FINANCIAL NOTES.

British consols in the London market closed to-day at 99 1/16 for m.o., and 99 1/8 for account. United States four-and-a-halves were 113 1/4. American rail and way securities closed at 1 1/4, 1 1/2, and 1 3/4. Canadian Pacific closed at 44, having gained 1/2 on Saturday's closing. No quotations were received from New York to-day.

GENERAL NOTES.

The latest commercial intelligence will be found on our front page in the Reports from our cotton crop will Texas indicate.

A full survey of exports of provisions from the United States was made by the U.S. Fishery reports that the shadow at Catalina is a success, 300,000 lb. of fish being put into the Hudson daily. The California hatchery 400,000 trout are turned loose in the past week and a million are still on hand.

A Little Rock dispatch says that reports from the stock growing sections of Texas and the southwest generally indicate a very large crop, not greater than that of 1893. The stock is reported in good condition and free from disease.

RAILWAY NEWS.

The New York Commercial Advertiser says that according to present indications a crisis in the affairs of the Union Pacific is near at hand. For the past week rumors have been busy with the road, and as the date for the payment of dividends draws near the unfavorable reports grow more and more frequent. The crisis is likely to be precipitated by the Government investigating committee which is to report to-morrow to the Senate finance committee. According to accounts the examination will disclose a terribly bad state of finances. The worst feature of this statement is that the sinking fund of the company is invested in Union Pacific securities. A story is current this morning that the road will be put into the hands of a Government receiver.

SEEKING TO DEFEAT A LIBERAL GOVERNMENT.

The cable despatches announce that the English Opposition is rapidly organizing for a final and prolonged assault on the Government's policy on the occasion of Mr. Gladstone's promised statement on Thursday concerning the Anglo-French agreement. The amusing part of the affair is that the Opposition do not know what the Anglo-French agreement really is, and although a hundred conjectures and rumors as to its nature have been put forward, none of them have been verified and most of them have been wholly denied. It, however, does not make the slightest difference whether the agreement with France has been good or bad, it will be opposed all the same and a thousand reasons urged against its adoption and in censure of the Government by which it has been made. The object of the Conservatives is to defeat the Government at all hazards, at any sacrifice, of principle or even of decency. The dust that is now being kicked up about Egypt is merely a pretext to hide the real design of the Conservatives, which is to prevent the Government from passing those measures of domestic legislation which have become absolutely necessary, and which public opinion demands. First and most important of these is the franchise bill which seeks to place the counties and boroughs on an equal footing as regards representation, to give the English laborer in the rural districts the same opportunity of exercising the franchise as the English workingman in cities. That this is a fair measure requires no argument to prove, and that it commands itself to the House of Commons is amply shown by the large majorities by which the bill has been advanced from stage to stage in that body, for the last division, that on the amendment to exclude Ireland from the operations of the Act, the Government being sustained by a majority of no less than 195. With such a support for the bill in the House of Commons, backed by so strong a public opinion outside, the opponents of the Government know full well that it would be a risky experiment to throw the bill out in the Lords, and thus precipitate a direct issue between the Upper House and the people. Such a conflict, however, it might appear to result at first, could have but one termination, for the English people are not to be put down finally or prevented from obtaining any legislative boon which they regard as necessary to the full exercise of their freedom. The Conservatives, therefore, seek to avoid such a direct issue by defeating the Government on a question of foreign policy and thus strangling the franchise bill and its authors at the same time. The recollections of 1866 should, however, make them cautious, for, after defeating Mr. Gladstone on a very moderate Reform Bill that year, Mr. Disraeli the very next year was compelled to pass a much more sweeping measure, "a leap in the dark" as Lord Derby termed it, and then, after eating all the dirt involved in the operation, after making true of himself what he had meekly said of Sir Robert Peel that he had "caught the Whigs in bathing and stolen their clothes," he was unable to retain power more than a few months, but was summarily kicked out of power on the Irish Church question. Even should the Liberal Government be defeated now by a side wind, there is no danger of the proper adjustment of the franchise being delayed.

Equally distasteful to the Conservatives are the City of London Government Bill and the Irish Land Purchase Bill, two measures of the greatest importance and value. By the first the Government hopes to place the administration of the vast metropolis of London on a sensible and efficient basis, and to sweep away the vast system of abuses which has gathered round the old plan. Of course this is a measure all good Conservatives in London are bound to resist, and if they can destroy the bill and the Government by shouting over the Egyptian question they are ready to rend their lungs in the operation. Of course the measure looking towards peasant proprietorship in Ireland meets with the opposition of these gentlemen, as all Irish measures do. The only thing that can be done for a Government that seeks to benefit Ireland is to defeat it.

The most painful feature of the affair and the one which should excite the greatest astonishment and indignation is the conduct of some so-called Liberals towards the Government. Instead of standing loyally by their chief, who being in possession of all the information with regard to the question might be supposed to know how best to direct the policy of the Administration, they have played into the hands of the enemies of Liberalism and of Mr. Gladstone, and sought to drive him from power at a time when some of the most important measures that have ever been in Parliament are in the course of being passed. Mr. Forster, in particular, by his coarse, violent and wholly unjust attack on Mr. Gladstone, a man whose shoes he is unworthy to unloose, has placed himself wholly outside of any further affiliation with or even recognition from the Liberal party. The Liberals of Bradford have given him prompt notice that they will have no more of him, and from representing a constituency of 30,000 voters he will probably be driven to take refuge in some petty borough, even if he should get into Parliament at all. Other Liberals whose conduct has been less scandalous but equally opposed to the interests of Liberalism will, no doubt, be read out of their party and true men put in their place. A party that was at the mercy of bolters and that was obliged to follow its tail instead of its head, would soon cease to exist, but the Liberal party in England is in no such straits and has plenty of material ready to fill any gaps in its Parliamentary ranks.

THE EXHIBITION.

Now that it has been agreed to postpone the Exhibition until the 5th September, and to keep it open until the 13th, the element of uncertainty which surrounded it, so long as the date was in dispute, has disappeared and all classes may be expected to work in unison for the purpose of making this Exhibition the greatest and most attractive that ever was held in Montreal. It was on many accounts desirable that the date originally fixed for the Exhibition should be changed, as the British Association meeting being held at the same time would have tended to divide the energies of many who desired to give attention to both, but who, under the plan originally proposed, would have found it impossible to do so. That difficulty, however, is now overcome and nothing now remains but to buckle vigorously to the work of preparation so that on the 5th September next Montreal will be able to show the people of Canada and such strangers as may visit us, an Exhibition of the fabrics and products of the Dominion that will be worthy of Montreal and of Canada.

No one can doubt that this city has special advantages over all others in Canada for a Dominion or Provincial Exhibition. It is the great centre of the manufacturing interest of Canada, and in this respect is daily growing in importance. Here the greatest development of our leading industries has taken place, and here the greatest growth may be expected for many years to come, for here capital and labor and their common interests are more fully represented than in any other city in Canada. Montreal has the money and the industrious hands which alone can make manufacturing enterprises successful.

But Montreal is not only the manufacturing centre; it is the trade centre of Canada. Here the greater part of the commerce of the country is carried on, a fact that naturally attracts people to this city and gives an Exhibition a better opportunity of being seen by large numbers of people. And as an Exhibition, wherever held, must derive a considerable amount of its support from local sources, the fact that the merchants of Montreal are the most numerous, the most opulent and the most liberal of those of any city in Canada, affords an additional argument in favor of holding the Exhibition here.

The agricultural portion of an Exhibition must always form a considerable portion of its attractiveness, and in that respect also Montreal is happily situated. The island upon which this city stands is one of the most fertile and beautiful in America, a land of flowers, of fruit, of grass and of grain, where all that is necessary to the sustenance of man attains the greatest perfection. And there can be no more convenient centre to which to bring the products of the other parts of Canada than Montreal, now become the shipping point of two great railway systems.

The Exhibition is in the hands of an efficient and energetic committee, and it is to be hoped that their efforts will be seconded to the utmost by our citizens generally, who are interested in seeing the affair made a success. That it will be a success we have no manner of doubt.

THE NEW YORK DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION.

The New York Democratic State convention will meet at Saratoga to-morrow, and great interest is centred in it owing to the fact that on its action will depend to some extent who is to be the Democratic nominee for President. New York has two Presidential Candidates in the field, Governor Cleveland and Rosewell P. Flower, the latter a member of Congress now serving his first term, and whose only qualification for a nomination are that he is "a good fellow" and has a "bar'l of money." Mr. Flower has, however, been very industriously boomed, and for some time his friends have been claiming that he will have a majority of the State Convention. Of course the only effect of such a state of affairs would be to injure Cleveland and perhaps destroy his chances of nomination as a man not supported by his own State, for certainly no national convention would dream of nominating such a man as Flower. There is a reason to believe that the Flower boom has been mainly worked with that object by dissatisfied Democrats, who do not like Cleveland's reform methods. The New York Herald, however, has been figuring up a slate showing the strength of Cleveland and Flower in the Convention, and arrives at the conclusion that the former will have a majority of 48, even should the whole Tammany delegation of 36 go for Flower. As a majority of the latter delegates are said to be for Cleveland the Governor would seem to be reasonably safe in carrying his own State supposing the calculations of the Herald to be anything near correct. Cleveland's name is well known all over the Union, and he has so strong a support outside of New York that there are some grounds for believing that he may receive the Presidential nomination, even should his own State not put him forward as her "favorite son."

DISEASED MEAT.

The action of the Board of Health yesterday in confirming the steps taken by its officers towards the prohibition of the sale of diseased or unwholesome meat was quite in the line of duty and commendable. The presence of one earnest and straightforward alderman in a committee, even in such a shambling, go-as-you-please-and-do-nothing-after-all committee as the Board of Health is productive of good, and the citizens at large are to be congratulated on having such a representative in Alderman Gray, of St. Lawrence ward. His opinion regarding the question of the infectiousness of tuberculous meat was that common sense rather than contentious science should hold sway. The public are undoubtedly of the same opinion and will applaud Alderman Gray's efforts in their behalf. The following section of the by-law would certainly seem to be as explicit as to leave little room for the quibbling of lawyers, for, according to it, meat need only be unwholesome to be confiscated:—

"No person shall slaughter, bleed or gut any animal, or pluck any fowl or poultry of any description, or expose any meat in a bleeding state, or the uncleaned entrails of any animal in or upon the said markets, the flesh of any animal which shall have died of disease, or which shall not have been in a sound state when killed, or any mearly pork, or any blown or fraudulently dressed meat, or any tainted or unwholesome meat, poultry, game, or any veal or lamb under three weeks old, or unseasonable from leanness, or any meat that is stuffed, or in any other than an undisguised and natural state or condition * * * under pain of forfeiture and confiscation thereof, besides the penalty elsewhere imposed."

We learn that one of our contemporaries stated a few days ago that the bronze casting of Sir Geo. E. Cartier, made by Mr. Chanteloup, was the first of that kind of thing that had been done in Canada. A leading manufacturer informs us that this statement is not correct. Several years ago, Mr. Mattinson, one of our oldest workers in brass, cast a bronze statue of a bishop, and it is well known that the magnificent statue of "De Salaberry," which was erected some three years past, was also of bronze. It was designed by the same artist as that of Sir Geo. E. Cartier, but the casting was made in the celebrated establishment of Messrs. Robt. Mitchell & Co. We are also told that Messrs. R. Mitchell & Co.'s establishment is not only the largest in Canada but is one of the finest on the continent.

YESTERDAY Judge Caron refused the application to transfer 1210 to Montreal for trial and his case will be proceeded with at Quebec. The offence for which he is sought to be extradited is forgery under the laws of the State of New York, but the question will arise whether it is forgery under the intent and meaning of the Extradition Treaty, or of the laws of both countries at the time the Treaty was framed.

Mr. WM. BROMLEY-DAVENPORT, M.P., for North Warwickshire, whose death is announced, was a Conservative and has for the same constituency since 1864. He was not opposed at the last general election, but possibly the Liberals may see good reasons for now putting a Liberal candidate in the field. Such an assault on an old Conservative stronghold might be good policy at the present time.

Mr. RUSTON, a Liberal, has been elected to the British Parliament for the City of Lincoln to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Hinde Palmer. Mr. Ruston's majority over his Conservative opponent was 971. Mr. Palmer in 1880 had a majority of 938. Here is one English constituency in which the Liberals have not lost ground.

THE ROYAL SCOTS.

They Create a Great Sensation in Toronto.

The Killies Create a Commotion—The Games at the Lacrosse Grounds—A Visit to the Falls.

All day Saturday our citizens held high carnival.

The streets were resplendent with gay uniforms and flashing steel, set off by the handsome holiday costumes of the civilians, while flags floated from house-tops and the wild music of "The Campbells are Coming" smote upon the ear.

And why was this? Because the only killed volunteer regiment in Canada, the widely-known Royal Scots of Montreal, were paying Toronto a visit, and Toronto was making it as pleasant for them as possible. They reached the city Saturday morning at 11. Col. Campbell and headed by their own band marched direct to the Granite rink on Mutual street, where every preparation had been made for them. Here they spruced up after their all night ride in the dusty train, and after breakfast marched out through the city 320 strong.

Thousands turned out to see them, the line of march being thronged with people and the killies as they marched along with a free sweeping stride must have felt flattered at the praises and encomiums showered upon them as they passed. They certainly had a splendid appearance. First and foremost marched the drum-major, one of the finest specimens of manhood that has trod the streets of Toronto for many a day. He stood 6 ft. 7 in. in his boots, and his head was surmounted by a bonnet most wonderfully and fearfully made. All the men of the regiment were about a size, all young men, handsome, soldierly and neat, and as they swept past their gleaming helmets, scarlet coats, dark green trowsers, firm, sinewy limbs, and their gleaming steel produced a very fine effect. On their return the officers of the Grenadiers entertained the officers of the Royal Scots at lunch at 12 o'clock at the Granite rink. All the officers of both regiments were present as well as the following:—Governor Robinson, His Worship the Mayor, Lieut.-Colonel G. T. Denison, Lieut.-Colonel Otter, President Doan of the Caledonian Society, President Graham of the St. Andrew's Society, Messrs. Hodge, McIntosh and Cassels.

After doing justice to a fine spread, Lieut.-Colonel Grassett proposed the health of the Queen. The next toast was the Governor-General and the Lieutenant-Governor, to which Governor Robinson replied in a neat speech. Colonel Campbell of the Scots proposed the health of the Grenadiers, to which Colonel Grassett replied and then proposed the Royal Scots, which was enthusiastically received. Colonel Campbell proposed the Scotch societies of Toronto in a short speech, referring to the kind way in which they had already been received by them. It was responded to by Messrs. Graham and Doan. The last toast was the health of Mayor Boswell, to which that gentleman responded in his usual able manner. The party then adjourned to the games.

These were held on the Jarvis street lacrosse grounds, and long before the time for beginning the games every available space on the grand stands had been taken up and hundreds were obliged to stand or sit upon the grass. It is estimated that over 4,000 spectators were on the grounds. Before the games commenced the Scots went through the imposing ceremony of trooping the colors, a ceremony which they performed thoroughly and which was frequently applauded by the vast assemblage.

The games then commenced and were hotly contested. The following is the prize list:— Putting heavy stone (open to all), 1. J. P. Brown, 31 ft. 9 in.; 2. A. Scott, 30 ft. 6 in.; 3. J. P. Brown, 30 ft. 7 in. Throwing heavy hammer (open to all), 1. J. P. Brown, 80 ft. 6 in.; 2. A. Scott, 77 ft. 6 in.; 3. J. P. Brown, 60 ft. Quarter-mile race, volunteers in uniform, 1. Adam Taylor, Penton Boys; 2. J. Dent, Vanishing with pole, open to all, 1. A. Scott, 1 min. 11 sec.; 2. J. Wright, 9 min. 7 sec.; 3. F. C. Rule, 9 min. 6 sec. Standing long jump (open to amateurs of regiments), 1. J. P. Brown, 19 ft. 1 in.; 2. J. P. Brown, 18 ft. 10 in.; 3. John Owen, 18 ft. 1 in. Highland jump in costume (open to all), 1st prize, silver cup, presented by Captain Graham, 1. Geo. Matheson, Hamilton; 2. Pipe Major James Moon, London; 3. Wm. Butterfield, London.

Half-mile race (open only to regiments), 1st prize, gold medal, presented by Toronto Caledonian Society; 2d silver cup, presented by Robert de Bruce camp sons of Scotland; 1. Wm. Kerr, Royal Scots; 2. Wm. Ballie, Royal Scots. Putting light stone (open to volunteers), 1. A. G. Ross, 42 ft. 9 in.; 2. P. R. Niven, 35 ft. 9 in.; 3. T. Murphy, 35 ft. 2 in. Pipe music, best pipe in Highland costume, reels, strathspeys and marches, 1. Pipe Major James Moon; 2. John Matheson; 3. John Sullivan.

One-mile race (open to amateurs), 1st prize, silver medal; 2d silver medal, 1. John Chamberlain; 2. Wm. Kerr; 3. Geo. Walley. Capt. John Hood, of the Royal Scots acted as captain of the games, and was ably assisted by Quartermaster Hicks, of the Queen's Own. The judges for the day were Lieut.-Col. Denison, Lieut.-Col. Grassett, Lieut.-Col. Miller, James Graham, President of St. Andrew's society; John Campbell, President Caledonian Society, and A. G. Hodge, Secretary Caledonian Society. All these gentlemen fulfilled their duties to the satisfaction of every one, with one solitary exception.

The most exciting feature of the afternoon's sports was the grand struggle in the tug-of-war. There were four entries: The Police, Royal Grenadiers, Queen's Own, Royal Scots, twelve men in each team. The first teams to tug were the Queen's Own and 5th Royal Scots, the latter being beaten easily. The police then tackled the Scots and pulled them out of time. They then, after a terrible struggle, beat the Queen's Own, the Grenadiers taking first prize. The Grenadiers beat the Queen's Own, but the latter promptly entered a protest, and the match will probably have to be tugged over again. Everybody expressed admiration at the superb physique of the police team.

George Matheson, who won the first prize for the Highland fling, is admitted to be the best Scotch dancer in the Dominion, if not on the continent. Piper Moon, who furnished him the music on Saturday, taught him the art of dancing in Scotland fifteen years ago. Matheson's appearance on the grounds created great attention. His breast was literally covered with medals won in many a hard fought contest. The cup which he won will be engraved for him by Col. Campbell and presented shortly. Pipe Major Moon, whose music attracted so much attention, is a resident of London. Piper Sullivan was highly indignant that the first prize for piping was given to Moon. In a rich rollicking brogue he shouted that he could "bate Moon wid the pipes for fifty dollars." He was soothed with great difficulty.

All credit is due to A. G. Hodge, the master of ceremonies. His was a difficult as well as a thankless task, but he did it well and cheerfully. The three feathers in his bonnet could be seen everywhere. Clad in his highland costume he pranced around in great shape, a whole committee in himself. To him is due the credit of getting the long list of games through so early in the afternoon. He got much assistance from the presidents of the St. Andrew's and Caledonian societies, from Capt. Giddes, A.D.C., and others.

In the evening the regiment produced the stirring military drama of Jessie Brown in the Grand Opera House. The building was crowded by an audience which had come determined to be pleased. Mrs. Neil Warner, of Montreal, as Jessie Brown made a hit, and acted the part with truth and spirit. The Rev. D. Blount of Neil Warner was a capital piece of acting, his comely especially being good. All the rest of the drama was taken from the regiment and though all amateurs, it is safe to say that there have been professional troupes which have not done half so well in the Grand Opera House. The tableaux—the discovery of the well at Cawnpore and the oath at the well—were very striking and effective.

Yesterday morning the regiment attended divine service in old St. Andrew's Church. The large building was filled to overflowing and hundreds of people found it impossible to get even standing room. On the arrival of the Scots the street and entire neighborhood was literally packed with people, hundreds of whom waited till the service was over and accompanied the regiment back to the rink. Rev. Mr. Milligan preached an excellent discourse. In the afternoon the men enjoyed themselves sight-seeing. The island was the chief attraction for them and large numbers crossed during the day. The Granite rink, where the killies were encamped, was yesterday visited by hundreds of people who were highly pleased with the novelty of the scene. The Scots were very comfortable and wanted for nothing. Their rations were plentiful and these were augmented by sundry presents, both solid and liquid.

This morning at 7 o'clock the Scots will march to Union station, where they will store their arms and accoutrements in a car. They will then march to Millroy's wharf where they will take the Chicago for Niagara, and returning in the evening will take a special train for Montreal.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Exchange Bank Depositors.

To the Editor of THE HERALD: In this morning's Gazette there appears a report of a meeting of certain depositors of the Exchange Bank, held on Saturday last. I did not receive any intimation of such meeting, and I know of others who were not notified. If this was a meeting of a favored few, by what right did it take place on the bank premises? Besides it is true that a depositor not in accord with the meeting was requested to retire?

COMPRISING:

A MYSTERIOUS DWELLING.

On the second day after my visit, the old lady was able to leave her room. I called, and brought a notary to endorse the stipulated contract. We were conducted to the third floor by the nurse, who opened a door guarded by an iron bolt and bar. Madame Jansen was seated at a table in this dingy room, employed in folding and marking small packets of bank notes. Each of these notes was of great value. All along the wainscot lay bags of crowns, the bags being mostly made from remnants of silk dresses. The old lady was as reserved to-day as she had been garrulous on the previous occasion. Her trembling hands placed each bag in turn before us, as with a sad, fixed stare she watched us count the crowns, seal the bags, and number the tickets. The inventory of silver and bank notes kept us employed until long after sundown. We finished our work by the feeble flicker of a rash light which had been stuck in the centre branch of a massive silver chandelier.

The last bag was full of crowns stamped with the effigy of Christian IV. These coins were not only very scarce, but had the reputation of being free from alloy. As coins, they were worth even more than their intrinsic value. When we had sealed up this bag, I asked Madame Jansen if she had not something more.

"Is that not enough, my friend?" "Are there no gold pieces, madame?" "Gold? People never pay me in gold."

We had now completed our task; the inventory was finished, and the old lady affixed her name to it with a trembling hand. The titles were placed in a strong box, of which I kept the key. It was arranged that both the box and money were to be removed to my house early on the following morning. We bade Madame Jansen good night, and left her.

When I reached the street I remembered having left a silver pencil-case behind me. With a few words of apology to my friend I turned back, and ran quickly up the stairs. I knocked at the door, and without waiting for an answer, entered the room. To my surprise, I saw, by the feeble rays of the candle, that Madame Jansen still sat at the table, holding in one hand an empty purse of red silk, while, with the other, she endeavored to hide a heap of gold which was spread out before her. On seeing me, she uttered a piercing cry, and bowed her head over the treasure. Then, suddenly, she lifted up her hands supplicatingly, and cried:

"Oh! leave me this! It is my sole consolation."

Then she rose, seized my hand, and drew me to the door, beyond which the great staircase was lost in gloom.

"It is all empty," she said. "All darkness and solitude! I have only my gold! Oh! do not take it. The long night is so lonely!"

"I have no right to take what you do not give me," said I; "though the plaything is costly, you are rich enough to afford it. Good night."

So saying, I picked up my pencil-case and hurried from the stifling atmosphere of that room into the crisp night air.

It was spring. The larch woods which bordered our little bay wore all the brightness and freshness so peculiar to the month of May.

During the past few weeks an intimacy had sprung up between us and the family of the Chief de Police. His eldest daughter, Matilde, had evinced a romantic attachment for my wife, a devotion reciprocated with true feminine fervor. It would have been strange indeed if this innocent young girl, with her deep blue eyes, had not fascinated us both, and we encouraged her to visit us as often as possible. But we perceived that an unaccountable vein of sadness stole over her at times, which contrasted painfully with her otherwise joyous and artless nature. Her grief was certainly deep—but, as she never for a moment broke her reserve, we could only sympathize in silence. It was Sunday morning. The sun shone in all its glory, and the blue waters of the Foulde glittered enchantingly at our feet. We had arranged to make an excursion across the bay, and had invited several friends to join us. Before eleven o'clock we were all on board, and gliding merrily over the sparkling waters.

At one end of the boat a group of girls and young officers were carrying on a desultory conversation; Matilde was not among them. She was leaning against the mast, her graceful figure swaying with every motion of the boat. Never had she seemed so much more beautiful as she stood alone under the blue canopy of heaven, the wind stirring her dress and hair, and her eyes gazing sadly over the bay towards the wooded shore. Something in her manner attracted me towards her. "Matilde," said I softly, "would you like to inherit a fortune?"

She looked at me for a moment in mute astonishment, and then said sadly: "Why do you ask? I suppose that every one would be glad to inherit money, though I confess that I have not much hope of anything of the kind."

The town we were leaving behind us stood out bold and clear in the far distance.

"Look," said I, "do you see, among those low buildings, that high, sombre house? A poor woman lives there who, even on such a day as this, knows nothing of the blue skies or sunshine."

"I see the house," replied the girl. "Who lives there?"

"An aunt of yours and your father's."

"Oh! that woman?" replied Matilde, disdainfully, with a shrug of the shoulders. "She is not my aunt. My grandmother was only her cousin. We went to call on her once." And then, shaking her head, continued, "No. I should not like to inherit her fortune."

"Are you so sure of that?" said I, looking steadily into the depth of those eloquent eyes. She did not wince, but a sudden flush overspread her face, and her eyes lost their lustre. After a pause she said composedly:

"Well, yes. Perhaps I should, after all."

I saw that a dream of possible happiness had dimmed her eyes with tears. That dream, she thought, could never be realized. I had been told that she had given her heart to a young officer, and that poverty was an insuperable bar to their marriage.

I now understood it all.

One morning I received a message from Madame Jansen begging me to call upon her. I lost no time in obeying the summons, and found the house door unfastened, a circumstance which surprised me, as the nurse had been dismissed more than a month previously.

In spite of the heat of that June day, I found the old woman pacing up and down her room, leaning heavily on her stick. She wore a gray cloak buttoned to the chin, and on her head a black lace bonnet adorned by a red rose. Her false curls hung negligently around her face without the least attempt at deception.

"I wish to consult you on a grave matter," she said solemnly. "I am told that the daughter of a rich merchant is engaged to marry a count. Now, I do not see that my niece should not also win a count."

"I do not see, madame, how, without money—"

"I have power to alter my will," Madame Jansen seemed to be full of this new notion. She walked briskly up and down the room, talking to herself rather than to me.

At length she paused, and, looking at me, said:

"There must surely be a starving count somewhere in this town who would be willing for a little money."

My niece—she is not to be despised. During the short visit she paid me I noticed that she was beautiful. She seems to have had a good education, and there is that about her which reminds me of my own youth. Yes, I will leave her a princely fortune."

I was much surprised, but said nothing. It would be best, I thought, to let things run their course. After the death of Madame Jansen, Matilde would be a free agent. With millions of thalers in her lap she might defy everything; choose a husband for herself, and let the shadowy count fade into thin air.

Madame Jansen begged me to prepare by the following morning the necessary documents for a revocation of her previous testament.

"My niece is so beautiful," she said, "engaging herself to some one in her own sphere of life; we have no time to lose. Next week I shall open my reception rooms. Monsieur le Comte shall be invited. I will present him to my niece, and as to my nephew, the Chief de Police, he shall do the honors."

At the bare prospect of such a thing the old lady rubbed her hands. "Come with me, my friend," she continued, "come up stairs, I want you to see everything with your own eyes."

She then drew from under the mattress of the bed a large bunch of keys, and thrust her bony hand through my arms. In this manner we slowly ascended the stairs leading to the first floor.

The key grated in the lock as with difficulty we opened the door of the large ballroom. Its furniture was of the angular kind which found favor in the last century. On the faded yellow satin coverings of the chairs and sofas I noticed a design emblematic of human vanity—ruined columns joined by garlands of roses.

Round the corners rolled the sleepless Aurora on a chariot of fire, supported by cherubs, fair maidens, and armed warriors. In the embrasures of the windows lay legions of dead moths, and the floor was thick with dust. Two crystal chandeliers jingled at every footfall; and the red draperies of the windows shed a rich color over this scene of departed glory. My attention was suddenly arrested by two full-sized portraits; one was that of an elderly man with a round, sensual face and small eyes; the other was a beautiful young woman in the vestments of a Bacchante.

From her shapely shoulders fell a white tunic, while in her raven black hair—which was clipped over the brows—a crimson ribbon was entwined. The joy of life seemed to be reflected by those eyes, which appeared to follow me at every step I took. I saw in this portrait the original of my grandchild's miniature—like mine, the same—only larger and life-like! In that young face there was infinite store of magical attraction. A light tap on my shoulder recalled my wandering thoughts. Mine Jansen was smiling placidly at my side.

"It must have been a good likeness," she said presently, "although people thought that the artist had not quite caught the fairness of my complexion, or the bright sparkle of my eyes."

"Is it your portrait?" I asked.

"And your portrait?" I asked.

"My husband paid 600 ducats for the pair," she said, "and he never for a moment broke her reserve, we could only sympathize in silence. It was Sunday morning. The sun shone in all its glory, and the blue waters of the Foulde glittered enchantingly at our feet. We had arranged to make an excursion across the bay, and had invited several friends to join us. Before eleven o'clock we were all on board, and gliding merrily over the sparkling waters."

"Have you been to Antwerp?" I asked.

"Ah! indeed, and in the flower of beauty too! My father owned three of the largest vessels in the port. We spent six weeks there."

And she paced up and down the long room, leaning on her stick, growing more and more animated as her memory rekindled the glories of the past.

"We lived a strange life there!" she exclaimed suddenly. "A Russian squadron was anchored in the offing, and the officers gave dances on board their ships. They were all young and handsome, and they could not have found here sweeter welcome than the Netherlands. I was soon their welcome guest, and in time became the queen of their fetes."

At these words she struck the floor so sharply with her stick, that the crystals of the chandeliers jingled.

"They would come ashore to fetch me in a barge dressed with flags. Among these officers there was a Greek prince, and Constantine Paleologus, the latest descendant of the Byzantine emperors. He would never resign the privilege of lifting me into the boat, and of placing me comfortably among the silken cushions! We could only converse in French. He called me 'Rose du Nord.' Oh! with what loving care he spread the rugs for my feet! In those moments how brightly the sea, the sky, and all black eyes sparkled! They were all at my feet, the prince, the officers, and the noble German families who were studying at Antwerp. But I repulsed them all, and I still rejoice at it."

EPH COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame.—Cell Service Gazette.

Madame Jansen begged me to call upon her. I lost no time in obeying the summons, and found the house door unfastened, a circumstance which surprised me, as the nurse had been dismissed more than a month previously.

POSTPONED.—On account of the threatening state of the weather last night the excursion on the Berthier was postponed. The affair will come off next Monday at the same time and place.

DUST, DUST.—The Mount Royal Park roads are a disgrace to our city for the simple want of water. Why should our citizens lose all the pleasure of one of the finest drives in the world because the Park Commissioners will not water the avenues.

TO THE HEALTH DEPARTMENT.—Complaints are made by residents of Beaver Hall Terrace that in the lane behind their houses there are the dead bodies of an enormous dog, several cats and many other animals. The weather is now getting hot and unless the carcasses are removed there may be illness. Will the Sanitary Inspector please attend to the matter?

The cars allegorical of the Sacred Heart and of Jacques Cartier are finished. Bishop Fabre will officiate at the laying of the foundation of the National Hall. French Canadians from Ogdensburg, with a brass band, will be in the city to participate in the celebration.

A CONSTABLE GAOLED.—A city policeman named Dickson was up before the Police Magistrate yesterday charged with larceny from a store. He pleaded guilty and begged for mercy, but Mr. Desnoyers, while admitting the painfulness of the case, said he was in duty bound to impose a penalty, and sent Dickson to gaol for two months with hard labor. Mr. J. Curran, Q.C., appeared for the prisoner, and the latter's wife pleaded for his release, but in vain.

CANAL TOLLS.—The canal collectors yesterday morning received the following official communication from the Commissioner of Inland Revenue:—

DEPARTMENT OF INLAND REVENUE. Ottawa, 4th June 1884. Sir, The following are copies of Orders-in-Council passed on the 28th May and 5th June 1884:—

The collectors of canal tolls on the Welland Canal will continue to charge the full rate of tolls, and the reduction will be paid by the department as a refund, upon evidence being furnished by the shippers that the conditions required by the Orders-in-Council have been complied with.

ATWATER AVENUE.—"Citizen" having sent a complaint to this office of filth and offal being dumped on Atwater avenue, a reporter visited the place and found it to be even worse than described. Enquiry at the Road Department showed that the avenue in question, if such it can now be called, was beyond the city limits, lying partly in the municipality of Cote St. Antoine and partly in St. Henri, upon which it was incumbent to put a stop to the nuisance. The city had no jurisdiction whatever in the matter.

DIOCESAN SYNOD.—There will be full cathedral service tonight in connection with the Synod in St. George's Church at 8 o'clock. The seats will be free with the exception of a few reserved for the members of the Synod. In view of the present discussion among Anglican clergymen as to the desirability of having a full cathedral service in our Diocesan mother church, the service will show to those unacquainted with the grand old cathedral evensong of the Church of England what is really meant by a full service.

PRESENTATION.—Last evening there occurred at Messrs. S. Greenfields, Sons & Co.'s store one of those pleasing events which are such frequent occurrences in our city and evidence of a good feeling between fellow-workmen. The occasion was the presentation of a very handsome silver service to Mr. S. C. Jones on his approaching marriage. The gift was accompanied by an address, read by Mr. Knox Bonner, expressive of his fellow-workers admiration for Mr. Jones' good qualities and their best wishes for the future welfare of himself and wife. Mr. Jones briefly returned thanks for the mark of their esteem.

CANADIANS IN LONDON.—The following Canadian visitors registered their names at the London offices of the Canadian Government during the week ending 5th June, 1884:—Rev. George Forrester, D. Hughes Charles, Dundas; James J. Fellows, St. John, N.B.; R. K. Graham, William Porteous, M. D.; J. S. Farrell, Adolphe Greiner, L. A. Martin, A. Roy, E. Collette, N. Sevin, Montreal; K. F. INTERDICTION REFUSED.—A petition for interdiction was heard before Judge Lamer yesterday afternoon, the applicants being the family of Norman Findlayson, who applied to have him interdicted on the ground of being a drunkard. His Honor, after commenting upon the grave responsibility incurred in giving an order of interdiction, held that the evidence was not sufficient and therefore refused the petition. He would, however, advise the defendant to abstain from the use of intoxicating liquors, for if he came before him again the decision would be different.

DEEDS OF VIOLENCE.—The following cases were called from yesterday's evenpapers:—Several roughs attacked a policeman on Bligny Sunday night. Mrs. Murphy, who was beaten by roughs at Point St. Charles on Wednesday, has since died. A number of robberies have recently taken place around the Bonaventure depot. A gang of pickpockets operate there with comparative freedom. A fruit-peddler's booth broken into and robbed on Sunday night by a band of ruffians. A gentleman knocked down and robbed early on Sunday morning.

A $2,000 BURGLARY was found yesterday morning to have been perpetrated over the Holland on the premises of Messrs. R. H. Holland & Co., 246 St. Paul street. Detectives Cullen and Robinson went down at once and found that the entrance had been effected through an adjoining store which had evidently been entered with a key; a hole had been made in the wall between the two stores. The burglars carried off a large quantity of jewellery, plated ware and valuable cutlery, the whole averaging about $2,000 in value. It was hoped the detectives will succeed in finding the thieves and in recovering the stolen goods.

DOMINION ARTILLERY ASSOCIATION.—At a meeting of the council of the Dominion Artillery Association held in Ottawa yesterday, the vacancy caused by the retirement of Major General Luard from the Presidency was filled by the unanimous election of Lieut.-Col. MAN OVERBOARD.

Loss of a Seaman from the Bark Mariner.

The bark Mariner, of Sackville, N. B., came to a halt yesterday after a voyage of 45 days from Bahia, Brazil. The vessel is a fine specimen of the style of craft turned out of the shipyards of New Brunswick. She has a cargo of bag sugar consigned to Anderson, McKenzie & Co. A HERALD reporter went on board yesterday afternoon in search of something more startling than he had seen while on a tour of mysterious lanes and an inspection of ash tides. Mr. David Scott, a sturdy specimen of a North Sea sailor, received the scribe, and in response to the query of "Any news?" related the following as illustrative of the uncertainty of life on the ocean wave:—

"We left Bahia May the second. Nothing of any account occurred to disturb the monotony of the voyage until Tuesday, the third of June. At 11.15 p.m. of that day there was a heavy gale blowing from the S.W., accompanied by a heavy cross sea. We were then in latitude 40.49 N., longitude 61.25 W. At the time named a seaman named Daniel Keith was on the poop deck, engaged in some trifling work. Suddenly the cry of 'man overboard' was heard, and upon running to the starboard side of the bark we saw Keith struggling in the sea, he having fallen overboard from the gangway. The vessel was then going at the rate of nine knots an hour and plunging in a heavy sea. To lower a boat under such circumstances was almost impossible, and would have only endangered the lives of those who went in without any chance of saving Keith's life. Boats and pieces of wood were thrown over the side in the hope that he might catch something to cling to, but in the violence of the storm he was soon lost to view. The lost man rated as an A. B., had been shipped at Bahia, was 23 years of age, and a native of Queenstown, Ireland."

The Mariner was launched at Port Elgin, Westmoreland County, in 1875. She is 95 tons register, owned by E. W. Ogden, of the place where built. Her previous voyage was from Sheldia to Queens-town and Fleetwood; then to Cardiff, where she took in coals for Bahia. The vessel is now at Windmill Point.

UNDUE PREFERENCE.

The Case Against Mr. Bunton.

The investigation into the charges against Mr. Bunton was continued yesterday afternoon before Mr. Dugas. Mr. Bethune and Mr. Geoffroy appeared for Mr. Bunton, Mr. Kerr and Mr. Greenfields for the private prosecution, and Mr. Atwater for Mr. Bulmer. Mr. Bunton, Mr. Davis and Mr. Bulmer were present. Archibald Campbell gave evidence as follows:—I am one of the appointed liquidators of the Exchange Bank. As one of such liquidators I am in possession of the books of the bank. I have with me the minute book of the directors, in which were recorded the proceedings of the directors of the said bank at their meetings. Mr. Campbell then turned to a certain page and stated that under the date of the 15th of September there was a minute of the meeting of this bank held at that date at which were present the Hon. A. W. Ogilvie, A. Bunton, H. Bulmer and T. Craig. This minute shows that a resolution as follows was apparently passed:—

"On account of the numerous demands made on the bank for deposits, and the low state of the finances, that is the ready funds, and the inability of stemming the steady withdrawals, it was decided to suspend payment on Monday, the seventh instant, and to give formal notice of the same to the banks."

"Signed by A. W. Ogilvie as President."

November 22nd a meeting of the directors was held at which Messrs. A. W. Ogilvie, E. K. Greene, T. Craig, and A. Bunton were present. It appears by the minute book that the following resolution was passed:—

Whereas a petition has been served on this bank, at the instance of George A. Greene, praying the Court for a winding up order, and for the appointment of liquidators of the bank.

Whereas, this bank is within the meaning of the statute insolvent, as it is now unable to meet its liabilities, and will not be in a position to resume payment, after the expiration of ninety days' suspension allowed by law. And,

Whereas it is in the interest of all concerned that liquidators be named according to law for the purpose of winding up the business of the bank, and to that end that the prayer and petition of the said George A. Greene be granted. Be it therefore

Resolved, that Mr. J. N. Greenfields be authorized to appear on behalf of this bank on the said petition and to consent that the said petition be granted as prayed for, and he is hereby authorized and empowered to give such consent.

In compliance with the said Bank was insolvent previous to September last. At the beginning of September the stock was quoted above par, near 120. Twenty-five was offered after the collapse, and had no buyers.

Rev. Canon Norman, in the course of a brief address, referred to the Institute's loss in the resignation, through failing health, of the late superintendent, Mr. Widd, who had laid the foundations of the school's usefulness, and whose name should ever be held in honor within its walls. They were, however, most fortunate in having such an able head for the institution as Miss McGann, to whom their thanks were due for accepting the office of superintendent, and under whose management the Institute was rapidly growing in usefulness and numbers. He was greatly pleased at such a large attendance of friends, as they wished for the sympathy and help of as many good people as possible, seeing that the institution had no endowment and was dependent for support upon individual liberality. He hoped the time would soon come when they would be no longer hindered from extending the Institute's useful and charitable operations from lack of funds. The institution was wholly undenominational and thoroughly catholic in spirit, while doing a most truly Christian work. He referred to the late addition to the teaching staff of Mr. Ashcroft, who had devoted himself
