It is the peculiar faculty of fools, to discern the faults of others at the same time that they so easily forget their own.

Two Famous Vocalists Thrill Audience In Local Banquet-Concert

Concert Society of Valleyfield Concludes Season's Activities with Brilliant Event at the Chateau

The Valleyfield Concert Society marked the end of its first year of existence with a banquet attended by approximately 150 persons, at the Huntingdon Chateau on Saturday evening. The banquet, which will become an annual event, was given to the members of the Society in appreciation of their work during the year.

The aim of the society is to develop and encourage local musical talent. Concerts are held during the year at which well-known musicians are engaged to perform along with the local artists. Five such events were held during the past year. The guest of honour at the first concert was Dr. Paul Trépanier, tenor, of Montreal. At the second, third and fourth, the famous "Quatuor Alouettes," Miss Annette LaSalle, and Germaine Giroux and local artists supplied the musical treats.

The society has about one hundred members. It hopes that the public will continue to help them in the future as they have in the past in their quest for local musical talent. The society, which operates chiefly diring the winter months offers one concert a month. The work was very modestly begun but has since gained steady support as public opinion found that the society was filling a long-felt want in Valleyfield musical circles. Among those who assisted in the foundation of the organization were: Dr. and Mrs. Gilles Amiot, Charles Magnan, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wallot, Albert Leblanc and Mrs. O. E. Caza.

Mr. Paul-Emile Corbeil of Montreal, bass, sang three well-known solos during the evening's entertainment. His renditions of "Showboat" and "Because" were very well received. Dr. Paul Trépanier, tenor, of Montreal, and Miss Gladys O'Neil, of Valleyfield, also participated in the vocal programme. Mr. Charles Magnan, of Valleyfield, furnished the piano accompaniment.

Among those present at the banquet were the following: Dr. and Mrs. Gilles Amiot, Dr. Irenée Frappier, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Bélanger, Aberdeen E. McCabe, J. G. Sabourin, Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Roman, L. P. Godbout, Albert Leblanc, Mr. Paul Trépanier, Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Corbeil, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Norton, Mr. and Mrs. Delpha Sauvé, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wallot, Charles Magnan, Réné Beaudoin, Mr. and Mrs. A. Sullivan.

Returning from Montreal on the Canadian National Sunday night Rene Guerin suffered injuries to a hand when he had it caught in a window while trying to open it. First aid was given him on the train, and the hand was treated by a doctor when he reached Valleyfield.

Four Cases of Local Interest Heard In Magistrate's Court

Justice Lemay presided over a session of Magistrate's Court in Valleyfield Monday when Wilfrid King up for enquete on charges of attempted theft from Richer's, at Jamieson's Lines, was sent to trial at the next Criminal Assizes. Detective Beaulieu stated that King admitted breaking into Richer's but that he didn't steal anything due to a dog's barking, and footsteps. This statement was corroborated by bailiff Daniel Poirier.

Paul E. Test, of St. Agnes, was charged by Albert Hebert, with trying to get money under false pretences, when he presented a cheque on a bank where he had no account. The accused pleaded guilty, and will be sentenced August 23.

Oscar Hebert and Elie Beauvais, of Ormstown, accused of stealing from Lalande's Shop, in Ormstown, early last spring, pleaded not guilty, and their case was postponed to August 21.

Armand Bougie, of St. Timothee, was charged with resisting arrest by Traffic Officer André Brunet. He was sentenced with costs.

Young Men Met to Form Social Club

Officers named, Constitution And By-laws Will Be Studied

With the idea in view of forming a social club, a group of Huntingdon young men met in the Columbus Club rooms on Thursday evening when a committee was appointed to interview the Columbus Club executive to try to arrange for the Rooms as a locale. A second meeting in the O'Connor Hall on Monday evening was attended by approximately one hundred young men of the town and country.

The desire was expressed that the club should operate during the winter months, and that it would give a place for the young men to spend their evenings. The club pool table would be used, and other games purchased for the enjoyment of the members. It is also the Club's intention to subscribe to a number of magazines, and to have occasional speakers and banquets. Officers were elected at the meeting Monday night, and it was decided that a Constitution and by-laws be drawn up and submitted to the prospective members at a meeting to be held in the County Building next week. The Executive is working this week on the Constitution, guiding themselves along principles which will bear towards the permanency of the club. The long-felt need for a properly directed place for young men to gather on long winter evenings was accentuated considerably by the increased employment at the Leach mill, and the opening of the Windsor Silk Mill. It has been largely through a movement started by Windsor employees that the Club has been formed.

The officers elected were Hon. Pres., Mederic-R. Primeau; Hon. Vice-Pres., Dr. J. E. Caza; Hon. Secretary, J. O. Michaud; Hon. Directors, J. H. Demers, Charles Lalonde, Jr., Dr. Claude St-Onge, D. J. O'Connor, and W. E. Lefebvre. The active officers are: President, Liguori Brodeur; Vice-President, Zenon Gagnon; Secretary-Treasurer, Jean-Claude Lefebvre; Directors: Ildège Leduc, Walter Lefebvre, Zénon Daoust, Wilfrid Bissonnette and W.-Paul Lefebvre.

Following the election of officers and short remarks from the active members of the Executive, others heard included Dr. St. Onge, Dr. Caza, W. E. Lefebvre, J. Ernest Lefebvre and Armand Degré.

Active Political Campaign Under Way in District

Candidates Three Counties Have Meetings Organized and are Making Visits to Electors

Godbout at Ormstown on Monday

The political situation in this district seems somewhat clarified over what it was a week ago, and it now appears that there will be but two candidates in each of the three counties of Chateauguay, Huntingdon, and Beauharnois.

In Beauharnois County there was a rift in the Young and Old Liberal Associations since the election last Fall. After the choice of Gontran Saintonge there a few weeks ago, members of both Associations have been working towards a rapprochement which has been effected. Both Mr. Saintonge and the Union Nationale candidate, Mr. Delpha Sauvé, have started meetings in various parts of the County.

Chateauguay County has two candidates, Auguste Boyer, K.C., running on the Union Nationale ticket, and George A. Lapointe, Mayor of Ville de Léry. The campaign in Chateauguay, on the one hand is being made against the former Taschereau administration, while the Liberals counter with the Godbout farmer government, emphasizing the fact that Boyer is an outside man.

The situation in Huntingdon is cleared. In some quarters there was talk last week of an Independent candidate, but it now appears unlikely that there will be one in the running. The Union Nationale candidate, M. B. Fisher, ex-M.L.A. started his campaign at Rockburn on Saturday night. On that occasion he was accompanied as speaker by P. M. Elder, of Elgin. Monday night he held a meeting at Elgin, when he was flanked by W. E. S. McNair, of Huntingdon, and P. M. Elder, of Elgin. His meeting last night was at the Town Hall, Franklin Centre, when Mayor L. E. Blair presided. Other speakers apart from Mr. Fisher, were W. E. S. McNair, of Huntingdon, G. S. Walsh, of Hemmingford, and the district representative of an aluminum firm, George Charron. The chief speaker on each occasion was the candidate. The speeches treated chiefly of charged scandals in the Taschereau administration, and of the continued investigation and punishment of the guilty if the Union Nationale government were placed in power. Mr. Fisher charged that Godbout had been placed in head of the government by Taschereau, and that the latter's record was brought to light in the investigations. He stated that even Ministers of the Crown had been accused of wrongdoing and asked if it were not time for a change in the Provincial administration. He talked of the elaborate platform which Premier Godbout is presenting to the farmers, and asked them not to fall for the promises which were being made them. "Almost everything is being promised you," he said, "and where is all the money to come from? There is but one answer,—increased taxation, despite their claims to the contrary."

The Liberal candidate in Huntingdon, J. W. Ross, will open his campaign tonight in Elgin, and meetings will be continued nightly throughout the various sections of the county.

The Liberals of the district are jubilant over the fact that the Prime Minister, Hon. Adélard Godbout, will visit here on Nomination Day, Monday, August 10th. He will speak in the Ormstown Arena that night at 7 o'clock standard time. The Premier's address will be given about 7.30 o'clock as he must leave early to attend another meeting in Soulanges County across the river.

The general situation in the Province shows that more interest than ever is being taken this year in the campaign. The dissolution of the Gouin followers from the Union Nationale, and their apparent backing of the Liberal Government enhance their chances. The now famous separatist declaration of the Union Nationale newspaper will also help Liberal interests. This kept Maurice Duplessis busy over the week-end claiming his allegiance to the Crown. Both sides are figuring on a win, and working hard to achieve victory.

Huntingdon Boy Scout Troop Under Canvas At Camp Tamaracouta

Twenty-Two Boys and Leader are Stationed at Fort Garry in the Provincial Camp at Mille Isles

Keen with enthusiasm at the prospect of an enjoyable fifteen days in camp, twenty-three members of the Huntingdon Boy Scout Troop left here on Saturday morning for Tamaracouta, the Provincial Scout Camp, at Mille Isles.

Along with troop and personal equipment, the Elder school bus, could not carry the full load. Mr. Alex. Fawcett had kindly offered his car, and took the remainder of the boys. Scoutmaster M. R. Primeau accompanied the troop on Saturday. During their stay there they will be under command of Reg. W. Daniel, Assistant Scoutmaster. The party in the car had some worrying Saturday when they arrived at the camp, and after waiting an hour there still was no sign of the bus. It turned out that the bus had had a little carburetor trouble, and that they also had taken the wrong road, adding about thirty miles to the original trip. The boys did not complain of being tired, and, strange to say, their first request was not for eats, but a swim.

The Huntingdon Troop is stationed in Fort Garry, about a three-minute walk from Camp Headquarters, on a new camp site. Fortunately, an outgoing troop had left the site in good condition, and the boys had only two tents more to put up, and their camp was in ship shape. The Huntingdon boys under canvas for the two weeks are Reg. W. Daniel, Assistant Scoutmaster; Patrol Leaders George Lefebvre, Stuart Oney, Duncan Bruce, who are assisted as Tent Leaders by Billy Anderson, Billy Bowden, and Aubrey Bruce. The other Scouts are Donny Bowden, McRae Clouston, Bobby Kerby, Sydney Montle, Denis Lefebvre, Robert Lefebvre, Bernard Caza, Jean-Paul Caza, Raymond Caza, Vincent Caza, Gordon Lanktree, John Cappiello, Julius Boyd, Andrew Fawcett, Robert Cluff, and Jimmy Dawson.

Camp Tamaracouta is in Argenteuil County, 50 miles north of Montreal, on the shores of Lake Dawson and in the Laurentians. It consists of about 300 acres of wooded hills and cleared land, controlling most of the shore line of Lake Dawson, and Black Lake nearby. The camp equipment includes a dining hall seating 500 with kitchen attached and an automatic refrigerator adjoining. The Recreation Hall, built this year to celebrate the Silver Jubilee of the camp, has a great stone fireplace, stage and dressing rooms. This building will be the centre for wet weather programmes and Troop entertainments. The official opening of this Hall will take place this Thursday night, and the Huntingdon boys are rather fortunate to be in camp for the occasion. The Trading Post contains the Trader's office and Stores. The Artificer's house contains a photographic dark room and a carpenter's work bench. The Camp Museum and Library contains exhibits of Natural History of the region and serves as a lecture hall for special badges. The Hospital and Factor's office complete the permanent buildings, which are all lighted by electricity generated at the camp.

The Scout Troops attend as units whenever possible, and camp separately. They unite, however, for those activities which give better training and greater enjoyment when indulged in by larger numbers than individual troops can provide. Camp inspection is carried out daily. There are regular hours for technical training, swimming, games, and entertainment.

The Camp Factor, Mr. E. C. Rush, the Treasurer, Mr. F. A. Anderson, and Mr. Terry were very kind in facilitating arrangements for the local boys. The Factor also expressed himself as very impressed by the smart attire and bearing of the members of the Huntingdon boys.

Locals Take Third Game From Chiefs

Apply Whitewash Brush in Defeating Malone 5-0 Here Sunday

Softball Series Over

Huntingdon kept up its winning ways in the Border Baseball League when they whitewashed the Malone Chiefs by a 5-0 score on the local diamond Sunday. The game marked the third meeting of these two teams and Huntingdon has had an edge in all three contests. The first one they took by a 12-9 score, the second they barely managed to capture 5-4 after a hard struggle but on Sunday they were never in difficulty in taking the 5-0 decision.

The locals started lathering the ball in the second inning. Their lathering got them three runs which was a safe enough margin to win the ball game but then they added one more run in the fifth inning and pushed another across the plate in the seventh to make sure of the outcome.

The game wasn't as exciting as some that have been played between these two squads. There wasn't any very heavy hitting and there weren't any very serious errors. But the contest had its moments. For instance, when Popeck called Watson out for not reporting to the umpire as he went in to replace Gavin at the plate, a small sized riot was almost started. But things quieted down when Beatty went in to take Popeck's place as arbiter.

Malone showed evidence of the shake up in their lineup by including four new players, who added not a little to the improved performance of the team. Next week these two teams will battle it out again on the same diamond and at the same time.

On Friday evening the Canadiens beat the Leach Textilers to take the series in two straight games. Many errors were made by both sides and the game had to be called at the end of the sixth on account of darkness. The score 22-9.

On Monday evening Ormstown were beaten by Huntingdon 18-17. Huntingdon were trailing 17-14 in the last half of the seventh inning and two men were out when they gathered five hits and one walk, which was sufficient to win.

A Town League of four teams is now under way. Huntingdon Canadiens, the Leach Textiles, the Maple Leafs, and a fourth team which will be called the Maroons. The first game will be played Thursday.

The Tournament will be held this year on the baseball diamond at the Fair Grounds, instead of at the N.Y.C. diamond. Ten teams have been invited and in order to have all the games finished early a second diamond will be made. Town League games will be played every Monday, Tuesday and Thursday.

Wagon and Auto Collide on Bridge

Roland Latour, of Valleyfield, driving Cholette's grocery wagon, figured in an accident on the St. Louis Bridge Saturday afternoon when the horse started to balk and then bolted for the bridge. Elie Pilon was driving a car across the bridge at the time and could not avert collision with the horse-drawn vehicle. Fortunately the horse jumped when the car struck the wagon and it was not injured. Although the driver of the vehicle was thrown from the seat he was not injured. The car was somewhat damaged.

While in the city on Saturday, Euclide Leduc and his wife were slightly injured in an automobile accident. The driver collided with an American car at a street intersection. Mrs. Leduc, who was sitting in the front seat was knocked against the windshield and suffered cuts on the forehead when the glass smashed.

Borderers' Flags Will be Repaired

A meeting of interested parties was called for Monday evening in the Gleaner office to make arrangements for the restoration of the Huntingdon Borderers' colours.

The meeting was not largely attended but those present were of the opinion that the flags should be repaired. Accordingly a resolution was passed that the flags be sent to J. J. Turner & Sons for repairs. When they have been returned a public meeting will be called to decide where they should be placed. Subscriptions to date total $46.81, and a few additional have been promised, which will likely bring the amount to $60, a sufficient amount to have the work done. Two donations have been received since publication of the previous list, these from H. K. Wright, of Montreal, for $2.00, and Walter S. Brown, of Huntingdon, $1.00, and K. M. Chalmers, St. Lambert, $1.00.

The Week at Ottawa

Fodder Problem In West and Minimum Wheat Price Question Awaiting Favourable Solution

By Wilfrid Eggleston

These are holiday days at the capital, and only a handful of ministers are left to carry on the affairs of state.

The portfolios of those ministers now overseas are spread among those still here; and when one or another of the latter go away for a few days the additional burden has to be assumed by one of the five or six remaining at Ottawa. Thus we have Hon. Mr. Elliott, the Postmaster-General, acting as Minister of Agriculture; we have Hon. Mr. Ilsley, who is Minister of National Revenue, subbing for Hon. W. D. Euler (on his way from Russia to Holland) as chairman of the subcommittee on wheat. Then when Mr. Ilsley goes down to the Maritimes for a few days the chairmanship of the wheat committee passes along to Mr. Howe. What happens, if at this juncture, Mr. Howe also has to leave the capital for a few days it is a bit difficult to calculate. Of course with so many ministers away, affairs don't move very fast, and the most vital and important decisions are put over if possible.

Numerous appointments must be made. They will probably be attended to before Mr. King sails for Geneva. They include a Canadian National Railway board, a body to handle radio with a general manager and an assistant general manager, additional directors for the Bank of Canada, several judges and others. Senate vacancies will probably not be filled for some time. The appointments need not be made until just before the next session of Parliament, and as yet there is no indication when that will be.

But there are two or three things which must be settled at once, including the fodder problem in Western Canada, and the minimum price of wheat which is to prevail for the next few weeks. The government has been giving close attention to these matters. The registration of the unemployed and the launching of schemes to relieve the jobless are also matters which cannot wait. Some progress is being made in that field also.

There are now said to be 700,000 cattle in Alberta and a large additional number in Saskatchewan for which some help will be necessary unless rains come immediately and assist the feed situation. After a complet canvass of the situation there are four alternatives:

(a) destroy a large number, as is done in the United States, taking the culls out, of course, and the government compensating the farmers;

(b) have the canners and other inferior animals taken out and processed for sale with the assistance of the packing houses; (c) move feed from areas where it is plentiful to where it is scarce and (d) move cattle from drought areas to eastern Canada or some other region where its feed is more plentiful. The first alternative has been ruled out with some finality by the government; but it is almost certain that all of the other three will be employed to some extent. There is some difficulty in finding adequate feed supplies close at hand. The usual surplus of hay in northern Alberta is said not to be available this year. The packing companies have offered to assist in processing up to 100,000 head of the thinner cattle, if guaranteed against loss in the transaction. While this would be a big proposition it would only touch the fringe. There is still a hope of disposing of some cattle to Russia in exchange for oil and other products. Farmers in Ontario have in many areas some surpluses of feed, but they cannot carry many cattle over the winter, their shelter in most cases being only sufficient for their own needs.

Copious rains in the drought belt any time up to the 10th or 15th of August would materially alter the whole feed complexion; but if they do not come the least that can be said is that a very serious state will prevail and all resources of province, dominion, railways and private industry will be needed to avert a costly loss of livestock.

The federal goverment is not disposed to do anything final about the minimum price of wheat for the forthcoming year until at least they have reports from their ministers now overseas. A statement is being made from Winnipeg concerning what will be done between the beginning of the new crop year (August 1st) and such time as a decision can be made. With current prices soaring above last year's minimum, it is quite possible that the government will feel that its duty will be done if it repeats last year's price. There is, however, pressure being brought to bear by some western organizations to raise the minimum. Some schools of thought, on the other hand, are disposed to advocate that the minimum price should be dropped altogether. The act which created the board does not give them any option in this matter however. They must set a minimum price: but this price in turn must be approved by the ministry at Ottawa.

The National Employment Commission is holding meetings, working on a census of the unemployed, and studying a large number of plans put forward by individuals, societies, firms and organizations calculated to provide work.

Successful Tombola Staged In Aid of Ormstown Church

Pedestrian Struck by Car Saturday Night

RAYMOND Baker, painter, suffered a bruised leg, nose, and a severe cut on the forehead Saturday night when he was struck by an automobile on York Street, Huntingdon.

Mr. Baker, on his way home about 10.30 o'clock, was walking eastward along the road on York Street. Michel Lefebvre, driving an Overland, was travelling in the same direction. Meeting another car Lefebvre turned out onto the side of the road, and did not notice the pedestrian a short distance ahead. Mr. Baker was thrown to the pavement. The driver stopped, and with the assistance of Mr. Laprade they had the injured man removed to Dr. Clouston's office for treatment.

Two Valleyfield Musical Organizations Take Part In Entertaining Programs Presented Every Evening

Many Prizes Donated

Miss L. Anderson Took Honors in All Subjects First Year Arts at McGill

Once again, the Tombola held by St. Malachie's church scored a decided hit with the local patrons and every one of the three nights was thoroughly enjoyed.

On the opening night, the City of Valleyfield band attended and played excellent music. The two following evenings, the music was provided by the Harmony of Bellerive. Bingo, roulette, and games of chance did a flourishing business. The results of the raffles are as follows:

Four five dollar gold pieces were given by the following societies of the church: the league of the Sacred Heart, the Ladies of St. Ann, the Children of Mary and by Mr. Donald Black, M.P., and were won by Phillip McCaffrey, Ernest Fennell and Mrs. M. Monahan.

Four two and a half dollar gold pieces were won by Wm. Stars, Brockville, Mrs. L. Heitz, Ormstown, Clare Ormond, Howick, Miss Cecile Lavigne, Ormstown.

Bedspread given by Mrs. Frank Smith was won by Mrs. Phidelem Laberge.

Large Boston Fern given by Mrs. G. Brunet won by Mrs. J. Kelly of Montreal.

Hooked rug, by Mrs. E. Vincent, won by Miss Suzanne Prevost.

Prize given by Hebert's Hotef won by Albert Parent.

Bridge set won by Laurent Hebert of St. Etienne.

Door prize, $2.50, won by Miss Albertine Forget.

The proceeds will be announced later.

Miss Lois Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Anderson, of Ormstown, has passed her first year in Arts at McGill University, Montreal, taking honors in all subjects. Out of a class of over 500 who took the exams, 223 passed, Lois receiving highest average for her year's work. Congratulations are extended to her, with good wishes for her future success in the next three years of the Arts course.

New Softball Enthusiasts Take Game Not So Seriously

Valleyfield spectators were treated to another softball game between the Curiosities and the Funnyosities but this time Curiosities won the game by a 39-28 score. In a former exhibition they were defeated by their Funny foes 33-23.

Before the game started Mr. Kelly, superintendent of the Montreal Cotton Mills showed how not to make a good batting average by hitting one out of fifteen balls pitched to him by Mr. Corcoran. Mr. Meury did a little better. Heavy hitting was one of the features of the game, however. Mr. Proctor started things off with a home run and Mr. Baldwin stretched a three bagger into a home run when he stole home from third base. Harry Jones got a three bagger, too, and Alec Ross also connected for a triple which might have been a homer with a little more speed on the paths. Other heavy hitters were: Hector Meury with a homer, Eben Potter with a triple and Mr. Kelly and Mr. Presho both with home runs. On Mr. Hannah's four bagger both Mr. Kelly and Mr. Potter came in. This three run splurge was Dr. Roman's fault. He saw the ball coming but instead of trying to catch it he ducked and lost the ball. Mr. Baldwin took his time coming in on Mr. Cummerford's hit. He barely made it from second.

The pitching brigade also supplied their share of the entertainment. Harry Whitehead nearly cut off Baldwin's legs with one of his speed balls and he ran nearly to the home plate to grab Mr. Proctor's fly ball. Dr. Roman took Mr. Proctor's place as pitcher in the fifth inning and did a nosedive between first base and home plate for Whitehead's bunt but was unable to get it. As he picked himself up from the dirt one of the spectators remarked: "As a pitcher Dr. Roman makes a good doctor."

Mr. Proctor probably thought he was playing cricket when he took the bat along with him. Most of the players smoked while playing. Mr. Dave Williams smoked his pipe throughout the entire game.

An accident in which no one was injured although two cars were slightly damaged occurred at the corner of St. Lambert St. and Fabrique Lane in Valleyfield, Sunday night about 7.30 o'clock. Mr. Leandre McSween was driving along St. Lambert St. when a car driven by Miss Marie Ange Leboeuf came out of the lane. Before Mr. McSween was able to put on his brakes he hit the rear end of the Leboeuf car damaging the rear bumper and mudguard and denting his own front fender and mudguard. Damages amounted to approximately $15.00. Mr. McSween is an officer on the Valleyfield Police force.

Town Talk

TOURISTS passing through Huntingdon on Sunday, of late, cannot get a very good impression of town cleanliness by the appearance of our main street which has not been kept in the tidy condition that has been the rule for the past few years. The street has been swept occasionally, but, in most cases, this work was done on a Friday or Saturday morning. The crowd is in town on Saturday evening, and the streets are again cluttered by Sunday morning. The lack of cars parking on main street Sundays make it that all papers are noticeable.

But the Huntingdon streets would present a clean appearance on Sundays if the people who park on Huntingdon main street Saturday evenings had a better sense of town cleanliness importance. So many people go shopping, and then think that they have to open the goods in the car to show friends, and then throw the paper wrappings on the street. Considerable part of the debris found on the streets after a busy night in town consists of empty cigarette packages, candy bags, and chocolate bar wrappings. The town should place refuse containers, at least in four or five places on front street, so that people would have a chance to contribute to the front street cleanliness. Another suggestion, that the front street be washed as well as swept, every week.

Revolution in Europe

THE turmoil in which the whole world, more or less, has been involved for twenty years and more, finds its latest manifestation in the bloody revolution now in progress in Spain. From all reports, France, too, seems to be on the verge of a popular uprising.

It is difficult, from this distance, to place a proper value upon the news that the cables bring. We have nothing in our Canadian temperament, our methods of life or our political system, with which to compare the situation in Europe.

Apparently the conflict in Spain is between two conflicting concepts of government, neither of which has gained much headway. It seems to be a struggle between Communism and Fascism, complicated by strong anti-church feeling and by an effort of the monarchists to bring about a situation that would result in King Alfonso being restored to the throne.

The only thing certain is that armed forces on both sides are killing people by thousands, and looting the churches and the big estates of the nobility. The situation has been likened to that which existed in Italy before Mussolini took charge; with the exception that no strong leader has yet appeared to seize power and restore order.

Spain differs from most other nations in that it has no great commercial middle class. Its population consists on the one hand of laborers and peasants and on the other of the so-called upper class of nobles and grandees. The upper class supplies the officers of the army, but the rank and file come from the lower class, and the present situation began with a revolt of soldiers against their officers.

It is possible that the other European nations may seize this opportunity to step in and "pacify" Spain. It is hardly likely that any of Spain's neighbors will be happy to see a new Fascism or a new Communist nation develop so close to them.

Peasant Arts in Quebec

DURING the last few years a remarkable revival in handicraft arts has taken place in the Province of Quebec. This renewal in peasant art is interesting from several aspects. For the peasant or farmer it constitutes an additional source of revenue, and by creating more work right in the home it establishes an efficacious means of keeping on the land sons and daughters of farmers who might otherwise be attracted by the mirage of big cities. For the province it is a precious art in that it contributes toward its retaining its skill in the production of original and typical Quebec works of art, which form a decided contrast with inferior products turned out by mass-production elsewhere. The peasant arts also provide an added attraction for tourists, who are greatly interested in the rugs and other examples of domestic arts, and have created a ready market for these home products. Many antique-loving tourists have acquired spinning wheels for their collections while visiting Quebec, but the supply is far from exhausted, as a recent census accounted for 52,100 looms and 80,500 spinning wheels still in the province.

The revival of peasant arts got under way a little more than six years ago, shortly after the founding in Quebec of a school of domestic arts. By direct teaching to pupils in the school itself, or by demonstrations and exhibitions in the various rural municipalities, this school of domestic arts has contributed to a great extent in reviving interest in these arts and in elevating the quality of the products. Impetus has been given the movement in this district, particularly by the Ecole Ménagère at Sainte-Martine directed by the Sisters of Jesus and Mary, and by the Women's Institutes. The progress accomplished has resulted in beneficial effects for other branches of agricultural production, as, in 1935 alone, the quantity of wool employed in the making of rugs, quilts, homespuns, etc., was nearly three million pounds.

The revival of peasant arts is not limited simply to the fabrication of rugs, blankets and homespuns. It also includes furniture, leather goods and even pottery.

Our Road Signs

WHILE on the question of town talk, there is an important matter which has been brought to our attention more than once this summer, that is that the highway direction signs in Huntingdon, are neither numerous enough nor distinct enough. It often happens that tourists have difficulties in getting out of town onto the road they want. This seems particularly true for travellers who are going to the lake, or to Valleyfield, from Huntingdon. The same trouble exists, but not to such a marked degree, in the routing to Hemmingford and Chateaugay, N.Y.

The placing of these signs, presumably, should be left to the Quebec Roads Department, but the Town Council at its next meeting should make a request to the proper authorities that the local situation be remedied with as little delay as possible. It is true that tourists can always ask directions, but, they cannot always be too sure of the information they get. It is true, too, that a large number of our townspeople do not know the names of the places along the lakefront and in other parts of the county. Only a few weeks ago a tourist looking for some relatives at Helena, was directed across the border, from Huntingdon, and told that he could be directed to the place from Malone. While the settlement of Helena may not be particularly well known, yet many cases of misdirection are often reported. The remedy is better road signs in and out of town.

A Golden Anniversary

THE Huntingdon Gleaner takes great pleasure in congratulating the Smith Falls Record on its 50th birthday anniversary. A paper must be good to serve the community for fifty years and to grow in size and influence like the Record News has. From a very small beginning it has developed into one of the biggest and most progressive of Canadian Weeklies.

Service has been the slogan throughout its fifty years of existence, and it has always lived that slogan to the very letter. In congratulating the Record News upon its achievement the Gleaner feels that the present high place the Record News holds in the field of Canadian journalism can be attributed largely to its editor, Mr. A. E. Dobbie, who has always given of his best in serving the people of Smith Falls and vicinity through the medium of his paper.

The Gleaner knows that it is only echoing the sentiments of all other Canadian Weeklies when it wishes the Record News for the future all the prosperity and success it has enjoyed in the past.

The Saga of Medicine

THE evolution of the medicine is a thrilling saga of human sympathy and scientific achievement. Its most modern expression lies in the package of medicine sold by a reputable druggist.

The Drug and Cosmetics Industry, rebelling against the misinformation about reputable products that has been circulated through public channels, has organized a Committe of Information that will give consumers truthful information about the scientific discoveries and research by which reputable and nationally known proprietary medicines have been developed.

They will tell the public about the constant vigilance with which the modern preparation of package medicines is scientifically safeguarded from the standpoint of the purity of ingredients used; and their efficacy.

They will also tell how, at the cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars, expert chemists are constantly at work in laboratories, formulating, testing and preparing the medicines which have proved to be health bulwarks of civilization.

Aiding this Committe on Information for the Drug and Cosmetics Industry, is Drug World, the U. S. fortnightly publication of the drug and cosmetics field, which is publishing a series of articles written by noted scientists to inform the public as to the scientific safeguards behind a medicine bottle label.

Life Demands The Best

FEW people understand the things that they handle every day and the appliances that they use. They press a button and the machine operates. They turn a key and set in motion a powerful engine that whirls them them through the air or under the sea. They sit back and ride in comfort over the smooth highways or across the seas. They pass through the mountains and scale the highest hills with ease. They use foods and clothing every day but do not know what they are made of or how they came into being. We all use the results of the age without questioning. Yet this very fact is destroying man's inventive powers and the development of his power to reason.

We listen to men reiterate the headings they read in the newspaper, we listen to small talk of some questionable article that deals with the sordidness of life, we ask a question about the main issues of life and find that our audience is silent. We try to find out why such lines of action are taken and all we can learn is that it has been the general custom. People generally do not stop to think, and as a result the few who do think, lead the rest of the people by the nose. Men and women must stop and use their brains if the private rights of the people are to be safeguarded. If you delegate all the thinking of the people to a few, you can look for dictatorship in some form. Today there is a need for thinking people to stop and ask the question, "where will these proposed policies lead? Where will this increased taxation end? Where will the increased number of wine and beer licenses bring the people?" There are questions at every turn that demand the keenest brains to think out, and at the present time the larger proportion of the people are just drifting along. There is a day of settlement and those who are paying attention to the trend or the times will be the leaders. They will direct the courses as they see fit. They will lead the people as their own desires direct them. They will control the destinies as they vision them. Will the people stand by and let these things happen? Yes, unless they will use their brains and think. Just tell what you can as a test of those things you use every day and see how much you have reasoned out the values of time, energy and money.

DIVIDED SKIRTS BACK

Bicycling for girls and women has become so popular in the east it has brought back the divided skirt worn by bicycling girls of the gay nineties, now mothers and grandmothers. In Pittfield, Mass., a dress factory employing 160 girls and women has one half of them working on divided skirts. The skirts are being made at the rate of 10,000 weekly. Most of them go to New York city to be distributed.

WIFE SAVES HIM

While James Edwards was crossing a small stream near Greenview, Ill., with his tractor, the bridge gave way and the tractor fell into the water, pinning Edwards' legs under it. His wife rushed to his aid, but could do nothing but hold his head above water to keep him from drowning, and call for help. Neighbors who came to the rescue could not move the tractor until jacks were brought. After making a solid base on which to rest the jacks, the tractor was raised enough to free Edwards, after being held fast under water, all except his head, for an hour and a half.

IN-LAWS BENEFIT

"True Christian, twenty-two, college graduate, seeking true wife! Home for her parents. Only honest Christians need apply." As a result of that advertisement in the windows of his laundry shop in New York Joseph Wang, Chinese, is now married to a Sunday school teacher. She is Miss Ruby Nell Anthony, daughter of a clergyman, from Layoni,Georgia. The signed marriage agreement is on the wall in Mr. Wang's laundry, and it reads thus: "I promise to marry Ruby Nell Anthony, forsaking every other, and stick only to her." "I take Joseph Wang as my husband, love him, honor him, obey him, and stick only to him."

DOG SMOKES PIPE

Hitch-hiking from Wisconsin to Portland, Me., Henry Daley, 59, took his Boston terrier, Skippy, with him. Daley had taught Skippy to hold a pipe in his mouth. Thumbing for a ride with the pipe-smoking dog sitting by his side never failed to attract passing motorists and Daley had no trouble getting lifts for himself and Skippy.

TRAIN SWAG DWINDLES

In 1920, railroads of the United States had to pay $12,746,927 back to passengers stolen from them by train robbers. From then on the loot taken by train bandits has been reduced from year to year until it fell below $1,000,000 in 1928. Since that year there has been only one year in which the railroads have been obliged to repay more than $1,000,000 stolen from passengers. That was in 1934, when the total was $1,033,834.

SNEEZES TEETH OUT

Walking along a railroad near Northvill, S.D., Elmer Hanlon picked up a set of false teeth. A few moments later a man approached him, searching for something. He was looking for some false teeth, he said, lost by the engineer during a sneezing fit just as his train passed this point.

THIEF REPAYS

A few days after a thief broke into the room of Genevieve Clark, Evanston, Ill., waitress, and stole $25, she received an unsigned letter with a dollar bill enclosed. The letter was from the thief who wrote he was sorry he had to take her money, but he was going to pay it back on the instalment plan. That is one way of "borrowing" money without paying interest.

SEE HOW THEY RUN

Johannes Lodewyck Coleman, young South African winner of the marathon championship of Natal, made use of ostriches in his training for the Berlin marathon. Coleman spent a few hours every morning trying to chase some of the birds wandering loose in a private park placed at his disposal. Ostriches are known for their fast pace, and they provide excellent training for the young sportsman. Coleman —who only a year ago was a farm hand and completely unknown to the sporting word—is the South African "hope" for the Berlin Olympic games.

STEER-SIZE PORKER

A Chester White stag was sold at the Holdrege, Neb., sales pavilion and brought $68.80 in the sale. The animal was trucked in by Emil Hulquist. When sale ring hands saw Emile drive in they thought he had a beef animal aboard and ordered him to the unloading chute for cattle. The hog was so tall its back showed above the sides of the triple box on the trailer and the stock handlers thought it was a cow or steer.

"MAKE-UP" CARS

American women use a lot of make-up, but strangely enough they are notorious for leaving their cosmetics behind. A motorist found out this from his wife. Then he "cashed in" on an idea. He started parading the streets in New York with a beauty parlor. Now he has a fleet of them. The cars bear the notice: "Motor Car for Women." The interior is a miniature beauty parlor with mirror, power, rouge and all the other "face stuff" dear to the heart of women.

BONUS TO CONVICTS

More than 800 convicts in San Quentin prison, California, were credited with nearly half a million dollars in bonus money last month. And that did not include all who were entitled to payments. It is estimated 1,200 inmates could have collected their soldiers' bonus, but at least 400 did not take the trouble to make application. The money due those who made application was not paid over in lump sums but credited to individual accounts of the convicts to be drawn on in small amounts by them.

SITS ON DYNAMITE

State police discovered a truck stopping beside a highway near West Palm Beach, Fla., with one rear wheel still on the pavement, where it was a menace to passing cars. The patrolman found the driver, Harold Anderson, asleep, and after rousing him, discovered his truck was loaded with cases of dynamite that would have blown truck, man and all into kingdom come had a car crashed into it.

COUGHS UP MONEY

When bandits stopped Robert Ford, 42, Buffalo, N. Y., he managed to get 11 $1 bills into his mouth and swallowed them to save them. He was struck in the head and later, in a hospital, it was found his skull was fractured. While under an anaesthetic for the operation made necessary, he coughed violently and up came the money.

STARS HIS HOBBY

A garage worker by day and astronomer by night is Leslie C. Peltier, Delphos, O., who discovered the first comet in 1936 and the fifth comet he has found all told. He also discovered a star in 1933, all with the aid of his home observatory in which he has mounted a six-inch telescope given him by Princeton university. He began at 16 with a two-inch telescope and has since become a self-educated astronomer.

MOVIE KNOCKS TEXAS

Because cameramen of the Rural Resettlement administration under Dr. R. G. Tugwell selected the worst and most isolated spots that suffered from dust-blowing in the southwest, to make the moving picture entitled, "Dust Bowl," the Panhandel of Texas is up in arms. Representative Eugene Worley, of the Texas legislature, will ask Dr. Tugwell to destroy the film. "That picture is a libel on the greatest farming section in the United States," Worley asserts. "If Tugwell doesn't destroy it, I am liable to punch him in the nose when I see him."

SUNDAY SCHOOL HABIT

On a Sunday back in March, 1879, Mrs. Edward Petty walked three miles to Washington, N. J., to take her son, Herman, 10, to Sunday school. Herman received a beautiful picture card illustrating a Bible story and was informed he would get a new one in the series every time he attended Sunday school. He got the full set of pictures and by that time the habit of attending Sunday school was so strongly formed he kept right on going. Last March Herman Petty finished a perfect attendance record of 57 years, never missing a Sunday. And now he has started on his 58th year.

Long Distance

The chief salesman of a certain New York firm had a very loud voice. One morning when the manager arrived at the office he heard a terrible noise coming from the salesman's office.

"Who is that shouting??" asked the manager.

"That's Mr. Hill talking to Chicago," replied the secretary.

"Tell him to use the telephone."

MANY people ask us why Kellogg's taste better. One of the most important reasons is that they're always crisp and oven-fresh. They're protected by the patented WAXTITE inner bag.

Another reason is their delicious flavor. Their oven-fresh crispness has never been imitated. Kellogg's are made only from the finest ingredients. Nourishing. Easy to digest.

Don't be satisfied with any other brand. Ask for Kellogg's by name.

Nothing takes the place of Kellogg's CORN FLAKES

"I mustn't miss Dad's Telephone Call!" . . . . .

Young Jimmy knows it's just about time for that mid-week telephone call from the city. And he wants to be there — to hear Dad's cheery greeting, to assure him he hasn't been getting into too much trouble and to remind him of the things he wants brought up next week-end. Dad, on the other end of the line, gets a great kick out of it all. In fact he wouldn't miss making that inexpensive call for anything — it's a great break to a routine week and it keeps his mind easy.

On both "Anyone" and "Person-to-Person" calls, low Night rates apply every evening after 7, and ALL DAY SUNDAY.

What are the Aims of The Teaching of Science?

W. P. PERCIVAL, M.A., Ph.D.
Director of Protestant Education for the Province of Quebec.

The story of science is that of the self-sacrificing strivings of man to understand and appreciate Nature and her laws. The subject of science affords an intellectual training that, in many respects, is second to that offered by no other on the course of study. Patience, deliberateness of purpose and clarity of thought are necessary in order to follow through a bit of scientific reasoning or to succeed in an experiment of any difficulty. As a logical mind and a critical judgment are essential for success in human learning, the study of science must hold a high place in cultural development. Though it is not necessary for a person to be well informed in all branches of science, it is usual for educated people to possess a general knowledge of its outstandinfg facts. It is, indeed, difficult to escape some knowledge of science in the ordinary relations of life. Young people may expect to be influenced in increasing measure by its findings.

Much scientific information, once discovered, is so simple that its truth can be demonstrated to intelligent children in a short space of time. The relative rotundity of the earth is a reality that few now care to argue about. Yet, twenty-five hundred years ago, men commonly thought that the earth was a large disc floating in water. At another time, it was thought to be borne on the backs of elephants which themselves stood upon a huge tortoise. Christopher Columbus reasoned, from calculations previously made, that the distance from Europe to Asia was about one-third less than it actually is and was told that there could not be another side of the earth, that if there were the people would stand upside down and that, in any event, they would be very different from the sons of Adam. In the middle ages, the causes of plague were not understood. Consequently, life in cities became very uncertain. Nearly every high school student is now aware that rats carried the plague to man, though he is not so well acquainted with the fact that fleas conveyed the disease to rats; he knows that malaria and yellow fever are communicated to healthy persons by micro-organisms carried by mosquitoes and that the discovery of these causes has made city life more secure and tropical countries habitable.

Children are taught that there is nothing mysterious or magical in science, in spite of its high-sounding designation, but that it is simply a name for the knowledge of certain facts that have so far been found to be true, which man has discovered to occur in a fixed order or relationship of cause and effect and many of which he has stated as laws of nature.

Science Teaches Pupils Interest In Nature

It is an aim of the teaching of science to have pupils take a greater interest in their surroundings and thereby to make themselves more intelligent. "Give me understanding and I shall keep thy law" is not only a tenet of the Psalmist. From the study of science, children discover that Nature is inexorable in her judgment and inevitable in her sentence. When taught by an enthusiastic teacher, pupils may learn how much preferable life is in a world in which cause and effect can be accurately predicted than in an environment of caprice. Though science is a comparative newcomer to the field of secondary education, it has won its place because pupils learn the wonders and unity of Nature, and new inventions and discoveries constantly intrigue them. Science furnishes the key to the interpretation of natural phenomena. That which perplexes the uninitiated is an open book to the student of science. Knowledge of Nature has changed the attitude of man from fear to love of her and her works.

Pupils learn much in the classes in General Science regarding the earth and its relation to other bodies in the universe. These lessons are followed by an explanation of weather conditions over the globe and their causes. Later, pupils learn how man protects himself from infectious and contagious diseases, how he keeps himself in good physical condition, how energy is obtained from fuels, how falling water can be used to drive machinery, how a city is lighted and much more information of popular interest.

In physical geography, pupils are concerned with the nature of the earth, the atmosphere, clouds, climate, the winds, the ocean and its tides and the weathering of rocks. They learn the causes of glaciers, volcanoes, geysers, meteors, coral islands and, in short, both the usual and unusual physical features of the earth.

Biology deals with the general structure and function of living things and the needs for the sustenance of life. Some interesting facts are narrated concerning the continuance and reproduction of life, and the importance of a good heredity is clearly shown.

In Physics, the mechanics of solids and fluids, properties of matter, heat and electricity are dealt with. In the Chemistry classes pupils learn about combustion, the constituents of the atmosphere, the laws of gases and the chief elements of the earth. In both of these subjects, knowledge of mathematics is applied and deepened.

The advent of the laboratory method of teaching science has greatly increased the interest and value of the subject. No longer is the pupil merely lectured to. No longer even are demonstrations simply performed before him by the teacher. In the large majority of high schools, pupils experience the thrill of performing their own experiments, under adequate guidance. Before a pupil may commence an experiment, however, he must have in mind something of its nature, form some hypothesis and watch the development of the experiment so as to formulate a correct conclusion. In this way, he follows the true scientific method and learns to think scientifically. This phase of science teaching is of immense importance. As much of the value of geometry consists rather in the development of processes of thought than in the knowledge acquired, so correct observation, formation of a right hypothesis, stating a law according to the result of the experiment and verifying the results, give scope for a broad cultural benefit that must be of supreme importance to the learner. This combination of learning facts and acquiring a sound mode of thinking should awaken in the pupil the desire to search widely for truth and find the manner in which he can conduct the search most successfully.

The cultivation of the scientific attitude and the necessity for vigorous and exact thinking amply justify the placing of at least one science subject on the same compulsory level in Grades X and XI as English and French, which are the only two other required subjects in those grades. Though a minimum number of other subjects is demanded, only these three are obligatory upon pupils who follow the General Course.

Few studies possess greater appeal than the lives of men. The biographies of scientists are extremely fascinating. Incidental to the knowledge of facts of science and the training in scientific method which pupils obtain is the information they gather concerning many people whose names are household words. Ptolemy, Aristotle, Bacon, Kepler, Galileo, Newton, Watt, Stephenson, Faraday, Darwin, Pasteur, Galton, Roentgen, Burbank, Edison and Einstein are among the many important thinkers and experimentors of whom pupils learn through a study of the sciences. A knowledge of the achievements of such great men may prove to be an inspiration in their own lives.

Dusty Answer

Smith had been pestered by his small son asking questions. One evening, as he sat down to a quiet perusal of his paper, a small voice piped, "Dad, am I made of dust?"

"I think not," said the father; "otherwise you would dry up now and then."

Closing Dates To Be Strictly Enforced

Definite decision has been made by the management and directorate of the Ottawa Exhibition that the rule for the closing of entries will be enforced strictly this year. Entries not received by the closing dates will be refused and those which come by mail will be returned. Entries from outside the city sent by mail must be posted in time to show the post mark at the point of mailing and the date must not be later than the closing date for the entries. The announcement is important this year as in some classes the closing dates are earlier than they were last year.

The exhibition dates are August 24th to 29th, but entries for horses, cattle, sheep and swine must be in by August 1st. Entries for junior agriculture, handicrafts, horticulture, poultry, pets, dairy and agricultural products will be received until August 8th. Entries for the dog show, women's institutes, hobby show, craftsmanship, child welfare, Highland dancing, baby show and the sports meet will be taken until August 15th. Entry forms may be obtained at the exhibition office, Queen street, or will be mailed at once on receipt of request. There has been no curtailment in the prize money, in fact in some departments there are increases, so that a big entry is expected.

Goldman, the king of bandmasters, and his internationally renowned band will be heard in two concerts daily. Radio fans know this famed organization and they will welcome the opportunity to see it as they listen. The Fascinations of 1936, the feature offering for the night show, is a music and dance revue with a large cast, mostly beautiful girls, and will be presented on an elaborate scale not previously eclipsed in an outdoor presentation. The pick of vaudeville, fireworks, horse races, automobile show, pure food, flowers and fruit, poultry and pets, dog show, livestock and agriculture, a new midway and scores of other factors will combine to make the Ottawa exhibition week memorable for all visitors.

Valleyfield

Saturday afternoon the Moco football team of Valleyfield beat Balmoral by the score of 3 to 0 before nearly 300 spectators. After 15 minutes of hard playing the Mocos took the lead when Peter Lang scored after having forced Leslie Kirby to come out of his goals to make a beautiful stop. Kirby couldn't get back in his goals in time, his way being blocked by his center-half, Dick Greene. The second point was scored after 42 minutes of play; after that the Balmoral missed many opportunities to score.

Five Moco players went up the field with only one defense and the goaler to pass, when Armand Jodoin after hard playing took the ball from Peter Lang to pass it back to Tommy Ferguson. This time he passed to Peter Lang, who for the second time fooled Kirby by a beautiful kick to the outside corner of the goal, making 2 to 0 for Moco. The second half of the game started rather slowly. After that both clubs missed many chances to score. Nerves were on edge and when Jodoin hooked Owen, while passing him, with his legs, a quarrel ensued. The game started again, but not for long. Jodoin kicked the ball out of bonds, hitting Miss Lillian Howard on the forehead and knocking her unconscious. At the end of 15 minutes, the play was resumed. Five minutes after the play was resumed, Tommy Ferguson scored the third and last point of the game. Balmoral tried again and again but they couldn't beat McCracken's invincible goaling.

VOTE ROSS In Huntingdon

The . . . . FARMER'S TURN IS HERE

J. W. ROSS

Liberal Candidate In Huntingdon

The greatest industry and profession in Quebec Province is, at last, properly represented in the Government by the Prime Minister, Hon. Adélard Godbout.

The soundness and farseeing judgment of the farming class is well depicted in the successful career of the present Prime Minister. His program shows that farmers know what is needed to improve general conditions.

Premier Godbout's claim that a successful farming class means a prosperous nation, is pure logic. By bettering the condition of farmers, laborers and all other classes will benefit. It is logical that we should give full cooperation to a man who is leading a party, not a conglomeration of "isms."

Highlights of the Godbout Programme

FOR FARMERS:

Bonus of $10 acre for clearing land.

Bonus on butter and cheese for export.

Bonus on raising of pigs for export.

Bonus for construction of modern piggeries.

$2,500,000 for drainage of lands.

Bonuses to assist sugar beet industry.

Government assistance for stock breeders.

Supply lime for fertilization purposes.

Assistance to small rural industries.

Co-operative warehouses for farmer's goods.

New system of rural credits.

Special programme of rural education.

FOR WORKMEN:

Minimum wage law for all workmen.

Family allowance to maintain widows and orphans.

Relief works to replace state charity.

New rural electricity policy to work towards lower rates.

Company law to be enacted to protect savings.

Press Letters

Gore, Que.
August 4th, 1936

Dear Sir:

We are sorry our Rockburn girls are such poor sports over a game of soft-ball that they would state the facts that a young man played on the Gore team. Maybe in Rockburn they call their boys of 14 or 15 years young men but to us they are boys and we will say we had a boy play on our team. Your reporter did not state the facts that before the Gire girls went up they phoned that one of their girls got hurt and was unable to play and they would have to put a boy on. One of the Rockburn girls phoned back to place him in the field and it would be alright. You did not state that you also had two players of the Brooklet team play for you. Girls, why not be sports? Take your loss the same as your gain. How can you expect the Gore girls to want to come back to play again? They are sports and were quite willing to do what would suit you.

Be sports and not grumblers.

"And did she have a job?" interrupted the girl.

Jack: "Do you serve fresh lobsters here?"

Waiter: "Yes sir, Sit down."

To-Morrow's Child

Chapter 6

Hugh said, with little animation in his voice, "Hello, Guy . . ." Then, turning to Val with a vague smile, he said, "I think I'll make a raid on the ice-box, if you'll excuse me."

"Perhaps you've noticed the great playright is a little on edge," Guy said casually when Hugh had left the room. "He tried to nose into an argument between Leslie Crawford and Winifred Sperry at the theater this afternoon and Leslie practically throttled him."

Val sank into a chair, and took a magazine from the table, turning the pages idly. Presently she looked up. "I suppose you know that Cran brought me home. He came by about half an hour ago to say good-bye."

Still standing, Guy demanded, "Why didn't you wait for me last night? You knew I'd be back."

"Are you really serious?" But he couldn't be, possibly.

There was a long silence, Guy glaring at her, Val continuing her inspection of the magazine. Then Val returned the magazine to the table and stood up, facing him.

"I'm leaving New York tomorrow," she told him quietly enough, "and I've a good many little things to attend to. I can't honestly say I've enjoyed knowing you—but at least it has been a unique experience." She started toward the hall door, stiffened in her tracks as she felt his hand close on her left wrist. She turned her head sideways to look at him, eyes blazing.

A half grin formed on Guy's lips. "I wonder," he said, "if you realize how completely you've given yourself away? You've tried to convince yourself that you don't like me—and every gesture and every word you've spoken has made a liar out of you. And—I like you . . ."

Kate stood in the doorway watching them for some time, unseen, before she asked, lightly, "What's the significance of the pantomime, children?"

Releasing Val's wrist, Guy said pleasantly, "Any objections if I take Val to the theater tonight? I managed to wangle a box this afternoon."

Val had drawn breath to refuse firmly when Kate cried quickly, "You did really? . . . That's the answer, then. Hugh was just saying we'd have difficulty juggling the tickets so that Bret and I could have Val with us . . . Abruptly she turned to Val, "Unless you'd rather not, darling . . . ?"

Val shrugged, forced a smile. "I don't want to be contrary, but—with my face banged up, I'd be rather conspicuous in a box, wouldn't I?"

"It's an orchestra box and there's a curtain," Guy said. "You needn't be seen by anyone except those on the stage."

As Hugh came out of the dining-room Guy turned to Val. "I'll be up about seven-thirty, O.K.?"

"That isn't necessary," Kate told him, quickly. "We're all going backstage before the show, anyway. You can take charge of Val after we arrive."

Guy looked at Kate as if about to protest this, then smiled and nodded agreement. "Well, better hump along."

When they heard the door close, Val turned a puzzled face to Hugh. "Is Guy in the play?" she asked.

"After a manner of speaking," Hugh grinned. "He has a bit part, in the first and last acts—and he blames me for not having a better."

"You won't be alone more than ten minutes all told, darling," Kate assured Val.

It was not until Val was a part of the confusion backstage at the Kinglsey theater that she remembered she had not yet told Kate and Hugh why she had come to New York. And she knew then that she would not tell them. It would be far easier and simpler to say "No" to Hugh's implied offer of a job and go back to New Manchester and let them forget her.

She was introduced to a dozen persons, the producer, the director, the assistant director, several members of the cast. Kate was busy with the caterer for the backstage party for the cast after the show. Bret Gallishaw had brought them to the theater, but had discreetly remained in the lobby.

The fire in the old Amburgh theater had not reached the stage and it had been necessary only to transfer the scenery, props and costumes to the Kingsley, but the conditions were sufficiently new and unfamiliar here to keep Hugh Malcolm in constant conference with the director and his assistants. Winifred Sperry, trying to get Hugh's attention, recognized Val and ran over for a word."

"We're in a grand stew," she said, laughing. "Let's hope that we get straightened out before the curtain rises." She wore a lovely aqua tint chiffon and Val thought it was no wonder Hugh was in love with her. She was really beautiful.

But she did not understand the full significance of what Winifred had said until a little later Kate whispered to her, "Leslie and Winifred have been fighting all day. Winifred lost her head just before we came and threw a prop knife at him and now Leslie's shut up in his dressing room, sulking. The 'Sweethearts of Broadway'," she said, with a wry grin. "Hugh wants me to go in and pull him out or it. You'll be all right here."

The curtain was to rise at eight-thirty. At eight-twenty Guy appeared and put a ticket in her hand. "Sorry I'm late," he said. "You'll have to go through the lobby with him or they'll think you muscled in. It won't take me five minutes to make up and change. Pull the curtain around if you're self-conscious, but your eye isn't bad at all."

Guy had barely disappeared when Hugh came up, asking, "Where's Kate—not still with Leslie?" Some one caught him by the arm. "Just a moment," he said impatiently; and to Val: "The curtain goes up in a couple of minutes. Go tell Kate, will you, Val? . . . Leslie's dressing-room is at the far end of the corridor, the last on the right."

The door of Leslie's dressing-room was half open and in the mirror on the opposite wall Val saw the actor's reflection. He was standing behind the door, his side to the mirror, looking down at something in his hands. Val lifted her hand to knock, hesitated—and in that moment of delay, Leslie Crawford moved so that his hands came into the reflected view and Val saw that he was looking at the photograph of a child, apparently a little boy of three or four years old.

Val stepped back, cleared her throat and then approached the door again and knocked. The door swung open and Leslie looked at her, smiling. "Oh, hello," he said pleasantly. "You're Kate Hollister's young cousin, aren't you?"

Val nodded. "Is Kate here?" It was quite apparent that Kate was not there.

"She was some time ago," he said. "Perhaps she's out front." He stepped into the corridor as she hurried away. "Be sure to come back after the show," he called after her.

"Thanks." She ran now, across the stage, out the alley door and around to the lobby where she encountered Bret Gallishaw and Kate just going in.

"Hurry, darling. You'll find us fourth row, center," Kate said.

Guy's first entrance was at the beginning of the first act. When he came back, not more than five minutes later, he brought a pair of binoculars. "That's the nearest thing to opera glasses among the props," he said, grinning. "Try them on Kate and Bret."

Val said, "Leslie Crawford worries me, Guy. He doesn't seem to be at ease. Is he always like that?"

"The little game is still being played, show or no show." Guy told her. "They're all hating one another and— Let me have those glasses a second, will you?" A moment later he gave them back. "Take a look at Leslie's face now."

Val looked. The scene was the interior of a mountain shack where Leslie and Winifred had taken refuge from a severe electrical storm. They had been quarreling constantly since the scene opened. Leslie—a quiet, dignified young college professor—accusing Winifred—an ultra modern daughter of great wealth—of deliberately trapping him here in an effort to force him to marry her. A moment before Winifred, thoroughly sickened with the man, had suddenly jerked open the door of the shack and run out into the storm. Now, as Val focussed the glasses on Leslie's face, he was pacing the floor of the shack, wringing his hands. The situation called for facial strain, but Val somehow sensed, as Guy had, that the twitching of Leslie's face was not voluntary, that he was passing through a ghastly mental experience in no way connected with the business of the play.

The stage storm increased in violence; thunder rolled, lightning crashed. Leslie opened the door, shounted, cuddenly slammed it shut and stood with has back to it . . . Val took the glasses from her eyes. "It's horrible to watch him," she said.

Guy took the binoculars eagerly, trained them on the stage just as Leslie rushed to the window of the shack and peered out into the dark night.

"Better put your fingers in your ears," Guy said out of the corner of his mouth, his eyes glued to the glasses.

As Leslie put his fingers on the window sill there was a sharp, amazingly realistic flash of stage lightning followed by a deafening crash. Leslie reeled, staggered up stage. For an instant the stage was in darkness—then the lights came on revealing the actor's still, curiously sprawled figure between the window and the crude table.

The curtain fell. Guy said in a strained whisper, "That's not in the script . . . he's supposed to be crouched down in the corner . . . he's fainted!"

Her nails cutting into her clenched hands, Val heard the shrill muffled scream of a woman behind that motionless curtain and knew that Leslie Crawford had not fainted . . . Quickly she turned her head to seek Kate's eyes. Both Kate's and Bret's seats were empty.

Chapter 7

The audience was startled and a little puzzled but not yet aware that what they had seen was not a part of the play. Val stared at the turned-up seats which less than five minutes ago had been occupied by Kate and Bret Gallishaw. Then she heard Guy saying, "I'm going back to see what it's all about, Val. You'd better stick here."

Val nodded, vaguely; but no sooner had Guy left than she knew she could not sit here calmly staring at a curtain behind which a man lay dead . . . she knew that Leslie Crawford was dead—and that some one in that little group she had met at Kate's apartment had killed him.

She rose and went to the lobby. She passed through it to the street and as she gained the sidewalk she heard her name called: "Val—don't tell me you've walked out on my play."

Hatless, Hugh Malcolm was approaching not from that side of the theater by which the stage entrance was reached but from the opposite direction. Even while he grinned down at her, her eyes found that dark, narrow passageway behind him—a space barely wide enough for a man to walk through but which may have provided escape from some little used backstage door on that side.

At last she meet his puzzled gaze. "Hugh—where were you?"

"Where? Just now you mean?" He laughed—a little uneasily, Val thought. "I went to the corner for a deck of cigarettes. See here—what's the gag?"

She studied his face. "Leslie Crawford . . ." Her throat was dry. "The audience doesn't know yet, but—he's dead, Hugh . . . !"

A shadow passed over Hugh Malcolm's features, but his grin remained. Through a little silence he looked down at her, thoughtfully.

Leslie isn't dead, Val. You've let my little stage storm get on your nerves. Leslie was merely playing the part of a timid young man frightened within an inch of his life by a severe electrical display."

Her hand tightened on his sleeve: "You were there, then? You saw what happened?"

"Not at this particular performance," he said, smiling; "but I know the play, child, and when I left ten minutes ago the storm was brewing in the script." He took her arm. "Come along, we'll go back and have Leslie's own assurance that he is far from dead."

But Val did not move. "You don't understand, Hugh . . ."

Something in her voice touched him. "All right," he said, quietly. "All right, Val. Where were you going if I hadn't come along—back to Kate's?"

She shook her head, vaguely. "I don't know . . . I just wanted to get away . . ."

She saw him lift a hand, signalling, heard the taxi pull up to the curb behind her.

"Go to the apartment and take a shot of ammonia," he said. "We'll cut the party short and join you as soon as possible." Then, grinning as he closed the door: "You won't mind if I bring Leslie along to testify to his good health?"

Violet, the maid, let Val in, and informed her that Mrs. Warren was asleep in Val's bed. She had made Violet promise to call her the moment they came in from the theater.

"I'll sleep on the couch in the library," Val said.

She went directly to the library, closed the door and began to pace the floor. Then confirmation of what she had known with complete certainty from the moment of its happening came from Kate, by telephone:

"Val—it's all too horrible to talk about. I'm glad you had sense enough to get away. They can't keep us here much longer, I think. But don't wait up, darling."

She returned to the library and lay on her back on the couch with her hands locked under her head.

Who killed Leslie Crawford . . . ?

When she opened her eyes an hour later, the library door was ajar and she heard voices in the living room—Kate's, Hugh's, others'. She swung her feet to the floor and sat there for a time wondering why they had come to the apartment at this hour of the night . . . Presently Kate's voice told her.

"Thanks for coming up, everybody. Perhaps we aren't any better off than before, but at least we've had our own little inquest. It wouldn't have been necessary if they hadn't insisted on questioning us separately and out of hearing of the others."

When Val was sure they had all gone, she went into the living room. Kate forced a smile as she said, "I'm sorry you had to be here for all this, Val. Perhaps next time you come . . . ."

"Been reenacting the crime?" Val asked quietly.

Valleyfield Council

At the regular meeting of Valleyfield Council on Wednesday evening Mayor Philorum Billette informed the council that a new industry, operated as the "Victoria Woollen & Worsted Co." is planning to open a factory in Valleyfield. This Company, owned by Mr. Rollet of Fourgeolles, is a French establishment that has been operating in Canada for the past 25 years. For the present, the upper floors of the Knights of Columbus Hall will serve as a factory, the Company having taken an option on the building along with a one year lease for the factory. Between fifteen and twenty persons will be employed in the manufacture of tweed. Mayor Billette drew the attention of the council to the fact that a reduction of 75% in taxes is allowed to new industries establishing in Valleyfield. A resolution granting this reduction to the Company was drawn up and carried.

Ald. Lebeuf raised a discussion in regard to the problem of patronizing the Canadian Oil Co. This latter Company, in return for building the Bellerive bandstand, had been given the continued patronage of the city in buying gas, oil, grease and other accessories as made by the Company. Other dealers in similar goods and materials had made numerous complaints owing to the fact that they were taxpayers like any other Company. After a lengthy discussion it was suggested that Ald. Lebeuf consult the Company on the matter. Whatever the outcome of the interview may be, no change in the city's present policy of purchasing from the Canadian Oil Co. will be made before the autumn.

A report by the Chief of Police on the activities of his Department was filed. Ald. Touchette then commented on the different activities of that Department, and complained that the Police car was being driven by persons other than regular members of the Police force. Ald. Miron mentioned that some of the City Hall employees found it handy to use the car sometimes. The Chief of Police, in his report, had stated that he required the services of Mr. Tanguay as a number of the policemen were on their holidays. The Chief had also mentioned that he considered it a good idea to have a person in civilian clothes in the police car.

Ald. Touchette thought that it was unnecessary to replace policemen on vacation, and said that the Department should economize as much as possible. He contended that there was no need for the Chief to have another chauffeur than the one in the Department. Ald. Miron, in giving details, mentioned that there were 8 constables on the force with driver's licences, 4 at Station No. 1 and 4 at Station No. 2, and, at each Station two on day duty and two on night duty. He explained that the Chief really needed a chauffeur as the policemen should remain on duty in order to drive the fire reels in case an alarm rang.

Ald. Touchette asked that an investigation be made. He knew that the city paid for eight licences. He also wished to know if the other constables who owned private cars really had licences to drive. Ald. Miron asked whether the regular licence permitted a person to drive the fire trucks. Ald. Touchette explained the provincial law, and Ald. Larin asked why two drivers were required for each fire call. Ald. Miron explained that the Chief of Police usually took along two drivers as he did not drive the trucks himself. The matter ended quite humourously, and it was decided that the activities of the Department should be given further consideration later.

Ludger Codebecq, K.C., informed the Council that the Judge had rendered the verdict in the case of Mr. John Cousineau, finding him not indigent.

Mayor Billette recalled several remarks passed during an interview with Mr. Henry of the Beauharnois Light, Heat & Power Co. The Company was prepared to pay $10,000 for repairing the bridge on Chaussée St. Ald. Laroche, Touchette, and Cholette gave their opinion. Ald. Laroche urged that no time be lost in commencing the work. Ald. Lebeuf, Larin and the Mayor discussed the problem of getting land to widen the entrance.

Mr. J. G. Bélanger, Secretary-Treasurer of the Valleyfield Chamber of Commerce, spoke on behal. of the "Finestone Laundry," associated with the "Frontenac Laundry" of Montreal. This firm has the intention of opening a branch in the "Canadian Marine" building, presently being used as a municipal workshop. The Mayor inquired as to the policies of the Company, and was informed that it was probable the washing would be done in Valleyfield, although the Company has trucks running between Valleyfield and Montreal at very regular intervals. Ald. Laroche wished to know in what way the city would benefit financially. Mr. Bélanger gave the facts of the matter, stating that forty persons were employed in the large factory. Mayor Billette remarked that he understood the Company was prepared to pay $5,000, in instalments of $500 per annum, for the Canadian Marine building. Ald. Laroche asked Mr. Bélanger to give complete details on the matter, as he did not quite understand as to whether the Company would benefit Valleyfield. Ald. Laroche, following the explanation, thought that if the Company were allowed to establish a branch here, the other merchants and dealers would be averse to it. It was decided that the Company should have to make a request to the council in writing before any decision would be made, and Mr. Bélanger was asked to inform the Company that they should follow the proper procedure in applying for permission to establish in Valleyfield.

Mr. Zotique Leroux asked that the sidewalk in front of the Bellerive Garage be kept clear of cars. He complained that cars were continually driving up on the sidewalk to reach the gasoline tanks. The Chief of Police was asked to attend

SNOOPER'S COMMENTS

By Staff Reporter

A couple of days ago this column was sitting on front street twiddling its thumbs when it noticed a large crowd gathering around Tedstone's Bakery Shop. Now, there's only one thing this column likes better than twiddling its thumbs and that's a crowd. So off it went to see what was happening.

At first, we thought the crowd had gathered on account of all the advertising Tedstone's have been doing in the Gleaner of late. But when we arrived we found that it was a farewell party—or something, to Bob Whittaker who is leaving Thursday on a visit to his home in Scotland.

We are sorry to see Bob go. He often proved to be copy for this space when copy was conspicuous by its absence. We really don't know what we'll do without him.

Softball still continues to lure big crowds back to the N.Y.C. diamond. The latest rumours along softball alley say that a town league composed of four teams will be formed. The Leach Textiles and Canadiens have been staging some thrilling battles during the past weeks that leave the fans begging for more and the proposed league is the result. Ten entries have already been received for a district tournament which will be held here in the near future.

And writing of softball reminds us that the younger players will have to look to their laurels. On Friday night one of the nicest catches of the season was made by a gentleman spectator who speared a hard hit ball to centre field that neither the centre or right fielder was able to get near. It was a lovely catch and drew a hearty round of applause from the fans.

This is how the boys who went to Malone on Sunday night felt on Monday morning.

In the mail:

We had a letter from a reader in Howick who wanted to know if Howick ever received any notice from this space. It has and will anytime we get any thing from down that way. The reader asks the following questions. The first one is in connection with the open air dance.

Is the cure for a toothache always found beyond the bright lights?

And...

Why go NORTH for fishing when good fishing is at hand?

Then there was a letter from Valleyfield that was all about Adam's apple, which left us very much in the dark, indeed.

Then there were other letters. Some of them couldn't be printed even if we wanted to print them. Some of them contained suggestive criticism, others just criticism. One reader thought we should have something more substantial every week. Something with a moral to it and the following paragraph was enclosed in the letter. It's really worth reading.

There's A Moral Here

Did you ever stop to think that hard times mean nothing to a hen? She just keeps on digging worms and laying eggs, regardless of what is said about conditions. If the ground is hard, she scratches harder. If it's dry, she digs deeper. If she strikes a rock, she works around it. But always she digs up worms and turns them into hard-shelled profits as well as tender broilers. Did you ever see a pessimistic hen? Did you ever know of one starving to death waiting for worms to dig themselves to the surface? Did you ever hear one cackle because times were hard? Not on your life. She saves her breath for digging and cackles for eggs.

What's In The Wind?

By Paula Dicks

NEWS AND VIEWS FROM CORRESPONDENTS

A reader with a poetic mind writes the following comment on the season's activities:

"These days and nights are so unspeakably beautiful, that one feels something wonderful ought to happen. I have been watching the men in the hay field, and surely it is a "picture no artist could paint." A Frenchman and his son doing the work. The son has youth and beauty for a background; the father a sort of kindly strength and a sturdiness which throws into a harmonious relief the youth and grace of his son. The wind blows softly; the grass glistens; the sun shines and the human heart sings with the choir invisible the song which has not yet been audible to the ears of mortal man."

That I consider a word picture as effective as the famous "Angelus." Alas, haying scenery is not always so serene. This evening about five o'clock a baby cyclone gave six men putting the top on a haystack an exciting time. With strenuous effort the top was secured just before the deluge followed. It is sad, too, to hear of farmers unable physically to handle their hay getting hopelessly behind with the season's work.

Library Again

A Correspondent writes: "I read with interest the possibility of getting a Library started. That has been my old ambition. Then again it could be a place we could leave our books to when we pass on to other experiences, where we cannot take our library. Could we not as a Society make a bold drive to get one started in Huntingdon?"

Mr. J. W. Hamilton writes again from St. Paul, sending a number of interesting leaflets concerning University Reading Circles, Adult Education, The Big Brother Book, and Consolidated Sunday Schools. All of these contain material reflection for useful discussion. I hope to refer to some of these again.

He also forwarded me a letter concerning the case of Lucy Harris of New Melbourne, Newfoundland. Lucy is ten years of age, the daughter of a poor fisherman. Last March she went trouting and was lost for ten days. When found her feet were frozen and had to be amputated. She is apparently in a hospital. Another of those tragic accidents so often the lot of children insufficiently clothed and fed for a severe climate.

Mines Make Mushroom Towns

Bourlamaque, Que. "This little mining town is growing with most astonishing rapidity. We are incorporated now, have a charter, licensed hotel, fire hall, police station and a splendid new "Lodge" for the directors with resident caretaker and housekeeper. The building cost about $75,000 and is beautifully furnished. You have probably seen where the C.N.R. have proceeded to survey a line from Rouyn to Senneterre (99 miles) to pass through this mining district one mile from Lamaque. There is now a motor road through to Amos, though not very good yet. The road between here and Rouyn is all ready for grading, so it won't be long before we are on the map.

We now have nice grassy lawns and sidewalks, with a walk right to our door, front and back. It is a model town. The company look after the sprinkling of the lawns, mowing the grass, etc. They are also planting some trees along the sidewalks. It is difficult to believe that a year ago these houses didn't exist and that the townsite was nothing but a blueberry marsh. It took a good many tons of sand to fill it in and now it is surfaced with loam and the grass is growing. The school is rapidly taking shape, four rooms all finished."

Some time ago I wrote about the Northern mining towns, and this letter coming last week confirms the opinion that there must be a lot of business in the North.

Malone Fair Opening Is Set

Great Exposition by Franklin County Agricultural Society in Prospect this year

Prospects of a fair that will outrival even the Malone fairs of recent years are held by the Franklin County Agricultural Society as preparations approach completion for the holding of the 85th annual exposition at the Malone fairgrounds.

The dates for the fair this year are August 25, 26, 27 and 28 and a varied program of entertainment with a special features designed for the enjoyment of both adults and children has been arranged for each of the four days.

In all of the premium departments an effort is being made to secure a full list of entries and there is assurance that all of the barns and exhibition halls on the grounds will be well filled with outstanding exhibits of livestock, vegetables, poultry and handiwork.

In the racing program, arranged by Secretary Walter B. Mallon, are listed 10 stake events and, in addition to these, which have already been filled, a sufficient number of open classes will be raced to make three good horse races daily.

The stake events include the following:

The Chamber of Commerce Stake
Free-For-All Trot and Pace $1.000
The Malone Lodge of Elks Stake
2-Year-Old Trot $500
The Hotel Flanagan Stake
3-Year-Old Trot..... $500
The Malone Bronze Powder Co. Stake.
2:23 Trot $500
The Eldredge & Mason Co. Stake
2:17 Trot $500
The Malone Ice & Coal Co. Stake
2:13 Trot $500
The H. D. Thompson Co. Stake
3-Year-Old Pace..... $500
The Hyde Drug Co. Stake
2:23 Pace $500
The J. Mahoney Motor Co. Stake
2:17 Pace $500
The Malone Schine Theater Stake
2:13 Pace $500

One landmark, nearly as old as the fair itself, will be missing this year. The old Floral Hall has been torn down and will be replaced by a new, modern building, better suited to the present day, which will provide ample space for the exhibits of flowers and handiworks which have always been one of the outstanding features of the exposition.

Attractions for the entertainment of fair-goers will include music by the Malone Military Band, vaudeville presented by George Hamid & Company, a glorious fireworks display, ball games and numerous other attractions.

The Continental Revue, a group of talented and attractive dancing girls, and the Albains, who present a thrilling and spectacular aerial act, will be features of the vaudeville.

An office will be opened soon by the association for the taking of entries in the several premium departments and the entries will close on August 15.

THREE E'S FOR SAFETY

These formulae fall inevitably into the pattern of the Safety Council's three E's—Engineering, Enforcement and Education. The first part of the task is to educate the public, and especially that part of it which puts individual licence above the common good, to want highway safety. An excellent first lesson could be based on the fact that continuation of the present accident rate means that one person in every twenty will be killed or injured within five years, and that of every three children born, two will be killed or injured by automobiles before their normal life spans have run. The world has never before in modern times witnessed such purposeless sacrifice of human bodies.

GET PLENTY OF NITROGEN AND OXYGEN

No Reason to Fear Work

Regular, legitimate toil never harmed any one. We often hear of "overwork" being a cause of breakdown mentally and physically; but, when we look carefully into the matter, we find the victim, long prior to his invalidism, wrecked the machinery of his body by improper feeding, irregular sleep, and unsympathetic exercise. Can you imagine a tubby, swivel-chair, club-ridden gormandizer, getting exercise from a ride in an upholstered automobile, and three hours a week devoted to panting around a fancy golf course, where he does his heavy-ballasted carcass more harm than good? Wouldn't you think he is about fifteen or more years too late with his "exercise"? There is no hope of long life for that sort of man—absolutely none! He is in danger every moment he exists.

One thing our city business men should remember: There is a vast difference between "good business" and right living. My idea is, there is nothing that pays quite so well as a rigorous adherence to proper care of the body. It is a shame that we violate every law of diet, sleep, and exercise—die young—and put the blame on overwork. Does Providence remove the man that commits suicide?

I knew a man who worked in a stone-quarry on his farm until he was near eighty. "A freak," you say. No, you are the freak! This man ate regularly; when tired, he rested. He had his full allotment of fresh air; he slept eight hours every night; he ate just what he wanted and no more. He died at eighty-two—and he didn't die of overwork. His was a perfectly natural death.

CURED MEAT BEST FOR SUMMER

A dog may eat meats all his life and die of old age. The ox may do the same on a vegetarian diet exclusively. But man is a very complex, highly organized being, and requires wide variety to properly nourish his body. He must have both animal and vegetable food, properly balanced. Meat is not the only animal food; all dairy products are animal.

Fresh meats must be diminished or eaten with great care during hot months. I saw a fat old man buying two pounds of fresh pork sausage the other evening for his breakfast next morning. I bought ten cents worth of chipped beef—and I am a fat old man myself! I had as lief swallow a hot flat iron on a warm morning as two or three "pats" of fresh pork sausage!

Cured meats are preferable in hot weather; my reason for this belief is that the curing takes much of the nitrogenous element out of it, and leaves the lean cells, which are provided with enough blood-restoring elements to restore energies that have been in part exhausted by the day's toil. Meats, from the amount of combustion necessary to appropriate them to our needs, are heat-producers, and fresh meats produce more heat than cured meats. It requires more systematic outlay to digest fresh meats—more of potential energy; and this is not conducive to good feeding in hot weather. A moderate portion of cured meat once a day supplies the need of the body and is much more comfortably borne.

Another argument against excess of fresh meats is that the strong juices in meats—those characteristic of the animal slaughtered—are hurtful, if not adaptable to the human body. The more of the native juices that are removed by curing, the better for us.

AN ODD BLEND

The manner in which some radio programs are conducted reminds us of an incident of some years ago.

A patent medicine company offered to supply hymn books without cost to the pastor of a poor congregation. The books were to contain advertisements on the front and back pages, it was explained, but they would be couched in phrases of proper dignity. The pastor examined the books and accepted them. He distributed them among the members of his congregation and at the next service asked that hymn number 197 be sung.

All went well through the first verse but in the second the congregation was singing: "Hark, the angel voices sing; Johnson's pills are just the thing. Angel voices meek and mild; two for man and one for child."

One need not stretch his imagination unduly to find comparable situations in radio advertising today. In fact, there appears to be in many instances a deliberate effort to interpose advertising references in such a way that seem to be a part of the entertainment or informative program. The more thoughtful radio advertisers avoid this, realizing that tactics of this nature are offensive and in the long run detrimental to the sponsors.

BULL DOWNS HORSE

A bull and a horse, the property of le Roux, a farmer of French Hoek, South Africa, have broken a lifelong friendship to engage in mortal combat. They had always shared a field and were great friends. Suddenly they both "saw red" and dashed at each other, with lowered heads. The bull won.

"Archimedes," read the schoolboy aloud, "leaped from his bath and shouted, 'Eureka! Eureka!'"

"One moment," said the teacher, "what is the meaning of 'Eureka'?"

"'Eureka' means 'I have found it,'" said the boy.

"Very well. What had Archimedes found?" questioned the teacher.

The boy hesitated, then ventured hopefully, "The soap, sir."

The dear old soul watched the gaily-clad cowboy dexterously swinging his lasso in the grounds of the circus.

"What a long rope," she said at last. "What do you use it for?"

"Waal, lady," he replied, "when I'm out West on the ranch I use it for catching cows."

"Catching cows!" she echoed. "How very interesting. Tell me, what bait do you use?"

Trans-Atlantic Air Route

PLANS for the establishment of a trans-Atlantic airplane mail and passenger service has advanced a step nearer realization.

Sir Phillip Sassoon, under-secretary for air, announced in the British House of Commons details of the projested set-up for the service which will link Great Britain, Canada and the United States.

A joint operating company will be incorporated at the instance of three companies, nominated by the governments of Great Britain, Canada and the Irish Free State. Imperial Airways, which operates routes from Britain to South Africa, India and the Far East, is the United Kingdom's nominee.

Pan-American airways, a United States concern, will co-operate in operation of the service. In return for landing rights in the United States, Pan-American will be given landing facilities in Britain, Canada, the Irish Free States and Newfoundland.

The United Kingdom will finance the undertaking in its experimental stages. Later the joint company will receive an annual subsidy to which Canada will contribute 20 per cent subject to a maximum $75,000.

Sir Phillip said the direct route via Newfoundland and Canada was preferred at present, but during winter months the service may be operated via Bermuda.

France Uneasily Eyes Spanish Fighting

FRANCE is casting an uneasy eye on the great drama in Spain. News from across the Pyrenees as garnered from Spanish radios, press dispatches and the stories of refugees and repatriates conflicts at almost every point. Opinion in France is sharply divided. Left wing supporters of the Blum Government see in victory for General Franciso Franco, leader of the rebels, the establishment of a new Fascist state, which would give France a third frontier to watch. It would mean, they claim, a Mediterranean victory for Mussolini, threatening the communications between France and her colonies, and would put a coping stone on the close understanding between Italy and Germany.

The French democracy would then have to face active Fascism on all her frontiers except that of Belgium.

The Spanish government is reported to have summoned shop girls to the colors and conscripted Spain's merchant marine in swift moves against the growing threat of Fascist dictatorship.

Shop girls, bull fighters, mountaineers, laborers, it is said, all were called to fight for the republic. The merchant marine was taken over to bolster the Spanish navy.

Three Italian bombing planes, of a squadron of six which French authorities at Oran, Algera, declared were flying to Spanish Morocco, were forced down in French North African territory. A fourth Italian plane was forced down in the sea. Another crashed in Algeria and two of its crew were killed. French authorities said this plane was equipped with machine guns.

Roosevelt in Canada

SPEAKING atop the historic heights of Dufferin Terrace, in Quebec City, as the first President of the United States to pay an official visit to the Dominion of Canada, President Roosevelt held up the long and friendly intercourse between the two countries as a prime example of the "good neighbour" policy which he has sought consistently to extend throughout the Western Hemisphere as an object lesson to the world.

His host Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada, and Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who spoke before him, had expressed sentiments as deeply profound, and the former, as spokesman of King Edward VIII, inserted into the formalities of his welcoming address a tribute to President Roosevelt as "one of the major forces today in the statesmanship of the world."

President Roosevelt expressed the hope that King Edward VIII would be able to visit the United States should His Majesty make a trip to Canada in 1938.

REMINISCENCES — ANECDOTES

PARSLEY'S PARGRAPHS

FORECASTS — — — CRITICISMS

Though the boys don't really become football conscious until about the time the frost is on the pumpkin, still there are thousands of earnest minded zealots throughout the country who get that way by haying time. Early August days generally find the brain trusters of colleges, first line clubs in Big Four, Ontario Football Union and the staff corps of leading high school and prep institutions getting into line in the locker rooms of golf clubs or other odd places of rendezvous lining up their talent in speculative fashion or playing that odd checker-board game of tick-tack-toe which is the common affliction of bootballers everywhere.

* * * * *

"I tell you," says Mr. A. to Mr. B. "this guy who is going to coach our club has a play. He beat Argoes with it back in '34. He drops the middle wing back. He's a fast man. Then he deploys his strength to the strong side sending the spare backs he doesn't need in the manouver up there.

The ball comes out. The quarter drops back and flattens out as if for a pass. Then all of a sudden, he shoots that ball to the loafing middle wing and, whingo! He raps through the short side like a battering ram or the famous Trojan Horse free-wheeling into action. He rips off ten or twelve yards, occasionally shakes clear and into the blue and from then on it's a romp back to their goal line. The pass defense is fooled and they don't stop him until he reaches the safety men. Often he gets away from them too, lets go the clutch to the promise land for a touch down"—and so on, etc., etc.

* * * * *

Football is like that, the boys generally want to talk about it. Forced into silence through the spectre of ridicule they keep quiet for a few months while hockey and baseball hold the spotlight of sports but once there is even a sign of a chill in the summer air even though it be one of those odd late July or early August days which not even the oldest inhabitant can explain, these addicts are at it again.

* * * * *

Cal Hubbard, now a National League Umpire then a "caller" in the international would yarn away for hours before and after the game. Sometimes there would be disputes down on the field. There were occasions when Hubbard in his umpirical dignity chased Shag from the park. Yet on their next meeting there would be the slightest reference to this unpleasant episode.

* * * * *

With a casual "Hello Shag, hullo Cal," they would go right to work with their game of noughts and crosses doping out football plays again.

* * * * *

One time in the office at the Montreal ball park a newspaper man happened in when they were talking football. He was drawn into the discussion. They were talking up line-players' technique. Eagerly the newspaper man asked if the professional football stuff was so hardboiled as many of the fans fancy.

"In deliberate rough stuff it isn't," said Hubbard, who is playing coach for the Green Bay Packers, one of the outstanding professional football clubs in the middle west of the United States. Yet in sheer ruggedness and pugnacity pro football in the United States is very likely the most fiercely fought game in the world."

* * * * *

Hubbard explained that practically every man who came into professional football was a stand out college player at his position. Usually he was tossed into a squad where many of the players were several years his senior. Most of them were out-and-out professionals who had made athletics their career. They operated in baseball or wrestling when they were between football seasons. They could hand it out and they could take it.

* * * * *

Many of the lads who practised in the wrestling arts had their trick holds and the elbow smash was one of their fine bits of legerdemain on the line.

* * * * *

"How do you mean legerdemain?" said the callow scribe.

"Like this, you're down on the line. You want to smash through when you're ordered to charge on the play by the signal given in the call or huddle. Your check in front side-steps and you think you're really going places. Then all of a sudden . . . Smash, he hits you like that."

* * * * *

The scribe blinked and reeled away, crashed through the glass office partition as Hubbard raised his arm and smashed him across the chest with an upward cut across the chin and nose. The chin felt as if it was hanging by slim threads of sinew. The nose felt as if it were a beet root dripping red gore. The ears stung and rang and the brain reeled and spun.

* * * * *

The newspaper man picked himself up off the floor and dusted his clothes after first making sure he was all in one piece. There was a chuckle from two old maestros of the football wars, Cal Hubbard and Frank Shaughnessy. There was no blood drawn, no scars or bruises, just a numbing influence upon the reflexes.

* * * * *

I know, the newspaper man was me.

Sister Susie Says

LEARN HOW TO SAVE DROWNING PEOPLE

The other week we talked about the different swimming strokes that could be used, and so this week we will confine ourselves to the various ways people can be saved from drowning.

The first thing to remember, however, is that even the strongest swimmer can take cramp and need assistance, and it is the boy or girl who know how to use their heads and THINK CLEARLY of what has to be done, how far it is from the shore? How these tides and currents can be made to help? It is thoughts like these that often make the difference between success and failure, and don't forget, failure to think clearly sometimes means that two are drowned instead of none.

Now there are five recognized ways to save drowning people and each has its particular use.

The first way is when the person you are trying to save is insensible and lying face downward, turn them over on their back and come up behind their shoulders. Place the palms of your hands over the rescued person's ears. Bend your arms so as to bring the other person close to you, then swim with whatever tide or current there may be.

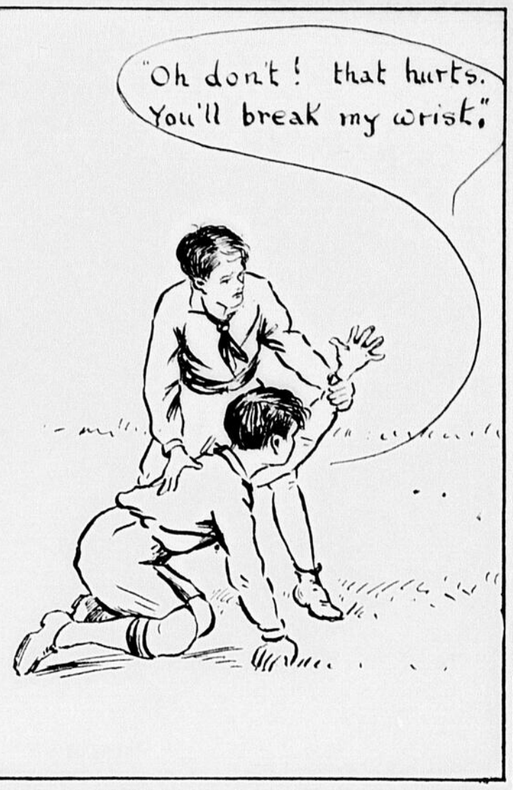
The second way is when the person you are saving is inclined to struggle. Approaching from behind, grasp the patient just above the elbows, fingers uppermost. Pull back the arms until they are almost locking at the shoulder, then holding the patient close to you, swim to safety. The reason for holding a person close to you is to afford better control and to prevent the wash of your own leg action coming up between the two of you, thus making breathing more difficult.

The third way is when the drowning person is struggling violently, on coming up behind him push your arms right through between his arms and body. Next bend your arms placing them on the patient's chest thus lifting and locking his arms with your own. If the struggles continue, just hold on and wait. You will not have to wait long. The more kicking that is done the better, it will help to keep you up. Don't get panicky and you will win through.

The fourth way is when you have to help a good swimmer that has not lost his nerve. In this case you do not have to approach the patient from behind. Tell the person to lie on his back with arms outstretched, and to place one hand on each of your shoulders. Now by swimming the breast stroke and remembering to press well down with your hands you will find that both of you move through the water quite easily and with a minimum of effort.

The fifth way is for use if you happen to be a side-stroke swimmer. Place your arm over the patient's shoulders—bringing it across their chest and under the armpit. If you swim on your left side, get the patient over on their left side too. Place your right arm over their right shoulder and under their left arm—then swim your side-stroke.

Next time you go in for a swim practise some of these methods on your friends, you never know when you will be called upon to use them and although they sound easy they should be practised until you are sure and confident that you have become an accomplished life saver.



This week our artist has given us two puzzles in one. The first represents that part of a car only used when the car is stopped. The second represents something that is seen in almost every jeweller's window.

Last week's answer. Last week there were two boys in the illustration. Dick was not suspected by Farmer Brown but the other boy was. The reason was because he was a new boy in the community. How do you know that? Because had he lived there any length of time he would have known the difference between the church bell and the school bell.

Hemingway Jones, Reporter

By GORDON LESLIE BERNARD

PART IV

Hemingway Jones resumed his station at the window, and so missed the expressions on the C.E.'s face. These are usually worth going far to see. Then the editor spoke: his tone was surprisingly quiet and even.

"As a man, Jones," he said, "I should give you a swift one in a selected place for your confounded impudence."

Hemingway Jones hummed an operatic fragment.

"As an editor I should fire you out of the office for the sake of discipline."

Hemingway Jones hummed louder.

"As a brother newspaperman, who loves writing for its own sake, I'm going to . . . ahem . . . shake your hand, if you'll . . . er . . . condescend."

Hemingway Jones' humming stopped abruptly. His jaw dropped. He swung around on his heel. He said: "You mean it's not bad?"

"Bad? Man, dear, it's classic! I'm giving you a front page spread, and sticking your name to it. Gad, man, I'd give a lot to have written that thing myself!" Gruffness came to him again, to cover his shame at this unusual outburst. "You young idiot," he charged, "why couldn't you give me a chance to say so instead of flying off the handle that way? You ought to be kicked downstairs!"

"You've said it!" declared Hemingway in quick repentence. "Better call in Gibbie—he'll be glad to officiate."

The C.E. actually grinned.

"I'd prefer to handle the matter myself," he said; "now look here, Jones, I'll admit I was prejudiced against you at the first, but I hope I'm big enough to give a man a square deal on his merits. Now about this resignation business . . . if you'll . . . er . . . reconsider, I thought of putting you on special feature work exclusively. How about it?"

Hemingway Jones smiled first at the C.E., and then—though differently—at his stenographer.

"It listens good," he confessed. "Besides, I wouldn't want to deprive the 'Spectator' of the valuable services of both myself and . . . Miss Hewson . . . don't blush, my dear—I'm sure Mr. Williams will approve my choice of a wife as much as I have, from the first, approved his choice of a stenographer. Also, I propose to put this special feature stunt across or bust!"

"Good!" declared the C.E. with his hand on Hemingway's shoulder. "And . . . er . . . congratulations both . . . though you've got good nerve, young man, stealing my stenographer this way."

"Thanks," returned Hemingway Jones. "Besides, there's this about it too. If I'm to make good in this game I'll need a lot more inside experience than I have yet. You see,"—it may be forgiven him that he affected a yawn at this point, and that a touch of his old impudence bubbled up—"you see, I've just taken over the plant!"

Dialogue later between C.E. and M.E.

C.E. "Tell me—have I been dreaming, or is it true?"

M.E. "You mean Hemingway Jones?"

C.E. "Aye."

M.E. "True—confound his impudence! Down comes old Josiah Hemingway this morning—remember him?—used to be Managing Editor of the 'Post'—made a lot of money—retired. This is his nephew it seems—confound these nephews—what?—save me from my relatives, I say. Anyhow, down comes old Josiah this morning. 'My agents,' he says, 'have been negotiating for this plant the last month or so. They hold an option. I wish to take it up. You might get your people together and we'll put the deal through.' 'Ha!' I says, 'glad it's you, Josiah, and not a stranger. Going back into the old game, eh?' 'Me?' he says, laughin, 'not much . . . too old, by gad, or I would! Just clip coupons now. No,' he says, 'nephew of mine—bright lad but flighty—wanted to break into game—told him go to it—if he could get reporter's job on this staff and hold it without any influence from me for sixty consecutive days, I'd take over the plant for him and finance the deal. Never thought for a moment he'd do it, good joke I thought—up he comes last night—presents his fiancee to me—dashed fine girl—one of your stenographers I believe—says he's pulled off the sixty day stunt—so here I am.' 'What d'ye know about that?'"

C.E. "Good stuff!"

M.E. "What—that callow cub? He'll throw the whole works out of kilter in less than a fortnight."

C.E. (Dryly) "He's just accepted a job in his own establishment on special feature work so as to learn something more of the innards of the business. You'll find a little thing of his on the front page today. It appeared in the early edition, and Gibbie's been busy ever since trying to stem the tide of people bringing in contributions for the Rosenberg family."

M.E. "Bless my soul! I was going to ask whose stuff that was. I—er—thought of doing a little something for the family myself. Well, well—you don't say!"

C.E. (still more dryly) "I reckon Hemingway Jones will go far—if he isn't hung!"

I was passing through the lobby on the way out to lunch when Gibbie beckoned to me. His manner was very confidential and he seemed not a little worried.

"Lookahere, sir—it ain't true now, is it, what they're sayin' about this . . . ah . . . about Mr. Jones?"

"Gospel truth, Gibbie," I told him.

Then Gibbie did something I should never have credited had I not been a personal witness. He spit on the sacred floor of the lobby.

"There's just one thing I have to say, sir," he averred solemnly. "I'll take no orders from the likes o' him. No, sir, nutty—that's what—" I saw his jaw drop suddenly, and turned to seek the cause. Hemingway Jones was approaching, talking confidentially with the Managing Editor.

"Oh, see here, Wellington," said Hemingway, "you might run up like a good chap and tell Miss Hewson I'll meet her at the Regent Cafe for afternoon tea at five."

"Yes, sir," said Gibbie, respectfully—and went.

WATERFALL STAMPS

Niagara Falls has been pictured by the United States in 1922 on the 25 cent green stamp that is still current. This view was taken from Goat Island that separates the American from Horseshoe or Canadian Falls.

On the 20 cent stamp issued last year by Canada to augment the special Jubilee set is shown another view of these majestic Falls, taken from the promontory opposite. This takes in the entire falls, both American and Horseshoe.

To commemorate the opening of the bridge across the Zambesi River, a special stamp was issued by Rhodesia illustrating Victoria Falls. These are only half as wide as Niagara but more than twice as high. The water does not drop directly down into a basin, but pours against the opposite cliff which in turn reflects it back to the gorge below. The water is dashed into fine spray and the natives have named Victoria Falls "the smoke that roars."

The train which carries one across the bridge stops on its way from Capetown to Cairo in order that tourists may wander about half a mile from the track to see the falls.

Another interesting waterfall pictured on postage stamps is that of Kaieteur, in the jungle of British Guiana. The water drops over a precipice 741 feet high almost five times as high as Niagara.

On her "woodlock" set of 1834, Switzerland pictures two famous waterfalls, on the 3 centime stamp is the Staubbach Falls in Lauterbrunnen Valley.

On the 30 centime denomination the Rhinefalls at Schaffhausen is shown.

Charlie Chipmunk's ADVENTURES

Lady All Alone's Party

By MARGARET DOUGLAS

Dear Lady All Alone was so excited! She had never given a big party before, and now the party day had come, and the little House looked so sweet and friendly for all the candy windows were smiling and the front Door just couldn't keep still, but kept jumping up and down and even the dear little pink sugar chimnies were dancing all over the gingerbread roof. Cuthbert the cat sat in the garden staring at Princess Priscilla with one of his green eyes while the other kept watching for mice.

Cuthbert's tail was very tired, for it had been dusting the furniture all morning, and now it was sulking and wouldn't wave, and Cuthbert got crosser and crosser, for what is the use of having a long bushy tail if it won't even bother to brush the naughty flies off?

Princess Priscilla was tired too, for she had been dressing up the garden with ribbons, and her little lips were all sticky with licking the pretty lollipop flowers.

She sat on a soft cushion, made of rose leaves, her back leaning against a kind little tree covered with chocolate apples.

And this is the song the little Tree sang to his darling Princess:—

"You're just the very nicest doll
That ever I did see!
You have such lovely manners,
And you're always sweet to me.
Let's wish a wish dear Princess,
Let's hope that it comes true
For then you'll be a Chocolate Tree
And I'll be Darling You!"

Princess Priscilla made a very cross face and the poor little Tree began to cry and Mother Duck made her Ducklings stand in a row with their beaks wide open to catch the big chocolate drops.

"I don't want to be a Tree and I'm going away with my ownest Miss Buffles and I'm not coming back ever any more." The little chocolate tree cried harder than ever and the greedy Ducklings were so glad and just then Princess Priscilla gave a scream and Cuthbert's Tail waved and the Lollypop Flowers threw candy kisses up in the air, for here was Mr. Clopetty prancing up the path with Miss Buffles and Charlie Chipmunk on his broad white back.

They were followed by all the forest children who were laughing so loud that Lady All Alone came running out to welcome the happy guests.

"Darling everybodies," cried Lady All Alone, while Mr. Clopetty sat down to let Charlie and Miss Buffles slide off his back. And all the forest children clapped their hands while Willie Wolf sat smiling throwing kisses to his dear Miss Buffles who had no time to look at anybody but her own darling Princess, whom she was hugging and kissing she was so glad to see her again. Then the fun began and everybody went into the house with their party faces on. There were tables just crammed with lovely things to eat, sponge cake, rabbits, and candy potatoes and a great big Chocolate Pussy Cat that Mister Mouse and all his ten twinnies were dreadfully scared of. There was a funny little pink sugar Puppy that went prancing all over the house and when you pulled its tail the loveliest lemonade came out of his mouth.

Suddenly growls and scratchings were heard outside and Lady All Alone began to cry.

"It's the bad robbers," she sobbed. "They'll eat everything up and spoil the party, for this is Monday."

"No, they won't," said Willie Wolf, trying to look as if his mouth were filled with great fierce teeth, "Charlie and I will scare them."

Going to the Front Door that had shut and locked itself whenever it heard the bad Robbers coming Willie opened it a teeny, weenie bit and Bad Bear and Wicked Weasle squeezed themselves inside and then roared so loud that the Little House shook with fright for the Door shut on their Tails and they couldn't get in or out.

"We'll be good," they cried. "Darling Clever Willie and Charlie, open the door wider and let our tails out and we won't be bad Robbers any more."

So Willie and Charlie opened the door wide and let their tails out and weren't the Bear and the Weasle glad? They danced for joy and kept kept saying, "If you please," and "Thank you." They washed the dishes and tidied up the house for all their badness had gone away and everyone began to like them very much and nobody was afraid of them anymore.

They put on clean aprons to wipe the littliest children's noses with and polished the pots and pans with their tongues for their poor tails were still very sore. And then they did tricks and walked on their heads and behaved like little gentlemen and never took a thing out of the pantry once.

Lady All Alone was so pleased.

"I won't be scared of Monday's anymore," she said going about and kissing everybody. Then when the party was over the Magic Man came with his Pink Balloon and all the children got in and kissed their hands to Lady All Alone. They went sailing through the air tired and happy, while ten Baby Moon Beams went on in front, lighting the way home with their tiny lanterns and soon all the children were sound asleep in their little beeds dreaming about the lovely party.

Farm Notes

With the crop predicaments facing so many farmers in Ontario, the Canadian West and many sections of the United States, cattle in this fortunate section of Canada are in demand. Our dairy farmers stand to profit by the increased prices that are bound to follow for milk and produce. One cattle buyer who recently visited Huntingdon stepped the price of good commercial cows up $10 a head. According to the 1931 census of cattle in the Beauharnois District they numbered 68,906. This figure has undoubtedly greatly changed since 1931, but in any event the livestock wealth in this District to-day has greatly increased over what it was two months ago.

Reports from across the line state that potatoes here will command a price of $140 an acre and there will be plenty of market for them. Farmers from Boston visiting in this area recently, predicted all the hay, 1st, 2nd and even 3rd grade, would find a ready market in the States and at very high prices, too.
