HISTORIC EVENT AT QUEBEC.

Duke of Cornwall Reviews the Flower of Canadian Militia on the Plains of Abraham.

SOUTH AFRICAN MEDALS PRESENTED

The Fete at Quebec Continued—The Duke's Reply to the Address of Welcome.

Quebec, Sept. 17.—(Special.)—Despite unfavorable weather, today, military review was a decided success. All Quebec and its visitors seemed to have turned out to see the historic event which, also, marked the transference of the Plains of Abraham to the city of Quebec and its dedication as a public park.

Of course, the Plains, large as they are, could not hold all who wanted to see the review, but as many as the men who kept the parade ground clear would allow upon the field forced entrance, and others had to content themselves with following the troops as far as they could along Grande Allee and other streets leading towards the plains.

Several members of the royal party remarked upon the present happy condition of affairs when the descendants of those who at one time met in mortal combat upon the historical plains could parade shoulder to shoulder, in military costume on the same soil.

The whole parade was under the command of Major General O'Grady, Halcyon, C. B. D. S. O., with Lieut.-Col. the Hon. Matthew Aylmer, Adjutant General, second in command.

As soon as inspection was over a march past was commenced.

The cavalry went past in column of troops, field battery in line at reduced intervals, gentlemen cadets, garrison artillery, and infantry army, medical corps in column. Each brigade of infantry was led off by its band and the infantry again marched past after forming a mass of quarter column by brigades and changing ranks. The cavalry and artillery then trotted past and the whole took review order for the presentation of medals.

The first decoration conferred was the Victoria Cross, won by Lieut.-Col. Turner, for his gallantry in field, and then came the South African medals, which were distributed according to the arranged programme, officers according to rank receiving medals and then men.

After this interesting feature of the proceedings which was constantly interrupted by the cheers of the crowd, the troops marched off to their respective quarters and the great day was over.

Quebec, September 17.—Their Royal Highnesses the duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York have landed, and have met with a reception that left nothing to be desired.

Their Royal Highnesses met with a typical Canadian welcome, whose heartyness and loyalty could not be denied. It was not the flags by day and the lights by night alone that proved how the people were to see their future King and his wife. It was the cheers and applause that greeted them all along the line of march and the spontaneity of the pleasure which everyone evinced. The children might sing in chorus; the guards might present arms, and the bands might play the National Anthem, but still more significant was the readiness of the crowds to cheer and their loyal attitude, which no one commanded and no one could enforce.

It was, moreover, a crowd of the most varied and representative character. Merchants from Montreal rubbed shoulders with the habitant of the country districts; the factory worker of St. Roch's stood beside the ship laborers of the Goves and well-known faces from the Townships and the West were met at every turn.

DUKE'S REPLY TO CIVIC ADDRESS

The Duke of Cornwall and York replied as follows to the civic address of welcome presented him yesterday on arrival at the Parliament Buildings.

Gentlemen,—The Duchess and I desire to express to you our heartfelt thanks for the loyal and kindly sentiments contained in your address. At the same time we wish to acknowledge with gratitude the hearty welcome accorded to us by the vast crowds which today throng your beautifully decorated streets. I shall hasten to communicate to my dear father, the King, your assurance of attachment to his throne and person, and your sympathetic allusions to the grievous and irreparable losses which His Majesty and our family have recently sustained. The affectionate tribute to the memory of our late beloved Queen, and to that of the lamented Empress Frederick of Germany have deeply touched me. It is a great pleasure to find myself here again, for a third time, and that on this occasion the Duchess is with me, and that we together will enjoy the memorable associations and natural beauties of this ancient city, and its picturesque surroundings. And it is my proud mission here in the ancient historic capital of Canada, hallowed, as you say, by the struggles of nations and enriched by the blood of heroes such as Wolfe and Montcalm, to come amongst you as a token of that feeling of admiration and pride with which the King and the whole Empire have seen the sons of the Dominion rallying round the flag of their common allegiance.

They fought to secure for their fellow subjects the same freedom and liberty which they in the past have secured and vindicated for themselves. The blood of your gallant sons has not been shed in vain, for posterity will never forget that of the Canadians was recorded their magnificent tenacity in attacking, and that to them credit was immediately due to that white flag which on the anniversary of Majuba day fluttered over the Boer lines of Paardeberg. May we not take heart in the belief that the blood shed on that and other battlefields in South Africa may like that shed by your fathers in 1775 and 1812 weave fresh strands in the cord of brotherhood that binds together our glorious Empire. I rejoice to hear that the depression from which your city and port have so long suffered has now passed away, and I earnestly trust that future prosperity may crown the enterprise and industry of its citizens. I take this, the first opportunity to express in common with the whole civilized world my horror at the detestable crime which has plunged into mourning the great friendly nation on your border and has robbed the United States of the precious life of their first magistrate in the midst of the fulfillment of the high and honorable duties of his proud position. The Duchess and I share with you to the fullest extent the feelings of sympathy which you have manifested towards a people with whom we are connected by ties of kinship and national esteem and our hearts go out to the widow and bereaved family of the late distinguished and beloved President.

His Royal Highness spoke in a clear pleasant voice, which could be easily heard all over the house. His manner was easy and natural and he gave a most pleasant impression of sincerity and straightforwardness. With his reply the formal part of the proceedings came to a close. Sir Wilfrid Laurier presented the four bishops, Hon. R. Turner, Mayor Guay, of Chicoutimi, Lady Laurier, Miss Jetté, and a few others to the Duke.

Addresses were also accepted from the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the Mayor of Chicoutimi, and the Lorette Indians, but were not read or replied to. The Indian address was brought by two chiefs and a squaw. The chiefs wore great plumes of feathers on their heads, blanket coats with wampum ornaments and silver armlets, and the squaw was also dressed in a blanket costume. They were all three, presented to their Highnesses.

The procession was then re-formed and made its way amidst the cheers of the people and the singing of the choir to the Citadel. Here, lunch was served to their Royal Highnesses, their excellencies and their suites.

In the afternoon Laval University was visited, where the Duke received a deputation, was presented to an address, and made a reply.

He withdrew his plea of not guilty, pleaded guilty and was fined $5 and costs or 30 days in jail.

Subsequently he chose a speedy trial, pleaded guilty and was, at the request of the railway authorities, allowed to go on suspended sentence. ### G. T. R. Station and Three Other Buildings Burned—Origin of Fire Unknown—Loss Upwards of $15,000.

South Durham, Que., Sept. 17.—(Special.)—This place was visited by another disastrous fire, last night, and it is a singular coincidence that the fire which destroyed Roy's Hotel and other buildings occurred just a year ago, almost to a day, it being on the 20th of September.

The blaze, last night, originated in the barn at the rear of A. Pelchat's carriage shop from some cause which has not yet been explained. It spread with great rapidity.

The following properties were destroyed:

A. Pelchat's carriage shop, with contents, which included a hearse valued at $600.

Grocery and liquor store of J. B. Pharand, with contents.

Z. Blain's tin shop.

Grand Trunk Railway Station.

The total loss will be about $15,000, partially covered by insurance.

A horse belonging to G. M. Norris, cheese inspector, which was in the barn where the fire originated was burned.

The Richmond fire brigade was summoned and arrived at 2.30, but too late to render any services.

P. Roy's Hotel was threatened and the guests left hurriedly, some of them not stopping to dress until they were outside.

There was great excitement in the village and all took hold with a will in the effort to stay the progress of the flames.

AN ACCIDENT AT QUEBEC.

Steamer With Canadian Ministers on Board Caught Fire—Mr. Tarte and Others Badly Burned.

Quebec, Sept. 17.—A very serious accident occurred during last evening upon one of the vessels cruising around the harbor. Hon. J. L. Tarte had chartered the steamer Frontenac and had invited a distinguished company to see the illuminations with him. Shortly after starting by some misadventure a number of bombs which were lying in the wheel house caught fire and at once the vessel was in the greatest peril. Hon. Mr. Tarte had his hands badly burnt and his face cut. The dress of Mrs. J. N. Greenfields, of Montreal, caught fire and she was badly burned before it could be extinguished, and had to be conveyed to the Frontenac in the ambulance. Hon. James Sutherland rushed to her rescue and was severely burned on the hands and sustained a nasty scalp wound. Dr. Borden, in the confusion, fell from one deck to the other, a distance of fifteen feet, and sustained thereby a sprain of the right ankle. Miss Fielding had her hair burnt, and Mrs. Turcotte, of Ottawa, her arms.

The whole boat was in fact in danger of catching fire, but she was quickly turned to the shore, and the lifeboat which put off to her assistance from H.M.S. Ophir was not needed. There is no reason to suppose that these injuries will have any permanently serious consequences, and the sufferers are being treated at their hotels.

Quebec, Sept. 17.—A very serious accident occurred during last evening upon one of the vessels cruising around the harbor. Hon. J. L. Tarte had chartered the steamer Frontenac and had invited a distinguished company to see the illuminations with him. Shortly after starting by some misadventure a number of bombs which were lying in the wheel house caught fire and at once the vessel was in the greatest peril. Hon. Mr. Tarte had his hands badly burnt and his face cut. The dress of Mrs. J. N. Greenfields, of Montreal, caught fire and she was badly burned before it could be extinguished, and had to be conveyed to the Frontenac in the ambulance. Hon. James Sutherland rushed to her rescue and was severely burned on the hands and sustained a nasty scalp wound. Dr. Borden, in the confusion, fell from one deck to the other, a distance of fifteen feet, and sustained thereby a sprain of the right ankle. Miss Fielding had her hair burnt, and Mrs. Turcotte, of Ottawa, her arms.

MAGOG. Sept. 17.—The foundation for the new fire hall is nearing completion and is being hurried on. This must needs be as the councillors have dallied so long with their different ideas that the winter must surely be on us before the building is ready for occupancy.

Speaking of councillors we are reminded that the place of N. C. Gendron, who retired out of disgust after the defeat of the by-law, has not yet been filled, and in consequence the board sits with but six members, including the mayor.

WHY SEYMOUR RESIGN'D DUE TO CLASH WITH CANADIAN AUTHORITIES. HE PROPOSED TO CONTROL SOUTH AFRICAN CONTINGENT.

Halifax, N.S., Sept. 17.—For a year now—since the resignation of Lord Seymour—there has been no general officer commanding the British forces in North America. The Halifax garrison has been without a "general" since his retirement. The reason for General Lord William Seymour's resignation has been a mystery. It was known that he had resigned, but why no one was aware. The story of the trouble has just been made known in this city. The reason was that Lord William's jurisdiction as commander-in-chief of North America clashed violently with the alleged jurisdiction of General Hutton, then commanding the Canadian militia, and much as the former liked Halifax and the duties he had to perform there, he resigned rather than take an inferior position and submit to what he considered wrong. When the Canadian contingent came to Halifax for embarkation for South Africa, General Seymour naturally assumed that as commander-in-chief these troops would be under his command, and he proceeded to act accordingly; but General Hutton practically said: "No, General Seymour has nothing to do with these soldiers. He must confine himself to his own garrison, and have nothing to do with the embarking of Canadian soldiers, even though bound for war service in South Africa."

General Seymour objected and appealed to Lord Minto, the governor general of Canada, and a further appeal was made to Lord Lansdowne, secretary of war, but by him Lord Minto's ruling in support of General Hutton was confirmed. General Seymour thus found himself in a high office with nothing to do. He refused to continue in such an anomalous position, and quietly went in his resignation to the war office, the public hearing nothing of the reason. This was accepted and Lord Seymour left Halifax.

Mrs. M. Gilmour and daughter Mettie, of Montreal, came here with her eldest daughter, Mrs. A. J. Belton, upon their return from Old Orchard, and are spending a few days at the Parsonage, and in visiting their relatives, the Bachelor and Standish families.

In the absence of Rev. A. Stevens on Sunday, Mr. Vibert, a student of Bishop's College, took his duties here. Should the Rector be absent next Sunday, Mr. C. W. Mitchell is expected to take his appointments in this parish.

Farmers are digging their potatoes and are agreeably surprised to find a much better yield than they expected, with no rotter, and few small ones. The United States crop shows a light yield of potatoes all over, and there is a prospect of a high price for Canadian surplus potatoes this year.

MARKET COLUMN. Montreal, Monday Evening. BUTTER.—The demand for butter for export account was somewhat limited and business in this respect continues quiet, but a fair jobbing trade is passing. ADVERTISEMENTS. COMPTON. Mr. William Hopkins, of Compton, says: "About two years ago I was taken with Sciatic Rheumatism in my hip. I suffered all my living days, and in my leg, then in my hand, then in the small of my back, and I could not stoop to save my life. I suffered terribly. I was in bed five weeks almost helpless. When I did get up, the only way I could go was on my hands and knees. I employed two doctors, but both gave me up and did not do for any good. I saw the Great North American Indian Rheumatic & Kidney Cure advertised and determined to try it. After I used five bottles I began to get better and today I am a well man and have been for the last eighteen months, and I am thankful that I ever tried this remedy as I honestly believe it saved my life."

WILLIAM HOPKINS. Compton, Que., Aug. 6, 1901. BARFORD CORRESPONDENT. Frightful experience of one of our townsmen, Mr. C. Bergerson, is well known in this vicinity, and has been here for many years. All who know him believe what he says. Mr. Bergerson was attacked with Sciatic Rheumatism—a great sufferer. Some of his neighbors had used and been cured with the Great North American Indian Rheumatic & Kidney Cure. He decided to try it. Here is what he says: "Before I had used six bottles of this remedy, I was perfectly well and have been since, now over two years. My advice to any one having Rheumatism is to try this remedy. It is pleasant to take and cures quickly. I have ever had Rheumatism again. I shall try the same thing."

Signed, C. BERGERSON. Barford, July 20th, 1901. Price of these remedies is $1.00 per bottle, or 6 bottles for $5.00, or in lots, by mail, postage paid, 50c per bottle, or 6 boxes for $2.50, at all drug stores, or from Wm. Smith, Coaticook, Que., proprietor and manufacturer.

The Work of a Schoolmistress is very hard and injurious to health.

Nearly all schoolmistresses are pale, weak, thin, and suffer from anemia. This is principally caused by the tainted atmosphere of school rooms in which are crowded too many pupils. The body being deprived of pure, fresh air, the blood becomes vitiated and impoverished, the appetite lacks and a vile, wretched feeling is felt after each meal, then paleness appears which is nature's signal for help.

VINS MICHEL

This wonderful blood-making tonic wine instantly relieves and positively cures all diseases caused by poor blood. It is an old French wine, rich and mellow to the palate, and contains the most powerful strength-giving elements. It tones every organ and nerve in the system, promotes appetite, makes digestion easy, purifies and enriches the blood thus causing the face to brighten and recover its rosy cheeks, red lips and healthy complexion.

(Mrs. G. O. Doak, Correspondent.)

Sept. 16.—The tolling of the Church bells on Saturday morning told of the anxious hearts which, in sympathy with the great nation to the south of us, were awaiting with dread the sad tidings from the death chamber at Buffalo, that a great and good ruler had passed away. Immediately the flags were hoisted at half mast, the first one to be flung to the breeze being the Union Jack at the new Academy.

A solemn memorial service was held in the Methodist Church last evening for the late President McKinley. The sacred edifice was tastefully decorated for the occasion and was filled with an attentive congregation which was largely reinforced from the other churches. In front of the organ pipes was placed the familiar portrait of our late beloved Queen, with the English and American flags draped on each side, and from the central point festoons of black were carried round the church. The pulpit and communion table were covered with the American flag. On the table the central space was occupied by a portrait of the late President, which was draped with black; streamers of red, white and blue ribbon, and small flags also forming part of the decoration, the whole being banked with flowers. On each side of this central picture were portraits of President Lincoln and Garfield, also draped in black. Bernard Post, No. 77 G. A. R. attended in a body wearing mourning badges. Then Rev. Mr. Sykes preached a most eloquent sermon, which was listened to with rapt attention, and as the congregation slowly left the church the organ pealed forth the well-known strains of the Dead March in Saul. An interesting feature of the occasion was the fact that among the decorations was a jug, containing flowers, which had been used for the same purpose at the memorial service for President Lincoln, in the first Baptist Church, in Lowell, Mass., in 1865. The jug is the property of Mr. J. N. Pierce. Nine men from Coaticook joined the battalion which went from Sherbrooke to Quebec on Saturday. They looked very fine in their tunics and will doubtless "do themselves proud" in the ranks of the Gallant 64th. Three members of the Band also went with the Band from Sherbrooke.

On Sunday last, the Rev. G. H. A. A brawny agent from St. Hyacinthe came here last week with the laudable design of quenching Richmond's twenty-three year's thirst by establishing a beer bottling establishment. After looking the ground over he concluded that the local licensees, Mr. Lariviere's Waterworks, and the St. Francis river could amply supply all the liquids required for throat irrigation.

For Nourishing and Making the Little Ones Happy.

The proper feeding and nourishing of the child just after weaning should engage the most serious attention of the mother. The great majority of prepared foods produce irritation of the stomach and bowels because of improper and unscientific manufacture. This irritation of the digestive organs develops into serious complications that often prove fatal. Malt Breakfast Food is the ideal health food for children of all ages. It is free from starchy substances, easily digested and assimilated, is richer in flesh and bone producing elements than other foods, and has a deliciousness that captivates the taste of every child. SHOT THROUGH HIS POCKET.
Mr. Fred Shurtleff, of Coaticook, who saw the President shot, says that the newspaper reports to the effect that the would-be murderer had his revolver in his right hand concealed by a handkerchief wound around the same, is not correct; that the revolver was concealed in his left hand coat pocket, that upon approaching the President he shook hands with him and pulled the trigger of the revolver with the hand and while it was in the pocket of the coat, making two holes through the garment which were visible upon examination.

"As soon as the deed was done four different persons were seized by the officers, who did not know exactly who was the guilty person. In the meantime the real criminal was down upon his hands and knees trying to work his way through the crowd. He was first seized by a negro who was near by and the officers then came to his rescue."
"The only talk the murderer made that Mr. Shurtleff heard was the muttering of the words, 'I have done my part.' He says the feeling against the criminal in Buffalo was intense and that the jail was surrounded that night by over 15,000 people who would have been glad to have got the would-be assassin from the jail and have him lynched, but the building was securely guarded by soldiers brought there for the occasion."

RICHMOND MAN SWINDLED.

A Richmond despatch says: "One of our local bakers was recently victimized by a clever Montreal sharper. He received a communication from an individual in Montreal, giving his address on St. Antoine street west, offering five cents each for flour bags. As this is a decided increase on the usual price, the offer was accepted, every available bag in the town procured, and forwarded to the address given. The money in return not being in evidence as expected, the embryo dealer in sacks, during a visit to the city, determined to investigate the matter, but discovered without much surprise that the individual had departed for parts unknown."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

Foreign Press Predicts a Brilliant and Illustrious Administration.

THE NEW PRESIDENT ISSUES PROCLAMATION TO AMERICAN PEOPLE.

London Sept. 17.—The leading articles in the newspapers take a hopeful view of President Roosevelt's traits, career, intentions and probable politics. The Morning Post says that the American people are to be congratulated on the fact that in the hour of national affliction the guidance of the Republic passes to a man who won distinction as a soldier, a man of letters and in the government of the Commonwealth of New York. The hope has long been cherished that Mr. Roosevelt would one day do important work in the purification of public life and the better organization of city government and this fact gives promise of brilliant and illustrious administration.

The telegraph, recording President Roosevelt's words when he took the oath of office, says that it is a pronouncement only to be expected from a man of Mr. Roosevelt's high reputation. He cannot always clearly remember what occurs. In this case I climbed aboard the schooner, thinking the worst of the earth had finally rotted them. I could not lift a single one of the bags out by itself on this account, but brought down a piece of sailcloth and spread it on the ground and then piled the treasure on it as I freed it from the dirt. There had been 12 bags of money, every piece of gold. I knew the value only in English currency. There were pieces I knew to have been coined in India, Spain, France, Holland and the United States, and I gave a guess at the value by the weight alone. I found the treasure about 8 o'clock in the morning, and it was after noon before I had all the money on the sailcloth. I was a stout, healthy boy, but I could not have lifted a tenth part of the total weight. I doubt if a stout man could have dragged it a foot. The first thought was to get the money to my house—a mile away. I got a stout sack and planned to carry the pile away in such loads as I could lift, but then I began to realize that I was the only person on the island the money was safe where it was as it would be in my house. I therefore filled my pockets with the larger pieces as specimens and contented myself with spreading a piece of canvas over the heap and throwing on some branches.

PRESIDENT'S ROOSEVELT'S MESSAGE.

Milburn House, Buffalo, Sept. 14.—President Roosevelt to-night issued the following proclamation:—

"By the President of the United States of America.

"A terrible bereavement has befallen our people. The President of the United States has been struck down; a crime committed not only against the Chief Magistrate but against every law-abiding and liberty-loving citizen.

"President McKinley crowned a life of earnest love for his fellowmen, of most earnest endeavor for their welfare, by a death of Christian fortitude, and both in the way in which he lived his life and the way in which he met his death, will remain forever a precious heritage of our people.

"It is meet that we as a nation express our abiding love and reverence for his life, our deep sorrow for his untimely death.

"Now, therefore, I, Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, do appoint Thursday next, Sept. 19, the day on which the body of the dead President will be laid in its last earthly resting-place, as a day of mourning and prayer throughout the United States. I earnestly recommend all the people to assemble on that day in their respective places of Divine worship, there to bow down in submission to the will of Almighty God, and to pay out of full hearts their homage of love and reverence to the great and good President whose death has smitten the nation with bitter grief.

"In witness thereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the City of Washington, the 14th day of September, A. D. one thousand nine hundred and one, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-sixth.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

John Hay, Secretary of State."

THE UNLOVED.

When winter's primrose peak,
His secret fury done,
And days are lengthening fast
Along its coast, no set of people care
To isolate themselves by taking up a residence
On the Chatham Islands.

I got down over the bows and reached the beach dry shod, and after three hours of walking about I found I had come ashore on an island about three miles in length and breadth—it being nearly square. It was covered with the verdure of the tropics, and while the trees seemed to be full of birds I saw neither serpents nor wild animals.

The schooner lay exposed to the westerly gales and seas, and it would be only a question of a week or two when she would break up or be buried in the sands. It therefore stood me in hand to get all out of her that I could before this disaster took place. I began right after dinner, and it would surprise you to know how much I accomplished in the next four days. By use of the capstan, winch and a block and pulley in the main rigging I got out 21 barrels of flour, eight of pork and beef, three of sugar and of meal besides these I got ashore all the sails, cabin furniture, cooking utensils, etc. There were axes, shovels, picks, hoes, rakes, garden seeds, carpenter's tools and a host of other things which could be handled, and I got out enough boards to make me a cabin and floor it. On the evening of the fifth day a strong wind came up from the west, accompanied by a very high tide, and instead of the schooner breaking up she floated and a current pulled her off and she drifted down the coast about a mile. She then struck on a sunken ledge, turned over and the seas broke her up.

There was no prominent point on the island where I could set a signal. I therefore contented myself with keeping a lookout to the west. Twice during the first two weeks I saw ships after off by the aid of the glass. Then six weeks passed without my sighting anything. Meanwhile I had erected my house back about 40 feet from the shore, got all the goods under cover and was more satisfied with my lot than some men would have been. I had no way of knowing whether father's brig went down in the collision or not, but was satisfied that if he escaped with his life he would make search for me.

A BURIED TREASURE

How It Was Found by a Castaway and Its Mysterious Disappearance.

My father owned the brig Panshaw, which was a tidy craft of 300 tons, built out of Australian and New Zealand ports. During the year I was 15 years old the brig was voyaging between Sydney and Wellington, a stretch of water about 1,200 miles wide. One night as we entered the strait, bounding to the west against a head wind, we came in collision with a coasting schooner running out. She had no lights set, and, as was afterward shown, all her crew, captain included, were half drunk and did not see ours. I was on lookout and saw the schooner first, but as we were close on the wind and she close at hand we could do nothing. She struck us on the starboard bow with a great crash. Our foremast went by the board, the schooner's bowsprit was twisted and the two cutters jammed and crashed for three or four minutes and then separated.

In such emergencies men act on impulse and cannot always clearly remember what occurs. In this case I climbed aboard the schooner, thinking the worst of the earth had finally rotted them. I could not lift a single one of the bags out by itself on this account, but brought down a piece of sailcloth and spread it on the ground and then piled the treasure on it as I freed it from the dirt. There had been 12 bags of money, every piece of gold. I knew the value only in English currency. There were pieces I knew to have been coined in India, Spain, France, Holland and the United States, and I gave a guess at the value by the weight alone. I found the treasure about 8 o'clock in the morning, and it was after noon before I had all the money on the sailcloth. I was a stout, healthy boy, but I could not have lifted a tenth part of the total weight. I doubt if a stout man could have dragged it a foot. The first thought was to get the money to my house—a mile away. I got a stout sack and planned to carry the pile away in such loads as I could lift, but then I began to realize that I was the only person on the island the money was safe where it was as it would be in my house. I therefore filled my pockets with the larger pieces as specimens and contented myself with spreading a piece of canvas over the heap and throwing on some branches.

I was not greatly rattled over the big find, although I knew there must be tens of thousands of dollars there. It was simply a little more anxious to sight a sail, and for the next week I did nothing but patrol up and down the shores and look seaward. I visited the money every morning and evening and now and then saved the heap over and carried away such coins as I desired to more closely inspect.

It was, I believe, on the morning of the thirteenth day after finding the money that I walked down to the water for my morning dip to see a whaling bark hove to about a mile away and one of her boats pulling in. It was the English whaling craft Grampus, and father had met her captain in a New Zealand port and asked him to call at the islands as he bore away and look for traces of me. When the schooner was there, and well, the captain came ashore. He would not promise to carry me to New Zealand under six months, as he was bound to the banks of Brazil, but he listed all my property off at a fair value and put it to my credit. When everything had been taken aboard, I showed him my pocket pieces and told him of my find. What I had brought up to the house counted up nearly $300 English money.

I started with him for the spot where the treasure was lying, accompanied by three of his men, and we reached it to find that everything had disappeared. There was the hole I had dug, there were the withered branches which had covered the heap, there the tracks of men leading down to the water's edge. I had been there at sundown the night before. During the night a party had landed and removed the last stiver of money. From whence they came, in what craft, how they knew the treasure was there, and why they sailed, all these were queries which all could put, but no one answered. A day after leaving the island the bark encountered a British gunboat, and we told her captain the story. He cruised in search of the mysterious craft for several days, but did not sight her, and all official inquiry made by the New Zealand government failed to trace anything further.

Their Charm.

"I heard you congratulating Mr. Scribner on his short stories. What on earth do you find to admire about them?"

"Their shortness."

I had been on the island for three months when I one day made a wonderful discovery. I was on the south shore, where the forest was more open and the soil composed of sand and shell, and I stopped for a moment under the shade of a tree. As I did so a small animal, only about half as large as a hare, ran past my feet and into its burrow, only a yard away. As I followed it with my eyes I saw something glitter in the fresh dirt thrown out, and I picked it up to find that it was an English sovereign. Raking over the dirt with my fingers I soon found four others, together with some small pieces of moldy canvas. I at once jumped to the conclusion that there must be a store of treasure below, and I ran for a shovel. It was easy digging there, and I had not gone down over two feet before I was throwing out more money than dirt.

The treasure had been contained entirely in canvas bags. These had been stowed enough at the outset, but the dampness of the earth had finally rotted them. I could not lift a single one of the bags out by itself on this account, but brought down a piece of sailcloth and spread it on the ground and then piled the treasure on it as I freed it from the dirt. There had been 12 bags of money, every piece of gold. I knew the value only in English currency. There were pieces I knew to have been coined in India, Spain, France, Holland and the United States, and I gave a guess at the value by the weight alone. I found the treasure about 8 o'clock in the morning, and it was after noon before I had all the money on the sailcloth. I was a stout, healthy boy, but I could not have lifted a tenth part of the total weight. I doubt if a stout man could have dragged it a foot. The first thought was to get the money to my house—a mile away. I got a stout sack and planned to carry the pile away in such loads as I could lift, but then I began to realize that I was the only person on the island the money was safe where it was as it would be in my house. I therefore filled my pockets with the larger pieces as specimens and contented myself with spreading a piece of canvas over the heap and throwing on some branches.

Inhabited and have such a sparse population now that the number is not recorded on the charts. Land being so plentiful and cheap on the island of New Zealand itself, and there being so many fertile islands along its coast, no set of people care to isolate themselves by taking up a residence on the Chatham Islands.

ODE TO THE POTATO.

All hail, O Potato
Tuber ineffable,
Vint delectable,
Esouient fryable,
Dissoluble, bakable,
Stowable, chewable,
Always agreeable,
The mainstay of Ireland,
The fatter of oratorical,
The father of tropes
And rights metaphorical.

All hail! I repeat it.
Lyonnais, Saratoga,
Jacketed, jacketless,
Warmed over, savory,
Sliced cold in the salad,
With onions and vinegar;
Drowned with the pan roast
Or soft in podridad!
Alas, for economy,
I must cut you out,
O delight of gastronomy!

All hail for the third time!
Good-bye! Au revoir!
When you come off the ladder
I'll eat you once more.
Farewell, Early Rose,
White Mountain, adieu!
Plymouth Rock and Bull Cochin,
My heart is with you!

My adjectives falter,
I mix you up with the he
But forgive the misnomer
Till I meet you again.
When I think of your feeling
I'm choked with real feeling.
With rubies and diamonds
I put you on a parity,
But a man can't eat jewels
On account of their rarity.
—H. F. Gadsby.
