Student exhibit featured at Uplands

St-Antoine Elementary teacher Michel Fauteux admires the work of his students, which will be featured along with the works of students from Lennoxville Elementary School at Uplands in Lennoxville.

RECORD CORRESPONDENT
LENNOXVILLE

The most popular art exhibit at Uplands is back again as children from Lennoxville Elementary School and École St-Antoine showcase more than 30 art works from each school based on the theme 'How can I help my community?'

The artwork was judged by Dinah Duffield, in charge of exhibitions at Uplands, Lisa Delisle, Uplands Program Manager and Lucy Doheny.

"We tried to choose one to two pieces of work from each class, so that every class has ownership of the exhibition," said Delisle.

"It's the most popular exhibition of the year with the school groups and Friendship Day. Each child will probably bring five or six people out to see it. They're very proud."

St-Antoine teacher Michel Fauteux was impressed with the students' attention to the environment.

"An important theme that came up with the students was things to do with the environment — cleaning up a park, planting trees," Fauteux said.

The teacher pointed out a picture drawn by a student concerned with clear cutting going on in the province.

Gabriel Child's 'Je plante les arbres' is full of the stumps that illustrate the after affects of clear cutting. From some of these stumps come the tiny shoots of new trees which a child is planting.

Fauteux noted the concrete gestures illustrated by the children, such as visiting the aged, visiting the sick, helping a homeless man and more.

"What I noticed is there are four things happening: concrete gestures, physical labour, gestures to do with the environment and attitudes," said Delisle.

"One picture entitled 'Being Happy' means the student will be spreading that happiness. A lot of pictures from the school had to do with clearing up vandalism, which has been a problem with the schools and at Uplands. It's all interconnected. If you're happy, you're spreading it around and helping out in the community."

The Uplands Program Manager noted the small ways in which children help out in the community.

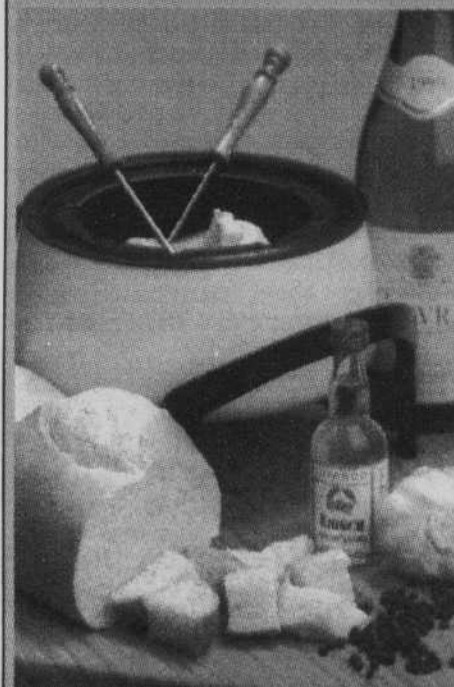

"Here's a picture about 'Saying Thank you'," said Delisle.

"It shows that you don't have to save the world. You can help in your own way by being polite. A lot of the children are helping at home. They are starting with the family and themselves and showing that the community starts with them as they set the table, wash the dishes and get groceries. After all, family is a community too."

THE CHILDREN'S ART SHOW CONTINUES TO JUNE 19 AT UPLANDS CULTURAL AND HERITAGE CENTRE. THE PUBLIC IS ENCOURAGED TO COME OUT AND VISIT ON FRIENDSHIP DAY, SATURDAY JUNE 9. UPLANDS IS OPEN THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SUNDAY FROM 1 - 4:30 P.M. FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 564-0409.

Fondues a fun way to entertain

By Shelley Boettcher
SOUTHAM NEWS

We've welcomed the return of bell bottoms, Charlie's Angels and disco. Now we want fondue, too.

Yes, the '70s are alive and kickin', even when it comes to cuisine. Once a tasty staple at wood-panelled chalets and apres-ski parties, fondue has made a comeback, and it's finding new fans.

"I've heard from so many people who say they've had their fondue pots stashed in their garage since the '70s," says Robert Carmack, author of Fondue (Periplus, $28.95).

"They kept them because they enjoy it. It was something they didn't want to get rid of."

Across Canada, people are ordering fondue in the city's trendiest restaurants. We're buying fondue pots and adopting recipes from around the world. And just like old times, we're sharing fondue with close friends.

It's a quick and cosy meal that's easy to prepare and offers lots of variations.

Plus, it's just downright fun, say fans like chef Andrew Keen, co-owner of The Living Room, a new restaurant in Calgary that features various fondues on its menu.

"Your mom always said, 'Don't play with your food,'" says Keen.

"But people like to get involved with their food. It completes the dining experience."

Missed out on that fondue experience the last time it was in fashion? Or perhaps you're not quite sure what fondue even is?

Basically, fondue is about preparing and cooking one's food at the table by dipping it, morsel by morsel, in a hot pot of oil, cheese, wine, chocolate or broth.

Traditional Swiss fondue – a Canuck favourite, popularized by the Swiss in the 1970s – is made with a blend of Gruyere and Emmental cheese, dry white wine and a wee dash of Kirsch, a clear cherry-flavoured liqueur.

Claude Claproud, national sales manager for Canada for Switzerland Cheese Marketing, says Canadian consumption of pre-packaged Swiss cheese fondue increased 17 per cent in 2000.

In fact, we import more than one million pounds of ready-made fondue cheese from Switzerland each year,

Beef isn't the only red meat that tastes great in a fondue; lamb is delicious, too. This recipe, and the Clarified Butter recipe that follows, are both excerpted from Fondue by Robert Carmack (Periplus, $28.95).

Greek Lamb Fondue (Serves six)

3 pounds (1.5 kg) lamb loin or boneless leg, trimmed and cut into 3/4-inch (2 cm) cubes
1/4 cup (50 mL) fresh lemon juice
1/3 cup (75 mL) olive oil
2 teaspoons (10 mL) dried oregano
1 teaspoon (5 mL) dried chopped garlic
1 teaspoon (5 mL) salt
oregano, for garnish (optional)
3-5 cups (750 mL-1.25 L) grapeseed or peanut oil or clarified butter (recipe follows) or ghee, melted, or a combination
4 unpeeled cloves garlic slices of crusty (or toasted) bread, mint jelly, mounted Bearnaise, anchovy sauce and other sauces for serving

- Toss lamb with lemon juice, olive oil, oregano and garlic. Cover and refrigerate two to three hours. Toss in salt and arrange on a serving platter. If desired, garnish with fresh oregano.
- Fill a metal fondue pot one-third full with oil, clarified butter, ghee or a combination; do not overfill. At the table, heat to 325-350 F (160-180 C).

Toss garlic cloves and fresh oregano, if using, into the pot to flavour the oil. Remove with a small wire-mesh skimmer when they turn brown. Discard oregano but spread garlic on the bread. Insert skewers into the lamb cubes, letting the skewer protrude by 1/2 inch (1 cm), and plunge them into pot and cook until the desired doneness, two to three minutes. Serve with dipping sauces alongside. Let oil, butter, or ghee cool completely before removing pot from table.

Clarified Butter

(Makes about three cups (750 g), 2 pounds (1 kg) unsalted butter)

- In a double boiler over simmering water, melt butter. Remove from heat and let sit so milk solids will settle to bottom. Skim off any foam. Carefully pour or ladle the clear yellow liquid through a sieve lined with cheesecloth (muslin), making sure to leave all the white solids in the pan. Store in a sealed jar in the refrigerator.

Rouille

2 egg yolks
1 teaspoon (5 mL) chili peppers
1 small Yukon Gold potato, peeled and boiled until soft pinch of saffron
1/2 cup (125 mL) extra virgin olive oil
Combine in blender until smooth.

SOUTHAM

more than any other country in the world except Germany and Holland.

Plenty of countries enjoy fondues, however, variations – such as Greek lamb fondues and Mongolian firepot dishes – are found around the world.

Carmack, an American chef and writer who now calls Australia home, says his favourite fondue-style recipe is a Vietnamese lau, made with Asian sesame oil, fresh ginger, lemongrass and scallions.

We're also sampling other global ingredients like Spanish chorizo sausage, pesto, sun-dried tomatoes and curry.

Others go for Bacchus fondues (where the meat is cooked in wine) or bourguignon. (Sometimes referred to as Burgundian, it basically means meat cubes fried in hot oil).

Hot oil? Melted cheese?

Not every fondue recipe includes such high-fat ingredients. Health-conscious chefs are starting to prepare some fondue recipes with hot stock, instead of oil.

At The Living Room, for instance, patrons can feast on a fondue made with a flavour-packed consommé.

"It takes a little longer to cook than oil, but it tastes just as good," says Keen.

"We're also trying lightly steamed broccoli and cauliflower as alternatives to bread in cheese fondues," says Janice Beaton, owner of Janice Beaton Fine Cheese.

It's a great way to get kids to eat their vegetables, and it looks good, too.

"Fondue isn't just about the fondue pot," says Carmack. "It's also about the array of sauces and the platters with the beautiful crudites, too."

Don't have time to fuss with dinner? Most fondue recipes are relatively quick to prepare.

But if you're looking for further shortcuts, try picking up a pre-grated and measured package of Swiss fondue. You won't have to worry about raking your knuckles, and you will have a fast and fairly simple dinner, says Beaton.

Part of the charm of fondue is that it manages to be both easy and delicious at the same time, says Carmack.

For instance, instead of messing around with candles, charcoal, or Bunsen burners, Carmack uses an electric fondue pot; he just has to plug it in and fill it up.

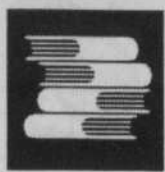

Don't have a fondue pot? Heat your fondue in a regular pot on the stove, and then use a buffet warming tray to keep it warm. Or try an electric frying pan, he says.

"If you can plug something in and get sufficient heat, then go for it," he says. "It shouldn't be hard."

Rather, fondue should be about having a good time, says Beaton.

"Fondue is so wonderful. It's such a sharing meal.

"It's a lovely way to get people around a table, enjoying a meal together."

Children mean more than just consumerism

By Catherine Dean
RECORD CORRESPONDENT

What I dislike about the book 'Kidfluence — why kids today mean business' is summed up in the first quote in the opening of the book: "That we are what we have is perhaps the most basic and powerful fact of consumer behaviour" by Russell Belk, consumer behaviour researcher. If this were true then over half the world does not count because over half the world is in poverty.

'Kidfluence' by Anne Sutherland and Beth Thompson, women heavily involved in the business of marketing to children, would have us believe that children are leading the way as consumers, as part of the "more" generation.

They would also have us believe that owning more, consuming more and wearing and eating the right things will ultimately make people happy. One person's utopia is another person's dystopia.

We, as adults plunk our children in front of television sets. We set the stage for what brands they buy, how many commercials they absorb from television, magazines, etc... To suggest that children have some kind of control over the advertising deluge around us is blatantly untrue and patently ridiculous.

That the authors of this book can put a spin on cradle-to-the-grave advertising and consumerism is unfathomable.

Peppered with simplistic pie charts and graphs talking about Baby

Boomers, Generation X and Y and N, and with anecdotal evidence, 'Kidfluence' reads like a Sociology 101 paper with its references to Jean Piaget's theory of cognitive development. The reader wades through jargon like cohort, tweens, bi-directional relationships and the Sandwich generation.

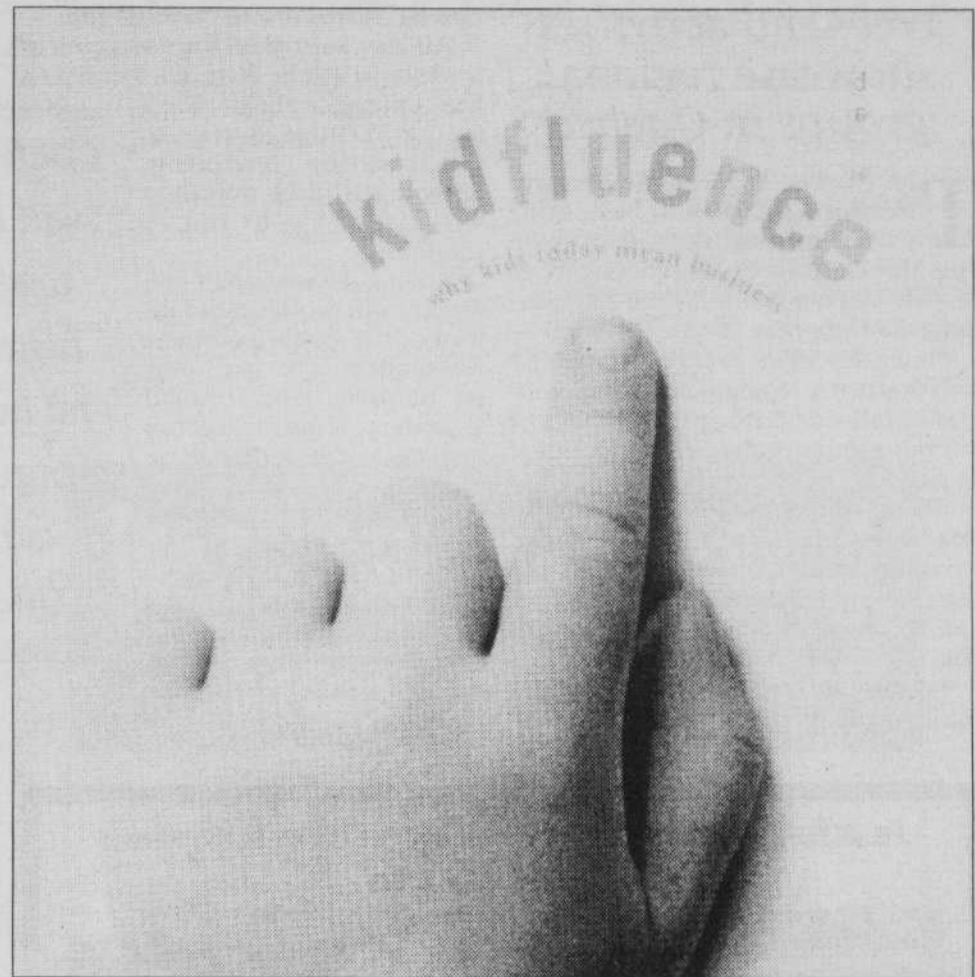

Sutherland and Thompson pay lip service to the negative aspects of child consumerism such as busy working parents assuaging their guilt through rewarding children with material possessions, the problems of trying to fit in with the crowd by wearing the right brand names and the accelerated growing up of children.

Sutherland and Thompson do however seem to find something positive in brand name association for children and in the early maturing of children which they call KAGOY (Kids Are Getting Older Younger).

The authors claim that playing music for unborn babies and young children and stimulation through flash cards etcetera promote brain activity.

Nowhere, however, do the authors address the inequities of life — the fact that people with few material possessions count too. They do not address the fact that many adults who have jobs that make lots of money are often unhappy and searching to find themselves spiritually.

Although the authors mention Kalle Lasn's book 'Culture Jam: The Uncooling of America' near the book's conclusion, I cannot imagine Lasn approving of their general thesis which seems to be that kids are paving the way in consumerism, and that affluence is the way of the future, bringing with it optimism and intelligence.

Kidfluence talks about the circumstances as to why children are into business.

'Kidfluence' is unconvincing and more than that, the thesis of the book is downright insulting to people who place importance on reading, learning, compassion and spirituality.

QAHN hosts second annual conference

Weekend activities showcase regional groups in Quebec

The Quebec Anglophone Heritage Network (QAHN) will be holding its second annual conference on the MacDonald College campus of McGill University in Sainte-Anne-de-Bellevue from June 15-17.

On Friday afternoon, the conference will feature a regional showcase, a series of talks describing the heritage of various groups in the Greater Montreal region.

Those who have watched 'Antiques Roadshow' on PBS will have an opportunity to observe Quebec's version, the 'Patrimoine à domicile' programme of the Musée de la civilisation on Saturday.

People may bring up to three articles for identification and historical evaluation by a panel of experts at no cost.

All day Saturday, four streams of workshops will be featured, focused on the conference theme 'For a Living Heritage: Research, Conservation, Planning, Show & Tell'. Each workshop will last an hour and 15 minutes.

Among the weekend's presenters will be Alexander Rford of the Quebec Gardens Association; a "virtual" tour of historic Mount-Royal Cemetery; a family history workshop; a presentation on the major archaeological work and reconstruction of an ancient Iroquois village near St. Anicet; learning to access Canada's National Archives; a presentation on Canadian Heritage of Quebec properties; workshops on conserving documents, papers, textile items and more.

The conference will bring together representatives of historical and heritage groups from across Quebec. Like the first conference, which was held in Lennoxville last June, the principal enjoyment of participants is getting together, networking and sharing their interests.

The theme speaker at the banquet on Friday evening will be Professor Graeme Decarie. He will also be presented the first award, honouring outstanding long-term contribution to the field of Anglophone heritage.

Additionally, Marion Phelps of Knowlton, will be awarded the first ever Mari-Phelps Award. Phelps is a retired teacher and long-term archivist of the Brome County Historical Society.

The annual general meeting will be held on Sunday, June 17 at 10 a.m.

The first conference of the QAHN, held at Bishop's University, Lennoxville, last year was received enthusiastically by over 110 registrants representing more than 40 heritage groups from across Quebec.

The conference was soon followed by the founding meeting of the society, which has since received a federal charter.

QAHN operates out of Lennoxville, and in the past year has set up a website, published a periodic newsletter entitled the Quebec Heritage News, held a contest for grade-school children (winning and outstanding submissions to be displayed at the Conference) and has begun to make itself known as an important resource for heritage groups, historical societies and individuals

Recognized and appreciated

MURIELLE PARKES/CORRESPONDENT

Amanda Patch, Carmen Sherrer, Marcelle Sherrer and Mary-Anne Coates were four of some 30 volunteers recently honoured at a reception given in recognition and appreciation for their outstanding effort and devotion towards Mansonville Elementary students and school. During the past year, they and others have listened to students read, acted as hostesses and chaperones at special events, worked in the library, helped with the hot lunch program, organized and carried out a French story-time program, taught recreational skills and helped build a playground and community garden. Each volunteer received a 'valuable-volunteer award' and 'volunteers-have-a-heart' pin, as well as a long-stemmed red rose (for the women) and a chocolate cigar (for the men).

The Island is a timely reminder of apartheid rule

COURTESY DONNELLY

Island Reveals plays in Toronto until June 16. The internationally renowned production challenges apartheid rule in South Africa.

By Donnelly
SPECIAL TO THE RECORD
TORONTO

When The Island exploded on the world stage 27 years ago, it was a daring challenge to apartheid rule in South Africa — daring not only in its subject matter, but in its very creation.

Defying laws that prohibited exchanges between the races, white South African playwright Athol Fugard collaborated with two young black actors, John Kani and Winston Ntshona, to collectively devise 'The Island'.

To put the play on paper would have landed them in jail on Robben Island, the infamous prison where Nelson Mandela and so many others were imprisoned. So instead they opened the world's eyes to the Island's horrors, staging it twice in Cape Town without a script, before Island went on to great success in the West.

Many may remember another of their collaboration, the nightmarishly comedic Sizwe Bansi is Dead. The production was the first of several Fugard efforts produced at the Centaur Theatre in the '70s. Thanks to Maurice Pod-brey, its long-time artistic director, Montreal became the North American home for South African theatre.

Two years ago, to celebrate the 25th anniversary of The Island, Peter Brook staged a revival with the original cast as part of a South African season at his Paris theatre.

It was a sellout and went on to triumphant runs in Stockholm and London last year. This same co-production between Great Britain's Royal National Theatre and Johannesburg's Market Theatre is now playing in Toronto until June 16.

Island's opening is powerful, needless to say. For 15 wordless minutes, John and Winston mime the daily back-breaking, spirit-destroying labour that constitutes their life on the Island.

Fighting off flies and crippled by shackles, each prisoner digs, then wheels and dumps a heavy load of sand into the hole dug by the other. The stage is bare, save for the raised platform that serves as their shared cell, and the props are minimal (blankets, rags, tin cups, a bucket of water). Yet the two finely etched characters fill the theatre with comedy and pathos.

Much of their 'free' time is spent preparing for their participation in a prisoners' show. John has chosen to adapt Antigone, the Greek tragedy by Sophocles that pits individual rights against the power of the state. The parallels between this Greek tragedy and South African reality are hard to ignore.

The funny bits come with Winston's objection to playing Antigone in a stringy wig and false breasts. Fantasy is their only defense against a will-destroying reality. By telling each other movies or creating imaginary phone chats with folk back home, they escape, if only in their minds.

The news that one of the two may soon be released — if it is not simply another jailers' trick — brings them back to reality and conflict. Neither can afford to surrender to hope or despair. Their audacious performance before captors and captives ends with Antigone's defiant declaration, "I honoured the things to which honour belongs."

As we the audience clap, the two prisoners, still shackled, hobble into the darkness.

Perhaps the tortured urgency of the youthful production has settled into a more measured middle-age pace, but this historical reminder of the resilient struggle against oppression is, unfortunately, as timely today as ever.

Sounds to soothe the savage beast

Seger's album not just another 'bad girl' ripoff

SHEA SEGER
The May Street Project
(RCA Records)

Shea Seger's breakout album is more than an Alanis Morissette ripoff; it's even more than a bitchin' Meredith Brooks single. The album, simply put, is just more than what one would expect from a largely unheard-of singer. Seger offers listeners a contemporary mix of bluegrass and pop, with a dirty, lighter rock in tracks like 'Clutch' and 'Isn't it Good'. Yet, she amazes even the most cynical music critic with an amazing range — from a slow, soothing funk in 'I Can't Lie' to a playful, light rock in 'Twisted (never again)'. Although Seger does have her similarities with artists like Morissette and Sheryl Crow, she has not missed the popular 'bad girl' revolution that raged throughout the mid to late '90's. Don't look to her to revive the once popular music genre by herself, but do look for to turn a few heads trying.

—J.Z.

DOYLE BRAMHALL II & SMOKESTACK
Welcome
(RCA Records)

If there ever was such a thing as trying new things, Doyle Bramhall II & Smokestack's newly released album 'Welcome' is a testament to the hidden treasures that one can find in sampling all genres of music. This standout blues album is as punctuated by Bramhall II on guitar, providing listeners with a delightful blues/rock sound, in seemingly endless guitar solos. With tracks like 'Life', 'Helpless Man' and 'Blame' the entire album definitely deserves a second listen. The only apparent downfall of 'Welcome' is in the vocals, specifically 'Green Light Girl'. It is often distracting, given the high quality on guitar by Bramhall II, base by Chris Bruce, drums by J.J. Johnson and other by Craig Ross. Yet, this can be easily overlooked when immersed in other songs that speak volumes about life's struggles and successes in a music that will 'Welcome' new fans.

—J.Z.

JEFFREY GAINES
* ALWAYS BE

JEFFREY GAINES
Always Be
(Artemis Records)

In a word, solid. Simply put, this is the best way to sum up Jeffrey Gaines' latest release, which offers four very good tracks on an album that features 13 songs. 'Shake It Off', 'I'll Have You', 'In Your Eyes' and 'Hero in Me' could all very well be hits, as Gaines' name will spread across the entertainment scene very quickly. Providing a dazzling array of guitar solos, tunes that — at times — actually leave you in awe, Gaines delivers a powerful album. He's mellow, then loud, touching, then attacking. The mix makes melody, the skill shown in song. If you're into a little jazz, a little rock and a little bit of a good show, look for this album.

—A.M.

FRANK MARINO & MAHOGANY RUSH
Eye of the Storm
(Just A Minute)

Legendary guitarist Frank Marino is back with a powerful album in 'Eye of the Storm'. This is vintage Marino, genuine rock'n'roll for the soul. Marino's reputation as one of rock's top guitarists was established decades ago, and nothing has changed with this album. Marino offers the same drive, musical genius, passion, precision and unbeatable energy in several tracks. Yet the fans will notice a subtle change with Marino, as time has allowed the guitarist to polish and finesse a style that has already made him a fan favourite. 'Eye of the Storm' includes everything for which the group is so widely renowned, but it also showcases a blues influence which makes it just that much better.

—J.A.

PROFESSIONAL MURDER MUSIC
Self-titled
(Geffen Records)

Parents need not worry about their teenagers committing wanton acts of vandalism when listening to 'Professional Murder Music'. The album isn't even remotely satanic, distancing itself from classic death metal groups like Pantera and White Zombie. The title is deceiving, but the music is relaxing, if you're angry. Electronic and hard rock blend gives a simultaneous tough and mellow beat; garage music is the best description.

Jolie tries to measure up to video game heroine

By Jamie Portman
SOUTHAM NEWS

Angelina Jolie has decided there's no avoiding the subject of breasts this morning. She's therefore discussing not only her own but those so prominently displayed by her title character in Lara Croft: Tomb Raider.

"It's amazing how fascinated people are with breasts," she says. "I mean really!" She finds the phenomenon perplexing, but given the fact her new movie is inspired by a video game heroine of legendary endowment, she figures it's a legitimate topic for discussion with reporters.

In fact, Jolie even admits that in the film she is, well, somewhat enhanced in this department. She delicately refers to it as just another "special effect" in a movie full of special effects.

"They (the breasts) are pretty prominent," she concedes. "But after all, she is Lara Croft. You know what I mean? This is part of her character."

She doesn't even wait for the next question, which she knows is coming.

"I'll make it real simple for you," she smiles. "I'm a 36 C. In the video game she's a double D. In the movie, she's a D. We split the difference."

Just in case anyone is interested, Jolie trots out a few more vital statistics. "My waist is bigger than (Croft's). In the game she's like a 24. I'm probably a 28. Her hips are very curvaceous. Mine are more boyish. In the movie she's much more athletic, and she has smaller breasts, but she's still Lara Croft."

Director Simon West had been burbling to reporters earlier about his star's "incredible body." Meanwhile, Jolie goes out of her way to explain that her enhancement in the film was accomplished in a rather mundane fashion - with a "padded bra."

Jolie, simply clad in slacks and a cotton T-shirt, is in a pleasant, accessible mood this morning. She's also surprisingly communicative, making far more sense than she did when she talked to reporters 18 months ago about her Oscar-winning role in Girl Interrupted. Back then, she left journalists in despair with her apparent inability to finish a sentence or complete a thought.

Admittedly, she's not as talkative as she was a few weeks ago when she sent the tabloids into a lather with her observations on what it was like going to bed with new husband Billy Bob Thornton. She's more circumspect this time, but she does talk about other aspects of Thornton, for example, his supportiveness during the gruelling filming of Tomb Raider, a project shot largely in England.

"Billy Bob loves me and I'm his friend, and I was so physically healthy and strong and capable and working my ass off that he appreciated how hard I was working and was proud of it." She coyly hints that Thornton understood it was a real bonus having a wife who was "stronger" and that it further enhanced their marriage. Jolie describes herself as a wife "who's always trying things and feeling kind of wild, and that's great, but that's always how we are, so nothing could have gotten better." The grey-eyed actress declines further illumination on this tantalizing point.

On the other hand, she is prepared to discuss Lara Croft's sex life. Jolie figures it's non-existent.

"I don't think of Lara having sex with anybody," she says thoughtfully. "I haven't really figured out if she ever slept with someone."

But even if Lara has a low sex drive she has other memorable qualities. She's a wealthy English aristocrat who inhabits a stately home and is as accomplished with a gun or motorcycle as she is in the art of bungee jumping. She's a lethal combatant, obsessed with honing her fighting skills so she can hold her own against adversaries who seek to thwart her expeditions into hazardous and remote locales in search of lost crypts and ancient empires.

The new Paramount film, opening June 15, confronts Lara with a new challenge: to find two halves of an ancient artifact that has been buried in space and time. Veteran producer Lawrence Gordon wonders whether the project would have gone ahead without Jolie's involvement. "We gambled and put our chips on Angelina," Gordon says. "At this stage I can't imagine anyone else playing this."

Gordon says that Jolie had a subtle understanding of what was expected of her. "Angelina doesn't play Lara as a female who happens to be in an action movie. She plays her as a genuine action lead."

Jolie says she was intrigued by the idea of playing a cult heroine who has become the most popular interactive video character in history, and she became even more determined to do the role after friends and colleagues told her she was crazy to consider it.

"Everybody told me not to do this film. They had this idea you must take yourself very seriously and not do a popcorn movie. That's stupid. You should do what you feel like doing as an artist and as an actor. I wanted to do this... yet so many people told me it was a bad career choice."

And how did Thornton react? "Billy Bob just wants me to do whatever I want to do in life."

It's little wonder she emerged from filming in superb physical shape. Jolie understood she needed to make the supreme effort to emulate a heroine whose computerized existence makes her capable of the most astounding feats.

Stunt co-ordinator Simon Crane praises her for her perseverance and especially for a bungee ballet sequence that is "totally her with no trickery."

But Jolie still hasn't figured out why Lara Croft has become such a cult figure. "I have no idea. I couldn't look at her that way. I couldn't be in the film and play her if I took her that seriously. She's just a great character and somebody I really like. She loves adventure and I think everybody has that in them. I think we all wish we could get a backpack on and land in the middle of Cambodia and learn about people and get dirty. I think that's great, and I think it's in all of us."

Remembering Kubrick

TVDATA
Director Stanley Kubrick is remembered by family members, friends and colleagues in the documentary Stanley Kubrick: A Life in Pictures, airing Tuesday, June 12, on Cinemax. Narrated by Tom Cruise, star of Kubrick's last film, Eyes Wide Shut, the film includes reminiscences and recollections by actors Jack Nicholson and Shelley Duvall (The Shining), writer Arthur C. Clarke (2001: A Space Odyssey), and fellow directors Steven Spielberg and Martin Scorsese, to name a few.

Film Countdown Special

TVDATA

Harrison Ford hosts AFI's 100 Years... 100 Thrills, a countdown of industry insiders' choices as the most exciting films in movie history. It airs Tuesday, June 12, on CBS. In the tradition of other American Film Institute countdown specials, this one has clips from the selected movies interspersed with comments from a wide assortment of stars. Ford stars in 11 of the chosen 100, more than any other actor. Not surprisingly, the most-represented director on the list is Alfred Hitchcock.

EXHIBITS

THE ECHENBERG COLLECTION of Commercial Collectibles from the Eastern Townships on display at the Art Gallery of Bishop's University until June 10. Tuesday to Sunday from noon to 5 p.m.

This summer, the Colby-Curtis Museum in Stanstead will act as a port of entry to Lake Memphremagog with its exhibition: ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF NAVIGATION ON LAKE MEMPHREMOGOG. Altogether, nine historical, heritage societies or museums around the lake, including two in Vermont, during the summer of 2001, will present different aspects of the international body of water under the general title of Lake Memphremagog, Crossroads of History and Legends. The exhibition now open at Colby-Curtis focuses on navigation on the lake, with a special highlight on a very important dugout canoe, found in the lake in 1967 and now part of the Museum's Collection, as well as on the passenger steamships that plied the "great waters" in the second half of the 19th century. The exhibition presents several important artefacts, including the anchor and two navigation wheels from The Lady of the Lake the most important steamer, built in the Clyde Shipyards in Scotland and launched in 1867.

JANNA'S GRAND OPENING EVENT - janna! opens her summer solo-exhibit, titled "Dream Weaver" Thursday June 21, 5-7 p.m. at the Beaulne Museum of Coaticook. Free entrance everyone welcome! www.jannart.qc.ca
