New Democrats announce support for Sherbrooke-Montreal train link

By Gordon Lambie

Stopping in Sherbrooke on Tuesday as a part of a tour of municipalities across Quebec, Federal New Democratic Party leader Jagmeet Singh announced that, if elected this fall, his party will commit to funding the passenger rail link between Sherbrooke and Montreal.

"A New Democratic Government will ensure that there is a train between Sherbrooke and Montreal," Singh said, explaining that the federal funding for the project, the total cost of which has been estimated at $300 million, will be drawn from an envelope of $15 billion the party is committing to infrastructure work focused on fighting climate change.

"It is clear that the environment is a priority for us and for the people of Quebec," the party leader said. "It is something very important and we need to act."

The project supported by the NDP aims to connect Sherbrooke to Montreal with stops in Saint-Jean-sur-Richelieu,

It was a beautiful and emotional day at the CIUSSS de l'Estrie-CHUS as volunteers, staff members and families of past patients gathered at Maison Aube-Lumière for the inauguration of the palliative care home's therapeutic garden. "We have them all to thank up there," said Aube-Lumière's volunteer and support services director Sylvie Bergeron, pointing up towards a vibrant blue sky. Bergeron had been rallying for the garden to come to life since 2015. Tuesday marked the achievement of that goal.

Bergeron could not hold back tears as she spoke about the project and its process. "Despite setbacks in 2016, we never gave up and we carried out this project until the last possible step. It is

HAND-IN-HAND

The Lennoxville Youth Centre

The Lennoxville Youth Center is a non-profit organization where youth ages 12 to 17 get to explore activities that allow them to become, active, critical and responsible adults. We take pride in offering a safe space where youth can actualize their potential and interact with their peers. We are one of the only two bilingual Youth Centers in all of Quebec, and have been lucky enough to offer services to the Anglophone youth of Sherbrooke and the Eastern Townships. Our center is open to all, and our door is always open to both Francophone and Anglophone youth.

At the Lennoxville Youth Center, we have a fully equipped staff trained in CPR and Mental Health First Aid. Our team of animators is present to serve as meaningful adults to our youth and provide an environment to help promote and encourage youth to follow through with their ideas and goals. Our Animators host workshops on creating C.V.'s, how to prepare for interviews, how to deal with exam stress and we even have our local police department send an officer in to talk about the new cycling safety laws and cannabis legalization as well as much more. A typical night of animation includes; playing pool, cards, board games, Nintendo Switch, karaoke, Fruit Tuesday's and many more exciting activities.

In the past our Youth Center has traveled for their annual summer trip to the Maritimes, Niagara Falls, Quebec City and even New Orleans. This year our youth have chosen to visit Ottawa. Planning these kinds of trips require our youth members to work as a team as well as work on deciding and planning what activities they would like to do that fits within their allotted budget. This shows a wonderful view of how they share leadership and use democracy in their decision making. This also shows our youth the importance of why they plan and help with fundraisers, and that if we fundraise they can make their dreams come true, and our team is there to help them achieve it.

We at the Lennoxville Youth Center would love to have you come and visit and see what our wonderful organization is like in action. If you have Questions or want to set up a date to come and check out the center you can email myself, Brooklynn Roy at dg@lennoxvilleyouthcenter.org. We are located at 168-B rue Queen, Sherbrooke, QC J1M 1J9.

Each week the Hand in Hand column gives Page 2 of the Wednesday Record to a different community group or organization working to help Townshippers across the region, allowing these organizations the opportunity to explain their missions and share news about upcoming events in their own words. Members of a group or organization working to improve the quality of life for others in the community, are invited to contact The Record to be added to the list of contributors at 819-569-6345 or by emailing newsroom@sherbrookerecord.com

Our Vital Community micro-grants recipients announced

Record Staff

Five projects from a diverse range of applicants have been selected to receive an Our Vital Community micro-grant.

The local program funds initiatives by both citizens and community organizations that support the English-speaking community of the MRCs des Sources and Val-Saint-François.

Grants of up to $500 were awarded to the following recipients:

The Municipality of Danville to organize a Forum for the English-speaking population of the MRC Des Sources on November the 5.

Alice Weare, to continue offering a Tea & Talk seniors outreach activity.

The Richmond County Women's Institute Group 92, to offer a multimedia arts workshop for women Richmond 4-H Club, to contribute to the participation of local youth in the 2019 Annual Quebec 4-H Provincial Rally.

Isabelle Gosselin, to support translation of a theatre piece that will be presented to the students at St. Francis Elementary.

The Our Vital Community micro-grant funding project is a part of a larger action plan in a partnership with Richmond, Danville, Drummondville CLC with the ETSB, CIUSSS-de-l'Estrie-CHUS, ValFamille and Townshippers' Association.

The partnership, known as 'Partners for the Vitality of the English-Speaking Community of the Val-Saint-François and Des Sources', work collaboratively to have a positive impact on the health and well-being of the English-speaking community by ensuring greater access to health, social services and community resources in English in the Val-Saint-François and Des Sources community as well as promoting the involvement of citizens and building links between them. The project received financial contributions from CIUSSS-de-l'Estrie-CHUS through the CHSSN funding by Health Canada, under the Action Plan for Official Languages in Canada, and Val-famille.

The next deadline for Our Vital Community micro-grants is September 15, 2019 for projects that will take place up to March 15 2020. ## Anglican Church to review governance structure after same sex marriage change fails

The Canadian Press

One of Canada's largest Christian denominations is considering whether to change its governance structure after a motion to recognize same-sex marriage across the Church failed by just two bishops' votes.

Some in the Anglican Church of Canada say the current system to change doctrine and policy _ which requires a two-thirds majority from three classes of delegates _ unfairly gives the most voting power to a smaller class of bishops.

The denomination's senior officers in charge of its tri-annual meeting discussing policy say the Church will look at ways it can change its governance structure between now and the next General Synod in 2022.

Cynthia Haines Turner and Rev. Peter Wall did not specify what changes will be considered, but acknowledged that many at this year's synod felt the deliberation process was hurtful and alienating.

Rev. Kevin George of St. Aidan's Anglican Church in London, Ont., who watched synod proceedings online, says he believes delegates should vote as one body, rather than in three separate classes.

He says that would give lay members of the church, as well as the clergy, more of a voice in determining the direction of the church.

Sherbrooke-Montreal train link

Farnham, Bromont, and Magog and has already received the support of those municipalities. A trip will cost an estimated $46 and should take the same time as a car trip, without any traffic.

"Everyone wins with this public transit project," said Sherbrooke NDP MP Pierre-Luc Dusseault, hailing the news as a step in the right direction from an environmental point of view, given the fact that train service would reduce the number of cars on the road. He also highlighted his party's commitment as an example of concrete action on the part of a political party to combat climate change.

"This shows the different priorities of our party and how we will do things differently with Jagmeet Singh as Prime Minister," Dusseault said.

The project currently proposed for the rail link was evaluated at $300 million earlier this week based on the use of a diesel locomotive. Asked if the plan is to support the project in its current form or with the added $100 million experts estimate it would take to make the line electric, Singh said that he is ready to look at revisions to the plan.

"Our priority is always electric transport and methods with the lowest possible impact on the environment," he said. "We are ready work with municipalities and provincial actors to have a train that will operate in the most ecologically friendly way possible."

The NDP leader kept figures vague when it comes to what contribution the party would actually make towards the overall cost, instead saying that, "we are ready to negotiate with the provincial government and municipalities on how best to move forward."

Singh identified a 1/3 split between municipal, provincial, and federal governments as a model that has worked for large investment projects in the past, but said that he is also open to other ideas.

"The most important thing is to act," he said.

The story of John Sims and the broad axe

By Taylor McClure
Special to The Record

to be the very same one who made the shoes for him in Scotland!

Sims worked in Melbourne for a little while and then headed back to Wells River and Ryegate, Vermont.

While in Ryegate, he met fifteen-year-old Helen Henderson. They married each other in 1850 and to celebrate their nuptials, they walked 150 miles back to the St. Francis Valley.

They worked as tenant farmers for many years until finally leasing their own piece of 100-acre farmland in Melbourne.

There, they gave birth to five children and taught their sons the skills they would need as farmers. One of his youngest children worked with his father's broad axe to chop wood and became highly skilled.

In 1866, John finally purchased the piece of land that he had been searching for when he made his first trip to Melbourne from Boston over thirty years ago.

He purchased two fifty-acre parcels of land in Melbourne Ridge for $300.

Sims was recognized by many as the head of the Scottish community in Melbourne Ridge and he was highly respected by those in the area. John helped out his community by keeping the peace. If there were events that were taking place where trouble could break out, Sims was there to keep things under control.

What makes Sims' story legendary is that around 30 years after he jumped ship to North America, a man he used to work with in the shipyard back in Scotland came to visit him in Melbourne Ridge. He told Sims that he hadn't killed his boss during their fight after all. The man was upright and back to work the next day!

To this day, his story continues to be passed down through the Sims family

The piece of land that Sims would buy for his farm in 1866 located on Sims road

PICTURES BY TAYLOR MCCLURE

It turns out Donald Morrison (The Megantic Outlaw) wasn't the only Scotsman from the Townships known to run from the law.

In an effort to keep the history of the Scottish community in the Townships alive, here is the story of another famous Scotsman named John Sims.

As the story goes, Sims came from Glasgow, Scotland to North America when he was only thirteen years old.

His reason for leaving Scotland is one for the history books.

Before coming to North America, Sims was working in a shipyard. One day, he got into a heated argument with his boss. They ended up getting into a fight and Sims knocked his boss out cold, his body lying flat on the ground.

Believing he had killed the man, Sims hopped the next ship leaving Scotland and ended up headed for Boston.

He arrived in Boston around 1830. He then continued on through Wells River and Ryegate, Vermont to the St. Francis Valley. Ryegate was a Scottish community so it made sense that John chose to pass through there on his journey from Boston.

Throughout his journey, he carried only two belongings: a broad axe and a sledgehammer. He knew those were the essential tools that he would need once he found a piece of land to build on.

He eventually arrived in Melbourne but there was no land to buy. Everything available had been purchased by settlers who arrived before him.

While in Melbourne Sims, by sheer coincidence, happened upon a familiar face.

When he arrived in town his shoes were completely destroyed. Sims went to see a cobbler to fix them. It turned out and it brought members of the family together.

In 2012, two groups of people from the Sims family went to the Richmond County Historical Society's archives to find out more information about their family history. They didn't know each other but both groups heard about the story of the broad axe. It was the first time they were meeting one another and it became a very special moment.

The story of John Sims and the broad axe is only a small piece of the rich history of the Scottish community in this region but it has gone down as legendary.

The broad axe that Sims carried from Boston to Melbourne, which was significant to the building of Melbourne Ridge, is currently on display at the Richmond County Historical Society for the public to view at 1161 Rte 243 Melbourne, Quebec. It is open from Wednesday to Sunday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A huge thank you to the Richmond County Historical Society for helping tell this story and bringing it to life!

Singh positive about Quebec support despite Bill 21

By Gordon Lambie

Touring Quebec in the wake of the passage of Bill 21, the CAQ government's "Act respecting the laicity of the State," NDP leader Jagmeet Singh said that he feels the bill does not reflect the Quebec he knows.

"The Quebec that I know is a Quebec that is very open and accepting," said Singh, "I know that there are a lot of people who do not actually support this law."

The NDP leader, who is Sikh and wears a turban and kirpan, a small ceremonial dagger, said that he is not concerned that the law banning religious symbols from members of the public service in the province will have a negative impact on his electoral campaign later this year, but he did note that the legislation struck him on a personal level.

"I'm really sad that young people growing up won't be able to be police officers or teachers or judges. I think they offer so much and they want to do so much to make this society a better place and I'm sad that they won't be able to do that," he said. "I felt the same thing when I was younger; that because of how

I looked or the colour of my skin, I was not a part of society."

"It makes me sad because it divides society rather than bringing it together," Singh added.

The party leader acknowledged that current polls give his party a lower level of support in the province than it has seen for the last several elections, but turned to historical precedent to argue that these numbers don't bother him.

"In 2011 before the big breakthrough for Jack Layton, we were at the same level, about 12 or 13 per cent," he said. "For us the poll that really matters is the poll on October 21, on election day.

Asked if he's concerned that discussions about his faith or appearance will overshadow his party's platform in the province, Singh argued that the majority of people in Quebec share the NDP's values.

"I'm confident that when (Quebecers) see and hear what we have to offer, this is going to be something that really connects and resonates with the people," he said. "During the campaign people will get to see more of what we believe in and we're confident that people will see us as their champions."

Maison Aube-Lumière

a great satisfaction to see this garden improve our patients' daily lives," she remarked.

The Maison Aube-Lumière therapeutic garden was made possible thanks to a $50,000 contribution from the Aviva Community Fund. Bergeron registered the palliative care home in the 2016 competition, but it did not win. The Aviva Community Fund is decided based on votes made by communities. In 2017, she applied once again, and called out to Eastern Townships citizens to make this dream a reality.

"It is with the support of all Townshippers that we were able to inaugurate this garden today," she explained, emphasizing the incredible voter turnout for the garden's second attempt in the competition. "We cannot thank everyone enough for rallying behind us for this cause. And we owe this all to our generous, talented, and devoted volunteers, because they are the ones who physically made the garden happen."

"The garden is peaceful and welcoming. It will be a serene area for our staff and our volunteers, as well as our patients who are spending the last days of their life here with us," said Élisabeth Brière, president of the Aube-Lumière board of directors. "These moments are unique and precious, so we want them to be able to live them in the best conditions possible. In the name of all our current and future patients, thank you for this colourful breath of fresh air," she added, in tears.

Brigitte Roy, the palliative care home's director of finances and communications, explained that according to various studies, a beautiful environment and being near nature helps reduce anxiety. "Our patients and their families are going through very difficult times, so we wanted to give them a space where they can wind down and spend important moments with their loved ones."

The area, which was previously a regular patch a grass with a view on the parking lot, has been completely revamped in order to provide patients with a calm nature environment. The patients also have a view of the garden from their bedroom through private glass doors. If they are too ill to access the garden physically, they can still look at it from their beds if they want.

Chantal Doyon, one of the two doctors who practice at Aube-Lumière, took a moment to address the crowd gathered in the garden. "I just want to highlight that these things work. I had a patient last week who was having a very bad day - she had awful stomach pains," she said. "She went outside and sat on one of the benches in the garden, so I proceeded to do her checkup there. She looked at me and said, 'I feel so much better now. My stomach doesn't hurt, I don't feel nauseous. I feel relaxed.' This garden, being close to nature; that makes a difference, above science and medicine. It has the power to replace pills."

The garden encompasses a multitude of perennials that will grow over the years, as well as several benches, paths, a fountain, and fruit trees. The latter will be used in the Aube-Lumière kitchen depending on the trees' abundance.

Régis Auclair, campaign manager for Aviva, was present for the inauguration. "I love my job, especially when I get to attend the unveiling of wonderful projects like this one. Aube-Lumière makes a difference in people's lives and this garden will certainly make that difference even bigger," he affirmed.

The project was also boosted thanks to a $10,000 donation from the Sébastien Duchesne Fund. "Sébastien was a longtime friend of mine. We met in university while we were both studying in law. We wanted to open a firm together," mentioned Stéphane Reynolds. "Sébastien's life took an unusual turn when he was diagnosed with terminal cancer. He spent the last nine months of his life at Aube-Lumière, and we realized it was a special place. He spent wonderful moments here with his wife Cynthia and his children Jeanne and Louis. Sébastien agreed that we use his name after he passed for this fund."

"Since his passing in 2015, we pledged to raise $50,000 over five years to help Aube-Lumière with its child services, such as psychological support, game areas, and homework programs. It is very difficult for young children to lose a parent to cancer and we wanted to support families going through hardship the best we could," he added. "The garden will provide loved ones a safe and relaxing space to spend these crucial last moments with their parents and spouses. We truly believe children will benefit from the garden."

The garden's layout was conceived by Olivier Gendron-Leroux of Gendron Horticulture. It was completed in 2018 with the help of numerous volunteers, including Jean-Paul Longchamps, Réal Lachance, and Mario Foley, as well as CRIFA students under the supervision of Bertrand Gagné and Christiane Perron.

During the inauguration, Aube-Lumière thanked supporters Immex Real Estate, Eggsquis restaurants, and Serres St-Élie.

Since 1997, Maison Aube-Lumière has welcomed over 3,000 terminal cancer patients for free. On top of hosting the patients, Aube-Lumière provides them with high quality palliative care and accompanies them and their family and friends in a warm environment while respecting their choices and values. In order to continue its mission, Aube-Lumière must raise one million dollars annually with the help of the community.

EDITORIAL

When I speak about the South African and Canadian truth and reconciliation models and their relevance for the American reparations debate, I sense doubt and apathy.

What Canada and South Africa can teach the U.S. about slavery reparations

By Bonny Ibhawoh
Professor of History and Global Human Rights, McMaster University

America's failure to understand, acknowledge and resolve the continuing catastrophe of slavery is holding back the entire nation.

Without broad public recognition that the country's original wealth was derived unjustly through slavery, and that deliberate post-Emancipation efforts perpetuated the social and economic gulf between white and Black America, there can be no justice or healing.

Recently, a group of prominent African-Americans testified before the United States Congress on reparations for the descendants of slaves, reopening a wound that is as old as America itself, and still acutely painful for those who continue to suffer from the very tangible effects of slavery's racist legacy.

The first congressional hearing in more than a decade on the subject helped educate yet another new generation to the unresolved debate over whether the U.S. should compensate descendants of enslaved Africans.

Author Ta-Nehisi Coates, whose 2014 essay "The Case for Reparations," reinvigorated public debate on the issue, argued it's impossible to untangle the history of America from the legacy of slavery.

The matter of reparations, Coates pointed out, is not only one of "making amends and direct redress but is also a question of citizenship."

Polarizing question

With several Democratic presidential candidates taking positions on the issue, the idea of reparations, always a polarizing question in the United States, may finally become a ballot-box question.

But there is a less political, more productive and more practical way to address the question, and it has been tested already.

Some commentators have rightly pointed out that Americans can learn from South Africa, which undertook the national, public process of establishing a Truth and Reconciliation Commission to address its long history of apartheid, with its legal institutionalized racism.

The process included heartbreaking televised testimony by victims whose families had been shattered by violence and brutalized by their own government. By bringing the issues into the open, the process allowed South Africa to come face to face with decades of apartheid atrocities and their devastating impact.

But Americans do not need to go as far as South Africa to see how the truth and reconciliation model can work.

Lessons from Canada?

Canada established its Truth and Reconciliation Commission in 2008, bucking critics of the restorative justice model and those who claimed that the model was better suited for "Third World" countries with weak political and judicial institutions.

The Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada was established to document the history and impact of the country's residential school system on Indigenous children and their families.

The commission studied more than a century of determined, officially sanctioned efforts to resolve Canada's "Indian problem" by separating children from their parents and forcing them into schools where they were often undernourished, physically and sexually abused by their teachers and forbidden to use their own languages.

The effort, described by some as outright genocide, left generations of families broken, impoverished and addicted.

Canada's Truth and Reconciliation Commission provided opportunities for victims and their families to share their experiences in public and private sessions. The entire country finally heard, in an official capacity, about the shame of what had happened in the schools and its tragic impact on individuals, families and communities.

When Canada's commission released its findings in 2015, it issued 94 "Calls to Action" to aid reconciliation, covering child welfare, education, health, language and culture, justice and equity for Indigenous peoples in the legal system. The Calls to Action also recommend creating museums and archives to document the history and experiences of Indigenous peoples.

The Canadian commission has hardly solved the problems of marginalization and forced assimilation, but it has spurred official and everyday conversations about these issues in ways the United States has yet to experience with slavery.

Doubt and apathy

As an expert on global human rights, I have been making presentations at American universities and conferences as part of a McMaster University project called Truth Commissions and the Politics of Memory.

When I speak about the South African and Canadian truth and reconciliation models and their relevance for the American reparations debate, I sense doubt and apathy. While U.S. slavery might differ from apartheid or the residential school system, there are important parallels that many Americans fail to see.

Those who favour reparations doubt the prospects for resolving the issue in a political environment paralyzed by hyper-partisanship, where even straightforward matters grind so slowly and painfully through processes that end up being more about political point-scoring than genuine governance.

Bringing American society to face its truth is difficult when, as one American colleague told me, so many still have no idea that slavery and its ghastly descendants, including the Jim Crow laws and segregation, continue to have terrible impacts on the lives of African-Americans, both by perpetuating racism and by severely limiting economic opportunities and social mobility.

Reparation proponents prefer a congressional commission but have yet to muster the support to hold one. Every year from 1989 until his resignation in 2017, Democratic congressman John Conyers Jr. proposed a bill to study the "impact of slavery on the social, political and economic life of our nation." Every year, he watched it fail to be adopted.

'We elected Obama'

American opponents of reparation are too ready to dismiss the need for action. Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell says he opposes reparations for descendants of slaves because no one currently alive was responsible for slavery.

He added: "We've tried to deal with our original sin of slavery by fighting a civil war, by passing landmark civil rights legislation, by electing an African-American president." His argument that electing Barack Obama somehow evens the score reflects the yawning gap in America's understanding of the true legacy of slavery.

The truth and reconciliation process presents an opportunity for a national conversation in the United States that goes beyond simple reparations.

Reparation proponents and opponents alike need to know that the truth and reconciliation process can include objective historical fact-finding and reparative justice. The primary benefit is in recognizing and acknowledging the harm done.

Reparation opponents who oppose truth and reconciliation by insisting that America's "original sin" of slavery is in the distant past should heed the lessons of South Africa and Canada.

Left to fester, these issues will not disappear in America. With every generation, the demand to address the stubborn legacies of slavery grows stronger.

American politicians and other leaders can choose to begin the difficult conversations now, or kick the can down the road one more time, to the next generation.

Senators deal forward Zack Smith to Blackhawks for centre Artem Anisimov

The Canadian Press

The Ottawa Senators traded forward Zack Smith to the Chicago Blackhawks for centre Artem Anisimov on Tuesday.

Smith, 31, had been the current longest-serving member of the Senators after being selected 79th overall in the 2008 NHL draft.

The native of Maple Creek, Sask., scored 94 goals and 193 points in 612 career regular-season games with Ottawa.

Smith, who was placed on waivers last September only to go unclaimed by the league's other 30 teams, added nine points (two goals, seven assists) in 45 playoff contests. He registered nine goals and 28 points for the rebuilding Senators in 2018-19.

Anisimov, also 31, had 15 goals and 37 points in 78 games with Chicago last season. In 703 career outings with the Blackhawks, New York Rangers and Columbus Blue Jackets, the native of Yaroslavl, Russia, has put up 163 goals and 347 points.

The 54th pick in the 2006 draft by the Rangers has added eight goals and nine assists in 43 playoff games.

The move for Anisimov adds both depth down the middle in the nation's capital and pushes the Senators over to the NHL's salary cap floor of $60.2 million.

Smith has two years left on a contract that carries an annual average value of US$3.25 million, while Anisimov's current deal also runs through 2020-21 with an AAV of $4.55 million, according to capfriendly.com.

Anisimov immediately becomes the second-highest paid forward on Ottawa's active roster behind Bobby Ryan and his $7.25-million cap hit.

Including the combined $9.525 million owed to injured wingers Marian Gaborik and Clarke MacArthur in 2019-20, Ottawa's wage bill for next season is currently projected at $60.86 million, with restricted free agent centre Colin White still in need of a new contract.

Murray among 29 invitees to Canada's training camp ahead of Basketball World Cup

The Canadian Press

Jamal Murray headlined a group of 29 players invited to Canada's training camp on Tuesday ahead of the FIBA Basketball World Cup.

Murray averaged 18.2 points and 4.8 rebounds for Denver this past season, guiding the upstart Nuggets to within a game of the Western Conference finals. The 22-year-old from Kitchener, Ont., agreed to a five-year, US$170 million contract extension with Denver on July 1, the richest deal for a Canadian player in NBA history.

"Being asked to represent your country is a tremendous honour and we're excited about the group of athletes that we have invited to training camp next month in Toronto," Rowan Barrett, Canada Basketball's general manager for its men's teams, said in a statement. "These athletes demonstrate the depth of talent we now have in our country, as we prepare to meet the challenge of the FIBA Basketball World Cup."

R.J. Barrett, who was drafted third overall by the New York Knicks at this year's NBA Draft, is also on the list of invitees. The son of Rowan Barrett and godson of Canadian basketball legend Steve Nash, the younger Barrett averaged 22.6 points, 7.6 rebounds and 4.3 assists for Duke University last season.

Other notables include Cleveland Cavaliers forward Tristan Thompson and Miami Heat centre Kelly Olynyk.

A total of 17 NBA players were invited to the camp, but former No.1 draft pick Andrew Wiggins was not one of them. He averaged 18.1 points, 4.8 rebounds and 2.5 assists per game last season with the Minnesota Timberwolves.

Basketball Canada said a finalized list of training camp attendees will be announced prior to the start of camp.

Canada will open exhibition play with a two-game series against Nigeria, with games in Toronto and Winnipeg on Aug. 7 and 9 respectively.

The World Cup will be held in China from Aug. 31 to Sept. 15. Canada is in a group with Australia, Lithuania, and Senegal, considered by many to be the toughest group in the tournament.

Divers Meaghan Benfeito and Caeli McKay lock up Tokyo Olympic spots for Canada

The Associated Press

Divers Caeli McKay and Meaghan Benfeito have secured two spots for Canada in the women's 10-metre platform event at the 2020 Tokyo Olympics.

McKay finished third in the semifinals on Tuesday at the world aquatics championships, while Benfeito was fourth. The top 12 advanced to the final and secured Olympic quota spots for their respective countries.

McKay, from Calgary, had 356.70 points, while Montreal's Benfeito notched 340.60.

"Today was a very positive day for me. One of my main goals was to show my strength as an individual diver," McKay said.

China's Yuxi Chen (407.95 points) and Wei Lu (370.85) were first and second, respectively.

The final is Wednesday. The pair finished fourth and missed qualifying an Olympic spot by 0.81 points in Sunday's synchro competition. Only the top three finishers in synchro events are accepted for Tokyo 2020.

"After my synchro event I wanted to come back strong and open a spot for my country at the Olympics. I am very proud to have done that," McKay said. "I am pleased with my performance and I know what I need to improve for tomorrow's final."

Benfeito has three Olympic bronze medals in her career. McKay won silver at the 2018 Commonwealth Games.

"Semis were a little bit rough, the last dives weren't exactly how I wanted them to be but the goal was to make the final to open the spot for the Olympics and that's what we did," Benfeito said. "Obviously we're going to take it up a notch tomorrow for the final."

Elsewhere, China's golden run at continued when it won the mixed team event diving final.

Lin Shan and Yang Jian won with a total of 416.65 points and didn't face a strong challenge on their way to victory.

It was China's first gold in the mixed team event _ involving three- and 10-metre dives _ since it was introduced at the world swimming championships in 2015.

"I only knew I would compete in this event one week ago," said Yang, men's 10-meter platform bronze medallist in Budapest two years ago. "We did not have time to train together. The most important thing was to show our best in the competition."

Three-time youth Olympic champion Lin was scared of the competition when young, "but I am not anymore."

"I tried to adjust my breath and told myself to relax. It was my first world title and also first for China in this event, I was proud of that," Lin said.

Russian pair Iuliia Timoshinina and Sergey Nazin took silver with 390.05, followed by Andrew Capobianco and Katrina Young of the United States with 357.60.

The best result for China until Tuesday in the mixed team event was a bronze medal in 2015 by Chen Ruolin and Xie Siyi.

John (Jack) Noble HOBBS
November 26th, 1919 - July 9th, 2019

The family of Mr. John (Jack) Noble Hobbs sadly announces his recent passing on July 9th, 2019 at the Wales Home, Cleveland QC at the age of 99 years and 7 months. Jack had been so looking forward to celebrating his 100th birthday and he almost made it! He was the dear son of the late Francis John Hobbs and Louisa Noble, brother of the late Joseph Hobbs (the late Hilda), and of his young sister, the late June Hobbs. Uncle to Linda Hobbs. Jack was the dear husband of the late Joan Holman, of the late Doris Hughes Gagnon and loving companion of the late Freda Perkins. He leaves to mourn his step-children Brian Gagnon (Heather), John Gagnon (Judith), Dave Gagnon (Linda), Jim Gagnon (Carrol) and Kathy Gagnon (Terry Wilkins) as well as all of his grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Jack will be dearly missed by his cousins David Noble (Isabelle) and Jack Noble (Frankie) who cared for him throughout his life. The Gagnon family extends their heartfelt appreciation and thanks for all they did for Jack.

Jack loved life. He loved to be among his friends while playing cards and cribbage, shooting pool, golfing and curling. He especially loved sharing his stories over a cold glass of beer or a martini (with 3 olives). We loved to hear him talk about his experiences piloting the Halifax Bomber during WW2. We are all so proud that he fought in and survived a war that brought us all to where we are today. Jack's greatest love was music and he was so thankful to the Wales Home for allowing him to play his favourite songs on Saturday mornings over the past three years for his new-found family and friends.

As his grandson Cary said in a recent tribute to his grandfather: "He was a man of 99 years who was loved by many". Jack will be missed by his family and friends forever. God bless him.

A celebration of Jack's life will be held in the living room of the Wales Home at 2:00 p.m. on Saturday, August 10th, 2019, where refreshments will be served following the service. Burial will take place at Elmwood Cemetery, Sherbrooke QC beside his late parents and his first wife.

The family wishes to sincerely thank all the Wales Home staff and caregivers for their kindness and excellent care. Jack knew many of you by name and was so grateful for all you did for him. In lieu of flowers donations may be made to the Wales Home Foundation, 506 Route 243 North, Cleveland QC J0B 2H0.

Your Birthday

WEDNESDAY, JULY 17, 2019

Making a change to appease others will not turn out well for you. Practice saying no to anyone pushing you to be a follower instead of letting you pursue your own goals. Fewer changes and more nurturing should be your priorities this year. Romance is favored; arguing isn't.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Take the most interesting path. Doing something unexpected or something that will bring you the most unique experience will be the way to go. Personal improvements will lead to compliments.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Your emotions will be difficult to control. Avoid being dramatic when you are at work or dealing with a partnership problem. Making a bold statement or move will be counterproductive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Do what has to be done and get on with your day. If you labor too long over how to do something, you will run out of time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — You may know in your heart what you should or what you want to do, but doing it may not be possible if someone decides to challenge you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Approach whatever you decide to do from a unique angle. The less informed others are about your plan, the better. A little romance will bring you closer to a loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — If you decide to express yourself, do so with honesty and integrity. If you send the wrong message or give a false impression, you'll be asked a lot of questions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Take a moment to rearrange things at home. If you are organized, it will be much easier to deal with everyday responsibilities. Romance is in the stars.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Emotions will swell if you let your anger surface. Take more time to think about the consequences should you decide to engage in an argument with an unpredictable person.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Keep personal matters hidden from people trying to pry into your affairs. Keep people's focus on the positive things you do.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — You know what needs to be done, so hop to it. If you have to be told to make a move, you will appear to be incompetent. Consistency, dedication and follow-through are encouraged.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — You know what you have to do to make things happen. Leave nothing to chance. If someone challenges you intellectually, don't get angry; you can outsmart him or her.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Don't rely on someone's promise. You'll be disappointed if you are too accommodating or you expect others to be as detail-oriented as you. Stick to rules and regulations.

If one won't work, try something else

By Phillip Alder

Edmond de Goncourt, a 19th-century French diarist, said, "A painting in a museum hears more ridiculous opinions than anything else in the world."

But isn't an opinion about a piece of art in the eye of the beholder?

This week, we are looking at deals in which one defender should take control to make sure that nothing ridiculous happens. However, finding the right play is so much easier with a warning bell ringing. At the table, it would be harder.

In today's deal, South is in four spades. West leads the club ace: three, nine, two. What should happen after that?

When South opened one spade, West should have overcalled two spades, a Michaels Cue-Bid showing at least 5-5 in hearts and either minor. But he fell in love with his beautiful club suit. North then made a negative double, promising four hearts and 10 or more points. (With slightly fewer points, he could have five or six hearts.) He did not need length in diamonds, but without that, he should have had an idea what he would do if South rebid in that suit. South's two-spade rebid indicated at least a six-card suit. Finally, North went for the logical game.

West starts with three top clubs, East playing high-low to show his doubleton, then signaling with what?

East wants a heart shift, but the heart three is going to look low and discouraging to West. Similarly, discarding a discouraging diamond eight will look encouraging to West. To avoid the danger of an accident, at trick three, East should ruff his partner's trick — which is always fun — and cash the heart ace.
