scouts, Students Assigned Special Places to Witness Royal Procession

Expect More Than 600 Will Take Advantage of Excursions Into Montreal to Greet Their Majesties—Celebration at Coteau Station

TRAINS LEAVE MONTREAL LATER THAN USUAL

Special trains will be leaving the Huntingdon Station on Tuesday morning with approximately 600 persons from the Town of Huntingdon and countryside for Montreal to greet Their Majesties, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth. The Canadian National Railways are sponsoring an excursion with their special train leaving the metropolis at 7.15 p.m. D.S.T., instead of 4.05 p.m. that day so as to allow the visitors there to get a chance of seeing the Royal procession. The New York Central Railroad are concluding arrangements with the local citizens so as to also hold an excursion. Should this latter situation materialize the train will leave Huntingdon at 9.15 a.m. D.S.T. and will return on Tuesday evening, leaving from Westmount Station only at 9.30 p.m. D.S.T.

Other means of transporting others who will be unable to make the trip by trains are also being discussed but no definite arrangements have yet been concluded.

The Huntingdon Veterans' Association will make the journey to Montreal in the special N.Y.C. if it materializes. Approximately sixty members belonging to this association will journey to Montreal on this occasion.

It is expected that should the N.Y.C. hold an excursion on Tuesday morning, many citizens from this section of Huntingdon County will board it for Montreal. Hundreds of others will also board it along the other sections on this line.

The Huntingdon and Valleyfield Veterans' Associations, the Huntingdon, Ormstown and Valleyfield Boy Scouts, Huntingdon Academy, Ormstown High School, Valleyfield Institute students and other organizations as well as thousands of citizens from the Chateauguay Valley are expected to journey to Montreal next Tuesday morning to take a glimpse at Their Majesties, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

Plans and last minute details were all arranged during the past few days so that everything will be in order when the procession gets underway in the Canadian metropolis on Tuesday.

Twenty-six members of the First Huntingdon Boy Scout Troop will leave by train on Tuesday morning for Montreal. The local scouts will help in lining the section which has been allotted to the Scouts of Montreal, on the route to be followed by the Royal procession.

The Huntingdon Troop will take up its position just west of Peel street on Pine Avenue, between houses Nos. 1200 and 1266. This troop has to be in position not later than 3.30 p.m. D.S.T.

Each Scout Troop will form one line, standing one foot in front of the curb, with Assistant Scoutmasters at the West end. Scoutmasters will be in front of the line for general supervision of the frontage occupied by their troop.

The local Scout troop will be headed by former Scoutmaster M. R. Primeau with R. Daniel as assistant-scoutmaster. I. H. Bowden is the Scoutmaster of the First Huntingdon Boy Scout Troop.

The following members of the Huntingdon Boy Scouts will be in Montreal on this occasion: R. Caza, J.-P. Caza, G. Grant, A. Van Vliet, W. Burrows, S. Oney, A. Fawcett, W. Munro, D. Bruce, B. Anderson, M. Clouston, C. Rolfe, B. Bowden, D. Bowden, R. Laberge, G. Grant, R. Cluff, L. Chambers, G. Lanktree R. Lefebvre, D. Lefebvre, C. McWhinnie, T. Manning and John Irving.

A special celebration will be witnessed at Coteau Station, Soulanges County, on Saturday evening, May 20th, as the Royal party will be enroute from Ottawa to Kingston, Ont. More than 10,000 are expected in this little hamlet on that evening to salute Their Majesties.

The special train, carrying the Royal couple and their attendants will stop at Coteau Station for approximately twenty minutes. This will be an ideal opportunity for many who will not have the privilege of greeting Their Majesties in Montreal on Tuesday next. Arrangements are presently underway to get the officials in charge of the programs during this Royal tour to have Their Majesties appear on the platform of the special train.

The Valleyfield Veterans' Association will stand on guard at Coteau Station during the time the train will remain there. The Huntingdon Veterans' Association, the Boy Scouts from Ormstown, Valleyfield, Huntingdon and a delegation of Scouts from the Northern New York State will also be among the group who will stand guard. The huge gathering that will gather at Coteau Station will be assigned special places so that everything may turn out as fittingly as the occasion calls for.

On Saturday morning, May 20th, a delegation of more than 50 Boy Scouts from Northern New York State as well as approximately 100 more from Huntingdon and Valleyfield and possibly Ormstown will meet at the International Border at Trout River Lines at 9.45 p.m. On this occasion the Scouts will plant memorial trees in remembrance of the Royal visit to Canada and the United States.

The official ceremony at Trout River will start at exactly 10 a.m. D.S.T. (Daylight Saving Time prevails at all these functions) and will last for approximately thirty minutes. After this ceremony the American Scouts will continue their journey to Valleyfield where they will take part in the evening ceremony at Coteau Station. The Boy Scouts from Huntingdon and Ormstown will leave for Coteau Station in the latter part of the afternoon.

The Royal train will arrive at Coteau Station at 8.45 p.m., D.S.T. The Canadian National Railways will install a system of floodlights so that all may be able to see to better advantage all the events which will be featured there.

Further details in connection with the special ceremony at Coteau Station will be announced in next Wednesday's issue of the Gleaner.

Adult Education Likely to Start at Ormstown in Fall

Prof. Hughes Proclaimed Adult Education Classes Would be Quite Common in Twenty Years Time—Parents Delighted With Progressive Educational Classes in Ormstown

An audience of more than two hundred attended the Open Night at Ormstown High School on Friday. The program included an address by Professor John Hughes, of McGill University, a discussion of Adult Education, an inter-class debate and a group of songs by the pupils of the High School classes.

Professor Hughes drew from his wide experience in England and South Africa during the course of his address, giving a brief outline of the sort of work attempted in adult classes and the manner in which it is carried on. He spoke of the growing feeling that education is a far longer process than was formerly believed; and pointed out that twenty years hence adult classes will probably be recognized as no more unusual than high school is now. Turning to developments in Canada, he instanced the co-operative movement begun by St. Francois-Xavier University in Cape Breton and the more recent experiments of McGill University at Lennoxville, Quebec. "Should measures be taken to organize such a program in Ormstown," he said, "you may count on the very close co-operation and support of McGill."

A period of discussion followed, during which Dr. Quintin and the Rev. Mr. White voiced their appreciation of the Professor Hughes' address and expressed their interest in the poposals he had made. One member of the audience asked.—"When can we start?" and the speaker answered that there was no reason why classes could not be organized next autumn. Dr. Stalker moved a vote of thanks.

During intermission, the audience viewed various class-room displays. The work of the Sewing and Woodworking classes was particularly interesting, and, in the junior rooms, health posters and Nature study albums were on exhibition.

When the meeting resumed, Lyman Roberts, president of the Student's Council was in the chair and he introduced the subject of debate, "Resolved that Canada should support Great Britain in all European Wars." Grade Nine supported the motion and was represented by Barbara Orr and Audrey McDougall. The negative was upheld by Mary Winter and Eleanor Moe, representing Grade Ten. Mrs. Moffat, Mrs. Quintin and Mrs. Munroe, acting as judges, rendered their decision in favour of the negative and the donor of the Debating cup, Miss Annie Hamilton, presented it to the winners.

While the judges were considering their decision, the Chairman of the School Board, Mr. R. E. Walsh, reviewed briefly some of the problems confronting the Board. He mentioned several progressive steps taken during the past few years and outlined the plans for providing accommodation for Domestic Science. The principal, who acted as chairman, then paid tribute to the work of Mrs. Lindsay and Mr. Baglow, under whose supervision the Sewing and Woodworking courses have developed this year. He also commended the work of Miss Campbell, who leaves at the close of this session to accept a position in Noranda.

In closing, he drew the attention of the parents to the new Course of Study to be adopted next year, inviting any who found it difficult to choose between the optional courses to confer with himself or the educational committee of the Board.

The last item on the program was a group of two songs, the "Londonderry Air" and "Come to the Fair," sung by the pupils of the High School.

Mother's Day

SUNDAY next is the day set aside when the whole nation is called upon to remember and honour Mother. To many, such a day is not essential to express the true relationship between mother and child; their idea is, that every day should be mother's day. How true that is, but what a glorious sentiment to set aside one day when the paramount thought in our minds is for the one who has meant everything in our lives.

This yearly observance should be to many a reminder to do the things that they have always intended to do, but either have forgotten, or have neglected to do. Their affection is none the less great, but they need to be jerked back to a realization of what home and mother have meant to them.

If we are fortunate in still having our mothers with us, let us remember her by the wearing of a flower, the sending of a card or an especially tender embrace; these and kindred expressions of child-love will be appreciated on this day of honour. Do not wait until the day comes when she cannot answer your notes or respond to your words and acts of kindness. Her pleasure will be your pleasure, and while your mother wouldn't protest, if you let the day slip by unnoticed, she will be happier in the realization that what she has done and is ever willing to do has been appreciated by the one who means so much to her.

MY MOTHER

Who always comforts, loves and cheers?
My Mother;
Who makes me happy through the years?
My Mother;
Whom do I hold of greatest worth,
The dearest friend I've had since Birth,
The finest person on the Earth?
My Mother.

—E. M. Brainerd

The following incident regarding "Mother Troubles" might well be noted:

A group of women were talking of what they called "mother-troubles"—really the difficulty of keeping happy their mothers whose days of greatest activity had passed.

"Well," said one of them, "perhaps some of you were shocked when you called at my house to bring me here and saw my mother engaged in really menial work, yet I'll venture to say that mine is the happiest mother of this group."

A year or two ago I heard a woman scientist of international reputation speak of the importance of relieving people of the tasks they did not like and allowing them activity along lines they enjoy.

"My mother really loves to wash clothes" she said, "and she does our washing and is relieved of other work she does not like so well."

I have seen daughters who were so determined to make their mothers happy in their way that they quite overlooked the mother's own perferences in the matter. Blindly, the daughter deprived her mother of everything that might make her feel of use in the world. I have seen the mother of such a daughter set with clouded brow and with folded hands that ached to be employed in some simple household task.

"No, Mother, it is your turn to rest. Others will do the work now. You worked hard enough for all of us once upon a time," is a poor argument to offer one whose whole habit of life has been summed up in the one word, "service," and to whom to be deprived of the opportunity to serve is to be bereft of life itself, in its real sense.

The unspoken thought is, "I might as well be dead."

The really thoughtful daughter can usually plan that her mother shall have certain not too onerous duties and responsibilities. And even if some of the beloved tasks are menial ones, the mother's sense of satisfaction in work well done is of more importance than the daughter's pride.

Some authorities have declared, very reasonably, that too much work is better for us than too little, so if the mother sometimes does a little more than she should, but the feeling that her work is necessary and worth while makes her happy, let us be comforted with the thoughts of how much better that is than that she should feel herself to be idle and "fit for nothing." A great deal of love and consideration will very well take the place of an irritating, and perhaps irritated, insistence upon idleness and its accompanying ennui.

Curb the Fly Pest For 1939

THE common house fly is responsible for the spreading of disease as much as anything else, yet how careless we are in curbing the tremendous multiplicity of flies. Today is set by Huntingdon as Clean-up Day and if everyone makes a thorough clean-up about the premises the cause for the multiplicity of flies will be materially removed.

Not many days ago it was noted that the tenants occupying flats along Chateauguay Street were throwing empty cans out of their windows. These cans were not thrown into containers on the ground but some went into the river, many on the ice, and a countless number appeared on the ground. At the present time these cans are still to be found strewn about and that means a feast for the flies that will consequently multiply rapidly.

It is not the intention of the Gleaner to act as a snooper or Board of Health official, but too many of us doing business in Huntingdon last summer suffered from an unusual number of flies. The cause of their great number was undoubtedly due to the carelessness of some house-keepers. This year this carelessness must be curbed. Otherwise, the Board of Health officials will be called to action.

Huntingdon Clean-up Movement

THE Town of Huntingdon has announced that beginning today it will provide conveyances for the taking away of refuse that has accumulated about the homes. This clean-up movement in past years has been a wonderful boon to the citizens and they have quite generously contributed towards the clean-up movement. Through their generously participating in this clean-up campaign they have helped themselves as much as the general appearance and health of Huntingdon. May the movement this spring again be supported and may the Town take on an improved appearance through the application of more paint.

Huntingdon Town inaugurated a refuse disposal system last summer and it is to be continued this summer. On the second Wednesday of each month the town's carter will make the rounds of the streets and will carry off what refuse you may have accumulated in the way of cans, etc. This service costs the citizens nothing; all the Town asks is that all co-operate and accept the service offered so that Huntingdon may be able to retain its good name as a clean and tidy town where the health of the general public is ever considered and is above the average.

Montreal Gets Ready

SOME 23 miles of street in Montreal will be repaired for the occasion of the visit to Montreal on May 16 of Their Majesties. These streets will be the route to be followed by the King and Queen.

Residents of Montreal who have a pride in their city will be pleased to know that this will be done in order that a favourable impression of the city might be carried away not only by Their Majesties but by the thousands of visitors who will be present in the City on this occasion.

There are some who might say that it is fortunate the City is not being visited by Their Majesties and the consequent thousands of visitors during the winter time. For at this time they might perchance see some of the Montreal streets with ice ruts about a foot deep and snow piled high on the sides of the streets, which fact has been more or less of a by-word with many people.

There is every reason to believe, however, that Montreal will leave no stones unturned to dress up the city and make it attractive in every way for the many visitors who will be present. Such an occasion presents an admirable opportunity for Montreal to gain much publicity, favourable or otherwise, and it is entirely likely that the City of Montreal will grasp the opportunity so that thousands of visitors will leave the City with a favourable impression.

The Spirit of Canada

CLOSE to being one of the finest examples of the printer's art produced in Canada for many a long year, "The Spirit of Canada," published by the Canadian Pacific Railway as "A Souvenir of Welcome to H.M. King George VI and H.M. Queen Elizabeth," is a volume of 60 pages, written by 12 of the Dominion's outstanding authors and poets and illustrated with sketches of the Federal and Provincial Parliament Buildings, by Charles W. Simpson, R.C.A. There is a foreword by Sir Edward Beatty, G.B.E.

To interpret the spirit of Canada the editors called upon Duncan Campbell Scott, C.M.G., Clara Dennis, L. M. Montgomery,O.B.E., Sir Charles G. D. Robert, Robert Choquette, Katherine Hale, W. T. Allison, Mary Weekes, Robert J. C. Stead, Nellie L. McClung, Mrs. George Black, M.P. and Philip H. Godsell to write, upon Ottawa, the nine Provinces, Yukon and the North West Territories.

Ranking as one of the most important collections of essays on Canada the contributions of this impressive list of writers form a composite description of the Dominion historical, geographical and industrial, that fully justifies the title "The Spirit of Canada".

Charles W. Simpson's colourful illustrations are in the vein for which this well-known Canadian artist is famous. A full-page natural colour photograph of Their Majesties in their Coronation Robes faces a welcome to the King and Queen which synopsizes the history of royal visits to Canada from the arrival of H. R. H. The Duke of Kent, great-great-grandfather of His Majesty, to the landing from the Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of Australia" at Quebec, May 15, 1939.

With the coming of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to Canada and arriving at Quebec on Monday a grand ovation will be accorded them. "The Spirit of Canada", which is the title of the souvenir booklet issued by the Canadian Pacific Railway is an expression in the form of the printed word. The greetings the King and Queen will receive as they visit 52 cities in Canada will not only be a personal expression of loyalty but will cause a "spirit of loyalty" being developed within the minds of many people living in Canada to-day who have not, or even now do not exemplify such a feeling towards the Empire. Hitler and Mussolini staged grand demonstrations in Germany and Italy which in due turn inculcated in the minds of their people, to place all confidence in them. The ovations accorded these dictators have inspired many people outside of Germany and Italy to believe in their tactics, and that their leadership is preferable to that of a democracy. The coming of the King and Queen to Canada provides the type of democracy advertising that is necessary in order that loyalty to the Empire be not impaired. The tremendous expense that is involved in the making of such a trip is truly great, but if the people of the Empire are kept loyal, how difficult it will be for the dictators to stir up strife within our midst, which would be to their benefit. The visit of the King and Queen to Canada is worth far more than the price it will demand in the way of dollars and time.

With the King and Queen visiting the United States Capitol, Washington, for four days, will inspire within the minds of the great populace of that country to look up to the British Empire, and forever and a day be its true friend and supporter in all things that are for the betterment of fair trade and mankind.

With King George VI and Queen Elizabeth visiting Canada and the United States it is truly a great piece of advertising for the British Empire that will yield handsome returns in the form of loyalty and support that cannot be measured in dollars and cents, but will go a long way towards guaranteeing security and a contented frame of mind amongst the peoples of this North American continent.

"God Save our King and Queen".

DOG STAYS HOME

Mayor Charles E. McGrath of Newcastle ordered Dog-Catcher Jack Young to leave his dog at home when he's out dog-catching. Complainants said Young's dog, a sleek-looking police hound, lured the unwary pups and the dog-catcher then used his lasso.

OLD PROMISE KEPT

Back in 1586, an obelisk, being erected in St. Peter's square at Rome, attracted thousands of onlookers. At that time, the pope at Rome held powers of state as well as of the church and one of his orders was that crowds in St. Peter's square must always remain silent. Anyone breaking this rule was to suffer death. Watching the raising of the obelisk, one Giovanni Besca suddenly noticed the ropes passing over a timber were smoking from the heat caused by friction. If the ropes should ignite the obelisk would crash into the crowd, killing or wounding hundreds. Seeing this danger, Besca called out for water to put on the ropes, averting the disaster. Instead of being sentenced to death, Bresca was called before Pope Sixtus who promised any wish would be granted. He asked only that he and his family be permitted to sell palm branches in St. Peter's square on Palm Sundays. It was granted and for 453 years members of the Bresca family have sold palms in the historic square on Palm Sunday. They were there on Palm Sunday four weeks ago as usual.

NEW HITLER ROLE

Because her husband, born in Alsace under German rule, was too pro-Nazi, a Frenchwoman has been granted a divorce with custody of the three children of the marriage. The wife said that in the last two years the husband had carried his prejudices to the point of papering the walls of their home with Swastika designs and pictures of Hitler were hung in every room, while the wireless was always tuned to Nazi propaganda. He insisted on the children giving the Nazi salute and wearing the swastika as an armlet everywhere they went, despite the hostile demonstrations of neighbors and school mates. The wife maintained that this constituted cruelty sufficient to justify divorce and after long legal arguments the divorce court accepted her contention and granted a decree with custody of the children. This was done after the judge had made the usual move, required by French law to try to reconcile the couple during a talk to them in his private room, but the husband made an emphatic declaration that he would not under any circumstances alter his ways or abandon his attempts to bring the children up as adherents of the Hitler regime. The husband was refused leave to appeal against the decision and was condemned to pay all costs, besides making an allowance to the wife and children.

BE A LADY!

A 28-year-old waitress was put under $300 bond in Philadelphia to "remember you are a lady," even at a wrestling show. The case grew out of charges filed by a referee. He accused the young woman of poking a lighted cigarette in his eye after a ringside row in which spectators, wrestlers and referee all joined. A magistrate directed the defendant to remember "you are a lady and must maintain your dignity, no matter whether you are attending wrestling, boxing or any kind of show."

WANTS SECRET TOLD

If Dr. Edith Summerskill, M.P., has her way, men would be compelled to tell their wives how much money they earn. She is to ask the British prime minister if he will consider legislation for that purpose., especially in cases of hardship "where a wife believes she is not getting an equitable share of the family income for the necessities of life." Another part of the question asks the prime minister if he is aware that reports of investigators "revealed the ignorance which exists among the women of the country as to the wages earned by their husbands."

ZETETICIANS HAPPY

Zeteticians will be interested in the news that Smith's Farm, adjoining Cape Point and the Cape of Good Hope, is being acquired by Cape Town as a national playground. For this farm has for many years figured in the arguments of the Zeteticians, who contend that the earth is flat in accordance with Bible authority. Smith's Farm has, on its eastern side, False bay, and farther on are the Hottentot Holland mountains, ending in Cape Hangklip. Beyond this a further range of hills extends to Danger Point, where the troopship Birkenhead went down in 1852. The "flat-earthers" contend that as Smith's Farm is 50 miles from Danger Point in a straight line, and as the headland is visible sometimes, that is proof that the earth is flat. Otherwise, they say, the curvature of the earth would hide the headland completely.

QUEBEC TAXES RISE

(The Financial Post)

In a survey of the Province of Quebec's finances early this year, The Financial Post suggested that the rising trend of expenditure was not a good omen for the taxpayer.

That view has now been substantiated.

Quebec has not only followed Ontario's example and increased its gasoline tax, but it has also hoisted corporation taxes.

The need of additional revenues for the Quebec Government cannot be denied. Continuance of sharp increases in debt, and large deficits after providing for relief and colonization expenditures, would have adversely affected the credit of the province.

The increase in corporation and gasoline taxes will not fill the present gap between revenues and expenditures. This makes it all the more important that the Quebec Government should take immediate steps to put economies into effect.

Continuance of the upward trend in expenditures would be dangerous. Ordinary expenditures alone were $22 millions higher in 1937-38 than in 1934-35. Extraordinary and capital expenditures were larger also. Net funded and temporary debt at Jan. 31 last was $134 millions higher than at June 30, 1935.

Some of this increase has admittedly been necessary. For years Quebec lagged behind some of the other provinces, especially Ontario. Such services as old age pensions and mothers' allowances are only recent developments in Quebec. Highway development was slow and large expenditures were necessary if Quebec was to compete with Ontario for tourist business.

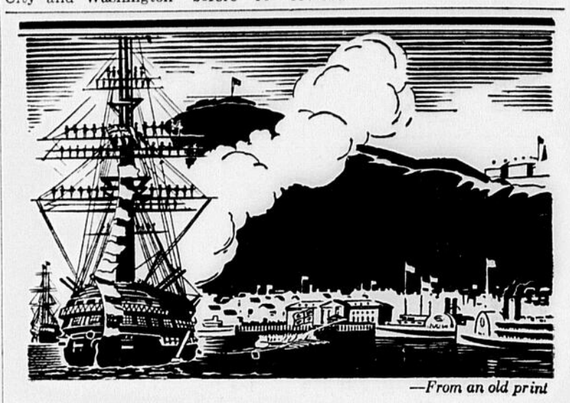
But Quebec has been going forward with its social service and highway programme too rapidly, to judge from the position of the province. Unbalanced budgets and large increases in debt are disturbing to investors.

The Gore

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hodges of North Hollywood, Cal., were guests last week at the home of Mrs. Hodges' cousin, H. W. Henderson, Gore. They also called on relatives and friends in Howick, Rockburn, Franklin, Huntingdon and Chateauguay, N.Y. Mrs. Hodges is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Henderson. It is 30 years since Mrs. Hodges visited this community and of course was struck by the changes that have taken place. This was Mr. Hodges first visit to these parts. He was born in Fort Worth, Texas, but has lived in California for over 30 years. They and a friend, Miss Gamble, motored to Detroit from North Hollywood, where Mr. and Mrs. Hodges purchased a new Dodge and came to Huntingdon in their car. The party left Hollywood on Thursday eve, April 20. After stopping at El Paso, Fort Worth, Edmond, Oklahoma City and Indianapolis, they arrived in Detroit, Thurs, April 27. Here they visited relatives a couple of days then came on to Huntingdon. They had travelled some 3609 miles. Mr. and Mrs. Hodges left Friday morning to visit a cousin, Miss G. Herdman at Shawinigan Falls. They are starting for Lebanon, N.H. on Monday and will also visit New York City and Washington before returning home. Mr. and Mrs. Hodges made many friends during their short stay here, who wish them a safe and pleasant journey home.

WAY BUT NO WILL

For years J. Joseph George of Philadelphia made a specialty of drawing up wills and deeds for others. When he died, he left a $50,000 estate— but no will, it was discovered.



—From an old print

The King's Grandfather Acclaimed at Quebec

H.R.H. Albert Edward, gallant young heir to the British Throne and the first Prince of Wales to visit Canada, arrived at the city of Quebec on August 18th, 1860.

Guns roared royal salutes from citadel and battle ships. Vast throngs of citizens and visitors from all parts of "British North America" and the United States cheered themselves hoarse. Days of receptions and sight seeing were followed by a grand ball given by the city which continued "until past 4 a.m.," at which the Prince danced with 22 partners. Wrote a chronicler of the time, "white kid gloves are fearfully high in price on account of the ball".

Thirteen years before this historic visit the Canada Life—the first Canadian life insurance company—issued its initial policy. Over a period of 92 years it has paid to or accumulated for its policyholders and beneficiaries more than $650,000,000—over $50,000,000 more than it has received in premiums.

CONSTIPATION SAPS YOUR AMBITION

● You can't go out and win if constipation pulls your punches. It's what you don't eat that hurts you. Ordinary diets often fail to supply "bulk" of the kind your bowels need for regular movements. Adopt an easy-to-follow habit that fosters regular habits: Eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN every day; drink plenty of water. ALL-BRAN helps in the formation of the soft "bulky" mass required for good elimination. And ALL-BRAN is also a rich source of Nature's intestinal tonic, Vitamin B_1. When your system is running on schedule you are ready to go places.

At the end of the regular schedule the teams in second and third place will meet in the semi-finals and the winner of this event will meet the team which will finish the regular schedule at the head of the league. The semi-final series will consist of a best two out of three while the final will be a best three out of five series. The winner will be awarded the league trophy. A trophy donated by Hector Provost of Huntingdon and Raymond Graham of Ormstown will be awarded the runners-up. This trophy is to be played for yearly.

Each team was informed at this meeting that they must furnish a $5 guarantee deposit to the league secretary and that this deposit should be forwarded to F. S. Rugar's office not later than June 15th.

The fact that many players in Valleyfield had the opportunity to join with either the Valleyfield Pepsi-Cola or the Falcons prompted the league officials to make a rule which would establish harmony among these two teams. Although this does not concern to any great extent, the other teams in this league, it was thought best that they should adopt the same system. In the future the league will issue contracts which will have to be signed by each player wishing to play for its home team. Another decision which was also made at this meeting, which should be of interest to both Valleyfield teams especially, was the announcement that any player who signed for two teams would be automatically suspended for one year.

These contracts were forwarded the managers of each team over the week-end and 13 of these will have to be returned to the league secretary in Ormstown before the league opener in two weeks. Five extra contracts will be allowed each team and these are to be filled and signed by July 1st. This was done in order to accommodate students who line-up with these teams and do not return home until the latter part of June.

The regular monthly meeting of the Howick W.I. was held in the Fertile Creek Community Hall on Tuesday, May 2nd. After the usual opening exercises the ladies had the pleasure of listening to a splendid talk on nutrition by Miss Champoux, of the Department of Health, Quebec. Miss Margaret Morison gave a reading which was much enjoyed. Mrs. Alfred Greig conducted a true or false quiz on weather conditions which proved quite instructive.

Delicious refreshments were served at the close of the meeting by the Fertile Creek members. The next meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. David Tait on Tuesday, May 30th at 2 p.m.

Nutrition Talk Heard at W.I. Meetings

Maternity Case Room in Barrie Memorial Hospital To be Aided by Women's Institute

The Huntingdon W. I. met at the home of Mrs. Cora Kelly on Wednesday, Mrs. William Graham presiding. Miss Jeannine Champoux, B.H.S., of the Provincial Department of Health, dealt with the subject of Nutrition in a most interesting and effective manner. Her address appears in the Howick W. I. report. She stated that Milk stands first in necessity for adequate nutrition in child and adult. It is a source of calcium needed for bones and teeth and to build and repair tissue with its proteins and vitamins a, b and d. Meat once a day and salt sea fish for iodine or iodized salt. Eggs give protein and iron. Cod liver oil to prevent rickets in children and weakening of bones in aged should be taken from early fall to spring. Three servings of vegetables, one of them raw—cabbage, lettuce, carrots, etc., and potatoes. Cabbage is better eaten raw and if cooked should be put in a large amount of boiling water, uncovered, and boiled for 8 or 10 minutes if shredded and for 12 to 15 minutes if quartered. A crust of bread floating on top of pot will absorb odor... Save vegetable water for soups, sauces or jellies... It is injurious to the nutritive value of vegetables to pare them and leave standing in water for several hours before cooking. Much better to steam or bake vegetables with skins on.

Eat tomatoes raw when possible. Canned tomatoes should be eaten as soon after opening as possible and lose much of their value if heated. Never add soda to tomatoes; use sugar and serve immediately after combining with milk.

If underweight increase consumption of fats, the reverse for overweight. A daily diet is recommended as follows:

Daily Diet

Whole grain Cereal... 2 large glasses milk in drink or foods... 1 egg... 3 vegetables (1 raw), potatos. Serving meat or fish... butter 2 slices whole wheat bread... sugar or sweets... Fruit... apples, oranges, grapefruit, lemons, usually available... a minimum of six glasses of water daily. Along with exercise, fresh air, sufficient rest and sleep... for good health.

Miss Champoux stated that she had personally supplied a balanced daily diet at approximately 25 cents per person.

Questioned as to an opinion on the sulphur and molasses spring tonic substitute for a sufficient diet, the speaker said she had no personal experience. Several members discussed this theory.

Miss Champoux was thanked for her excellent address by Mrs. Carr.

Barrie Memorial Hospital

On motion of Mrs. J. S. Ross seconded by Mrs. T. S. Gardiner a subscription fund was opened for the Huntingdon W.I. Members and friends to be donated to the Barrie Memorial Hospital, for the purpose of equipping the Maternity Case Room. Mrs. Lawrence Brown was named Treasurer of the fund and nine dollars was subscribed immediately.

On motion it was decided to take out a membership in the Red Cross Society.

Mrs. Fred Bruce, Convener of Education, reported on the Spelling Bee. Two solos by Mrs. L. Cappiello were much appreciated, also two readings by Mrs. Anderson.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hotess and a pleasant social hour enjoyed.

Ayrshire Cattle for New Zealand

As a result of negotiations which were carried on by Mr. W. F. Bull, Canadian Government Trade Commissioner in New Zealand, acting on behalf of a group of Canadian Ayrshire cattle breeders, a select shipment of Ayrshire cattle is being made from Canada to New Zealand, via SS City of Glasgow, sailing from Montreal, Quebec, today. These cattle are being consigned to the New Zealand Arshire Breeders' Association.

Four of these animals are bulls which have been consigned by four different leading breeders of Ayrshire cattle in Canada, as follows:

Macdonald Ambassador, consigned by Macdonald College, Ste. Anne de Belevue, Que. This is a June 1938 son of Macdonald Dorothy, World's champion Ayrshire butterfat producer with a total production of 7,003 lbs. butterfat from 165,633 lbs. milk in 10 lactations to her credit. In addition to his dam several other noted ancestors figure in the pedigree of this animal including his paternal grand-sire, Howie's Top Grade, a Preferential Sire and a Bull with a noted show-ring career and with a long list of show winning and producing progeny to his credit.

Glen Elm Buster Boy, consigned by W. C. Wylie, Howick, Que. In addition to being by an outstanding breeding sire this animal has on his sire's side two famous grand-parents Penhurst Mischief Star, one of Canada's nine Preferential Ayrshire sires and an outstanding sire and winner of his day, and Nellie Osborne of Elm Shade 16th, which has produced a total of 112,981 lbs. milk 4,803 lbs. fat in 6 lactations and which on two different occasions made World's Ayrshire records, her last World's record being 27,198 lbs. milk, 1,257 lbs. fat in 365 days.

Annandale Postal Order, consigned by F. C. Biggs & Sons, Dundas, Ont. This is a November 1937 son of Holehouse True Form, Imp., a bull which was specially selected in Scotland to head the herd of Hon. H. A. Bruce & Son, Todmorden, Ont. and which has to his credit first prize at Ayr Show in Scotland and at the Royal Winter Fair in Canada; also the grand championship of the Canadian National Exhibition on two different occasions. He was also the sire of the grand champion males at the 1938 Royal Winter Fair and of the first prize winner at the 1937 National Dairy Show and the Royal Winter Fair in 1937 and 1938. The dam of Annandale Postal Order is a grand-daughter of Dunlop Reflection, noted Royal Winter Fair grand champion.

Burnside Perfect Print, consigned by R. R. Ness & Sons, Howick, Que. This is a May, 1938 son of Burnside Lucky Boy, a famous championship winner at leading Canadian and United States shows, and, in turn, a son of Howie's Top Grade, Preferential sire and noted championship winner, and Burnside Blossom championships in Canada and Andrietta, winner of 42 grand U.S.A. and producer of 100,307 lbs. milk, 4,365 lbs. fat, in 9 lactations. The dam of Burnside Perfect Print has three excellent records to her credit and is a grand-daughter of greatest show-ring winners and Millantae Mayflower one of the outstanding producers of the breed in Scotland.

The two heifers are being consigned by E. C. Budge, Ste. Genevieve, Que.—Thorncroft Bright Carol 3rd. and Thorncroft Bright Heather 5th. These are two year old daughters of Thorncroft Star Bright an outstanding breeding son of Penshurst Mischief Star, already mentioned, who, in turn, is a son of Penshurst Man O'War, the most famous sire of the Ayrshire breed, of all time, in the United States.

Both heifers are from good record daughters of Kate's Brae Champion, one of Canada's nine Preferential sires with a very long his credit and a distinguished anlist of high producing daughters to cestry at back of him.

All six of these animals were carefully selected by R. O. Biggs of F. C. Biggs & Sons, Dundas, Ont., and Douglas A. Ness of R. R. Ness & Sons, Howick, Que., two of Canada's outstanding judges and breeders, and in addition to those animals being outstanding individuals they probably constitute the best record backed lot of Ayrshire cattle that have ever been exported from or sold in Canada or elsewhere.

NAVY TARZANS

Two officers from the warships Barham and Maidstone caused a sensation in Gibraltar by climbing about 850 feet up the northeastern portion of the rock, which is considered to be the most dangerous part. The officers started at 1.45 p.m. in the vicinity of Catalan Bay village. Owing to very poor visibility they decided to descend, reaching the village at 7 p.m., where crowds were waiting. The men stated, on reaching the ground level, that they had intended to reach the military post, estimated to be 1,000 feet above sea level—a feat which has never before been accomplished.

PLANT PROTECTION PREVENTS INVASION DESTRUCTIVE INSECTS

There are hundreds of species of destructive insects constantly and persistently seeking to enter Canada. Their entry is facilitated to a certain extent by the swiftness of modern travel. Unless intercepted these insects would enter the Dominion ready for destructive action. It is generally regarded that plants, shrubs, bulbs and nursery stock of one kind or another are the principal sources by which dangerous insects gain entrance to the country states L. S. McLaine, Chief, Plant Protection Division, Production Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture. Because of the constant danger it has been necessary to establish a system of plant inspection with qualified inspectors at Canadian seaports and international boundary points.

In 1938, the Plant Protection Division checked four and a quarter million containers from 42 countries in which there were more than 43 million plants, shrubs, trees and bulbs. It was necessary to make 1,492 interceptions during the year and to attend at the seaports 4,342 ships on which they found 776 passengers with plants that originated in other countries. These plants were subject to inspection.

While Canada is a larger importer of plants and plant products of one kind or another, it is also a substantial exporter. Last year the Division issued 7,053 certificates of inspection for 53 countries and a total of 26,595 import and export inspections were made. No less than 298 countries of the world have a co-operative arrangement whereby both imports and exports of plants are inspected and certified.

In the absence of protective measures, insects would be a serious menace to all living plant and animal life by the sheer force of their numbers, says Mr. McLaine. In North America, for example, there are approximately 1,300 species of mammals in contrast to hundreds of thousands of species of insects of which 300,000 are more or less intimately known and described. It is estimated that injurious insects do fully one hundred million dollars worth of damage annually in Canada, or about ten per cent of the value of all crops, and in the United States the annual loss is placed at two billion dollars.

While there are many native insects that are injurious, it is estimated that 70 per cent of the most destructive species are those which have come from other countries.

The Canadian climate is one of the greatest barriers to a general establishment in the Dominion of destructive insects, as comparatively few of the species that thrive in other countries would survive the rigorous winter of Canada. Those who may complain of the Canadian winter and of the mosquitoes and black flies in summer might remember that the Dominion because of its climate is spared yellow fever, malaria, screw worms, sleeping sickness and other serious diseases which are prevalent in countries with a warmer climate and in which insects are the principal carriers of infection.

ada, as in other countries, is one that must be constant if trade and commerce are to be maintained.

TOUGH PROBLEM

As every federal income tax payer in the U.S.A. knows, the head of a family is permitted to deduce $400 for each minor child from his taxable income. Income tax officials in San Francisco refuse to permit a deduction of this amount for their 1936 tax return by Lloyd E. Wilson for a child that was not born until August 11 of that year. This controversy finally has been put up to the board of tax appeals in Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson's contention is that expense for a child begins long before the day it is born.

W.I. REPRESENTATIVE TO LONDON

Other members from Quebec who have signified their intention of attending this conference are Miss Margaret Kirby and Miss Elizabeth Pope of Cookshire, Que.; Mrs. C. Lobb, Ayer's Cliff, Que., and Mrs. J. Brian Ashworth, Hull, Que.

Mrs. Herbert McGregor of Penticton, B.C., President of the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada is also expected to sail on the same boat.

WILL MORRIS AND BOBBY

High ranking lunatics is an apt description of Will Morris & Bobby, the world's goofiest comics, who will appear at the ORMSTOWN EXHIBITION JUNE 6-7-8-9th, with their rib-tickling routine of daily doings.

Using a bicycle as the central theme in presenting their act, Will Morris and Bobby lose no time in trying to render each other unconscious. In addition they find it difficult to remain in an upright position for long, due to contributing causes advanced by an entirely unstable bicycle that has a tendency to disintegrate before your very eyes.

So expert in the art of pantomime as to rival such a great artist as Charlie Chaplin, they can, merely through movements of the body, convey the most comical situations without uttering a word.

Their costumes and make-up are in keeping with the roles they play. Of their own design, their general appearance defies description, other than to say it is extremely funny.

It is unadvisable, when watching these two masters of knockabout comedy, to turn your head for a moment, because of the rapidity with which they execute their multiple maneuvers. One laughable situation after another arises so rapidly that you hardly have time to digest and enjoy the previous one.

Comedy is always one of the most acceptable phases of entertainment, and Will Morris & Bobby, who were booked through George A. Hamid, are the leading exponents in their line, they are sure to be one of the standout attractions on the bill at the ORMSTOWN EXHIBITION.

CANADIAN TURKEYS POPULAR

Canadian turkeys continue to be popular in Great Britain, the Canadian exports to the British market from January 1 to February 23, 1939, totalling 5,139 boxes, compared with 300 boxes during the corresponding period of 1938, and with the hitherto highest record for the period of 1,784 boxes in 1937. Further, the position in which Canadian turkeys have become established in the British market is shown by the fact that Canadian turkeys have been selling at five cents more per pound than other birds.

There is another bill for the attention of parliament which affects agriculture but also other sections of Canadian life. This is the measure to incorporate a central mortgage bank. This new bank which will have a capital of ten million dollars and which will have the right to issue bonds will seek to put the whole mortgage structure of the country on a more uniform and flexible basis. This refers to both country and city mortgages. In the budget speech the object of the bank as explained was "to deal with the immediate problem of excessive and harassing indebtedness by providing for the adjustment of existing mortgages on an equitable basis which will inspire new hope in the debtor". The idea is, with the cooperation of lending companies, to bring top heavy mortgages down to reasonable figures and get interest into closer relationship with the present money market.

Stronger Defences Urged

In the past few days there has a vigorous demand from members of the senate for a larger measure of defence for this country. It was held that the bill to limit profits on munition contracts to five per cent, while embodying a most important principle to which all ascribed, that is the removal of "profiteering" from munitions contracts, might restrict and hamper the essential need of the time, the expansion of our armaments in time of genuine danger. The bill to create a defence purchasing board was passed by the senate.

The Royal Visit Preparations

Parliament and the whole city of Ottawa are naturally eagerly awaiting the first Royal visit to Canada. Preparations in the city are progressing rapidly, and the interdepartmental committee has been dotting the final i's and crossing the final t's in the arrangements for the Royal tour through Canada. Government House, the residence of the Governor General, which will be the home of the Royal couple for the four days they are in the capital, has been redecorated. The royal mint has been turning out the new coins commemorating the historic event. There are the new medallions and new stamps. Parliament hill has poles erected for the Royal standard which will float for the first time in the capital. The face of parliament buildings will carry the Royal coat of arms and the Union Jack across the walls, and already in various parts of the city buildings have begun to show outward marks of the welcome to the country's monarch. Confederation square in process of construction is rapidly taking shape. At the centre of the square is the war memorial. A wide series of steps leads to the foot of the memorial and from it stretches a boulevard with two lanes for traffic, and lawns along the route now being sodded. The federal driveway, confederation square, the parks and decorated buildings will present a pleasant and beautiful background for the capital's welcome to the King and Queen.

SAFEGUARD PURITY OF MAPLE PRODUCTS

The Maple Sugar Industry Act and Regulations 1930 are having the desired effect in placing the industry on a sound footing, stated Clarence T. Skinner, of the Fruit and Vegetable Division, Marketing Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, in a recent address. The restrictive measures of the Act prohibit adulteration of maple products. They forbid the use of the word "maple", or any derivative thereof, in the description of a syrup or sugar which is not a pure maple product. They require the indication on menus or bills of fare in public eating houses, restaurants, and hotels that an artificial maple flavour has been used to flavour foods when such is the case.

The constructive measures of the Act include the establishment of standards for maple products which are described as products prepared directly or indirectly from the sap of the maple; the establishment of sanitary conditions under which maple products may be prepared; provision for the registration and licensing of sugar bushes, and manufacturing or packing plants; and the provision of voluntary grades for maple syrup and maple sugar. Maple syrup must weigh not less than 13 pounds 2 ounces per gallon and contain not more than 35 per cent water. Maple sugar must contain not more than 10 per cent water; maple butter, maple cream and maple wax, not more than 15 per cent water.

The Maple Sugar Industry Act and Regulations are intended to be beneficial to the industry by creating in the minds of the consuming public that pure maple products are assured to every purchaser, and consequently the administration of the Act is of personal importance to the consumer. The administration of this legislation is carried out by the Fruit and Vegetable Division, Marketing Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, and the inspectors of that Division are ever on the alert for infractions of the law. Of the thousands of samples of suspicious products which have been submitted for analysis, less than 10 per cent have been found to be adulterated or misrepresented. In this connection samples are taken for analysis only where the inspector has grounds for believing that the product has been handled contrary to the provisions of the Act and Regulations. Seeing that maple sugar and maple syrup are on sale all the year round, the possibility of the consumer being defrauded through the sale of adulterated products is comparatively small.

Maple syrup and maple sugar are delicacies of unsurpassed and distinctive favour, and, in addition to their uses on the table, they make excellent flavouring for ice cream, cakes, cake-icing, and other foods. Maple products are rich in carbohydrates in a quickly assimilative form, possibly cloying to the taste if eaten to excess but truly delightful when used in moderation. The cloying quality of syrup may be removed by the addition of a small quantity of sweet cream. Maple products also contain quantities of beneficial minerals, including calcium, phosphorus, iron and potassium.

Wages in Japan

(Toronto Star)

Modern trade relations make the world a very small place. Conditions of labor and wages in one country are bound to affect employment conditions in countries with which it does business.

Japan is a striking example. Japan exports immense quantities of textiles and other goods with which she competes with the industries of western countries. The 1934 Year Book of Japan shows that the hourly rate of wages for all factory workers ranged from 2 to 3½ cents. For a ten-hour day, which is common there, this makes it from 20 to 35 cents a day. The daily wages for a brickmaker is 32 cents; for shoemakers, paper makers, and flour-millers, 46 and 49 cents; for cement workers, tailors, carpenters and painters, between 53 and 59 cents; for lathemen, founders, blacksmiths, compositors and bricklayers, between 60 and 63 cents. In textiles, a male hosiery knitter is paid 41 cents a day, and a female worker, 20 cents a day. Clerical workers receive $8 to $11 a month. The contrast with wages paid on this continent is striking.

One of the reasons given for these low wages in Japan is that their cost of living is low. But this is not so in relation to the wage-rates. The daily cost of food and fuel for a family of five in Japan is thirty cents. Since the daily wages are from 20 to 63 cents, the cost of living is relatively high, because the workman must spend his entire earnings on food and has nothing or little left for other neccessities. Home economists state that food and fuel should take about 32 per cent of the family's income. In Japan, food takes all or nearly all the earnings.

By scientific measurement, the Japanese worker's standard of living is extremely low. Economists claim that the standard of living is to be measured by the proportion spent on food; as the standard rises, less is spent on food and more on other items. The Japanese worker spends his income mostly on food, hence he is on the lowest economic level. To get by, the workers must practice rigid economies. One is that young married couples continue to live with their parents, although the quarters are extremely limited. Clothing is of the cheapest and skimpiest kind. In the magazine "Japan," H. G. Moulton writes, "In summer very little is worn, and in winter the people are accustomed to bearing cold and exposure."

The Japanese textile industry is run along feudal lines. It employs about 80 per cent female labor. The women and girls are recruited from the farms, and work under contract made between the parents and employers.—Summerside Pioneer, P.E.I.

GODMANCHESTER TO HOLD ELECTIONS

Nominations were held this morning in the Huntingdon County Building for councillors and mayor for the Godmanchester Council.

Former Mayor Alfred Latulipe will be opposed by ex-councillor Ernest Watterson for the mayorality seat; John J. Tannahill was elected by acclamation for seat No. 1. He replaces E. Watterson. Former councillor William Graham will be opposed by Patrick Sherry for Seat No. 3, while William Leblanc was re-elected by acclamation for seat No. 5.

PLENTY SANDWICHES

Statisticians have already been busy making calculations about the New York world fair. They estimate that more than 120,000,000 sandwiches will be eaten at the fair. This means that enough bread and meat will be eaten to cover 7,000 miles, or more than twice the distance across the United States.

NO OBJECT OF PITY

The agitation by spinsters for a pension came under fire when the Association of Women Clerks and Secretaries held their annual conference in London recently. Miss A. C. Beamish, who presided, said that in upholding the dignity of womanhood they could only oppose a proposition which considered a woman who had not succeeded in catching a husband was so much an object of pity that she had to be compensated at the rate of 10s per week. "We consider that it is better to work for improved conditions for all women and pensions at a lower age for all," she added.

Now Fit to Join Again

Twenty years ago, he left the army, constipated and rheumatic. Today, he is fit and nimble — a merry, romping granddad, 61 years young.

"I came out of the army with rheumatism," he writes. "It was especially bad in my feet. I started taking Kruschen Salts, and in a few months I found relief from my rheumatism. I became nimble on my feet. Now, at 61 — weighing 168 — I am cheerful, energetic, and always ready to play with my grandchildren."—F.E.B.

Many people grow old long before their time because they neglect one vital need of health — the need for internal cleanliness. Eventually, they adopt the healthy Kruschen habit. Then, probably for the first time in their lives, they start getting rid every day of waste matter from the system. The result is renewed health and vigour. Ailments due to a clogged system vanish, youth returns, and life becomes really worth living.

DUTCH HONEY PIE

1 cup butter, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup honey, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, 1 cup lukewarm water, 3 cups flour.

Method: Cream the butter and sugar and, if you'd rather, you can use shortening instead of butter, hard. Add the honey, flour to make a cake-like batter.

Stir the soda into the lukewarm water and add, then lastly the sifted flour. Be sure to sift this first before you measure it. Now pour this into 3 pie pans lined with pastry and sprinkle over the top of each pie some of the crumbs.

Crumb Topping

1 cup flour, ½ cup of sugar, 1½ teaspoons salt, ½ cup shortening or butter.

Method: Sift the flour, sugar and salt. Rub the butter or the shortening in to form coarse crumbs. Sprinkle over the top of each pie and bake in a moderate oven for 45 minutes.

Try a baked custard using honey instead of sugar, and if you want an easy ice cream, whip some heavy cream, sweeten it with honey and freeze. Don't use too much honey, for it seems to taste sweeter after it is frozen than it does to start with.

And prunes, apricots, dried peaches or apples sweetened with honey taste a lot different from when they are sweetened with sugar. You can even use part honey in canning fruits during the summer. The fruit won't be quite so clear, but it will have a delicious flavor.

GRAHAM COOKIES OR WAFERS

½ cup butter
1 cup light brown sugar
1 egg
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
2 teaspoons baking powder
Graham flour (about 2 cups)

Method: Cream the butter and the butter and add the well beaten egg and salt. Stir the baking powder into the flour, and add this and the milk. Now add enough more flour to make a cake-lik batter. Pour thinly into shallow, greased pans and bake in a moderate oven until they are deep brown. Remove from the oven and cut into 3-inch squares.

For most people, a mixture of part wholewheat and part white flour is more pleasing than all of the coarse flour. That is what we have in the wholewheat muffins.

WHOLEWHEAT MUFFINS

1 cup white flour
¼ cup brown sugar
¾ teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup wholewheat flour
1 cup milk
1 egg
5 tablespoons melted butter

Method: Mix and sift the white flour, baking powder, sugar and salt. Add the wholewheat flour and mix well. Beat the egg and add this with the milk and melted butter, mixing rapidly just until the dry ingredients are dampened.

Turn into well greased muffin pans, filling them about 2-3 full and bake in a hot oven for 20 minutes, or until the muffins are well raised and nicely browned.

WHOLEWHEAT RAISIN BREAD

1 cup milk
1 cup water or potato water
4 tablespoons sugar or molasses
1 cake yeast
2 tablespoons melted shortening
1 cup white flour
4 cups wholewheat flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup seedless raisins

Method: Scald the milk and the water then cool to lukewarm. Soak the yeast cake in a little of this until it is soft, then add to the remainder of the liquid with the sugar. Add the melted shortening and then the white flour sifted with the salt. Stir in 1 cup of the wholewheat flour and beat the batter smooth. Cover and let rise overnight.

In the morning add the remainder of the wholewheat flour, enough to make a dough which does not stick. Add the raisins, which have been scalded and dried thoroughly, and knead the dough until it is smooth and elastic. Place in a greased bowl and cover. Set in a warm place to rise until it is double in bulk. Turn out and punch down, then form into two loaves. Place these in well greased loaf pans and cover again until light. The dough this time should rise until it is nearly, but not quite, double. Bake in a moderate oven a little slower than you use for white bread, until the loaves are nicely browned about 1 hour.

If you brush over the tops of the loaves with a little melted shortening as soon as they come from the oven, the crust will stay soft, not crisp.

What's in the Wind

by PAULA DICKS

If your teeth bother you perhaps you have a mild form of scurvy. Anemia and fragility of bones in aged persons would disappear if diet habits were corrected. Rheumatism, toothache, even diabetes and cancer may be caused by insufficient vitamins.

It is well known that minerals must now be added to the diet of livestock in this district...

"But we fail to see that if the alfalfa lacks something, so does the spinach", says Leonard Harmon in Farmer's magazine... "For nerve and brain and sound bones we need lots of phosphorus and lime, and whether we build a virile democracy or goose-step to the command of a Leader may depend on the potash in our politics... Not only our mental dullness but grandpa's rheumatism and Johnnie's tootache are attributable to mineral deficiency."

Sir John Boyd Orr of Aberdeen, noted authority on Nutrition, recently addressed a convention of Victorian Order of Nurses at Ottawa. He said: "The present monetary system is broken down and obsolete if some means cannot be found to sell an abundant food supply "frozen" in world markets to starving millions urgently in need of nutrition."

Room for Our Surplus

"The basis of a healthy diet was certainly protective foodstuffs containing necessary mineral salts and vitamins to ward off disease and promote healthy growth. Great strides towards improvement in national health standards had been made in the United Kingdom, but if the British Isles were to see all their citizens properly fed they would need 2,500,000 additional cows to provide adequate milk and 100 per cent increase in supplies of fruit, vegetables, eggs, meat and fish."

Sir John Boyd Orr suggested that extra food required might be obtained through a stimulation of Empire trade but warned that less white bread would be required owing to machinery decreasing arduous toil.

Women Can't Cook

A Mr. Callaghn of Flint Mich., says he dreads nothing so much as home cooking. The bread and biscuits our mothers and grandmothers used to make are responsible for a lot of the trouble this country's seen... The only cook worse than my wife was my mother...

Miss Dora Brehn of Ohio states she will probably never marry because... "he'll probably insist that I cook and I would not think of cooking for the man I loved."...

The Best Jobs are Held by Men

Oreste Costa was for forty-two years a cook in the service of Italy's King. To celebrate the Armistice in November 1918, the King entertained 2,000 army officers and several thousand mayors. Costa and his staff cooked 24,000 pieces of pastry and 15,000 sandwiches were made. They worked three days and three nights, but the affairs was a great triumph... He says "baking requires much inspiration, imagination and effort. A pastry can be on a par with a painting, a statue, a romance or a symphony."

Training in Schools

In the current agitation for the teaching of Domestic Science in our schools some important questions arise in view of facts presented by experts...

Instruction should be for boys as well as girls... because it would be useless to expect an abrupt change to modern methods if hubby continues to insist on "the kind ma used to make," etc., etc.... "whatayou buy all this here canned goods, spinach and baker's bread for? So's you can go to card parties or loaf around readin' all day, eh?"

Dr. Rutledge, National Commissioner for Canadian Red Cross, laments the ignorance of what constitutes good food. The majority of Canadians do not know what to eat or how to cook it, he says. "Why cannot we have such subjects as home nursing, first aid and cooking included in the curriculum of our schools", he asks.

I believe Rutledge is right and that Domestic Science should be taught in public and high schools.

But it needs to be really SCIENCE that is taught... not a glorified re-hash of the round of domestic drudgery, traditionally regarded as the eternal lot of women!

The modern trend is definitely toward standard products, made outside the home by scientific and exact formulae. There is no profit and a lot of danger in growing your own vegetables on poor or deficient soil. Homemade canned goods, bread, cakes and pies can even be poison! Slow, of course.

To be perfectly frank... it is now neither necessary nor desirable that every women should be an expert cook, any more than that every man should be one...

But EVERYONE should know where, when and what kind of food to put in his or her stomach... and insist upon getting it, even if we have to change our obsolete monetary system in the process!

Controlled production, grading and distribution of a nation's food is now a vital necessity if we hope to survive.

Government Sends Expert

Miss Jeannine Champoux, Government Nutritionist, is lecturing to Women's Institutes in this District during the present week. On Wednesday night an illustrated lecture will be given in the County Building and on Friday afternoon she will address the Convention of Chateauguay-Huntingdon County W.I. in Dundee. The public generally are cordially invited to attend and thus increase their knowledge and interest in the subject of proper diets.

Ethics of Etiquette

THE MIRACLE OF FAITH

You cannot overcome the handicaps that are keeping you from social popularity if you lack faith in yourself. But with faith and confidence, your timidity, your self-consciousness, and your sensitiveness will vanish so quickly that you will be amazed.

He can who thinks he can. Self-consciousness is a state of mind. It can be overcome, just as a bad habit can be overcome. But before anything else you must believe that you can overcome it.

Do not be afraid to have too good an opinion of yourself. Of course, egotism and aggressiveness are as fatal to social happiness as is self-consciousness. As Dr. Frank Crane says, "It is as bad to be too cocksure of things as it is to be a doubter. Somewhere between these two extremes you want to build your house."

Have faith in yourself. You can overcome your self-consciouness. You can overcome your timidity. Don't be ashamed of your shyness for that will only make you more conscious of it. Instead of shrinking from strangers force yourself to meet them, to mingle with them, and remember that it is in struggle that strength is born. Be confident, sure of yourself, calm.

Facts of Interest to Movie Fans

LYNNE CARVER

A soft Southern accent, beautiful auburn hair, and a singing voice that leaves her auditors amazed, are the weapons with which pretty Lynne Carver, daughter of a Kentucky mining engineer, crashed the citadel of Hollywood. But here is no Cinderella story. The first time she tried she failed. But now, under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and triumphant in her first important role, Miss Carver need no longer worry about her Hollywood prospects.

Raised in Lexington, Kentucky, where she was born September 13, and Birmingham, Alabama, Lynne which is the stage name she has chosen for her new career, early showed promise as a singer. Teachers worked with her. The family moved to California, where among the friends she made was Polly Ann Young, sister of Loretta Young. It was Miss Young who brought her to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, where she won a role in "Penthouse".

But after that new jobs didn't come. With her savings she went to New York to study voice, and on her return in 1936 she was called to the attention of Louis B. Mayer and Hunt Stromberg. Tests and a three months' trial contract followed, during which the name Lynne Carver was decided on for her. Then came her first really big "break", in the role of the sweetheart of Tom Brown in "Maytime", singing vehicle of Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy.

Five feet, six inches tall, with graceful, willowy figure, light auburn hair, and fathomless grey eyes, Miss Carver has an unusual youthful charm. She lives in Beverly Hills, and her closest friends are Helen Wood and Margaret Ryan. Her favorite pet is "Sugar Foot," a Spaniel.

Her most recent screen appearances were in "The Bride Wore Red" starring Joan Crawford, with Franchot Tone and Robert Young, "Madame X," starring Gladys George, with Warren William and John Beal, "Everybody Sing", "Young Dr. Kildare", "A Christmas Carol", "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn", "Within the Law" and "Calling Dr. Kildare."

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life.

Adventuring on Roller Skates

Saturday afternoon, or was it Sunday? Well, no matter, it was a fine spring afternoon, anway, and the birds and the frogs were trying out their loves old sweet songs with 1939 variations. Of course everybody was not out fishing or motoring or even walking, some being more interested in digesting Hitler's speech or listening to everlasting news commentators on international affairs, but I'll wager very few were out roller skating, and I mean by that long distance roller skating over spring roads.

The writer of these lines, however, was out motoring and also fishing. He was returning from a trip to the Marble River, about a mile north of Chateaugay Village, N.Y. On stopping at the Canadian Customs office, at Chateaugay Lines, he was asked if he could give a lift to a couple of young ladies who wished to go to Huntingdon. He replied in the affirmative, and in a minute or two, he was surprised to see two young ladies about twelve years of age, with roller skates under their arms, come out of the house and get in his car. Being curious about the roller skates, and conservationally inclined, he obtained the information that the young ladies were a Miss Parent and a Miss Cahill of Huntingdon, they had left Huntingdon about 2.30 p.m. with the idea of visiting their friend Miss Alma Fennell, some nine miles distant from Huntingdon, and they were making the trip on roller skates.

They got along fine till within about 3 miles of their destination, when the rough going broke a wheel off the skate of one of the young ladies. This accident, however, did not deter them from completing the journey, and they arrived without further mishap at about 5.30 p.m. The writer picked them up for the return trip, at 6.00 p.m., so after a half hours' visit, these two adventurous 12 year olds returned to Huntingdon via the medium of a luxurious Ford car (at least they said it was much more comfortable than roller skating).

The driver asked them if they had told their parents they were making the trip; the reply was, "No, but we called them up after we got there."

Well, spring always calls out the adventurous mood, especially in the young, and although some of this adventuresness takes rather curious modes of expression sometimes, such as seeing who can swallow the most live gold fish, or kiss the greatest number of girls in the shortest possible time, it is pleasing to lovers of the outdoors to see such an exhibition as the one described above.

Suicide A Failure . . . . .

Yes, some of you readers will be wondering who tried to commit suicide!

Quite recently mother and I experienced a very strange happening. We had two hens in baskets with fifty incubator chickens in the house, mother intended keeping them in the kitchen till she got the chicken-house warmed enough to put the tiny chickens out.

About nine o'clock mother took the chickens out of the kitchen to their heated house. A few minutes afterward, we heard a chicken peeping, we looked all around the kitchen; but there was no sign of the chicken, so we thought then it must have been some birds in a tree near the house.

At ten o'clock we were working near the stove. We heard the chicken again, this time we knew it was a chicken; but where was it? We looked in the two ovens of the stove. Then I started taking the ash-pan out of the stove. I believe the way mother looked at me, she thought I was sort of crazy; but sure enough, we found the little chicken in amongst the ashes. One foot was burned a little, but it is still living. I hope it will live, as I want it for a pet. I have called it Shadrac, and as it still loves a lot of heat, I intend keeping it near the stove, till I am sure it will be alright outside. It is still a mystery how that tiny chicken tried to commit suicide in such a place.—Miss Anna Watterson, St. Agnes de Dundee, Que.

A Clever Dog . . . . . .

One day my husband was working in a bush quite a distance from home and therefore took his lunch with him. When he reached the bush he set his lunch beside a stump and started to work a short distance away. When noon came he found his lunch kit had disappeared and started to search for it. After walking a short piece he came upon it right side up in a clump of cedars. All the food had been removed, except the tea which was undisturbed. For a moment he was rather puzzled as to what had happened to it, but suddenly remembered that a large police dog had been playing about with his own dog which was quite a small one. This police dog must have carried the kit away as it was rather heavy for the smaller one, but he could not have shared its contents with his playmate judging by its appetite upon arriving home. But how he opened the kit which closes with snaps is something we'll have to figure out for ourselves.—Mrs. F. E. Morris, Huntingdon, Que.

A Great Difference . . . . . .

Last week a man was out hunting in the Laguerre River area when he ran across a chance to shoot a cow in place of a buffalo, or what ever might come along. A cow was let out of a barn for perhaps the first time this season and wandered over to a neighbouring farm where she found plenty of hay in a hay stack. After eating her full, she headed for home. In making the homeward trip she attempted to wade the Laguerre River and in three feet of water she became floundered. A hunter found the cow in the predicament and called for the assistance of the farmer who owned the cow. Eventually the cow was rescued none the worse of the experience. Moral, "Have plenty of hay at home for your livestock."

Strange Bird Visits District

This spring (if you can call it that for we haven't had much warm weather as yet), I had the misfortune to lose a two-year-old heifer. As it is rather hard to bury anything as yet, we drew the heifer back to the woods, and, of course it was an attraction for all the dogs, foxes and skunks in the neighbourhood, besides a large flock of crows. While driving by one day I noticed a strange bird and while it was near the carcass the crows made themselves scarce.

This bird was about the size of three crows with a pure white head, neck and tail and the body was jet black. Some people tell me this is an eagle. But I wonder if it is.—A Reader.

Confusion of the Text . . . . .

When we were small children at home, it seemed almost compulsory for us to attend Sunday school and Church services, which usually lasted from 1.30 to 3.30 p.m.

Returning home one Sunday our mother asked us, "What is the Golden Text?"

My little sister replied, "Never mind, mother, you will get your quilt." On making further inquiries from the older children, the text was, "Fear not, I will send the Comforter." — Jessie M. Frier, Franklin Centre.

St. Anicet Seeks Help of Government

Council Asks Provincial Government For 50% Grant For Building of Roads

At their regular monthly meeting the members of the St. Anicet Council passed a resolution asking the Provincial government to pay half the costs for the construction of two roads, on the Quesnel Concession and on the Smith Road.

Mayor Jas. B. Narey and the Secretary Treasurer gave a report to the Council of the election on By-Law No. 91, which was held in St. Anicet on April 24, 25 and 26. According to this report, the number of votes cast in this election showed that 111 ratepayers had voted in favor of this By-Law with one voting against same. The total valuation of the property of those in favor amounted to $242,038 while $2,200 was the valuation of the property of those who voted against it.

It was moved by Coun. Hidala Caza and seconded by Coun. N. D. Rankin that the financial statement as submitted by auditor, W.L. Carr be approved as read and that this report be printed in the Huntingdon Gleaner. The Council also congratulated Mr. Carr for presenting such a comprehensive statement.

John Sterling was appointed agrarian inspector to replace Angus Campbell who had resigned.

The secretary-treasurer was authorized to purchase a seal for the municipality.

The following persons were placed on the valuation roll: Joseph Beaudry, replacing James Calver on lot No. 443; Paul Pinsonneault in place of Mrs. Moise Cote on lot No. P-665; Hidala Génier in place of Alex. Duheme on lots Nos. 675-677-P 826; Armand Caza, aged 21 years, son of Albert Caza; Roger Plouffe, aged 21 years, resident; Lionel Dupuis, proprietor.

The secretary was authorized to write the Hon. Martin B. Fisher, Provincial Treasurer, so that he may ask the Minister of Roads for a 50% grant for the expenses incurred by the St. Anicet Council during 1938, on Newfoundout and Leahy roads, a report of which was submitted during October, 1938.

Centenary Of Methodism Being Celebrated In U. C.

Rev. Dr. Ritchie to be Guest Speaker at Anniversary Services of United Church

Present Huntingdon United Church Built Thirteen Years Ago—Sunday Services Will Commemorate "Royalty to Canada," "Mothers Day," "Centenary Of Local Congregation" and Anniversary of Building Present Edifice

The Huntingdon United Church celebrates its 14th anniversary on Sunday and on Friday evening an anniversary supper is to be held. The fact that the United Church is marking its 14th anniversary and its being 13 years since the present church was re-built following the church fire of March 13, 1926, are not the most important features in connection with the anniversary. Some people of the congregation may disagree about the importance of this anniversary but we believe the fact that the Methodist congregation which was founded in Huntingdon erected its first church in 1839 one hundred years ago.

In most countries a hundred years is not a long time in the making of history, but on the North American Continent, 100 years means a great deal. In order that the rising generation may know more of the ordeals that had to be surmounted 100 years ago, in order that Methodism might get started in this district we reproduce some of the historical facts taken from the late Robert Sellar's history of the Counties of Huntingdon, Chateauguay and Beauharnois.

According to this history, Methodism began to be an active element in Huntingdon as far back as 1830. In that year Henry Denio, a blacksmith of the town of Fort Covington, desirous of obtaining money to discharge a debt, came to the Ridge and arranged with a man named Dank near Clyde's Corners to work for him on condition that he be permitted to make potash in his bush. In six months he managed to send to Montreal three barrels of potash, with the proceeds of which he went home to the States, paid his creditors, and never returned. He was an ordained local preacher of the M. E. Church, and during this brief stay, in the evenings and on Sundays, he was persevering in his efforts to arouse those with whom he came in contact. When he left his religious work was taken up by David Armstrong another layman, who was a local preacher and a native of Ireland. Mr. William Dalgleish, father of W. W. Dalgleish, became a local preacher in 1832 and with David Armstrong continued to carry on the work. Ministers from Fort Covington endeavored to visit Huntingdon once a month up to 1838. These were Loviss, Redington, Johnson and Barney. The quarterly meetings they held in the Ridge schoolhouse. These ministers came on horseback, excepting when there was sleighing, and one of them was so poor that at such seasons he drove in an extempore sled made of a crockery crate set on runners. During these years there were too few Methodists in the vicinity of the village to form a congregation but a beginning was made by organizing a prayer meeting which was kept up from 1830 and held on Sunday evenings.

In 1838 the Canadian Conference took over the work and made Huntingdon an appointment of Russelltown circuit, in which relation it remained till 1849. In 1839 the stone church, now Tremblay's Casein Factory, was begun at the head of Lorne Ave. and completed the following year. This church was seventy-one feet by thirty-six feet six and had a gallery across the back. The minister and trustees were:—Rev. John Raine and Capt. Wm. Steel of Russelltown, Nicholas Ruston and David Fitch of Huntingdon, Wm. Wallace and Jos. Scriver of Elgin, Thomas Whaley of Godmanchester, and Jno. Mathewson and Richard Latham of Hinchinbrooke. The deed was made to a "Society of People called Methodists." Robert Dowler had the contract for the mason work at sixty-seven pounds, ten shillings, and David Lamb had the contract for carpenter work at eighty-nine pounds, sixteen shillings and sixpence. The total cost was 256 pounds, 19s., 7d.

In 1867, when the Evangelical Union Church, known as the "Anderson" church disbanded many of its fine families cast in their lot with the Methodist congregation.

About 1878 the congregation became conscious of their need of improvement of church property. Instead of putting costly necessary repairs on the old church they determined to build a new edifice and the Rev. George Rogers began to solicit subscriptions and the ladies commenced raising funds by entertainments. In 1879 Rev. James Henderson, later Dr. Henderson, came to the circuit and under his guidance the enterprice was carried forward to a most successful issue. The trustee board on Feb. 2nd., 1880, gave the contract to Messrs. Moore & Field of Canton, N.Y., contractors, who specialized on church-building and who erected at least two churches each year. The plans had been prepared by S. R. Badgley of Toronto. The main building was fifty by eighty feet in dimensions and the spire one hundred and twenty-six feet high. The contract price was $9025.

The contractors broke ground on the 20th of May and on July 12th, the cornerstone was laid by the Supreme Grand Master and Sovereign of British America of the Orange Order, H. Merrick, M.P.P., of Merrickville, Ont., assisted by Captain Woodward of Sherbrooke, Grand Master of the Order in Quebec. A bountiful dinner had been prepared by the ladies in the Fair Buildings, over four hundred being seated at once. The receipts at the dinner were $332. Proceeding in procession, marshalled by Dr. C. H. Wells, from the Fair Ground to the Church, the cornerstone was laid in accordance with the ritual of the order. On the platform with the officers of the Order were Revs. Jas. Henderson, F. G. Lett, John Holmes of Ormstown, John Webster, of Valleyfield, and James Patterson, Presbyterian of Hemmingford. Of these only John Webster and James Patterson still survive. Among other deposits in the stone was a list of the trustees—James Johnston, John Selly, Richard Pinhay, Malcolm McNaughton, Thomas Cain, John Kelly, W. S. Maclaren, James Kelly, David Lamb, W. W. Dalgleish, John C. Dunsmore and Alex. Chalmers, the last four of whom constituted the building committee. Rev. John Holmes solicited contributions to the building fund and in a few minutes received susbscriptions to the amount of $265. Addresses were delivered by Julius Scriver, M.P., H. Merrick, M.P.P., and Rev. John Holmes, Rev. Jno. Webster pronouncing the benediction.

"The Prey of Fire"

For 46 years this church administered to the spiritual needs of her members. She witnessed the child in arms when he was brought to be baptized. She welcomed him into Sunday School; with pride she received him as a member. The tones of her bell pealed forth joyously on his wedding day. When the last scene of all came—death, she received him into her bosom. Through her arches the prayers of the officiating clergyman echoed and reechoed. The human voice sounded the prayer once but she was not satisfied with this and repeated it over and over until at last it was unheard by human ears. This sacred edifice, on Saturday afternoon, March 13th., 1926, fell prey to the flames.

Not since December 9th., 1909, when the Central Hotel was burnt had Huntingdon been the scene of a fire of such magnitude until Saturday afternoon, March 13th., 1926, when the United Church of Huntingdon was levelled to the ground in a space of two hours and a half time.

Mr. D. M. Houghton was caring for the church and was in the edifice kindling the fires for the Sunday services, when the terrible fire swept beyond control. It was shortly after two o'clock when Mrs. Davis and the late Mrs. Bicknell entered the church basement, intending to assort a quantity of newly purchased silver by the Ladies' Aid Society that the danger of fire was aroused. Mr. Houghton shortly after their arrival was attending the furnace and found that the pipes were faulty and that the partition was beginning to kindle. Had he a pail of water the fire would have been extinguished but the water pipes were frozen and before they could beat the fire out it had got beyond control. The alarm was given and the late Mr. Thomas Vine was first on hand to help fight the fire. They all worked hard only to be baffled by the choking smoke.

The Baumert Co. Limited were called and the whistle sounded 1 long and 4 short indicating where the fire was raging. The whistle and the United Church bell told the story for in a few minutes crowds gathered on the scene of action. The fire reels were hurriedly taken to the scene with much effort. The heavy snowfall making the roads anything but easy to roll the reels along. The fire engine and pump were run onto the river and in a few minutes time four streams of water were playing on the flames which had gained headway between the basement ceiling and the floor of the church proper.

Whilst the volunteer fire fighters were working diligently the ladies and a number of men were hard at work saving the small movable effects from the basement, which included the silverware, dishes, the piano, chairs, etc., etc. After the fire a number of library books and the communion service were recovered.

The smoke was seen to be coming out of the main roof by shortly after three o'clock which indicated the fire had gained much headway and was then in the church. The next worry was the steeple and tower which were 126 feet in height and might fall and do damage to the properties near by. Two streams of hose were then laid from a Prince St. hydrant and through to Mr. John Smaill's residence. These two streams played upon his property until well nigh 6 p.m., when it appeared safe from sparks. The steeple toppled over at 3.50 p.m., it having burnt itself away to a great extent before falling. It did no damage and fell on the sidewalks directly in front of the church. The prevailing westerly wind blew the steeple in this direction and so saved Mr. Smaill's house from fire. In ten minutes time the roof of the church caved into the roaring furnace and in another ten minutes the bell weighing 909 lbs. was heard fall. It was found out after the fire that the bell had broken into pieces and had melted to a great extent.

The pipe organ in the church was completely destroyed. The organ was large and when installed cost $2700.

Before the streams of water ceased their work on the blazing debris and while the tower beams were still burning the Trustee and Official Boards met at the home of the late R. S. Pringle and decided to take immediate steps to rebuild.

Messages of sympathy poured in by mail, telegraph, and telephone. St. Andrew's Congregation at once extended the use of their church to the United Congregation. Later on, the United Church Board accepted the kind offer of D. J. O'Connor, then Mayor of Huntingdon, to use the hall, and there held the Sunday services until Dec. 5th, when the church basement was enough completed to hold services.

Chateauguay Lodge, No. 36 A.F. & A.M. offered the use of their rooms and this enabled the church work to go on without interruption. Members also opened their homes for week night services. No one could do enough.

Rebuilding

The Trustee Board was enlarged, the late Rev. J. I. Hughes, M.A., B.D., ex-officio being chairman. The late Mr. C. W. Thomas was elected Secretary. The Finance Committee appointed the late R. S. Pringle and the late A. McEdwards. A Building Committee of six was named. Of these the late John Dunsmore had been on the Building Committee 45 years before. Mr. E. C. McCoy was chairman, Dr. H. R. Clouston, secretary, and the others were A. McArthur, the late Wm. Hamilton and Wm. Goodfellow. Others on the Trustee Board were B. W. Allen, H. T. Cunningham, Allan Crutchfield, A. A. Lunan, N. W. Sparrow, M. M. McNaughton, the late W. F. Stephen and Dan. Walker.

Arthur B. Forbes, A.R.I.B.A., of Montreal drafted plans and tenders were asked for. Before the date for opening the tenders arrived given in the name of Elsie Munro and her brother Willie in memory of their late father Wm. Munro was hoisted into its position in the tower.

Financial Campaign and Costs

To the late R. S. Pringle and the late A. McEdwards was entrusted the heavy duty of securing subscriptions. A system of individual cards was adopted. No one knew what his neighbor had given. Everyone dealt only with his own conscience and the response exceeded the hopes of the most optimistic. The Fire Insurance received was $19,125.

The total sums received and promised are (very approximately) $37,000.00.

The total costs are very close to $35,000, leaving about $1500.00 with which to start building new sheds.

Obituary

Charles Hurley McCarthy

At his late residence, 3 Upper Bridge Street, Skibbereen, County Cork, Ireland, April 12, Charles H. McCarthy passed away after a short illness. The deceased was in his 63rd year and was the only brother of John McCarthy, former J.P. of New Erin.

Charles H. McCarthy was the youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCarthy and was one of eight children; his entire life was spent in the Cathedral Parish of Skibbereen, where he was known as one of its most faithful members, a loyal son and an exemplary citizen. Several years he devoted to the care of his aged parents; death deprived him in 1916 of a loving wife and young son. In these great trials, Mr. McCarthy showed undaunted courage, so characteristic of those who inherit the Irish faith.

The Hurley and McCarthy families from which Charles McCarthy descended are among the oldest in Ireland—their history goes back to the second century (1660). These families gave many noted persons to Church and State, not only in ancient days but in modern times—a few of these are cousins and nephews of the deceased: Reverend James J. Maloney, Los Angeles, Cal.; Rev. Bro. Felix O'Driscoll, director and Rev. Bro. Aidan O'Driscoll, professor at Baldoyle College, Dublin; Rev. Sister Agnes Rita Hurley, Convent Station, New Jersey; Reverend Sister Anna Gabrielle Hurley, Westfield, New Jersey; Messrs. M. J. O'Driscoll, Poet, and Donald Murphy, Artist, Cork University.

The immediate relatives surviving are: one brother, John McCarthy; five sisters, viz., Mrs. Julia O'Driscoll, Mrs. Ella McCarthy and Miss Helena McCarthy, Skibbereen; Mrs. Minnie Murray and Mrs. Timothy Murphy, City of Cork; seven nephews and twelve nieces, also a number of grandnephews and grandnieces; another sister, Kate, died in 1933.

The funeral service was held at The Cathedral, Skibberean on April 14th and was well attended by relatives from Dublin, Cork and the many friends and old neighbors from the district. The Solemn Requiem High Mass was offered by Very Rev. J. Duggan, Adm. V. F. His assistants were: Rev. J. O'Donovan, C.C. and Rev. P. J. O'Sullivan, C.C. The cortege proceeded later to Drimolague where interment took place. We extend much sympathy to the bereaved family, and especially to his devoted sister, Helena, who cared for him so tenderly.

PROVISIONAL BOARD OF GOVERNORS

SHINING WINDOWS

by Kathleen Norris ~

"Dodo thinks maybe Dad's just fooling, and the last minute he'll tell us we're not really going down to that ghastly place to live," Joyce told Paul on the very last day.

"She's a great pipe-dreamer, Dodo!" Paul said with a chuckle. He and Joyce were walking downtown; it was four o'clock on a cold foggy spring afternoon. He had come out to help box the last of the books. Afterwards Joyce had made herself look her nicest to go down to the St. Francis with Paul for tea.

They had known each other only a few weeks, but from the first moment of meeting there had been a special bond between them. Today their feeling for each other had passed some other milestone; both had been conscious of it all through the thrilling hours before this hour. Paul had been not less funny, not less giddy, but today he had had moments of seriousness too, moments almost of bewilderment. Joyce had felt them as he had. She had heard him call her "dear" more than once as if inadvertently; only it had not been inadvertent. Tomorrow they were parting, for a while anyway, and he was not going to let today go by without some special word.

They went into the big hotel and found a table. Joyce loved the atmosphere of warmth and quiet and fragrance; it was good to sit back luxuriously watching other men and women moving about, meeting and talking over teacups and parting.

"I had a talk with my father last night," Paul said. Joyce could only look at him expectantly; she could not speak. Stars and rockets were wheeling about her; some woman near was wearing delicate lilac perfume; the orchestra was softly playing Auf Wiedersehen.

"I told him about us," Paul said. Joyce's eyes were fixed on his; her senses swam. "I said we liked each other," the boy went on. "He was swell."

Joyce saw his eyes mist; she felt her own eyes prick although she was smiling.

"Oh, I said there wasn't anything settled about it," Paul began again almost roughly. "I said you had to go away with your people, and darn it, I flunked my law course at Christmas! You knew that? It made my father awfully mad. I told him that everything was different, now that I knew you, and I said I'd do anything he liked if he'd only—" Paul's young voice had grown hoarse. "You will wait for me, won't you?" he stammered.

The room was moving about her in slow enchanted circles; the music was the music of Paradise. Joyce could not speak. Her head crept over his.

"You knew I felt that way, didn't you, Joyce?"

He had moved his hand to grip hers; the contact went through her whole being like an electric current.

"I feel that way," she said, swallowing.

"I mean—we're only kids—I'm twenty-four," Paul went on rapidly, urgently. He seemed to Joyce the incarnation of everything that was dear and honest and handsome, squared about to face her, his hand over her hand. "I told him we'd hardly talked about it. I didn't tell him about night before last," he added with an awkward little shred of laughter. Joyce's color rose in a flood and she laughed in embarrassment too. "But that was the first time I ever kissed a girl, Joyce and mean it," Paul ended.

"I guess it was the first time with me too," Joyce said.

"My father wants me to finish up with my last year," the boy burst out anxiously. "And then he says we can go ahead!"

Joyce looked at him, awed. He hadn't really told his father that they loved each other! It couldn't be that matters were moving as fast as this. Fresh love for him welled up into the heart that was filled already with a girl's wild first trembling love.

"You see, here's what Dad said," he was going on earnestly. "Dad said it wouldn't be any good my trying for a job; I couldn't get one anywhere. But he says that if I go back and coach this summer—Tanner, who runs a coaching camp at Lake George, was talking to me about it before I came away—Dad says that if I get in again in October and finish up—I'd finish a year from Christmas—that then I could go right into the firm with him, and we can be married right away."

A year from Christmas! It sounded like centuries. But under the centuries the miracle of their loving each other, waiting for each other belonging to each other would run.

"He's awfully kind. He doesn't know me."

"The old man is swell. We talked about two hours," he added. "I told him I'd changed. I said, 'You have been telling me I had to wake up all these years; I've waked up!' I told him that you were the—the most wonderful companion I had ever known, that we just seemed to belong to each other from the very beginning."

He fumbled in a side pocket, took out a wisp of tissue paper and unrolled it carefully.

"Listen," he said. "I couldn't buy you a ring. I'm going to cost my father a lot of money if I go back, and he's kind of hard up as it is. I thought he was going to pack me off to a ranch somewhere and just let me slide and find my own job. But, look, this was my grandmother's; it isn't worth much, I guess. It's only an amethyst; it's pretty, isn't it? I want you to have it. And listen, we'll write each other all the time. I write rotten letters, but you won't care!"

She held the ring in the palm of her hand; looked up to smile at him through a dazzle of tears.

"It's beautiful, Paul."

They looked radiantly into each other's eyes.

"We're engaged," he said.

"Oh, Paul—" Joyce said faintly. She had always thought it would make a person feel quite old and responsible to be engaged. Oddly enough the first effect on her was to make her only a little girl again. Her mother's youngster, her father's giggling companion at circuses and movies only a few years ago—engaged!

"We'll get a lot of presents," he said youthfully. "We'll have a swell little place somewhere."

Joyce was thoughtful.

"A year from Christmas," she said with a sigh. "And this is March."

"But I'll be out here next summer!" I'm going to work harder than I ever worked in my life before. I told him so! You see, Joy," Paul went on earnestly, "I think it's up to us both to make good. I mean my father kind of relies on me to go into the firm, and they all depend on you out at the house. Lissy's all shot to pieces over What's-his-name, Dodo's half asleep all the time, Ben's no good at all! You're the greatest comfort your father and mother have, because you're just naturally wonderful, see? You just naturally are so darned—" Tears came into his eyes. "So darned good," he finished, grinning ashamedly.

Joyce's color swept up.

"Oh, no, I'm not!" she said a little thickly.

"Well, you are. You're the only one that stands by the old man," Paul went on in a rush of enthusiasm. "You and I both have got to first buckle down to—well, to what we've got to do! We're young, and we've always had it easy, and now we've got to show em that we've got something!"

"I'm not good, Paul," Joyce said very low.

"You!" he said and laughed.

"No, I'm not. I don't know, Joyce said thoughtfully. "I don't know that I ever thought about being—good, really. Meeting you, Paul, having this happen, has made me—sort of wonder about it. It's made me want to be kind to every one—different.

Dahlia's Whatnots

The Visit:

Comrades! There is a traitor in the camp! Yet his offense has been so barefaced rather than treacherous that for want of a better term, I think I shall call him a Philistine.

He has declared that, should the King and Queen come to our township during their visit to Canada, he would not walk across the road to see them; that George and his brothers receive millions of the people's money for which they render no return; and that they are—well, something that hints at dissolute living.

Now you are wondering what colour of shirt he wears. I fancy it would take Joseph's coat to fit his political stripe, for he is neither Communist nor Fascist, but a cross between pro-British Imperialist and Republican—minded caviller.

Perhaps he thinks while the most of us only feel, but I find it difficult to believe his statement. He is a man who is always as good, but sometimes not so bad, as his word. If Their Majesties should visit our countryside, I doubt not that he would make out to get the very best view possible of the royal visitors; he is a prompt man and he is tall.

I think that he could be got to admit that we have a really agreeable King and Queen, were it not for his strong antagonism to their relatives of the idle, rich class. Some sarcastic, sulky Red may change "idle" and "rich" into "unemployed" and "on relief", but let us be fair to these scions of royalty; who are such by a mere accident of birth; they did not choose to be born in a place any more than you or I choose to be born in a farmhouse or city apartment. By way of compensation for their untoward start in life, they should be obliged to acquaint themselves thoroughly with some occupation. If they feel averse to descending to the common level, they might learn air-pilotage. At this, they would continue in an elevated position for certain periods, at least, and would still be looked up to.

With positions reversed, how many of royalty's critics would abdicate a throne to spare the nation's purse or even to marry for love?

No doubt, kings and princes are peculiarly tempered to take advantage of the privileges afforded by their position. Since the recording of pedigrees began, they have loafed and lusted on the blood and tears of the less privileged, but so have the sons of republican millionaires. History also furnishes instances of men who, raised from the lowest to the highest rank, proved no better than their "betters"—despicable word?

Compared with many former royal personages, our Sovereigns seem a very pleasant and moral pair. The Queen is charming, the King is kindly and quite a respectable-looking emblem. They tell us that, politically, that is all, the King of England now is—an emblem of the British Commonwealth's unity.

Socially, due to sufficient practice, Their Majesties are proficient dancers and efficient sponsors of public welfare undertakings, such as hospitals, etc.

But, speaking seriously, George and Elizabeth have a firm and deep hold on the esteem of their subjects, on account of their solid domestic virtues. It is not their fault if they can do little in a public way except pose. Debarred by traditional conventions from the natural expression of their personalities, other persons of royal degree have sometimes sought compensation through undue liberty in private life.

In a sense, the members of our own royal house are the only individuals in a democracy who enjoy no civil liberty; they may not often speak or do as the spirit moves

If you are annoyed because you have a king, why, so is he because being a king, he is yet a man, thwarted in his ambitions and impulses by his high rank, as you are by your lowly station. The gifts of the sovereign lord, as of his humblest subject, may remain undeveloped for lack of opportunity.

The King is no longer responsible for the Government's policy as was the case in former eras. He can neither be censured as a tyrant nor lauded as a statesman, but is reduced to the status of an emblem.

Now, while one man may seem a tidy and convenient emblem for an empire, he may be an expensive one.

Fire Destroys A. Riel Barn

Farm Machinery, Cattle Etc., Lost in Fire on Wednesday Afternoon

Fire! the great servant and evil master, raged through the barns of Andrew Riel on the Ridge Road on Wednesday afternoon and in the course of an hour demolished everything. Mr. Riel was working near his bush when he noticed smoke rolling out from the barns. By the time he reached the barns he was unable to do anything other than to save the horses. The three horses in the stable were saved, a sow and a litter of little pigs, and the fourteen cows were also saved.

The fire took toll to the extent of a bull, four calves, two yearlings, the farm machinery which included a binder, mower, disc harrows, single and gang plows, wagon, sleighs, rake and many other small tools. Only Monday did Mr. Riel place two loads of hay in the barn. A small quantity of grain was lost including some he was keeping for seeding time.

The neighbours quickly came to the call for help but the heat was so terrific little could be done. Time and again the milk house caught on fire and so terrific was the heat the men were almost forced to leave the water pump. In the course of the fire the wind turned which not only meant the saving of the partially scorched milk house but also the home.

The fire insurance carried on the barns is believed to be $500 and carried in the Parish Mutual Insurance of St. Joseph's Parish. Damages are estimated at about $4,000.

Mrs. R. J. Blair Elected President Women's Institute

Many Attend 15th Annual Convention of Chateauguay-Huntingdon Counties W.I. at Dundee—Final Spelling Match to Take Place at Howick, May 20th

The fifteenth annual Convention of the Chateauguay-Huntingdon Counties Women's Institute was held at Dundee on Friday, May 5th, the President, Mrs. Jas. Bruce presiding.

The Convention opened with the singing of O Canada and all repeating the Club Woman's Creed in unison. Mrs. Chas. Smallman, Dundee, welcomed the delegates and Mrs. Whitehead, Franklin Centre, replied to the address of welcome.

The minutes of last convention held at Howick were read, also minutes of semi-annual meeting held at Franklin Centre. These were both approved. The date for the final spelling match was arranged for May 20, at 1 p.m., standard time at Howick. Prizes to be $8, $5 and $2. Each Branch to be responsible for transportation of contestants.

Dramatics was then discussed when it was thought best to engage judges who would act without remuneration and donate the final proceeds to the new Barrie Memorial Hospital, each Branch to finance their own expenses. This matter was left in the hands of Mrs. F. Bruce, Huntingdon, and Mrs. Margaret Lindsay, Ormstown, to select judges for semi-final and final plays. The place of meeting for the final to be decided between the parties competing, the date for final contest to be June 2nd.

As regards the annual picnic it was agreed to discontinue same for this year.

Mrs. Alfred Greig reported on the Books for Library, $12.52 being spent for same. Each Branch to have use of books for four months.

The report on Beautifying School Grounds was read, when it was decided to continue this good work another year.

Printing of programmes was then discussed, 300 to be printed.

Mrs. D. F. Orr expressed Mrs. Petch's regret at being unable to attend, as she was busy preparing for her trip to the A.C.W.W. Convention in London as Provincial W. I. delegate.

Letters of regret were read from Senator Iva Fallis, also from Mrs. Eleanor Orr who was secretary for a number of years.

The secretary was asked to write to Miss McCain, expressing our best wishes for a speedy recovery, she having been ill for some time.

Mrs. R. J. Blair read the Treasurer's report which showed a balance on hand of $160.89.

Our County President gave us a splendid address in which she stressed, are we making the most of our opportunities? Try to sponsor a short course in our own branches, take advantage of demonstrations, make scrap books on different departments, one on Canadian Industries being made by Aubrey's Convenor in that department, support the new Hospital which is to be built in our community, take interest in the musical festival, struggle for franchise, study colonization areas, extend a friendly hand to newcomers and lastly pray for peace.

As our President was retiring from her office she thanked all convenors and hoped that they would be as loyal to her successor.

Branch reports were continued, after which an adjournment was made for lunch.

The afternoon session opened by singing the Opening Ode, when reports were concluded and moved for adoption.

We were pleased to have with us at Convention Miss Dow from Malone, and Mrs. Shields, Bombay, who gave a short skit on "Care of the Feet." This skit was composed by a young lady from Trout River and had been put on at the State Fair.

The ladies joined in community singing, after which we listened to a very interesting talk by Miss Champeaux from the Department of Health. At the close of her address Mrs. Cappiello favoured the conventionists with a solo entitled "Out of the Dusk", also an encore which was enjoyed by all.

The report of the nominating committee was given by Mrs. Smallman, the new slate of officers being as follows:

Publicity—Mrs. A. Bennie, Riverfield, Que.

Mrs. M. B. Fisher presented the findings of the resolutions committee, the only one being from Aubrey Branch, dealt with the request that the Minister of Health would continue in his endeavours to stamp out tuberculosis and that more facilities for the accommodation of patients suffering from the same be provided. A copy of said resolution be sent to the Minister of Health. A vote of thanks to the speakers of the day and also to the entertaining W. I. (the Dundee ladies) was moved by Mrs. Fisher and heartily endorsed by the Convention.

Tea was served by the Dundee ladies. A pleasing feature of the Convention was the beautiful display of handicraft by local and visiting W.I. branches.

BURIED IN OIL

Early settlers in what is now Pilot Knob township south of Nashville, Ill., mostly Presbyterians, built a small meeting house known as Oak Grove Presbyterian church. Mose of them now lie in the burial ground adjoining the church. Because so many of the younger members of these pioneer families drifted away and also because of the influx of Polish farmers, the church memberships dwindled and for nearly 40 years no regular services have been held in the church building. Several years ago it was deeded to the Oak Grove Cemetery association and has since been used as a township hall and polling place. Recently an oil boom at Centralia, Ill., 28 miles away, caused an oil operator to lease the old church yard of slightly more than two acres. He put down a test well and at 2,280 feet, oil gushed out at the rate of 315 barrels a day. It is believed this will be increased to 500 barrels when the well is "shot." Now the old churchyard, the graves fenced off to keep them from being trampled over, has become the centre of an oil boom that is expected to make all members of the cemetery association wealthy.

FIRST BUTTER FACTORY

"The Dairy Industry of Canada" states on page 38.

"To the province of Quebec belongs the honour of having established the first three Canadian creameries. Farmers of Athelstan, Huntingdon County, Quebec, attempted in 1873 to manufacture butter in a central factory, but the same had to close its doors after ten weeks. The first successful creamery was opened one month later at Helena, in the same county, and it worked until 1884, then was converted into a cheese factory."

Boys and Girls Have Anaemia

How you do like to see your children healthy and robust, enjoying outdoor games and building strong bodies and healthy minds. You are insulted when anyone mentions malnutrition. And yet a child suffering from anaemia is starving no matter how much food is set before him.

He has loss of appetite, poor digestion, tired feelings and is fidgety and irritable. He may have eye trouble and is in a weakened condition.

The quick way to overcome the anaemic condition is by use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, because this food treatment supplies in condensed form the very ingredients in which the system is lacking. Children respond beautifully to this restorative medicine.

Barber Poles Have Ancient, Live Story as Their Origin

The universal totem of the barber, the pole painted in alternate stripes of red and white is familiar to everyone. Does everyone know how it started?

The history of this pole dates back from the Middle ages when the barber was the only surgeon.

In the reign of Edward IV a charter of incorporation was given to the "Freeman of the Mystery of the Barbers of the City of London using the Mystery of the Faculty of surgery." Thus the art of the surgeon and the trade of the barber were combined. Governors of this combination were appointed and this step may be said to have been the inception of what is now the Royal College of Surgeons of England.

In the reign of Henry VIII, the barbers and surgeons of London were merged into one body under the name of the "Mystery and Commonantly of the Barbers and Surgeons of London," and Holbien the celebrated artist, made a painting of the event.

The charter of King Henry was confirmed by Charles 1, but in the reign of George II, the old union of the Barbers and Surgeons was dissolved and henceforth the surgeons of England were left to struggle along as best they could. They have not made such a bad job of it.

The colours of the barber's pole represent incidents of far away times; the red signifies blood, the white the bandage. But the barber-surgeon, if divorced from his former occupation in England, survived for a long time in other lands. As late as 1846 in the south of Spain, barber shops generally had a notice that the barber did midwifery and surgery as well as shaving, and far more recently Sir John Simon says that "he had the honour of being shaved by a barber who had Prof. Virchow's (the great German pathologist's) latest publications on the book-shelf beside his basin."

MODERN ARK

Half of a large and valuable shipment of wild animals, birds and reptiles bound for the New York World's fair, perished during one of the stormiest passages of the year, L. R. Nicol, far eastern representative of Frank Buck, disclosed recently when he arrived in Boston with the survivors of the consignment on the Isthmian line freighter Steel Traveler. Decks of the 425-foot vessel, making her thirty-sixth circuit of the globe, were never dry during a 26-day passage from Port Said, Nicol said. Huge seas broke over the steamer, a week overdue in arriving, and Nicol and seven Malay assistants strove constantly to protect their furred, feathered and scaled charges, which were carried on deck. Among the creatures which perished were four Komodo lizards, recent denizens of the torrid jungles of the Dutch East Indies, and regarded as relics of prehistoric dragons. The death toll was highest among the monkeys, a species very susceptible to cold. Only the 200 Manila ducks, taken aboard as food for the animals and snakes, were unaffected by the elements. Survivors included a 14-foot King cobra, three rare black panthers, nine birds of paradise, six honey bears, eight pythons, all more than 20 feet long; two orang—outangs, 10 gibbons and 15 pig tail macaques, a species of monkey trained by natives to pick cocoanuts, and a large assortment of birds and squirrels.

AXES FOR SPIES

German men or women who betray trade secrets to foreigners are to be deemed guilty of high treason for which death is the only punishment. Copies of the new law have been posted in every factory, together with a picture of the executioner's axe. The notice stresses the point that there can be no exception to the decree, as those guilty are injuring German interests as much as if they betrayed vital military secrets. In an official memorandum the German government alleges that in the last few years secret agents have furnished to Britain and France full details of new industrial processes that were vital to German national defence.

IS WAITING

To get out and dig in the garden is one of the most satisfying of pleasures! And it's nearly time again . . . thank goodness. Soon you can put in that border of lilliput zinnias and dwarf marigolds you've been planning all Winter long.

The seed books are bursting with new flowers. How about your tools? Need a new rake this year? A hoe? And while you're checking up . . . do the porch chairs need repainting? Should you get new screens?

Now is the time to buy. The advertisements in The Huntingdon Gleaner from time to time offer suggestions for Spring purchases. Study them carefully. They'll help you weed out waste, both in your time and your money.

Behind The Dictators

By Wilson Woodside

I can remember once as a small boy waking up in the night to find a ghostly monster leering at me from across the room. For a long time I lay and shivered and waited for it to pounce on me. But finally I decided that anything was better than just waiting like that. I would make an end of it, and find out what it was. If it really was a ghost then it would get me anyway, and if it wasn't I would know. Steeling myself I got out of bed and walked straight towards it. Before I had gone many steps I realized that it was only a white summer coat and hat carelessly thrown over a hall-tree in a way which gave a grotesque effect in the dark.

For months, almost years now we have been faced with the nameless terrors of another European war. According to most accounts it is to make the last one seem like child's play. Western civilization is to be blotted out. Countless thousands of German bombers will leave London and Paris mere blank spots on the map. Italy's submarines, fast torpedo-boats and planes will drive the British and French navies out of the Mediterranean. And so on. Now no sane man would deny that another war, if it came to Europe today, would be a calamity. But when you read scare stores such as the above it is well to keep in mind that it is the dictators' game to frighten us into always giving in without fighting, that they have won all their successes in this way, and that they spend enormous sums on propaganda abroad, which is often taken up and unconsciously furthered by well-meaning people. These are the ghostly shapes they have carefully arranged for us.

Hitler may start a war any day—or any night. There is no way of knowing, and no sure way of stopping him. But whether he could finish it, and whether it would be as long and terrible as the last one, are quite different questions. No one would claim, for instance, that you can fight a modern war without iron, and vast quantities of it. The iron mines that carried Germany through the last war lie behind the Maginot Line in France today. She has left only the very poorest sources, which, with a great deal of labor and expense, yield one-fifth of her present consumption. German arms are made today almost entirely out of iron ore from far Swedish Lapland. Would the Swedes continue to deliver this for nothing in wartime?—for Germany has no gold and could spare no goods. If not, would Germany be able to seize and operate the distant mines?

But Germany can't fight the whole world. She would at the same time be busy trying to conquer Roumania quickly, to get the oil she absolutely must have for a major war. She uses 6 million tons of gas and oil a year today, and I have seen estimates in her own military journals that she would require 20 millions in war-time. She produces just one-ninth of this at home, from coal. Even if she succeded in grabbing the Roumanian oil fields (the Roumanians blew the wells up before surrendering them in the last war) they would only give her another 6½ million tons.

Coming to rubber and cotton, other vital war materials, Germany is producing artificially only one-tenth of her needs of the former and one third of the latter, and there are no nearby sources which she might grab. She has almost no wool, and no nickel, mercury, or a dozen other vital products. It is not to be thought that she has any important stores of these laid by, for in years of furious re-armament she has combed out her reserves from every corner in the land. Likewise she has exhausted the financial resources which might have replenished them, as she was able to do in 1915 and 1916 through the neutrals.

Her gold reserve went in the first year of Nazism, then the foreign exchange and foreign bonds held by German firms, then the Jews were plundered the savings banks, the insurance companies, the unemployment insurance fund and the old age pension fund were quietly cleaned out and squandered on arms, on vast building projects and great Roman holidays, and on propaganda. Last Spring Austria's little gold hoard kept the pot boiling for a few months; through the Fall and Winter armament was carried on with simple I.O.U's, then Czechoslovakia's gold and raw material stores were looted, and now Hitler's Finance Minister is down to certificates issued against future tax returns.

When one considers how Germany has exhausted her raw material supplies and turned to making substitutes, liquidated her holdings abroad, alienated the United States and most of the small neutrals, kept her people on short rations and driven men and machines at full speed for years already, one is faced with the striking truth that the situation of Germany today is rather that of 1917 than 1914. Just think back to that Germany of 1914, with its magnificent army trained and perfected over decades, its navy big enough to challenge Britain's, an economy glowing with prosperity, large stocks of raw materials, a flourishing foreign trade, big investments in neutral countries abroad, a billion dollar golden war chest, and a well-fed and cheerful population. That Germany, fat, fresh and powerful, was able to stand four years of war. How long would the neurotic, strained, under-fed and far from united population of today last? But when one turns to Italy—this terrible Italy which is going to turn France and Britain out of the Mediterranean, control Spain and take Egypt and the whole of French North Africa? At the best of times a poor country, with no iron, no oil, no coal, and an industry no larger than that of former Czechoslovakia, she is under an intolerable strain to maintain the pretensions of a Great Power. But today—she has been under the sacrifice of war for nearly four years, she has used up much of her war equipment and her war energy, she has five armies overseas, in Ethiopia, in Libya, in Spain, in Albania and in the Dodecanese Islands, has 5000 miles of vulnerable coast-line, and with four old battleships and a number of lighter craft she wants to challenge the naval might of Britain! That surely would be midsummer madness. If Mussolini really did go through with it, how long could he hold his people behind him, and how long would Italy last?

Germany and Italy, because they are permanently mobilized, would be stronger than Britain and France at the beginning of a war and could make things very serious for a while. But the dictatorships' very nature would force them to take and keep the offensive, and their strength would rapidly drain away under its terrific cost. The experience of the Great War and these Chinese and Spanish Wars makes it impossible to believe in a "quick victory" for the attackers. The aerial "knockout blow" was thoroughly tried out on almost defenceless Barcelona during three terrible days of March last year; it killed only 1300 out of 2,000,000 people, the street cars and movies were still running when it was over, and the city held out for another whole year before surrendering.

The submarine menace was played out in the last war. Threatening Britain's very life in the Spring of 1917 it was so brought under control by the convoy system, the camouflaged "Q-boats", and the depth charge dropped by destroyers and aeroplanes, and the deep mine barrage, that long before the end of the War the roles had been completely reversed and it was the submarines who were the hunted and their crews who were demoralized. This time Britain is ready for the submarine, and the Under-Secretary of the Admiralty was not boasting when he told the Commons lately that Britain's methods of hunting, detecting and "killing" submarines are the most advanced in the world and would catch the underseas prowler in nine cases out of ten.

The final threat in the "lightning war" is the sweeping thrust of a mechanized army. But this is no more new than the submarine menace. Massed attacks using hundreds of tanks were tried in the world war, but gained no more than five or ten miles a day. When the Italians sought to increase this to 30 or 40 miles a day in the Spanish War they quickly came to grief; afterwards they clung to Great War practice, and their final powerful offensive against the weary, hungry and ill-supplied Catalonian Army during last December and January only gained 20 miles a week. That is hardly the speed of lightning. Would a German or German-Italian tank attack advance even that fast against the redoubtable defences of up-ended steel rails, camouflaged pits, slimy fields, landmines and concrete blockhouses manned with modern armor-piercing anti-tank rifles which the French have prepared?

Winston Churchill, who had the job of supplying the British forces in 1917-18 shows in his "World Crisis" how armies of hundreds of tanks melted away in a few days of attack to a bare couple of dozen, and how the British air force had to be almost completely replaced every month of 1918. If Germany and Italy gambled all their forces on a lightning blow and it failed, as it surely would, where would they get the materials with which to continue the struggle? They would be blockaded at sea from the very beginning by an Anglo-French naval power four times as great as theirs. Nor is it to be thought that because they have succeeded in cowing most of the Danubian nations they can find sufficient supplies here in war-time. The region only offers oil, bauxite (for aluminum) and food in any quantity, and in lieu of proper payment the Axis Powers would have to conquer and garrison the whole territory and squeeze out these materials by force. Germany ought to remember her vain attempt to do this in the Ukraine in 1918. But Germany doesn't seem to have any memory.

Our Best Friend -- Mother

We can never be too nice to those in the family circle. We never know when the call will come for any one of them through accident or sickness. It makes for a happier heart and home to "play safe" with that tongue that will get unruly at times, but of all members of the family group, to most of us, Mother is the biggest problem. She really is quite hard to manage, and can put the brakes on the wheels of progress in a most annoying way. Just when we are all ready to go out in the morning, hoping to have a chat with the girls before school goes in, piano practice done, room tidy, books packed up,Mother is sure to wander upstairs and notice that the pajamas are not hung up and there is hair in the comb. Back we have to go. Why Mother could not hang up those pajamas and clean out the comb and say nothing about it we can't just see. But Mother tells us that would not be good training and we will not be so apt to forget again. She goes on to suppose we were visiting and left hair in the comb, she would be disgraced, but of course if we were visiting we would not do that.

Then when we are thoroughly enjoying our dinner, one arm slouched over the table and quite probably one foot under us, suddenly we notice that the butter is so handy that we can just slip our own knife in and nobody will notice. We do want to get through quickly and finish that story that we started yesterday. Just at that minute mother is sure to turn her head, and announce quietly that the butter knife is on the table, and plead with us to sit up straight. It does not only look careless, she assures us, but it is very bad for the lungs to cramp them up.

Even though we find Mother very trying at times, we forget it all when we come home from school and find our white middy all freshly washed and ironed for the game in the afternoon, or the cake and fudge laid out ready on the pantry shelf for the girls' club, or the party dress with the needed renovations laid out on our bed. We hug her tight and resolve to give her another chance. She smiles and tells us she really didn't mean to be so impatient over our misdemeanors, but we can't have two sets of manners, one for home and one for company, for they are sure to get mixed up at the most inopportune times.

Through childhood and girlhood and young womanhood, she is the one that will go through more for us, will make greater sacrifices for our comfort and pleasure than will any other friend on earth. And for those of us who are privileged to have her in later life, we find her the same helpful friend, always anxious to do something to help us with our children, a little sewing, some extra baking when we are busy, always willing to mind the baby and relieve us for a little while. Small wonder, then, that when somebody suggested a Day in May in her honor that the world fell in line and has kept in line with wonderful tenacity of purpose. Then here's to Mother, Long may she live!

CONTEST DEVISED TO DISCOVER TYPICAL CANADIAN MENU

Nothing in years has so stirred public interest as the anticipated visit to Canada of Their Majesties, the King and Queen. Not a town or hamlet but is agog with excitement! Souvenirs of all kinds are being planned to commemorate the occasion. One of the most interesting ideas that has been arranged in this connection is the Royal Menu-Planning Contest which is being sponsored by Robin Hood Flour Mills Limited.

In order to stimulate interest in what would comprise a typical Canadian menu, if an average Canadian family were to be invited to entertain Their Majesties for supper, the Robin Hood Flour Mills are offering a generous list of prizes to discover what Canadian women consider to be menus representative of this country.

It would no doubt be a very interesting experience for Her Majesty if she could step into an ordinary home and take supper informally with the family, just as Queen Victoria was wont to visit cotter's homes in the Highlands. At any rate, what constitutes Canadian menus should provide pleasant discussion among the housewives of the community, and should bring to light valuable information on menu possibilities. Cash prizes totalling $1,000.00 are being donated. Besides a $200.00 cash prize, the first prize winner will receive a suitably engraved, handsome, sterling silver cup. Information on how to enter this contest will be found elsewhere in this paper.

The ladies of Huntingdon United Church Sunday School provided and served a very appetizing dinner to all present for which a vote of thanks was tendered by Rev. E. H. Gray, D.D., of Howick seconded by Rev. T. F. Duncan of Franklin and unanimously sustained.

TIMELY FIRE

Just as Jennings Neely, fire insurance salesman of Rock Hill, S.C., had turned away from the home of a prospect without selling a policy, he saw flames break through the roof of a neighboring house. Back went Neely to his prospect and impressed upon him what might happen to his home any day or night. He sold a policy in less time than it takes to tell it.

Stayner, Ont. Mar. 7th 1939
Dear Sirs:
A few minutes ago I completed a conversation with a customer in Quebec City. The service was so wonderful, I cannot help writing a word in praise.
It happened like this (and almost as quick as the writing of it):—Called Central here.
She called Barrie Long Distance and gave the number.
The Barrie Operator called Montreal.
And Montreal got Quebec.
All this while I held the line, I was speaking to the party in about fifteen seconds; much quicker than some local calls. After using many other means of communication once or twice daily for some little time now, I have never before appreciated the convenience of this service at such a little cost, viz., $1.30. Often before I have paid more than this with three or four hours waiting for replies, whereas this call did the whole works at the one jump.
Hope this doesn't make you mad.
Yours truly,
J. J. Gartlan
No, Mr. Gartlan, we are not mad. Though your estimate of the elapsed time may be somewhat optimistic, we are proud of your letter — and of the organization which merits your warm approval.

On Easter day in 1851, Mrs. Clarissa Barb dyed an egg, boiling it in onion peel, and her husband, Jonathen, scratched designs on it with his penknife. This egg, kept in the family ever since, is brought out every Easter day for inspection. This year, it was shown to visitors by Mrs. Ersil Stewart, 88, of Linton, Ind., granddaughter of Mrs. Barb. Residents of Quebec Seem More Fearful. .

was made into Italy. An attempt was made to go into Spain but this was not possible because of the war going on there at the time. A British passport was carried which made entry to most places considerably easier than if a British passport were not carried. But despite this fact, the passport would not allow entry into Spain.

The most beautiful country passed through was that in the Southern part of France which was described as a veritable picture. Amongst the centres visited were such well-known places as Marseilles, Cannes, Nice, Monte Carlo and Monaco. A brilliant sun shone in sunny southern France and everybody seemed to have a smile on their faces. Roger was inclined to wonder if this continual sunshine had not something to do with the people continually wearing a smile. The coloring of the trees and vegetation made the whole countryside a veritable fairyland. The houses themselves were painted delicate pastel shades—pale blue, pale green and pink. The deep blue of the Mediterranean Sea and the gorgeously and peculiarly colored red rocks that bordered the water's edge made a setting which for beauty and soothingness it was difficult to surpass anywhere. At Nice there were orange trees with big luscious oranges on the trees. These grew on the streets as common as other trees grow on our streets. Magnificent and stately palm trees also added to the picturesqueness of the whole setting.

Diversity of Climate

Roger was particularly impressed with the diversity of seasonable sport right in the same district. At Esterel one could go up into the mountains, remove practically your clothing, and enjoy skiing in the snow-clad mountains, getting a beautiful tan at the same time. By jumping into a car you could, within the course of half an hour, be at the seaside at the bottom of the mountain enjoying a good swim or enjoying a good sun tanning on the water's edge.

When a short visit of half an hour was made into Italy, Roger thought it would be nice to take a photo of Mussolini's famous soldiers and when proceeding to do so was informed that it was quite against the regulations of the country. He was told that if he took a picture of the soldiers that the film would be immediately taken from him and destroyed. After a few remarks along that line from officials, Roger was completely of the opinion that a photo was simply NOT to be taken. So, instead, a glass or so of good Italian wine was enjoyed, a few post cards were mailed from Italy to friends back home in Quebec and then farewell was said to the Northern part of sunny Italy. Roger noted that entry to Italy was gained with considerable difficulty. The rank and file of Frenchmen were simply not allowed in. Only when it was learned they were people of means and were on a touring trip through the country and intended to spend money would they be allowed to come in. Roger stated that it was because he carried a British passport that he gained access to the country for half an hour so easily.

Class Difference in France

France is a nice country to live in provided that you have plenty of money, said Roger. I prefer to live in Canada because there is so much more opportunity to get ahead. Everything is comparatively expensive. But then, many people do not try to make a lot of money in a short time like they try to do in Canada. Over there many people are quite content to make just a living. These are the middle class. The upper class who have money or make much money can really enjoy life in a most beautiful country. Gasoline is sold at a rather high price. In Quebec they are kicking on the extra two cent tax on gasoline this year, making the price 26 cents a gallon. In France, they have to pay about 60 cents a gallon for gasoline.

The class distinction in France was not looked on with much favour by the visitors. Even in the buses in the streets of Paris there are quarters for first class and for second class passengers. There's a little too much snobbishness there as compared with Canada, it was thought. One can not help but notice a difference between the rich people and the poor people. It is evident as to their dress, their conduct and their whole general impression.

Thinks Canada the North Pole

In conversation with different people in France, Roger learned that Canada was looked upon as a land with a desirable amount of opportunity. At the same time, however, they think it is, as the English poet Kipling said of it, "Our Lady of the Snows." Only those very few Frenchmen who have made a visit to Canada and know otherwise realize that it is not a cold, cold country just below the North Pole. They know that the belief held by many in France is not so—that partically every one in Canada is either an Indian or a trapper. When pictures were shown to some people in France of skyscrapers in Montreal they looked aghast and could hardly believe that such high buildings were to be found in Canada—only one story buildings or maybe, wigwams, were to be found.

Many people in France regard Canadian people as too much like Americans—always in a hurry to go some place and when they get there they are not satisfied. People on this side of the Atlantic do not know how to really live like the people in the European countries. In Paris, for example, people take off two hours for lunch at noon. All the stores are closed. Everybody goes home to relax, eat, drink and enjoy life. Thus, they come back to work quite refreshed and with a feeling that they are really living as they go along and not rushing through life as they do in America. They do work, however, one hour later in the afternoon than is done in America. Where employees would work to six o'clock in the evening in America the same would work to seven o'clock in the evening in France. Or, if they quit at five here it would mean quitting at six o'clock in France. The theatres open up at nine o'clock at night instead of the usual seven o'clock or eight o'clock on this side of the Atlantic.

600 Jewish Refugees

On the return voyage to America there were on board 600 Jewish refugees. They were clearing out of Germany, Austria and those countries where their presence was anything but desirable. All of them were well dressed and from their manners and dress it was apparent they were people of culture and had been people of means. When they left Germany, however, they were prevented from taking with them any of the money they had made in the country. On their arrival in America they were to be met by relatives who had made sufficient money that they had shown their willingness to look after their less fortunate brethren on the European side of the Atlantic. These refugees in conversation with anyone always took care not to mention the fact that they were Jews and even would go so far as to deny it if they were questioned.

It was a great trip all round and Mr. and Mrs. Roger Turcq will not soon forget their many interesting experiences and the many sights they saw in his native France.

The little old gray woman bent over the cherub in the cradle.

"O-o. You look so sweet, I could eat you."

Baby—The heck you could, you don't have any teeth.

Anticipate Active Meeting of Local Softball Supporters

Directors Call Second Meeting in Hope of Getting Softball Underway With Shortest Possible Delay—Orderly Meeting Anticipated

All is quiet on the Western Front! Or should it be said that all is dead in the softball world in Huntingdon? The latter seems to suit to perfection. Rumors are still circulating around town about the result of the meeting held a few days ago, but, nevertheless, all interested seem to be looking forward to the next meeting of the Huntingdon softball organization. Some players have started to "warm-up" while others would rather wait until the next meeting which will be held on Thursday evening. At this meeting much action is anticipated! Crabbers will be "fixed", it is hoped, balkers (no extra base allowed) will be fed, and temperamental stars will be properly handled, so that justice will be given to one and all.

The ideal warm weather which prevailed over the week-end and on Monday and Tuesday as well, prompted several prospective players to throw 'the ball around' and get into shape for the summer games. On Monday evening more than twenty softball players met at the Fair Grounds, batting and catching practices being in evidence throughout the short time this session lasted.

This town is sorely in need of activity for the summer to keep the younger members active after working hours. If the public fails to support these youngsters both in their organization and at the games the players will eventually lose courage and all hopes of witnessing a fascinating sport in "full swing" will be "gone with the wind".

It is hoped that Thursday's meeting will be as orderly as possible... as without order nothing can ever be accomplished.
