Father, a long way stretched between us. There were those who told me it was blocked up. They said the red men could not pass it. I attempted it. It is like the plain path which conducts to the great spirit.

Father, when I came in sight of your home, it looked white and beautiful. My heart rejoiced. I thought now I should talk with you.

Father, the great spirit gave to his children, the Winnebagos, a pleasant plant. It is good to smoke. I have it here - touching with his finger the bowl of this pipe - I give it you in peace.

Father, I am as old as you. My heart is true. They told me your heart was black. It is not so, we salute in friendship.

Father, I say to you, my talk is little. I am a chief among my people. But one is here who will speak to you soon, and tell you better our thoughts.

We take from the National Intelligencer the annexed account of what followed.

The addressing ended, a young Winnebago advanced in obedience to a signal from the old warrior, and lighted the pipe with fire struck from a flint.
