Bourassa: Language issue still 'open to discussion'

MONTREAL (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa said Saturday that his government is "open to discussion" on new language legislation and that no final decision on the matter has been made.

Mr. Bourassa said in an interview on radio station CJAD that it is "premature" to comment on published reports that the Quebec cabinet is considering plans to amend 1969 language legislation.

Under the four-year-old legislation, parents have a free hand in determining their children's language of instruction.

Recent published reports said the Liberal caucus is considering legislation to allow the government to administer exams to public school children to decide whether a student is to be educated in French or English.

Immigrant children who speak neither language would be directed into the French-language school system.

The premier, in his first public statement on the reports, denied that recent leaks to the news media about the proposed legislation were intended to test public opinion.

Spokesmen for the province's English-language community and some immigrant groups have expressed opposition to the proposed legislation because they say it involves a denial of individual free choice.

Trudeau declares he would oppose discriminatory law

MONTREAL (CP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said Sunday he would oppose any Quebec language legislation which "refuses to recognize the rights of minorities."

Mr. Trudeau said in an interview on the CBC French-language network he would accept a unilingual French Quebec only in the same way he accepts a unilingual English Ontario or British Columbia.

English is almost exclusively the working language in these provinces, but the right to speak French is guaranteed, he said.

The prime minister said he supports the Quebec government's efforts to protect the French language, but questions the concept of "cultural sovereignty."

"It all depends what Bourassa means by cultural sovereignty," he said.

"If he means no other power will have jurisdiction over such cultural things as sports, radio, and television, then I can't accept it."

But Mr. Trudeau said he "applauds" the Quebec premier if cultural sovereignty merely means jurisdiction over language.

Nova Scotia's Regan goes to the people

HALIFAX (CP) — Premier Gerald Regan will seek a mandate Tuesday, April 2, to continue his fight against rising fuel prices and the two opposition parties will try to topple the Liberal government by criticizing Nova Scotia's economic performance.

Premier Regan, whose Liberals took office in October, 1970, announced dissolution of the 27th legislature in a statement Saturday.

Standing in the 46-seat house was Liberals 25, Progressive Conservatives 18, New Democratic Party one, vacant one.

NDP Leader Jeremy Akerman and Conservative Leader John Buchanan both said Mr. Regan should have held another session of the legislature before calling an election.

Mr. Regan said the problem of rising fuel costs can only be solved by "long, hard negotiations."

Hearst kidnap drama marks third week

HILLSBOROUGH, Calif. (AP) — Randolph A. Hearst's tense vigil marked its third week today as People in Need (P.I.N.) prepared to distribute more food to the needy, a precondition for the release of his kidnapped daughter.

Donations poured in during the weekend to P.I.N., the organization set up to meet the demands of the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA). It is holding Patricia Hearst, 20, kidnapped Feb. 4 from her Berkeley apartment.

Hearst is president and editor of the San Francisco Examiner and chairman of the Hearst Corp.

Organizers promised that Tuesday's distribution of food from centres in the San Francisco Bay area would be more orderly than it was Friday.

"The response has just been super," said Peggy Maze, P.I.N.'s acting director. "People from all over the country have been sending bread, milk, frozen food, money and love."

SEEK $4 MILLION MORE

The distribution program is funded with $500,000 from Hearst and $1.5 million from the non-profit Hearst Foundation. However, the SLA has demanded $4 million more from Hearst personally.

In response to that demand, Examiner publisher Charles Gould said the Hearst Corp. will put up another $2 million immediately if Miss Hearst is released unharmed and promised $2 million more in January, 1975. The SLA has not responded to that offer, the FBI said.

The first attempt to distribute food Friday to meet the initial demands of the SLA was marred by violence, looting and confusion when thousands jammed four centres. Thirty persons were injured and 35 arrested.

"A great many mistakes were made," said Ludlow Kramer, Washington state secretary, who organized the program. But he said 14,000 persons received food.

Mrs. Maze said the food would be on hand Tuesday when the centres opened, avoiding discontent among waiting crowds, and many more centres may be in operation.

INTERNATIONAL EVENING — Over 100 students representing 35 countries attended an International Evening sponsored by the Overseas Student Services at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Friday night. This group represents several of the many

Murphy abductor believed alone

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — An assistant United States attorney says he has no reason to believe that more than two persons were involved in the kidnapping of Atlanta newspaper editor Reg Murphy.

William Williams, 33, a contractor from nearby Lilburn, and his wife Ruth, 26, are being held in connection with the abduction of Murphy, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, who was released unharmed Friday night.

Assistant U.S. Attorney William Gaffney said: "At this time, I know of no reason to conclude that there were more than two people involved."

Murphy said he was told by Williams that he was part of the American Revolutionary Army, a previously unknown group which Williams claimed had 223 members and six colonels.

Williams and his wife were arrested early Saturday, within hours after Murphy was released. To obtain Murphy's freedom, the newspaper paid a $700,000 ransom. FBI agents said "a voluminous amount of U.S. currency" was found in the Williams home.

MAN APPROACHED

The FBI has not revealed details of the quick arrest. However, a spokesman said Sunday a Miami man told them he was approached in the same way that Murphy was lured from his home the night he was abducted.

Murphy left with a man who said he was trying to arrange for the distribution of 300,000 gallons of fuel oil to the needy. In Miami, taxidermist Charles Becker said Sunday that a man he identified as William Williams approached him last December wanting to sell 300,000 gallons of fuel oil.

Murphy said in an interview it appeared that FBI agents were watching his abductor "drive into his driveway" after picking up the ransom money and releasing Murphy.

Williams, who has been identified by Murphy as his captor, is charged with violating the federal Hobbs Act, which prohibits extortion against a company involved in interstate commerce. He faces a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Mrs. Williams was charged with having knowledge of that violation and not reporting it. Gaffney said she might receive a $500 fine and three years imprisonment.

Bond for Williams was set at $1 million, and that of his wife was put at $500,000.

New Watergate case indictments expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three federal grand juries are on the verge of returning indictments in the Watergate cases, meeting a timetable mentioned previously by special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski.

Already identified as targets of the grand jury investigations are several former high-ranking Nixon administration officials.

Jaworski has said on a number of occasions that the indictments should be returned by the end of February.

Former attorney-general John Mitchell, already on trial in New York on charges arising from a secret $200,000 contribution to President Nixon's reelection campaign, is believed to be a central figure in the Watergate cover-up investigation.

John Wilson, lawyer for former White House aides H.R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, said he would not be surprised if his clients were indicted.

Another possible target is Charles Colson, former White House special counsel and political troubleshooter, who was excused from testifying before the Watergate committee last fall on the grounds he believed he would be indicted.

CO-OPERATION LIKELY
In another Watergate-related development, Edward Hutchinson of Michigan, ranking Republican on the House of Representatives judiciary committee, said he believes the White House will co-operate with the committee's impeachment inquiry.

Also, John Andrews, who resigned in December after four years as a White House speech writer, said Nixon should be impeached for abuse of power and failure to have the Watergate scandal fully aired.

Almost certain to come this week were the findings of the grand jury investigating the Watergate break-in and coverup.

Other investigations nearing completion include campaign contribution cases, campaign dirty tricks, the White House plumbers and the probe of the unrecorded and obliterated subpoenaed tapes.

So far, 29 individuals and nine corporations have been charged in state and federal Watergate cases; 18 individuals, including five defendants in the original Watergate break-in trial, pleaded guilty.

READY TO TALK

Four former administration officials and Nixon campaign aides pleaded guilty and agreed to co-operate with the prosecutors—ousted White House counsel John Dean; Jeb Stuart Magruder, former deputy director of the Nixon re-election committee; Frederick LaRue, a former White House and campaign aide; and Egil Krogh, former head of the plumbers unit.

In addition, Donald Segretti, employed as a political saboteur by the Nixon campaign committee, pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges and agreed to tell the prosecutors all he knew.

Dwight Chapin, former presidential appointments secretary, was indicted on charges of lying to a grand jury about his knowledge of Segretti's activities. He pleaded not guilty and is scheduled to go on trial April 1.

In Britain

Election expected to alter previous pattern

LONDON (Reuters) — The general election next Thursday could disturb the see-saw pattern that has dominated British politics for most of the last 50 years.

For one thing the underdog Liberal party could, if opinion polls are borne out, make its strongest showing since 1945.

Another possibility is that the Labor party, if badly defeated, might splinter.

A second defeat in four years could inspire Labor's moderate right wingers to split from their increasingly influential left wing colleagues and form a new, social democrat-type grouping—perhaps in concert with the Liberals.

In the heat of the present campaign, Labor party internal differences have been set aside, but a decisive defeat, as some polls suggest, might reopen old wounds.

LIBERALS FADED

From the mid-19th century to the First World War, British politics was a duel between Liberals and the Conservatives. More often than not, the Liberals won. But in 1910 the Liberals gained their last outright election victory, under Herbert Asquith.

From 1915, they were involved in a series of uneasy coalitions until, in 1922, Labor took over as the second most powerful party in Parliament.

Now, opinion polls indicate the Liberals could win 25 or more seats in the 635-member House of Commons. This is more than they have secured at any time since the Second World War.

If the election brings a neck-and-neck finish between Conservatives and Labor, such a Liberal bloc could hold a powerful balance in Parliament.

The latest opinion poll gave the Liberals an unexpected 28 per cent of the popular vote, compared with 31.5 for Labor and 38.5 for the Conservatives. This shocked leaders of the two major parties into turning some of their big guns on the third party and its leader, Jeremy Thorpe.

The poll figures, if borne out in the actual voting, could give the Liberals, who held 11 seats in the last Parliament, as many as 70 in the new one, although 20-25 is a more widely accepted figure.

Islamic leaders pledge to free Jerusalem, Arab lands

LAHORE, Pakistan (AP) — Leaders of the world's Islamic nations have declared that Arab recovery of the Old City of Jerusalem is "a paramount and unchanging prerequisite for lasting peace in the Middle East."

They pledged "all means available" to the recovery of occupied Arab lands, and termed the return of "full national rights of the Palestinian peoples" as the "essential and fundamental condition" for peace in the Middle East.

The statements were in the Declaration of Lahore, issued Sunday at the end of a three-day summit by the leaders of 37 Moslem nations and of the Palestinian Liberation Organization. "No agreement, protocol or understanding which postulates the continuance of Israeli occupation of the Holy City of Jerusalem or its transfer to any non-Arab sovereignty or makes it the subject of bargaining or concessions will be acceptable to the Islamic countries," the Moslem leaders said.

But the final statement did not go as far as a resolution passed Saturday which condemned the United States by name for its support of Israel.

The conference set up an eight-nation committee to prepare plans for co-operation to ease the economic problems of poor Islamic states and to battle "exploitation" by developed states.

Among the committee's goals were "the eradication of poverty, disease and ignorance from the Islamic countries" and "mitigating the current economic difficulties of the developing countries due to recent increase in prices."

The reference to prices was in response to statements at the opening of the conference calling on oil-rich states to assist the other Islamic countries suffering from the soaring prices the producers are charging for their oil.

The conference agenda had originally included only the Middle East situation, the plight of the Palestinians and Jerusalem. But in his opening speech, the conference chairman, Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto of Pakistan, suggested that oil-producing nations should share their revenue. The theme was repeated by two presidents of Arab oil countries, Houari Boumediene of Algeria and Moammar Khadafy of Libya.

MANSONVILLE - A Torch Parade of 30 skiers and 50 snowmobilers came down Owl's Head Mountain side, each skier carrying a red torch flare and a snowmobile driver by a member of the Nite Rider's Club, flanked on each side of the skiers with its white lights on, giving a festive effect.

The occurrence was on Sat. evening Feb. 16, the second year of this type of happening to be held by the club at the Owl's Head Ski Chalet.

The drivers of the snowmobiles are to be commended for their excellent skills in manipulating their machines down the steep incline. Approximately 350 people from near and far gathered for this breath-taking event after which everyone enjoyed the big carnival dance to the continuous music of The Hitch Hikers.

The following door prizes were given:

A sweater donated by Ducharme Garage to Miss Sandra Heath; a pair of Snowmobile mittens by one of the Nite Rider Directors, Pierre Giroux, to Wayne Clark, and a coaster seat by Garage Marcoux to Arnold Guilbeault. Raffles were made as follows: Miss Carnival 74 (Joanne Parent) and the Princesses from the Queen's bounty. $30 to Miss Mansonville Hotel, Francoise Ducharme; and four cases of beer by the Nite Riders Club, to Mrs. Dolores Champagne and Messrs Marcel Marcoux, Marcel Carrier and Arnold Guilbeault.

Last year's trade and payments deficit substantially lower

OTTAWA (CP) - A healthy jump in sales of Canadian goods to countries other than the United States helped cut the 1973 trade and payments deficit to almost half the 1972 level, a recent report from Statistics Canada showed.

A preliminary report of foreign trade and balance of payments showed a deficit of $331 million for 1973 compared with a $623-million deficit for 1972.

Canada had sizable trade surpluses for both years but these were more than offset by deficits in the non-trade area, which includes such items as interest and dividend payments, tourist spending and freight costs.

A major portion of the jump in offshore sales—Japan and several European countries rank after the U.S. in foreign trading—came during the fourth quarter.

"There are indications that the largest relative increases in merchandise exports occurred in trade with Japan and with the United Kingdom, with moderate growth rates of exports to the United States and the European Economic Community—excluding the United Kingdom," the Statistics Canada report said.

The gain in offshore sales left the combined total of trade and payments almost in balance for the fourth quarter as the quarterly deficit was a modest $15 million, not adjusted for seasonal variations.

70 PER CENT TO U.S.
The preliminary report listed foreign sales for 1973 at a total of $25.373 billion, of which $17.202 billion were to the U.S. Imports were valued at $23.258 billion and $16.403 billion of the total came from the U.S.

The trade surplus was $2.115 billion, up from a surplus of $1.608 billion during 1972. The surplus in trade with the U.S. dropped to $799 million from $1.235 billion while the surplus in trade with other countries went to $1.316 billion from $373 million.

During the fourth quarter the trade surplus was $679 million and the surplus in trade with countries other than the U.S. was $559 million.

Exports during the fourth quarter were valued at $7.238 billion against imports worth $6.559 billion.

The agency report says that on a commodity basis "important increases occurred in shipments of wheat, lumber, crude petroleum, copper, wood pulp, automotive products, nickel and fabricated iron and steel."

The increases in sales were partly due to higher prices.

The balance of payments deficit during 1973 was $2.446 billion compared with a $2.231-billion deficit during 1972. The 1973 deficit resulted from a cash outflow of $8.361 billion and an inflow of $5.915 billion.

Payments going to the U.S. during 1973 totalled $5.256 billion and receipts $3.268 billion, for a deficit of $1.988 billion. The payments deficit with the U.S. during 1972 was $1.654 billion.

TRAVEL COSTS MORE
"The upsurge in payments reflected increases recorded in all the service items, the largest being in travel expenditures abroad and in interest and dividend payments. There was a drop in unilateral transfers abroad which resulted from lower official contributions and outflows of emigrants' funds," Statistics Canada said.

The Statistics Canada report included revised figures for previous quarters, incorporating later information on trade and funds brought in by immigrants.

Capital account transactions during the fourth quarter produced a net inflow of about $63 million, the report said.

"From the limited information on capital transactions currently available, it appears new issues of Canadian securities sold abroad increased by some $100 million from the previous quarter level to over $350 million. These inflows were augmented by sizable net sales of Canadian outstanding securities to non-residents. Retirements of Canadian securities led to an outflow of almost $150 million.

"On the short-term side, transactions of the Canadian chartered banks with non-residents in foreign currency assets and liabilities resulted in a net outflow of about $200 million. There appears to have been a net inflow as Canadian nonbanks reduced their holdings of foreign currencies in overseas banks."

For all of 1973 there was a capital account deficit of $136 million compared with a surplus of $842 million for 1972.

Public works department employees end their strike

Reflects on 16 months in office

Grafftey slams Liberal-NDP coalition

By CROSBIE COTTON

SHERBROOKE — The municipal public works department employees were all expected to be back on the job this morning.

Some of the men returned to their posts over the weekend but the majority were only on the job today. The men, who had been on strike since last Tuesday, voted in favor of returning to work Friday.

The strikers decided to accept a proposal ground out by the city and union during a four-hour meeting Thursday.

Although the Friday meeting was closed to the press, union president Philippe Lavoie said that the men voted 160 to 71 in favor of returning to work. The vote came at the end of a 3½-hour session at the Christ de Roi Church Hall on Aberdeen street.

The compromise proposal had been presented by government-appointed conciliator Paul Desharnais.

Under the terms of the contract the public works department employees will receive two $0.40 an hour raises during the two-year contract. The first raise will be retroactive to January 1, 1974 and the second will come during the second week of September, 1974.

City officials expressed elation when they learned the strike was over. "We are all really happy," Sherbrooke city manager Richard Fabi said.

Union leader Philippe Lavoie said after the settlement that "the men had had enough." Only a few cents separated the two groups when the settlement was worked out Thursday.

The vote ended the first strike in the history of the municipal public works department. The more than 350 employees had voted 81 per cent in favor of strike action early Tuesday morning.

The employees, who look after the maintenance of all municipal buildings, waterworks and sewage networks, park arenas, snow removal and garbage collection as well as municipal construction and roadworks are fairly satisfied with the agreement. The new contract will mean an approximate $0.45 an hour increase per year.

Friday's meeting was accentuated by ardent and at times heated debate. But in the end the majority ruled.

The end came as a blessing to local residents faced with a snow and freezing rain storm which crippled traffic in the city. The municipal buses were pulled off the roads early Friday.

A settlement was well assured following the injunction granted the city by Superior Court Judge Carrier Fortin last Wednesday. The injunction prevented the strikers from blocking access to buildings or from stopping other municipal crews from undertaking their work.

Since most of the equipment and manpower used for snow clearing operations in the city is leased from private industry, the strikers couldn't prevent snow clearing operations. That operation was to have been one of the strikers' more potent weapons.

As the men return to their posts they face a backlog of work. A week's garbage will have to be cleaned up and a full snow removal operation undertaken. Parks will be re-opened and ice in the indoor arenas remade.

KNOWLTON-BROME LAKE — Howard Grafftey, MP Brome-Missisquoi, reflected on his almost 16 months in office since the last federal election, and foresaw dire consequences for the Canadian populace.

Mr. Grafftey said the Liberal-NDP Socialistic group were the fomenters of abuses in several areas, and the one facing his electors stemmed primarily from within the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

"The UIC is costing the taxpayers $1 billion annually under Robert Andras, when 10 years ago there was a surplus of $100 million credited to the Canadian working man. If current estimates prove true we will be indebted for $2 billion annually in the immediate future."

"Under the existing coalition government it is impossible to determine whether they are running an unemployment insurance commission or a welfare office."

"Prior to the Pearson government the Unemployment Commission worked hand in hand with placement officers. This is a thing of the past and the red tape involved in inter-governmental department is a bureaucrats dream. To be really effective there should be a UIC representative in every Manpower office."

"Under the present system there is no way of determining whether a person is available for work, a computer can only read what is fed into it."

"The abuses in my constituency have become more apparent, increasingly so since the inception of the separation of the two departments."

"This is not the worst abuse. In my opinion it was the inception of policing of claims by the department, often done at random and with the recipient having little recourse."

"How by all that's holy can a computer determine whether a person is available for work or not?"

"This across-country cutting of benefits to those who really qualify is another example of the ineptness of the government, especially when they cut funds to persons who are really seeking employment."

"I honestly feel there are very few persons who are really cheating the UIC. (Mr. Grafftey indicated there might be more on welfare rolls than with the UIC.)"

"The only way we are going to arrive at a true solution to the unemployment problem is when placement officers from the UIC are available at all Manpower centres. Not only would that be more effective, it would also lessen a communications gap between the two departments."

"When I see David Lewis approached by all those who want legislation approved, I wonder just who or whom is running the government."

On the topic of regional development, Mr. Grafftey indicated he had been in favor of such planning for more than 12 years.

"One only has to look at the old county of Missisquoi where strides were made. Today we are cut off from most federal aid, and this after Cowansville, Farnham and Bedford taxpayers laid out well over $1 million in local taxes to lay the groundwork."

"The original conception of Confederation was equality from coast to coast. Another less to the liberal-socialist doctrine."

"In effect the work of Tom Kent of the Manpower Department, a graduate of the London School of Economics, has added to the costs of free enterprise due to handouts without reason, and has certainly been detrimental to our region."

On his third, and possibly favorite topic, Mr. Grafftey lashed out at Medicare.

"When I was first elected the situation was terrible. This was especially true of anyone with a low income who was suddenly injured and without private hospital insurance."

"Since then the problem is far from being resolved, and it is especially prejudicial in small towns. Let's get this straight, I'm not slamming doctors! They, and reasonably so, want to practise near hospitals."

"Where are the services promised by the governments concerned?"

"How does a low income elderly person arrange for transportation?"

"Where are the general purpose nurses who were supposed to be part of the overall scheme?"

"I feel we are paying for services which do not exist, a mixture of free enterprise and a socialistic imposition of tax money. In practise it is not a state-owned service, rather than one that is state funded."

"When I reflect on this I wonder how the electors of Quebec really feel about the government since the last election. They voted Liberal, yet today everything has to be cleared through David Lewis."

"That strikes me as funny. After all the NDP didn't elect one member in Quebec."

McGrory leaving Bishop's

LENNOXVILLE (MI) — Barry McGrory, Bishop's University chaplain, plans to return to his parish in Ottawa at the end of the current school year.

Father McGrory told The Record in a recent interview that he much prefers the parish work from which he was loaned for a three-year stay at the university. He explained that the university community is far more transient, noting that students have stronger ties with their families than they have with their peers in Lennoxville.

"It's a bad thing when one is in contact with one's peers," he reflected. "I prefer the more natural community which groups people of all ages, from children to grandparents."

Father McGrory rued the fact that he has not had more contact with persons not connected with the university. He contended, however, that such a situation is easily understood.

"It's generally accepted among pastoral workers that the normal period for a person to move into a strange community is three years. By that, I mean that it takes about three years for one to begin to know people and begin to be known by them," he elaborated.

On the Bishop's campus, Father McGrory has felt his main role to be one of a presence to which persons might turn at their own initiative. In his Ottawa parish, he pointed out, he has contacts with persons whom he has encountered during the course of his life. Consequently, he is more confident that he can be of assistance to the people there, he asserted.

Bishop's library to undergo changes

By MICHAEL ISAACS

Record Reporter

LENNOXVILLE — Bishop's University's library is changing its book classification system from the Dewey decimal to that of the library of congress.

According to the university librarian, G. Belisle, there are several advantages to be gained from such a change. Above all, the new system will cut down from an average of six months to about two months the time from requests for books to the time the books are actually on the shelves, Mr. Belisle said in a recent interview.

This improvement will be the product of a computerized cataloguing system through which Quebec universities will share their work. Instead of permitting themselves to catalogue the same title in several libraries, he contended, a record of each book's classification will be available through computer terminals.

Mr. Belisle suggested that the libraries might also establish connection with the library of congress computer bank through such terminals.

He predicted that the change-over from the Dewey decimal system will take at least three years, provided the library is granted additional money by the university's corporation for that purpose. There are some 70,000 titles to be reclassified, the librarian noted.

At present, the library is classifying all new acquisitions under the library of congress system. New books are drawn primarily from sciences, social sciences and religion topics, he claimed.

With regard to the recataloguing of present holdings, he said the first priorities will be the reference section and the periodicals. Following reclassification of these, history and literature sections will be recatalogued.

Mr. Belisle remarked that the library currently is based on the 16th edition of the Dewey system, whereas that system is now in its 19th edition. The result is that several new countries and new bodies of knowledge are not reserved places in Bishop's 1948 edition. He pointed out that a similar problem will not arise with the library of congress system since there is a constant upkeep of that system.

Among the projects which he has in mind, Mr. Belisle listed the renovation of the reference room in order to muffle noise; the establishment of four seminar rooms within the building; rearrangement of shelving and study spaces; and the renovation of the stackroom for special holdings, such as the Eastern Townships collection.

"The present total of 150,000 volumes, if well-chosen, would enable Bishop's to have a very good working library," he contended. "What we will try to do now is to replace the little-used books by more useful holdings."

In this line, he elaborated, a proposal recommending the establishment of a central library holding all little-used acquisitions and serving the entire province has emanated from a sub-committee of the Conference of Rectors and Principals of Quebec Universities. Such a service would, he felt, enable individual university libraries to conserve space.

Mr. Belisle was worried, however, that Bishop's may use up all its space within 10 years, should the central system not be established. He predicted that the current annual acquisition of 20,000 new volumes could bring about space difficulties within as few as five years.

The librarian was confident that the problem of book thefts had been greatly offset by the presence of an individual checking bags at the door. Last year, more than $10,000 was stolen from the library.

The university is considering, however, the feasibility of installing an electronic checking device to do the work of the guard. A decision about the device will be made following the inventory to be taken during the summer.

"One advantage of such a device would be that persons would not feel their privacy invaded to the same degree as when someone checks through their personal belongings," Mr. Belisle remarked.

Playing cards continue to provide pleasure

By JOYCE HIBBERT

Among the survivors of ancient games and pastimes, the inexpensive pack of cards continues to provide pleasure to millions. Cards had their beginnings in the Orient and were modified into their present form via Europe and England.

The markings on modern playing cards originally represented the classes of men. The King, of course, heads the pack, followed by the Queen and Knave. Knave, now more commonly referred to as Jack, was from the German word knab, used in the older sense to denote servant or attendant to knights.

Hearts represented gens de coeur, the chormen or ecclesiastics. The Spanish word espana, denoting nobility and warriors of the state, was corrupted into spade by the English. Clubs were originally trefoil leaves signifying the peasantry. Diamonds represented merchants and citizens.

Children often become acquainted with cards when they inherit a well-used pack and begin by building a fragile house of cards. From there it's a short route to snap, crazy eights and patience. As youngsters most of us were delighted when a visitor could do a few modest card tricks and magicians always had more sophisticated puzzlers to intrigue an audience.

Today, television performers calling themselves mentalists, often produce a pack of cards and manipulate them faster than the viewer can detect. Or at least that is what the uninitiated surmises they do!

Modern-type playing cards were invented in France in the mid-fifteenth century. One wonders whether the explorers heading for the New World carried some in order to while away the more tedious miles of travel.

Card games are played any time and in any season. The handy compact piece of leisure time equipment is so much more convenient to carry than the larger containers of games like Monopoly or Scrabble. Workers may play a few hands during lunch break.

People travelling by train, plane or bus may be seen relieving monotony by the same method. Community card parties are used as an enjoyable means of raising funds by an assortment of groups. Bridge, whist, 500 and canasta are favorites at such gatherings and top scorers receive a modest prize.

There are serious card players and there are casual card players. Some folk take their bridge very seriously indeed.

They develop considerable skill and expect a comparable knowledge of the game from partners and opponents. Others treat their bridge games more as social get-togethers and don't bother to study Goren or Karpin.

Cribbage is another popular card game. It was known as long ago as the early 17th century and provides instant quiet pleasure for two, three or four players.

Home card parties are a good way for friends and relatives to pass an evening and punctuate the long Canadian winters. The atmosphere is relaxed and convivial when the stress is on entertainment rather than high stakes.

During fun games, snatches of gossip can be exchanged or players may set the world to rights as they win or lose. They may decide to chew over Bell Canada's latest request for higher rates or whether Hydro-Quebec gives value for money. At the same time they'll be raising bids, taking tricks or drawing rotten hands.

It is sometimes advisable for married couples or sibling rivals to be separated while around the card tables. Jealousy, ineptitude or periscope necks may cause ill-controlled friction between them — usually short-lived.

On the other hand, outright criticism is less likely between friends. A regular feature and a distinct plus at most public and private card parties is the tempting assortment of refreshments served.

Through the years playing cards have been labelled agents of the devil by certain religious sects. Samuel Pepys, in his diary dated 17th February 1667, reports that on Sabbath evenings he found the Queen, the Duchesse of York and another or two, at cards, with rooms full of ladies and great men.

Just as the playing cards originally represented people from potentates to peasants, so they have found their way into the hands and homes of all classes and show no signs of losing their popularity.

The bill comes in

The present situation in Britain recalls and, in large measure, confirms what the late Sir Ernest Benn, the distinguished economist, industrialist and philanthropist, predicted just 50 years ago: "When the history of this period comes to be written we shall be described as a generation which gave up work and took to politics; which laid down its tools and sat on committees; and which attempted the interesting experiment, that did not succeed, of leaving the work to its grandparents and the bill to its grandchildren."

In the following half-century many things happened in Britain — the Great Depression, the Second World War, heroic victory, the loss of an empire, a bloodless social revolution, economic recovery and the highest living standard that the nation had ever known. Yet Sir Ernest's warning is still valid nonetheless. For the simple fact today is that Britain has exaggerated and overstrained its prosperity, tried to consume more than it produces and lived beyond its means, as demonstrated by its frightening trade deficits.

The primary issue of the election, the test of the democratic process, is whether Britain shall be governed by its elected government or by one group of society; whether the laws of Parliament shall be enforced. However the political question is answered, the basic economic question posed by Sir Ernest will remain — whether the nation is ready to produce as much as it consumes.

Actually, it is more a human than an economic question. Britain, like more fortunate countries, including Canada, must decide whether it wants an easier, poorer life in terms of consumer goods, a harder life in terms of work and a rich life in terms of consumption. It cannot have both in a world of brutal, increasing competition, and increasing scarcity as well. Nor can any people.

As it happens, the election centres on the wages of the coal miners at a critical time when fuel is short everywhere. But the coal industry is only the immediate focus of the economy. If the government had bought off the miners' strike by a totally uneconomic wage increase it would have been compelled to grant similar increases in other industries and abandon its whole plan to save Britain from inflationary ruin.

While that obvious fact is pretty well understood in Canada, another fact is not — that during the last year the government's policy of restraining the wage cost of production has been a remarkable success. On average, productivity, or output per man-hour of work, has kept abreast of rising money wages. The rise in domestic prices has resulted almost entirely from the rise in the uncontrollable cost of imports, or what economists call the unfavorable terms of trade.

If the net cost of production at home is allowed to rise without serious restraint, along with import prices, Britain will suffer a kind of double inflation which must wreak terrible damage on its living standard and, if it goes far enough, as The Economist warns, will threaten the democratic process itself (and not only in Britain).

If, though it seems unlikely, the Heath government is defeated and succeeded by a Wilson government the fundamental economic issue will not go away. A government which surrenders in the coal strike will have to surrender in other industries and then find itself facing the same issue throughout the whole economy, in a worse and more dangerous form.

No government, whatever the politicians say in the rhetoric of an election campaign, can finally avoid the choice between curbing inflation or letting it destroy Britain's prosperity. On that choice the leading London newspapers, usually diverse in opinion, are agreed. The Guardian, The Times, The Daily Telegraph, The Financial Times and The Daily Mail — a wide spectrum — all say that any government must maintain an incomes policy of some sort because the alternative is quick and certain disaster.

As Sir Ernest predicted in 1924, no nation can long continue to give up work and take to politics, lay down its tools and sit on committees, leave the toil to its grandparents and the bill to its grandchildren. In Britain, and elsewhere, the bill must now be paid.

Opinion from the French-language press

This is a selection of editorials on current topics, translated from the French-language press of Canada.

Ottawa Le Droit: We have both admired and disparaged the stoicism which allows the British to meet the toughest tests while retaining their calm and sense of balance. To keep a cool head in the face of danger is a form of courage.

The British people have needed a large dose of courage to meet the crisis raging in their country.

While calling a general election, the Conservative government does not propose a solution to the problem of the coal miners, but it is responding to the people's wish. The vote Feb. 28 will decide who governs Britain: the majority of voters or the leaders of the miners' strike.

Whatever justification the strike action may have, the ills accruing to the country are incalculable. The wage demands of the miners coincide with a big increase in the cost of living, gasoline rationing in the middle of winter and a large trade deficit.

One thing is sure—the coal-mine crisis cannot last. Britain gets 80 per cent of its energy from coal. To avoid a shortage of coal paralysing the industrial activity of the nation and throwing millions of workers into the streets, Prime Minister Edward Heath has asked the miners to put off their strike to the end of the month.

For their dirty underground work the miners get from $37 to $95 a week. They are asking for an immediate increase of 30 per cent. The government is offering them 16 per cent, saying it cannot afford more while carrying a large budgetary deficit.

In such a setting, the election campaign will be bitter and its outcome unpredictable. Both sides show themselves to be uncompromising.

In the current battle, the heart dictates a vote for the miners and the head a vote for the government. Britain wavers before this perplexing dilemma. —Fulgence Charpentier (Feb. 11)

La Voix
de l'Est

Granby La Voix de l'Est: The cost of living continues its upward march. It increased by 9.1 per cent last year, and economists predict as big an increase in 1974.

That Canadian companies in general should make profits is fine, because otherwise they would have to close the doors of their factories. But it is intolerable that they should profit from inflation and reap exorbitant profits.

The consumer should know that it is not the remarks of David Lewis or Robert Stanfield that will bring large companies to mend their ways. Like the government, the leaders of the New Democratic Party and Progressive Conservatives are very careful in their comments. Much more effective would be direct intervention by consumers.

If enough consumers made themselves aware in this way of price increases, they certainly would not be content with feeble protest, grumbling among themselves.

Their associations would be more active and less hesitant. They would be better armed to wage their fight against unjustified increases in consumer prices. But so long as they do not become more aggressive, consumers cannot hope for important gains from their action.

That does not mean, of course, that the government itself should not act. Its duty is to watch inflation's advance and to foresee and prevent abuses by those who seek exorbitant profits. But it will hesitate less in taking worthwhile action if it knows it is backed by the people.

That is not now the case, even if some groups sometimes protest the injustices of which they are victims. —Roland Gagne (Feb. 11)

LE DEVOIR

Montreal Le Devoir: The exile imposed by the Soviet Union on writer Alexander Solzhenitsyn will probably not change the policy of détente the country's leaders have for several years followed regarding the West, nor the opening attitude many nations, among them the United States, have adopted toward the U.S.S.R.

That, however, will not lessen the considerable significance of the decision that has chased one of the greatest writers of our time from his country, which all his work shows he loves passionately.

This decision no doubt marks a sad point in the history of liberty. It renders witness, however, to the invincible force which preserves the spirit in the face of powers forever seeking to tame it.

It would be surprising if Solzhenitsyn had not allowed himself to be carried away in many parts of his work by a fervor that is not always the best guarantee of accuracy.

In a country respectful of the spirit, however, it would not be the government and its propaganda agencies who would correct the faults. That work would be the result of free discussion among historians, politicians and private citizens.

But in the U.S.S.R., a free effort to bring forth a truth long held prisoner becomes treason as soon as it touches on policy.

The U.S.S.R., despite some signs of liberalization, remains incapable of accommodating a regime where liberty of the spirit is not shackled. That fact Solzhenitsyn has not stopped proclaiming, and that is why there is no longer a place for him in his own land.

The West will willingly take unto itself the courage and strength Solzhenitsyn embodies. A close reading of the works of the exiled writer will, however, quickly show that his message is directed as much to men of other countries as to the leaders of his own. —Claude Ryan (Feb. 14)

le nouvelliste

Trois Rivières Le Nouvelliste: Quebecers finally are about to know the linguistic policy of Premier Robert Bourassa's government. It is certainly time that our leaders brought forth legislation to put an end to this debate that has dragged on over several years.

If we work from the thin pronouncements furnished by Education Minister François Cloutier, we must say in all honesty that he leaves a note of hope. He himself says, without divulging just what road will be taken, that his linguistic policy "goes very far."

We fervently welcome that. We have already been badly burned by the famous Bill 63, and it would be wrong to offer nothing but crumbs to the linguistic majority of Quebec.

Despite Mr. Cloutier's promises, we greatly fear that the next government language policy will be compromised and show a tendency to run with the hare and hunt with the hounds.

It would be unfortunate, for example, for the next government decision to be drawn from Bill 63. Under the false cover of the protection of the French language, that bill in fact bestowed the free choice of language of education.

Recent studies have shown that, far from easing the problem, Bill 63 facilitated the assimilation of Quebecers into English.

We are very much aware that a linguistic minority exists—20 per cent English-speaking—and that the government must recognize certain rights of this group. But the prerogatives of the majority must not be belittled on the pretext that the English-speaking minority should have some rights.

It would be equally wrong to want to enclose Quebec in French unilingualism. We live on a continent with an English-speaking majority, and it is imperative that Quebecers be able to communicate with their neighbors. Nevertheless, we must reject any formula which serves to favor the status quo.

We have a language and a culture to protect. We also have the over-riding need to be able to live decently in our language like any self-respecting people. That invariably implies the necessity of being able to communicate in French in Quebec. —Rejean Lacombe (Feb. 12)

Powell's anti-market pitch worries
Conservatives as election day nears

LONDON (CP) — As the British election campaign enters its final stage, right-wing rebel Enoch Powell—always known for his shrewd sense of timing—has unleashed a political explosive which will cause anguish among some Conservatives and apprehension at Common Market headquarters.

Even before Powell confirmed he will speak for the anti-market movement within five days of the Feb. 28 polling date, market officials in Brussels were feeling unnerved by the ominous campaign pronouncements of Opposition Labor Chief Harold Wilson.

He said that if he becomes prime minister again, he will try renegotiating the terms for Britain's market entry. He conjured renewed visions of British withdrawal from the already shaky economic community.

With Powell's intervention, the market administrators and the governments of Britain's partners on the European mainland will have all the more reason to worry about the community's future.

Opponents of Conservative Prime Minister Heath have always had a rich seam of mass discontent to exploit as a result of the popular inclination in Britain to blame steeply rising food prices on the country's 1973 market entry.

Wilson's anti-market declarations came early in the campaign and now comes Powell—about to reiterate more dramatically than ever his contention that British market membership means, among other devastating things, the unauthorized surrender to the "eurocrats" in Brussels of powers that rightfully belong to Parliament in London.

MOVE EXPECTED

Such a spectacular campaign intervention by Powell was long expected, even feared, by official Conservatives ever since the controversial Tory branded Heath's calling of the poll as fraudulent and irresponsible and refused to run for re-election.

Laborites will be delighted at possible top-level Conservative cringing over Powell's latest political stroke.

No one can say for certain yet what impact his intervention will have on the election's outcome.

But the least that some commentators expect is an increase in the number of Conservatives abstaining on election day.

At 61, Powell still harbors ambitions to be Tory leader and prime minister.

The result of the Feb. 28 poll will be crucial to the achievement of this design since on it hinges the future of Heath as Tory chief.

Even if Heath loses the election, however, the obstacles to Powell's advance would remain formidable.

For one thing, the Tories make a fetish out of loyalty to the party. And Powell's refusal to run again this time may have violated this principle, thus alienating powerful party elements.

Moreover, whoever wins the impending election, Powell won't be in Parliament in the immediate future and may suffer as a result.

Thus he is currently treading a politically dangerous path close to the borderline over which even great outsiders like Winston Churchill and Aneurin Bevan have declined to pass.

This is the path that leads to an isolated situation devoid of affiliation with any major established party.

In any event, the Tories now have a new worry to compound their concern over matters like the remarkable rise in popularity—reported by opinion polls—of the apparently resurgent Liberal party.

All eyes and ears will thus be on the speeches Powell will be delivering on behalf of a movement which urges the disgruntled British people to support Labor candidates opposed to this country's continued involvement in the present Common Market arrangement.

The year the U.S. lost Europe

Jack Anderson's

Washington Merry-Go-Round

LONDON — The Year of Europe, which Secretary of State Henry Kissinger had promised for 1973, lies in shambles. It is more likely to go down in history as the year the United States lost its European allies.

For the Atlantic Alliance appears to be breaking apart. Its cornerstone, the historic British-American partnership, is crumbling.

European leaders are absolutely appalled at the scandals which have been swirling around President Nixon. He has been so weakened by Watergate that he has lost his influence with his Atlantic partners.

Privately, they hope he won't come to Europe in April to celebrate NATO's 25th anniversary. They are not at all eager to be pictured wining and dining the scandal-scarred Nixon. One prominent British diplomat quietly encouraged me to publish a hint that the President stay home.

Kissinger still has credibility with European leaders who, indeed, regard him as a diplomatic miracle worker. But they feel he has neglected Europe. In private conversations, British Prime Minister Edward Heath has gone so far as to say that Kissinger, who was born in Europe, doesn't understand its politics.

Europe's formal diplomatic set also dislike Kissinger's free-wheeling style. They complain that he doesn't consult them, that he treats them more like subordinates than partners.

British leaders, who for the sake of diplomatic niceties asked not to be named, told us that the special London-Washington relationship is breaking down. They attribute this to the inability of Kissinger and Heath to get on the same wavelength.

Kissinger also has trouble penetrating the frosty reserve of British Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home.

At the ambassadorial level, communication has been limited largely to routine messages. Kissinger always made his diplomatic overtures over the head of the recently departed British Ambassador Lord Cromer. A Foreign Office source described the Kissinger-Cromer relationship as "decidedly chilly."

But far more damaging to the British-American partnership has been the behavior of U.S. Ambassador Walter Annenberg, who has made himself the laughing stock of London by curtsying instead of bowing to the queen and by using painfully pretentious phrases in her presence. "He is a fool," summarized one British diplomat, "a disagreeable fool."

One casualty of the widening British-American rift may be the nuclear-sharing agreement. The suspicion is growing in London that Kissinger may be willing to end the nuclear collaboration as a bargaining point to solidify the Soviet-American détente.

This has led to quiet soundings about a possible British-French nuclear sharing program. Not without concern, Western Europe is awakening to the possibility that it may have to form its own independent nuclear force.

British sources also confirmed published reports that Kissinger angrily cancelled a plan to fly SR-71 spy planes out of a base in England during the Middle East fighting. The stories claimed that Kissinger was angered by Heath's demand that British knowledge of the operation be kept strictly secret.

According to our British sources, Heath merely insisted that the Israelis should not be shown the reconnaissance photos taken by the spy planes. In any event, Kissinger ordered the spy planes to bypass Britain which resulted in costly midair refueling operations and delayed for three days some of the intelligence on Soviet deliveries to Egypt and Syria.

An underlying cause of the Kissinger-Heath split has been the prime minister's emphasis on European unity at the expense of Atlantic unity. Having brought Britain into the Common Market, he has laid less stress upon the American partnership and more upon the European partnership.

The oil crisis increased the strain on the Atlantic alliance, of course, as the British and French scrambled to make their own separate deals with the Arab oil producers.

Kissinger has scarcely concealed his annoyance with the Atlantic allies, particularly the British. Increasingly, they are now showing their annoyance with him.

Footnote: The Foreign Office denied that relations with the United States have deteriorated. Similar denials have been issued by the State Department.

Wants to be buried with favorite car!

Dear Ann Landers: I'm not on my deathbed, but I'm getting on in years and I realize I don't have too many left. I beg of you not to think I'm crazy or that I'm putting you on. My question is real.

I have a modest collection of antique automobiles — nothing great, but a few of my favorites. The car I love best is a 1937 Dodge. It holds so many pleasant memories that whenever I look at that great automobile, it makes me feel good all over.

What I want to know is this: Would it be possible for me to be buried in that 1937 Dodge? Instead of a casket I'd like to be sitting at the wheel and lowered into the ground. I can't see where it would hurt anybody. It's just something I want very much. What about it, Ann? — Muskogee, Oklahoma

Dear Mus: If you want to be buried in your 1937 Dodge you'd better inform your next of kin, a lawyer and a mortician. Also, the cemetery people should be informed. Each has its own "constitution."

If they agree, you'll need three or four plots to accommodate the Dodge, plus special equipment to lower the car into the ground. If it's what you want I hope you get it.

Dear Ann Landers: Our son has four beautiful youngsters and we love them dearly. The oldest is nine, the youngest is four. He is our only child, so these are the only grandchildren we will ever have.

The problem is this: Whenever we go to see them (about twice a week) their first question is, "What did you bring us?"

I suppose we are to blame because we started early in their little lives to bring them gifts every time we came over. They are what you might call spoiled.

I discussed this problem with my husband recently and we decided not to bring gifts anymore except for special occasions. I'm sorry to say our last visit turned out to be most unpleasant. The children hardly spoke to us.

My husband says now that we have spoiled them it's too late to do anything about it and we should resume the old practice of bringing gifts to make sure we get a warm welcome and enjoy ourselves. His philosophy is, "You can't teach an old dog new tricks."

What do you say, Ann? — Unhappy Grandma

Dear Grandma: Your grandchildren aren't "old dogs," they are youngsters who are capable of learning a great deal.

It's too bad your husband is so insecure he is afraid the kids won't like him unless he brings something besides himself.

My advice is to adopt a new line. When they ask, "What did you bring us?" Reply, "A lot of love! And it will last forever. What could be better than that?"

Dear Ann Landers: I just became aware of a situation that I thought happened only in soap operas. My mother has a thing going with my father-in-law.

They don't have the faintest notion that anyone is aware of it. I'm not sitting in judgment, Ann — I'm just numb from the shock.

Should I confront my mother with the facts, or pretend they don't exist? Your advice will be greatly appreciated — Zapped

Dear Z: Confronting your mother will serve no useful purpose. There would be denials and accusations, followed by icy looks and estrangement.

Look the other way and keep your mouth shut.

DR LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Coffee and your heart

DEAR DR. LAMB — A column of yours dealt with the subject of individuals who drink more than five cups of coffee per day being more prone to heart attacks, but that a decaffeinated product would obviate this problem.

In another column in the same paper a doctor disputed this statement by saying a collaborative drug study are ruled out caffeine as being responsible for the increased heart attacks in those persons drinking over five cups of coffee per day.

Please clarify, as many persons are interested in the facts.

DEAR READER — I believe if you read my column carefully again, you will note I stated that scientists had reported this relationship. In fact, they have. The latest report was in Lancet, a respected medical journal.

This is not the first time coffee has been reported as a factor in heart attacks. Dr. Paul of Chicago, and formerly president of the American Heart Assn., reported this relationship a number of years earlier. Other scientists have disputed the validity of the observation.

I don't think anyone can make a definite statement that can be proved without controversy on the evidence at hand. However, I do believe that coffee is harmful to the heart and circulation of many people.

It is true that a heavy coffee drinker will have a considerably faster resting heart rate than a person who does not use coffee.

It is true that people with resting heart rates over 80 beats per minute are much more likely to have a heart attack or drop dead than people with resting heart rates below 70 beats per minute.

It is true that coffee will stimulate the heart to have extra or skipped beats in many people who have these problems. All competent heart specialists recommend patients with these problems should avoid coffee and cigarettes. Individuals with serious heart disease who tend to have some of these types of irregularity are more likely to have a serious irregularity of the heart. However, many healthy people with such skipped beats do not have serious heart problems and in them these beats, although annoying, are not life threatening.

It is true that patients who have burning in the pit of the stomach, ulcers, and often diarrhea all tend to do much better if they avoid caffeine.

It is true that people who are nervous do not need the additional stimulus from caffeine, a powerful nerve stimulant. It is not necessary to wash down tranquilizers with coffee or any other drink containing caffeine.

Now, if you don't have any digestive problems, are not nervous or tense, don't have any skipped beats, and your resting heart rate is well below 70 beats a minute, you probably can use appreciable amounts of coffee without harm. But, if you have any of these findings, you would be better off with a decaffeinated drink, or none at all. These are the facts as I see them.

Jewel presented

COATICOOK — During the course of the regular meeting of Ashlar Lodge held in Coaticook on Feb. 13, 1974, W. Bro. George Laming presented his son, W. Bro. Tom Laming with a gold Lewis Jewel.

The reason this is so rare an event is because to qualify, the recipient's father must have been a Mason before the son was born. Mr. George Laming joined Converse Lodge in Malden, Mass., in 1943, and his son Tom joined Ashlar up here in 1966.

The only other member of our Lodge we know about to possess one is V.W. Bro. Lee Pomeroy and it was a good many years ago that he received his.

25th Wedding Anniversary

COOKSHIRE — Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hamilton were pleasantly surprised on their 25th wedding anniversary, Feb. 14, 1974, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McKercher.

They had been invited for supper, and Mrs. McKercher presented Mrs. Hamilton with a red and white carnation corsage.

Later on in the evening, a number of neighbors dropped in to surprise them.

Mrs. O.C. Farnsworth presented a purse of money to the honored couple on behalf of the assembled friends, for which Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton expressed their thanks and appreciation for this very pleasant surprise.

Refreshments were served, which included a heart-shaped cake, iced in white, decorated in pink and a silver 25th numeral. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton made the initial cut, and it was then cut into individual pieces and passed around for all to enjoy.

Hawks blow big chance to catch Philly on top

Chicago Black Hawks could have been in a first-place tie with Philadelphia Flyers in the National Hockey League's West Division today but coach Billy Reay's club blew a game they should not have Sunday night.

The Black Hawks defeated the Flyers 3-1 Saturday night to move to within two points of the lead but Reay said they "just couldn't stand prosperity."

The Black Hawks dropped a 4-2 decision to Pittsburgh Penguins in Chicago after learning that the Flyers had lost 3-2 in New York against the Rangers.

In other Sunday games, Montreal Canadiens edged St. Louis Blues 3-2, Detroit Red Wings downed New York Islanders 5-3, Buffalo Sabres defeated Boston Bruins 3-2 and Toronto Maple Leafs and Los Angeles Kings tied 3-3.

Montreal and the Kings tied 4-4 Saturday. Vancouver Canucks defeated Toronto 4-3, Boston defeated Pittsburgh Penguins 6-2, Detroit snapped a nine-game losing streak with a 5-3 win over the Blues, and Atlanta Flames beat Minnesota North Stars 5-3.

Penguins 4 Black Hawks 2
Ab DeMarco scored his fifth and sixth goals of the season to lead the Penguins. "Still I can't complain," said Reay. "After all, that's only our first loss in 12 games. But it's disturbing when you're at home and facing a seventh-place club."

Rangers 3 Flyers 2
New York brought its lifetime record against Philadelphia to 12 wins, one loss and three ties. The Flyers grabbed a 2-0 lead in the first period but the Rangers scored three times in the second, two of the goals coming on power plays. Rod Gilbert's goal at 16:33 was the winner.

Canadiens 3 Blues 2
Henri Richard's 12th goal of the season with 4:56 remaining in the second period gave Montreal its win over St. Louis. Canadiens' coach Scotty Bowman used only nine forwards most of the evening, explaining that "all the games are so important now that it's hard to take a chance."

Sabres 3 Bruins 2
Rene Robert's 18th goal of the season at 7:59 of the second period enabled Buffalo to snap Boston's nine-game unbeaten streak. Goalie Dave Dryden, after missing four games with a back ailment, was sharp as he turned back 33 Boston shots.

Red Wings 5 Islanders 3
Mickey Redmond scored three goals, one into an empty net at 19:38 of the third period.

Gilles Gratton hasn't had much prior experience, but he firmly believes that shutouts for him are going to be hard to come by.

"There's no difference in an easy shutout or a tough shutout," the 21-year-old Toronto Toros goaltender said Sunday night. "You still have to work hard."

Gratton was giving a postgame review of his first ever shutout as a pro following the Toros' 2-0 win over New England to climb into a first place tie with the Whalers in the World Hockey Association's Eastern Division.

Elsewhere, Winnipeg Jets got two goals from player-coach Bobby Hull in a 3-1 win over Chicago Cougars, Quebec Nordiques beat New Jersey Knights 7-4, Cleveland Crusaders edged Minnesota Fighting Saints 2-1, Houston Aeros defeated Vancouver Blazers 7-1 and Edmonton Oilers beat Los Angeles Sharks 5-3.

Galt hockey, basketball teams — losing weekends

By BRUCE PORTER
Record Reporter

LENNOXVILLE — The Alexander Galt Regional High School senior and junior boys hockey teams played two games each over the weekend, the seniors taking a win and a loss, while the junior Pipers lost both encounters. The senior boys basketball squad also went to defeat twice on the weekend.

Friday afternoon, the Pipers faced Loyola High. The juniors were defeated 5-1. Galt's only goal came from captain Brian Nicoll, assisted by Andrew Retchless. The Loyola team had built up a 4-0 lead after the first period, and didn't make their last goal until the midway mark in the third period.

Jim Eno, Ross Yates, Bob Fretz, John Mayo and Bill

Cadman were the point-getters for Loyola. A total of 16 minor penalties was doled out by the referees, with Galt getting the majority with 10.

The seniors proved their rivalry was a bit stronger as the Loyola squad barely nipped the Pipers 6-5. Alan Webb started the game's scoring at 2:42 on a powerplay effort for Galt.

Loyola came back for two unanswered goals from Don Fairholm and Vince Michetti, but Galt's Tim Kennedy connected on another man advantage just after the 11-minute mark.

The scoring alternated in the last two periods, with Kennedy scoring in the middle frame between Loyola's Don Boyd and Fairholm.

The Pipers got back on the track at the nine-minute mark in the third stanza, when Dannie Speck connected for the fourth Galt goal. Al Grant put Loyola ahead six minutes later.

Webb beat Loyola netminder Paul Drolet at 17:57 for AGRHS' third powerplay goal of the game. The relentless Montreal team didn't give up and slid the puck past Steve Lyonnais with 57 seconds remaining in the match.

Karl Habib was the victorious goal-getter for the Loyola squad.

The second game provided better viewing for the spectators, and had more penalties. A total of 46 minutes was assessed, with Loyola accounting for 24 minutes in minor infractions, with a 10-minute misconduct added on top of that.

The basketball squad from Galt met with two losses against Loyola High and Stanstead College at the Richelieu Valley Regional Invitational Basketball Tournament held Friday and Saturday.

AGRHS was defeated by a 12-point margin when they opposed Loyola Friday evening, and advanced to the consolation final. Saturday Stanstead drubbed the Galt team by 14 points.

The senior and junior hockey teams travelled south Saturday to Berlin, New Hampshire, picking up a win and loss respectively.

The seniors made up for their mistakes last year at the Bishop's University tournament when they lost 6-3 in the championship final. They simply reversed the score on their competitors on Saturday, while the juniors were downed 5-2.

Alan Webb paced the Pipers, who had a slim 2-1 lead going into the third period, with two goals, with Jim Sharman, Brian Dezan, Steve Stickles and Gary Guillelte making singles. Steve Lyonnais played well in nets for Galt, stopping 32 of 35 shots.

The energy crisis didn't seem to have an effect on the Berlin juniors, as they poked, banged, belted and occasionally skated their way to victory.

Brian Nicoll and Bob Fisher got the goals for Galt. Physical energy abounded late in the game, it was reported, as Berlin started to get overly-exuberant. The contest was marred by 70 minutes in penalties, mostly stemming from a bench-clearing late in the game.

Fisher, who was hit in the face with a high stick by a Berlin player, sported a black eye when he returned to Canada. Several other players brought back souvenirs in the form of cuts and bruises. It was also reported that some of the Berlin players refused to forgive and forget, and were waiting around after the game in an attempt to tie up loose ends.

The hockey seniors will play West King High from Nova Scotia today in an exhibition match at Bishop's University beginning at 3 p.m.

The bantam Blue pucksters meet Seminaire de Sherbrooke at Bishop's College School this afternoon at 5 p.m. This will be their second game in a two-game-total-points semi-final playoff series. Seminaire has the point lead to date after their 3-0 win last week.

The Allan rink pulled three more in the house and then managed to guard them. Skip Jenks was short on take-out and Skip Allan pulled in one more and when Skip Jenks' draw got hooked they picked a big five and a 10-5 lead heading home. When Skip Jenks ran out of sufficient stones he conceded the match after a close battle.

The duel in the Balfour went in ten ends before Skip Bill Rourke managed to eke out the decision. Skip Lloyd Humbert gave his club-mate a battle right to the final stone of the game. Both skips came through with some fine curling and made key shots while members of both rinks came through with key shots which kept the outcome in doubt until the final stone.

As the match commenced the fans sensed they were to witness a close battle with the knock-out to be the key part of the game. After three ends it was 1-1 with one dead shot. The swing of the match seemed to be hanging on the final stone with the rink with the last stone holding a slight edge.

The last stone in the fifth gave the Rourke rink a single and a 3-1 lead and when Skip Humbert got hooked on his last attempt. The skips kept firing away and kept the house pretty clean. Finally after the exchange the Humbert rink snared one for a 3-2 count. In the seventh Skip Humbert missed his attempt and the Rourke rink chalked up one for a 4-2 lead heading home.

The movement was a "clean-house" and went well until it came to the turn of the skips. The Humbert rink managed to get two in the house Skip Rourke got one out but Skip Humbert made a perfect draw to snare two and force the game into an extra end.

In the ninth end it was the same system as before, house clean. It was finally up to the thirds and Mrs. C. Mooney pulled off a great shot to ease the situation for a moment however Humbert put the stone back.

Skip Rourke came up with a double-take-out but again Skip Humbert put it back Rourke, with last stone, had an opportunity of sewing up the outcome but on his takeout he rolled out and it forced another end.

In the tenth it was knock-out once again and as in the previous ends the skips had the load on their shoulders. Skip Humbert drew one in but Rourke changed places but again Humbert put it back but rolled out leaving to Skip Rourke with the open house. He made a perfect draw to win the game 5-4 after one of the best games of the week-long tournament.

In the semi-finals of the Ernie Taylor Memorial Trophy Cliff Allan of Sherbrooke came through with a 13-6 victory over Rocky Chretien and his young foursome. In the other half of the draw it was Wally Jenks of Sherbrooke and his rink over Arnold Healey's quartet of Windsor 11-6.

In the Allan-Chretien battle it was a tough duel with Skip Allan jumping off to a 3-0 lead in the opening end. Skip Chretien bounced right back with two to get back in the game. Skip Allan came right back with another three-ender for a 6-2 advantage. In the fourth the Chretien rink came up with two for a 6-4 lead.

In the fifth end it was left to the skips to decide the outcome. The Chretien rink exchanged shots with the Allan foursome as the skips came through with some good shots but Skip Allan, with the final stone, made the take-out to pick up three and a 9-4 lead.

In the sixth Skip Chretien and Skip Allan came up with some good shots and the Chretien rink managed to pick up two to reduce the margin to 9-6. In the seventh end Skip Chretien and his rink ran into a little trouble and the Allan crew snared four for a 13-6 count and the Chretien rink conceded the match.

In the other half of the draw it was a little close. It was 4-3 for the Jenks crew after the third end. Skip Jenks bounced right back a big four-ender to jump into the lead 6-4. He snared three more when Skip Healey missed his shot. It was a repeat in the sixth and the Jenks' rink took a 11-4 lead. In the final end the Windsor faced a tough situation as Skip Jenks was keeping the house clear but Windsor kept on battling but finally conceded the match 11-6.

The battle in the Balfour Company Trophy semi-finals both games were close and only decided in the final ends and with the last stones. They were two well fought matches the whole way as all players came through with top shots.

In the Mooney-Robson duel it was only decided on the last stone of the game with the Lennoxville rink edging Bob Robson of Granby 3-2. They played four dead ends in the second, third, sixth and seventh.

Bill Rourke, who took over from Mike Mooney when he pulled a leg muscle in the first game, played a strong game as skip with Archie Quick playing second in his place. Mrs. J. Rourke and Mrs. C. Mooney completed the team.

The Rourke rink posted two in the opening end. The second was a dead end as both teams were keeping the house clear. It was the same in the third. In the fourth the Granby rink chalked up one and then it was tied in the fifth. It was the same story in the next two ends and the teams headed home with the score deadlocked 2-2.

In the final end Skip Rourke had the final stone and this paid off as he pulled off a great shot to win by one. Skip Robson got one in the house and they exchanged shots and then Skip Rourke made the take-out to stay and win the game 3-2.

Lloyd Humbert of Lennoxville and Larry Vien of Magog staged another good battle before the Lennoxville rink emerged the winner 6-4. It was a nip-and-tuck affair the whole way and after four ends the Humbert rink trailed 3-2.

In the fifth Lennoxville picked up a big three for a 5-3 lead. Skip Vien's squad came through with a single in the sixth as they started to play knock-out. Skip Humbert managed to get two in the house as Magog were missing the crucial shots and Lennoxville posted one for a 6-4 lead heading home. In the final end it was a knock-out and when Skip Vien missed his shot that was the ball game 6-4.
