Ayrshire Bull of R. R. Ness & Sons Judged Grand Champion At the National Dairy Show

Ness Also Scores First in Senior Yearling Heifer Class in One of Finest Fields of Entries in This Class Ever Shown at National Dairy Show

Bulls from the Chateauguay Valley figured strongly in the prize winning classes as Ayrshire bulls from Canada won the initial championship for that breed in the first official judging of the 1940 National Dairy Show being held at Harrisburg, Pa.

Burnside Barr Adjutant, bred and exhibited by R. R. Ness and Sons, of Howick, Que., received the color plaque as Grand Champion bull among the Ayrshires and also won the rosette as the Senior Champion bull.

Le Moines Point Enterprise of the W. C. Pitfield Estate, Cartierville, Que., was acclaimed the Reserve Grand Champion Ayrshire bull.

The second Grand Championship of the show went to a Minnesota exhibitor, F. W. Griswold, of Hopkins, who dominated the Holstein bull division with father and son entries. "King Bessie Korndyke Ormsby 14th" captured the Senior Champion bull title and went on to win the Grand Champion bull rosette after his son "King Bessie Korndyke Ormsby Fobes" had won the Junior Champion bull title.

The Reserve Grand Championship for Holstein bulls was won by "Posch Ormsby Fobes 14th," exhibited by H. F. Dupont, of Winterthur, Del.

Ness' young bull, Grand Champion at the 1940 Canadian National Exhibition, scored first in the two-year-old and under class against a big field and was an easy winner.

An interesting feature in connection with the Pitfield Reserve Grand Champion is that it scored first in the four-year-old and over bull class and beat Bois de la Roche Golden Glow, the Canadian-bred entry of Shirley-Ayr Farm, Union, Pa., which won the Grand Championship at the National Dairy Show in Columbus, Ohio, in 1938 and at San Francisco in 1939.

Rifle Club Announces Match Scores

Results of Annual Outdoor Shooting Contests

The Canadian Small Bore Association has issued the results of its Summer Outdoor Matches. Matches were shot at 50 and 100 yard ranges in July and August. 20 rounds at two targets at 50, and 20 at 100 and the possible score 400 at these ranges per month. The matches were also arranged in two classes, A and B and closed with an aggregate.

The following are the results so far as our local exponents of the small bore target rifle with iron sights are concerned and they are to be congratulated in having gained proficiency and ranking in such a comparatively short time:—

Match No 1, July Class A, large crested spoon—G. W. F. Barwick, 396—21×.

Class B, large crested spoon—E. G. Cairns, 390—17×.

Small crested spoon—A. A. Allen, 378—7×, R. Carson, 377—5×.

Match No. 2, August, Class A, small crested spoon—G. W. F. Barwick, 392—20×.

Class B, large crested spoon—A. A. Allen, 392—13×, E. C. Carson, 387—14×.

Small crested spoon—R. Carson, 376—9×.

Match No 3, Aggregate, Class B, Association's Bronze Medal—E. G. Carson, 777—31×; A. A. Allen, 770—20×.

The Association claims the competition to have been an undoubted success.

QUEBEC CROPS GENERALLY GOOD

Crop reports for the province of Quebec, particularly the Eastern Townships and Ottawa Valley are as follows: Wet, cold weather in early spring delayed operations, but conditions during the growing and harvesting seasons were favorable, and the harvest generally is reported to be equal to an average year. Threshing of grains is completed in most districts with an average outturn indicated. The hay crop was average, but the yield of fodder corn was below normal in many sections. Canning corn was a short crop and damage by the borer was extensive. Tomatoes ripened slowly and the yield will be below average. Root crops on the whole are reported to be satisfactory, with the exception of potatoes, of which the yield will be below normal in many districts on account of rot. Small fruits were plentiful and an average apple crop of good quality is being harvested. While damage to tobacco plants from grasshoppers is reported, an average yield is generally indicated. The production of maple products showed a substantial gain over last season. Pasturage on the whole remained good throughout the season and fodder is plentiful.

Lower St. Lawrence and Lake St. John District—Seeding and planting were later than usual owing to a backward spring, but germination was good and crops made rapid progress. On the whole, a satisfactory harvest is indicated. Grains yielded a good average crop. An average cut of hay was stored in good condition. Digging of potatoes is progressing and a better-than-normal yield is anticipated. Other roots promise well. Small fruits were abundant. Pastures have been in good condition throughout the season.

Incomes of Farmers Are Now Higher

Cash Income of Farmer 30 Per Cent Higher in 1940

Although farm prices generally have been only slightly higher in 1940 than in 1939, the cash income of farmers as a whole during the first seven months of 1940 has been 30 per cent higher than for the corresponding period of a year ago. This preliminary estimate of farm cash income has been made by the Agricultural Branch of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Practically all sources of income showed increases. In the case of wheat, deliveries for the first seven months of 1940 were 85 per cent above those of the similar months of 1939 while the price remained approximately the same. Income from the sale of flax was nearly four times as great because of higher prices combined with much higher deliveries.

The cash received from the sale of meat animals was up 23 per cent for the period, with hogs making the main contribution to this increase. Despite the fact that hog prices averaged slightly below those of 1939, the greatly increased marketings resulted in an increase of 41 per cent in farmers' cash income from this source. The decline in cattle marketings was offset by somewhat higher prices.

Dairy producers also received greater income from all classes of production. There was a rise of 30 per cent in receipts from cheese, 11 per cent from butterfat and from 5 to 10 per cent from fluid milk.

In discussing the outlook for the balance of 1940 the Dominion Bureau of Statistics report suggests that it is not likely that the increase in income during the last five months of 1940 will be so great as was the case earlier in the year. While the increased marketings and higher prices for some products will tend to increase cash income, on the other hand restricted grain marketings will reduce income from that important source.

Over 700 Men and Staff of 225 Get Set For Month's Training

Youths Display Enthusiasm and Adaptability in First Few Days at Camp—English Boys to Farnham

They were a raw and polygenous lot of recruits who entered the Huntingdon Military Barracks last Wednesday to commence their 30 days of training—all shapes and sizes and with postures of varying degrees.

The following day, however, presented a vastly different looking bunch of boys. Arrayed in their military outfits and full of keen enthusiasm to learn the lessons, they went through their paces in a smart manner which more than impressed even the officers. When questioned last Thursday as to the progress of the boys, the company commanders genuinely stated that they were more than pleased with the showing.

The majority of the boys, who are from Montreal, came by bus. As they were unloaded at the barracks' entrance they were met by a trainee personnel. The guides took the boys in groups of ten and proceeded to the reception hut. The same guide remained with the same group until they were finally disposed of. From the reception hut the recruits were taken to the medical officer at the hospital. Here they were submitted to a medical test. More than 50 did not come up to specifications and were taken back to Montreal. One of the boys had only one arm, while there were various other physical ailments noted.

After medical inspection they were allocated to companies and to their huts. Following this they went to the quartermaster's stores where they received their clothing. This was a full outfit from the skin out. There was only one chap whom they could not fit. He weighed 98 pounds, was five feet, two inches in height and took size three in boots. The very smallest uniform in stock would go around him twice but he insisted on staying and said he would wait until they could get a uniform for him. Some 250 of the trainees expressed willingness to take complete training in English. The others needed French-speaking N.C.O.'s. There were 900 youths who came to the Military Barracks last Wednesday, and of this number 200 of the English-speaking were despatched to Farnham. This left a total of 700 recruits who with the 225 of the staff, of which number 35 are officers, made a total of 925 men.

Meals Are Good

Long lines of tables greeted the soldiers for their first meal in camp. They sat down to a meal of roast beef, potatoes, carrots or cabbage, tea, coffee or milk, brown and white bread, pie and cheese. Some of the boys were not so enthusiastic about the meals while most of them thought they were quite O.K. As one boy stated, "I find the meals very good. Some chaps will complain but they are those who have had it too soft and a little bit of army meals will do them a lot of good."

There is much truth in this and it is entirely likely that when the boys complete their training and go back to Montreal they will be a healthier and happier looking lot of boys than came here. They will be tanned and fit looking.

Although the boys were naturally boisterous when they first came, this disappeared later in the day and the next morning they had more or less caught the camp spirit and were walking about keen and brisk, ready for their duties.

Some of the boys went anxiously to the camp post office on Thursday morning in anticipation of a letter from fond parents. No phone calls for youths from their parents enquiring about their welfare were received on Thursday morning but this will undoubtedly be the case a little later on. Some overly-fond parents are said to have obtained a room in Huntingdon where they could be near their dear boys for a week or so until they were sure they would be all right!

The first two days of the camp passed fine and there was every indication that the recruits would turn out quite satisfactory by the time the 30 days were up.

Celebrate 25th Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Laurent Dupuis of Ste. Agnes were pleasantly surprised recently when about 100 relatives and friends gathered at their home to help them celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary. Miss Brunet read an address congratulating Mr. and Mrs. Dupuis on this milestone in their life. A presentation of a 100-piece dinner set and several pieces of silver was made to the couple on behalf of their relatives and friends. Mrs. Paul-Emile Leboeuf, on behalf of the family, also presented her mother with 25 American Beauty roses. Mr. and Mrs. Dupuis very fittingly thanked all those assembled for their kind and generous remembrances.

Dancing was then enjoyed, and refreshments were served at midnight. All departed for home, after wishing Mr. and Mrs. Dupuis many more years of happy wedded life.

Those from a distance attending the anniversary were: Mr. and Mrs. Paul-Emile Leboeuf, Mr. and Mrs. Romeo Leboeuf, Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Dupuis, all from Valleyfield; Mr. and Mrs. Emery Rabeau, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Dupuis, Mr. and Mrs. Jean Quenneville, Mr. and Mrs. Hector Carriere, Mr. and Mrs. Andre Quenneville from St. Anicet, and Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Caza and family of Huntingdon.

MAY BAN CYCLISTS ON NEW HIGHWAYS

Banning of bicycles from the new divided highways of the province, now under construction, is under study by the provincial government, according to advices received by the Royal Automobile Club of Canada.

Attention of the Government has been drawn to recent action of the Government in Ontario prohibiting bicycles on the Queen Elizabeth Way, the province's new highway between Hamilton and Niagara Falls. Bicyclists were informed they could proceed at their leisure on the old road. When this arrangement, which has proved very popular with motorists, was drawn to the attention of the Quebec Government, a reply was received that the question was already under study.

These new highways are designed for rapid transit, and it is felt that bicycles would be not only a danger to the riders of them, but also to other vehicles on the road. Former roads are adjacent to the new highways and are regarded as more suitable and safer for the bicycles.

In the province of Quebec, the new super highways include the lakeshore and Ile Perrot highways, the Cote de Liesse divided boulevard, the Montreal - New York State highway, and the new divided sections of the Montreal-Sherbrooke highway.

One Woman Industry in Huntingdon

Although Not A Large One, Products Sold Across Canada

Huntingdon has an industry about which one hears little, yet its products are shipped from coast to coast in Canada. The industry has a secret formula which is made up here, then packed and shipped out to Canadian customers. The head office of the company is in New York City. Most of the Canadian shipments are made to wholesale houses, which in turn sell the product to retail stores. The Province of Ontario is the largest consumer.

The industry is Lister's Ltd., and is located in the building on the southwest corner of Bouchette and King Streets. In this building it has been located since 1932. The company first located here in 1927 and at this time was located in a corner of the Baumert plant.

The main product of the company is diebetic flour. This flour is used by individuals suffering from diabetes. Casein is used in making the flour and it is shipped here from New York. There are other ingredients in it but the company does not make the formula public.

The flour can be used in making bread, muffins, cake, doughnuts, etc.

Other products which are handled by the Canadian branch plant but which are not made here are saccharin tablets which are used to sweeten tea and coffee, another preparation in the form of a powder to sweeten grapefruit, etc., and a skin cleaning lotion and ointment.

In charge of the plant is Miss Rucie O'Hare, who has been with the company a little over ten years. She acts as manager, secretary, wrapping hand, and official of all trades in connection with the running of the plant. It is she who makes up the flour from the formula and who makes arrangements for the packing of same. When it is necessary she calls in a hand or two to give her help in packing and shipping the goods.

STORM DOES MUCH DAMAGE MONDAY

A short but severe storm caused considerable damage in Lower Ormstown on Monday night. Lightning struck a tree and a fence on the property of Mr. Kirkland and almost immediately a stack of hay was ablaze. Fortunately the farm buildings were kept from taking fire. Windows were broken by the severe shock of lightning at neighboring houses and radios and electrical appliances put out of order.

More Than 500 Trainees Take Part in Church Parade Service; Continue Them Each Sunday

Soldiers Attend Divine Service at St. Joseph's Church and at St. John's—Parade Under Command Of Major Howell—Are Warmly Welcomed

Special ceremonies were held in St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church and at St. John's Anglican Church, Huntingdon, on Sunday morning on the occasion of the first Sunday in Huntingdon of the trainees at the Huntingdon Military Barracks.

More than 500 soldiers who are undergoing one month's training at the local barracks attended the Low Mass which was celebrated at 8.45 a.m. by the parish priest, Rev. Fr. Arthur Pigeon, at St. Joseph's. About 25 were present at St. John's Church and were welcomed to the service by the rector, Rev. W. S. Hatcher.

During his remarks in French and English, Father Pigeon welcomed the trainees to Huntingdon on behalf of himself and the congregation and hoped that their stay here would be a happy one. At the conclusion of his remarks the parish priest explained the Christian duties of a soldier serving in the Empire's fighting forces.

A delegation from the town council headed by Mayor D. Faubert, attended the Low Mass. A number of parishioners who had attended the previous service, lined the streets and hailed the trainees as they marched from the barracks to the church.

This special Sunday service for the trainees will continue each Sunday and will take place at 8.45 a.m. E.S.T.

Captain Vinet Is Appointed Police Head

Further Changes Made To Valleyfield Constabulary Force—City Sued For $1,050

Further changes have been made in the constabulary force in Valleyfield during the past week. At the regular session of the Valleyfield Council on Wednesday evening, the Police Committee nominated Captain Jules Vinet, as Chief of Police of the City of Salaberry of Valleyfield. He will replace Arthur Hébert who was transferred to the Bellerive station.

At this meeting the City Clerk read a letter of resignation from Constable Omer Lalonde. This is the third resignation in the constabulary force within three weeks. Arthur Lefebvre, Oscar Martin and Alcide Hébert were nominated constables for the City at this session of the Council.

Ald. Merel Laberge congratulated the members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce for their suggestion to have the Valleyfield banks open on Saturday evening. This would permit the businessmen and the laborers to make the necessary deposits and cash their checks, it was intimated.

Alexander Legault, Recorder for the City of Valleyfield, claims the sum of $1,050 which sum he is due, the letter stated, according to a resolution of the Valleyfield Council. The letter was filed.

The City Clerk was authorized to purchase a motorcycle for use by the members of the police force.

Roads Minister T. D. Bouchard announced at Montreal on Friday that from December 1 on, tickets for bridge tolls will be sold in booklets of 10 for $2.50, instead of only in series of 20 for $5 as at present with the general idea to facilitate matters all around for next year's tourists and for residents of the Province.

N. W. Sparrow Retires as Mgr. Bank of Montreal, Huntingdon

Had 36 Years Experience —Succeeded by W. K. Pope, Barry's Bay, Ont.

One of the best known figures in the business life of Huntingdon, N. W. Sparrow, manager of the Bank of Montreal, is shortly going on leave of absence, prior to retiring on pension.

Mr. Sparrow began his banking career some 36 years ago when he entered the old Merchants Bank of Canada as a young clerk. Twenty-seven years ago he opened the Huntingdon office and since then he has occupied the position of manager of the branch, first under the Merchants Bank regime and for the past 18 years under that of the Bank of Montreal.

Both by reason of his years of service and the esteem in which his judgment and advice are held, he has become one of our leading citizens. His retirement from active duty at the bank will be a cause for regret to his many friends, but after so many years of active service, no one will begrudge him his well-earned years of leisure and all will wish that the years ahead may be happy ones.

Mr. Sparrow will be succeeded at the bank by W. K. Pope, a banker of 28 years' experience, from Barry's Bay, Ont. Mr. Pope is a native of Hensall and entered upon his banking career in that town.

After eleven years' experience at various points, principally in Ontario, his first appointment as manager was at Walter's Falls. Following a two-year period at St. John's, Newfoundland, he was moved to Ottawa, where he was for six years accountant at the Sparks Street office. In 1936 he was promoted to the managership of the Barry's Bay branch, a position he held up to the time of his appointment to the bank here.

Mr. Pope is a man who has always taken a great interest in community affairs at the various points at which he has been situated during his banking career.

According to present plans, Mr. Pope will take over his new duties about the end of the month. He is married and has two children.

36 YEARS' SERVICE

N. W. SPARROW, who will go on leave of absence shortly, prior to retiring from managership of the Bank of Montreal, Huntingdon.

PERMIT SEARCH OF HOMES FOR ARMS

The provision in the Defence of Canada regulations for search of premises upon suspicion of possession of a weapon contrary to the regulations is clarified and enlarged by order-in-council made public recently. The provision now reads:

"If any person reasonably suspected of having in his possession or upon his premises, contrary to the provisions of this regulation, any firearm for which a certificate of registration has not been applied for or has been refused or cancelled pursuant to this regulation, or if the Attorney-General of the province is satisfied that it is in the interest of the public safety or the safety of the state so to do, and so directs, he may be searched, or his premises or any place occupied or believed to be occupied by him may be searched, for any firearm by any peace officer without warrant, and if any such firearm be found upon any such person or his premises, or in any such place as aforesaid, the same shall be seized and forfeited to the Crown to be disposed of as the Attorney-General of the province in which such forfeiture takes place may direct."

FERRY BURNS

A St. Lawrence river automobile ferry operating between Valleyfield and Coteau du Lac on the north shore was destroyed by fire Friday. The fire started in the boiler room while the ferry was in dock on the Valleyfield side.

The ferry, owned by the Beauharnois Power Corporation, Limited, provided the only direct link between Valleyfield district and the Toronto-Montreal highway.

FLY UNION JACKS

The Union Jack hereafter will occupy the "place of honor" atop Montreal Roman Catholic schools on all official and scholastic occasions, the Montreal Catholic School Commission decided unanimously at a regular meeting last week.

The matter of flags atop Catholic schools was called to the commission's attention by its general chairman, C. E. Gravel. In the past some individual school authorities lacked knowledge of what flags should decorate their schools on different occasions. The result was considerable confusion. Mr. Gravel proposed that until the federal Government may decide otherwise "the Union Jack will always occupy the place of honor among other standards." Instructions were given that school principals be advised immediately of this ruling.

Premier Adelard Godbout Denounces Sectionalism

HAS MESSAGE

Speaks at Opening of Province's First Apple Juice Co-operative

PREMIER GODBOUT, whose stirring address at Rougemont, Quebec, appears herewith.

Opening the first co-operative apple juice and apple sauce plant in the province of Quebec at Rougemont, Quebec, on Monday, Premier Godbout in the course of his address stated that anybody in this country who preached disunity or raised the race cry was nothing but a traitor who should receive short shrift.

The forthright Premier, in as straight-from-the-shoulder a speech as has ever been delivered by a French-Canadian leader actually in office, delivered an impassioned plea for greater understanding between the two major races in this province, warning that it was not by fostering sectionalism that the greatness of a country could be acnieved.

"Anybody," he insisted, "who, in these days does not recognize what we all owe the British Crown and who doesn't known that it is Britain, and Britain alone, who today is fighting the fight for liberty and Christianity is—a traitor."

A crowd of several hundred persons from Rougemont and surrounding villages in this heart of the apple-growing industry of Quebec probably expected the Premier to say little more than express pleasure at being able to officiate at the opening of this co-operative which is subsidized to a small extent by the Quebec Government. He did say that, and the crowd applauded.

When he launched into what he had apparently come to say, however, the crowd cheered him on as, point by point, he listed the virtues and shortcomings of the population generally and urged all and sundry to educate themselves the better to face competition within their own country and from other lands, friendly and otherwise.

"Let us stop whining," the Premier continued. "Let us stop this everlasting—'the English have this, the English have that.' It's not through repeating this chant that we shall ever get anywhere and it's not through petty jealousy that we'll improve the position of our country. Let us be brothers, let us work hand in hand for the greater good and development of this, our Canada, yours and mine."

The Premier said that education should become more practical than it had been in the past. There should be, for example, what might amount to vocational training so that youth would be fitted for whatever particular calling he appeared best fitted to follow. Canada had a large competitor in the United States, he said, and the Americans were an intensely practical nation. There were other countries, too, that offered strong competition to Quebec and the Dominion.

Hence, he argued, if Canadians wanted to develop markets they had first to be educated to know where the best ones were and then be sufficiently alert to questions of economics to be in position to offer better goods at lesser prices.

Mr. Godbout also took the opportunity of asking the public at

DAVID S. MUNROE, HON. SECRETARY TEACHERS' ASS'N.

Many teachers from this district attended the convention of the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers, which ended a three-day session on Saturday morning in the Montreal High School. C. J. Fraser, principal of Alexandra School, Montreal, was elected president of the association. Among the officers elected was Mr. David S. Munroe, principal of Ormstown High School, who was made honorary secretary.

Before relinquishing her position as head of the teachers' body, Miss L. B. F. Truax, in commenting on the report of the public relations committee, urged that more publicity be given to educational matters and the problems of the profession than has been the case in the past. With reference to the thorny question of administrative and financial matters which came in for some lively debate at this year's convention, Miss Truax said: "Until the public is informed on administrative and financial matters, very little can be accomplished. There has been too much airing of our views within our own organizations, without addressing them to the public."

DR. M. R. STALKER ADDRESSES THE ORMSTOWN P.Y.P.S.

The Ormstown Presbyterian Young People's Society held their October meeting on Friday evening, Oct. 11th at the Manse with an attendance of thirty-seven. Dr. M. R. Stalker was guest speaker at this meeting and gave a very interesting and educational address on the History and Development of Surgery. A vote of thanks to Dr. Stalker for his address was moved by Mr. Allan Cavers and seconded by Mr. Ivan Barrington.

The Bugles Call and the Trainees Line Up ....

The trainees from Montreal are rounding out into military ways at the barracks these days. They are a vastly different lot in appearance to what they were when they arrived last Wednesday and by the end of their 30 days they should have quite a foundation in the way of soldier training. Under the watchful eye of Lieut.-Col. C. C. Brooks and his capable staff of officers they are daily receiving their drills and lectures. Yesterday was blue day at the camp for it was drizzly weather and prevented as much outdoor activity as usual. As a result quite a number of lectures were given indoors. The photos above are typical of life in the camp. On the left are seen two buglers in action. They are Pte. J. Buxton, of Faucher St., Montreal, and Pte. A. Garayt, of Casgrain St., Montreal. On the right is seen a section of No. 5 Platoon of A Company being drilled by Lieut. I. Graham.

Huntingdon, Wed., October 16th, 1940

Why were the saints saints? Because they were cheerful when it was difficult to be cheerful, patient when it was difficult to be patient, pushed on when they wanted to stand still, kept silent when they wanted to talk, and were agreeable when they wanted to be disagreeable.

The Saving in D.S.T.

THE Gleaner was unable to agree with an editorial which appeared two weeks ago in the Smiths Falls, Ontario, Record-News on the subject of Daylight Saving Time. In these columns the arguments of the Record-News for Daylight Saving Time were taken apart and they were not found to be all wool. In fact, the texture was rather flimsy. Since then the Record-News, in refutation, asks who saves the estimated $4,500,000 in electricity which was mentioned. We were just about to make the explanation when we glanced at the first editorial in the Smiths Falls newspaper in which appeared the one answering the Gleaner's volley. We realized that right there was the answer in Editor Dobbie's own newspaper, although apparently unknown to him. This editorial was headed "Who Gets the Saving?" and it dealt with Fire Prevention Week. When a fire occurs, who profits? Is it the property owner who carries fire insurance for perhaps a half of the replacement value of the building? It surely isn't the insurance company that has to pay the claim for fire loss. Then, who profits? The general public is the one who profits by fire. The loss sustained by a neighbour induces everyone to consider their own risks and, if they have not got enough insurance, they will likely increase their fire insurance. Or, perhaps they will scrutinize their property and see to it that fire risks are reduced.

Daylight Saving is a monetary saving to one who owns a building that requires electric light during the late hours of the afternoon. If the people start to work in such buildings one hour earlier in the day they will save one hour of electricity in the afternoon. In the case of such savings of electricity the monetary saving is retained in the treasury of the building tenant or tenants. As for homes it will be a case of people retiring to bed one hour earlier at night, according to the sun, than they otherwise would. Consequently the saving of one hour of electricity consumed for lighting purposes! It is these little savings, month by month, and from here and there, that make up the 182,000 h.p. of electricity saved in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec.

Editor Dobbie states that since Smiths Falls approved Daylight Saving, the peak load just changed with the time, consequently resulting in no saving to the Town of Smiths Falls. Certainly there was no change in peak load, nor will either the Hydro of Ontario or the private power corporations of Quebec find their electric load reduced. There is an estimated shortage of 200,000 h.p. of electricity today in these two provinces. If Daylight Saving is put into practice 182,000 h.p. can be saved from individuals and companies who will not miss it, thereby providing power for other potential customers. If the peak load in Smiths Falls is from 11 to 12 a.m., it may be an hour later somewhere else. Thus it is surely plain enough that more people can be supplied with electricity if the peak loads of various communities can be spread over a greater number of hours per day. Here in the Beauharnois District, where a great deal of power is consumed, the peak load will be during the work day, not during the noon hour, whilst at nights many of our industrial plants use a tremendous amount of electricity for lighting as well as for power.

A Centennial Number

THE Owen Sound Daily Sun-Times has published a centennial number which does real credit to this enterprising city on the shores of Georgian Bay. A thirty-page newspaper profusely illustrated, well-edited and full of many historical stories concerning the early life of the district, together with messages of congratulation from individuals and business firms across Canada makes up this fine edition.

One hundred years ago—on October 7, 1840—Mr. John Telfer, appointed land agent under Lord Sydenham, then Governor-General of Canada, arrived by way of St. Vincent, after travelling by batteau from Coldwater, Ontario. He first landed at a small bay at the harbour mouth where he was welcomed by the Indian Chieftain Newash and directed to the camp of Charles Rankin, who had been engaged in surveying the Garafraxa Road. From that day Owen Sound progressed to the beautiful city it is today. The building of grain elevators and of C.P.R. dock facilities some years ago made Owen Sounders think that it was to be a great port of this company, an Ontario terminus of goods shipped from the Canadian West. Swinging trends of transportation have altered this somewhat, however. Despite this fact Owen Sound's harbour is a busy one. In addition the city is the hub of a fine farming community. This Georgian Bay city is the home of a man who is today figuring very prominently in Canada's war effort, none other than Air-Marshall W. A. Bishop. It was he who flew to Owen Sound with the charter when the town was made a city. The Fleming family, who own and publish the paper, are an old and highly respected family of Owen Sound. They also own the Cornwall Standard-Freeholder, which triweekly, we understand, may shortly become a daily newspaper. This forward marching is evidence of the progressive spirit of the Flemings which has made of the Sun-Times an excellent provincial daily.

Red Cross Goes Over the Top

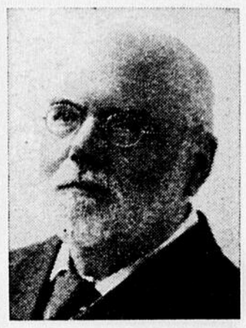

REPORTS from various centres in the Chateauguay Valley showing the amounts of their collections in the Red Cross campaign indicate that the people are right behind their splendid work. For a time it seemed to us that the Red Cross was not going to get the support they expected. And the early returns would seem to indicate this. However, the home-stretch was a glorious one in which all rallied to the cause. The early hesitancy in giving to the Red Cross was credited to a number of reasons, one of which was German propaganda. And make no mistake about it, there was German propaganda out to discourage Canadian people from giving, such statements being circulated by them as the Red Cross does not use nearly the amount of money they receive for war work but instead it goes to salaries to officials working in the Red Cross. All of which, of course, is a dirty Nazi lie, just pure, unadulterated Nazi propaganda. In order to check on this a complete survey was made of where Red Cross money has gone in the past and it has been conclusively shown that only a very small percent goes to administration expenses.

From the statements we have on hand of campaigns held in centres in the Chateauguay Valley there can be no doubt that the campaign was loyally supported. All of them passed their quotas and some doubled them. Beauharnois, for example, had a quota of $1,000, yet they raised $2,253.63. Valleyfield, whose objective was $3,500, turned in the sum of $6,249. Huntingdon, which included those districts designated as Upper and Lower Chateauguay, Godmanchester and St. Anicet, had an objective of $1,000, yet collected the sum of $1,483.91. Ormstown was called upon to obtain $720. yet they raised $1,012.56. Franklin, with $199, was included with Ormstown. Howick's quota was $470. and they collected $547.65. Hemmingford, which included Havelock, Barrington, Roxham and Robson, garnered the sum of $451.40. We do not know what the objective for this latter district was but we feel confident that they, like the others, passed their quota. Dundee raised $215. The sum of $460. was obtained at Athelstan, although its quota was $200. The grand total collected from these centres amounted to $12,673.15. And more will have been received since their supposedly final statements were sent in. That should be an answer to Hitler's propaganda! That should be an answer as to the confidence of the people in the proper administration of the Canadian Red Cross Society! Congratulations to the entire district on their splendid support.

Drill Will Benefit Trainees

WHEN the young men who are at present at the Huntingdon Military Barracks emerge from same after 30 days of training they will be noticeably enriched by their experience—physically, mentally and otherwise. The majority of them, unaccustomed to such regimentation, will find it for a time difficult to get used to. So far, according to the officers, they have responded exceedingly well and have swung into military ways to a degree not entirely looked for at first. Further discipline, although seemingly irksome at times, will in the end prove beneficial to the individuals. Quite apart from the military angle the disciplinary life itself is most beneficial. The gaining of an "Esprit de corps" by these youths, the good conduct and the loyalty to one's companions they will learn will prove a valuable asset to them even though they are never called on later to serve in the army. At the Huntingdon Military Barracks there are circulars issued for the trainees to read. One that is not issued but the contents of which is given to the youths in a lecture contains the following pertinent paragraph: "Above all he must be highly disciplined, for by discipline alone can morale be maintained; it is the bedrock of all training. It is the ingrained habit of cheerful and unhesitating obedience that controls and directs the fighting spirit and is the backbone of a unit in a moment of crisis." Continuing, this details personal discipline and tells of seven virtues which avoid seven faults: self respect which avoids arrogance; personal honours which avoids touchiness; loyalty vs fanaticism; courtesy vs insincerity; temperance vs bigotry; energy vs overwork; knowledge vs pedantry (boastful display of learning). It is pointed out that an officer should: 1, Bear himself in a smart and soldierly manner even if tired. 2, Dress according to the regulation of the hour. 3, Study how to satisfy the wishes of his superiors. 4, Be polite to his equals. 5, Be considerate toward his inferiors, avoiding embarrassing intimacy or a patronizing manner. 6, Be a good man at arms. 7, Excel in at least one thing. 8, Study the art of war, especially new things. 9, Know and observe the rules and regulations. 10, Keep physically fit and play games with his men.

"Manners maketh man," it is said, and the army plans in every way to make mannerly men of its soldiers which is noticeable in those who have had military training to any extent.

The Late ROBERT SELLAR

JAMES HAMILTON—I understood John Hunter settled on the river by James Brown's advice and had to leave because Stanley Begg, a relative of Brown's, had got a deed. The Hunters then moved up to their old place. I remember seeing the Hunter boys working, grubbing out pine roots, on the new road to the Portage. The weather was hot, and they had only their trousers on. The first road was by the river bank, the second was the one I speak of, and the third is the present. One time, when haying on the point opposite this, it was so hot I took two shirts with me, and when one was wet I took it off and hung it to dry while I wore the other. When the country was all bush, there was no breeze and it was fearful hot. My first home, a mere shanty, not roofed properly, was near the line, run by James Cunningham's place, I think. Polliquin lived at mouth of creek on a lot owned by Ducharme, who lived somewhere in the French country. Polliquin never owned it. I lived on the hill where my son John is, when Brown and the young Scotch, I do not recollect his name, who ran three lines in Howick and boarded with us. Todd was at the Portage when I came, and was lumbering a good deal. It was mostly hardwood on both sides of the river here. We brought our provisions up from Montreal by way of the St. Lawrence and left them at John Wylies, not knowing that we could get anything up by the Chateauguay. A great many Indians came yearly at the fall; the point opposite was a favorite camping place. Their shanties were made of poles set in a circle and covered with birchbark, the smoke coming out at top of the poles. The fire was in the centre and they slept with their heads next to the foot of the poles and their feet to the fire. The men hunted and the women kept house, chopping up dry logs for firewood. They were not bad neighbors at all, but when they got drunk they quarrelled among themselves, and at such times we would see the squaws hurry out with their men's tomahawks and hide them. Afterwards they had a camp back on the Outarde, and long after they had one on the creek on Brown's farm, where they made a great many baskets. The squaws had blankets and the men dressed much as now. They always left in their canoes in the spring. There were no otter or beaver when I came.

MRS. BLACHFORD—My father, John Boyd, came from the North of Ireland, where he was a shoemaker and small farmer, having 15 acres. He came to this country owing to letters received from the Wilsons, who had been neighbors. He came out in 1831 and squatted on lot (where John is). He and his brother William were the first settlers on that concession. My uncle soon left and went to Ohio. There was no road, just a track, following the ridges from Hamilton's and when the swamp was reached stepping from log to log until our house was reached. It was all green bush then. The track led across our lot. My father's main hold was making ashes, and I have seen him working at it until midnight and known a thunder shower destroy a week's work. In 1837 he and William Hunter went out to Hemmingford with an ox team for ammunition, and it was so cold in coming back that my father got a cold that settled on one of his lungs and carried him off. The farm was paid for after his death. There were great bush fires and one year we lost all our crop, and another the grain was drawn and piled next the Outarde. A road ran up the Donnelly's lot and out to the Ewe. It had been first opened as a lumber road. In wet times, grain had to be carried, 1½ bushels on the back, to the grist mill.

MR. GRANT—Was born in 1799 at Bridge of Garten, Perthshire, where my father had moved from Invernesshire. He must have done so when young, for I have heard him say he could run over the snow while his companions sank at every step. I emigrated in 1819 and was employed as back store man in a wholesale house, where I was doing well and with good prospects. My health, however, failed me, and the doctor told me if I stayed in town I would die, but if I went to farming I would likely live to be an old man. I thought of going to Perth, but my uncle (Rutherford?) said no, they were opening up Seigniory land for settlement and it would be better to be near Montreal. We went up to Bearharnois in the "Perseverance" (a very small boat that plied between Lachine and the Cascades) to see Brown, who told us where the land was. In returning we stayed at Dalton's tavern which was on the north side, on the Nun's Island. Dalton was Irish and had a Catholic for a wife. He collected the tolls on all rafts that ran up to his place, and who generally induced them to buy extra oars, etc., which he kept for sale. There was a newcomer out, a Scotchman, in the tavern, and at breakfast he said this was an awful country, for the beasts the fowk kept were maist bulls, and had kept rowtin' a' nicht. Dalton laughed heartily at his mistake. The whole country at the time was black with pigeons, and we had them for dinner, supper and breakfast in all shapes.

Care is Being Taken to Prevent Military Training Schedule From Hampering War Industry

CANADA'S war activities are steadily gathering momentum. During the past week encouraging reports from government departments show that armed forces and production of equipment and supplies are expanding to meet the needs of the hour and the future. In 39 camps throughout the Dominion, youths of 21, with some slightly older, have begun their thirty days of military training. Just under 30,000 are in these camps; these are the first group called up under the compulsory military training plan. They are receiving instruction in the handling of rifles and bayonets and the use of gas masks. They are taught how to march, receive instruction in discipline, have physical training and have a general schooling in the fundamentals of military life. The second group of these "young defenders" will be called to camp on November 27.

Arrangements are being made to prevent the military training schedule from hampering war industry. Care has been taken to postpone or advance the training of those engaged in seasonal operations such as farming, so that there will be no interference with these essential industries. There is also, however, the question of preventing key men from being taken from munitions and equipment factories. The work of making a shell is as important as that of learning how to fire a gun. A list of war industries has been sent to the boards in the 13 administrative districts who have the duty of preparing the lists of those to be called out for military training, and these boards have been asked to "give consideration to representatives of certain industrial employers." A committee in Ottawa has been engaged in ironing out the difficulty. One of the great problems facing the munitions industry is keeping up the supply of skilled workmen as the industry expands. The solution is not alone in preventing men being taken out of plants for military training but in instructing new men for expert work in these plants. Schools operated by provincial governments with financial aid from the Dominion, are turning out several thousand young experts, and these are being incor-

ELIMINATE PASSPORTS

(The Financial Post)

ONE result of the recent visit of U.S. journalists to Canada is an editorial appeal in the New York Times urging the State Department to abolish passport requirements for Canadian visitors to the U.S.

The Times calls this an "obvious mistake" and adds:

"While it is important to bar undesirable aliens, the economic loss sustained in the free interchange between the two countries is far more obvious than the gain achieved. The passport requirement should be rescinded, and every effort should be made to correlate and complement the activities of the two nations."

For reasons which most Americans well understand and respect, Canadian travel to the United States has been curtailed by dollar exchange restrictions. The passport formality has added to these travel problems.

One of the most serious results has been to confuse potential U.S. visitors to Canada. Many American friends when they hear the word "passport" jump to the erroneous conclusion that a passport is needed to visit Canada.

Canada's new organization to coordinate tourist trade should follow The Times' suggestion through; discuss the matter openly and frankly with U.S. officials to see if a passport is really essential.

In 1940, the passport proposal came at the very height of the tourist season. Had it been deliberately promoted by enemy agents it would not have appeared at a more unfortunate time. It affected not only the big July 1 and July 4 holiday traffic but also thousands of people who were then making their summer plans. It was undoubtedly used by Nazi propagandists to twist and distort the friendly nature of travel relationships between the two countries.

The New York Times has provided an excellent wedge to use in removing this obstacle to inter-nation travel.

Christian Art.—

The noblest Architecture and Literature reflect the beauty of God's handiwork in Nature. Christian Art was bound to do the same, but was subordinated by the circumstances under which the Christian religion was established. For three centuries after Christ art was restrained, partly by persecution, partly by a high spirituality which cared much more about preaching than painting. Then when, under Constantine, Christianity became the religion of the Roman empire, myriads of persons gave their wealth and their art to aid the new religion who were Christians in nothing but name, and who decorated a Christian temple just as they would have decorated a pagan one, merely because the new religion had become Imperial and fashionable.

Then, just as the new art was beginning to assume a distinctive form, down came the northern barbarians upon it, and, says Ruskin, all their superstitions had to be leavened with it, and all their hard hands and hearts softened by it (with its civilising power), before their art could appear in anything like a characteristic form. The warfare in which Europe was perpetually plunged, retarded artistic development for centuries. But, arrived at the 13th century, its art is said to have been the root of all succeeding art.

I have remarked before that a critic such as Ruskin was necessarily a student of history. History is a story of human life and the manner of living is the result and also the cause of the works of man. Therefore our art critic observes not only art but the labours of men in general and along divers lines. He tells us that in the Gothic times, writing, painting, carving, casting were all works done by thoughtful and happy men, and that the illumination of literature, and the carving and casting of wall and gate, employed, not thousands, but millions, of true and noble artists over all Christian lands. (This next sentence applies even more to our 20th century machine age than it did to Ruskin's day). Men in the same position are now left utterly without intellectual power or pursuit, and, being unhappy in their (monotonous) work, they rebel against it; hence one of the worst forms of Unchristian Socialism.

Ruskin gives us three divisions of Time with special reference to Art and Work in each period, showing that their character had a close connection with religion. Those three periods he designates as Classicalism, Mediaevalism, and Modernism. According to the critic, the first confessed Pagan faith, the second confessed Christ, and the third denies Christ.

As proof of a downward trend in religious tone Ruskin says: Hear this direction to an upholsterer of the early 13th century. He is to "wainscot the King's (Henry III) lower chamber, and to paint that wainscot a green colour, and to put a border to it, and to cause the heads of kings and queens to be painted on the borders; and to paint on the walls of the King's upper chamber the story of St. Margaret, Virgin, and the four Evangelists, and to paint the wainscot of the same chamber of a green colour, spotted with gold."

Again, the sheriff of Wiltshire must "put two small glass windows in the chamber of Edward the King's son, and put a glass window in the chamber of our Queen at Clarendon; and in the same window cause to be painted a Mary with her Child, and at the feet of the said Mary a queen with clasped hands."

Again, the sheriff of Southampton is ordered to paint the tablet beside the King's bed, with the figures of the guards of the bed of Solomon, and to glaze with white gloss the windows in the King's great Hall at Northampton, and cause the history of Lazarus and Dives to be painted in the same."

You see that in all these cases, the very furniture was made to confess Christianity. It might be imperfect and impure Christianity, but it was all that men had then to live and die by. Says Ruskin, if a thousand years hence, any curious investigator were to dig up the ruins of Edinburgh, he would think you had all been born heathens. Now that, so far as it goes, is denying Christ; it is pure Modernism.

What do you suppose was the substance of good education, the education of a knight in the Middle Ages? What was taught to a boy as soon as he was able to learn anything?

First, to keep under his body, yet bring it to the perfection of strength; then to take Christ for his captain, to live as always in His presence; and, finally, to do his "devoir" to all men. Consider the influence over the armies of France of the ancient "devoir" and modern "gloire". Whatever evil was committed by governments, at least the authority of God's law was confessed in the mediaeval age.

Ruskin asks us to observe that the change from religious to non-religious art had nothing to do with the Reformation, for the decadence of tone is seen not only in reformed England and Scotland, but also in unreformed France, Italy and Austria. He blames the deterioration upon one of the greatest artists, Raphael. This master of the 15th century was honoured by being called to Rome to decorate a very prominent edifice. Ruskin says that his work was the handwriting on the wall of the arts of Christianity. On one wall he placed a picture of the Kingdom of Theology, presided over by Christ. On another wall of the same chamber he placed the Kingdom of Poetry, presided over by the heathen god Apollo, thus elevating fancy to the same rank as faith. The perfect execution and the beauty of his work made him the model of all artists who followed, and beauty was sought after instead of truth.

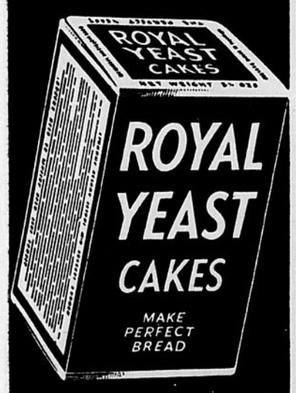

The cleverer an evil character is, the more dangerous he is, for he wins popularity, and influences opinion, not of course, meaning that Raphael himself was a vicious person, but the principle involved is the same.

Before waving good-bye to Mr. Ruskin, as he stands in his Gothic porch, we might note just one or two of his thoughts which will be easier for our common selves to grasp than pre-Raphaelstism. He says, rooms must not be darkened to make the ranges of windows symmetrical. Useless wings must not be added to balance useful wings.

He would have the wealthy save the money they spend for their private gratification in silver plate and jewellery and spend it in decorating the exterior of their dwellings, so that the World and his Wife, as they pass by, may have the pleasure to be derived from viewing beautiful architecture.

And you've heard of that "good old family" prop. What sayeth Ruskin? Consider whether we ought not to seek honour from our descendants more than our ancestors, thinking it better to be nobly remembered than nobly born, and striving so to live that our sons, and our sons' sons might lead their children reverently to the doors out of which we had been carried to the grave, saying: "Look: This was his house: This was his chamber."

Serving A Ghostly Menu

Strangely enough, ghosts eat—and no Hallowe'en party is successful that does not boast a delectable menu. Before we consider what to serve, let us discuss the manner in which it is to be served.

Unquestionably, a long narrow table is the best, for when ghosts and witches are in the air, the nearer to one another the guests are the better they will like it! A white tablecloth is best, and instead of flowers for the centrepiece there may be great ears of corn flanked by tall stalks of golden wheat. Or a huge pumpkin filled with favours for the guests. Or a yellow-eyed, fat black cat made of china, glass, or pasteboard.

It is nice to have at each place a small pasteboard cat filled with candy and tied with an orange ribbon around its neck. Another interesting favour is a tiny witch, ghost, or owl made of china or porcelain and suitable for an ornament.

As to menu, hot bouillon should be served, as it helps to dispel the shivery feeling of Hallowe'en. Pumpkin pie is, of course, indispensable, and there should be a salad containing devilled eggs. Other features of the menu may be devil's food cake, ices in pumpkin moulds, "sand-witches," and black coffee.

About midnight, the lights should suddenly go out leaving the room in absolute darkness. A door slowly opens and a "ghost" appears carrying one slender candle that throws the room into grotesque shadows. Everyone will be duly frightened and delighted. The "ghost"—who is either the hostess or one of the guests properly swathed in sheet—takes her place at the table and proceeds to tell the fortune of each guest in turn. The fortune-telling is in the nature of good-natured quips and puns taken from the foibles of the guests and offered to them as "secrets."

When the old-fashioned grandfather's clock in the hall announces with twelve mournful notes that the midnight hour has struck, the house may be thrown into complete darkness for a moment—and when the lights go up again, this time in full brilliance, it may be discovered that one of the guests is missing. The hostess will bring it to everyone's attention, and promptly a search for the missing guest begins. He is probably in the kitchen eating pumpkin pie!

HOW AND WHAT TO SERVE

IN their quest for one-dish luncheon menus many housewives overlook the satisfying and nourishing dishes that can be made with dried beef. Dried beef or "chipped beef" as it is sometimes called, is the choicest of beef cured by a special process and then cut in wafer-like slices. It has one big advantage over other meats in that it can be kept for months in a cool, dry place.

The secret of cooking this meat lies in "frizzling," which means merely frying the thin slices in butter, or other fat, in a real hot skillet until the edges curl and the meat browns lightly.

Some people have an aversion to dried beef dishes because they are too salty, but this can be remedied by soaking the meat in boiling water about 10 minutes and then draining.

An attractive way to serve creamed dried beef is to put it on a hot platter, arrange around the edge of the platter triangles of toast, and garnish with chopped parsley, grated raw carrot, chopped egg yolk, or green peppers. Potato chips or French fried potatoes are excellent served with creamed beef and mushrooms, either fried separately or cooked with the creamed sauce.

Scrambled eggs are especially good combined with dried beef. The meat is frizzled in fat in a hot skillet and the beaten eggs and milk then added. Macaroni, spaghetti or noodles with tomatoes and dried beef make a splendid luncheon dish, which can be varied by the addition of chopped onion, green peppers or chopped celery.

Creamed Dried Beef

¼ lb. dried beef
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup milk

Melt butter in frying pan and when hot add beef carefully picked in small pieces with all bits of stringy tissue removed. Cook over a low fire until the edges of the beef curl. Sift flour over beef and stir with a fork until flour is absorbed, then add milk and bring to the boiling point, stirring constantly to make smooth. Pepper can be added if liked. One slice of onion and a few celery leaves can be scalded in the milk if a more savory sauce is wanted. The milk must be strained to remove vegetables and then the milk must be cooled before making the sauce. Cold liquid makes a smooth sauce.

Chocolate Cake

¼ cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 egg yolks
1 cup sour milk
2 squares chocolate
1½ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Blend butter (or substitute), sugar and egg yolks together; add melted chocolate. Mix and sift flour, salt, and baking soda, and add alternately with the sour milk to the first mixture. Mix thoroughly and add vanilla. Pour into a square or oblong baking pan, greased and floured, and bake in a moderate (350 degrees) for about 30 minutes. If butter substitute is used for shortening, ½ teaspoon of salt instead of ¼ teaspoon should be used. Cool cake before frosting. Frost with white peppermint frosting.

Household Hints

Silver spoons or forks which have been used for egg dishes should be rubbed with salt before being washed.

Window shade springs can be rewound by inserting the flat end of roller between the tines of a fork and turning.

A teaspoon of vinegar mixed into frosting will keep it from breaking when cut.

Calf Club Boys Are Rewarded

Thursday was a red-letter day for four boys of the Huntingdon Calf Club, for on that day Tiburtius Ouimet, Donald McKell, Ovide Monique and Joe Carr were guests of the Montreal Kiwanis Club at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal. With upwards of 300 Kiwanians and ladies present, Titburtius Ouimet, Dewittville, age 14, and Erle Clarke, Clarenceville, age 11, were presented with bronze trophies as a mark of appreciation for their proficiency in judging livestock at Huntingdon and Bedford fairs respectively. The shields are to be competed for annually. On the shield is a small engraved plate showing the name of the winner for the year. The Kiwanis Club extended congratulations to Mr. William J. Bryant for his success as chairman of the Kiwanis Agricultural Committee for having accomplished so much towards the encouragement of agriculture among youths of the province. During the afternoon the boys present from these two clubs were taken to Jersey Health Farms, Isle Bizard, where they saw a fine lot of Belgian and Percheron horses. The boys were not taken with the quality of cattle or poultry, believing we had much better stock in the Chateauguay Valley. The Huntingdon boys were escorted by Agronomist L. G. Pelletier, President Wm. Graham of the Huntingdon fair, John Smaill, fair secretary, and Adam L. Sellar of The Gleaner.

Lots of Stones

Those who are of the opinion that there isn't so much rock in this section of the country need only visit the Military Barracks and look down into the ditches dug to lay the sewer pipe. Large stones are profusely deposited in this field at depths of only about five or six feet below the surface of the ground. These stones have been a real obstacle in the speedy digging of the ditch.

Howick

The Frontier Ministerial Association of the United Church held its October meeting at the Manse in Howick. Rev. Mr. Lindley of Dundee, was the essayist for the occasion. His papaper, "The Gospel For Today," was ably presented.

Rev. Mr. Day of Russeltown, led the discussion which followed. The paper aroused much interest, so much so, that the discussion will be resumed at the November meeting. The members then resolved themselves into sectional committees to complete arrangements for the series of special meetings to be held during the week of Oct. 20th to 27th. There were twenty members present. Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Welch and Mrs. Younie.

The W.M.S. thankoffering meeting of the Howick United Church was held Sunday evening at 7.30. It was very gratifying and encouraging to have so many present. Miss Bessie Cairns of South China Mission, was the special speaker for the evening. During her splendid talk Miss Cairns mentioned that the Chinese were greatly impressed by the fact that the missionaries had remained at their posts, during all the bombing raids by the Japanese. Our missionaries are truly worthy of all the support we can give them. A helpful lesson in temperance was given by Ralph and Marjory Craig.

Canada Year Book is Now Available

The 1940 Canada Year Book is now available for distribution by authorization of the Hon. James A. MacKinnon, Minister of Trade and Commerce. This book contains a wealth of information concerning Canada, and as a ready reference book of the country there is none to compare with it. This publication will be supplied, as long as copies are available, to the public by the King's Printer, Ottawa, at the price of $1.50 per copy. The Gleaner finds that there are many times when reference to the book provides immediately the figures or the information sought. This would likewise be the case of many other firms or individuals who would find the purchase of the book an excellent investment. The price of $1.50 covers merely the cost of paper, press work and binding, and leaves no margin available for advertising the volume in the ordinary way. By a special concession, teachers and ministers of religion may obtain paper-bound copies at 50 cents each, but the number that has been set aside for this purpose is more restricted this year owing to the need of limiting all ordinary expenditures for government funds and early application for copies on the part of those desiring to purchrase them is necessary.

The Canada Year Book is the official statistical annual of the country and contains a thoroughly up-to-date account of the natural resources of the country, its institutions, its demography, the different branches of production, trade, transportation, finance, education, etc.—in brief, a comprehensive study within the limits of a single volume, of the social and economic condition of the Dominion. This new edition has been thoroughly revised throughout and includes in all its chapters the latest information available up to the date of going to press.

The 1940 Canada Year Book extends to over 1,200 pages, dealing with all phases of the national life and more especially those susceptible of statistical measurement. A statistical summary of the progress of Canada is included in the introductory matter. This gives a picture in figures of the remarkable progress which the country has made since the first census of the Dominion was taken n 1871, sixty-eight years ago.

PRINTER'S PIE

A compositor, out of work, secured a job as waiter.

One of his first customers, whom he served with soup, called him back and said: "Waiter, there's a button in this soup."

"Very sorry, sir," replied the waiter. "Printer's error, should be mutton."

"My time," said the magnate, "is worth $100 a minute."

"Well," answered his friend casually, "let's go out this afternoon and play $10,000 or $15,000 worth of golf."

Awaiting Their Turn To Be Registered

A portion of the long line of youths awaiting their turn to be registered at the Huntingdon Military Training Barracks last Wednesday is seen above. All of the youths were in good spirits and awaited their turn cheerfully. When the Gleaner cameraman took this picture the youths turned all eyes in that direction and staged a few impromptu expressions for the benefit of the camera. The line extended far beyond that shown in the picture above. Registering was their first port of call before going to the various other buildings prior to their settling down in their own quarters.

large to get over the old idea that politicians were nothing but "crooks," out to get what they could for themselves. Personally, he wished that the three weeks of political campaigning that preceded every election were more in the nature of a "closed retreat" when everybody would examine his conscience and decide how best he could contribute to the general improvement of the country.

He spoke, he insisted, not as a party politician but as a man with an exacting administrative task in hand. That task he was fulfilling to the best of his ability and he cared little for plaudits or criticism so long as he himself felt that his general policy was for the betterment of the whole rather than the aggrandizement of the few. "Myself," he admitted, "I only go into party politics for three weeks every four years." (This, obviously, was in reference to pre-election campaigns).

The very fact that the apple-juice plant was on a co-operative basis, in which persons both English-speaking and French-speaking were vitally interested, was proof positive to the Premier that unity could be extended to the everyday relations of all classes in this province. He hoped that this spirit would spread, convinced as he said he was, that only good would come of it.

Premier Godbout also remarked that it was in the nature of a rare pleasure for the Government to give financial assistance to this co-operative because its sponsors themselves appeared to have such faith in their venture.

Too often, he regretted, people asked for government help simply because there had been largesse in the past and it had become something akin to habit to rely on governments to get limping enterprises out of difficulties. "I can not say it often enough," he repeated, "that when a government makes grants or advances money under any guise, that money comes from the taxpayers' pockets. In four years if I can have managed to put that across, I shall feel my work has not been in vain."

The Premier arrived at Rougemont with Mrs. Godbout, and the provincial deputy for the county of Rouville, H. P. Panet, and Mrs. Panet.

Operating under a Dominion Government licence, the $30,000 plant has a maximum daily capacity of 75,000 cans, each of 20 ounces. It can press 3,000 bushels daily, and extracts nine and three-quarters gallons of the apple juice from every barrel.

At present, the plant presses about 300 barrels a day, which amounts to roughly 900 cases of two dozen cans apiece. Peak operating period is between August and Christmas this year estimates being for about 50,000 cans of apple juice during that time.

There are 135 members in the co-operative, all of them apple-growers. They represent the large majority of growers from Rougemont, Abbotsford and St. Hilaire. The Rougemont apple belt produces about 75 per cent. of the entire provincial apple crop its value amounting to more than $1,000,000.

HEAVY PURCHASES OF STOCKER CATTLE

One of the outstanding features of the livestock trade this year has been the consistently strong demand for replacement, or as they are generally known, stocker and feeder cattle. Prices of such cattle have kept remarkably close to prices being paid for slaughter stock. Purchases on stock yards for return to the country for further feeding so far this year accounted for almost 100,000 head, an increase of 30,000 oper the corresponding period last year, according to the Marketing Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture. There has also been a much heavier movement of calves back to country points. Shipments this ye ar, many of them consisting of stocker calves weighing between 250 and 300 pounds, have totalled over 15,000, while in the same time last year purchasers only took back some 6,000 head.

Feed supplies of all sorts are plentiful this year and, therefore, a fairly abundant supply of well finished cattle on the major markets next winter and spring may be expected.

When one lends money to some people, the chances are one won't see them any more. Sometimes it's worth lending dough for that very reason.

FIRST CATTLE SHIPMENT FROM COMMUNITY PASTURE

Another advance in Prairie Farm Rehabilitation work was recorded when a consignment of 133 head of cattle from Battle Creek Community Pasture Association of Vidora, Sask., was shipped and sold at the Union Stockyards, Winnipeg. Under a new co-operative marketing plan, a competent livestock salesman appraised both the weight and value of the cattle at the Vidora community pasture corrals, the basis of valuation being the Winnipeg market price. Final settlement was made on the basis of the net returns as related to appraisal value and weight.

The outstanding feature of the new system, as pointed out by O. Freer, Supervisor of the Land Settlement Branch of the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act (P.F.R.A.) is that once the cattle values are appraised, the cattle can be sorted and graded into even loads of butchers, feeders, and stockers, regardless of the individual ownership, thereby greatly enhancing their market appearance and sales value. In view of the successful handling of this first shipment, it is anticipated that in future no difficulty will be found in financing shipments through the banks, thereby enabling initial payments to be made to the producers at the time of shipment. There are now 54 P.F.R.A. community pastures in active operation in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, embracing more than 1,000,000 acres of submarginal grass lands, much of which has been reseeded to crested wheat grass.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE COURSE AT H'DON HIGH SCHOOL

The week of October 7 was a short one for the students of the domestic science course at Huntingdon High School. Nevertheless, Grades 6, 7 and 8 held their regular lessons in home economics. These classes are concentrating on sewing and the study of cloth for the first half of the year.

Grade 6 students have shown much enthusiasm. To date many of the girls have finished a towel—basting, hemming, embroidering and pressing complete. Their next project will be to learn the art of mending their own personal clothes.

Grade 7 girls have proven themselves to be very handy with a needle—not to mention the thimble. The use of the latter caused a certain amount of distress at first but the teacher has remedied the situation. This class is applying its first stitches to laundry bags.

Grade 8 pupils have completed curtains for the class-room. They are now having an exciting time learning how to operate two different types of sewing machines. Last week they were given a lesson on how to use a commercial pattern. Casualties are reported to be few and far between.

Grade 10 students in the domestic science course will hold their final cooking lesson next Friday afternoon. Each member of the class was asked to bring her mother or a friend. The invited guests will be asked to observe the lesson. More than 20 ladies interested in the welfare of the students at Huntingdon High School are expected to be present.

HEARTS WALKING

Mrs. Harry Pugh Smith

"Nice night for a walk," Tony remarked, bringing the machine to an abrupt halt six feet away.

He rummaged in his pocket, found a cigarette, lit it and lowered himself lazily to the ground.

"You know," he observed idly, "I believed your explanation about this afternoon and I didn't hold you responsible for being caught in the boy friend's arms tonight."

"No?"

"It would take somebody more naive than I to imagine a swell girl like you in love with that plush rabbit. All the evidence of your friends to the contrary, you never were in love with him, were you?"

"N—no."

"You called me a realist once. I am in a way. I've had to be. But I have had my dreams." He smiled wryly. "If you'd bother to pry under surfaces you'd probably discover that I am a realist with idealistic trimmings. In any case you're the only woman I ever asked to be my wife."

"How can you expect me to believe that when you've been pursuing Priscilla Leigh all summer?" cried Janet, burning with indignation.

"At the risk of sounding insufferably egotistic I shall have to tell you that I've never pursued Priscilla. I simply allowed her to pursue me as long as it suited my purpose." He laughed. "Priscilla made an effective smoke screen, you'll admit. I made up my mind to marry you the first time I saw you."

"Oh!" gasped Janet.

"You were defending your mother, remember? You said you never had been able to be flippant about her. My mother worked too, Janet. She worked herself into an early grave taking care of me. I've never been able to feel flippant about that either. When I stood there in the doorway and looked at you, something in my heart clicked. I knew then you were what I'd been looking for."

"Don't you think I have any pride?" she blazed.

It was then the owl screamed in a bush about a foot from Janet's ear. She did not know it was a screech owl calling to its mate. She heard something ghastly, shrieked and tumbled into Tony's arms.

"Precious!" whispered Tony, holding her very close, so close she could hear the wild pounding of his heart against her cheek.

"Oh, Tony!" whispered Janet.

He kissed her, so tenderly she trembled, and then so fiercely she could not get her breath.

"I adore you!" she cried.

"Sure," said Tony Ryan in a husky voice and kissed her again.

Anne and Stephen Hill had returned from the movie. They were on her front porch. The light from within the living room faintly illuminated Anne's sensitive face.

"You worry about your babies," are born you're never free from re-she said slowly, "from the day they sponsobility for them. You waken in the dead of night and you can't go back to sleep. The dark's peopled with all the dire things which might happen to your offspring. Even in broad daylight sometimes you can't forget the bugaboos. After all, other women's children go wrong."

"Yours won't, Anne," said Steve Hill. "You put your own steel into the sword of their spirit. While the tempered blade may bend under pressure, it springs back to form."

"And I feel," sighed Anne, "for the first time in twenty-fice years totally unnecessary. As if—as if I'd

He put his hand over hers. "Not completely outlived my usefulness." to me."

She colored. "I—I—"

At that moment Janet burst into the hall, closely followed by Tony. "Mother!" she cried, her voice radiant. "Tony and I—we—he and I—"

She blushed furiously. Her tongue failed her. She could not put her happiness into words, but her eyes proclaimed it as Tony's arm tightened about her.

"I take it," said Steve Hill with a chuckle, "you have discovered that you are madly in love with Tony, Janet, and he with you."

"Are we supposed to be surprised?" murmured Anne, laughing softly.

Janet stared at them in ludicrous amazement. "You suspectedU" she stammered.

Anne smiled. "Dearest, you probably can't imagine, but I was once in love myself. The symptoms are universal."

Tony caught Janet's hand and hurried her out. "I'll pick you up when I come back, Steve," he called over his shoulder.

Tony put his arm about Janet's shoulders and raced her down the stairs. "Give the guy a break," he said, kissing her startled mouth.

"Tony, you can't mean!" she cried.

"Sure," said Tony Ryan with a grin.

Back on Anne's dim front porch Steve put out his hand and took hers. "Of course you know I've been biding my hime," he said softly.

Anne's heart gave a start. "You ARE a very understanding person."

"Life isn't over for you, Anne,," he said, "or for me."

Her eyes fell before the blaze in his. "Isn't it, Steve?"

"I love you."

She thought of another who had spoken those words, the mate of her youth.

"I think," said Steve, "if you'd let yourself, you could love me too."

"Not as I loved him."

"We love no two people alike, Anne. The spring is not the autumn, though each is a beautiful season."

"Yes."

"You WILL let me teach you that for you and me life can begin all over again after forty, Anne?"

Her smile was a little tremulous, but very lovely. "Yes, Steve—dear," whispered Anne, blushing exquisitely as he stooped and kissed her.

What's in the Wind

by PAULA DICKS

Plenty of Apple Sauce!

Laura C. Pepper, Chief of Consumer Section, Department of Agriculture for Canada, is concerned about the disposal of the Canadian apple crop. In a personal letter this week she says they are counting on support of persons "like yourself who are in a position to interest and influence consumers in their choice of foods, and in this case can encourage the greater use of apples.

"Canadian homemakers can aid tremendously if they will wholeheartedly support this campaign by using apples—and more apples—during the next few months. After all, it is not a hard part, for the apple is one of the finest fruits, several varieties being delicious to eat raw, while others can be used in making a countless number of very tempting desserts."

Applesauce!

Now, Miss Pepper, I do agree with you. And 99 per cent of the people of this district never have enough of it . . . cooked or raw.

The orchards of Hemmingford and Franklin are overflowing right now. Big piles under the trees. So get out your motor car or truck and get into the procession to the Hill country. Even on Sunday, if that is the only day you can spare, Orchard Farmers will attend to customers.

Prices for cash and carry should be very reasonable now. One prominent grower told me that last year he sold slightly off-grade but perfect apples at a very low figure on this basis.

Something by way of an invitation to farm buyers and others to "Come and Get 'Em" in the local advertising news columns might have very surprising results. Many people do not know just where the orchards are or who wants to sell what . . . that even driving along the road it is a puzzle to know where to stop.

Last fall I went with a friend from the city to Covey Hill. Not knowing anyone else, I stopped at Dahlia's to inquire. She directed us to a friend of her's who promptly supplied our wants.

"Continuance of the war has once more made necessary the marketing of Canada's annual apple crop within the boundaries of the Dominion," states Miss Pepper. "To meet the situation, the Dominion Department of Agriculture has again launched an advertising and merchandising campaign to increase the consumption of Canada's national fruit 'the apple' right here in the country where it is grown."

A great help in removing the apple surplus, if any, would be for the Department of Agriculture to buy up sufficient offerings to supply the soldiers with the "gold old apple a day" . . . But newspapers, canning factories, merchants and others must live.

From a news item released by the National Defence Department, I learn that "draftees will receive best of food . . . among other things, five ounces of fresh pasteurized milk (holf a cup) per day per man plus the same of evaporated milk (for cooking no doubt). Fresh apples are said to be available (maybe in canteens) as well as dried Canadian apples and apple pie filler.

Refugee Trouble

In an illustrated magazine this week appears a letter of protest from an American woman who wants to do her bit for the Empire. She says:

"I have on my desk your August 27th issue. One headline asks: "Will You Take a Child Refugee into Your Home?'

"But, Editor, just what does one have to do to accomplish this? It has been six or eight weeks since I first wrote the committee in New York. After a wait I received triplicate forms to fill in. One of the questions asked was how many servants were kept in the home; another family here was asked how many butlers

"These forms were filled in and with the requisite two references' names, sent back to the committee. Thn came an answer . . . Would I please apply to the nearest Red Cross headquarters (in our case, Kansas City). and I must take this letter with me.

"I think I am a fairly reasonable woman, but all the foregoing is a bit too much for me to take calmly.

"My husband and I are native Americans, both 32 years old. We have two children, Cynthia Ann 7, and Jon 6. We are buying our home, which we think is pretty nice. . . . We told the committee our income bracket, our religion, that we kept one servant—only we call her the general-help girl. We expressed our willingness to guarantee economic security for the one child we felt we were able to take. We sent references. We asked for a little girl between 9 and 12 years of agt. And we get pushed around!

"We still have a very genuine desire to take care of one of those youngsters. The horror of this war has us about on the ropes. But quite frankly, I think someone. where, is being a bit too choosy! Mrs. J. Snow, Jr., Springfield, Mo."

And Mr. Tracey Phillips, who visited Huntingdon in September, thinks there are serious mistakes being made in establishing the refugee children. He told me that he had recommended to Lord Halifax, Foreign Secretary, that the whole program be revised. Mr. Phillips intimated that shortly a special department would be opened in Canada under direct control of the Foreign Office and that money would be available to pay for the upkeep of children sent overseas.

So far, I have not heard anything to confirm this opinion. Methods adopted up to date both in this country and across the line appear to be anything but democratic.

PASSES AWAY

of Athelstan. long engaged in woman's organization work in Dominion, provincial and community circles, who died on Sunday morning.

Sunday morning word spread quickly of the sudden death of Mrs. Henry Wilson (nee Margaret Marion McCracken) of Athelstan. Mrs. Wilson has not enjoyed the best of health for several years, but for all of that was able to be about and attend gatherings of one kind and another, providing she did not take on too many responsibilities. This was difficult for Mrs. Wilson to abide by, for her friends all knew of her organizing and administrative abilities.

Over the week-end Mrs. Wilson was taken ill and her doctor visualized that her case was indeed very serious and that she should be moved to a hospital just as soon as her strength would permit. On Sunday morning Mrs. Wilson's endurance was over-taxed and she passed away to the sorrow of her bereaved husband, family and everyone who knew her.

Mrs. Wilson was born near Huntingdon on April 28, 1868. After receiving her education at Huntingdon Academy, she taught school in Dundee and then around Montreal until 1894, when she was united in marriage with Mr. Henry Wilson.

Mrs. Wilson was widely known among the various organizations of women across Canada, and particularly so in the province of Quebec. She held the office of vice-president for the Women's Missionary Society for a term in this district. Mrs. Wilson was elected president of the Provincial Women's Christian Temperance Union in 1925 and held that office until 1936, when obliged to resign due to ill health. She was also one of the vice-presidents of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union. At the recent W.C.T.U. convention held in Huntingdon Mrs. Wilson was named an honorary president.

Holding such important offices as Mrs. Wilson has done proves that she had ability to organize and enlist the co-operation of other women. No small achievement, one must admit, for year after year she accomplished co-operation that was the general admiration of all.

Mrs. Wilson was a member of the Athelstan United Church congregation and was always found to be a most ardent and active worker.

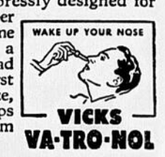

Surviving her is her beloved husband. Mr. Henry Wilson, Athelstan; one son, William, of Athelstan, and one daughter, Mrs. R. E. Forrester, Ormstown, her sister, Miss Anna McCracken. as well as a great number of relatives and devoted friends. To the bereaved the Gleaner readers extend their most sincere sympathy.

Thinking Back ... and ... Looking Ahead

United States Waking From Slumber as Realities Come Before Them—Are Women Playing the Part in Democracy That They Should?

By DONALD C. MACDONALD

A CERTAIN company in Canada has done a little investigating and figuring and it finds that with war taxes super-imposed upon those of peace-time, its tax bill is so large that it is in fact working for the government on 160 days of each year. To a greater or lesser extent, the same is true of every Canadian. It is true that there are some—and among them most farmers may be found—whose total income is small enough that they are even deprived of the privilege of paying an income tax. But what I am interested in for the moment is not so much the fact that we are paying such heavy taxes (which are, incidentally, much lighter than those in Britain), for Canadians are facing the burden with less grumbling than was to be heard in peace-time, but rather, are we learning any lessons from these sacrifices and these revealing days? Are we henceforth going to be any more interested in the affairs of our country, the men who are running them, and the men we elect to share that responsibility?

For 20 years after the Great War we lived in utter complacency. (When I say "we" I mean all democratic people, but for the moment, let us do a little soul searching as Canadians). We lived under the illusion that peace was won, the job was finished, and nothing more need be done. But we were also as complacent and disinterested about this thing called democracy, and our own example of it in the Canadian Parliament. Oh, it is true that we knew that conditions were not everything they might be, that there was corruption at times, and inefficiency even more often, but we dismissed all that with the casual remark, "That's politics for you!" We did a lot of grumbling, but . . . no action, and less thought. Today we look at Europe and see the fate of millions of people who, living in a democracy, did the same thing as us. They are enslaved, their homes bombed and burned, their loved ones killed. As sure as dawn will break tomorrow morning, if we had been living next door to Gemany, we would be sharing the fate of those people. I wonder: Are we worthy of the countless blessings of our freedom?

Our Glorious Heritage

The story of the English-speaking people in the New World, alike with that of the Old, has been characterized by a relentless and uncompromising struggle for greater freedom. As one looks back over the years 1930-38, it would almost seem that for a time they had let drop the torch which had been handed down to them from preceding generations. For a time they had slept on the watch of that glorious heritage for which their forefathers had lived and died. The enemies were at work not only without, but within the gates, yet they did nothing, or next to nothing.

Today the British people have recaptured that inspiring vision of democratic freedom. From the shambles of a battered London there has arisen that indomitable spirit of old. Fathers and mothers with homes gone, with their children torpedoed at sea, stand on the wreckage of the world they knew, firmly resolved that they can and will build a better world, without this tyranny and barbarism.

On this side of the water, the mighty United States has started up, as though awakened from a deep sleep. The isolated world in which its people had lived for over 150 years suddenly crumbled before their eyes, and they came face to face with realities. In Canada we are just hitting our stride, on land, with growing armies and an industrialization that is transforming the life of the nation, on sea, with a navy that has grown to respectable proportions, and in the air, where, with the gigantic air-training scheme, the spearhead of victory is being forged. But we cannot turn on our radio, or pick up our paper, without realizing anew how fortunate we are. Others, with their homes and families, are in the front-line trenches, indeed, they are living on the battlefield. And again the thought recurs: Are we worthy of the blessings of our freedom?

Test of Our Worthiness

It seems to me that we shall show ourselves worthy of this priceless heritage only if we resolve here and now that henceforth we shall do our utmost that democracy, as we are responsible for it in Canada, will be made to work. There is no more difficult form of government in the world than the democratic, but it can be made to work, and it must be—for we see the consequences in the world today when it doesn't. Each one of us can do our part only by taking a more enlightened interest in the affairs of our nation, or voting when that privilege for which our forefathers died, is offered to us, of electing to our parliament men who are qualified and capable and honest. And what is more, not ceasing then, but following up their work and their problems during the years between elections.

After all, not for just one day in the week, but for two, and sometimes more, we are working for our country, and the fruits of our labor, in the form of taxes, are handed over to the government. Is it not just plain common sense that we should take a personal interest in these things which we realize now, if never before, embody our liberties and symbolize our way of life? How many of us have ever talked over with our member of parliament the problems of our own constituency, let alone those of the nation, asking him what he thinks about them, or why he did such-and-such or said so-and-so up at Ottawa? Is that not the proper role of a member—finding what his constituents are thinking, and they finding out what he is thinking, and if neither is doing any thinking at all, perhaps each could prod the other on! Or is the sole function of a member of parliament to act as a glorified employment bureau, with which you get in contact only when you want to whisper something like, "Can't you pull a few wires, and slip Tom in for a job there . . . you know?"

Women and Politics

Then there is another aspect of this same question. Have women made their influence felt at all in politics? The women of Quebec, at long last, have a vote, provincial as well as federal. In his speech in Detroit, Wendell Willkie, Republican nominee for the presidency of the United States, referred to women as the "guardians of democracy." Are they, or is that just so much eye-wash? If they are not, can they be made more so? Of late years the question has been asked with increasing frequency: Has the extension of the franchise to women purified politics at all, as it was hoped and argued that it would?

It must be admitted that the hope that politics would be reformed with the adoption of women suffrage has not been realized fully, if indeed, at all. In spite of the hen-pecked husband's remark that his wife knew everything about parliament that there needed to be known for she'd been "speaker of the house for the past 25 years," the truth remains that women have less interest in, and know less about politics than men, and that is being uncomplimentary in as polite language as possible. "The qualities of womanhood—faith, love, purity—have found some expression in government," suggests the Christian Science Monitor, in discussing this question, "but only when women have really taken hold, and set out to make their influence felt." That has been very seldom. The Monitor goes on to say: "Certainly one can believe that the hate, cruelty and cynicism which characterizes the dictatorships could never have gained control if women in those countries had possessed more political power." That may, or may not be true.

Listen to what Dr. Rauschning has to say in his book, "Hitler Speaks." "Hitler was discovered by women, society ladies who pushed him forward, when still a young man after the Great War. It was the wives of some great industrialists who gave him financial support . . . It was in the company of a clique of educated women that the paid propagandist developed into a political prophet . . . it was they who pampered and ministered to his conceit. gious ecstasy, provided the indis- . . . Women's gushing adulation, carried to the pitch of psuedo-religious stimulus that could arouse him from his lethargy." And as for the mass of women, other than cliques, "Hitler gave his Gauleiter cynically concrete instructions, urging them to devote particular attention to propaganda among women. In the struggle for power it was the women's vote that brought Hitler to triumph," asserts Rauschning.

It all boils down to this: If women do not exert the influence that is theirs now they have the vote, the result will be for practical purposes the same as though they were still without it. Further, sharing the franchise with men, they share too the responsibility for the state of affairs that exists.

Vision of Free Men

The superb behavior of the British people under the assault of the machine has revivified our faith in the soul of man, and proven why they, not their foes, deserve to rule the world. That supreme courage of the British people is born of a spirit of self-sacrifice. They have forsaken that "gimme philosophy"—instead of asking what am I getting out of it, they are crying, What more can I give to help? Instead of lamenting, What has the government ever done for me?—they grumble that there is not more they can do for their country and its leaders. Acting thus, they have recaptured the spirit of free men, who though surrounded by danger, are not afraid.

"O Pioneers, Democracy rests finally on us and our vision sweeps through eternity." We are, in a different fashion, but as truly as ever our forefathers were, pioneers in a jungle world that must be conquered. We shall succeed only if we are captured by that vision of a new world, a vision as inspiring as that which lures the fanatical Nazi youth to a willing death, but a vision of freedom for mankind, not slavery; of truth, not lies; of peace, not perpetual war.

Obituary

The late John Alexander Goldie

On Saturday last there passed away an old and respected resident of Rockburn, in the person of Mr. John A. Goldie, son of the late George Goldie and Margaret Rennie in his 81st year. For over two years Mr. Goldie had been in failing health, but was still able to be around until he was again stricken four days previous to his death. While still a young man he left his home and found employment in the State of Nevada where he took up railroading and soon advanced to the position of locomotive engineer. In that capacity he was chosen to pilot the specials conveying two Presidents of the U.S. viz., McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt ,over his division. In 1910 he returned to Canada having purchased the property of the late David Cain, where he has since resided. Mr. Goldie was a man of kind and neighborly dsposition, and took a keen interest in public affairs. In politics he was always a staunch supporter of the Liberal Party, and was well and favourably known throughout the County.

His wife, Mina Cain, predeceased him nine years ago, and he is survived by one son, George, and two grandchildren of Florida, and a sister, Mrs. C. H. Lamb, of Huntingdon. The funeral was held in Rockburn Church on Monday afternoon and was largely attended, the service being conducted by the Rev. E J. White, assisted by Rev. J. B. Maclean, D.D., of Huntingdon. Interment was made in Hillside Cemetery.

3,000 Tanks To Be Made in Canada

Confidence in the dawn of the day when the Allies will take the offensive on land against the Axis powers is seen in the word that Canada will manufacture 3,000 tanks. Some tanks are being already manufactured in Montreal, but these are in addition. Designs are being completed for these new tanks which it is said will combine the best features of British and United States tanks. They will be medium sized and of the cruiser type. The cost will be about 150 million dollars. They are to be manufactured in one or more Canadian factories. Tentative arrangements have been made to incorporate 1,200 in the Canadian forces while 1,800 will be made for the British. Research is also being carried on perfecting designs for smaller, cheaper and faster tanks. Thus preparations for the mechanization in the most modern form of Canada's army proceed. Many of the 297 average tanks that have been bought from the United States have been delivered to Canada and men have already started their training in them.

Western Command Created

A Pacific army command under Major General R. O. Alexander, which embraces the defence system of British Columbia and Alberta has been formed. Some months ago a similar army command was created in the Maritimes under Major General W. H. P. Elkins, formerly master general of ordnance. The western command will control coastal defence, fort troops and all mobile forces, and will work in close co-operation with headquarters of the Canadian navy and air force in Pacific coast areas.

Copper Export to Japan is Banned

An announcement has been made at Ottawa that no further permits will be granted for the export of copper except to British Empire countries and possibly the United States. It is felt that all copper produced in Canada will be needed either in Canada or in the United Kingdom because of growing war demands. The announcement stated that "about 80 per cent of the output of Eastern Canadian producers goes under direct contract to the United Kingdom Ministry of Supply. The British Columbia producers, having in mind their higher production costs and freight rates, were not at that time in a position to share in filling a demand which was in fact adequately met by other Canadian and Rhodesian producers. No scrap iron has been exported from Canada since October 1939, except to Great Britain; no zinc or nickel except to Allied countries or the United States since February; no aluminum since April and no cobalt since August.

Commonwealth Training Plan Works Faster

The intake of recruits and the output of airmen from Canadian air schools will be about 40 per cent higher than the previous schedule, according to Air Minister Power. There will be a shortening in the course taken by airmen in the schools, but this does not mean that the airmen will be brought into contact with the enemy with less instructions than originally intended. More of the time of training will be spent in Britain within sound of the air battles. This "operational training" in Britain might be described as more practical, as the men will be trained on the actual types of aircraft used in battle.

Lord of the Isle—No. 59456

Notice is given through the Canadian Jersey Cattle Club News of the death of this famous, first preferential three-star Jersey sire. He died at the age of 16 years, owned by Guy Fowler of Milner, B.C. This bull has descendants in the Chateauguay Valley. B. H. Bull & Son, in speaking of him, say:

"Anyone will agree, after looking over the list of the tested daughters of Lord of the Isle, that as far as production is concerned he is a great sire. So far as type is concerned his daughters are as popular with the judges of Jerseys as any cows in our herd.

"Lord of the Isle came from the Island as a young bull after winning the Progeny of Sire Prize, and was only in our herd a short time when sold to go to British Columbia, but it is interesting to note that three of his four Gold Medal daughters were bred in our herd. He has not, in our opinion, a better daughter than Brampton's Lord's Queen. She has just finished a record of 10,258 lbs. of milk, 606 lbs. of fat, as a junior 3-year-old. She is a show cow in every sense of the term, and particularly so as regards udder and teats."

Mr. Rowat has a list of 80 of his daughters, including cows of all ages, starting with heifers, some of which were not quite two years old. The average milk produced by these 80 cows was 10,174 lbs.; the lactation period generally running from 305 to 365 days.

Lord of the Isle was the grandsire of Woodholm Willonyx Lord, at one time owned by William McEwen of Ormstown, and later sold to Donald M. Rowat. Quite a few of his descendants are therefore found in the herds of both Mr. McEwen and Mr. Rowat. He is also the grandsire of Brampton Radiant Lord, the herd sire of Mr. Rowat. He is also the great grandsire of Glenness Driver, the handsome 2-year-old heifer owned by William Tillotson of Dewittville; the great grandsire of Glenness Ferns Lad, now in the possession of James Ferns; the great grandsire of Glenness Flying Lord recently shipped by Mr. Rowat to Robert Crack of Kingsbury, Quebec; also the great grandsire of Glenness de Philomene, owned by C. Lepitre, St. Philomene, born at Glenness April 21, 1940. This calf took first prize at the calf fair at Glenness in August last. Lord of the Isle was also great grandsire of Glenness St. George de Beauce, sold by Mr. Rowat to Napoleon Paquet; also great grandsire of Glenness Theophile, owned by Charles Hebert of St. Theophile de Beauce; also great grandsire of Glenness Lord owned by Thomas P. Higgins; also great-grandsire of another Jersey bull calf owned by the Mayor of Caughnawaga, not yet registered; and also great grandsire of a handsome bull calf, born at Glenness on September 13 last and sold by Mr. Rowat to Mrs. Richard Beebee, the well-known Jersey breeder of Constable, New York.

PROVING IT

A caller at an education office near Manchester discovered the staff in a state of hilarity.

Asking the cause, he was handed a grubby piece of paper from the morning's mail, and a finger pointed out the concluding words of an indignant parent's protest against his child's being sent to a special school: "And let me tell you there has never been any trace of mentality on either his mother's side or mine."

Letters to The Editor

Howick, P.Q.,
October 5th, 1940

The Editor,
Huntingdon Gleaner,
Huntingdon.

Dear Sir,

In your issue of October 2nd, on page 8 an article appears under big headlines, stating that "a 15 inch sewer from Training Camp Barracks into the River is being laid" and will empty into the Chateauguay River, just east of the town of Huntingdon.

This is certainly an item of importance to residents along the banks of this beautiful river. I am not aware whether or not your town has received any complaints regarding the disposition of sewage from the town of Huntingdon and consequent pollution of this once quiet stream. If my memory serves me rightly, during the past season there appeared a few articles in your paper in which the doctors of the health centre comprising the towns of Ormstown, Howick, Ste. Martine and Chateauguay advised residents along the river bank not to use river water without boiling. In some instances it was suggested that children should ont be allowed to bathe.

Now it is proposed to at least double or almost treble the amount of sewage to be dumped into this river. As a result, I fear it will develop into a veritable stinking ditch and under no circumstances should be allowed. Apart from the danger to human life, the effect upon livestock should be considered. I feel confident 50 per cent of all animals along this river obtain drinking water from this source.

The farmers of the Chateauguay Valley have long striven and I believe have succeeded in attaining the highest standard of health for our animals in the Dominion of Canada. I know my fellow farmers and do not think they will stand idly by and permit this outrage to be perpetrated.

In an editorial of the issue referred to, you claim Huntingdon to be one of the towns in the industrial hub. If such be the case, why not spend some of the money that will be flowing into the coffers of your townspeople on the installation of a sewerage disposal plant, and which it would be forced to do if the town was not blessed with this small river. If this were done a public service would be rendered of which the whole district would be proud and at the same time, the river, which so greatly adds to the beauty of the district, would remain uncontaminated.

As an alternative, I should like to suggest running the sewer northwest, just above the town (the distance if anything would be less) to the river. Then it would go through your present filtering system and could be used indefinitely, for if it is not harmful to the residents east of the town, it certainly would not be harmful to the residents of the town.

Yours for better and cleaner water,

"Summer Resident."

Celebrate 45th Wedding Anniversary.....

On Monday night Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Orr of Riverfield were pleasantly surprised by their family, friends and neighbors who came to celebrate with them the 45th anniversary of their marriage. Although taken by surprise, Mr. and Mrs. Orr welcomed everyone most heartily in their usual cordial way. The evening was spent in various games. A pleasing feature was a lovely three-tier wedding cake made and iced by her granddaughter, Miss Marjorie Hooker, which adorned the centre of the table. After refreshments were served, Donald Black, M.P., in his usual cheery manner, spoke very fittingly of the Orr home and of his pleasant recollections of it as a boy and also as a man. He said whether it was sickness, sadness or gladness, Mr. and Mrs. Orr were always ready to lend a helping hand. Mr. Black then called on many of the other friends to say a few words. Mrs. Jas. McKell, in her remarks, spoke of the old Orr home, which is about 100 years old, and of many of her girlhood pleasures there, all hoping to return to celebrate with them their 50th anniversary. Singing and violin selections by different ones were very much appreciated. Mr. and Mrs. Orr both thanked all for the lovely evening and spoke of the many changes, both happy and sad, that 45 years had brought. This brought a very happy evening to a close with the singing of "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows" and "Auld Lang Syne."

THE HERO

"Did you ever save a life?" asked Bobby.

"Yes," nodded Uncle Zeke. "Once my grandfather's house caught fire. I dashed inside and went all through down stairs, then up-stairs in every room. I found nobody at all, so I jumped out of the window, just in time.

With The Boys - at - The Barracks

"WE'RE in the army now!" The boys will appreciate the full significance of these lines during their thirty-day stretch.

H H H

News photo cameras were busy "shooting" scenes at the barracks last week. Besides The Gleaner, there were a number of Montreal newspapers represented, one of which was La Patrie.

H H H

The camp is a little village in itself, with a population of 925, which figure may be larger as time goes on. All of its streets have a name, apparently being called after prominent men in the army, or streets in Montreal. They are: St. John's Road, Cathcart St., McCombe St., Royal Victoria Ave., Academy Ave. The creek running through the field is labelled Stoney Creek.

H H H

Soldier readers at the Huntingdon Military Barracks are invited to send in news notes to this column. Being in constant touch with activities, they will undoubtedly run across interesting matter which they would like to see published, subject to the approval of the Adjutant and of The Gleaner. Any information for this column might be left with the Adjutant, Capt. A. T. Stikeman, and will be picked up by The Gleaner.

H H H

One of the trainees from Montreal, who previous to coming here, worked with the Simmons' mattress people, stated that while he was working on an order there he never realized he was making part of one of the mattresses on which he would sleep when he went to military camp. The mattress covers are filled with straw and appear to be quite comfortable.

H H H

There are some rather amusing questions asked by the young trainees when they first arrive. Some of the sergeants, having a little fun with the boys, give some amusing answers also. Those we heard have been censored as far as this column goes.

H H H

One young chap with a beautiful head of hair entered the barber shop of Paul Rolland the other day and asked how much it would cost to have all the hair on his head taken off. Not thinking the boy was serious about removing such a luxuriant head of hair, Paul said, "We won't charge you anything." But the chap took the offer up and Paul had to keep his word and clip off the hair. After that the head was shaven clean. The lad paid for the shaving of the head but not for the clipping. "It's good for the hair to have it all cut off and I have 30 days ahead of me away from civilization," he said.

REQUIRE PERMIT TO RENT FIREARMS

Hunters who have made a practice of renting guns from sporting goods stores or other agencies for yearly trips into the woods may find their source of firearms blockaded by Provincial Police action, it is learned.

According to the new federal legislation concerning rifles, shotguns, revolvers and automatics, a permit to buy, sell, trade, lend or give a firearm is necessary.

"For the moment, those renting guns must register their arms and then if a transaction is to take place a special permit is needed for it," Inspector Philippe Bircher, secretary of the Quebec Provincial Police, said.

He added that the matter had not been foreseen by the authorities and that a request for clarification of existing legislation on the renting question had been made to the Department of the Attorney-General.

Inspector Bircher declared that more than 50,000 applications for the registration of rifles and shotguns had been made in the Montreal district. The average number of guns registered on each application amounted to three, he said. On that basis application for the registration of more than 150,000 guns has already been made.

More than 10,000 registration certificates have been prepared and applicants will receive these before the end of this week. All certificates are expected to be up-to-date on September 15, the registration deadline.

DUNDEE RED CROSS DRIVE NETS $215; LIST OF CANVASSERS

During the Red Cross campaign recently which closed on October 3, and subsequent to that date, the treasurer of the Dundee Red Cross Branch, Rev. H. Lindley, reports that $215 in all was collected. The canvassers in the various districts were as follows: Lake Shore Road, Donald Fraser; Dundee Centre Road, Wm. Fleming, Emery Leblanc; St. Agnes Roads, Joe Platt, Herman Quenneville; Beaver, Harold MacDonald; Ridge, Francois Teste. All the canvassers did good work, as the large amount turned in shows. The ladies of the local branch, as well as many who have not joined the society as yet are busy with knitting and hand sewing and are doing extremely well in the number of garments turned out.

TIME SAVING SPRAYER

A field sprayer for weed control was assembled by the Field Husbandry Division, Dominion Experimental Farms Service, during its development work recently. A 240-Imperial gallon tank and a 6-gallon per minute pump were fitted on used truck tires and wheels. The sprayer was provided with a power-take-off drive from a row crop tractor capable of a road speed of 15 miles per hour when hauling the loaded sprayer to the field. About 200 acres of crop were sprayed for weed control, and in addition about 25 acres of potatoes were sprayed. The saving in time with the high speed tractor permitted the handling of the larger acreage in proper season.

CANADIAN CHEESE OUTLOOK

The demand for cheese on the British market to meet war-time requirements has given the cheese industry a new and important status in Canada, states an official report on the dairy situation in Canada for the spring quarter, March-May, 1940. The arrangements made with the United Kingdom for the purchase of over 78 million pounds of Canadian cheddar cheese in 1940; the establishment of the Dairy Products Board to control exports and regulate prices; and finally the fixing of 14 cents as the export price for first grade cheese delivered at Montreal, are effective measures which promise to give the cheese industry a degree of greater stability.

CURIOUS

A hunter was showing off his trophies to a group of visitors. He was rapturously explaining how he acquired the various exhibits. "See that elephant?" he said. "I shot it in my pyjamas!"

"My dear," murmured the visitor, "how did it get there?"

Wife: "Wake up, John! There's a burglar going through your pants pockets."

Husband (turning over): "Oh, you two just fight it out between yourselves."

TO PRESERVE GOOD HEALTH

Every work-day morning in Canada some 200,000 persons report they cannot come to work. Their illness is due to sunburn, poison ivy, hay fever or just plain fatigue. To combat this, Dr. Gordon Bates of the Health League has announced seven cardinal rules for good health as follows:

(1) A good night's sleep, at least eight hours, if possible. (2) Adequate recreation, with work and thoughts of work set aside. (3) Good ventilation in the home and factory. Faulty heating systems should be remedied; proper care of the furnace is necessary. (4) A general knowledge of nutrition, including the importance of milk in the diet, the mineral content of food and knowledge of the vitamins. Also a general knowledge of cost of food so that proper diets can be arranged for the household. (5) Avoidance of too long hours of labor, regardless of what type of work a person is engaged in. (6) Study of "health hazards," sunburn, colds, infection, cleanliness, etc. (7) Don't worry. Keep the family healthy, avoid worry over illness and expense.
