

Budget debate to end—no changes expected

OTTAWA (CP) — The six-day budget debate ends today with the government expected to have little difficulty in carrying a Commons vote to approve the June 23 budget measures. Opposition critics have attacked one of the budget's main themes, calling promises of spending restraint a sham. The government says it is trimming $1 billion from its planned spending this year to set an example for business and labor. The majority Liberals have swept aside two non-confidence motions from the Progressive Conservatives and the New Democratic Party. As the budget debate neared its end, Commons attendance declined sharply, often barely exceeding the 20 members needed for a quorum in the 264-seat Commons. A highlight of the debate was Treasury Board President Jean Chretien's statement Wednesday detailing the areas where government spending is to be cut. It failed to win opposition critics over, but gave the first glimpse of which departments are feeling the pinch. SETS PACE Tom Cossitt (PC—Leeds) said Thursday the budget fails to deal with inflation. The government was taking its spending example from the "lavish and luxurious" life style of the prime minister. Government spending in the current fiscal year is expected to rise about 13 per cent from last year to about $35.6 billion. "Just as the costs of maintaining the prime minister's residences and office have risen hundreds of thousands of dollars... so have the costs of operating each government department risen millions and millions of dollars," Mr. Cossitt said. Conservative energy critic James Gillies said Thursday that economic policies should be made in public instead of in backrooms by politicians. The economy was in its worst shape since the Second World War. Mr. Turner has forecast a record shortfall of $4.97 billion between what the government will take in during the current fiscal year and what it must spend and lend. Mr. Gillies says he will bring in a bill to compel the Bank of Canada to appear before the Commons finance committee to explain the policies it will follow. BRING IN LINE The bill will call for long-term monetary and credit supplies being brought into line with the economy's potential for growth, maximum employment, stable prices and moderate interest rates. This is an essential first step toward making economic policy decisions more public, Mr. Gillies said. John Roberts (L—Toronto St. Paul's) also suggested new methods for budget making. He said he supports Mr. Turner's budget, but the usual fiscal and monetary policies would have to be supplemented by other measures. Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) zeroed in on another controversial budget measure, the 10-cent-a-gallon excise tax on gasoline. It made a mockery of the government's professed intention to save Canadians from higher international oil prices. Domestic gas prices now were as high or higher than in the United States where consumers were buying gasoline refined from imported oil.

Held without bail

MONTREAL (CP) — Four men are being held without bail pending trial in connection with the June 12 gangland-style slaying of two men in an east-end bar.

Arraigned Thursday on a preferred indictment before Justice Peter V. Shorteno of Quebec Superior Court, were Michel "Mike" Blass, Ronald Proulx, Jean-Paul Matherin and Gilles Lavigne, all of Montreal.

The four are charged with murder in the shooting deaths of Pierre St. Jean, 29, and Gilles Forget, 28, of nearby Laval.

With a preferred indictment, the accused go directly to trial, bypassing the usual preliminary hearings.

The four will be tried during the fall criminal assizes.

Taxes to increase

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec taxpayers will receive an average four-per-cent increase in their disposable incomes because of personal income tax cuts that came into effect July 1.

The reductions, announced in Finance Minister Raymond Garneau's April 17 budget, include a lump-sum rebate on income earned since the beginning of this year, plus increases in the exemptions for single and married wage earners.

In addition, deductions for expenses incurred on the job have been increased from $150 to $500 and there have been readjustments of tax rates for incomes up to $9,000.

The tax cuts will benefit mainly those earning less than $10,000 a year.

Judge overrules writ

QUEBEC (CP) — A judge of the Federal Court of Canada overruled Thursday a writ of seizure issued June 15 to impound the British navy ship HMS Hermes.

Judge George A. Addy also ordered the lawyer who requested the writ to pay all court costs.

The writ was issued after Andre Girard, a 40-year-old cook, alleged that two marines aboard the ship assaulted him without provocation. He demanded $61,500 in damages.

Judge Addy ruled the Federal Court registrar did not act improperly in issuing the writ because lawyer Francois de Gravel had not specified the Hermes was a government ship.

The judge ruled it is impossible to seize a ship belonging to a sovereign state when the ship is used for governmental rather than commercial purposes.

Judge Addy also rejected a request by Mr. Gravel that British Consul Denis Symington and Quebec City port manager Jean-Claude Michaud be charged with contempt of court for allowing the Hermes to depart despite the writ.

Girl, 13, dead

LENNOXVILLE (BP) — A 13-year-old girl was found dead yesterday, three days after she was reported missing from her Moulton Hill home near here.

Daphne Codere, daughter of Jacques and Lorraine Codere, was discovered approximately 1000 feet from her home, with the gun that apparently killed her lying beside her body. She had been shot once on her right side near the stomach.

A Quebec Police Force spokesman from the Sherbrooke detachment said he didn't think she was murdered, leaving suicide or accidental shooting as the probable cause of death. He said first indications discounted any signs of violence.

Miss Codere was reported missing since Monday from her home just north of Lennoxville and is believed to have died the same day. An autopsy has been ordered. QPF officers had been investigating the case since Monday, but didn't take up a search until yesterday. They thought at first the youth had either gone to visit friends or had hidden in nearby cottages.

Members of the QPF criminal investigation bureau are continuing the investigation to determine the actual cause of death.

Fuel price freeze hits Ontario today

TORONTO (CP) — A 90-day freeze on the price of gasoline, diesel fuel and home-heating oil in Ontario went into effect at 12:01 a.m. EDT today.

The freeze and a one-man royal commission to recommend pricing policies beyond the freeze were announced in the legislature Thursday by Premier William Davis.

"Ontario will tolerate no increases until such a time as we are satisfied that the price charged for gasoline at the pumps and heating oil delivered to our homes is justified," Mr. Davis said.

The freeze expires Oct. 1 but could be extended to the end of November, he said.

In effect, the freeze postpones for at least six weeks a mid-August increase of five cents a gallon on gasoline announced in the federal budget June 23. It does not offset the 10-cent excise tax on gasoline imposed when the budget was announced.

ONUS ON CONSUMERS

The onus will be on consumers to report price-freeze violations to the ministry of consumer and commercial relations under whose jurisdiction the Petroleum Products Price

Freeze Act was introduced. Mr. Davis said. Summary conviction under the act could draw a fine of not more than $2,000 or one year in prison, or both, for an individual. Corporations could be fined up to $25,000.

Jerry McAfee, president of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., said the province's decision "may serve a short-term political purpose, but only to the detriment of the oil industry's ability to provide adequately for the future energy needs of Ontario and the rest of Canada."

He said Mr. Davis forgot to pass a law "making it economic to buy $8 oil and sell it for $6.50," referring to an excise tax in the federal budget that increased the price of crude oil by $1.50 a barrel to $8.

The June budget also called for a voluntary 45-day deferral to Aug. 15 in price increases.

A spokesman for Texaco Canada said the firm has a 30-day supply of gasoline and the price freeze "puts us in a position of having higher raw material and other increasing costs on the one hand and a freeze on product prices on the other."

Dredging scandal

Hamilton jury still out

HAMILTON (CP) — The jury in the Hamilton dredging trial retired Thursday night after a full day of deliberation without reaching a verdict in the case of Kenneth Elliott and Reginald Fisher.

The seven women and five men of the Ontario Supreme Court jury spent the day listening to a tape recording, hearing Mr. Justice Thomas Callon and considering the verdict.

Elliott, 42, a former Hamilton harbor commissioner, and Fisher, 62, a local business consultant, are charged with 10 counts of conspiracy, fraud and uttering forged documents. The charges were laid in connection with alleged kickbacks and payoffs on dredging and construction projects in the harbor in 1970-72.

The jury, which began deliberations Wednesday, has twice returned to the courtroom, asking clarification of legal matters from Mr. Justice Callon.

Thursday, the jury listened to a tape recording made in 1973 by a Crown witness, Horace (Joe) Rindress, who was working for the Crown at the time.

Mr. Rindress told the court he paid bribes and kickbacks totalling about $265,000 to Elliott when the accused was a harbor commissioner.

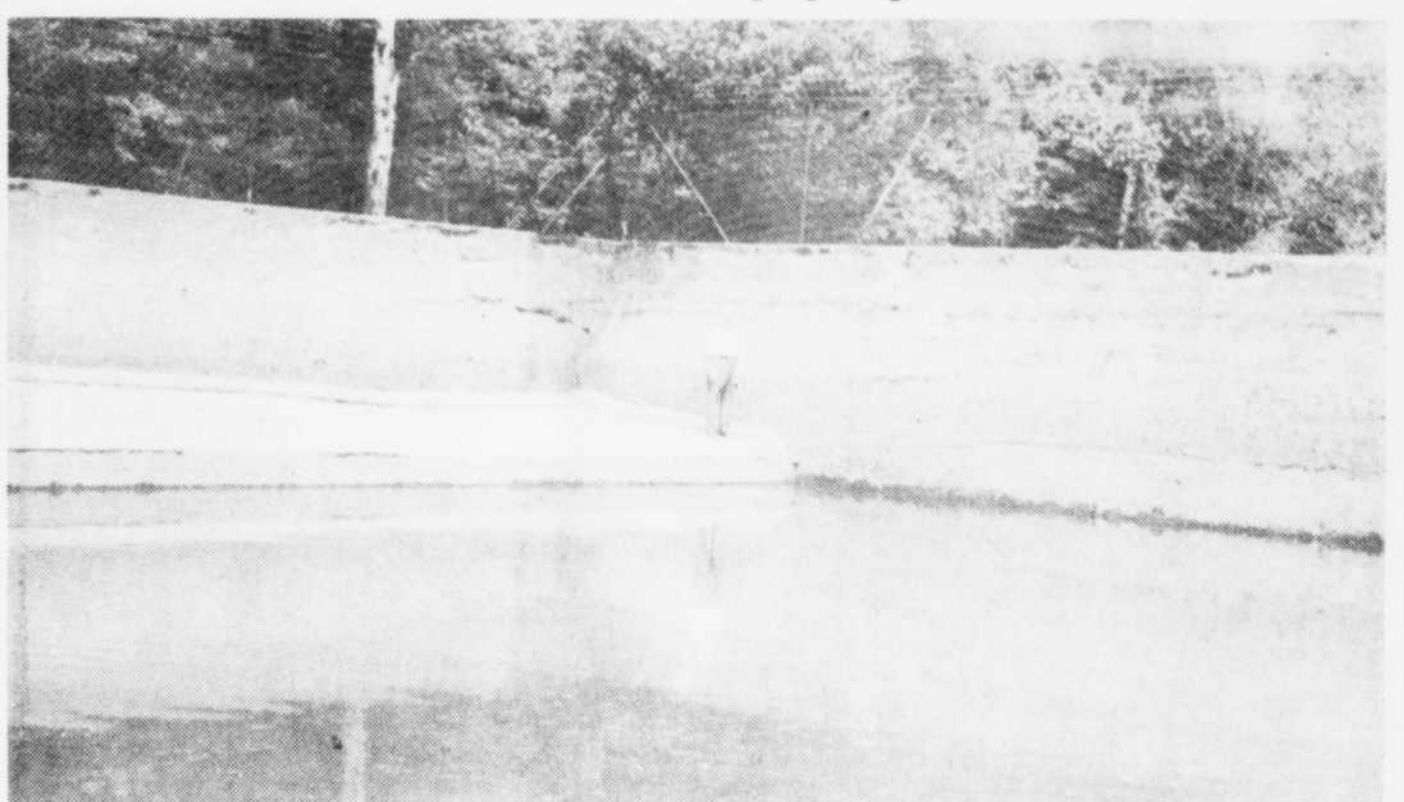

After hearing the tape, played earlier in the trial, the jury heard explanation of the law governing conspiracy and circumstantial evidence and then retired to deliberate.

The jury returned to the court later in the evening to question the judge on a point of law and retired once again.

The jurors must bring down 10 separate verdicts against each of the accused.

The trial began May 5 and the Crown called 32 witnesses in presenting its case. The defence lawyers presented no evidence.

Local water supply still low

SCANNING THE SCARCE SUPPLY OF WATER in Lennoxville is the town's water department chairman Duncan Bruce. Wednesday night's rain helped improve the situation at the municipality's only open reservoir, shown here, but the 500,000 gallon capacity reservoir is currently holding only 70,000 gallons. Residents are still urged to refrain from watering their gardens and lawns or washing their cars.

SHERBROOKE (RM) — Recent evening thunderstorms have helped to relieve water supplies in Townships communities, but calls for water conservation remain in effect in most areas.

In Sherbrooke and Lennoxville, levels in the reservoirs have picked up somewhat, but citizens are still being asked to avoid using water unnecessarily, including the spraying of lawns and gardens.

Lennoxville town

secretary Jules Gervais said yesterday the response to the town's call for careful use of water has been good.

Because of the conservation and recent rains, the situation is not so critical now, he said. But the town's call for residents' participation in resolving the shortage is still in effect, he added.

Elsewhere in the Townships, Magog town clerk Jean-Paul Lange reported no problems with the water supply, except in the high-lying areas of the city where the usual low water pressure problems are being experienced.

No difficulties are being had at the Border or in Cowansville where a 100-per-cent increase in water demand is being met with no difficulty.

Other communities, however, are not so fortunate. A spokesman for the town of Richmond said the call is also out there for water conservation, until enough rain falls to replenish the reservoirs.

The Town of Brom Lake's three reservoirs are also getting low, and, as in Sherbrooke and Richmond, the municipal police there are making it a point to stop and ask townspeople to think twice about watering their lawns.

As one town official put it: "If it rains during the evening, you shouldn't have to water the lawn anyway."

Hunt on Mideast murderers

A hunt is on for the killers of another U.S. embassy employee in Tehran and the kidnappers of an American colonel in Beirut, but no clues have been reported in either case.

Hassan Hossnan, 25, an Iranian who worked in the visa section of the embassy in Tehran, was shot and killed Thursday by two terrorists who intercepted the car in which he was riding.

The driver of the embassy car and another passenger were unharmed.

Two American members of the Tehran embassy staff, air force Col. Paul Shaffer, 45, of Dayton, Ohio, and air force Col. Jack Turner, 45, of Carbondale, Ill., were intercepted and killed in the same way May 21.

A group called the Iran People's Warrior Organization claimed responsibility for those killings, but no arrests have been reported.

In Beirut, a ceasefire between Moslem and Christian factions that had been battling since June 23 enabled security forces to search for Col. Ernest Morgan, 43, of Petersburg, Va., who was kidnapped by about 20 gunmen at the height of the fighting Sunday.

The U.S. state department said no ransom demand or other word had been received from the kidnappers.

A taxi driver said Morgan was pulled from his cab at a traffic circle roadblock near a Palestinian refugee camp and dragged into a shop.

The traffic circle had been held at various times by Palestinian guerrillas and leftist Lebanese Moslems during their street fighting with Lebanese Christians of the Falange party.

The Lebanese government said Palestinian guerrilla units denied any involvement in the kidnapping.

However, the Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine charged that Central Intelligence Agency men, "some of whom recently arrived in Lebanon," had been working with the rightists to weaken the Palestinian cause.

Morgan, an air defence specialist assigned to the U.S. military aid mission in Turkey, was spending the night in Beirut on his way back from a meeting in Pakistan.

Only sporadic sniping was reported as Beirut returned to normal after the street fighting that left at least 260 persons dead.

Terrorists hit Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (AP) — A bomb exploded in a crowded square in the heart of Jerusalem today, and minutes later terrorists in a car sped through a nearby side street spraying the crowded sidewalks with machine-gun bullets, police reported.

At least eight persons were killed and 50 wounded, officials at Hadassah Hospital said.

The double attack came about 10 a.m. when the city was crowded with housewives and others shopping for the Jewish Sabbath.

The bomb, estimated to contain about 33 pounds of explosives, was hidden inside a refrigerator left in front of a toy shop and paint store, the police said.

Both shops were destroyed, and windows in neighboring buildings were blown out.

D'Etang dines out

PARIS (AP) — President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing and his wife dined at the home of a Parisian fireman, the fourth time the president has dined at the home of an ordinary Frenchman as part of a promise he made last December. The latest host was Claude Furet, whose wife had written the president asking him to dine at the Furets' apartment in the firemen's barracks.

Poisoning in Africa?

SALISBURY (Reuter) — A black African member of the Rhodesian Parliament claimed Thursday night that a second member of the nationalist delegation to constitutional talks in Lusaka, Zambia, became ill after drinking coffee at Salisbury military air base.

Independent MP Ronald Sadomba was speaking during a question-and-answer session on Wednesday's alleged poisoning of Edson Sithole, publicity secretary of the African National Council (ANC). He said the second man was Enos Nkala, an executive member of the ANC.

Sadomba said Nkala had been lucky because he vomited after taking ill on the Zambian air force plane which flew the delegates to Lusaka from Salisbury.

But Sithole had not vomited, had become seriously ill and had been rushed to a hospital where a stomach pump was used. "He is very lucky to be alive," Sadomba said.

PREPARE FOR TALKS The incident occurred as Sithole and other ANC leaders were preparing for constitutional talks with Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith.

Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda accused Smith of ordering the poisoning in an attempt to implicate the Zambian government which Sithole has been critical of.

The Rhodesian government has denied Smith or anyone in the Rhodesian government was responsible for the incident, but has promised a full investigation.

It now appears that the ANC's main preparations for constitutional talks with Smith will take place in Dar es Salaam next week.

Bricklin trying to make break-even point monthly

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Sceptics and nay-sayers aside, Bricklin Canada Ltd. says it is finally producing sports cars fast enough to stay financially afloat . . . or almost.

Company officials have said repeatedly in recent weeks that the Saint John-based operation has either reached or is close to the break-even point—about 550 cars a month.

The doubtful may point to past predictions from Malcolm Bricklin, chairman of the firm, as evidence that it will be best to wait and see.

The 36-year-old promoter of the New Brunswick-built sports car has said the Saint John and Minto plants would be in full production, turning out 1,000 cars a month, by the fall of that year. He also said a year ago the break-even point for the venture was 300 cars, not 550.

Asked once about the inaccuracy of these and other predictions he made, he said his forecasts were "lousy."

However, one thing appears certain. Almost as fast as Bricklin has upped production, criticism of the project—now 67-per-cent owned by the province of New Brunswick—has declined.

CRITICS QUIET
Critical newspaper editorials that occasionally used to come at the rate of two or three a week have largely disappeared in the last few weeks.

Equally important, the Liberal Opposition's extensive criticism of the project—particularly the government's $20-million investment in it—has died down as well.

This is probably at least partly due to the unannounced public relations campaign started in April by Mr. Bricklin and other company officials.

He began the move, speaking to service clubs and conventions and telling people the car would succeed if only they would give it a chance.

Company President Ralph Henry and Leon Klein, a vice-president of General Vehicle Inc., Bricklin Canada's American parent, also took on public speaking engagements.

Without doubt, however, the star of the show was the car itself. Appearing either on its own with a Bricklin official or Premier Richard Hatfield, its unique gull-wing doors attracted spectators like bears to honey.

IT'S OUR CAR
The speech Mr. Bricklin has ready for his audiences is equally smooth. "That's our car out there," he usually says near the beginning of his talk. "Yours and mine."

That simple but true statement—the provincial investment breaks down to $30 invested for every man, woman and child in the province—gets the audience on his side at the outset. They would rather not lose their money.

More good news usually follows. The company will not need any more investment and, in fact, it will begin paying back some of its debt later this year.

Bricklin Canada Ltd. now is doing $50 million worth of business annually and employs about 600 people in two New Brunswick plants, most of them in Saint John. That averages out to more than $4 million or 500 cars a month, the audience is told.

MUST PAY DEBTS
One small catch surfaced in an interview recently. Royalty payments by Bricklin Canada Ltd. to the province and the First Pennsylvania Bank, another creditor, will not begin until the company's debts are paid off.

The royalties on each car produced, which offer the province and the bank an opportunity to make thousands of extra dollars, will probably be paid in several years.

Aside from money matters, the car, which retails for just under $10,000 in the United States, is not available in Canada and, says Mr. Bricklin, probably will not be until next year.

The reason is that Bricklin Canada is not "a member" of the U.S.-Canada Auto Pact which allows parts to be transferred across the border duty free.

MEANS HIGHER COST
Canadians would have to pay an extra $1,500 to cover the import duty on American parts in the Canadian-built car and Mr. Bricklin says he did not intend to allow that to happen.

A related problem is that the Canadian auto manufacturers will not allow their dealers to sell Bricklins. Anti-trust legislation in the U.S. prevents that kind of regulation of dealership there.

A major problem now is lack of labor, Mr. Bricklin said. Newspaper advertisements asking for male or female help run for weeks but the labor situation in Saint John already is tight.

He says that with 2,000 cars already produced, the company has 40,000 back orders to fill.

There has been some talk lately of building a plant in the Mexican state of Baja California but Mr. Bricklin says this is not firm.

He says that if two or three times the current labor force in New Brunswick could be mustered here "we would then consider leasing space on a vessel (from Saint John) and shipping them west."

No somber notes at AA convention

DENVER (AP) — It may be the soberest convention in the United States but certainly not the most somber.

The hotels, motels, trailer courts, campgrounds and even the dormitories of the city's colleges are filled to capacity. But the bars are doing no extra business.

The more than 18,000 participants at the convention all bear name tags, but are identified only by their first name.

The reason for the anonymity is that the convention is to mark the 40th anniversary of Alcoholics Anonymous (AA).

There are no business meetings. No policies are set or reviewed. And there are no tours, no side trips or other distractions.

But there is an air of fun, lots of smiles, handshakes and social events, and, as usual, truckloads of coffee.

The catering service handling the convention has 12,600 pounds of coffee on hand, 250 cases of sugar and 1,620 gallons of cream. And built especially for the occasion were two coffee makers able to make more than 500,000 cups per day.

Members say the key to AA's success is alcoholics helping one another. There is no president, no national leadership. Even the board of trustees is made up of "nameless" persons.

"The common denominator among drinkers is that they are alone and at AA they learn the true meaning of sharing," said one member.

State interest in energy to continue: Exxon exec

NEW YORK (AP) — Government participation in the energy business is a fact of life which is here to stay, says the chairman of Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil company.

Clifton Garvin Jr. says, however, that the federal government should move toward a return to free markets while supplying financial aid and priorities for future energy development.

He said his greatest fear is that Exxon will become a public utility.

"We're going to have government as a partner in this country and all over the world from now on," Garvin said. "I'm not resigned to it, I accept it as a fact of life."

"All of the energy projects governments want around the world can't be financed by the private sector. There just isn't that much money."

Garvin, who moves up from president to succeed J. K. Jamieson as chairman, also said a solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict will not substantially lessen Arab demands for higher oil prices.

"Too many militants realize they have a depleting resource and you've got a shah who has himself overcommitted and needs all the money he can get his hands on," Garvin said.

He said the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) might increase prices 10 to 15 per cent this fall.

Mining firm seeks action against Newfoundland gov't.

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian Javelin Ltd., a mining and exploration company, just can't seem to keep out of court.

Its annual report lists 10 cases in which it is involved during 1974. Its 1975 annual report may be highlighting a case against the Newfoundland government.

A company official said court action is being contemplated following the government's expropriation of the Julien Lake iron ore deposit in Newfoundland.

"I think we'll have to go to court on it," said the official, refusing to comment further. Javelin claims it has spent $3.4 million exploring and developing the deposit but the government is offering only $750,000 compensation.

John McKillop, Newfoundland deputy minister of mines and energy, said the government is taking over the property because of the "lack of effort on Javelin's part to bring the property to production."

He maintained Javelin had spent only $565,000 in developing the deposit but a higher figure was decided upon to give the company "reasonable" compensation for the loss of the property.

Meanwhile, court action initiated by the Newfoundland government against Javelin and Canada Permanent Trust, continues.

The action, instituted Aug. 16, 1973, in the Supreme Court of Newfoundland, alleged the two companies "have wrongfully refused to transfer certain shares which the complainant held and sought to sell," said Javelin's annual report released this week.

"The action sought declaratory and injunctive relief to compel the transfer of the shares, together with damages and costs," the report said.

"The court ordered the company to permit transfer of the shares in question and the issue of damages remains to be litigated."

Most of the other 10 cases mentioned in Javelin's annual report were before United States courts and involved violations of the U.S. Securities Act.

Currently, the shares of Javelin, listed on the American, Montreal and Vancouver stock exchanges, are suspended from trading in the United States by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. In Montreal, the shares continue to be traded and Wednesday they advanced to $3.05 from $3.

The RCMP is investigating trading in the company's shares for possible fraudulent manipulation.

Net income for 1974, including extraordinary items, was $1,912,253 or 29 cents a share, compared with $273,032 or four cents a share in 1973. An extraordinary gain increased earnings by two cents a share in 1974 and an extraordinary loss in 1973 reduced earnings by nine cents a share.

The annual report also said that earlier this year, Javelin lost its right to develop the Cerro Colorado copper deposit in Panama.

The company said it is expecting soon to receive an initial payment of $5 million and is aiming for a total of not less than $23 million.

These negotiations will see the active participation of John Doyle, former company chairman, said the annual report.

The company's new chairman is Sarto Fournier, a Canadian senator from Hull, Que.

A company spokesman said Mr. Doyle resigned for personal reasons.

Volume on the NYSE reached an even 19 million shares, compared with 18.53 million on Wednesday.

The NYSE's composite index was up .16 to 50.45, and Standard and Poor's 500-stock index rose .18 to 94.36.

The early weakness followed confirmation from New York's First National City Bank that it would raise its prime lending rate from 6 1/4 to seven per cent. The increase was effective immediately.

But the market appeared to have taken the Citibank move largely into account in advance on Wednesday with a seven-point drop in the Dow, and the selling that greeted the actual announcement proved mild.

Prices then staged a mid-session recovery with the aid of a government report that wholesale prices in the U.S. took a downward turn again in June.

Champion Home Builders led the active list on the American Stock Exchange, up 1/4 at $4 1/2 on turnover of 78,400 shares. The Amex market value index picked up .15 to 92.60.

In the over-the-counter market, the NASDAQ composite index closed at 86.20, up .56.

Among Canadian issues on the NYSE, Hudson Bay was up 3/4 to $18 1/2, Hiram Walker 1/2 to $29 1/2 and Campbell Red Lake 1 to $31 1/2.

Inco was down 3 to $28 1/2, Seagram 1/4 to $29 1/2 and Alcan down 1/4 to $24 1/2.

Governments in business seldom operate like ordinary businessmen. Governments also have a seemingly endless curiosity about those they are dealing with (with the possible exception of people wanting to build pulp mills). One has only to examine the application form designed by the Manitoba Public Insurance Corporation covering its new fire and general insurance business to obtain justification for the above statements.

Government regulations specify that no insurance shall come into effect without the customer having signed the application form. This is different from private fire insurance, where the only signature most companies are interested in is that which appears on the bottom of the cheque to pay for the policy. Most private companies, working through agents, will issue a policy on the strength of a telephone call, backed up by a cheque.

But governments are different. Besides wanting the applicant's name and address, the government also wants his occupation and age. In the case of a house, the government wants to know when it was purchased, and the original purchase price. It wants recent photographs, if available. And, on the bottom of all the application forms appears this message: "In connection with this application for insurance I hereby consent that the Manitoba Public Insurance Corporation conduct and/or cause to be conducted a personal investigation."

Government insurance officials claim this waiver of what could amount to an invasion of privacy exists only to comply with new legislation requiring such consent before any investigation is conducted. But the private companies, who have no application forms, appear willing to issue insurance without the necessity of such a waiver or investigation. The private companies say the old practice of investigating before issuing automobile (but never homeowner) insurance was dropped years ago. They also argue that the other questions on the form, particularly those involving age and occupation, could be used as a basis of discrimination against the elderly in the issuing of government insurance. They base this apprehension on the clear warning issued by the insurance minister, Bill Uruski, that the government would take its share, but no more, of the bad risks, so that government insurance could not become a dumping ground for these risks.

In announcing government insurance against fire, theft and other perils, Mr. Uruski stressed the discounts which would be available to customers of the government scheme. A 15 per cent discount would be allowed to customers who have a fire alarm system installed in their homes. Mr. Uruski went so far as to suggest that agents might offer such alarms for sale, along with the policies. A further 10 per cent would be discounted if the customer insured up to 80 per cent of the replacement value of the articles covered, and a five per cent discount if valuable articles were identified with a vibrating pencil (to be loaned by agents) and potential thieves warned that "operation identification" was complete through the posting of appropriate signs (supplied by the agents) at all entrances to the dwelling.

The discounts do exist within the policies offered by the Manitoba Public Insurance Corporation. However, private insurers have been quick to point out that the discounts are rather limited in their application. To qualify, an insured must live within 1,000 feet of a fire hydrant, a restriction guaranteed to eliminate the discounts from many rural areas. The insured buildings must be no older than 25 years, a rule which will eliminate restrictions from much of the core area of Winnipeg, and the insured must have a clear loss record of at least three years. This last restriction is something Manitoba motorists have been attempting to persuade Autopac to adopt for the past several years.

Mr. Uruski has said the government is going into the fire insurance business to fill a need for insurance where none is available.

Growing up in Winnipeg—an author's view

Growing up surrounded by middle-class values in the 1950s in Winnipeg may induce a yawn from say, one who was raised during the frantic, more liberalized days of the 1960s.

Melinda McCracken must have had an inkling of this when she wrote Memories of a Yawn—reflecting on her own childhood and teenage years.

She has produced a work that relies heavily on the 1957 yearbook of her alma mater Churchill high school for its content, but also gives a cleverly crafted insight into a nostalgic era, at least to a younger generation.

Miss McCracken describes her neighborhood in minute detail, as if the terrain, people, institutions and style of living are somewhat unique.

Yet anyone who grew up in Canada in the 1950s will be able to identify their own early years.

Children of the 1950s were, according to the author, surrounded by stability and community. The British Empire still was intact in this country. There was a yen for peace and a more settled existence among parents who had survived the ravages and instability of the Second World War.

HOME SECURE

Home and community was a ballast, not necessarily against any outside fear. It demonstrated itself in the solidarity of belief in family, church and institutions.

Miss McCracken writes: "It was hard for Riverview (her community) kids to be anything but wholesome. There was little around that wasn't good. Kids had no responsibilities. They were what parents were raising, and parents did most things for them. Kids were protected from practically everything."

Next to a young girl's security of family and school were the bonds she held with her friends, which incidentally for Miss McCracken continue today.

The girls and boys who made up the crowd also came from agreeable homes. All joined either the girl guides or boy scouts.

Their fun consisted of tobogganing through the long, harsh Winnipeg winters, listening to the Jack Benny show on radio and reading

Looney Toons and Merrie Melodies comic books.

ALL GOOD AMERICAN

Moving into their teen-age years, American capital and culture started to pour into Canada and brought to the young what the author writes "appeared to be the source of all good things, things that were magical and ingenious and fun."

Although they continued to raise their families on solid foundations, attend church and serve their communities, parents were seeing a change. As the standard of living escalated they began to accumulate possessions. Children were also regarded as possessions.

"There was just too much of a good thing," she writes. The security of marriage, a warm home, health, of youth of good people to help you, of father's job and mother's love filled the air like cotton batting.

She adds there was the security of public morality forbidding mention of sex, violence or bad language.

Miss McCracken's photographic memory exposes events that shaped the lives of Canadians now approaching their middle years.

In fact one of the most touching segments in the book which reveals her solid background comes at the close when she lists each member of her class of '57 and tells what they have achieved 18 years later.

Compton County society reads historical notes

The members and friends of Compton County Historical and Museum Society attended a meeting in the Museum at Eaton on Friday evening, June 27. The first vice-president, Mr. A.H. Banks, presided, and welcomed all. He then called on Miss Thelma Crawford to introduce the guest speaker, Mrs. C.J. Hoy, who chose as her topic "A Soldier's Diary."

Her address was based on a short authentic account of the expedition against Quebec in the year 1759, under the command of Major-General James Wolfe, by a volunteer in that expedition.

This booklet of 40 pages had been given to Mrs. Hoy's brother by a friend in Quebec. Upon reading it, she decided to use the facts therein described in it and based her talk on its contents.

The account started in April 1759, stating that the forces were to rendezvous at Louisbourg, with Halifax as an alternate. Luck was against them as Louisbourg was clogged with ice until the end of May. On May 31 the whole force was assembled—in all, 8,535 men and officers. They went ashore each day, weather permitting, for air and exercise and to bring aboard water and provisions.

After a false start on June 4, they really got going on June 6, and by June 18 they reached Bic, where things began to get "sticky". Sailing conditions were now controlled by winds, tides and daylight. They received the bad news that a French fleet of 23 ships had preceded them, carrying men, clothing, ammunition, food and merchandise. Consequently, a well equipped enemy would greet them.

Being good navigators, and fearing nothing, they continued upstream, and arrived at the Isle of Orleans, having lost only a few anchors and cables along the way. They were now in the South Channel, and in sight of Quebec City. Having made a survey of their location, they realized that all along the North Shore, from the Saint Charles East to almost the Montmorency River, the bank bristled with guns, boats and men—15 to 16 thousand troops.

Even the weather was against them, for the weatherman managed to stir up a gale. When the weather moderated they realized no ships had been lost, only a few were stuck in the mud where the water was shallow.

Ashore, the enemy decided to act, and on June 28, they towed 7 ships out into the stream, set them afire, and cut them adrift, with the idea that they would float and start the English fleet to burn. However, they had been too cautious and cut them free too soon, so the British rowed out with grapples and towed them ashore, where they provided free fireworks for the fleet.

How to attack the town was the problem which baffled General Wolfe. Scouting parties went along the South Shore near Levis, and then they realized that their plan of landing and later rafting the men across the St. Lawrence River was fool-hardy, and they wisely abandoned this idea. They then realized that the only way was to get a foothold on the North Shore and attack, but how was this to be accomplished—that was the question.

Meanwhile, they made life as miserable as possible for the inhabitants by firing ashore what they called a "Carcass", which was a sort of fire bomb, and which did considerable damage to some of the buildings, the Cathedral being destroyed, much to the chagrin of the people.

A number of attempts were made to harass the people, and destroy their houses. Levis and Montmorency Falls were some of the targets. General Wolfe had previously issued a manifesto, saying that all towns offering opposition would be burnt—and he really meant what he said. In the late summer they proceeded upstream, and burned the little town of Sainte Antoine, then on to Deschambault and Portneuf, where they did more damage.

Meanwhile a survey was made from the South Shore as to the approach to the town by way of the Plains of Abraham. Quebec City is on two levels, Upper and Lower Town, separated by a steep escarpment, starting out near the old town of Ste. Foy, and circling the city.

Palace Hill is very steep, beside the terrace in front of the Frontenac Hotel. It is a sheer drop of several feet and this continues well up beyond the Bridge. These two levels have been a severe handicap to the inhabitants through the years.

By September 12 final plans were made for the real attack. At 2 a.m., Sept. 13, the English started for the landing. A sentry spied them, but as they were expecting supplies that night, a fast-talking officer, who spoke French, got them by safely. When too many came ashore, the sentries awakened to the awful truth, and gave battle, but were easily overcome. Some, however, raced for town, shooting and shouting, and sounding an alarm.

Down on the shore General Wolfe was urging speed—a rather difficult feat, considering the sheer ascent. When Wolfe reached the top there was no enemy in sight, for a British deserter had told the French that General Wolfe intended to land downstream at Beauport. A few soldiers in a house and some Indians in the bushes were soon flushed out.

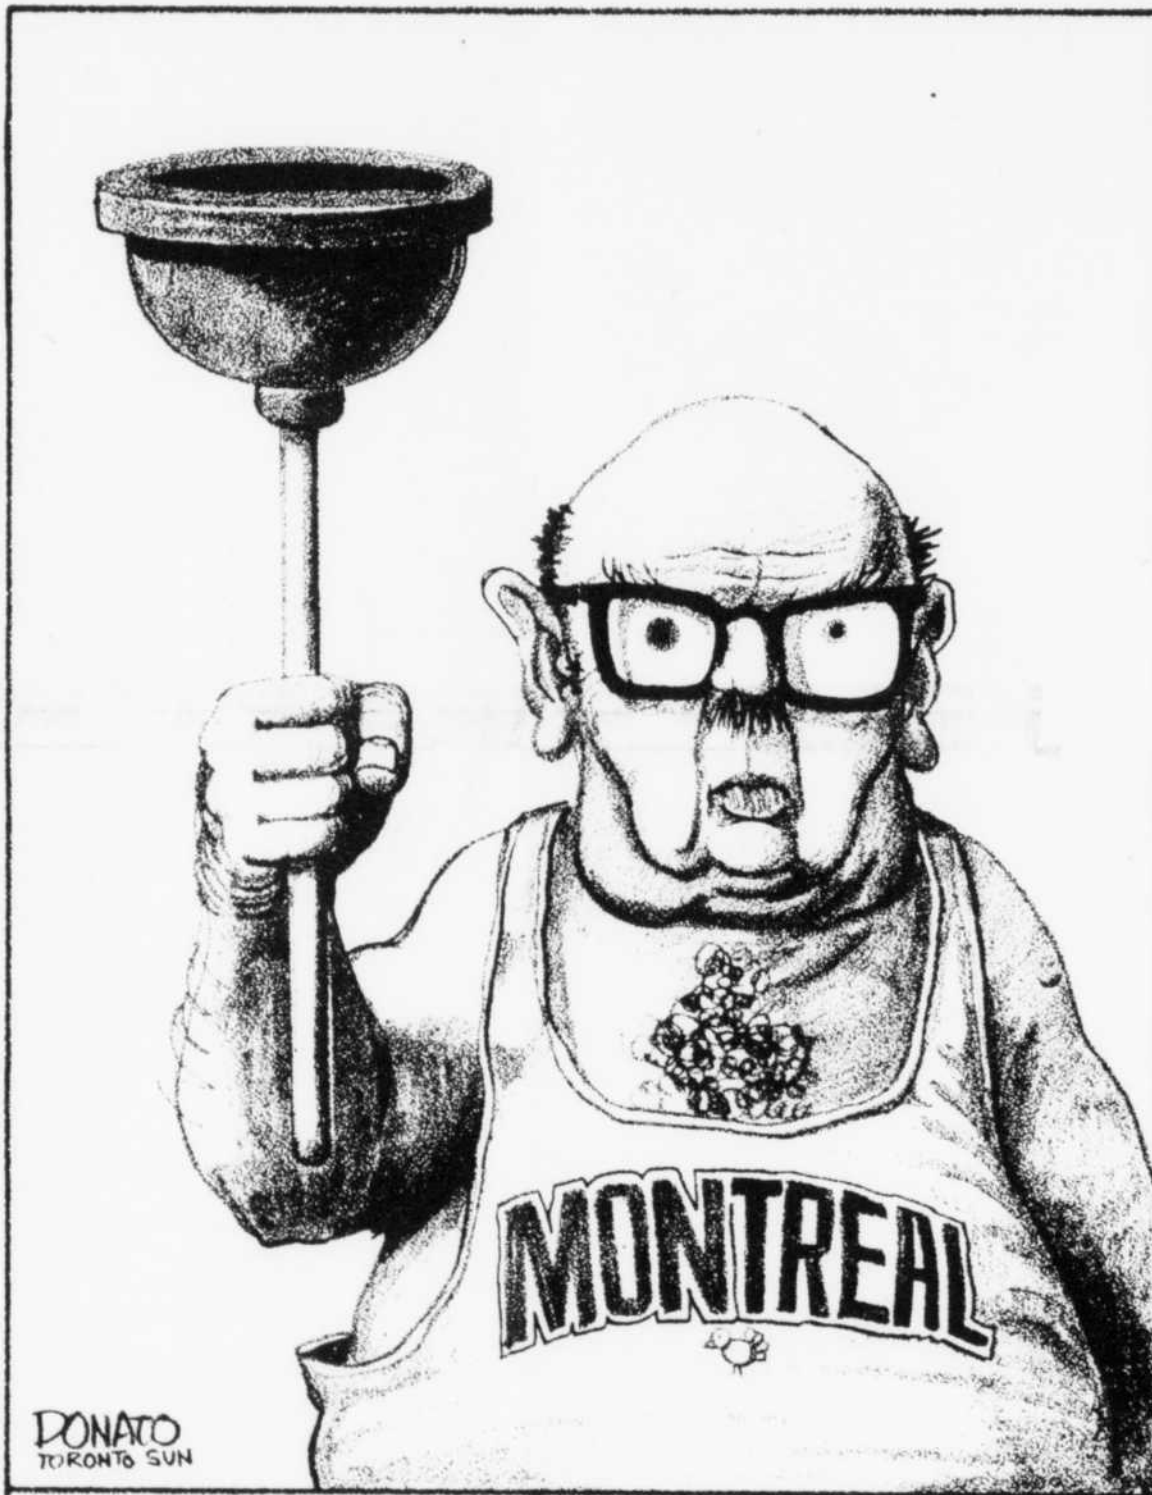

Meanwhile, down in the town, the alarm given by the sentries was having effect. By 8 a.m. the troops were facing each other at some distance. At 9 a.m. Montcalm ordered a charge. His men moved up in orderly fashion at first, but as the distance narrowed, so did their restraint. Before they were in range, they began to fire, which was very unwise. The British held their fire until about 100 yards from the enemy, and then they opened fire simultaneously. Montcalm's men turned and started for the shelter of the wall, and by 10 a.m. they were scouting behind its protection; over by Ste. Foy there was steeper resistance.

General Murray, with a Battalion of Highlanders, pursued the enemy right through St. Louis Gate and into town, where the old Y.W. was located, there they lost sight of their quarry, and came back to the Plains, where it was safer. Sporadic firing broke out, and this time the Highlanders and a Battalion of Royal Americans chased them down over the bank, into St. Roc, and as far as the St. Charles River Bridge. Victory was theirs, but with serious losses. General Wolfe was killed. Montcalm and Carleton wounded. Total losses were nine officers killed, 55 wounded, 49 non-commissioned officers and men killed, 542 wounded. The French suffered more serious losses, and Montcalm was mortally wounded.

From September 14-16, there was the odd outburst, but on September 17, proposals were made for Capitulation, and on Sept. 18 the Capitulation was signed by Charles Saunders, George Townsend and by De Ramzay. The eleven articles sounded very just to the losers. They granted, among other things, an honorable departure for the Garrison to the nearest port in France, that the inhabitants should keep their homes and all goods, and that they should not be punished for fighting, and that they could continue to worship as before. In view of the present unrest in the Province of Quebec, one cannot help but wonder "Who won the war?" Mrs. Hoy stated.

Mrs. Hoy had maps on hand and traced the places of interest. She was thanked by Mr. Ronald Stokes for her very interesting and informative address.

The secretary stated that she had sent out a sympathy card to the family of the late Mrs. George Parsons, who would be sadly missed by the members and friends of the society.

Marcos' Watergate

Jack Anderson's

Washington

WASHINGTON — Yesterday we reported that Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos offered a former confidant, Primitivo Mijares, a $50,000 bribe not to tell the U.S. Congress what he knows about corruption in the Philippines.

Today we can reveal the story that Marcos tried to cover up. It is another Watergate scandal, Philippine version—a story of high crimes and misdemeanors, ranging from abuse of power to misuse of government funds.

The story is told in a 24-page memo, which Mijares submitted to the House International Organizations Subcommittee. In the memo, he freely confesses his own dirty work for Marcos.

The memo details how Marcos won reelection in 1969 using some of the same tactics that Richard Nixon picked up in 1972. Mijares describes the Marcos campaign as "the dirtiest election ever held in the Philippines."

Marcos used "guns, guns and gold," his former confidant charges, to win the 1969 election. The strategy was to create an atmosphere of disturbance, which called for Marcos' strong hand to control.

The Philippine president, according to the memo, "had military personnel infiltrate the ranks of demonstrators to explode bombs in their midst and to instigate the demonstrators into committing acts of violence."

Philippine air force infiltrators allegedly lobbed "heavy explosives in front of the (U.S.) consular offices," and "armed forces psychological warfare units" conducted bombing on Manila's water system, city hall and the bathroom of the Constitutional Convention. The violence was "later blamed by Mr. Marcos on the Maoist People's Army."

The incidents that Marcos secretly encouraged, Mijares alleges, had their innocent victims. When a bomb exploded inside a department store, for example, "a family man who was buying a gift for a child observing his birthday was blown to bits." A conscience-stricken police sergeant later confessed he had planted the bomb "on superior orders," claims Mijares.

To improve his press notices, Marcos allowed "heavy borrowings from the Philippine Bank," according to the memo, so a toady could buy up a "media empire." Allegedly, the pro-Marcos media even collected "part of their salaries... from the president's contingent fund."

These tactics worked so well, charges Mijares, that the re-elected Marcos continued using them to take over dictatorial power. Under the Philippine constitution, Marcos was limited to two terms, but he had no intention of retiring.

He continued to whip up a crisis fever. He staged "a supposed landing of combat weapons," for example, "along the coast of Dugway." Mijares claims the weapons were planted by "a special operations group of trusted military men," but Marcos loudly blamed "a foreign power" and "Maoist guerrillas."

There was also a faked ambush, Mijares charges, involving a Philippine official's car. By exploiting these incidents, Marcos had the country psychologically ready for his proclamation of martial law on Sept. 21, 1972.

With a great show of benevolence, he proclaimed a so-called "smiling martial law." He quickly restored order and gave the citizenry respite from turmoil. But he also closed down opposition newspapers and jailed recalcitrant editors and rivals.

Marcos asked a Constitutional Convention to put a stamp of legitimacy upon his dictatorship. But when the delegates showed a little independence, the memo states, he "caused the arrest and detention in military stockades of delegates" and "bribed floor leaders of the convention with money and favors."

To make doubly sure the convention gave Marcos the powers he wanted, alleges Mijares, the results "were manufactured by a group headed by the president's favorite brother-in-law, Gov. Benjamin Romualdez."

Mijares had personal knowledge that the convention vote was rigged, he writes, because "I was a member of that group." Just as John Dean later confessed his role in the Nixon scandals, Mijares describes how he ordered the takeover of a newspaper, investigated an Associated Press reporter, prepared phony stories on revolutionaries and committed other outrages on Marcos' orders.

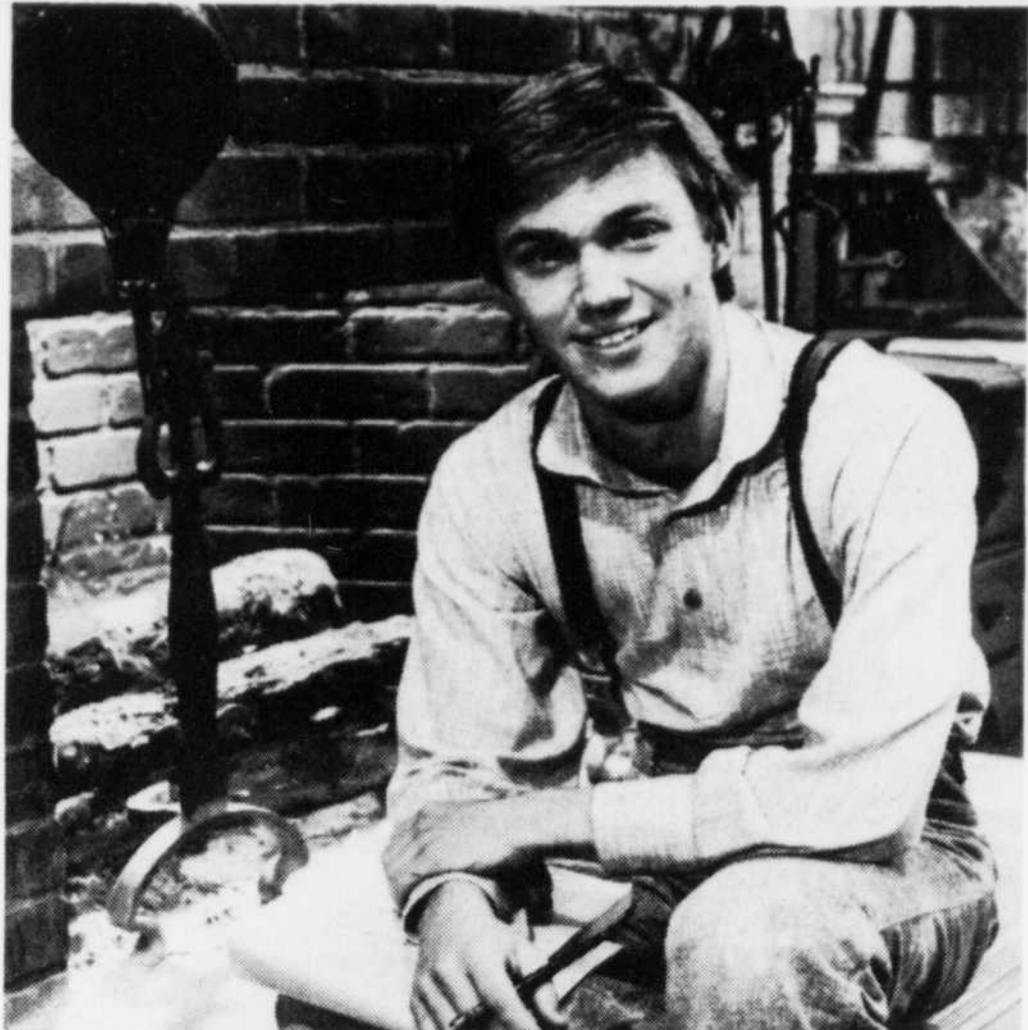

The Mijares memo then tells how Marcos' "military regime has gone absolutely corrupt." The dictator parcelled out to his cronies the licenses to smuggle in luxury goods and to smuggle out sugar, copra, lumber and cement, charges Mijares. Military supporters have been given fabulously lucrative rackets in Manila to run as they please, he adds.

Through front men, according to Mijares, Marcos has taken over agricultural lands in northern Luzon, the Visayas and Mindanao. He also allegedly controls oil concessions, a huge export business, a free trade zone in Mariveles and even a claim on some buried World War II Japanese treasure in the Sierra Madre.

Mijares also claims that Marcos has misused some of the $100 million in U.S. aid he gets each year. The greatest part of U.S. medical aid, for example, "goes to the United Drug Company, the biggest pharmaceutical firm in the country, which is owned by a front man of the president," alleges the memo.

Yet the U.S. State Department, swears Mijares, has thwarted Marcos' democratic opponents by supporting "the Philippine martial regime."

UNESCO survey

World shrinks but media grows

By William Steil

PARIS — (NEA) — The Swedes have replaced the British as the world's champion newspaper readers. The United States has the world's largest number of TV sets. Seventeen Asian nations produce more than half the world's feature films, and Russians are the world's most ardent moviegoers.

Those are a few of the fascinating facts packed into a new world survey of the media in 200 countries just published by the United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO). The 5,330 page volume is a follow-up on a similar survey done 10 years ago.

Worldwide, UNESCO concludes that more people than ever are being reached by the media, it says.

In terms of numbers of titles and circulation per 1,000 population, the daily press stands more or less where it did 10 years ago. Europe as a whole continues to have more dailies and periodicals than any other region in the world.

The press is now often outstripped by radio and TV as the reporter of current news. But there is evidence to suggest that what people read makes a more lasting impression than what they hear by radio or see on TV and that they still rely on newspapers and periodicals to confirm news and to present views.

TV services "now exist in many more countries than 10 years ago but in most the number of receivers is still small."

Communications satellites have revolutionized TV transmission and a new generation of satellites allows broadcasts "directly to community reception points within defined areas" without costly receiving terminals on earth. Thousands of villages in Africa, India and Brazil now benefit from this new technology.

In 50 countries, news agencies are run as "organs of the state." In 40 other nations the agencies are cooperative associations, owned and run by newspapers and sometimes radio and TV firms.

Private companies still publish newspapers in most countries, but 10 African nations, eight Asian nations, Cuba, the Soviet Union and New Zealand — "produce enough to be able to export considerable quantities." The United States, second largest newspaper producer after Canada,

"consumes more than three times its own annual production of three million metric tons."

Reporting specifically on the United States, UNESCO said more newspapers and periodicals are published there than in any other nation. It said there are now 1,761 daily American newspapers compared to 1,763 in 1961. The survey found the number of individual communities with dailies had risen from 1,460 to 1,500. It reported circulation has increased by three million to more than 65 million daily in the last 10 years.

There are more than 6,600 radio transmitters in the U.S. now, compared to 4,500 a decade ago, and the number of radio sets has doubled in 10 years to today's 354 million, 90 million of them in autos.

There are almost 99 million TV sets in the U.S., 37 million of them color receivers. There are 915 TV stations, 220 of them, non-commercial. More than 2,500 U.S. cable TV networks now have more than six million households as paying subscribers. "It is expected that within 10 years there will be 4,000 networks serving 28 million households," UNESCO said.

U.S. film-making "has remained fairly stable at around 280 titles annually over the last few years" — compared with 142 titles in 1961 when the movie industry was hard-hit by the rise by TV. In the late 1940s the U.S. film industry was producing around 380 features yearly, UNESCO said more than 55 per cent of U.S. movie earnings come from foreign sources.

The survey found the number of U.S. film theaters, which totaled 19,000 in 1953 and dropped to under 10,000 by 1965, gradually has risen to 14,300, of which 4,600 are drive-ins.

Sunday School closes

BULWER — On Sunday, June 29, the Bulwer Sunday School closed for the summer season.

During the regular church service, the superintendent, Mr. Morris Smith, presented attendance pins to Janet MacBurney, Scott Lowd and Charleen Smith.

He also thanked the teachers and their substitutes, for their devotion and he expressed a special thanks to his wife, Roberta, secretary-treasurer, for all the help she had given him.

In turn, Rev. Gaudine thanked Mr. Smith for taking time from a busy schedule to be the superintendent of the Sunday School and for the work involved with such a responsibility.

Later in the day, the annual picnic was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Richardson.

Lunch was enjoyed under the trees, and the pond was a very popular spot, both before and after dinner.

Races were organized by the senior girls' class, Shelley and Marlene Harvey and Charleen Smith.

Bag race, ages 3-5, Janet MacBurney, Jessie Mae Hyman and Joanne Richardson.

6-7, Bryce Laberee, Paula Ward, Cindy Richardson.

8-11, Darrin Laberee, Scott Lowd and Steven Harvey.

12 and over, Shelly and Marlene Harvey (tie) Zophie and Charleen Smith.

Three-legged race, 6-12 — Darrin and Bryce Laberee, Cindy Richardson and Paula Ward, Marlene Harvey and Scott Lowd.

The senior boys, Steven Harvey, Gary Nutbrown and Scott Lowd were organized to look after a ball game, but due to the heat of the day and the popularity of the water, the game never got underway!

(They left immediately after they were married to fly to Vancouver to spend a three-week honeymoon visiting friends and family there and in Nanaimo, Fauquier, White Rock, Delta and other places in Southern B.C.)

Upon arriving, guests were greeted by the bride and groom and offered a glass of punch. Many wedding gifts were on display to be viewed by all.

Chairs were placed about the large lawn where guests sat in the shade and enjoyed an afternoon visiting with friends.

Coffee, sandwiches and cookies were served, after which Eddy and Georgie passed the wedding cake.

Lovely and useful gifts were received, for which the couple graciously thanked each and everyone.

Mr. and Mrs. Fowler will take up residence at Kingsbury where they will continue farming.

Escorted to a chair under a pink and white umbrella, gay balloons and a generous supply of confetti, she was presented with a large basket decorated in the color scheme and piled high with attractively wrapped gifts.

The basket was refilled several times, while Miss Baker, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Charles Baker and her prospective mother-in-law, Mrs. H. Allain of Richmond, opened the presents and circulated them among the guests.

Miss Baker expressed her thanks for the lovely and useful gifts and also her deep appreciation to the hostesses, Mrs. Cook, Mrs. R. Evans and Mrs. R. Patterson.

Shake 'em up with a different salad

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Casual cookouts are in full swing for the summer months.

Everyone invited to bring a covered dish to a barbecue likes to take something special that will draw raves. One such will be a different banana salad. Too often we look in ideas about how to serve or mix certain vegetables and fruits. This salad tastefully illustrates that old rules are meant to be broken — or is that eaten? It also is a quickie dish to prepare for unexpected drop-ins and refreshing to eat on hot days.

DIFFERENT BANANA SALAD

- 4 cups torn salad greens (spinach, chicory, escarole, lettuce)
- 1 cup pitted ripe olives (sliced or whole)
- 1 cup fresh grapefruit sections
- 1 cup halved or whole cherry tomatoes, sliced
- 2 bananas, sliced

In large bowl combine salad greens, olives and grapefruit sections. Peel bananas, cut into slices and add with French dressing. Toss lightly to mix well and serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

*Well drained canned or chilled grapefruit sections may be used.

FRENCH DRESSING

- 1 cup salad oil
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 2 teaspoons vinegar
- 1/2 teaspoon prepared mustard
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon dried leaf basil
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley

In small bowl, combine all ingredients. Stir vigorously or beat to mix well. If desired, use 1/3 cup prepared French or Italian dressing.

Coping Value daydreaming a case study

By Lew Koch

Psychiatrists are now beginning to recognize the value of daydreaming. There is now evidence that a person's fantasies can actually be a motivating force in helping him actualize those dreams.

A recent study conducted by Leonard Gumbria of the daydreaming habits of 375 men shows that problem-solving is the most frequent type of activity in the daydreams of every age group except in 17 to 23-year-olds where sex has a slight edge.

Gumbria, in an article published in "Psychology Today," calls daydreams the "backburner of the mind — a light from the immediate, but not a far light."

Gumbria agrees with psychologist Erik Klinger who thinks daydreams act as an alternative channel where information can be organized creatively.

Other analysts also point out that some adults feel guilty about daydreaming and often berate their children about their daydreaming. It properly directed, they say, this very human activity is an emotional outlet for all ages. It shouldn't be discouraged as long as the individual does not lose touch with the world around him.

A case in point which most people missed when they watched the Emmy awards not too long ago is a man named Billy Goldenberg. He accepted two awards for his score and title song of the TV movie, "Queen of the Stardust Ballroom."

Billy Goldenberg made his career choice when he was 8 after seeing a Broadway musical. He wanted to be a composer. But when Billy entered high school, his musician father lost his job playing in a radio orchestra. Billy's father, as well as many of his father's musician-friends who were also out of work, used to sit around the house telling Billy to stop dreaming about becoming a composer. "Security" became the password in the Goldenberg home.

So Billy stuffed his dreams in the backroom of his mind and went off to college, majoring in physics and mathematics and then onto a job as a computer programmer for an insurance company.

"I remember walking in that office for the first time and seeing the miles of desks," Billy recalled. "I thought, 'my god, this is going to be the rest of my life.'"

But as hard as Billy tried to keep his fantasy about being a composer locked away, it kept slipping out. His "security" fought a battle with his "dream" and the outcome was an ulcer.

Billy tried teaching music and playing the piano instead of running a computer, but the dream of being a composer kept recurring and so he quit his job and headed for the theater. Little jobs led to bigger ones and he found himself working with other dreamers like Mike Nichols and Elaine May, Woody Allen, Liza Minnelli, Burr Tillstrom and Barbra Streisand.

There were some failures along the way and the word "security" would occasionally pop into his mind. But he kept on dreaming.

He found himself on the West coast, first working in television and then, for two years, learning the intricacies of film. He began to compose music of television programs, winning an Emmy on the way for his theme music for "Kojak," which in turn led to his score for "Queen of the Stardust Ballroom."

"I think I'm living out most of my childhood fantasies," says Billy. "The one thing I've always believed in is dreams. Fantasies, delusions and grandeur are probably the healthiest thing a human being has. Of course, you can have them and choose not to pay any attention to them. You can take a pill or a drink every New Year's Eve and say what you could have been. But it's much more interesting to try and achieve a result. You have to gamble, take a chance."

FDA strives to improve safety of mushroom

By Gaynor Maddox

This is peak season for fresh mushrooms. The markets are full of them although today they are grown year round. Air conditioned growing "houses" stretch the growing season by maintaining the even temperature once guaranteed only by limestone caves. These caves also were unfit and had the right humidity.

But now the energy crisis worries modern growers of fresh mushrooms. Constantly leaping prices become a cost hazard. Another worry to American processors of mushrooms is the Oriental competition. From Thailand, Korea and the People Republic of China come hundreds of pounds of canned mushrooms for sale to American housewives and restaurants. They are of the same strain as the American mushrooms and are considered safe. But American producers, together with some of the competing Orientals, are urging Congress to regulate the trade to bring about some orderly marketing arrangement. Congress, we are told, needs some extra push, not showing too much interest to date.

About 50 per cent of the U.S. mushroom processors are concentrated in Pennsylvania. Other mushroom producing states are California, Ohio, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, Delaware and Washington. The industry at large was jolted last year by a series of recalls of mushrooms by the Food and Drug Administration for under-processing. That is a critical factor in low acid foods such as mushrooms. While no cases of botulism occurred and most manufacturers were not involved, the industry adopted a set of safeguards against the possibility of insufficient processing.

The national trade group of domestic mushroom canners and glass packers, known as the Mushroom Processors Association, established a new program which includes frequent, unannounced inspections of plants.

Using the FDA's new Good Manufacturing Practices for low acid foods as a base, the program includes adaptations to the specific needs of mushrooms. Dr. Thomas, formerly associate director of the FDA's Division of Microbiology, is making the inspections, checking 77 different processing and quality requirements.

Participating firms will be allowed to use a mushroom seal. It reads "Process Certified." This is placed on container lids. A national education campaign will explain the significance of the seal to housewives and other consumers.

E.M. Damon, executive secretary of the Mushroom Packers Association, states that the certification inspections already are underway. It is expected that cans displaying the "Process Certified" seal will be coming off the lines later this year. Damon added that while the program is voluntary, his group expects that all processors will join the program.

Proper packing cuts breakage

By Jean Barnes

From the East Coast to the West Coast this summer tens of thousands of families will be transplanting themselves and their possessions to a new area before school starts next fall. We live in a mobile society. The chances are great that you will move sometime within the next five to seven years. And if you are a collector moving is likely to be an anxiety-filled experience.

To make your move less traumatic, we talked with three pros. Two are dealers who pack and unpack their valuable Meissen, cut crystal and silver wares 40 to 60 times a year. The third is a service consultant with United Van Lines.

The materials you will need include heavy, sturdy boxes, either of wood or reinforced corrugated cardboard with sturdy lids. We use chicken boxes from the grocery store, said Dee Cass, Innis, Tex. dealer. These boxes have separate lids and are similar to boxes used for shipping fruit.

Bob Hartsel, Dowagiac, Mich., cautioned against using cardboard because he lost several pieces when the bottom of a box set on a moist floor gave way.

Jean Marney, a moving service consultant, added that most moving companies have packing boxes and materials for sale to those who want to do the packing themselves. And United has a packing guide to help them.

For wrapping individual pieces, both dealers use hospital diapers — an absorbent pad lined on one side with thin plastic. These are larger than the regular disposable baby's diaper and will cover most things. Cut glass requires some extra precautions, Dee Cass explained. "When we pack cut glass with an open top we put cut edges face down with a thin layer of foam or a scrap of carpet pad underneath. This is because the least little vibration of the piece will cut through the wrapping." She also recommended care when unpacking cut glass. A sudden temperature change will break it. "Make sure you give it time to adjust to the room temperature before unpacking it," Hartsel also has found that the diaper material protects silver objects from moisture and does not cause discoloration.

Newspaper stock (without print) is an excellent shock absorber if crushed and stuffed around between under and over packed objects. All three warned about the staining which newspaper ink can cause and newspapers should never be used as wrapping. Ink-smudged fingers can cause stains on old porcelain or satin glass.

Pack the heaviest items on the bottom. Very fragile items should be wrapped and packed inside a small carton before putting it in with other objects. Tissue paper, paper towels and facial tissues are all good wrapping material for small objects.

Ann Landers 'Lost chord' victim regrets cigarette smoking habit

Dear Ann Landers: In a recent column you said, "I hope I'm not boring my readers to death with so many anti-cigarette letters."

Please don't give up the fight, Ann. People listen to you and we need all the help we can get to educate the public. I hope you'll print one more letter from a member of the "Lost Chord Club." Here is:

Dear Friends: I was a resident of Chattanooga for over 50 years. My name is Ray Callaway. I was a heavy smoker for 30 years and am now a member of the "Lost Chord Club." Anyone who wants to join can try for membership. The best way is to start smoking when you are young and keep at it — increasing the number of cigarettes until you are really way up there.

I was checked out at M.D. Anderson University of Texas Hospital in Houston. They told me my vocal chords and voice box, plus two malignant tumors had to be removed. That was in January of '75.

Since then I have undergone a laryngectomy. I couldn't even spell it and I'd had two years of college. What it means is the removal of the vocal chords and voice box and you have to breathe through an opening in the neck.

I attended a "Lost Chord" meeting in March and there were 13 laryngectomees around that table. Twelve of us had been heavy smokers. Only one had been an abstainer.

If a single person who reads this letter has sense enough to quit smoking cigarettes before it's too late, I'll have done some good in life. — Ray Callaway

Dear Ray: Millions of people read your letter today. I'm sure, somewhere, somehow, you got through to somebody. Thanks for telling your story.

Dear Ann Landers: This is a petty gripe compared with the load of serious problems that face you daily, but it's driving me nuts.

My aunt (a dear woman in her 60s) sends cards and gifts to our little girl (age four) addressed to "Mistress Mary Smith." I dislike such fancy, uppity-sounding "titles" but don't want to offend my sweet aunt.

Will you comment, please? Auntie is a daily reader and will surely recognize herself. Thanks for doing my dirty work. — U-No-Hoo

Dear U: Why be annoyed? The poor woman is ignorant. She obviously believes "Mistress" is the female counterpart for "Master" — which it isn't. The next time you see Auntie take out a dictionary and point out the definition of "Mistress." You can both have a good laugh and that will be the end of it.

Dear Ann: Last night my husband and I went to a dinner party in the home of people we know casually through Jim's work. After dinner the hostess brought out their "hobby" — a collection of low-down pornography. It showed group sex of every type and I was mortified. I left the room but Jim stayed and couldn't get enough of it.

On the way home I told him I never wanted to see those people again. He said I was "square" and added, "When in Rome you do as the Romans do." Am I wrong? — Alice

Dear Alice: It depends on what the Romans are doing. If it doesn't happen to be your cup of tea, you don't do it. I'm with you, dearie.

Dear Ann: Thanks for saying, "Not everyone belongs in college." Too many parents think it's a social disgrace if their children would prefer to go to work or, heaven forbid, attend a vocational school instead of follow Dad to Dartmouth of Mom to Smith.

About 80 per cent of the jobs today require no college degree. In fact the world needs more Ph.D.s like I need a hole in my head.

Please stress the dignity of work and the value of vocational education. — Over-Educated

Dear O.E.: "The dignity of work!" What a beautiful phrase! Thank you for a sane and solid letter. It's a pleasure to print it.

Plastic containers seen cancerous

WASHINGTON (AP) — A public interest health group urged the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) Tuesday to impose a ban against use of vinyl chloride in plastic food packaging.

The Health Research Group, established by consumer advocate Ralph Nader, said significant amounts of the potentially cancer-causing vinyl chloride chemical can seep from food containers into meats, vegetable oils and other products.

"There is no evidence that there is any type of food (or for that matter, drugs or cosmetics) that will not extract at least some vinyl chloride from PVC," the health group said in its petition to the FDA. PVC is polyvinyl chloride, the plastic made from vinyl chloride.

Previously, a rare and often fatal form of liver cancer was linked to inhalation of vinyl chloride gas by industrial workers.

But an Italian scientist, Cesare Maltoni, this spring published preliminary findings indicating that some experimental animals fed vinyl chloride also develop the liver cancer.

Howard Roberts, acting director of FDA's bureau of foods, said: "If vinyl chloride is shown to be carcinogenic upon ingestion when Dr. Maltoni's study has been completed, it may be necessary to ban the use of vinyl chloride in contact with food."

Eighteen high-card points opposite 17 will usually produce an easy small slam. In fact it is likely to be enough to bring in all 13 tricks with a little luck.

This time the mirror distribution left South with a rather poor play for 12. Specifically, he needed two spade tricks. The book played in this situation is to lead to the nine. If that finesse loses to the 10 you concede defeat. If it would have come off here, if West had not been ready with a fine deceptive play.

When South led the first spade, West hopped up with his queen. South looked hard at West. He looked hopefully at the ceiling and the floor. He looked some more and finally let the queen hold. Later on he led to the jack and finessed on the theory that West had played the queen from king-queen.

Should South have fallen for that fine play? Not in reality top circles against some top defenders, but all in all we sympathize with South and feel that any one of us might have fallen as South did.

Nixon seeks documents for autobiography

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon says time is running short and he cannot adequately write his memoirs unless he obtains the tapes and documents left behind when he resigned as U.S. president.

"I am 62 years old and desire to complete the task of reviewing my presidential materials during my lifetime," Nixon says in a sworn affidavit. "Each month that these materials remain unavailable for that purpose can never be recaptured and thus represents an invaluable loss."

The Nixon affidavit was the latest legal document in his fight with the government over ownership of the 42 million documents and 880 reels of tape recordings amassed in the 5½-year Nixon presidency.

The affidavit was filed late Monday with a three-judge court considering Nixon's claim that Congress acted unconstitutionally by giving the government possession of the materials. The government and other parties involved in the battle have another month to respond.

"Even though for nearly 200 years former presidents of the United States have been considered the owners of their presidential materials, the materials of my administration have been impounded at a location nearly 3,000 miles from my home in California and under restrictions which prevent any access by me or my authorized agents..." Nixon said.

'LIMITLESS VARIETY' Nixon said the materials involved are of "almost limitless variety," including correspondence, memoranda, personal, official and political.

He said his associates would not have engaged in frank discussions if they had known that control of documents would be taken from Nixon.

"These discussions, if made public even now, would not necessarily jeopardize the national security or be embarrassing to the participants, but they would surely chill the willingness of persons in similar positions now and in the future to engage in such candid and robust discussions for fear that their thoughts too may be made public by congressional act," the affidavit said.

Nixon's lawyers also filed an affidavit from John Eisenhower, son of President Dwight Eisenhower, who said his father always had a staff member present in every discussion to prepare a memorandum of the talks for the files.

DID THE SAME
Nixon said Eisenhower used the memorandums for his memoirs and his predecessor, Lyndon Johnson, did the same with tape recordings made in the White House.

In fact, Nixon said it was at Johnson's urging that he installed the automatic taping system that ultimately contributed to his resignation from office.

Harry Middleton, director of the LBJ Library in Austin, Tex., confirmed that President Johnson used a recording device in the White House to monitor telephone calls. It was his understanding based on conversations with Johnson aides that previous presidents had installed the device.

New cataract treatment 'promising,' says doctor

MONTREAL (CP) — Only two weeks after Lillian Nathan had an artificial lens implanted in her eye, she was able to drive a car and read the fine print in newspapers—with even better vision than she had before developing a cataract.

She had undergone an operation which was a modification of the traditional technique for the removal of cataracts.

Developed in recent years by a small group of international eye specialists, the operation was first performed successfully in Canada by Montreal ophthalmologist Dr. Marvin Kwikto almost 10 years ago. The first transplant in a human had been preceded by several years of animal research.

While the new technique still is controversial, Dr. Kwikto said in an interview, "it is gaining recognition as a promising method for treating cataract patients."

SOME EXCEPTIONS
However, said the Montreal eye specialist, the operation cannot be performed in all cases where vision is impaired by cataracts.

He suggested patients should consult with their own eye surgeon who will advise them because this method now is performed in several Canadian medical centres.

Cataracts pose one of the major problems as people become older. The lens—that part of the eye which focuses the rays of light and allows a person to see—eventually becomes opaque.

The standard operation removes the cataract but leaves the patient with limited vision which must be corrected by heavy cataract glasses or tiny contact lenses, themselves difficult for older people to manipulate.

In the new operation, after the cloudy lens is removed it is replaced with a small lens made of a special form of hard plastic, restoring to the eye the vision it had before the cataract developed.

USE MICROSCOPE
To be assured of maximum success the new lens is handmade and placed in a tissue culture for three months to test for acceptance or rejection.

Until several years ago, the lens transplant technique still was experimental and Dr. Kwikto would do the operation only if it was completely impossible for the patient to wear glasses or contact lenses.

Early research into the operation began in Holland in 1958 by Dr. Cornelius Binkhorst and grew into a co-operative study with ophthalmologists in England, South Africa, the Soviet Union, the United States and Canada.

Directed by WILLIAM DAVIS artistic director
Designed by MICHAEL EAGAN
The Company: David Calderisi, Ed McNamara, Roland Hewgill, August Schellenberg, Rita Howell, R. H. Thomson, Candy Kane
Jacob's Wake—A brilliant portrayal of 3 generations of Newfoundlanders living in a fragile outpost in the midst of a violent, almost supernatural storm. Each generation is one step further removed from contact and balance with nature. The disorientation of the third generation releases a cycle of events that threatens the survival of the community. The play is intensely accurate in its depiction of Newfoundland life but the theme is universal. HILARIOUS, TOUCHING, FRIGHTENING—three powerful adjectives to describe a powerful play.

Jubalay

by Patrick Rose & Merv Campone
Directed by RICHARD OUZOUNIAN
The Company: Andrea Davidson, Patrick Rose, Marek Norman, Diane Stapley
Jubalay—Jubalay is a musical collection of songs, impressions and ideas, songs of love, of hope, of war, songs of the past, the present and the future.
Jubalay is the child we once were: the innocence imprisoned in our grown up frames.
Jubalay has already brought audiences to their feet in Vancouver, Calgary, Winnipeg and Ottawa.
Jubalay must be seen and heard this summer.

Hunting Stuart

by Robertson Davies
Directed by MALCOLM BLACK
Set Designed by WILLIAM LORD
Costumes by BARRY ALLEN ODOM
The Company: Roland Hewgill, Candy Kane, Judith Hodgson, August Schellenberg, Rita Howell, R. H. Thomson
Hunting Stuart—The first revival of one of the most charming and marvellously funny comedies ever produced in Canada. The play, first performed at the Crest Theatre in 1955, is beautifully written, full of wit, farce and romantic warmth. The plot involves Henry Benedict Stuart, a minor civil servant in Ottawa, and his incredulous family who one day receive the shock of a lifetime when Drs. Shrubsole and Sobieska arrive at their door with unbelievable news. Come and find out what turns the world of the Stuarts upside down.

"I'm Movin' On" in rink sent Hank Snow upwards

HALIFAX (CP) — Hockey crowds used to jump up and down on rickety stands that wobbled more with each jump and peeling walls threatened to collapse when kids yanked out planking to "hook in" to suburban league games.

The building trembled when naval ammunition accidentally exploded a few miles away in 1945 and each autumn blow seemed to add another degree or two to its list.

But rink rats of the day say the closest the Halifax Arena ever came to collapsing before it was intentionally demolished was the steamy summer night in 1950 when Hank Snow let go with "I'm Movin' On."

It was one of the first times Snow performed his best-seller-to-be for a live audience. The packed arena let go, too, with a reaction he was to recall years later as the most hopeful sign yet that his time had arrived.

About six months earlier, Hank Snow had managed to get a spot on the Grand Ole Opry radio show in Nashville, Tenn., with "a big assist" from Ernest Tubbs, an established star on the weekly country and western show.

RECALLS HEARTBREAK

"For the next three months I was heart-broken," Snow recalled later. "I think the Opry was about to let me go."

Snow's love for railways goes back to the days when he worshipped Jimmy Rodgers, whose coterie of ballads was heavy with hoboes and railroad bulls, and Hank captured the pulsating rhythm of "a big eight-wheeler" steam engine as "the good Lord guided my hand and I wrote 'I'm Movin' On.'"

The simple story about the man who takes to the rails because his girl "has done me wrong" shot to the top of country hit parades throughout North America, giving Snow—already a minor star here at home—his first big break in the United States.

In a day when million-sellers were rarities in the 78-rpm recording industry, "I'm Movin' On" raced toward that mark in a few weeks and remains popular a quarter-century later.

Clarence E. Snow, born in Brooklyn, N.S., in 1914, admits he's slowing down but says even brief periods of inactivity "drive me crazy". He gets back to the Maritimes—where he's a certain sell-out—about every two or three years.

While it took "I'm Movin' On" to convince Snow that he could make it in big-time country and western, it took a hurricane to convince him that the life of a fisherman wasn't for him.

His career started when he was just a boy.

"They called us deckhands—that translated to 'flunkies'. You did everything. I'd haul trawls and at night I'd sing for the crew, play the mouth organ and do a little tap-dance. Then one night we nearly got shipwrecked on Sable Island. On that night about six ships out of Lunenburg County were wrecked and 122 men were lost. I was through."

FIRST GUITAR

Snow says he went ashore and tried to improve his singing while cutting logs, selling fish door-to-door, peddling newspapers and working as a stevedore.

"I decided nothing was going to hold me back and when I got $30 for 15 days work unloading a salt boat I bought my first guitar."

On March 14, 1933, Snow wrote to Halifax radio station CHNS asking for a spot. He received the station's "regrets". His next venture was as a travelling salesman peddling bobby pins, razor blades and trinkets to wives of fishermen and farmers around Nova Scotia.

Snow says he returned to Halifax "and then I got my nerve up and called the radio station again for an audition."

CHNS personnel "liked my stuff," Hank remembers, and asked him to be ready to go on the air at 7 p.m. that night.

Advised as "Clarence Snow and his Guitar", he recalled later he was so nervous he could hardly hold the instrument steady.

The next few years were unprofitable for Snow and his wife who lived in two rooms in the slums above Halifax harbor.

"But we had a lot of fun," he insisted. In 1936 with the help of CHNS—the station he credits with giving him the biggest break ever—his voice was recorded for the first time. He sang a song about a cowboy and his horse riding the purple plains.

A mildly encouraging response from RCA Victor sent the singer to Montreal, where he recorded Lonesome Blue Yodel and collected royalties of $1.96.

In 1936, he recorded the hit Blue Velvet Band and his records began to sell throughout both Canada and Australia. But times still were lean—his son was born in a charity ward in Halifax.

RCA refused his first attempt to crack the U.S. market, but finally agreed to give him a chance with My Buddy and Brand on My Heart. Listeners liked what they heard.

"For the first time I began to outrun the creditors," Hank recalled 20 years later during an interview on his first radio station, CHNS.

His record leapt to first place at one Dallas radio station and kept him on the hit parade for 16 weeks straight. And Hank Snow is still Movin' On.

Franco... c'est le fun is Hull's centennial theme

HULL, Que. (CP) — The crossing of the Ottawa River is the crossing of a mental barrier for many English-speaking Canadians, says Pierre-Louis Lapointe.

Mr. Lapointe is co-ordinator of festivities for La Grande Fete, a 2½-week celebration this summer to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the incorporation of Hull and the 175th anniversary of its founding.

In planning for the event, Mr. Lapointe says he wants to overcome this "mental barrier" of English-speaking residents of Ottawa, just across the Ottawa River. And he would like to attract some of the thousands of tourists who visit the capital city every year.

Co-ordinator Lapointe conceded that some English-speaking Canadians do make the trip across the river to drink at the city's night spots and others speed through Hull to reach Gatineau federal park and ski centres north of here.

One of the reasons he cited for the "mental barrier" around the city, historically a timber, pulp and paper centre, is that its population of 64,000 is about 90 per cent French-speaking.

FOUNDED BY AMERICAN Mr. Lapointe, a former historical research officer with the Outaouais Development Corp. noted that this was not always the case. The founder of Hull was an American, Philomen Wright, who began to cultivate the soil of the Ottawa Valley after his arrival in 1800.

Until 1856 the town was largely English-speaking. A vestige of this era remains—a solid stone farmhouse that belonged to the Wright family and dates from 1838.

The building is the property of the National Capital Commission and houses one of the best French restaurants in the capital region.

But Hull has lost some of its other heritage structures in recent years. One of its main churches and its historic city hall were destroyed in fires.

Landmarks a visitor to Hull does see are the federal government's new multi-storey office buildings, which soar above the old downtown structures. Huge cranes mark the skyline along the riverfront where other federal buildings are taking shape.

The Grande Fete will include concerts, car rallies, cultural exhibits, an antique display and an international softball tournament, with teams expected from across Canada and the United States.

Theme for the $500,000 celebration, from June 20 to July 6, is Franco... c'est le fun; French is fun.

Trends hurt Hollywood

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — One of today's top movie producers Frank P. Rosenberg believes motion pictures now are better than ever — but there aren't enough of them.

Rosenberg, whose latest is "The Reincarnation of Peter Proud," says that films like "Chinatown" and the two "Godfathers" are as good as anything Hollywood has ever made.

"But the tragedy is," Rosenberg says, "that there just aren't enough of them."

He is, however, bullish about the future of the motion picture industry. He believes Hollywood has still barely scratched the surface of what it can and should do, in the theatrical film area.

But he's not as enthusiastic about the movies Hollywood grinds out for the TV maw.

"The only thing they have in common with theatrical movies," he says, "is that they're both on film."

One major problem he cites for the movie business is the growing one of directors' egos.

"There are many of them around," Rosenberg says, "who seem to live only for that big credit before the title which reads, 'A Film By Such-and-Such.'"

"I've always believed that the best films are collaborative efforts, not the work of just one man. Everybody needs somebody else to bounce ideas off of. Any time a picture is just one man's work it suffers."

"There are a lot of directors today who like to call themselves film makers. Nonsense. I only know two film makers — Eastman Kodak and Stanley Kubrick."

His own new film, "Peter Proud," is doing well so far and one facet of its success surprises the producer.

"I knew it would appeal to many people," he says, "but the surprise is how many older people are going to see it. Maybe they want to check out reincarnation since they're getting close to that age when such questions worry them."

If his film succeeds naturally Hollywood will jump on the bandwagon and we'll see a slew of reincarnation films. This bandwagon syndrome bothers Rosenberg.

"The problem with many movie makers," he says, "is that they confuse a miracle with a trend. Marty was a miracle, yet many people here thought it was a trend and millions of dollars were lost trying to imitate it."

Hollywood books continue to come out and, presumably, people read them. Among the current crop, I liked Michael B. Druxman's "Basil Rathbone: His Life and His Films" and Alex Barris' "Hollywood's Other Men." The Rathbone book, in particular, is a must for those who look back fondly on Hollywood's past glories.

John Denver spins off into movies, TV, jets

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Singers are the elite of show business. A hit record or two and the sky's the limit. The money flows in on long playing waves. There's nothing they can't — or don't — buy.

John Denver, the elite of the elite, is talking about his own jet plane these days. He's also talking about making his own movie. It's not just idle daydream talk. It's all possible and probable.

I caught up with Denver at RCA's recording studio here. He was in the control room, listening to the playback of a song a new group, Liberty, had just recorded. He found Liberty in Colorado, brought them to California to record for his own new record label Windsong.

Having their own publishing firms and own record labels are two of the fringe bonanzas of top singers.

He told Liberty to take a break and we talked. He is taller than you might expect but slight of build. He is as his fans see him — fair, blue-eyed, bespectacled and friendly as a May morning.

He said he was "branching out." He's conquered the music world but there are other worlds waiting to be Denverized. The two nearest are television and movies and he's ready.

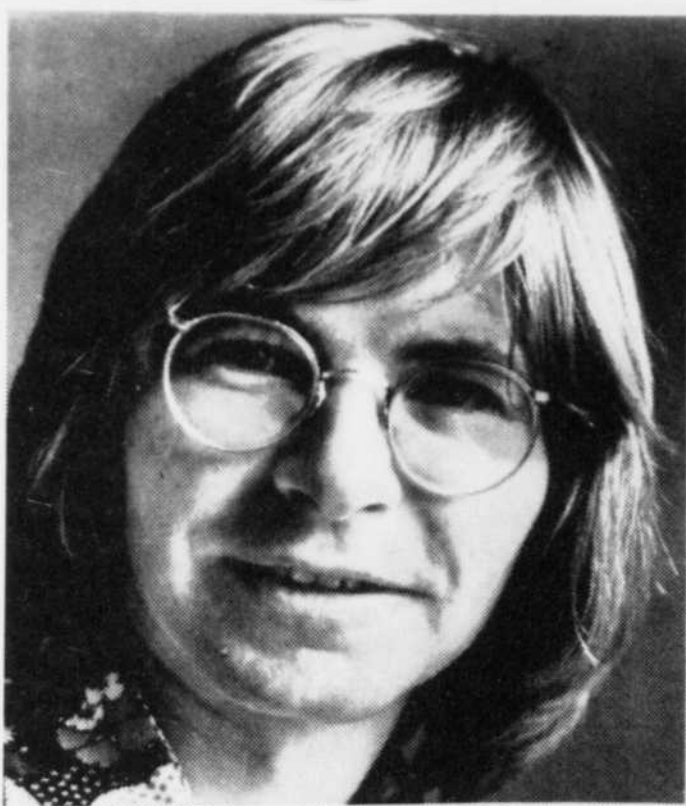

"I'm going to do more television," he said. "And I'm going to produce and star in a movie."

He said he had bought the rights to the old (1939) James Stewart hit, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." He is currently supervising a rewrite, which updates the property, and when it's done he'll make it. In the rewrite, Smith is "into music" before he goes to Washington.

Denver will produce it and star in it. That should be his first big movie. There will be more, he says, and you get the impression that when Denver says something, that's the way it will be.

He also wants a weekly TV series — but not just yet.

"No," he says, "I don't want

JOHN DENVER: You get the impression that when Denver says something, that's the way it will be.

that for a while. First, I want to do some other things."

The other things start with a major overseas tour. His records are now blazing hot in Europe and the Far East and he's smart enough to realize that the time to capitalize on hotness is at its hottest. And he's also anxious to get his new record company rolling along before he dips his Colorado toes into the weekly TV pool.

There are also some personal things to accomplish. John Denver has his eyes on the sky — literally. He's learning how to fly, for two purposes. First, he thinks it will be exciting. And, second, he feels it will enable him to make his personal appearance tours easier.

"My father is in aviation," he says, "and now he's teaching me to fly. Not long ago, I spent a few hours with him in a Lear jet and we were closer than we've ever been."

He thinks maybe he'll get his own Lear jet, after he wraps up his pilot's license. And then (you can almost see the wheels turning in his brain) he thinks perhaps he'll start his own company to buy and operate aircraft for himself and other recording stars.

"It would work," he says. "A couple of planes and I'd be in business. I could charter them when we're not using them."

All this activity will, of course, keep him on the move. That's the one thing he's unhappy about but he has to face the fierce facts. He is now settled in Colorado and loves his home.

"That's where I live and that's where I want to stay," he says, firmly. "It's the first time in my life that I've had roots and a real home."

He was born in New Mexico but his father was in the Air Force and moved around. He spent various periods of his young life in Japan, Arizona, Texas, Alabama.

After he and his wife, Annie, were married, they spent a year in Chicago — "I still don't know why we did that" — and three years in Minnesota, before finally settling in Colorado.

Now there are three Denvers in the family. They had been married for eight childless years and both wanted to have children.

"We tried," he says, "but we couldn't. So we began thinking about adopting one. We started working on it, in Korea, all over."

"I've always had this idea that the relationship between parents and a baby is that all three are looking for each other, seeking each other out, before the baby is born."

One day in May, 1974, Denver was in New York. And he had a dream.

"I dreamed about this one particular baby," he says. "When he smiled, you could see the gums in his wide, sensual mouth. I came back home and the adoption agency called and said they had a baby for us."

When they picked up the baby, who was two months old, Denver says the adoption agency officials marveled.

"They said they had never seen anything like it," he says. "They were amazed at how the baby seemed to smile at us as though he were greeting old friends. And the mouth of the baby was just like the mouth in the baby of my dream — wide and sensual and you could see the gums."

They named him Zack.

He's one-quarter Cherokee," Denver says. "He has bright brown eyes and a button nose. I've been wondering if that one-quarter Cherokee means he has enough Indian blood so he can qualify for certain rights the government gives to Indians — such as not needing a hunting or fishing license."

"I don't hunt, but I love to fish," Denver says as a parting shot.

Just a little care goes a long way

Creative cooking without problem cleanups is easier now with all the new nonstick cookware available. And with just a little care, those time-saving pan coatings will keep their good looks and their nonstick qualities.

Condition your skillet and your range-top pans more often than those used for baking. This means pouring a little cooking oil on the pan's surface to prevent drying and deep scratching. Rinse the oil and wipe the pan with a paper towel before using.

If you prefer, foods may be cooked without fat at slightly lower temperatures. And remember, minor scratches may look a little unsightly but they won't harm the pan's nonstick qualities.

It's most important to protect your nonstick coated pans by washing them thoroughly, especially after a few conditionings, because a thin, almost invisible layer of grease and food clings to your pans and destroys their effectiveness.

Student to take congregation

Valley Parish Council which is comprised of 10 United Church congregations in and around the communities of Cowansville, Sutton, Knowlton and Mansonville. Mr. Wallace is from Ottawa and is a graduate of Carleton and McGill Universities. He is entering his final year of ministerial training at United Theological College in Montreal.

Mr. Wallace's work this summer will deal primarily with the study and implementation of the community services which have been proposed and outlined by the provincial government under Bill 65. Attention will be directed towards "les Centres Locaux des Services Communautaires" or CLSC. The establishment of Local Community Service Centres is part of the policy of the Social Affairs Department for improving the quality of community life. The purpose of each Local Community Service Centre is to provide the community with easily accessible health and social services under qualified personnel. Study sessions will be held in the communities comprising The Yamaska Valley Parish Council to match the health and social needs of the communities with the CLSC programs of health care and social action proposed under Bill 65.

Local Community Service Centres could provide the communities with clinics for immunization, diagnostic or rehabilitation services, or emergency medical and social care. The Yamaska Valley communities could benefit greatly from such CLSC services and Mr. Wallace will be soliciting community support in the project. Mr. Wallace, who is residing in Dunkin for the summer, will also be involved in many of the summer worship services and the activities of the United Church congregations in the Yamaska Valley Parish Council.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Anderson visited Mr. and Mrs. M.J. Shea in Richmond. They were accompanied home by Mrs. Shea who spent the weekend with them returning home Sunday evening with her husband, Mr. Shea, and son Jimmie, who had been Sunday dinner guests at the Anderson home.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rowell, Brian and Robin were evening visitors of Mr. and Mrs. George Rowell at East Clifton.

Mr. Ben Waldron was a Sunday caller of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rowell.

The Church

Watchtower bible society

The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society has revealed plans for a district convention of Jehovah's Witnesses in Montreal this summer.

Mr. Bruce Hodge, spokesman for the Sherbrooke congregation, said a four-day meeting is scheduled for the Blue Bonnets Raceway, July 17-20.

A number of families from this area will be among the 8,000 delegates expected to attend.

"This convention is one of over one hundred planned for the United States and Canada during June, July and August," he said. "This includes assemblies in the English, Spanish, French, Greek, Portuguese and Italian languages."

Commenting on the total attendance, Hodge said over one million delegates are anticipated to attend conventions of Jehovah's Witnesses this year in the Northern Hemisphere.

The program at the Raceway will run from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 3 to 5:30 p.m. each of the four days. It will include four spectacular Bible dramas in full costume, lectures and symposiums and discussions on subjects of vital interest to humankind today.

"Problems are certainly not new," he added, "but all are finding that these problems have intensified in recent months. Men in responsible positions actually fear global disaster including inflation, extreme food shortages, population explosion, and increasing crime and terrorism."

"Oil shortages and economic collapse threaten many nations. In fact," he said, "so many groups met in 1974 that it has been called 'the year of international conferences.'"

"Today what affects one segment of society affects all, many times with extreme suddenness. Therefore, the convention program will deal with all of these problems and, more importantly, show the ultimate solution to all human crises."

All sessions will be open to the public.

Gospel concert

A vocal and instrumental group, called "Homeward Bound," will be coming to the Sawyerville Elementary School for a one night gospel musical concert on July 7 at 8 p.m.

There are 10 young people, students of Florida Bible College, and their director in the group. There will be no admission charge, however, a free-will offering will be taken to help cover traveling expenses. Plan now to attend and bring others with you.

The program is sponsored by the Sawyerville Baptist Senior Young People's Group.

OES meeting

COOKSHIRE — Cookshire Chapter No. 46, O.E.S. held their June meeting in the Masonic Chambers, with the Worthy Matron, Mrs. Winnifred Buchanan, presiding.

Due to the absence of a number of officers, the meeting was opened in short form, with flag presentation.

Routine business was conducted. It was stated that the travelling gavel would be brought to Cookshire

Chapter at their next stated meeting on Wednesday, July 23 by Westmount Chapter.

Instead of general articles at the monthly sale table, a food sale will be held in the lower hall in July, following the regular meeting.

The meeting was closed in regular form, refreshments were then served in the lower hall by the hostesses, Mrs. Wilda Robinson and Mrs. Idell Griffin.

Strawberry Fair successful

SHERBROOKE — St. Paul's Ladies Guild held a very successful Tea and Sale on June 28 in the Church Hall on McMannamy St. It was well patronized. Everyone seemed to enjoy the delicious food, which consisted of home made breads, sponge cakes, strawberries and cream.

There were two drawings. First was for pair of white perma press sheets. Rev. Harold Brazel pulled the lucky number. It was claimed by Mrs. Cornelia Garney. A lovely cake was donated. Mrs. Florence Wark held the lucky ticket for it.

The Guild will be closed until Sept. 16. The President wishes the members a well earned holiday. The Guild members would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone for helping in any way, giving food for the well laden bake table and also articles for the work table which consisted of lovely items of all kinds.

The white elephant table was a big success. It held articles of all descriptions. It was very exciting buying the parcel post packages. There were many of them. All were anxious to see what they had received.

The proceeds were very gratifying and will help out in many ways. Beautiful flowers adorned the hall.

EARTH STAGE

Transportation, or lack of it, has created a problem in that several planned trips out of town to visit other summer theatres have been delayed or cancelled because of lack of funds. If anyone has a bus they would donate for such a trip, the organizers of Earth Stage would be happy to hear from them.

Earth Stage directors hope to attract local people of any age, plus tourists and patrons of Festival Lennoxville. A schedule for the week is posted outside the old Norton Dining Hall, known more commonly to Bishop's and Champlain students as The Pub, and anyone interested is welcome to sit in and participate when something that appeals to them comes along.

WORKSHOPS

The theatre is bringing in people, including some professionals, to conduct various workshops during the summer, and anyone who is interested in giving a course or workshop will be welcomed by Earth Stage directors.

Participants of Earth Stage have given two performances this year and another, possibly two, is slated for later this summer. The skills and experiences gained through the theatre's productions isn't where the emphasis is put though. "The theatre, and being able to be creative and express yourself easily," Chris said, "is more for the enriching of life than the production of plays or whatever... there isn't any pressure here to work under to perform as someone else, everyone is him or herself."

Anybody interested in attending the workshops should go to the Pub any afternoon and check the schedule. A list of the week's events will be published in the Record each week.

Dufferin Heights Golf Club to stage annual O'Keefe tourney, S. Smith, J. Smith win Inter-club

BOUNDARY (IH) — The annual O'Keefe Golf Tournament for members of the Dufferin Heights Golf Club is slated to take place tomorrow.

The ladies of the club will be holding their annual Inter-Club Tournament on Sunday, July 27. As in past years, this should draw a good field as it is very popular with lady golfers.

The ladies staged their annual Invitational Two-ball event and a large number turned out for the tournament. Sylvia Smith and her daughter, Jocelyn, of the Lennoxville Golf Club emerged the winners in the field. The low net honors went to Dr. Frappier and M. Martin of the host club.

P. Schirch and B. Hollingdrake of Granby won the gross in Class A while in Class B it was B. Wintle and Alice Farrow of Dufferin. S. Brodeur and C. Dubois, Granby, copped the low net in A while D. Thivierge and Y. Tanguay took the net in B.

Ruby Banks and Mildred Carruthers, Dufferin, placed second in the gross section in Class A. R. Couture and M. Doiron, Sherbrooke, copped second in the Class B. R. Pellerin and B. Bishop of the host club, took second net in A while A. Dellan and G. Bonnette, Granby, did likewise in Class B and I. Skinner and J. Allaire, also of Granby, copped the honors in Class C. I. Badger and F. Clark of Lennoxville copped the special prize for the highest score in the field.

The third annual barbecue steak dinner was held last Saturday on the lawn of the club house. The steaks were cooked by the club directors and were enjoyed by all.

Randy Jones hurls one-hitter, Expos lose

Randy Jones has an interesting set of priorities. Perhaps it has something to do with team spirit.

"I was more upset over giving up a run than losing the no-hitter," the San Diego left-hander said Thursday night after pitching a one-hitter in the Padres' 2-1 victory over Cincinnati Reds.

In other National League baseball games, New York Mets beat Chicago Cubs 4-0, Philadelphia Phillies defeated St. Louis Cardinals 7-4, Los Angeles Dodgers beat San Francisco Giants 7-1 and Pittsburgh Pirates beat Montreal Expos 5-1.

Jones had more than a no-hitter going for most of the game. He had retired the first 21 batters he'd faced.

Then shortstop Hector Torres fielded Tony Perez' leadoff grounder in the eighth and fired it wildly past first baseman Willie McCovey for a two-base error.

PERFECT GAME GONE That ended the perfect game. And one out later Jones' no-hitter and his 1-0 lead were gone, too. Bill Plummer, a .188 hitter, hit a run-scoring double.

After the hit, pinch-runner Ed Armbrister, who was to later give San Diego the victory, took third on Cesar Geronimo's grounder but was stranded when Doug Flynn also grounded out.

Bobby Tolan led off the bottom of the ninth with a single off Will McEneaney and Tito Fuentes doubled him to third. Tolan scored when Armbrister, now in right field, dropped Gene Locklear's short fly ball.

It was Jones' second one-hitter of the year. On May 19 he did it against St. Louis, winning 1-0 in 10 innings.

Jones has a 11-5 record with a 1.77 ERA.

John Milner's sixth-inning two-run homer for the Mets, his fifth of the season and his first since June 9, was all pitcher Jerry Koosman needed. Koosman pitched a four-hitter and chipped in with a two-run double in the eighth.

Philadelphia's Greg Luzinski doubled home two first-inning runs, then Bob Boone tripled to break a fourth-inning tie and started a four-run burst that carried the Phillies past St. Louis.

Homers highlight last night's QMJBL action

GRAND-MERE (BP) — Home runs were the order of the night Thursday, with six of the round-trippers being registered by Quebec Major Junior Baseball League players.

Grand-Mere got past Trois-Rivieres by a 5-2 count, with five homers coming in the game. The home club scored three runs in the first inning and held on for the victory. Pierre Geboux, Pierre Sugere and Jacques Gagnon hit four-baggers for Grand-Mere, while Michel Lamothe and Rene Labrecque banged homers for Trois-Rivieres.

Grand-Mere had nine hits en route to the win with their opposition getting five. Trois-Rivieres got their runs in the sixth and seventh innings.

St. Jean dumped Granby 7-1, and the sixth homer of the evening, a two run affair, was hit by Andre Quintan. St. Jean scored two runs in the second, three in the third and added another two in the fifth.

Granby produced their lone point in the second inning, a product of one of six hits. St. Jean made their seven runs on 10 hits.

Weekend action has Sherbrooke Athletics playing three contests, one in the city. Saturday, St. Jean will visit Sherbrooke for an 8 p.m. start. Shawinigan travels to Drummondville for 2 p.m. On Sunday, Sherbrooke is at Trois-Rivieres and Pointe-aux-Trembles goes to Shawinigan for 2 p.m. contests. At 8 p.m., Drummondville hosts Sherbrooke and P.A.T. visits Grand-Mere.

Jim Kaat stops A's 3-2 for his 13th win, Brewers top Red Sox 3-2 in 10 innings

Jim Kaat, off to his best start ever, became major league baseball's first 13-game winner Thursday. Joe Coleman, off to his worst start ever, was lucky not to become the first 13-game loser.

Kaat, 13-4, allowed 11 hits but only two runs, one of them unearned, in 8 1-3 innings as Chicago White Sox edged Oakland A's 3-2.

Coleman, who had lost seven games in a row since his last victory on May 19, was tagged for home runs by Ken Singleton and Jim Northrup but struggled to his fourth triumph in 16 decisions as Detroit Tigers beat Baltimore Orioles 9-5.

In other American League games, Milwaukee Brewers beat Boston Red Sox 3-2 in 10 innings, Cleveland Indians defeated New York Yankees 3-2, Kansas City Royals beat Texas Rangers 10-5 and California Angels defeated

Minnesota Twins 7-6.

The A's scored both their runs off Kaat in the first inning on a triple by Bert Campaneris, an error and an RBI single by Joe Rudi. The White Sox got a run in the second on singles by Bill Melton and Jerry Hairston and an infield out and tied it in the second on Jorge Orta's double and Deron Johnson's single.

MOVED TO THIRD

They won it in the seventh on an error. Brian Downing's stolen base, Pat Kelly's infield hit and Lee Richard's grounder. It was Chicago's 11th victory in the last 12 games and lifted the Sox past Texas into third place in the AL West, but 11 games out.

Sherbrooke Skeet Club holds shoot at Lennoxville

The Sherbrooke Skeet Club held a skeet tournament Tuesday, July 2, at the Lennoxville range.

The tournament was sponsored by Winchester of Canada represented by Bill Hopps, sales representative for Eastern Canada, and Andre Bilodeau, local area representative.

Thirty persons took part in the shoot but due to darkness there wasn't time for a final shoot off and first place was shared by Sam Abbott and Don Beakes with a score of 24 each. Second place was shared by Earl Blair and Rodney Bray with scores of 23.

The tournament was based on a perfect score of 25. After the shoot members and guests were treated to refreshments by the club.

Storm takes over in Milwaukee Open, Art Wall leader with one hole to go, to continue today

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Art Wall said it was his best round of golf in longer than he could remember, and never mind he couldn't finish it.

Wall, winless on the tour in nine years, was five under par with a hole to play Thursday when lightning, rain and darkness forced suspension of the second round of the $130,000 Greater Milwaukee Open.

Wall was in position to tie or overtake the second-round clubhouse co-leaders, Gibby Gilbert and Ken Still, during completion of the round scheduled today.

Wall was among almost two dozen golfers unable to finish the rain-threatened second round Thursday.

Gilbert and Still finished respective rounds of 66 and 67 moments before the elements struck for a second time during the day. They shared the lead with nine-under-par totals of 135.

Boundary Softball League nearing end, Cubs leading pack, playoffs to commence Friday, July 11th BOUNDARY (IH) — The Red Riders of the Boundary Girls' Softball chalked up three games played during the past week.

The Riders blanked the White Tornadoes 8-0 and edged the Blue Bombers in a close battle winning 14-13. The third victory was another close one as they eked out a 17-16 decision over the White Tornadoes. They dropped a close 5-4 verdict to the Green Comets.

The Green Comets ran away from the Blue Bombers 25-5 in a one-sided affair.

In the Boys' section of the circuit eight games were played and now it seems the Cubs are setting the pace in the loop. The Pirates were obliged to forfeit a game to the Expos while the Cubs and Yankees played to an 11-1 draw. The Cubs ran away with 23-17 win over the Pirates in a high-scoring battle.

The Astros stopped the Pirates 30-21 and the Cubs and Yankees played to an 18-18 tie. The Expos stopped the Pirates 29-12 while the Cubs came through with a 16-8 win over the Pirates.

The regular season ends July 11 when the playoffs will commence however several games will be re-scheduled following the holidays at Butterfield. The semi-finals and finals will then be played.

40th anniversary of WI

SCOTSTOWN — The Women's Institute members of Scotstown branch celebrated their belated 40th anniversary, which should have been taken in 1974, before they disbanded in March, 1975, by going on the Home and Garden Tour at Massawippi on June 25.

Those attending were Mrs. Philip Boy, Kingston, Ont., Mrs. H.A. Scarth, Stanstead, Mrs. Dewar Scott, Mrs. W.A. Ladd, Mrs. Bea Atkin, Mrs. Basil Woolley, Mrs. Harvey MacRae, Mrs. Fred Buck, Mrs. Helen Hall and Mrs. F.B. Mayhew. Mrs. Boy met them at Lennoxville and Mrs. Scarth joined the group at Massawippi.

After having lunch and a nice visit they went on the tour and visited several beautiful homes and gardens.

They then went on to Stanstead and spent a couple of hours with Mrs. Scarth, where they enjoyed seeing her beautiful flower garden and spent a pleasant time sitting out on the lawn. Several pictures were taken of the group.

Mrs. Boy and Mrs. Scarth were both Compton County Women's Institute Presidents when it was Scotstown's turn to have the President. They also were charter members. Others of the group who were charter members were Mrs. Dewar Scott and Mrs. W.A. Ladd. Three of the 1974 members not able to take the trip were Mrs. D.D. MacLeod, Mrs. George MacDonald and Mrs. John MacAulay.

Mrs. Scarth served delicious refreshments, which included cake and ice cream. Mrs. Ladd poured tea. All thanked Mrs. Scarth for the very enjoyable time to sit, rest, eat and reminisce.

The ladies thanked Mrs. Ladd and Mrs. Hall for using their cars to transport them on the trip which was a perfectly delightful day enjoyed by all.

Wilhelmina Rebekah Lodge

SAWYERVILLE — A regular meeting of Wilhelmina Rebekah Lodge No. 23 was held at the home of Sister Irene McCallum in Randboro with eleven members and one visitor present.

Lodge opened in regular form with Sis. Mary McCallum N.G. in the chair. Sis. McCallum welcomed a guest Sis. Mickie Povey of Lennoxville, also Sis. Coates who has been unable to attend meetings since her accident. Sis. Flaws whose health doesn't permit her to attend regularly. Sis. Marie Nutbrown and Sis. Mayotta Taylor who haven't been able to be with us lately.

It was reported that Sis. Gertrude Winslow is hospitalized again but hopes to get home soon.

Sis. Watt reported visiting Sis. Marion Ord in Hospital and cards were signed to go to Sisters Ord and M. Hurley.

Communications were read and Sis. Ruth French our representative to the Rebekah Assembly Sessions held at the Le Baron Hotel in Sherbrooke gave an excellent report.

Sis. Taylor thanked us for flowers sent her and her mother while in hospital.

Lodge closed in regular form.

Mr. Leslie McCallum joined the ladies for a social hour when a delicious lunch was served by Sisters G. Montgomery, V. Lowell and M. McCallum.

Sister Irene McCallum thanked the members for having a meeting with her and how much she had enjoyed it. Mr. McCallum also thanked them and hoped they would come back soon.
