The Coal Situation

INQUIRY COURT WANT MINERS TO BE REPRESENTED

Scarborough Congress Seek Creation of "Quadruple Alliance"

MEDIATOR ACTIVE

Will Get in Touch With Leaders and Mine Owners

LONDON, July 17.—(A. P.) — A conference of trade union executives meeting here today approved a plan for a great consolidation alliance embracing millions of British workers, including miners, railwaymen, engineers, shipbuilders and transport laborers.

LONDON, July 17. — (U.P.)—With only 14 days' leeway to prevent the threatened coal stoppage at the month end, the Government today continued its efforts to break the miners and operators deadlock.

The court of inquiry instituted by the Government to arrive at causes of the present trouble, sat without the miners, but decided to ask them to appear Monday.

Meantime, the miners' congress at Scarborough continued its session, and sought creation of a "quadruple alliance" with other important labor branches in an effort to thwart, what the miners characterize, as a threatened lowering of the standard of living.

LONDON, July 17. — (A.P.) — The executive committee of the miners, railwaymen, engineers, shipbuilders and transport workers' unions, met here yesterday to consider a proposal for a great consolidation alliance, embracing millions of workers.

The promoters of the suggested alliance seek to bring about united action, both defensive and offensive, in industrial disputes.

If the alliance is established it may lead to a national stoppage of work in the event the miners fail to secure the settlement at which they are aiming at present.

The Daily Mail professes to see a connection between the scheme and efforts of the Communists to capture control of the British trade unions.

The Government's Court of Inquiry into the mining dispute opened this morning, but immediately adjourned until Monday, in hope of getting the miners' leaders to reconsider their decision not to participate in the proceedings.

Several mine leaders are in the city and W. C. Bridgeman, the mediator, intends getting in touch with them, with a view to opening negotiations with the mine owners.

QUITE POSSIBLE GOVERNMENT MAY BE ARBITRATOR

President Coolidge and Labor Secretary Davis Hold Conference

DAVIS LEAVING

Wilkesbarre Convention Checks on Atlantic City Negotiations

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., July 17.—(U. P.) — The Government would do all that it could to bring peace into the anthracite coal industry, in which a strike was threatened for September first, Secretary of Labor Davis said today after a conference with President Coolidge at the Summer White House.

However, the Government contemplates no action or intervention at present. Secretary Davis, who leaves New York tomorrow for England to make a survey of labor conditions there, will return to this country on August 25.

President Coolidge, before he left at noon today for Camp Devens, conferred with Secretary of Labor James Davis on the anthracite coal situation, which is becoming more serious as the operators and miners remain deadlocked in their attempts to reach a settlement renewing the working agreement which expires August 31.

Mr. Coolidge has let it be known the Government looks with disapproval upon the disagreement, and some action, whereby the Government takes steps to prevent a strike, is expected following the conference with Davis. An offer by the Government to act as arbitrator is the most likely move.

No official action or intimation that there would be any action has been given out in official quarters here in connection with the strike.

SHORT ADJOURNMENT.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., July 7.—(A.P.) — The anthracite scale conference adjourns today over the week-end to resume Tuesday, in place of adjourning for one week for the district convention at Wilkes Barre, as had been expected.

Desire to convince the public that no time was being wasted here is believed to have actuated miners and mine owners in deciding to keep to their work regardless of Wilkes Barre.

Nevertheless it is considered doubtful by close observers, whether either side will show its "hole cards" until the convention there is over. Any contention of a provocative nature, it was pointed out by a conferee, might be capitalized unfortunately on the convention floor.

The joint scale sub-committee accordingly faces a trying week, some of its members admit; one in which enough must be accomplished to satisfy public sentiment, and yet not so much that the firebrand among delegates of 70,000 coal diggers in convention assembled can work trouble.

Thomas Kennedy, miners' international secretary-treasurer and former president og district 7, will head a delegation of committee men attending the opening of the convention. They will return in time for the Tuesday session.

CANADIANS WILL SHOOT TONIGHT

Will Try for Places in Final Stage of King's Prize

BISLEY CAMP, July 17 — (C. P.) —Sergt. Wilson, Ottawa and 25 others will shoot this evening for 146 places in the final stage of the King's Prize competition tomorrow. Canada has six men certain of being in the final stage and a possibility of having seven men in it. Last year 10 Canadians shot in the final stage.

KING'S PRIZE

Lieut Alex. Martin, Calgary, and five other marksmen (not Canadian) in the second stage of the shoot for the King's Prize today made possibles at the 300 yard range and there was a host of scores of 49 at this range. None of the Canadians, however, made a possible at the second range, 600 yards, the wind being variable and the light rather doubtful, and the best that Martin could do was a 45. Sergt. Elmslie, Toronto, and Lieut. Harvey, Timmins, Ont., Canadians, each scored 49 at the first range. Lieut. Harvey was top man in the shooting for the King's Prize today.

Following are the Canadian scores in the second stage of the shoot for the King's Prize, 300 and 600 yards, 10 shots at each distance:

	300 Yds.	600 Yds.	Ttl.
Lieut. A. J. Harvey, Timmins, Ont.	49	47	96
Lieut. Alex. Martin, Calgary	50	45	95
Sergt. G. M. Elmslie, Toronto	49	45	94
Captain G. N. Galbraith, London, Ont.	47	47	94
Pte. J. H. Gray, Toronto	47	47	94
C.Q.S. Parnell, Verdun, Que.	47	47	94
Sergt. A. F. B. Wilson, Ottawa	48	44	92
Major C. R. Crowe, Guelph, Ont	47	44	91
Pte. W. J. Irvine, Ottawa	45	46	91
Sergt. G. H. Tyers, Ottawa	44	44	88
Sergt. F. H. Radford, Toronto	43	43	86

Flight Officer G. Richardson, of the Royal Air Force, won the National Rifle Association's silver medal and silver badge for the highest aggregate score in the second stage of the King's Prize competition, 98 out of a possible 100.

PRAISE CANADIANS.

Following are brief and interesting comments on the marksmanship of the Canadians competing at Bisley:

Daily Telegraph — The Canadian team's shooting is what we have learned to expect from them — about the best at this meeting.

Daily Mail—The Canadian shooting is the talk of Bisley.

Daily News—They are good sportsmen, these Canadians. When they finished shooting for the Mackinnon Cup, which they won, the first thing they did was to cheer the other teams.

OTHER DISEASES MAY GIVE WAY TO CANCER DISCOVERY

British Medical Journal Presents Papers of Two Scientists

DATA FAVORABLE

Measles and Smallpox Patients May Benefit by New Method

LONDON, July 17.—(A.P.)—Other diseases than cancer may yield their secrets to scientific workers armed with the technical methods evolved by Dr. William E. Gye, and his hatter colleague, Dr. J. E. Barnard.

This suggestion is put forward by the Lancet, authoritative British medical journal, in presenting papers by the two scientists on their recently announced discoveries regarding the causes of cancer.

"New technical methods now made available" is says "will be applicable to research along a whole enormous front. Diseases like measles, smallpox, foot and mouth disease, dogs' distemper, may yield their secrets to workers armed with these new weapons."

Thus far, nothing has been revealed as to how the methods can be made applicable to the diseases mentioned, but it is believed some information may be forthcoming in this respect very soon.

Emphasizing the importance of the Gye-Barnard investigations, the Lancet refers to the "numerous guesses" in the past as having been of as little value to cancer research as racing tips are to horse breeding.

The papers by Dr. Gye and Dr. Barnard in the Lancet are so technical as to be largely beyond the understanding of the lay reader, but the conclusion that cancer is caused by a virus, or specific organism stands out as the great result of their investigations.

TO PUBLISH PAPERS.

LONDON, July 17. — (Special Star Cable by J. E. Poole, Staff Correspondent.) —The Lancet tomorrow will publish the papers prepared by Dr. W. E. Gye and J. E. Barnard, giving their conclusions based on observance of a virus believed to be the cause of cancer. After reviewing the researches and theories of Dr. Peyton Rouse and also the parasitic hypothesis, and commenting on the embarassments of all these assumptions, Dr. Gye declares:—

"The outstanding feature of new growths is their specificity. The tumor of a mouse transplanted in fragments of living cells will not grow in a rat, or vice versa. The species specificity is very strict. The argument that this is an example of general cellural specificity probably is sound. But the cell-free filtrates of chicken Sarcomata are just as strictly specific and incapable of producing a tumor in any bird save a hen, much less than in mammals. Moreover, the filtrate from each tumor produces only a tumor of the same structure and general behavior to that from which it is derived. In other words, specificity applies not only to species but even to tissue.

"If we accept the conclusion that these tumors are caused by living viruses, and justifiably argue that other tumors have similar causes, we are driven to the conclusion that for every species of animal there is at least one group of viruses, and for every particular tissue a particular virus — an apparently absurd position.

MAY PROVE TRUE.

"Failure to provide a unifying conception of disease has led the cancer specialist to look upon a malignant transformation of a cell as a physiological reaction, or to a perversion of such reaction to a long-continued irritation. It may yet prove true."

MRS. G. F. SMITH DEAD IN N.B.

ST. JOHN, N.B., July 17—(C.P.)—The death of Wilhelmina Gordon, of St. John, widow of George F. Smith, occurred at St. Andrew's yesterday. Mrs. Smith was a native of Pictou, N.S. During her residence in St. John, she was an active member of organizations connected with the Church of England, various philanthropic, patriotic, political and public bodies, including the Victorian Order of Nurses, Red Cross and Associated Charities and Women's Conservative Society.

She is survived by one brother, at Queen's University; two sisters, Mrs. George MacLeod and Miss Gordon, Kildonan, N.S., and three daughters, Mrs. Guy Robinson, of Montreal; Mrs. Norman Guthrie, Ottawa, and Mrs. Allan A. Magee, Montreal.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO MOTHER'S BEDSIDE

QUEBEC, July 17 — (C. P.)—Mrs. Eaton, daughter-in-law of Lady Eaton, of Toronto, who arrives on the C.P.S. Empress of France, this afternoon, has chartered a special train consisting of a private car and a baggage car in order to rush to the bedside of her mother who is dangerously ill in Toronto.

A running speed of sixty miles an hour will be maintained by the special train in order to accomplish the 514 mile run in 11 hours and 10 minutes. Mrs. Eaton will therefore be in Toronto within 11 1-2 hours from the time the ship docks here.

Strange Accident High In Air Brings Death In Its Wake

MILAN, July 17.—(U. P.) Capsizing of an airplane today above Tradate, in one of the strangest accidents of aviation history, brought death and a factory fire in its trail.

The machine, occupied by Sergeants Cattaneo and Pini, struck the chimney of a plant, ignited and spread its flame to the inside of the factory.

The flyers were burned to death and the owner of the plant as well as one of his workmen seriously injured.

HOAX OR TRUTH TELEGRAM GIVES SCOTT REPRIEVE

Brother Wires Governor He is Guilty and Will Surrender

DON'T BELIEVE STORY

Father Gets Message from Son En Route to Chicago

WINDSOR, Ont., July 17.—(C. P.) —"Dad has heard from Robert." This was the message telephoned from Chicago to Miss Agnes Harmon, of this city, early this morning by Mrs. Catherine Scott, wife of Russell T. Scott, shortly after Scott had been granted a seven-day reprieve from death by the noose.

According to Scott's wife, the message read:

"Am on way to Chicago, Dad, to give myself up. Have wired authorities." The message was signed, "Robert."

In her conversation with Miss Harmon, Mrs. Scott did not say where the message was issued. The telegram to Governor Small which secured a reprieve for Russell Scott at the last moment was sent from Detroit.

These communications, if genuine, constitute the first word heard from Robert Scott, younger brother of the condemned man, since the murder occurred early last year.

Robert Scott was said to be very fond of Detroit and the fact that the message purporting to be sent by him originated in that city is regarded as confirming its authenticity, by his former acquaintances. The younger Scott is a veteran of the United States navy.

HANGING DELAYED.

CHICAGO, July 17.—(Star Special) — With death on the gallows awaiting him at sunrise this morning, Russell Scott, last midnight, was granted a reprieve of one week.

Governor Len Small saved Scott, for the time being, from hanging for the murder of Joseph Maurer, druggist's clerk, after Scott had been two days in the death cell, and after all hope for him had been abandoned.

Even Scott believed that dawn would bring the end. Months of work by his wife, his father, family friends and his lawyers had failed to countermand the hanging sentence.

Twenty-two words flashed over telegraph wires to the executive mansion at Springfield accomplished what all else had failed to do.

"Delay the hanging of my brother, Russell Scott," this mystery message read. "I will be in to surrender myself. I am the man who shot Joseph Maurer." (Signed) Robert Scott.

Those were the 22 words. The message may have been faked by some one in Detroit, from where it was sent. It may have been a ruse by desperate friends of the doomed man to save him. It may have been sent by the man whose name was signed.

Russell told newspapermen he did not believe the telegram was from Robert.

"If Robert actually sent that wire he would have gotten word to me," Russell said. "I don't believe he will show up."

USED MESSENGER.

It was learned that the message was handed a newsboy who received 50 cents for taking it to the telegraph office in Detroit. The boy did not get a good description of the man who gave it to him.

Nothing further has been received by officials in confirmation of the telegram. They are frankly skeptical and point out that if the sender really intended to give himself up, and make sure of halting the execution, his logical proceeding would have been to go to a police station and surrender himself. However, a close watch will be kept on all trains arriving from Detroit.

Will H. Colvin, head of the Board of Pardons and Paroles, felt the uncertainty. He believed that Robert Scott may have sent the message. He immediately communicated with Governor Small. The Governor was resting in a sanitorium after an operation on his teeth. His order for a week's reprieve followed at once, to give time to find whether the message was true or false.

SEARCH FOR GOVERNOR.

All day Scott's wife, his father and his lawyers had frantically tried to find the Governor. They telephoned, they telegraphed, they sent messages hither and yon over the state hunting him. A broadcasting station sent out a wireless call to the Governor, but he could not be found. Colvin found him. He told the Governor of the message. They agreed that a miscarriage of justice might result if Russell Scott should be hanged at daybreak. At midnight, Sheriff Peter M. Hoffman got a telephone call:

"Scott is granted a reprieve of one week."

TIME DOMINIONS HELPED WITH NAVY, SAYS LLOYD GEORGE

Declares Japan and America Building Ships Against Each Other

"MAY BE TROUBLE"

Makes Strong Appeal to Relieve England's Navy Burden

LONDON, July 17.—(Star Special Cable by J. E. Poole, Staff Correspondent)—Lloyd George in the House of Commons last night made reference to the Dominions' naval obligations, saying:

"I think it is about time the whole British Empire came in and stated frankly that they will take their share. Too much has been left this gallant little country and it is time the Empire said—Your burdens are ours."

It would not be surprising if this gives a lead to the Government, badly worried as it is by the present pressing burden of debt and mounting calls on the nation's resources.

SUPPORT APPEAL.

LONDON, July 17.—(B. U. P.)—Lloyd George has made a strong appeal to the Dominions to share the burden of the cost of maintenance in the British Navy. The appeal appears in the London Express and is arousing much comment. Simultaneously with this issue in Lord Beaverbrook's paper an article appears in the Westminster Gazette, which quotes the Naval and Military Record as authority for the revelation that progress is being made in the building of the second largest dry dock in the world at Esquimalt, Vancouver Island.

The Record, in commenting on this piece of news, says: "The idea which dictated the building of this dock is purely defensive, for Esquimalt is too remote to serve as an operating base for the Pacific and the mere possession of such a dry dock must confer on Esquimalt a degree of strategical importance such as it has never heretofore possessed."

The impression is unfortunately left in the public mind that this dock is being built by the Imperial Government without Canada contributing in any manner towards the expense. Even the Westminster Gazette in its editorial says: "The present Government has restored to us the dangerous blessing of Singapore and apparently there is another large dock in process of construction at Vancouver Island." Not a word is mentioned of Canada paying for the dock.

In official circles, however, emphasis is laid on the fact that the dock is purely a commercial proposition and cannot be regarded as a contribution by the Dominion to the naval burden of the Empire. There is much support here for Lloyd's George's appeal, but neither politicians nor press care to express it, feeling that the matter is an exceedingly delicate one, and they are impressed with Lloyd George's courage in coming out as he did last night. Only Lord Beaverbrook's paper, however, gives any prominence to the speech. Meanwhile, the differences in the Cabinet seem likely to be settled in favor of the navy. According to the majority of political correspondents here, the majority of the Ministers side with Rt. Hon. W. C. Bridgeman against Churchill, who is insisting on rigid economy. It is now said that the Cabinet has agreed to build eighteen new cruisers in the first three years of a six year program. There is no doubt, however, that these and other differences have broken the unity of the Cabinet.

PREDICTS TROUBLE.

LONDON, July 17 — (U. N.) — America and Japan are building war ships against each other and some day there "may be trouble" Lloyd George told the House of Commons in debate on the British Naval policy Thursday night.

"Japan is genuinely frightened about her powerful neighbor across the Pacific, while the latter is genuinely frightened about Japan" he said.

Labor members broke into cheers at this point.

"Because they are frightened of each other," Lloyd George continued, "as often happens, they are building against each other and some day there may be trouble."

Lloyd George scouted the possibility of a war between Britain and Japan. "We ought to refuse to contemplate the possibility of war between Britain and the United States" he said. "It ought not even be discussed in the Commons, because it only makes mischief."

COURT DISASTER

Following the debate, the House of Commons adjourned without voting after Rt. Hon. W. C. Bridgeman, First Lord of the Admiralty, had spoken a warning to the effect that if the Government neglected its duties in building, it would be courting "another disaster." The Admiralty, he said, had taken into consideration the programs of other countries in asking an appropriation of $122,500,000 for the coming year.

Before Lloyd George spoke, Vice-Admiral Henniker-Hughan told the Commons that Great Britain has only two cruisers capable of 33 knots an hour, while Japan has 16 capable of that speed and the United States ten capable of 35 knots.

Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the late Labor Government, interrupted the Admiral. "Then you are building against the United States," he asked. "No I am merely telling the facts," Henniker-Hughan replied.

The debate represents an effort of the Liberals and Laborites to influence the Government in considering the present cruiser building program which will be announced shortly.

WANT 40 CRUISERS

Big navy men are asking for 40 cruisers, of the maximum tonnage permitted by the Washington treaty, 10,000 tons, to be built within six years. Sir John Simon, Liberal, ridiculed the idea that the cruisers were intended for replacement.

"That is like replacing a worn out Ford with a Rolls Royce," he said. It was Sir John who precipitated the debate by moving a reduction in the Admiralty appropriation. He pointed out that the sum asked now exceeds the last appropriation by $25,000,000.

"That is a staggering sum. It is doubtful whether the country would be able to bear the burden," he declared.

Sir John Simon and Ramsay Macdonald, former Labor Premier, urged the Government to do its utmost to bring about international disarmament, and Lady Astor demanded that the United States and Great Britain call another disarmament conference.

OTTAWA'S VIEW.

OTTAWA, July 17 — (C. P.) —The British Government has made no proposal looking to the establishment of a naval base at Esquimalt, B. C. This was stated officially at the Department of National Defense today when attention was drawn to rumors that such a proposal had been made. It was stated that the point was raised from time to time in England that there should be a British naval base on the Pacific coast, but that nothing had been done. The Canadian Government now operates a naval dockyard at Esquimalt.

Floods Add to Sad Plight in Hong Kong Think Many Killed

HONG KONG, July 17. (U. P.) — Disastrous floods sweeping down on Hong Kong today added to the plight to the community still afflicted with a big Chinese strike.

Seven houses containing 30 Chinese families were washed away.

Many are believed to have been killed, including ex-Legislative Councillor Chausiu Ki, with most of his family.

CALLS MACPHAIL HISTORY "NASTY"

General Meighen Says He Does Not Approve Attack on Hughes

MANY QUALITIES

Asserts Author Should Have Waited Before Passing Judgment

QUEBEC, July 17 — (Star Special) —That Sir Andrew MacPhail, who was a personal friend of his, should have waited to write his history, was one of the comments made on the work recently published by General F. S. Meighen, formerly O. C. of the 14th Battalion, who is spending a few days in town, when asked his opinion on the first volume of the official history of the war.

"Sir Andrew MacPhail is one of my friends," stated General Meighen, "and I am convinced that he will not be angry if I do not approve what I read in his book.

"Dr. MacPhail reproaches the late Sir Sam Hughes with nearly all he did at the beginning of the war, There is no doubt that the Minister of Militia of 1914 made some serious mistakes. It was an error to equip the first contingent as was done at Valcartier. But Sir Sam Hughes had dreamed of sending to Europe, a Canadian division completely equipped with material manufactured in Canada. He wanted everyone to wear "Made-in-Canada" goods. To realize his project he had to make some very heavy expenses, which sometimes were extravagant. I believe, however, that Sir Sam had some great qualities. He was very energetic and he wanted to do right.

MAIN FAULT.

"His main fault, I agree in this with Sir Alexander Bertram, was to listen to no advice.

"The greatest error he committed in this province was the way he organized recruiting. Why give the recruiting work in Quebec to a Methodist minister of Toronto? Would he have succeeded if he had appointed a Catholic bishop for that work in Ontario? But Sir Sam is not the only one who committed errors at the beginning of the war. War ministers in all countries made some, even the Germans, who were preparing war for 40 years. To write history impartially, numerous years must pass. Sir Andrew MacPhail, who is a charming man, should have waited a few more years. He would have judged the men of 1914 with more impartiality.

"I noticed that Sir Andrew attached importance to the medical corps. Certainly this service was a very important one during the war, but I think that there is too much reference made to the difficulties which occurred before the various groups on this connection."

Referring to the war in general, General Meighen stated, that according to him, Marshal Foch had been the greatest general with Haig.

Asked whether he believed another war was coming, General Meighen said: "As soon as the Germans are ready. This is the history of Germany for the last 1,000 years. Each time the German people has been ready for war a conflict has occurred. France is justified in fearing a new attack from Germany. Unfortunately, Germany is given too much freedom in organizing."

General Meighen, in closing, stated that he did not want to make any forecasts regarding the coming general elections, but he said that he hoped that whoever was returned to power would not make any move towards annexation with the United States.

Trial Adjourned Until Monday, For Defence To Make Statement

Only Closing Arguments on Both Sides Remain Before Case Goes to Jury—Exception Entered to Ruling of Judge Raulston Barring Expert Witnesses — Early Ending of Famous Evolution Case as Now Predicted.

COURTROOM, DAYTON, Tenn., July 17.—(A. P.)—Judge John T. Raulston announced this morning that he had decided to exclude scientific testimony from the trial of John T. Scopes.

Court was adjourned until Monday morning to allow counsel for the defense time in which to prepare statements for the record of what their witnesses would have testified had they been permitted to take the witness stand.

Immediately after the court's decision was announced, Mr. Hays noted an exception to the ruling.

"It is a denial of justice to permit the State to make the case on its own evidence," he declared. "It is contrary to every principle of Anglo-Saxon judicial procedure."

DAYTON, Tenn., July 17.—Judge Raulston's decision, made on a motion by the prosecution to exclude such testimony, brings the end of the trial in sight.

Only the closing arguments on both sides remain before the case gets to the jury.

The defence immediately entered an exception to the ruling.

Raulston Says His Duty Is To Take General Intent Of Legislature's Opinion

In holding against the defense, Judge Raulston said he conceived his duty to be to take the general intent of the Legislature's opinion in passing the anti-evolution law into consideration and not quibble over a word.

"Why call expert witnesses?" he said. "There is nothing complex about the wording of the Act.

"The court sustains the State in its request to rule out the expert witnesses."

Raulston sustained in detail the prosecution's contention that the phrase of the law "and to teach instead that Man is descended from lower animals," only clarified the prohibition against teaching "evolution" by stating what it meant.

In passing, Raulston said he believed it would be better to have said: "ascend" instead of "descend."

Hays took exception for the defense, saying it was a denial of justice.

He then asked that witnesses be introduced to inform the court.

Raulston agreed to the introduction of evidence to help make a record for the Appellate Court.

Hays wanted to go further.

"We want to present evidence to you that the law is unreasonable," said Hays.

"I'll hear the evidence, and if the evidence convinces me that I was not correct in my ruling, I will reverse myself," said Raulston.

ARGUMENT OVER RULING.

Argument over the ruling, which, following reading of the opinion, brought the daily clash between Attorney-General Stewart and Arthur Garfield Hays.

In the course of the wrangle, Stewart said: "The defense is trying to make a farce out of the case."

Malone asked Stewart to withdraw his remark.

"I'll withdraw it," said Stewart, "but will substitute it with another. The defence looks upon the trial as a chance to educate the world on their theories of evolution."

He asked the court to limit the evidence for the record to a particular theory of evolution, "denying the divine origin of man," as specified by the anti-evolution law.

Malone denied that the defense was presented here to just educate the world.

"If the defense is representing anything outside the case," he said, "it is merely interested in meeting the campaign of propaganda which has been begun by those represented by the Prosecution."

Bryan asked: "If these expert witnesses are to testify, I supose they will be subject to cross examination?"

"Yes," answered Raulston.

"We have definite objection to that," said Darrow.

"If it is allowed we will ask that Mr. Bryan be put on the stand."

Raulston over-ruled Darrow.

ASKS PERMISSION.

Darrow then asked permission to submit affidavits of the scientists to the court as to their testimony instead of going on the stand to be cross-examined and asked for the rest of the day to prepare them. This, the judge at first objected to, asking what Darrow expected to do.

"We expect to protect our rights in some other court, "said Darrow. "That's plain enough, isn't it?"

"I don't understand why every motion and every suggestion we make is promptly over-ruled," said Darrow.

"I hope you don't intend this to be a reflection on this court," said Raulston.

"You can hope," replied Darrow, squaring himself.

"I can do something else," said Raulston threateningly.

"All right; all right," said Darrow, grimly standing determinedly with his arms folded like Ajax defying the lightning.

CARDINAL BEGIN REMAINS CRITICAL

Pope Cables His Sorrow—Doctors Hope for Recovery

QUEBEC, July 17. — (C.P.) — Enquiry this afternoon at the Archbishop's Palace elicited the information that there had not been the slightest change in the condition of His Eminence Cardinal Begin during the day.

Dr. Edwin and Dr. Achille Paquet visited their patient at noon and afterwards announced that they found the slightest improvement noticed in the condition of His Eminence yesterday morning, still continued. Official bulletins of the past two days have helped considerably to revive hope that the Primate of the Catholic Church in Canada may recover from his present illness, despite the fact that from another well informed source it is admitted that his condition "is still very, very grave."

The following message of regret was cabled this morning to the Archbishop's Palace here by Cardinal Gasparri, Secretary of State at the Vatican on behalf of his Holiness, Pope Pius XI.

"Cardinal Begin, Quebec.

"The Holy Father deeply affected. Expresses best wishes for the recovery of Your Eminence; joins with the whole Diocese in seeking Divine comfort, and sends you his most cordial Apostolic Benediction.

"GASPARRI."

FOUR TREATIES FULLY RATIFIED

American and Canadian Officials Exchange Documents at Washington

WASHINGTON, July 17 — (C. P.) —Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice and Attorney-General of the Canadian Government, at a conference with Secretary of State Kellogg, today, exchanged ratifications of four treaties between Canada and the United States. They were the treaties on the International Boundary; on the levels of the Lake of the Woods, on the enforcement of the narcotic laws, and one providing for extradition for violation of narcotic laws.

The treaties were negotiated some months ago and were ratified by the Canadian parliament and the United States Senate.

AMERICAN FLYERS JOIN FRENCH ARMY

Briand and Painleve Accepted Foreign Soldiers' Services

PARIS, July 17. — (U.P.)—Foreign Minister Briand today telegraphed Marshal Lyautey, Moroccan Governor, that he and Premier Painleve had accepted the offer of a group of former American fighters for France to serve with France in the Morocco campaign against Abd-el-Krim.

Briand sought Lyautey's advice on practical details connected with their mustering into the service, adding that the men want the same rank they held in the World War.

Likewise, there was a question as to what uniform and what kind of planes should be assigned them in their work as a special foreign air escadrille.

Briand suggested that the Americans enlist under Sultan Moulai Youssef of Morocco.

PETAIN IN SPAIN.

ALICANTE, Spain, July 17. — (A.P.)—Marshal Petain, of France arrived here by airplane this morning from Toulouse via Barcelona. He is flying to Rabat, residence of the French Governor-General of Morocco, to confer with the latter regarding French plans to crush the Riffian insurgent leader, Abd-el-Krim.

FRENCH CASUALTIES.

PARIS, July 17. — (A.P.)—Total French casualties, so far, in the Moroccan war with Abd-el-Krim's Riffians, are given by the Petit Journal in a Fez despatch as 4,148. Of these 707 were killed, 2,775 wounded and 666 missing. The latter may almost certainly be considered dead.

IMPERIAL BANK MANAGER TO RETIRE

TORONTO, July 17 — (Star Special.) — After 35 years service in the Imperial Bank, George G. Lemesurier, manager of the Toronto branch, will retire owing to illness. He will be succeeded as local manager by S. A. R. Martin, at present manager of the branch bank at Yonge and Queen streets.

Mr. Lemesurier was born in Quebec, 60 years ago, and was educated in Edinburgh Academy, Scotland, and Beresford School, England. He was 15 years in India as manager of a tea and chinchona corporation. He entered the service of the bank in 1891, and in 1898 was made manager of the branch at Niagara Falls.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Lusk—Hunt.

At St. Paul's Church, Bury, Que., the marriage was quietly solemnized on Wednesday evening, July 15, at eight o'clock, of Fern Edythe, second daughter of Mrs. Aylmer Byron Hunt, of Bury, and the late Mr. Hunt, M.P., for Compton County to Mr. Harold Victor Lusk, of Cookshire, Que., only son of Mrs. Charles Colin Campbell Lusk also of Cookshire, and the late Mr. Lusk. The Rector, the Rev. Charles T. Lewis officiated. The church was effectively decorated for the occasion with quantities of summer blooms and ferns. Canterbury bells, sweet William and fox glove adorned the altar. Miss Olive Lusk, of Cookshire, sister of the groom, presided at the organ, playing the Wedding Marches and a soft accompaniment throughout the ceremony, and the choir chanted the marriage psalm. The ushers were Mr. Arthur W. Kerridge, of Coaticook, Que., and Mr. Irving H. Haines, of Cookshire, and the best man was Mr. A. Ross Cromwell, of Cookshire. Master Douglas Saunders, of Bury who was ring bearer, wore a white sailor suit and Miss Rosamond Staples, of Cookshire as flower-girl was wearing a petal frock of white silk, white mohair hat with small bunches of pink forget-me-nots and she carried a golden basket surmounted on the handle with a pink and white tulle bow and filled with rose petals which were strewn before the bride as she left the church. The bridesmaids were the brides' sister, Miss Lena Hunt, of Bury, who was wearing a powder blue sleeveless georgette gown with silver trimmings and Miss Jennie Hunt, of Montreal, in a lemon colored pin-tucked georgette frock. The matron of honor, Mrs. Louis C. Roy, of Cookshire, another sister of the bride, wore a silver grey georgette gown made with tiny ruffles. All the attendants wore silver shoes and stockings, with Mother Goose hats of silver lace and they carried arm bouquets of sweet peas in pastel shades and snap-dragons tied with contrasting tulle streamers. The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Herbert H. Hunt, of Sawyerville, Que., wore a French model gown, of canton maline, sleeveless, and heavily embroidered in silver and crystals and white kid slippers. Her veil was of Spanish lace and tulle and was arranged in coronet style with clusters of orange blossoms at either side and she carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Mrs. Hunt, mother of the bride, wore a grey canton crepe gown, black hat with osprey mounts, and corsage bouquet of lavendar sweet peas. Mrs. Lusk, the groom's mother, was in black silk marocain, with black silk and straw hat mounted with black ospreys and corsage bouquet of purple sweet peas. Miss Olive Lusk, sister of the groom, was wearing a cerise and silver canton crepe gown with silver lace and rhinestone trimming and lavender hat. A reception followed the ceremony at the residence of the bride's mother which was attended by only the immediate relatives and a few intimate friends. Quantities of summer flowers were used in the decoration in the drawing and living rooms while the bridal table was adorned with pale pink roses. Later, Mr. Lusk and his bride left on a motor trip to the New England coast, the bride travelling in an ensemble costume of olive green canton crepe gown with dull silver trimmings, olive green silk moracain wrap with white tibet trimmings and French felt hat to match. On their return they will reside in Cookshire. Among the out-of-town invited guests were Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Hunt, Master Stewart Hunt, Ottawa, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hunt, Miss Blanche Hunt, of Sawyerville, Que.; Mrs. C. C. C. Lusk, Miss Olive Lusk, Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Roy all of Cookshire, Mr. and Mrs. Carleton C. Young, Miss Suzanne Young, Master Clark Young, Mrs. S. Brady, all of Brunswick, Me., and Mr. F. N. McCrea, M.P., Mrs. McCrea, Hon. Jacob Nicol and Mrs. Nicol, of Sherbrooke.

Lukeman—O'Brien.

The wedding took place in the Lady Chapel of St. Patrick's Church on Tuesday morning, July 14th, at nine o'clock, of Kathleen Mary, only daughter of Mrs. and the late Joseph O'Brien, 117 St. Famille street, to Mr. James John Lukeman, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lukeman, Union avenue. The ceremony was performed by Monsignor Donnelly, Rector of St. Anthony's Church, and Professor Patrick J. Shea presided at the organ. During the Mass solos were rendered by Miss Sadie Sheehy and Mr. Edward Regan. The bride, who was unattended, was given away by her brother, Mr. Charles J. O'Brien and was gowned in white Chantilly lace over brocaded satin with hat to match and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses, lilies-of-the-valley and maiden hair fern. Mr. Douglas Walker acted as witness for the groom. The ushers were Messrs. Richard Lukeman, Jr., and John H. O'Brien. The chapel was decorated with blue delphiniums, yellow corcopsis, marguerites, palms and butterfly roses. After the ceremony a buffet breakfast was served at the home of the bride's mother. Mr. and Mrs. Lukeman left later on their honeymoon for an extended motor trip through the Adirondacks. The bride travelled in a white brocaded crepe sport dress with touches of black, a black coat of French bengaline with ermine collar and a small orchid color French felt hat.

Latest Portrait of Princess Mary

New and charming picture of Viscountess Lascelles, showing her wearing a rich and modest evening costume, and adorned with much of the jewellery which she received as wedding gifts. The diamond and pearl bandeau was the gift of Their Majesties, and the necklace and pendant were from her husband.

RULES TO AVOID SEASICKNESS GIVEN

Physician Tells Causes of Malady and How to Minimize it

Some people never get seasick, some get seasick for a few voyages and then are immune and some get seasick every time they go to sea. There are various causes of seasickness, and doctors can relieve some of them, but the strongest cause of all, in most people, is the psychic cause, or thinking about seasickness and expecting to be seasick.

Thus, though with much new, specific and interesting information, and many helpful suggestions, does an article in the thirteenth annual report of the medical department of the United Fruit Company, just issued, discuss the ancient terror of the deep.

Martin Arrowsmith would revel in the report, which is an impressive record of scientific investigations of bookworm, malaria, the sand-fly problem and many other subjects by the large staff of doctors which the company maintains on its plantations, its steamships and in other departments of its organizations.

The average reader will shy at the scientific terminology and the ranks of statistics, but Arrowsmiths doubtless will find rich and exciting browsing in them. And the most unscientific reader will find poignant human interest in the article by Dr. P. H. Desnoes, Port Medical Officer of the company, at New York, on why people get seasick and what to do about it.

The arctic is based not only on a review of the medical literature on the subject and on Dr. Desnoe's personal observation, he says, but "it embodies the collective experience of the ships' doctors on ten of our passenger steamers of the New York division who had been in the service for from two to ten years."

The history of seasickness goes gack to the early Greeks, Dr. Desnoes points out in the first place. He doubtless intends this as a consolation, but to the landlubber who is subject to mal de mer, it is depressing. If they haven't found a way to prevent seasickness in all that time what hope is there?

There is hope, according to Dr. Desnoes.

One of the main theories as to what causes seasickness is that the motion of the ship over-stimulates the equilibratory organs of the labyrinth, or set of little lymph-filled cells in our temples, which tell us whether we are at right angles to our environment, or otherwise and that the excess stimuli affect other centres, which respond in the traditional manner.

Congenital deaf mutes, it has been noted, are never seasick. Infants and those who have had bilateral disease of the internal ear, with destruction of the labyrith, are similarly immune. Birds commonly get seasick, "probably because of their very highly developed and sensitive equilibratory organs. Sailors have frequently noted this phenomena in the case of the albatross perched on a spar and passengers coming up from the Tropics with macaws and parrots often see the symptoms of seasickness in these birds. Monkeys likewise are very susceptible."

NOT EYE STRAIN.

Eye strain is a prominent theory, but does not explain all cases, according to Dr. Desnoes, as blind persons sometimes get seasick and some who go to bed as soon as they get on board and remain in a darkened stateroom, do not escape.

A fourth theory concerns itself with irritability of the nervous system which affects the internal organs. The involuntary contractions of different parts of this region are being closely studied, he says, and experiments made.

Psychic impressions play a large part in persons of a neurotic disposition," he continues. "Some people become nauseated or even violently ill, if they merely go on board a ship to see a friend off. Others are made sick by seeing or hearing their roommate's miseries, or even listening to tales of how seasick somebody else was on the last trip. The smell of food is well known to be the last straw when one is on the verge of seasickness. "In general," says he, "the psychic element is, in many people, the strongest element of all and the most difficult to overcome.

"Immunity to the effects of a ship's motion under average weather conditions is usually established after three or four days, in a healthy adult," he reassures us. "It is not permanent immunity that it is developed, but it is one which is more readily acquired on a second voyage than on a first. After many voyages complete freedom is to be expected, always excepting, of course, slight relapses due to severe weather conditions.

"Passengers who embark suffering from any form of gastro-intestinal disturbance, perhaps an overloaded stomach or clogged up intestines, speedily become victims, as well as those who are nervously exhausted and below par from various excesses. The indolent life of many Latin American women makes them most susceptible, while people who lead an active, athletic life may be entirely immune. In general, those in the extremes of life (infants or aged persons), suffer least, and the alert man, in full possession of his faculties, suffers most.

UNFORTUNATES.

"A word may be mentioned here about those unfortunates who never 'get over' seasickness. Some sea captains are known to be sick every time they cross the ocean. History affords a famous example in the case of Lord Nelson. In one case known to the writer, susceptibility to this malady was a definite family trait. This officer's father followed the sea for sixty years and was always subject to mal de mer; his three brothers, who were also seafaring men, were similarly affected, one so badly that finally he had to choose another profession."

The misery of the passengers finds some company in the crew, as a regular thing, according to a table of statistics from 1915 to 1923 inclusive, which shows, in 1923, that 30,283 passengers were carried, of whom 210 were seasick and 12,639 members of the crews, of whom 53 were seasick—a percentage for the passengers of 69, and for the crew of 41. The percentage of passengers seasick in 1922 was 50; of the crew, 28; in 1921, the passenger percentage was 40, the crew, 10. In one year, 1919, passenger and crew percentages were the same, 68.

Nobody died of seasickness during all the time covered by these figures, which is some comfort.

Even sailors in the navy get seasick, though the proportion is small—for instance, 1.18 in 1.000 in 1919, 1.01 in 1.000 in 1918, and only .21 in 1.000 in 1920.

"The great majority of passengers," Dr. Desnoes sums up, "can avoid seasickness by adopting, a week or so before sailing, a few rules of hygiene and diet. Abundant sleep must be obtained to place the central nervous system in as good a functionating condition as possible. Exercise in the open air, especially for those who ordinarily spend most of their time indoors, is important. Horseback riding and aquatic sports are especially to be recommended. Avoidance of excesses of all kinds is, needless to say, important.

"The following articles should be strictly avoided: Sugar pies, cakes, pastries, candies and other sweets. After a person embarks the diet generally should be restricted in amount and should be limited to those articles that appeal most to the appetite. In general, little fluid should be taken at meals, but plenty between meals, such as clear bullion in the forenoons and weak tea in the afternoon. A laxative pill at night, or soda phosphate in the morning is usually necessary. Most of the time should be spent on deck and the mind should be kept actively engaged in some diversion. Deck games are excellent and cards may serve the less energetically inclined. A moderate indulgence in alcohol and tobacco, by those accustomed to their use is not contra-indicated."

DEBUTANTES AND LORD CHANCELLOR

His Rulings as to Dress Must Be Obeyed

LONDON, July—(By Mail)—Frocks worn at court functions at Buckingham Palace must not be too flimsy, according to a special ruling on the subject recently by the lord chamberlain's office, which has charge of social affairs for King George and Queen Mary. The ruling was prompted, it was explained, by the tightness of dresses, but in this connection the lord chamberlain has let it be known that there had been no ban on narrow skirts so long as they were full enough to permit the curtsey to be gracefully carried out by the wearer.

With regard to the flimsy frocks the lord chamberlain said it appeared, from reports in his hands, that some of the debutantes at last year's courts did not wear sufficiently substantial lingerie and consequently, in some instances, even knees were visible, which was not to the liking of "certain officials." As the outcome of the lord chamberlain's order a new material has been brought into use by the modistes to meet the occasion. It is a very heavy crepe de chine known as court crepe, and made into specially designed slips to be worn under court gowns.

FROM THE STAR FILES

THIRTY YEARS AGO.

(From The Star Files, Wednesday, July 17, 1895.)

London.—Still the Tory tide flows on, bearing on its crest victory. At three o'clock this afternoon the following was the result of the general elections:—Conservatives, 203; Unionists, 33; Total 236. Liberals, 50; McCarthyites, 20; Parnellites, 6; Labor, 1; Total 77. Net Unionist gain, 36. If Salisbury's coalition party continues to score gains in the same proportion as the returns show at one o'clock this morning, the Unionist majority in the new Parliament will number 83. The indications are that the final figures will be above rather than below that.

Ottawa. — The Manitoba school question, considered on its merits, was the subject debated by the Commoners yesterday. It was brought up by Mr. D'Alton McCarthy, who has been looking for a chance to do so for a week or more. The following want of confidence motion was proposed by McCarthy: "That this House hears with regret the statements recently made defining the policy of the Government respecting the Manitoba School question, and is unwilling, by silence, to allow it to be assumed that at the session to be held in January, any more than at the present session, it is prepared to pass a law to restore separate schools in Manitoba, on the outlines of the remedial order of March 21, 1895."

Quebec. — The Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, Messrs. Charles Langelier, F. X. Lemieux and G. F. M. Dechene have been invited to address an immense meeting of French-Canadians at Crescent Park, Riverside, Rhode Island. The occasion is that of a gigantic picnic to be given by the Democrats to the French-Canadians of Rhode Island, Maine, Connecticut and Massachusetts, on August 11 and 12. Special trains will be run, and between thirty and forty thousand are expected. President Cleveland will be present. Mr. Langelier has accepted the invitation.

New York. — A despatch to the Recorder from Santiago de Cuba says:—Under command of Lieut. Gueras, fifty marines from the Spanish gunboat Magallenes effected a landing on July 8, on the coast near Maravi, under cover of the big guns of the man-of-war, and engaged 500 insurgents in combat. When the insurgents prepared to charge their onslaught was easily repulsed by a shower of shells from the gunboat.

Paris. — The Council of the French Legion of Honor have resigned in consequence of the action of the Chamber of Deputies in adopting an interpellation, calling upon the Government to introduce a bill to reorganize the Council, because of their retention of M. Eiffel upon their membership rolls after the disclosures connecting him with the Panama Canal swindles.

London, Ont.—The Rev. Dr. Wild has taken leave of the First Congregational Church here, and that church now is without a minister.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

(From The Star Files, Monday, July 17, 1905.)

Ottawa. — The closing days of the session will see some important changes affecting the leaders on both sides of the House of Commons, the members of both Houses of Parliament. Ex-Ministers of the Crown of five years' service in charge of a portfolio, and the judiciary of Canada, whether of the Supreme, Exchequer, Superior or County Courts. First of all, the salary of the Prime Minister, which is at present $8,000, is to be increased to $12,000. For a long time past it has been generally conceded that the First Minister of the Dominion is underpaid. The claims upon the occupant of the office, whether in the matter of hospitality or for charitable purposes, are almost beyond the comprehension of the average elector. There has been a feeling in many quarters that the First Minister's salary should be $15,000 a year, and this, it is said, has been strongly impressed upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier for the last two or three years. The Premier has finally yielded to the wishes of his friends to the extent that he is prepared to assent to Parliament voting a salary of $12,000 to the leader of the Government, whoever he may be, but no more. Mr. Fielding, therefore, gives notice of a resolution to make the salary of the First Minister of the Dominion $12,000 a year.

St. Petersburg. — The Nodoe Vremya today prints the following statement of Russia's position, which may be inspired: "Russia can consent only to such a peace as will not affect the dignity or vital interests of the Empire. To act otherwise would be fatal to Russia and would threaten all Europe. Europe no longer believes in Japanese assurances that she will not restrict European interests in the Far East. Even in Great Britain and America the voices of moral instigators can be heard in favor of the indirect interference of the powers to moderate Japan's demands. Our plenipotentaries must remember that they must defend the interests not only of Russia, but also of the other Caucasian powers, and they will find moral support in Berlin, Paris, Washington, and perhaps in London. Our army in the field is much stronger than it was fifteen months ago."

London.—The Duke of Devonshire on Monday week will call the attention of the House of Lords to Mr. Chamberlain's recent speeches and move a resolution disapproving of any system of Colonial preference based on the taxation of food and general or penal tariff imports.

Ottawa. — The new City Directory is out today, and gives the population of Ottawa as 81,629. This is 21,000 more than the decennial census, and is got at by multiplying the names in the directory by three.

Among the fineries possessed by the Dowager Queen Margherita of Italy is a lace handkerchief valued at $30,000.

Work—Not Charity

Col. Hatch, Canadian Manufacturer's Association recommends:

"Co-operation amongst all classes with a view to purchasing one another's services, as a remedy for unemployment."

There is considerable unemployment amongst Citizens of Montreal, and employers here can, by employing householders as opportunity arises, do much to alleviate it.

Nearly one hundred of our large employers are already co-operating with us to this end, by giving us the opportunity to fill their needs.

ALLEGED MIRACLE DRAWS THOUSANDS

Curious Case of Religious Traumatism in Italy

ROME—(By Mail)—A curious case of religious traumatism has been manifested in Montato Uffugo, a small place in Calabria, where a young woman named Elena Ajello sweats blood every Friday in March and April, and especially on Good Friday. The phenomenon has been reproduced with increasing intensity during the past three years, and last week attracted more than 10,000 persons to witness the extraordinary manifestation. Elena Ajello is an invalid, permanently confined to bed, and physicians are inclined to consider her case as one of unusual religious hysteria, while unscientific people regard it as a miraculous affair.

The place is sixteen miles from Cosenza, and this year the Prefect of the province, Dr. Guerreri, himself an eminent physician, with several university professors, among whom was Professor Vincenzo Bianchi, of the University of Naples, and the entire medical staff of the principal hospital at Cosenza wished to be present at the alleged miraculous manifestation, and they drove in motor-cars to Montato last Friday. They found the town swarming with thousands of people of all classes, who had come in wagons, motors, and donkey carts, or on foot. The principal square was crowded with thousands of people, the street where the house of the alleged saint is situated was swarming with believers in the miracle, and by twelve o'clock it was hopeless to try to approach the premises.

The trance of Elena Ajello began at twelve o'clock, when she sighed and was plunged in a pious vision. Entirely unconscious of the people around her, she went through all the story of the Passion of Christ. At three o'clock she complained of great pain in her hands and feet, as though they had been pierced by nails, as when Christ was nailed to the cross. Finally she uttered an agonising cry that the crown of thorns was piercing her head. At that moment blood oozed from her forehead, from her knees, and from her feet, and she continued sweating blood in astonishing abundance, chiefly from her head, for more than three hours.

The scientific and medical observers present, when questioned afterwards, declared that the case defied ordinary pathological data, and could be explained only on the assumption of a material effect from psychical causes. Professor Bianchi, of Naples, intends to write a booklet on the subject considered from the scientific point of view.

Elena Ajello is about 25 years of age, and the daughter of a tailor. At the age of 18 she desired to enter a convent, and took the viel of a novice with the nuns of the Congregation of the Precious Blood at Nocera Pagani, but having shown persistent infirmity, was not allowed to take her vows, and was sent back to her father. She has been an invalid ever since her return home five years ago, and has constantly been absorbed in religious contemplation. At the age of 12 she had what were considered to be epileptic attacks, which lasted some ten months, then disappeared. People in Calabria have come to regard her as a saint, and last Friday thousands were on their knees praying while the alleged miracle was produced.

Mica Was Known and in Use Long Before Days Of Written Records

Mica was known and used before the days of written records. In the mica mines of North Carolina the miners regard it nowise uncommon to find buried evidence of the use of mica by the Indians who occupied that part of the country before the days of Christopher Columbus. The evidence is in the form of mute testimony from the aborigines, afforded by discovery of stone implements left in the mines by the people who delved there before the advent of the white man. Their relation to any distinct period of time is altogether unknown, and can be touched in no other way but by a process of approximation and deduction. The hammers and axes unearthed in these diggings are sometimes of a type totally unlike those of the Red Man, and there is ample ground for the inference that the mining of mica was practised by a race to which the Indians were mere juniors.

The mica belt of North Carolina furnishes more than half of the mica total production of the United States. The mineral occurs in bodies of rock that the geologists are pleased to term pegmatite or highly metamorphic formations. The rocks are garnet, staurolite, hornblende, and granite gneisses. Much of the production comes from small outcroppings, which are worked in simple fashion by farmers, or by miners and prospectors conducting operations on a small scale. The mica is taken out in huge sheets. Each of these is susceptible of long division, because of the thinness of the layers of which the sheets are composed.

In spite of the rich deposits in the Blue Ridge and in South Dakota, the United States has not found itself in position to supply the increased demand resulting from the widespread use of the material. Heavy imports come from India, where cheap labor enables the producers to meet the competition of the supply nearer home.

A hinged device with teeth on its face, to be worn on the hands, has been patented for handling cakes of ice.

LITTLE INVENTIONS MAKE BIG MONEY

Handy Things Needed by Everybody are Very Profitable

LONDON. — (By Mail.) — During 1924, when the Labor Party was in office, the number of inventions patented dropped considerably below that of 1923, but now inventors are again very busy, and this month the Institute of Patentees, which has some two thousand members, is holding an exhibition.

You may divide inventors into two classes, the professional inventor and the occasional inventor. Odd as it may seem, invention has become a profession, and a number of nimble-minded people spend their entire lives in looking out for novelties or new processes which seem to be needed and then devising and perfecting them. The occasional inventor is the person engaged in some ordinary vocation who gets a sudden brain-wave and decides to follow it up.

It has often been stated that the inventor dies poor, but while this saying may have been true a century ago, it is not so today. Quite the contrary, for a good idea properly patented is always worth money and may bring a fortune.

An interesting point is this—that so many of the biggest fortunes made by inventors have been the result of small and apparently insignificant ideas and not of long and carefully worked out processes. It is the happy thought—so it seems—that brings the great reward. For instance, the rubber eraser at the end of a pencil. Rubber was in use as an eraser nearly a century and a half ago, and pencils have been in use for hundreds of years. Yet the little idea of combining the two brought to Mr. H. L. Lipman an income of many thousands a year.

The crinkly hairpin is another example in point. A watchful husband who noticed how his wife was constantly shedding the old-fashioned straight-sided pins took out the patent and became a very rich man. A man named Palmer thought out a metal cap for beer and soda-water bottles. He carried his patent in his pocket for six years before placing it on the market; then, when at last he found a capitalist to back him, made thousands of pounds on his first year's business.

Heatin, who invented the little metal staple that holds shoe buttons in place, realized a fortune, and so did the man who first had the simple idea of affixing metal plates to the toes and heels of boots. The inventor of the safety-pin is said to have got his idea from a reproduction of a Pompeian fresco. This bit of ingenuity made him a wealthy man.

A new toy is always a gamble, but if it catches on it is a gold mine. The "dancing Jim Crow" brought its fortunate inventor an income of £15,000 for several years, and the now nearly forgotten Pharaoh's serpents were an almost equal success.

ARROWHEADS MADE OF PRECIOUS STONES

An Indian arrowhead, made out of a genuine ruby weighing 15 karats, forms part of a wonderful collection of ancient relics in possession of W. E. Snavely of Taylor, Tex. He found this arrowhead near there, and, what is regarded as most remarkable, he also found a large number of other arrowheads, some rubies, some sapphires and some of an unknown transparent substance. So far as known, these arrowheads of precious stone are the only ones of their kind ever found. How they came to be made of these stones instead of flint is not known. It is the general theory that the arrowheads of rubies and sapphires once belonged to some famous Indian chief. Expert jewelers have examined these relics and pronounce them to be genuine precious stones.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

A NEW DANGER.

When seventy men are poisoned by a substance, ten of whom die, the workers using a substance naturally want to see something done about it. I am referring to this liquid known as Tetra-ethyl lead which is added to gasoline to prevent "knocking" in a motor engine. The motor car is here to stay, and every improvement of same is welcomed by everybody, but when this is costing the lives of many, the health of many more, and possible injury to future generations, then it is time to pause.

This matter has become so important that an international congress is being held regarding it, to which hundreds of delegates are coming to the United States this year.

This liquid tested out on animals was shown to possess the power to pass readily through the skin, and cause acute poisoning. Inhalation of fumes likewise caused poisoning. In animals so poisoned the lead was found deposited in the bony skeleton.

It was the men themselves manufacturing this substance that first started the agitation, then garage men who became effected from the use of this fluid in the gasoline. Then later the men at the service stations who were putting it into the gasoline tank when supplying the gasoline found that they were becoming affected by the fumes. And now the committee will investigate the effects upon the general public from the exhaust gases of motors using this anti-knocking gas. It has been found that where there is not complete prostration and death, that the effect of the fluid is to cause sleeplessness, low blood pressure, temperature below normal, and loss of appetite. It is really similar to a chronic lead poisoning.

With our desire for speed, and smooth running motors, a natural desire in itself, it would certainly be a terrible calamity if we were getting these at the cost of the lives and health of our workmen. And still further, if the liquid should come into general use, our highways would become an actual danger to the community.

It is certainly gratifying that our manufacturers, workmen, physicians, and social workers are getting together about this.

WHERE THE SUN SINKS TO REST.

The world awaits the poet who can adequately sing of the scenic glories of our Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountains regions. The mountains themselves, towering skyward, their snow-capped peaks reaching awe-inspiring heights; the colossal glaciers slowly yet irresistibly grinding downward to the lower levels; the giant crags, deep canyons, torrential rivers rushing through echoing gorges form direct contrast to the pastoral beauty of the orchard regions of British Columbia and the beautiful marine scenery of the Pacific Coast.

The Triangular Tour of British Columbia gives the traveller the most comprehensive views. Commencing at Jasper National Park the train crosses the mountains in close proximity to the highest peaks, following the shores of the mystic Skeena to Prince Rupert. Thence by luxurious steamer through the calm waters of the "Inside Passage" to Vancouver, then by train edging the roaring Thompson and Fraser Rivers to Jasper.

CHARGES DELAY IN SEARCH, AFTER BOY FELL INTO SEWER

Victim's Father Asserts Manhole Not Properly Guarded

EMPLOYE BLAMED

Judge Reserves His Decision in Charge of Manslaughter

Childish lips told once more in court today, the story of how six-year-old Douglas Dillon ran after a hay cart on January 6 to "get some hay for the nanny-goat," slipped as the cart passed near a manhole, and fell through into the sewer, from which his body was only recovered when the river thawed out and gave up its annual crop of corpses.

Judge Monet, who heard the preliminary inquiry today into the charge of manslaughter laid against Delphis Gervais, civic employe whom the Coroner's jury found responsible for the boy's death, reserved judgment until July 23.

SAYS SEARCH DELAYED.

Evidence by the father of the victim was to the effect that the boy fell into the sewer about eleven o'clock in the morning, and the city officials did not come to search the sewer until after four p.m. Children who saw the accident declared that Gervais was talking to another man when the boy fell through, but was quite near the manhole. Gervais' foreman testified that Gervais was in charge of the manhole at the time.

Auguste Angers, for the Crown opened the case by informing the court that the defence agreed to the evidence of Dr. Fontaine, regarding the condition of the body when found should be accepted as given before the coroner.

George F. Dillon, father of the victim, testified that he had identified part of the child's clothing, and his wife had identified other parts. The body was unrecognizable.

He understood it was between 11.15 and 11.20 when the accident happened.

HOLE NOT FENCED

He lived at that time at 939 Dorchester street east, two doors west of Papineau avenue. The manhole into which the boy fell was not far from the door of that house. There were two big manholes in the middle of Papineau square, which had good guards over them, but the other manhole, 36 inches one way and 20 or so the other, had only two iron bars across for a grate. A man could fall through it. There was a wooden horse there the day of the accident, but it was on the sidewalk, not on the manhole. There was no fence around the manhole. The grating was level with the street.

Cyril Dillon, brother of the victim, told how he was with his little brother on the day of the disaster. He did not see any rig emptying snow into the manhole at the time, but there was a snow rig between Maisonneuve and Champlain streets.

He saw his brother running along behind a hay-cart, and then saw him slip into the hole. He identified Gervais in court as the man he saw leaning on his shovel near the hole. He was not leaning over the hole with his shovel on the other side of it. Witness ran crying to his mother, when his brother fell in the hole. There was a slight hill of snow beside the manhole, and the boy seemed to have slipped on this hill and fallen.

Donald Dillon, another brother, corroborated Cyril's evidence.

SISTER'S EVIDENCE

Winnie Dillon, aged 12, said she was the sister who followed the cart with Douglas. Just after the hay cart went past where they were playing, she saw her brother slip into the manhole, and she ran screaming home. She saw some man take a rein off the horse and go down into the manhole with it.

R. Marchand, foreman of the snow removal gang, testified that on the day of the accident Gervais was in charge of the manhole at the Papineau-Dorchester street corner.

William Lavigueur, a boy who was playing with the Dillons at the time of the accident, testified that he had seen Gervais standing near the manhole. Gervais was talking to another man, and so did not see little Dillon following the hay cart. There was no fence or guard around the manhole that he saw.

This ended the case for the Crown, and Judge Monet reserved judgment, stating that he would give his decision on July 23.

The case for the Crown was mainly conducted by James Crankshaw, to whom Mr. Anger handed it over after the opening, declaring that Mr. Crankshaw was familiar with the details of the case.

STOLE FURNITURE, MONEY, IS CHARGE

John Dascalook, Dorchester street west, faced Judge Monet this morning charged with stealing two beds, a bureau, a stove and a trunk containing $40 in cash.

"Not guilty," he said.

Anna Olar, complainant, enumerated the list of stolen articles, claiming that the accused removed them from the house on the afternoon of May 19, taking them out through a window.

Judgment was set for July 28.

POLICE DISCOVER CAR THEFT RING

Base of Operations for Montreal Gang is Actonville

15 CARS FOUND

Thieves Have Base Where Stolen Automobiles are Disguised

What is believed to be a clearing house for stolen automobiles is under detective scrutiny, following the recovery of 15 cars during the past 10 days by the police automobile squad, Detectives Thivierge, Lemire, Ennis, Barrette, Belanger and Rochon. Seven of the cars were secured within a radius of 15 miles of Actonville, Que., and had been sold to farmers.

A clearing house and a dismantling plant are declared to be in existence close to Montreal where engine numbers are removed, parts taken out and placed in different cars, tires changed and a complete disguise made of a car before it is taken away and sold in the outlying districts to farmers.

Yesterday afternoon the detectives working with Actonville as the pivotal point, rounded up seven automobiles that had been altered before being sold for sums ranging from $150 to $250.

Many of the cars were in good order and worth many times the amounts paid, it was declared by the detectives who have found the original owners in a great many cases. Two arrests have been made.

By changing names and switching license plates the car bandits have so far evaded detection.

Down at the civic garage, Jeanne d'Arc street, automobiles of various makes are piled in profusion. They have been recovered by the detectives after reported stolen, yet the owners never bother to go and look them over. More than thirty of the 129 recovered since February are at the garage waiting for the owners to come and take them away after properly identifying and claiming ownership.

"I don't know why," said a detective to-day, "but anyone can see that automobile owners don't bother about cars that have been stolen and found by the detectives. Of the fifteen now at the garage unidentified every one has a Quebec license plate. It is only necessary to pay a visit and in five minutes pick out the right car, but no one seems to give a hang."

"I don't know whether the payment of the insurance has anything to do with it, but it looks mighty like it," said the detective.

At the garage there are cars that were found at Sherbrooke, Shawbridge, Ste. Agathe, Rawdon and L'Assomption within the past month. The location of the suspected clearing house for dismantling and disposing of stolen cars was not divulged by the authorities, woh admit they are working within ten miles of St. James street and prepared for an immediate descent on the plant.

GERMANY BUYING HEAVILY IN FLOUR

Canadian Product for Hamburg Exceeds Previous Twelve Months

MONTREAL LEADS

Is World's Premier Flour Port With New York and London Follow

The value of the German and continental markets with regard to the exportation of Canadian food stuffs is being more than ever exemplified this season in the huge imports of Canadian grain and flour by the free port of Hamburg. In addition to over twelve million bushels of grain shipped from this port since the opening of navigation, Hamburg has received 6,014,410 sacks of flour in the period of September to June inclusive. The 9-month period alluded to in today's statistics equals the output of the previous 12-months of 1923-24 and is a million sacks in excess of the 1922-23 season.

Local milling figures show that Montreal not only leads all world ports in grain shipments but also in flour exports by a substantial margin, and although the threatened impost by Germany of an import tax on flour, commencing August 15 hastened the shipments, the fact is apparent that the German consumption is very heavy.

New York port ranks next to Montreal, followed by London, England, and New Orleans. Comparative figures by months are also given below, as follows:

TO PERMIT SALE OF BULK CREAM

Alderman Will Propose Change in Pure Milk By-law

Ald. Langlois stated today that at Monday's council meeting called to adopt the milk by-law, he will propose that cream be allowed sold in bulk. This product is not strictly subject to pasteurization, but according to the by-law comes under the same restriction as pasteurized or other milk, in that it must be sold in bottles only.

As the pouring or bulk sale of milk is is forbidden chiefly in the end that the effects of pasteurization be preserved—pouring or unsealing negatives the safeguard—he will ask that unpasteurized cream be not submitted to the same rigors.

To demand that cream be sold only in bottles, he said, will cause the already high price of cream to go up. "The amendment will not affect the general pure milk object of the by-law," he stated, commenting on his amendment, "as it is not an article of food given to babies."

SCOUTS TO CAMP

Seventy-five Leave Montreal This Week-End

Seventy-five Boy Scouts leave Montreal en route to Camp Tamaracouta this week-end, many of them to form part of the party on the first of the popular canoe trips, which will begin on Monday. The canoeing party will leave the Provincial Camp on Monday morning, entraining at Morin Heights. The party will take the C.N.R. north to Weir, where the actual canoeing has its start. From Weir, Russell Patterson, camp superintendent will lead his party northward into the northern lakes region. The trip will consume a week's time.

Two Jewish troops left Montreal this morning to spend a two-week period at camp. On Saturday morning a portion of the Vickers troop, thirty-five strong, will follow.

The Y. M. C. A. at Brooklyn, New York, gives a short educational course to prospective bridegrooms.

DRUNK AND INCAPABLE IN CAR, SOUGHT ARREST BUT DENIES DRIVING

Pleading guilty to intoxication, although not to driving a car at the time, H. Anglo was arraigned this morning before Judge Monet. He was charged with driving a car while in an intoxicated condition.

"In other words you are pleading 'not guilty'," Judge Monet declared.

"The fact remains that while I was in the car at the time of my arrest, and while I was intoxicated, I was not driving it," accused declared. "I was incapable of driving the car and that was just why I called the officer. He arrested me."

"It is sufficient that a man is wise enough to stop and declare that he is incapable of driving any further," Judge Monet declared. "In fact it is his duty to do so. Was there really any reason for the arrest?" the judge questioned.

No answer was given.

A plea of "not guilty" was entered by the accused, the hearing being set for July 20.

To Have Audience With The King

Three Chiefs of the Interior Tribes of British Columbia, accompanied by the wife of one of the chiefs, who arrived at Montreal yesterday from Ottawa, having made the trip from Kamloops, B.C., to Montreal, on the Canadian National Railways. The men in the group are Johnnie Chillihitsa, of Douglas Lake Reserve, Basil David, of Bonaparte Reserve, and William Pierre, of the Shuswap Reserve. They will sail from Montreal tomorrow to have an audience with King George and lay before him what they consider to be the grievances of the Interior Tribes of British Columbia. The first named visited London 17 years ago and had a similar interview with King Edward VII.

EPIDEMIC OF 'FLU ATTACKS HORSES

Montreal Stables Severely Smitten by Peculiar Malady

HUNDREDS AFFECTED

Officials Warn Owners Against Allowing Use of Public Fountains

Horses of the city are being attacked by an epidemic of influenza which is growing in violence. "The number of cases cannot be counted," Dr. J. H. Villeneuve, secretary and founder of the Canadian National Veterinaries' Association, said today.

Owners are warned to avoid watering their horses at the public drinking fountains, and if one of their horses shows symptoms of ailing to isolate him immediately and call a veterinary. Otherwise pneumonia and other complications may cause the horse's death.

"The epidemic which is sweeping through the city is like that which played havoc among horses in this section in 1915," Dr. Villeneuve said. The cases are not proving fatal unless followed by complications, but the horse looks sick and is sick. It takes two weeks to recover from the seizure. As in the epidemic a decade ago, the horses are stricken without warning. At that time farmers coming to market with seemingly healthy horses were unable to get them home again, but had to leave them here for treatment. Today an owner of a stable of 60 horses may find one or two cases of influenza among them on Monday, and by Friday or Saturday two-thirds of the stable will have contracted the disease, and be off the working list two weeks.

HORSES GET "STAGGERS".

The first symptoms are that the horse is overcome by heat, his eyes will puff up until they close altogether, and if he tries to stand on his feet he will stagger. "He acts just as if he had been hit on the head with a club," said Dr. Villeneuve. His temperature runs high, he refuses to eat. He is very sick, and he looks the part. His symptoms are very like a human attacked with influenza, though the germ is one which only attacks horses. The suffering animals should be immediately isolated and the stall where he has been kept fumigated before it is used by another horse. Everything else used in connection with him must be sterilized, or his companions will be stricken likewise.

Mustard and other plasters, scalding foot baths by which man attempts to improve his condition when influenza smites him, are of no use in the case of horses. "Local applications are no good. Internal remedies only are of use," said Dr. Villeneuve.

STARTED LAST FALL.

"There were indications of a coming epidemic last fall," said Dr. Villeneuve, "when one or two scattered cases were reported. The number has since grown steadily until now the only hope is that it will 'kill itself' by seizing all available victims." Dr. Villeneuve gave it as his opinion that on this basis it had a few weeks to run yet.

No steps have been taken to prevent the spread of the disease by barring Montreal horses from going into other localities.

Dr. A. E. Moore, of the Health of Animals Branch of the Dominion Government, stated this morning that the epidemic was a local matter—one which might happen anywhere. It did not come within his province.

Owners were trying to prevent the spread of the disease by isolation and spraying the stables with lysol. He had not heard of any occurrence of influenza out of the city. The affection acted just like a fever. Dr. Baker reiterated the warning against allowing horses to drink in public fountains. Horse-driven vehicles should carry a bucket, and draw water to fill them direct from the tap, to allow the animals to quench their thirst without being contaminated.

That the epidemic has not proved fatal is shown by the report of the city rendering plant, where all horses that die in the city are taken. Last week five horses, less than the average for the year, were delivered to the plant.

ATTEMPT TO SELL STOLEN BICYCLES

Facing charges of attempted theft, Richard Marineau, Marquette street, aged 17, and Fablen Chantelois, Bordeaux street, aged 18, pleaded guilty this morning before Judge Monet, who fixed the date of sentence for July 22 after commenting upon the youth of the offenders.

The two boys were arrested at 7.25 o'clock last evening by Detectives Valois and McManus, while trying to sell the bicycles that each of them had rented earlier in the afternoon.

RAINFALL BREAKS RECORD; HUNDREDS CLAIM DAMAGES; CITY REVIEWS STORM LOSS

As one would twirl a doughnut on his little finger, or, better still, as one would try for the first time to swing a pail of water round his head, Mount Royal caught hold of and swung the low-hanging, swirling storm clouds round its summit yesterday.

But the stunt was a "flop" as it often is with the water-pail trick, and in this instance, the contents of the "pail" spilled all over the place. Had the old mountain been content to let well-enough alone, it wouldn't have been so bad, but the circular course already given to the clouds brought them back again and it had to have another try, which proved far more disastrous than the first.

At any rate, this is, as Professor A. J. Kelly of the McGill University Observatory agrees, about the substance of what occurred Thursday at midday when the heavily-laden nuages—highbrow name for clouds—swarmed toward the metropolis out of the western skies.

Today, those who have reason to mark the consequences of the great storm, which broke all records here, are checking up their losses, the aggregate of which, based upon their own figures, amount to many thousands of dollars. Damage mostly occurred in cellars which were flooded and in buildings, including a number of stores and offices, where roof drains and sewers became blocked and an overflow took place.

As to the record-breaking nature of the storm, Professor Kelly declared today that one and one-quarter inches of rain fell in the 20 minutes between noon and 12:20 o'clock, which is more than one-third of the total precipitation recorded for the heaviest all-day's rain in history here, which was 3.45 inches on the 20th of July, 1880, 45 years ago.

HEAVIEST BRIEF DOWNPOUR

It was at the same time the heaviest fall here in the space of five minutes ever recorded, .48 inches being the precipitation during the second storm, the figure being .39 inches during the first downpour. The heaviest previous precipitation in a five minute period was .38 inches.

Unpaved roadways and other open stretches of soft ground in the vicinity of the slopes of Mount Royal and else where today show clearly the ravages of the storm. At some spots near McGill University the eastern side of the mountain facing Fletcher's Field and in the north and west ends, great furrows reveal the force of the rainfall and piles of mud and refuse denote masses of solid matter carried, in some cases, hundreds of feet, on the breast of the tide.

RIVER WATER RISES.

Despite the fact that the cloudburst stayed the steady fall of the river level by increasing the depth three inches, come alarm is being felt locally as to the maintenance of the 30-foot channel for shipping purposes. It is probable that a sharp reminder will be conveyed to Chicago with regard to illegal diversion of lake water which, as in the past, has permanently reduced the river level in this port.

Within the past ten days, despite a fair amount of precipitation, the river level has fallen roughly one foot, and since a few inches affect the cargo carrying capacity of a big ship by hundreds of tons, the effect on Canada's export trade is serious.

On July 8 the depth in the 30-foot channel was 31 feet 5 inches, on the tenth it was 31 feet 2 inches, the following day 31 feet, then 30 feet 10 inches, dropping subsequently one inch per day until it reached 30 feet 6 inches on July 15. Yesterday it fell to 30 feet 3 inches (10:30 a.m. reading) and would probably have fallen more but for yesterday's storm, which brought it back to 30 feet 6 inches.

Further declines in the river level will hamper local ocean carriers and create a condition which was commonplace in the past, but which was promised by the recent United States Supreme Court judgment, as being unlikely to occur in the future.

Beauty was in distress with a vengeance at the corner of Mansfield and St. Catherine streets at the height of the cloudburst yesterday afternoon. Water poured down from the higher levels and covered over the sidewalk to such an extent that a party of four girls hovered on the brink undetermined what to do.

Summery clothes were reduced to a sodden mass, silk stockings were soaked and white kid shoes looked like the skin of a calf after a drenching.

They had to cross westwards, to get back to work, but there was not a chivalrous man in the neighborhood who dared offer to carry them across.

LEAPING TORRENT.

Two of them threw caution to the winds and gingerly picked their way where the water was not so deep; another one, with that "do or die" spirit took a running leap and dropped—right in the middle of the lake. There was a little shriek and someone hauled her out. Muddied shoes and a circle of mud half way from her ankles to her knees formed the legacy she collected for her daring.

The last of the party, with Amazonian determination, also essayed to leap the "roaring torrent." Poised for the jump, with skirts held high, she inhaled deeply then, mentally counting "one, two—" she was hurtling through the air on the count of "three."

Alas, she made a poor take off and—plop, into the lake she landed on all fours and emerged, bedraggled and dirty.

USE CAR AS BRIDGE.

A party of twenty or thirty, under umbrellas and awnings were in danger of being late for work watching the "fun," when a fifth girl determined to cross the river. A passing autoist saw her contemplating the jump and drove into the sidewalk, and using his car as a bridge, enabled the girl to pass through the back of the car, but he aroused the ire of a number of drivers who were held up behind him.

He smiled, honked his horn in adieu to the girl and satisfied that he had performed his Boy Scout's one good turn in a day drove on.

CLAIMS FOR DAMAGES.

About 100 complaints were made to the city up to noon today about blocked sewers and flooded cellars.

J. E. Senecal, of the claims department, stated that he had received in the mail today about a dozen requests for settlement, ranging from $15,000 downward. The amounts varied from $15,000, $5,000 down to $50. "Of course," he explained, "many people will file claims, but an occurrence such as yesterday's is a phenomenon which is as unpreventible and impossible to provide against as a bolt of lightning. In former cases taken for the same cause the courts have held that these downpours constitute uncontrollable circumstances, and are considered as happening 'by the hand of God.'"

SAYS ROADS PASSABLE.

J. E. Blanchard, superintendent of roads, stated that no serious reports had been received as to roads. Rumors that the approaches to the city were impassable were discounted, and the superintendent said that the street drains and tunnels operated well and took care of the overflow.

H. A. Terreault, director of public works, stated that he had had no serious reports of trouble, and that men in all public works departments were despatched to their various posts in the roads department, sewer pumping stations and at street drain work immediately the storm broke, and were kept working till the effects had been well in hand.

E. Fusey, superintendent of sewers, stated through his secretary that for two hours yesterday afternoon every phone in the office was busy receiving calls for assistance and reporting flooded cellars. About ninety were registered.

These included retail dealers of various kinds, tradesmen and householders. Reports of water five feet deep in some cellars were received.

Barbers Improvised Litter To Carry In Customers To Chairs

The storm created a unique situation in a barber shop in a basement at the corner of Peel and St. Catherine streets. Swollen gutters emptied into sewers already carrying more than their maximum load. Water backed up the drain pipes and each of the basins in the barber shop became a gushing fountain. Water was deflected from the ceiling by each hissing geyser, and the floor rapidly became a miniature lake.

With seven inches of water on the floor, it became necessary for the barbers to carry their clients from the steps to the fixture chair and return in an ordinary chair. Two stalwart barbers, with their trousers rolled above the knee were assigned to the task of handling the litter. After the noon rush hour, the entire staff set to work to clear the floor. Floating cuspidors were rescued, and pails were commandered. At seven o'clock last night, the last pail of water had been emptied into the sink.

"Business as usual" was in force this morning, stained woodwork being the only surviving evidence of the inundation.

STEEL INDUSTRY IN SOUTH

NEW YORK, July 17. — In view of recent remarks of Judge Gary that much of the future of the steel industry will be centered in southern territory, it does not seem beyond the realm of probability that the corporation which he heads should want to include one of the big southern mills in its properties. Judge Gary, according to reports, is making another trip to Birmingham, where Gulf States headquarters are located.

VICTIM WOULD GIVE ACCUSED FIVE YEARS

But Judge Postpones Sentence on Abitibi Man for Theft

Henri Ledoux, Colonial street, 38 years of age, pleading guilty to a charge of theft before Judge Monet this morning, received quite a shock when the judge turned to the complainant, Harry Gordon, who was on the stand.

"Now, Mr. Gordon," Judge Monet declared, "if you were judge what would you give this man?"

The complainant hesitated for a moment, while the accused gazed with surprise at the judge.

"Five years," Mr. Gordon said.

Accused paled slightly, while a burst of laughter came from the crowded room. Judge Monet smiled.

Complainant proceeded to give his reasons why he would impose so stiff a sentence for a theft which amounted to about $60.

"You see, I consider it quite a bad case. He did the job in a very cute way. My car was standing in front of my store and in it I had placed this bag, worth in all about $60. There were persons standing by, and while I left the car for just a moment the accused got in on the other side and made away with the bag."

Judge Monet questioned Ledoux. He was not a Montreal man; he came from the Abitibi district, and the great attraction which had drawn him to the city, he said, was a drink of beer.

There was a long pause during which complainant and accused faced each other, the latter fearing the five years mentioned, but Judge Monet postponed the evil day until July 22.

HEAVY DECREASE IN DRUNKENNESS

Notable Reduction in Figures for Montreal Over Three Years

RECORDS GIVEN

Arrests in Montreal 1,218 in 1924 Against 6,363 in 1922

Drunkenness has decreased in a most pronounced manner in the city of Montreal during the past three years. Arrests in this period have fallen off from the high figures of 6,363 to 1,218.

Since the application of the Quebec Liquor Act, temperance has made great progress according to the official figures. A glance at the figures of the Recorder's Court shows the arrests as 6,363 in 1921; and 1,218 in 1924.

In the City of Quebec a similar contrast is available. In 1921 the total arrests in that city were 875, while in 1924 the figures declined to 645. The same situation governs other towns throughout the province. The greatest progress, however, has been made in Montreal where the decline in drunkenness is notable.

"The figures are most encouraging from the standpoint of temperance," according to Sir Lomer Gouin, who declared that "Montreal is the pride of the Province and Canada as a whole."

Judge Rebukes Association for Non-Appearance

Judge Monet had a few words of mild rebuke to address to the Merchants' Association this morning, when Harold Inns failed to answer his name when called as complainant in connection with a shoplifting case in Enquete Court.

"This is the association that writes every month to the Attorney-General," he said, "and complains of the judges and the Crown prosecutors, saying that the judges let cases drag out too long, that the prosecutors are lax, that they suspend sentences too often, and so on, and here a case has been called three times and there is no one answers, either for the Crown or the accused." The case was suspended.

Watch Worth $100 Thirty Years Past, Now Valued at $50

Charged with the theft of a watch, which was bought 30 years ago for $100, and which was to-day valued at $50, F. Mason appeared before Judge Monet this morning. He pleaded his innocence to the theft, claiming that he had bought the watch, and following the presentation of evidence the charge was changed to receiving stolen goods. The accused will face Judge Monet on that charge July 23.

BEATS WIFE, FINED

Adrien Boyer, Joliette street, aged 40, pleaded guilty this morning, to a charge of assaulting his wife, before Judge Monet, and was sentenced to pay the costs of the court or go to prison for eight days. In addition he had to deposit a bond of $500 to keep the peace for a year.

REPORT WARNS OF POWER SHORTAGE FACING ONTARIO

Ontario Electric Power Commission Tells of Conditions

HAD GOOD YEAR

Financial Balance Good with Considerable Extension Work

TORONTO, July 17. — (C.P.)—The fact that the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission has been able to reduce the service and consumption charges for power supplied to many of the rural districts represents one of the features of the seventeenth annual report which was made public yesterday. Coupled with this, there is the fact that the commission is able once again to report that the revenue obtained from the consumers has been more than sufficient to meet the full cost of generating and transmitting the electrical energy, as well as to provide for all operating expenses and the fixed charges of the municipal utility equipments.

The report shows that after meeting all these charges, the commission has a net surplus on the year's operations of $725,708.55.

The third feature of the report lies in the statement that, in spite of the general industrial depression, there has been a considerable growth in the demand for power on nearly all systems, and on several systems the commission has reached the limit of the capacity of the existing generating plants.

"The most successful year in the commission's history," is the phrase that the commission's chairman uses in his summary of the results of the year's operation. "And," he adds, "Apart from the menace that exists on account of an approaching power shortage, the future of the commission never appeared more promising."

Ontario's Hydro-Electric Power Commission supplied more than three billion kilowatt-hours of electrical energy during the year ending October 31, 1924, but the end of demand is not yet. Hence the following emphatic warning sounded in the report of the commission.

"The demand for power during the past year has continued to increase on practically all systems, but the effect of the quiet industrial conditions is apparent in the smaller rates of increase.

PLANTS NOT SUFFICIENT.

"The full capacity of the commission's generating plants is not sufficient to provide for any abnormal increase in the demand for power. Such as may follow an industrial revival and is even inadequate to meet the needs of power consumers during a year of normal growth. Further sources of power must be provided during the coming year if restrictions on the supply to consumers are to be provided."

So far as the reduction in charges is concerned, Sir Adam Beck announces a revision of rates in the rural power districts now being served by the commission. The commission has contracts with 146 townships situated in various parts of the province, 138 of which are now being served as part of 90 rural power districts established by the commission. A number of these rural power districts have been operating since 1920, and in many of them rate adjustments have been made from time to time.

The report states that, "based on its experience in the operating of rural power districts, the commission has found it necessary in many of these districts, to adjust the service charge and consumption rates, in order that the service supplied to these consumers may be as near as possible on a cost basis. In 65 of the rural power districts served it has been found necessary to make a reduction of from five to forty per cent in the service charge; and in 57 of the rural power districts a reduction of from five to twenty-five per cent in the consumption charges. The remaining 25 rural power districts now being supplied have only been operating for short periods, and no rate adjustment here can be made until the operating conditions become more stable. The commission has already expended about $2,700,000 to supply service to some 10,800 rural consumers, in addition to the consumers served by municipalities in suburban areas. Approximately 1,400 miles of transmission line has been constructed to supply these customers with service."

MEET OPERATING COSTS.

In dealing with the second phase, in which it is pointed out that the commission has been able to meet operating costs, the report adds that the commission collected from the municipal utilities and other customers for power sold, a total sum of $16,897,866.73. This sum was appropriated to meet all the necessary fixed charges and to provide for the expenses of operation and administration. Of the amount collected from the municipalities — that is, speaking only concerning the municipalities operating under cost contracts with the commission — the sum of $13,078,003.14 was appropriated for operation, maintenance, administration, interest and other current expenses; while the sum of $3,094,155.04 was appropriated as reserve for sinking fund, renewal of plant and equipment, and contingencies.

Referring to the continued demand for power, the report states:

"Industrial conditions throughout the province during the year have improved, but are still below normal, with the result that there is not yet a rapidly increasing demand for power for industrial uses. Notwithstanding the general industrial condition, there has been a considerable growth in the demand for power on nearly all systems, and on several systems the commission has reached the limit of the capacity of the existing generating plants. It is, therefore, necessary for the commission, on practically all systems, to make arrangements to secure additional power developments to meet the ever-increasing demand.

"During the past year, special efforts have again been made by the Provincial Government, by the municipalities and by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, to secure permission to commence construction of the power development works in the international portion of the St. Lawrence river. Delay in securing the permission sought must result in accentuating the power shortage that is rapidly materializing."

THREATENS TO QUIT IF ESTIMATES CUT

LONDON, July 16.—(Star Special Cable, by J. E. Poole, Staff Correspondent.) — Rumors are current in Opposition circles that Rt. Hon. W. C. Bridgeman, M.P., First Lord of the Admiralty, is so perturbed over the economy campaign against the naval increase that he will resign, if the whittling down is insisted upon to the present limits suggested by Winston Churchill and others in the Cabinet.

MANITOBA PROGS. GET READY FOR ELECTION

WINNIPEG, July 17.— (C. P.)—With the object of contesting all the 17 Federal ridings in the Province at the Dominion election, which, it is expected, will be held in the fall, the Progressives of Manitoba will proceed at once with reorganization arrangements affecting the entire province. The initial steps were taken at a conference of the party held in the city, when those present included the Manitoba Progressive members of Parliament.

In order to decide on a common policy, an interprovincial convention will be held in the near future. Preliminary steps were taken for this gathering, but the date and place of meeting will be announced lated.

MUCH DAMAGE IN ONTARIO GALE

Violent Storm Caused Havoc in Many Power Lines

TREES UPROOTED

Portsmouth Penitentiary Struck by Lightning During Disturbance

TORONTO, July 17—(C.P.)—Terrific lightning, wind and rain storms struck various points in Ontario yesterday. The worst was probably in Prince Edward county and in the Kingston district. Hamilton, St. Catharines, London and Woodstock also reported very heavy storms with considerable damage. No lives were lost. Picton Armories lost its roof and dozens of trees were flattened. In the Niagara district some electric transmission lines were put out of commission thus delaying radial railway services. The Portsmouth Penitentiary was struck by lightning and a fire which resulted was extinguished before any great damage was done. Scores of silos were overturned.

QUEBEC UNDAMAGED.

QUEBEC, July 17—(C.P.) — The electrical storm which visited the east yesterday, left Quebec little the worse, except for a few uprooted trees and broken windows. While it lasted, however, pedestrians were lashed by a bucketing rain which was driven along by a forty-five-mile-an-hour gale. Trees were blown down, windows were broken and at least one small shack left its foundations. Horses, too, were blown off their feet and went floundering about the streets, panic-stricken by the electrical disturbances which made the storm spectacular. In the midst of it all, fire broke out in the basement of the Christian Brothers' school, which was reported to have been struck by lightning. It was found however, that it had originated in a pile of waste paper. Little damage was done. A man who was on the third storey of the building became so excited that when he leaned out of a window he lost his balance and fell. A temporary scaffolding surrounding the second floor broke his fall, which otherwise might very probably have resulted in his death.

CAUSED ACCIDENT.

CORNWALL, Ont., July 17 — (C.P.)—The heavy rain storm which passed over this section of Ontario yesterday, was in large measure the cause of a fatal accident on the Provincial highway at Aultsville, when Charles Crites, aged 38, was struck by an eastbound automobile driven by Walter D. Grant, of Rochester, Mich.

Mr. Crites was running across the road going from his barn to his house, having his head covered with a coat, he ran headlong into the front fender of the oncoming car.

TRAFFIC HELP UP.

ST. CATHARINES, July 17 — (C.P.)—The storm did considerable damage in this district. The strength of the wind centred around Niagara Falls, the transmission line of the Toronto-Niagara Power Company suffered considerable damage. Some of the affected lines are those supplying the N. S. and T. In the Niagara District and as a result of the trouble the railway was tied up for a number of hours. The cars resumed operating just after 12 noon.

DROWNED MAN HAD RESISTED ARREST

Jury Probes Death of Man Suspected of Selling Liquor

CORNWALL, Ont., July 17. —(Star Special.) — That Benjamin Stacey came to his death by drowning in the basin of the old canal at Cornwall while resisting arrest from Officer Kenny, of the Ontario Provincial Police, and we attach no blame to anyone," was the verdict returned by the Coroner's jury here yesterday afternoon, empanelled to enquire into the death of Ben. Stacey, on July 8, when Officer Kenny visited a bootlegger's cache and placed Stacey under arrest.

Dr. C. J. Hamilton, Coroner, presided; J. G. Harkness, County Crown Attorney, for the Crown; G. I. Gogo, K.C., Cornwall, appeared for the Stacey family and I. Hilliard, K.C., Morrisburg, appeared on behalf of Officer Kenny.

The evidence produced tended to indicate that Stacey had a scuffle with Kenny, that both men went into the water and Kenny let Stacey go when he got in up to his neck, as he, Kenny, could not swim. Kenny then went up the canal bank with a bag of beer, which Stacey had offered for sale. Stacey having started to swim the narrow canal to the opposite bank. Kenny had warned a young boy named Emile Tessier, not to help Stacey, and he thought he would be well able to reach the shore.

When 20 feet from shore Stacey went down and was drowned. There were marks on Stacey's head but the autopsy performed by Dr. Nichol and Dr. Hurteau showed that none were of a serious nature.

BABY SCALDED TO DEATH BY SOUP

BEAUCEVILLE, Que., July 17 — (C. P.)—The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Roderique, of this place, met a terrible death when a pot of boiling soup toppled over on her, scalding her so badly that she died a few moments later in acute agony.

NEW N. S. CABINET HAS FIRST MEETING

Newcomers to Provincial Cabinet are Shown Offices

HALIFAX, N. S., July 17.—(C. P.) —Hon. Edgar Nelson Rhodes, P.C., formerly of Amherst, N.S., and one-time Speaker of the Canadian House of Commons, while representing Cumberland County, N.S., in the Federal Parliament, became Premier of Nova Scotia yesterday and head of the first Conservative administration to rule this Province since the passing of the Holmes-Thompson Government in 1882. Premier Rhodes and the eight men who will make up his Cabinet, lunched at Government House and immediately after were sworn into office by Lieutenant-Governor Douglas. The Great Seal of the Province was handed over to the new Premier and the first Cabinet meeting was held in the ball-room of Government House. There an Order-in-Council was passed authorizing the creation of an additional portfolio, that of Natural Resources and Provincial Development. The new Ministers then proceeded to the Province Building and those holding portfolios were shown their offices and introduced to their office assistants.

Hon. W. J. O'Hearn, late Attorney-General, and Hon. A. S. MacMillan, ex-Minister of Highways, were in their offices to personally welcome their successors and introduce them, Mr. O'Hearn doing the honors for Hon. J. C. Douglas and Mr. MacMillan greeting Hon. Percy Black, the new Minister of Highways and a former member of the Highways Board. The ex-Ministers then retired and left the premises to their successors. Hon. Mr. Rhodes, who took the Provincial Secretaryship, was introduced by A. S. Barnstead, Deputy Provincial Secretary, Mr. Rhodes' predecessor, Premier Armstrong, being still confined to the Victoria Memorial Hospital. Hon. Gordon D. Harrington, the new Minister of Works and Mines, in the absence of his predecessor, Hon. William Chisholm, visited the Mines Office and introduced himself to the staff, headed by T. J. Brown, deputy Minister.

NEW DEPARTMENT

Hon. J. A. Walker, Minister of Natural Resources and Provincial Development, was without office for the time being, no provision having as yet been made for the new department. Premier Rhodes said last night he was unable to describe the particular functions of the department, which would be decisively outlined probably today. It was anticipated that the portfolio would take in the industries and immigration and agriculture branches.

UNVEIL MEMORIAL TO NOBLE DEAD

Prince Edward Island Raises Monument to Those Who Fell

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I., July 17—(A. P.) — With reverent ceremonial, marked by military and naval display, eloquent and fervent orations, singing by massed choirs and other impressive features, there was unveiled, in Charlottetown yesterday in the presence of a vast assemblage, the monument, erected on the north side of Queen Square by the citizens of Charlottetown, "in memory of those from Prince Edward Island who gloriously laid down their lives in the Great War and in honor for ever more of all who served therein."

As the colors, which draped the beautiful memorial of bronze and stone, fell at the touch of Mrs. John McLean, wife of Hon. Senator McLean of Souris, and mother of Miss Rena McLean, the nursing sister who made the supreme sacrifice, in the torpedoing of the Llandovery Castle, the guard of honor came to the salute, the band played "O Canada" and Bugler Sergeant Charles Hine sounded "last post." Then the thousands of people surrounding the memorial observed two minutes silence as a tribute to the dead. The piercing notes of the bugle again rang out as Reveille was sounded.

BOARD PASSES BUDGET.

The coming year's budget for Outremont Protestant School Board was passed last night by Montreal Protestant School Board. Committees of the two boards conferred together first and then the Central Board met and passed the budget. Verdun is now the only district whose budget has not yet been passed, and it is expected that this will soon be disposed of.

KILLS SWEETHEART; GETS LIFE SENTENCE

Mob Threatened Jail and Police Removed Prisoner

WATERTOWN, South Dakota, July 17 — (U.P.) — Winfred Meek, 21, of Garden City, who killed his sweetheart, Byrle Healy, 17, near the haystack that had been the scene of their sin, which was about to be found out, was sentenced Wednesday to life imprisonment for the murder which he says the girl induced him to commit.

Meek, threatened with lynching a few hours before, told an amazing story of the crime.

SAYS RUSSIA HAS LARGE WHEAT CROP

LONDON, July 16.—(Star Special Cable, by J. E. Poole, Staff Correspondent.) — E. F. Wise, formerly connected with the Russian Arcos Company, London, after a visit to Russia, declares Russian wheat available for export certainly exceeds 3,000,000 tons, which, if a fact, will have considerable effect on wheat prices.

DOMINION VIEWS ON PROTOCOL OUT

"White Paper" Sets Forth Empire's Reasons for Refusal

ATTITUDE OUTLINED

Statement of Premier King Contained in Communication From Britain

OTTAWA, July 17.—(C.P.)—Despatches which have been exchanged between the Government of Great Britain and the Governments of the Overseas Dominions in regard to the Geneva protocol for the pacific settlement of international disputes, were issued yesterday in the form of a "White Paper."

The communications, some of which have been published already, outlined the attitude of Great Britain and the Dominions toward the protocol, which was drawn up by the Fifth Assembly of the League of Nations.

Canada's attitude is outlined in a communication sent to the Secretary of State for the Colonies on March 4, and tabled by Premier Mackenzie King in the House of Commons during the last session of Parliament. While advocating continued whole-hearted support of the League of Nations, it states that the Government cannot recommend to Parliament adherence to the protocol. "Among the grounds for this conclusion is consideration of the effect of non-participation of the United States upon attempts to enforce the sanctions, and particularly so in the case of a contiguous country like Canada," the despatch states.

It re-affirms Canada's belief in the submission of international disputes to joint inquiry, and says the Dominion would be prepared to consider acceptance of the compulsory jurisdiction of the permanent court in justifiable disputes, with certain reservations. It also states that Canada would be willing to participate in a general conference on reduction of armaments which did not involve acceptance of the protocol.

TO COME UP AGAIN.

The Geneva Protocol will, it is expected, come up in some form at the next assembly of the League of Nations. It is probable, however, that, in view of the opposition from Great Britain and the Dominions, as well as the Scandinavian countries of Europe, that it will be introduced in a modified form. The "White Paper" includes a despatch from the Premier of New Zealand, in which he records "an emphatic protest against a process under which the British Empire is hurriedly called upon to give its adhesion to momentous novel conditions expressed in a document hastily prepared and vague in expression both as regards its effects and detail."

The Government of the Union of South Africa informs the British Government in another communication that it is unable to recommend acceptance of the protocol. It states that determination of obligations and consequences which may accrue from the acceptance of the protocol is impossible in advance. Australia also voices objections, stating that the protocol is distinctly unacceptable for a number of reasons set forth.

The reasons why Great Britain "cannot accept the Geneva protocol, or recommend its acceptance to the other Governments of the Empire," are set forth in a lengthy memorandum by the British Foreign Secretary. This statement has already been made public.

N. B. ELECTIONS FIXED FOR AUG. 8

FREDERICTON, N.B., July 17.—(C.P.)—The date for the provincial elections in New Brunswick has been fixed, according to an item published in the News columns of The Gleaner yesterday, polling to take place on Saturday, August 8.

SAY PRESBYTERIANS STRONG IN N.B.

Members of Continuing Church Now Claim 26 Congregations

FREDERICTON, N.B., July 17.—(Star Special.) — "New Brunswick already has 26 continuing Presbyterian Church congregations. Many more places will vote out of Union between now and December 10, and New Brunswick will have a splendid continuing Presbyterian Church," said Rev. Findlay G. MacKintosh, secretary of the continuing Presbyterian Church in the Maritime Provinces, who is now engaged in preparing for the taking of the vote on Church Union in other Presbyterian churches in the province, in an interview yesterday.

Nineteen Presbyterian churches in New Brunswick have voted against Church Union so far, according to the latest returns, which have come to Rev. Mr. MacKintosh and others. In addition there are seven organized functioning minority groups, which have formed strong congregations in their communities and will have their own churches. This makes a total of 26 continuing Presbyterian congregations in New Brunswick, thus far.

Voting in Presbyterian churches in this province on Church Union must be finished by December 10. In addition to St. Paul's Church, Fredericton, revoting under the Dominion Act has already been provided for in Newcastle and Chatham. Similar steps may be taken elsewhere.

SWEDISH SHIP BURNS AT DOCK

Fire Ignites Warehouses Causing Much Damage in London

LONDON, July 17—(A. P.)—The Swedish oil-driven cargo steamer Greta, which reached here three days ago from New York, suddenly caught fire at Victoria dock, London, yesterday afternoon, and before the flames were extinguished the vessel was badly damaged. Two bonded tobacco warehouses, on the quay, were ignited, and with their contents were virtually destroyed.

The flames on the Greta shot up with such startling rapidity that three members of the crew and a stewardess jumped overboard, while the Captain's wife leaped from the deck to the dock, breaking her leg. The steamer's mate faced the fire with a ship's hose until the deck plates became so hot he could not stand on them.

The firemen had a hard time fighting the blaze, which was only extinguished after all available apparatus had been summoned. A barge, which was unloading the Greta's cargo, also was badly damaged.

There was a cargo of celluloid on the deck of the Greta, which, it is believed was ignited by the sun's rays heating the steel deck plates.

Minister of Labor Consider Windsor Report on Motor Car Parts

WINNIPEG, Man., July 17. — (C. P.)—Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers maintained an all-night vigil at the fruit warehouses of the Nash Brothers' concerns, which were raided on warrants issued by the Federal Department of Justice. The action marked the first official step in the prosecutions based on the findings of the Duncan Commission, under the Combines Investigation Act.

All the books of the company's branches were seized and placed in sealed cases, under guard. The Government will make a thorough survey of the book-keeping system, it was learned. Special attention, it is said, will be given to the overages in all brokerage transactions, covering sales of British Columbia fruit and vegetables, through the Nash Brothers' 40 branches, located throughout Western Canada.

J. C. McRuer, counsel for the Dominion Government, arrived in Winnipeg yesterday, and will advise the Mounted Police in their actions, and those who will investigate the seized papers.

F. Finch, general manager of the Nash interests in the United States, is expected in the city. He will confer with all branch managers in the West during the week.

Strong protest has been made by counsel, acting on behalf of the Nash Brothers, against the seizure and the manner in which it was carried out.

WINDSOR ALSO.

OTTAWA, July 17.—(C.P.) — A confidential report will probably be made to the Minister of Labor within the next few days by H. Hereford, registrar under the Combines Investigation Act, who has been investigating complaints that there is a combine operating in respect to automobile parts in the district of Windsor. Mr. Hereford is expected in the Capital, Friday. The complaint is that certain accessories, including spark plugs, have been given a limited distribution by manufacturers, and certain dealers have been discriminated against. The present inquiry is to establish whether or not there is sufficient evidence to take proceedings under the Combines Investigations Act.

MARKS FIRST STEP.

OTTAWA, July 17.—(C.P.)—The seizure by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police of the books of several Winnipeg fruit companies, marks the first step in the prosecutions based on the findings of the Duncan Commission under the Combines Investigations Act.

J. C. McRuer, K.C., who is conducting the case for the Federal Government, has been in recent conference with Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor, but when approached, the Minister declined to state what the next action would be.

A justice or judge applied the name of Quakers to a religious organization in derision, when George Fox, their founder, called on him to "tremble at the word of the Lord." At first they had called themselves Children of Truth, Children of Light, and Friends of Truth. Finally they became the Religious Society of Friends.

There are now at least four divisions of the Friends known as Orthodox, Hicksite, Wilburite and Primitive.

CANADA ALWAYS AHEAD IN MATCH

Canadians Led All Through in Mackinnon Cup Shoot

"WON AS INSTRUCTED"

O. C. of Marksmen Able to Make Smart Reply to General

BISLEY CAMP, July 17. — (C.P.) —Canada led slightly right through the shoot for the MacKinnon Challenge Cup, and although the English and Scottish teams included some of the best shots at Bisley there was little doubt where victory would lie when the shooting at the longer range began. The steady shooting of Sergt. C. M. Elmslie, Toronto, which has been a feature throughout the present Bisley meeting, again helped the Canadian team to victory, and Canada added the MacKinnon Cup to the Kolapore Cup among its Bisley trophies for 1925.

Canada in winning the MacKinnon Challenge Cup made an aggregate of 10 points above the score made by the winner last year, South Africa. Canada has now won the MacKinnon Cup five times. The last previous win was in 1911, which marked Canada's third successive victory in the MacKinnon Cup Competition.

Nothing has been heard yet as to the actual whereabout of the Kolapore Cup and the MacKinnon Cup which are supposed to be on their way from South Africa. Naturally the Canadians are hoping that these two important trophies will arrive in time to be taken to Canada by the victorious 1925 team.

The MacKinnon Challenge Cup competition is open to teams of 12 men, the distances being 900 and 1,000 10 shots and one sighting shot per man at each distance. The cup was given in 1891 by the late Colonel MacKinnon. The captain and adjutant and each member of the victorious team receive a special commemorative souvenir from the National Rifle Association.

Following are the scores made by the various teams in the MacKinnon Cup Competition.

	900 Yards.	1,000 Yards.	Total.
Canada	546	538	1,084
England	542	521	1,063
Scotland	542	519	1,061
Rhodesia	529	505	1,034
Ireland	518	501	1,019
Wales	507	505	1,012
Guernsey	491	512	1,003

The Canadians' individual scores in the shoot for the MacKinnon Cup follow:

	900 Yds.	1,000 Yds.	Total.
Sergt. G. M. Elmslie, Toronto	48	48	96
Major C. W. G. Gibson, Hamilton	48	46	94
Major C. R. Crowe, Guelph	45	48	93
Lieut. Desmond Burke, Ottawa	48	45	93
Sergt. A. F. B. Wilson, Ottawa	46	46	92
Captain G. N. Galbraith, London	46	45	91
Q. M. S. Parnell, Verdun, Que.	48	42	90
Captain A. W. Hunt, Winnipeg	43	45	88
Sergt.-Major R. Kiddie, Toronto	43	44	87
Pte. J. N. Gray, Toronto	45	42	87
Sergt. G. H. Tyers, Ottawa	41	46	87
Pte. W. J. Irvine, Ottawa	45	41	86

Major-General Sir Alexander Bertram on learning of the Kolapore Victory cabled the Canadian team: "Congratulations. MacKinnon next;" Col. Street last night cabled back to Sir Alexander: "won MacKinnon as instructed."

In the Prince of Wales competition, 10 shots each at 300 and 600 yards, Corporal Fereday, Rhodesia; Pte. Northcote, of the Manchesters and Sergt. Smith of Guernsey are tied for the leading places. Pte. J. H. Gray, Toronto, was 20th; Pte. W. J. Irvine, Ottawa, 21st; Lieut. A. Martin, Calgary, 22nd; and Lieut. D. Burke, Ottawa, 28th. They win 40 shillings each.

In the first stage of the St. George's competition which is open only to past and present members of His Majesty's forces and is fifteen shots at 300 yards, possible 75, the Canadians shot as follows; Sergt. G. R. Tyers, Ottawa, and Capt. G. F. Andrews, Winnipeg, 74; Lieut. Burke, Ottawa and Sergt. A. F. R. Wilson, Ottawa, 73; Sergt. H. Ashling, Toronto, Pte. J. H. Gray, Toronto, Pte. Irvine, Ottawa and Sergt.-Major R. Kiddie, Toronto, 71; Major Gibson, Hamilton, Capt. Hunt, Winnipeg and General Duff Stuart, Vancouver 70; Major Crowe, Guelph, Sergt. G. M. Elmslie, Toronto, Capt. G. N. Galbraith, London, Lieut. Harvey, Timmins, Sergt. T. H. Radford, Toronto and Lieut. Martin, Calgary 69; Lieut. H. E. Rowlands, Hamilton, 68; Corp. G. Preece, Guelph, 67; Sergt. H. W. Beaumont, Victoria, 64. Sergt. Ashling, Pte. Gray, Pte. Irvine and Sergt.-Major Kiddie with 47 others will shoot off for 27 places in the second stage of the St. George's.

Sergt. Beaumont failed yesterday in the shoot off for a place in the second stage of the King's Prize competition.

UNDERGROUND CITY CUT FROM ROCK SALT

At Welliczka, in Poland, there is one of the largest salt mines in the world. The bed of salt stretches for many hundreds of miles below the surface of the earth, and is about 20 miles broad and 1,200 feet deep. This wonderful mine houses an underground city which in course of time has been hewn from the rocksalt. Thousands of people live in this underground town, and there are lakes ranging from 20 to 30 feet deep. There are many cafes where one can eat, drink and dance to the strains of tuneful orchestras.

DO THE GULLS FOLLOW THE SHIP ALL NIGHT?

A white ship steams out of Port McNicoll harbour, leaving behind a cluster of dull yellow elevators and cottages perched on the hillside, and scarcely has that picture faded than another appears over the stern—hosts upon hosts of graceful white spread wings, almost motionless, crying the poignant note of the hungry gull. A bugle calls the humans below for dinner, but the gulls still float on. Sundown and the Union Jack is lowered, the gulls giving salute. Nightfall and above the bright stare of the northerly constellations. Sunrise again and quadrons of birds still manoeuvre above. These gulls are simply signs and symbols of the peace and charm of a trip across the Great Lakes on one of the Canadian Pacific ships. From Port McNicoll across Lake Huron, up St. Mary's River, the great Soo Canal, across Lake Superior, the greatest body of fresh water in the world, to Port Arthur and Fort William, the journey is one of great clothing qualities and freedom from noise and hurry. No blare of trumpets, no organized entertainment—the broad blue sky and bluer waters, here and there a glimpse of green shore line, a ship seemingly stationary, so quiet are the engines and the white, white gulls—all that is needed for amusement. See the nearest Canadian Pacific Agent for your reservations, for they are much sought after.

Sing Sing Inmate Gets Thirty Days For Bootlegging

OSSINING, N.Y., July 17.—(U. P.)—Because the inmates of Sing Sing prison demanded their liquor and were willing to pay for it, one of the prisoners known to the attendants as "Louis McCarthy," one of his many aliases, went into the bootlegging business, Thursday Lewis E. Lawes, warden, sentenced "McCarthy" to 30 days, to be served when his present term is ended.

NEW EFFORTS TO TAKE MURRELL FAIL

Detectives Miss Melbourne Home Bank Bandit in New Search

LONDON, Ont., July 17 — (Star Special.) — It was announced yesterday that the police have failed in a new attempt to capture William Murrell, one of the gang of bandits who robbed the Home Bank, at Melbourne, in 1921, and killed Russell Campbell, a garage man, who tried to intercept Sydney Murrell, brother of William. Sydney was hanged here a year ago for the crime, and his pal, "Slim" Williams, was sent to Kingston Penitentiary for life.

Some time ago, Rene C. Wilhelm, who had been chef in a health resort at Central Valley on the Hudson River, 40 miles North of New York, went to Strathroy to visit friends. He stated that while he was planning the trip he told a waiter in the health resort about it. The latter said he was born in Montreal, but claimed to know nothing about Strathroy, London or Hamilton, all of which had been mentioned to him.

A few days later a letter arrived from Strathroy and the waiter at once renewed the conversation. Fifteen minutes later he left the resort and has not been seen since. Wilhelm told the story to people who had him brought before Robert Birrell, Chief of Police of London, with the result that W. H. Stringer, Provincial Police Inspector of Toronto, was sent to the New York resort to locate Murrell. The latter made his escape.

Wilhelm was shown the photos of 12 crooks here and he picked out that of William Murrell as the man with whom he had worked as a waiter at Central Valley and who hastily left when he found his companion was writing to Strathroy.

CLAIMS CHINESE KIDNAPPED HER

Wealthy American Authoress Says She Was Blindfolded and Gagged

CALEXICO, Cal., July 17 — (U. P.) — Claiming she was kidnapped by Chinese and carried, blindfolded and gagged, in a slow moving vehicle, toward the Mexican border, 240 miles from her home, Mrs. Virginia Lee Cookson, wealthy authoress, sought refuge with the police here during the night. Early today, she was still hysterical and unable to give a clear account of her adventure.

A posse of 30 men had searched the hills around Santa Ana for Mrs. Cookson, since her disappearance early this week. She had left notes, telling of a premonition of death and directing disposition of her affairs.

When she staggered up to Sergeant Wills Holmes of Calexico's night force and begged refuge in his home, Mrs. Cookson wore no shoes, her clothing disheveled and she was in a hysterical condition.

She told the wife of the sergeant who took her in for the night, that she had been driving in her automobile near Santa Ana Tuesday night, when a car full of Chinese which had been following her, drew up alongside and forced her from the road.

Mrs. Cookson said she was overpowered, bound, gagged and placed in what seemed to be a covered wagon. She lost consciousness, she said, until she reached Calexico. Here she found herself a prisoner in a den of Orientals. The authoress told of befriending a Chinese youth, who aided her to escape. She said she had never seen her assailants before, but believed they intended to carry her across the border.

GERMAN AIDING RIFF TRIBESMEN

Former Aid to Von Mackensen Said to Advise Abd-el-Krim

LONDON, July 17 — (Special Star, World Cable, Copyright.) — Abd-el-Krim's striking military successes against France are due to Major von Tannenburg, Assistant Director of Operations on the staff of General von Mackensen during the famous break through Allied lines in Galicia which decided the fate of the Czar's armies.

This information has been conveyed here by an adventurous young diplomat who has penetrated the Riff lines to report on their actual position.

This observer asserts that it is true, as reported in France that some German officers and non-commissioned officers and men are serving in the Riff armies. He adds that these men, with some of whom he talked, were for the most part, deserters from the French foreign legion who were enlisted in the Rhineland and the Ruhr by French recruiting officers for service in Africa.

PEACE PARTY SEEK RIFFIAN LEADER

Franco-Spanish Delegation En Route to Discuss Peace Terms

END RIFF WAR

Marshall Petain Leaving for Battle Area to Assist Commander

PARIS, July 17 — (U. N.) —A Franco-Spanish delegation is enroute to meet Abd-el-Krim to discuss terms of peace to end the Riffian war in French and Spanish Morocco, it was announced semi-officially Thursday night.

Premier Painleve foreshadowed peace talk in the Chamber recently when he outlined the terms upon which France would be willing to stop fighting, and intimated that Krim already had been acquainted with these. The nature of the terms the Franco-Spanish delegation is authorized to offer was not disclosed Thursday.

The Government's gesture for peace is to be accompanied, however, by an impressive display of force which, it is hoped, will demonstrate to Abd-el-Krim that only conclusion of peace can save him from disaster.

The Government announced the despatch of important reinforcements to Morocco Thursday. Marshall Petain is enroute to confer with Marshal Lyautey regarding the operations against the Riffians.

"This is in accordance with previous decisions of the Government that reinforcements should be sent to Morocco to safe-guard security in the French zone," an official statement said, "and to facilitate by their success over Abd-el-Krim the conclusion of peace.

"The reinforcements are now concentrated, and in order to assure their best utilization, the Government has decided to send Marshal Petain to confer with Marshal Lyautey."

Marshal Petain left Paris for Toulouse Thursday afternoon. He will proceed from there to Rabat by airplane.

RIFFS TAKE POST.

FEZ, French Morocco, July 17 — An important French post and its defenders have been captured by the Riffians, according to unconfirmed reports.

The post is that at Rhuan, 22 kilometres Northeast of Ouezzan. Two officers, ten French soldiers and fifty Senegalese are said to have surrendered and to have been led away to captivity. The commander of the region was compelled to use his troops elsewhere, and sent an airplane to the beleaguered post saying help could not be sent.

When their ammunition was exhausted the defending troops submitted to capture.

HAIG DRIVES TRAIN ON RETURN TRIP

JASPER, Alta., July 17. — (Star Special.)—Field Marshal Earl Haig, who arrived at Jasper last evening from Vancouver, not only believes in riding in his special train, but on occasions in assuming full command of it. This afternoon at Blue River he ascended the locomotive with W. C. Owens, Assistant Superintendent, of the Kamloops division of the Canadian National Railways, and joined Charles Gotchell, engineer, and Oliver Cask, fireman, in the cab. When the train left Blue River the Field Marshal took full control of the throttle and drove the train for 20 miles, returning to his own car only when he brought the train to a stop at Hell Roarin' Falls, a cascade which ends in a cloud of spray, a few feet from the rails.

The stop was a perfect one, and Engineer Gotchell, one of the veteran drivers of the Western region, told the Field-Marshal that he would be proud to recommend him as a locomotive engineer, any time he cares to retire from the army and take up railroading.

The trip from Vancouver to Jasper was made in easy time, to permit the party every opportunity to view the scenery along the route through the Selkirk and Rocky Mountains. A stop of 15 minutes was made at Mount Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies. Conditions were perfect for the viewing of this splendid mountain, and both the Earl and Lady Haig, characterized it as one of the most beautiful sights they have seen in Canada.

At Blue River the party was met by Col. Maynard Rogers, superintendent of Jasper National Park, and at Jasper Park Lodge, where they will remain until Saturday night. They were welcomed by Walter Pratt, General Manager of Canadian National Hotels. The stay at Jasper will be a quiet one, the opening of Jasper Park Lodge golf course, an inspection of War Veterans and a visit to the trail riders of the Rockies, being the public functions arranged for.

RESULT OF LAWSUIT LASTING 300 YEARS

PRAGUE, July. — (By Mail). — As the result of a lawsuit which has been proceeding for 300 years, the standing timber on a great stretch of forest formerly claimed by the Schoen born family of Velke Lucky is to be sold by auction for the benefit of the Ruthenian peasants of the district.

The case against the Schoenborns (which was based on certain privileges claimed by the original plaintiffs as "freed men") has now been settled by a compromise, the "freed men" being awarded some 4,000 acres of the forests claimed.

CUTS CHILDREN OFF WITH $1 EACH

NEW YORK, July 17.—(U. P.)—An accounting of the estate of the late Park Benjamin, New York attorney, and father-in-law of the late Enrico Caruso, shows that practically the entire estate went to an adopted daughter, Anna Bolchi Fullman, who received more than $250,000.

Benjamin's will cut off his five children with $1 each.

BRITISH ATTITUDE GIVEN ON CHINA

Foreign Office Outlines Views in Round Robin to Powers

LONDON, July 17—(Special Star-World Cable, Copyright.)—The Foreign Office Thursday dispatched a round robin to the Powers interested in China, outlining the British attitude. Great Britain accepts the suggestion of the United States that a fiscal conference be summoned at once, but points out that as a result of this conference will be to increase China's income, guarantees must first be obtained as to what will be done with the money.

After this conference, the British communication agrees, an international commission on extra-territoriality at treaty ports should be set up. But stress is laid on the contention that this commission must have power only to recommend and, after it has reported a treaty, the Powers must retain the right to take such action as they see fit.

An impartial investigation, by a judicial body, of the Shangai shootings would be acceptable to Great Britain, it was further indicated.

FORCES POOLED.

LONDON, July 17—(U. N.)—Chinese generals are pooling their forces for an attack on Canton, according to a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Hongkong.

General Chang Win-Ming's party is allying itself with several Yunnanese generals with a view to a concerted attack.

ASKS GRAND TRUNK FACTS MADE KNOWN

Writer in London Financial Post Urges Propaganda in Canada

LONDON, July 17.—(Star Special Cable by J. E. Poole, Staff Correspondent.)—In reference to the British shareholders grievance regarding the Grand Trunk, a letter-writer in this morning's issue of the Financial Post, in concluding his complaint, says:

"I suggest a committee to consider starting propaganda in Canada, so the facts may be brought to the attention of every Canadian."

It is also announced that representatives of Grand Trunk Pacific fours, will shortly be sent to Canada to confer with railway officials.

Anti-Canadian comment in connection with Grand Trunk matters is now largely confined to purely the financial section of the London press.

LOW IN FAVOR OF PETERSEN PACT

RENFREW, Ont., July 17.—(C.P.)—Stating that if he is returned at the next election he would advocate a contract, similar to that proposed with the late Sir William Petersen for controlling the Atlantic Ocean freight rates, Hon. T. A. Low, Minister of Trade and Commerce yesterday told a gathering at a picnic at Killaloe that the shipping advantages which the Petersen contract would have brought about, must not be lost sight of.

Hon. Duncan Marshall, Liberal organizer, announced that Hon. T. A. Low would be the Liberal candidate in Renfrew county in the forthcoming election.

BELIEVE ROOSEVELT HUNT SUCCESSFUL

Expedition Expected to Arrive at Yarkand, India, Sunday

CONQUER PASS

Fear Expressed Party Would Be Blocked Over Winter

LEH, Kashmir, July 17.—(U. P.)—Advises from Kashgar to the north of here today, related that the James Simpson-Roosevelt-Field Museum expedition, bent on discovery of the sheep's ancestor, the Ovis Poli in little known regions northward, is expected Sunday at Yarkand.

The expedition, destined for the heart of Asia to hunt the Ovis Poli, ancestor of the sheep, has apparently succeeded in conquering the dangerous Karakoram Pass in northern Kashmir.

Earlier reports had indicated that the explorers were held by unfavorable weather at the foot of the mighty pass. This had caused some concern lest they be locked over Winter at the foot of the pass or be forced to turn back to Leh.

The passage of the Karakoram means that the men have surmounted the most serious obstacle in their way, and that they should now have a comparatively easy time in tracking the Ovis Poli in his native haunts.

At Leh, the Roosevelts left the last vestiges of western civilization behind and started their ascent of the rocky defiles to the Kuen-Lun mountains, the back-bone of the continent, over a twisting road that has been used for ages by the caravan trains of traders between China and India.

Beyond these mountains lies western Turkestan and the western end of the great Tukla-Makan desert, a tumbled waste of sands piled like the waves of the ocean, some of them more than 300 feet high.

At the foot of the slopes lies the region that was once the seat of a powerful civilization—overwhelmed by the onward march of the sands which buried it until a decade, when excavations began to reveal evidence of the past.

The goal of the Roosevelts is the lofty Tian-Shan mountains. The Kuen-Lun on the south, and the gigantic Tian-Shan on the north, shut out from the world these regions, which are now the least known of any habitable part of the globe.

The Tian-Shan mountains are among the most lofty of the world's ranges, rising like a vast spine of the Asiatic continent to heights of from 16,000 to 20,000 feet. In the higher altitudes there are icy wastes; in the sparsely settled lower levels dwell the Ghirkiz Cossacks, Chinese and mixed races allied to the Thibetans. Game is abundant, including the wild horse, the wild camel, the Himalayan bear, Yark and tiger, Siberian ibex and the wild dog.

Some skulls of the Ovis Poli are found from time to time, but the animal has been seldom seen alive in the last 50 years.

JEWEL MYSTERY AND SHAM DETECTIVE

ROME, July. — (By Mail). — Recently there have been posted in Rome advertisements of the loss of an oval yellow diamond, set in platinum, which a nobelwoman from Genoa had lost while visiting the capital. A large reward was offered.

Presently the loser of the jewel received a visit from a man, who said he was a detective, and he had traced the gem. But he wanted 5,000 lire (now about £50) for travelling expenses before he could recover the yellow diamond.

After he had gone off with the 5,000 the Genovese noblewoman found that some more of her money and some more jewels had gone also.

Police investigations have resulted in the detention of a man who looks very like the "detective." But he is a Russian ballet dancer, not a detective. The police say his passport is not in order.

There is no trace of the oval diamond.

But Judge Raulston refused to hold the distinguished Chicago lawyer in contempt and turned to Bryan, who asked something about cross examination at the tensest moment.

"You would not have the right to cross examine," said Darrow emphatically to Bryan. "The witnesses would be testifying for the information of the court and not subject to cross examination."

WOMAN PUZZLED.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 17—(U. P.)—Doris Stevens, of New York, the feminist leader, and wife of Dudley Field Malone, finds herself puzzled over the interest she and other women are taking in this all-man affair.

"I came all the way from New York," she said today, "to find what? That the defendant was a man, the prosecutor a man, the judge a man, the jury all men, the attorneys on both sides men, the witnesses for the prosecution boys and men, the witnesses for the defence carefully selected men of intelligence.

"One would think there weren't any women in this world, or that they didn't do any thinking."

She was resting at The Mansions, puffing at a cigarette—a pretty picture—a handsome, athletic woman, with a boyish bob and a classical face.

"But I suppose this is one time," she continued, "when an equally great cause is at stake. Of course if this same trial were being held several years later there would be women among the principals and the cause would be just as great."

Doris Stevens was still amazed at and rejoicing over the speech delivered that afternoon at the trial by William Jennings Bryan.

"It was like a clinic," she said, "to see Mr. Bryan in action. Never before had I had a better close-up of that type of person. It seemed as if he were giving a special performance of demonstration for the benefit of those who had long hoped for it.

"You noticed how his voice dropped when he uttered the words 'sexual selection.' He is afraid of sex."

Doris Stevens thought the speech of Dudley Field Malone, her husband, a good one.

"I think Mr. Malone is on the side of youth, the scientific side," she said. "It is the nature of a child to ask questions, to want to know why is this and why it that, and a million other things. The best parent is one that doesn't quash the child's curiousity but encourages it.

"That is the attitude of scientists and that is the attitude of Mr. Malone. Think what a horrible place this world would be to live in if nobody wanted to know anything; if they were all satisfied as fundamentalists are, with what they already know."

DEFENSE PLANS.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 17.—(A.P.).—The decision of Judge John T. Raulston, on the State's objection to expert testimony in the Scopes evolution trial, was awaited with interest.

The court's ruling on the objection, which was argued by opposing counsel through yesterday, would bring the trial to an early end if favorable to the prosecution. If in agreement with the defense contention it would place on the witness stand an indefinite number of scientific scholars and draw out the testimony of the Tennessee evolution statute to undetermined duration.

If evidence from expert witnesses was declared inadmissible to the jury the defence would proceed to have scientists put testimony in the record for review by a superior court, Scopes counsel indicated. This procedure, however, would not require the time which the individual testimony of the defense witnesses would require in presenting the case to the jury.

Should the defense be permitted to go forward with its plan of placing the experts in biology, geology, astronomy, anthropology and archeology on the stand to tell the jury about evolution, the trial, observers believe would be indefinitely prolonged.

The defence would seek to prove, counsel has indicated, that the advocacy of the theory of evolution does not preclude a belief in the principles of Christianity. Many of their proposed scientific witnesses, they declare, are also devout Christians and well versed in Bible doctrine.

The State, it has been learned, is prepared to offer in rebuttal to possible testimony of defense witnesses, a list of theologians and Bible scholars, through whose testimony they hope to counteract the effect of the defense scholars.

JURY HAS SYMPATHY.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 17 — (U.P.)—The jury in the Scopes trial has the sympathy of the town. Proud of their distinction when chosen to render the decision in this historic proceeding, congratulating themselves on being sure of a front seat in the crowded courtroom, they have been humbled.

Except for a few brief moments when they were led into the courtroom like criminals by the Sheriff, they have passed their time whittling on the courthouse lawn and far enough from the loud-speakers on the courthouse window-sills so as not to be accused of surreptitiously listening to the proceedings from which they were barred by Judge Raulston.

Th jury was selected the first day of the trial, one week ago. They came back into court Monday only to be shut out again.

From Monday to Wednesday they neither hear nor saw a single event of the trial. Then on Wednesday they were led back into the courtroom to hear the opening arguments of the defense and prosecution and the testimony of the prosecution's four witnesses.

Out they went again when the defense put its one and only scientific witness on the stand, and out they were still today.

All the flaming oratory which thrilled the crowded courtroom yesterday was lost to them. If Judge Raulston rules out the scientific testimony of the defense, all they will hear will be closing arguments to the jury.

Speeds For Doctor As Stork Arrives; Court Is Obdurate

"Why were you speeding?" Judge Monet inquired of John Cronfield, who faced him in court this morning on a charge of travelling 25 miles an hour yesterday afternoon on St. Lawrence boulevard.

"Well, you see—er—we were expecting the arrival of a new member in the family, and I was going for the doctor."

"That's no good reason for speeding," Judge Monet declared. "Ten dollars and costs or eight days."

BIG STORM RUINS RASPBERRY CROP

Price Increases and Soft Berries Sell at 40c Per Quart

OTHER DAMAGE LIGHT

Second Crop Affected by Weather—Eggs 38c-40c—Butter, 40c

The storm of yesterday has nearly ruined the local raspberry crop, according to the local farmers at Bonsecours market, and the price of the few berries left has advanced.

This is the second fruit crop to be damaged by the weather this season. Strawberries, which are practically over now, were scarce and consequently dear on account of severe frosts during the early part of the summer.

No other produce seemed to have suffered from the rains, although some growers complained that their corn had been badly beaten by the downfall. Other small fruit was plentiful and in good condition.

Raspberries at Bonsecours today were sold for 40 cents a quart. Currants, black, white and red, were on the market for the first time, and sold for 20 cents a quart, while gooseberries, which are still plentiful, were also 20 cents.

Green apples were also on sale, and while still very small, were much in demand for apple-pie, and sold for 25 cents a peck. Only two or three crates of strawberries could be found in the whole market, and these were $4.00—the same price as last week.

There was nothing new in vegetables but these seemed just as plentiful as ever, in spite of the storm.

New potatoes were 25 cents a peck, and new beans were 70 cents a peck. Other vegetables were quoted as follows: Curly lettuce, ten cents a dozen; Roman lettuce, two bunches for 5c; cabbage lettuce, three bunches for 10 cents; cucumbers, four for 25 cents; new potatoes, 30 cents a peck; onions, three bunches for 10 cents; beets, two bunches for 5 cents; carrots, 20 cents; turnips, 30 cents; parsnips, 20 and 30 cents; rhubarb, 10 cents; peas, 25 cents a measure, and broad beans, 35 cents a measure.

Eggs were sold by dealers for 38 and 40 cents, while the prevailing price among farmers was 40 cents.

Butter was 40 cents a pound.

Fish prices were as follows: Brook trout, 50 cents; Gaspe salmon, 30 cents; lake trout, 25 cents; haddock, 10 cents; steak cod, 15 cents; mackerel, 15 cents; bull-head, 20 cents; perch, 15 cents; shad, 10 cents; pike, 15 cents; shrimps, 15 cents, and dore, 20 cents.

Hoax or Truth Telegram Gives Scott Reprieve

Then to make sure there was no mix up, there was an exchange of telegrams.

Scott was told of his eleventh-hour salvation.

WIFE TOLD NEWS.

"Thank God," he said. Then he was silent, stunned. "I'd lost hope. I was ready to die. Poor old Robert. Oh, I knew down in my heart that he would do the right thing. Somebody call my wife quick and tell her."

They called his wife. She was waiting for news, some sort of news, in the home of friends on the North Side. During the day she had helped Scott's father in his vain efforts to locate the Governor. She was slightly hopeful then, in spite of the fact that he had refused to act on Wednesday, but as the long hours dragged by and the search for Governor Small became more futile, her courage ebbed away.

Mrs. Scott and Scott's father were together when they heard the news. Mrs. Scott burst into tears. But the crippled old man almost shouted: "What did I tell you?" he asked friends. "Didn't I say that Robert would never let his brother hang. That message is from him. I am sure of it. And now I'm going to begin fighting for Robert."

Should it develop that the father's belief is justified, the 11th hour message will become even more dramatic than it is now. Fiction holds no more striking action than that of the guilty one confessing almost as another is walking to the trap.

DENIED ROBBERY

The telegram jibes with Scott's oft-repeated defence plea. He claimed his brother, Robert, was the one who shot Maurer, and he had repeatedly told his story since his trial, always claiming it was Robert. But Scott says it was not done in a hold-up, as the State showed during the trial. He says there was a drinking party in the City Hall pharmacy at Washington and La Salle St., that fatal night; that he and Robert attended the party, and that Robert shot Maurer in a quarrel over some money Maurer owed Robert.

"After the shooting," Scott frequently has said, "I put Robert in a taxi, took his gun and sent him away."

So far as is known, no one has seen Robert Scott since that night. Several times it has been reported he was in a state prison serving a term for a hold-up under another name. Once it was reported he was in the Federal Prison at Atlanta, Ga., but none of these reports ever could be verified.

POSSIBLE HOAX.

CHICAGO, July 17.—(U.P.)—Governor Small said there was a possibility of the telegram being a hoax, but that he was determined to spare a life if possible, and that he would grant a week's reprieve.

Newspapermen carried word to Scott who was playing solitaire in his cell, waiting for the dawn.

"Well — Russell — you're not going to hang today," one blurted out.

The convicted man flung his hands above his head, scattering the playing cards.

"God! I owe this to my friends," he exclaimed," his voice breaking.

"No," he was told; "you owe it to your brother."

Scott's face fell. He seemed wrapped in thought for a moment, while those who had come to the jail to witness the execution and had brought him the word that spared his life, shifted nervously, waiting for him to continue.

"Damn him. I knew he'd do it. I gave up hope three months ago. I was ready to die. Now there'll be more—of all of this.

"Boys, I have it all figured out—I was going to play pinochle until dawn, then lie down a few minutes—and then—"

The condemned man stared about him, into the shadows, then back to the faces of those about him, as though he could scarcely believe it was true.

"Well," he said slowly, "I guess if you'll leave me now—I'll lie down and go to sleep."

He did.

APPEAL TO PRESIDENT.

Businessmen of Windsor, Ont., have been most active on behalf of the condemned man. Yesterday they sent a request for clemency direct to President Coolidge at Swampscott.

Scott lost the last of his fortune in plans for a bridge across the Detroit River to connect Windsor and Detroit and facilitate crossing for tourists from the United States, and the citizens of Windsor were grateful to him for his efforts.

Despite the fact that he once pleaded guilty to the charge of murdering Maurer, and only withdrew the plea when advised that it meant a certain death penalty, Scott had prepared to go to the gallows maintaining his innocence.

He had frequently declared that it was his brother, Robert, who killed the clerk, and that the shooting occurred, not during a hold-up, but during a drunken brawl.

May Be An Accident That No Accident Is Recorded Today

Montreal had no accidents and no fatalities to report today. This is the first time that such an achievement—or accident!—has been recorded for many weeks. The Coroner's Court had its first free day this month and the local hospitals had no accidents to report for the last 24 hours.

Up to the present motor accidents, drownings, labor accidents, sudden deaths, and death under circumstances pointing to murder, had kept Coroner McMahon extremely busy. Motor car accidents have been on the increase. Since the beginning of the year there have been 23 persons killed by motor cars within the city limits, six of these fatalities having taken place since the first of July. The Coroner's Court dealt with five additional deaths occurring outside the limits of Montreal. There were 15 persons injured by motors in the last three weeks.

FOUR BEATTY BOYS, FARMERS, EXPECTED

The "Beatty Boys" will arrive in Montreal on the Canadian Pacific steamer Montcalm this evening.

The party includes four boys, expert young farmers, who will make a tour of Canada as the guests of E. W. Beatty, K.C., president of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The boys' names are Alfred Balchin, Leslie Anstey, Jack Hitchings and Rolland Home. They are members of the prominent Calf Clubs in England and were selected to come here by the Minister of Agriculture, as the most representative of the young farmers of Great Britain.

The first boys under the Beatty scheme were brought out here two years ago. They will travel across Canada and visit the principal agricultural institutions.

U.S. Not Counting On Payment of War Debts, Says Journal

"Almost everybody now admits that the chances of collecting the seven billions due America from her Continental associates in the War are virtually nil. Not one of the nine debtor nations is in a position to pay anything now, or in the reasonably near future," says the New Republic.

"France is the richest of them all, but it is only by a tremendous effort that she makes a show of balancing her domestic budget—a deceptive show, when it comes to that. What good can come, then, of inviting them to discuss the question of their debts to America? It is conceivable that such a discussion may help to fix the attention of Europe and America on the more practical aspect of international relations.

"The ministers of finance may for a time become headliners, while the ministers of defence, offence, intrigue and revenge may be thrust into the small print of the back pages. This would be a desirable, if tangible, result. As to the substance of the negotiations, settlements on paper may be made, like those with Poland and Finland. We may take them for what they are worth.

"Was it understood in America at the time when the loans were granted that collections on them would be virtually impossible? Not at all. Americans expected that the War would end in peace.

"The menace of German militarism was to be destroyed, and the other nations, assured of safety, were to be free to devote their fiscal resources to the works of peace instead of military preparations. A stable peace was expected to result in the lowering of the obstacles to trade and communication that hold most of Europe to a low level of efficiency.

"If these dreams had been realized it would have been possible for the debtor nations to pay. They were not realized. Europe is maintaining more men under arms than ever before in time of peace. The fear of war rests more ominously on Europe than it did in 1913. The barriers to intercourse and trade have been raised, not lowered.

"For this state of affairs no country is wholly to blame; all countries, including the United States, share the responsibility. The financial result of it all, however, is that our European debtors have neither the ability nor the desire to pay. Fortunately we are making up our budgets independently of any expectations of payment."

VIRGIN ISLANDS WERE DISCOVERED IN 1493

The Virgin Islands, discovered by Columbus in 1493, were so named by him because of their numbers, in allusion to the Roman legend of the 11,000 virgins. Landing first at St. Croix, he called the Indians Caribs because of evidences of their cannibalistic tendencies.

Like other tropical islands, the heat, which would otherwise be intense, is tempered by the ever-blowing trade winds. The daily variation is only about nine degrees, so that on the whole the heat is not oppressive. The place is almost entirely denuded of forests, and the rainfall is not sufficient for successful agriculture. The lay of the ground is such, also, that the rain runs off rapidly, leaving the hillsides parched and dry.

Dr. Gye gives details of a large number of experiments, many of which were carried out 15 times. He adds: "These experiments prove that in both primary cultures and candle filtrates of tumors there are two factors necessary to the production of a tumor. One is a particulate, therefore, probably a virus, and the other, being uninfluenced by spinning, is probably a chemical substance. Neither one operating alone will cause the formation of Sarcoma.

"It seems to me to be obvious that since the virus alone is not infective, the specificity of the Rous tumor must be carried by the second, or chemical, factor derived from the cells. That it is not a toxin or other product of culture is evident from the results of the spinning of the candle filtrates of tumors, and from the fact that subcultures alone are not infective.

"I propose to call this chemical substance the —— Specific Factor."

THIRD PARTNER.

Thus, Dr. Gye proves that both the germ and growth theories, regarding the cause of cancer are correct, but that the germ cannot grow by itself, but requires a third partner to prepare the ground for the germ's activity.

The paper by Bernard, the microscopist, shows that germs so minute as the cancer germ cannot be seen by the naked eye, even when in enormous numbers. The cancer germ appears as tiny things — spheroidal bodies — from the sides of which, like gems in a setting, small buds grow — the particulate bodies.

"These may extend from the original ring as a flower extends from the ground on its stalk. Such germs, it is confidently believed, belong to the large family group which causes disease. It is known that the first cousin of the cancer germ causes pleuro-pneumonia in cattle. There is reason to think that the germs of influenza, sleeping-sickness, smallpox and even measles belong to this group."

It is unofficially stated that an important announcement with reference to smallpox is likely in the near future.

The Lancet, dealing editorially with these papers, says:

"Publication by the Lancet of the paper by Doctor Gye on 'Aetiology of Malignant New Growths' marks an event in the history of medicine. These observations may, we believe, represent a solution of the central problem of cancer."

The editorial summarizes Gye's conclusions:

First—all malignant new growths contain an ultramicroscopic virus or group of viruses which can be cultivated. This applies to Carcinomata and Sarcomata of fowl, mice, rats, dogs and man. The virus resides probably within cells of neoplasm.

Second—the virus alone, washed free of adherent material, does not produce tumor, or even a visible lesion when injected.

Third—but when injected together with virus-free extracts of tumors, it produces malignant new growth. Extracts, therefore, contain a substance called by Gye "the specific factor," which enables the virus to attack the cells of an infected animal and transform them into cancer cells.

Fourth — there is no specific specificity so far as the virus is concerned, for tumors are obtainable in one species of animal with virus obtained from the tumor of another species.

Fifth—the Specific Factor shows very strict specificity of species.

Sixth—there is also probably strict specificity of tissue for the Specific Factor. The existence of a virus is not merely postulated, but Barnard has succeeded in rendering the cancer virus visible, and even in photographing it. This in itself is a great achievement.

WAY CLEARED

The Lancet concludes a three-and-a-half page editorial with the declaration: All this work referring to previous experimenters and new successes have cleared the way for rapid advance in the investigation of cancer along entirely new lines. It has raised a host of new questions. We have no doubt that by answering them the attack on cancer, which hitherto has baffled medical science, will be brought to a successful conclusion.

"But there is a wider outlook than this. The new technical methods now available will be applicable to research along the whole enormous front of disease like measles, smallpox, encephalitis, foot-and-mouth disease, and dogs' distemper, and may yield their secrets to workers armed with these new weapons."

If the energy in a flash of lightning could be collected and stored up, it would carry an electrically-operated motor-car or van for a distance of five miles.

RALPH MULFORD, SPEED KING, HERE

Created Many Records on Hills and Flats

Ralph K. Mulford, one of the world's greatest record breaking, thrill producing automobile racers, is a visitor in Montreal today and will be here for a couple of days, demonstrating to the trade and to interested parties the remarkable hill climbing feats that can be accomplished by the particular type of car in which he himself has broken innumerable records.

Amongst other accomplishments, he broke the record for climbing Mount Diabolo at San Francisco, in high gear, reducing the record from 25 minutes to 22 3-5 minutes. Another record he destroyed was that for climbing Mt. Wilson, for the Record-Examiner trophy reducing the minimum speed by nearly a minute. Climbing Mount Baldy, he reduced the record by three minutes, all of these feats being accomplished with the shift bar of the gears cut clean away, so that it was impossible to move down from top gear.

He also established a new record on Culver City Speedway, Los Angeles, my maintaining for 1,000 miles an average speed of 80 6/10 miles an hour, all stops counted. He stopped five times during the thousand miles for oil, and these five stops robbed him of three minutes, an average of 36 seconds for each refill.

CHRISTIAN ZULUS TRY TO PART WATERS

CAPETOWN — An extraordinary attempt by the leader of a party of Christian Zulus to repeal the miracle of the Red Sea, has ended in the deaths of fifty men.

The Zulus were returning to their homes from a tribal gathering.

Heavy floods turned Zululand into a swamp, destroying the railways, and when a party of fifty Zulus reached a wide drift which had become a raging torrent they were determined to ford it.

The party first knelt down and prayed. Then their leader advanced and struck the waters with an iron rod, commanding the waters to open and let them pass. The whole party then advanced into the drift, and were swept away. All were drowned.

BACK RIVER BRIDGE IS OPENED TODAY

Connects Montreal With Bordeaux and Cost $7,500 to Build

Today citizens of the north end are rejoicing over the opening of the foot-bridge over the Back River in Bordeaux which has just been completed by the Canadian Pacific Railway company with the co-operation of the city of Montreal and Laval des Rapides. The new bridge connects these two municipalities through an addition to the railway bridge and provides a crossing midway between the Lachapelle Bridge, at Cartierville, and the Viau Bridge at Ahuntsic, halving the distance of three miles between them. Aid Legault, who originated the move, stated that traffic will be greatly benefitted as the bridge is close to the car stop.

The bridge, which cost $7,500, consists of a concrete and steel structure alongside the tracks, protected on either side by high railings. The city of Montreal and corporation of Laval des Rapides divided the cost between them, and allowed the railway to do the work.

ON CONCERT TOUR

Miss Frances James to Visit Western Points

Mis Frances James, well-known and popular Montreal singer, will leave for a concert tour of the West. She will leave in a few weeks and her itinerary includes concerts at the principal cities.

Miss James won the Petersen Scholarship at McGill and is soloist at St. James United Church, here. She will be accompanied by Kathleen Robson, pianist. Her first concert will be given at Calgary on August 6. Her program will include classical and old English folk song.

MAKING MONEY AT MINT PROFITABLE

Leading Place Easily Held by Treasury Note

LONDON July (By Mail).—Every year the British Treasury makes a very considerable profit from the actual money circulating in the country.

Bank-notes, Treasury notes, silver, copper, and cheques all pay their share, but the leading place is easily held by the Treasury note.

The amount of Treasury notes in circulation is, at the moment, about £285,000,000, and for all these the Government has been paid in hard cash. £60,000,000 of this total is held in coin or bank-notes as a backing for the issue, but the remaining £225,000,000 is invested in gilt-edged, interest-bearing securities. Allowing interest at no higher than 4 per cent., an annual profit of £9,000,000 is obtained.

Against this, of course, must be set the expense of managing the issue and printing the notes. A Treasury note, on the average, has a life of six months, and since 1914 more than 4,000,000,000 have been issued. The cost of the paper and printing, however, is trifling compared with the profits accruing.

No such profits, however, were forthcoming in the days when gold circulated; on the contrary, considerable expense was incurred. The actual gold in a soverign cost £1, and the expenses of minting were borne by the Government. Furthermore, when about two pennyworth of gold had been worn off a soverign it was considered "light" and was withdrawn from circulation. The substitution of these "light" coins by new ones cost the State about £40,000 a year.

Bank of England notes are, of course, issued quite independently of the Government, but for the privilege of having the right to issue its own notes the Bank has to pay an annual fee of £180,000, with a percentage of certain profits. The total so received by the Exchequer during the last financial year was £189,081 13s. 8d. During the same period the 2d tax on cheques yielded £3,020,406 19s. 10d.

The Royal Mint makes handsome profits from its coining operations. Silver and bronze coins do not, of course, cost anything like their face value. The value of the silver in a half-crown is less than a shilling.

Bronze coins are made of an alloy containing 95 per cent copper and costing, at the moment, less than £70 per ton. A ton of bronze, however, will make 107,520 pennies—£448.

During the war and early post-war years, when owing to rapidly rising prices much additional money was needed in the purses of the public, the Mint worked overtime and enormously increased the output. In some years more than 100,000,000 coins were struck, and the resultant profits were naturally very large. In 1915 the record profit of £4,710,291 was earned, and until 1922 the figure did not fall below a million.

During the past year or two the reverse process has been taking place, and much superfluous coin has been withdrawn. The Mint, of course, paid the full face value for its coins, although when melted down they would realize only their bullion value, consequently the operations of the Mint since 1922 have resulted in a loss, but this is only a temporary phase. The average profit since 1872 has been £664,854!

SMUGGLING OF ARMS INTO INDIA VIA PORTS

Evidence of the smuggling of arms and ammunition into India by the ports is contained in the details of arrests made by the Calcutta Customs Department in ten months.

Eighteen steamers were concerned in these cases and six revolvers, nine pistols, a rifle, and 872 rounds of ammunition were seized. Eighteen men were arrested, including fourteen ships' officers.

Fines amounting to £100, and in two cases a year's rigorous imprisonment, were imposed.

Of the eighteen steamers, eleven were from the United States, and one each from London, Rangoon, China, Japan, Singapore, Norway and coast ports.

New Fashions in Men's Evening Wear Appear in London

LONDON (By Mail.)—Judging by the number of men seen in restaurants and theatres wearing the white tie and tailed coat in the evening, Englishmen are reverting to a custom general in pre-war days, the dinner jacket being worn only in the home and in the company of men.

The evening coat which the Prince of Wales, Lord Louis Mountbatten, and the Earl of Westmorland have been wearing are a trifle different from that of other years. The very broad lapels break higher—in other words, they do not roll so long. This adds height to the figure and width to the chest. The shoulders of all evening coats are broad, and the sleeves very narrow, necessitating shirts that have the new cuff sleeve.

The evening coat with the pointed tail is smarter than that with rounded tail; the fronts of the jacket, at the side, are cut straight and should not show an edging of the white waistcoat.

The white evening waistcoat is being made in new shapes; some of the single-breasted variety have the collar lapel fashioned at the waistline like a "V," the points corresponding, but the waistcoat of the moment is single-breasted, with a U-opening and rather narrow waistline with short points that do not gape wide apart.

The two outstanding features of this season's styles are the vogue for wide trousers and the popularity of the double-breasted black evening waistcoat for wear with the single-breasted dinner jacket. These waistcoats are cut with a straight line at the waist so as to accentuate the pleats on the trousers and give height to the figure. They are very narrow and have two rows of two buttons.

The double-breasted dinner jacket appears to be growing in popularity.

Although the King has been wearing an evening cape, there is very little effort to revive this type of garment. The black, double-breasted Chesterfield or Guards overcoat is easily the more popular style.

The shirt of the season has a stiff white marcella front with two studholes and very small double linen cuffs.

Dorr's Rebellion in Rhode Island Was Due to Lack of Proper Representation

What is known in history as Dorr's Rebellion in Rhode Island, occurred in 1842. The causes which actuated Thomas Wilson Dorr and his fellow citizens to defiance of their sovereign state had much the same ring as the colonists' original complaint against the King—"taxation without representation."

The right to vote in Rhode Island by a statute enacted in 1789, had been reserved to persons who were able to show either a freehold in land worth $134 or the receipt of $7 annually in interest. This discriminated faintly in favor of the countryside and against the villages and towns where freeholds of even $134 were somewhat less common. Based upon the number of voters thus created, representation in the Legislature had been apportioned, and for awhile all was equitable and serene. Providence and Portsmouth elected the same number of legislators, although the population was 20 times as great. To correct this lopsided arrangement a so-called Suffragist Party prepared a new State constitution and procured its adoption in 1840 after a campaign in which Dorr took a conspicuous part.

But apparently the mandate of the voters (whose majority was derived principally from the cities) carried little weight with the Legislature, which was controlled by the agricultural interests under the apportionment of seats provided for in the Act of 1789, says Arthur Scarr Henning in Liberty magazine. For the Statehouse dust was allowed to accumulate on the newly adopted constitution for a couple of years, while a rival constitutional convention, under the Legislature's immediate auspices, drafted a substitute bill of rights. The voters rejected it in toto; whereupon the Suffragist Party elected Dorr Governor at the same time that the Landholders' Party elected Samuel W. King. Both Dorr and King were formally inaugurated, but King emerged from the ceremonies in possession of the executive offices in the Capitol.

Dorr plotted to seize the Government arsenal at Providence. A declaration of martial law by King put down the conspiracy, and Dorr fled into Connecticut. When he eventually returned he was seized, tried for high treason, and sentenced to imprisonment for life. He was released from the penitentiary, however, in about a year.

AMERICANS TAUGHT USAGES OF SOCIETY

A book bearing the title, "Hints on Etiquette and the Usages of Society," was printed in London in 1836. According to a foreword it went through 22 editions," and had been made the "standard of English society." It was reprinted in Boston in 1843, so that Americans, as the author hints, might compare their social usages with those of the "polished and older nations of Europe."

"Etiquette," we are told, "is the barrier which good society draws around itself as a protection against offences the law can not touch; it is a shield against the intrusion of the impertinent, the improper and the vulgar." In a chapter devoted to "Introduction," we are admonished "never to make friends in coffee houses or other public places, as no person who respects himself does," but, "In America this must be taken with some allowance, where the custom of boarding in hotels and living much in public is regrettably conducive to such impropriettes. Too, in America there is a profession of equality, however chimerical it may be in reality, which is never even affected in Europe.

"The custom of drinking toasts and of forcing people to drink bumper after bumper of wine until drunkenness results is quite banished from gentlemanly society. It is a miserable boast that a man has sufficient strength of stomach to sit his companions 'under the table.'"

"I received a hearty kick to speed me on my way."—Man at Thames Police Court, who complained that his wife and mother-in-law had turned him out.

North London man: My wife is like a wild cat. I thought I was the terrier, but she can shake me.

Debate of Famous Counsel Warms Up Evolution Trial

Personalities Freely Indulged in by Defense and Prosecution in Scopes Case Untrammelled by Court Procedure — Malone Surprises Bryan by Brilliant Reply to Commoner's Forceful Attack

High Lights In Famous Evolution Trial Attracting World Attention

DAYTON, Tenn., July 17.—(U. N.)—It was 15 minutes yesterday before court resumed. Clarence Darrow had come in early and sat at the long defense table drinking red pop as he mulled over his mail. The letters were dumped in large bundles from a Government pouch from the Post Office. Darrow is the kind of a man everyone wants to write letters to. Some call him a dirty infidel. Some worship him almost as a god. None are indifferent.

A boy brings in four bottles of pop on order. We rest from our writing to drink. An officer comes up and taps one on the shoulder.

"Where did you get that pop?" he asks.

"We sent out for it."

"Well, you can't have it in here," the law advises.

"A man threw a pop bottle out of the window yesterday and it hit a woman. No more drinking in the court room."

Now the crowd has filled the court room and the police close the door, but not before Dr. George W. Rappleyea eases through the narrowing portal. This is "Rap's show." He started it and intends to stay with it. He has no official connection with the case but he sits with Johnny Scopes among the defense counsel.

Court is called to order. The minister steps forward, "everybody stand up," the bailiff commands. All obey except Darrow, who sits smoking a cigarette, reading his letters. He wears a little blue button inscribed "L. L. L."

"That means live and let live," he explains.

The prayer is over. The bailiff, using original grammar and pronounciation, cries: "Oh yes, Oh yes, this honorable court is now open pursuant to adjournment. Set down."

Local folks explain apologetically that he is a Chattanooga policeman and does not know the niceties of court crying.

There is a wrangle over procedure, but as usual it is settled after hot words and graceful apologies all around and Wm. J. Bryan, Jr., steps forward to open the State's argument against scientific testimony.

The father looks the "great commoner" but not the son. He would readily be mistaken for a pampered son of a Westbury, Long Island, millionaire, instead of the off-spring of the leader of the proletariat. He steps before the court wearing gray, pin-striped flannels, a dark blue belted jacket, horn-rimmed glasses and a carefully nursed mustache.

Whatever his mental gifts, it is apparent the moment he begins his arguments that he has not inherited that remarkable voice with which his father—just at young Bryan's age—defied the Democratic convention in 1886. Young Bryan could hardly be heard and first the defense counsel and then the court had to ask him to raise his voice. But he never captured the crowd, for it never cheered him. The father moved his chair close to his son and listened intently.

Young Bryan may be an excellent and rising lawyer, but he will never sway the populace like his dad has done for a third of a century.

Dudley Field Malone, the most Chesterfieldian of the "furriners" at the trial, yielded to the heat and suppressing his Fifth Avenue instincts, removed his coat and sat there in full gaze of the court room in his shirt sleeves. There was a ripple of applause when this Adonis of the East succumbed at last to the local custom.

Malone's wife, Doris Stevens, arrived Thursday and sat with her husband among the defense counsel. She is an athletic, bobbed haired Diana, served her time as a suffragist, and was thrown into jail at Occoquan, Va., by President Wilson for picketing the White House for woman's suffrage.

She is a Lucy Stoner, but it hasn't spoiled either her looks or her disposition.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 17 — (U. N.)—The Goliath of the fundamentalists ventured forth to stop the introduction of scientific testimony in the Scopes evolution trial Thursday, but he was met by a missile of unexpected force from the sling of Dudley Field Malone, of New York, who stirred even these loyal partizans of the idol Bryan, to applause.

Wm. J. Bryan made his big speech of the trial against admission of expert testimony and Malone followed with a brilliant plea which was the sensation of the day.

"We come here for a duel to the death" Malone declared, snatching up Bryan's own phase in pleading with the court to admit scientific witnesses.

"But are our weapons to be taken from us? Does the opposition mean that our defendant is to be strapped to the board and only the prosecution to have a sword?

"The truth does not need the protection of the law or the forces of Government. Truth does not need the protection even of Mr. Bryan.

"We don't fear the truth. We believe we stand with progress.

"There is the fear" Malone shouted, pointing at Bryan. "We defy it."

Bryan and Malone made the two spectacular speeches in a day of argument, over the admissibility of expert testimony. Judge Raulston deferred his opinion until today. This will decide whether the trial comes to a speedy end after closing arguments only, or whether it is to drag out while evolution and the meaning of the bible are expounded by the scholars.

EAGER EXPECTANCY.

There was eager expectancy in the courtroom when it got about that Bryan would make his first argument against the admission of expert witnesses. These men and women who have been voting for him off and on all their lives, hung with devout attention on every word.

Like the ferocious kings of Israel, the grizzled commoner mounted the fundamentalist battlements to hold off the Philistines. He fought with every weapon. He played on local pride, on the ignorant man's suspicion of the expert, on the uneasiness of the parents over the younger generation. He burlesqued the views of the scientists, held them up to the scorn of the spectators by skillful metaphor and shot hot bitter, devastating repartee at the defense lawyers whenever they tried to trip him up.

"The experts cannot be permitted to defeat the law by coming in the great state of Tennessee to testify that this isn't a bad doctrine," Bryan said, waving a palm leaf fan.

"The place to testify to that was before the legislature. If these people were so anxious to keep Tennessee from disgracing itself, why didn't they come here and speak when the law was being passed?

"The people of this state passed a law and they knew what they were doing when they did it, for they knew the danger of this doctrine to their children.

"Doesn't the book say the very thing the law forbids? Get that book for men."

"Which book, the bible?" asked the court emerging from peaceful reveries.

REFERRED TO TEXT BOOK.

Bryan referred to Hunt's "civic biology," which Scopes used as a text book. "Has it come to the time" Bryan asked when composure had been restored, "when the minority can take charge of Tennessee and compel the majority to pay teachers to take religion out of the hearts of our children?

"No matter whether the board of education approved the book or not, anything in it contrary to the law is prohibited and nobody knew it better than Scopes himself." Bryan said, shaking his palm leaf fan at young Johnny Scopes.

Bryan, arguing his first case in 28 years, found himself falling into the tricks of the Chautauqua circuit and only with some difficulty mustered up the proper respectful salutations to the court.

All through his speech he used the phrase, "my friends," once adding that some in the room were not his friends, and again correcting himself and using the usual court salutation "your honor."

"A Christian believes a man came from above, but an evolutionist believes man came from below." He shouted, holding aloft his fan in one hand and Hunter's civic biology in the other. He showed the court the diagram of the evolution tree in the biology book from which Scopes taught.

"This is not even a good theory." Bryan said. "It is only a theory until science has traced one species to another. Out of the 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 species in the world, not one has been traced from another and yet they call us bigots and ignoramuses because we won't throw away our bibles."

Bryan remarked with some show of pride that he was a member of the American Society for the Advancement of Science. He showed much familiarity with the theory and data on evolution which he said might turn more poorly immunized folk of Tennessee into infidels.

SHUT OUT GOD.

"Does any scientist tell you where life began." He asked. "Science wants to commence with an evolution that begins with nothing and ends nowhere. They don't tell you about God. They shut God out of the world."

Judge Raulston asked whether the evolutionists would have to admit that God created the cell if they sought to reconcile the bible and evolution.

"Yes" Bryan replied, "and even that doesn't make it harmonize with the bible. They don't tell where in the long line between the lowly little cell in the sea and the flower of man that man became endowed with immortality. More than half of them don't believe in a personal God at all.

"There is no place for a miracle in the doctrine of evolution. If evolution is true, it logically eliminates the virgin birth, the resurrection, the doctrine of atonement, it means that men never fell, never needed a Saviour, and that Christ was born of Joseph or some co-respondent unnamed.

"Evolution robs the children of God, of their Saviour and of moral principles."

Bryan referred to the Loeb-Leopold case and Clarence Darrow's plea to the court to save the lives of those two youths and to their discipleship of Nietsche, who he said was the only philosopher who dared carry evolution to its logical conclusion.

"We have it from the chief counsel of the other side that the universities and professors who taught the philosophy of the super-man were more responsible for the dastardly deed than those two boys who committed it." Bryan said.

DARROW ROUSED.

Darrow rose up with gathering indignation at this thrust.

"That's not true," he roared. "Anyway Nietsche never taught evolution. Those two boys were insane. Within a week a clergyman in Illinois killed his wife to marry someone else. I can find ten clergymen who are criminals to every student of science who is a criminal."

"It's your theories that are responsible for it," Bryan snapped.

"You're making the preachers," Darrow retorted, "and Your Honor, I object to having another case dragged in here."

"I see no objection inasmuch as I know it will not prejudice the court." Judge Raulston replied.

"But it doesn't do any good." Darrow observed.

Bryan played on the pride of the mountaineers by declaring that there were 11 church-members on the jury and that any one of them was a better expert on the bible than any outside expert who was not a Christian.

"Amen" shouted the more fervent brethren in the courtroom.

"I want those amens to go into the record." Darrow told the court.

JURY MISSED IT.

All of this, of course, was lost on the jury which was kept out of the courtroom all day. The argument is entirely for the purpose—technically—of advising the judge so that he may rule intelligently as to whether to permit the jury to hear scientific testimony.

"The one beauty of the bible," Bryan continued, "is that it doesn't take an expert to understand it.

"This is not a mock trial. If we want to have a mock trial, let's convene it after the case is over. While this court is sitting let's attend to business. When the legislature passes a law so plain that even a fool can see what it means, why prolong this affair?

"This case is not going to be decided here any way. No court, high or low, is going to decide the issue between the unbeliever and revealed religion. The bible is its only authority and the Son of God, born of the Holy Ghost, and the Virgin Mary isn't going to be driven out by experts who trace man back to the jungle. You can't humiliate this great state of Tennessee by allowing people to come in here to overturn this law because they don't agree with it.

"If these gentlemen want to broadcast their theories, let them convene a mock court, for it will deserve the title of mock court if its purpose is to mock the bible out of the hearts of men."

GETS APPLAUSE.

When the commoner finished there was a burst of applause and friends rushed over to shower congratulations on him. With his mastery of speech and argument, and tricks which always work on his audience he seems to have made another cross of gold speech.

But across at the defense table a handsome youngish man rose, with an Irish twinkle in his blue eyes and a soft touch to his voice, all marking him off as the antithesis of the plain spoken commoner. Dudley Field Malone, regarded here as somewhat of a New York dandy, little known except as a Roman Catholic of New York, seemed like a stripling David going out to be eaten up in the great maw of the fundamentalist Goliath.

"We have a right," he said, "to show by witnesses that the bible is not to be taken literally, in a course of science.

"The issue is as broad as Mr. Bryan has made it and why fear a meeting of the issue here where the truth is scrutinized? What is this psychology of fear? I don't believe the scientists are in a conspiracy to destroy our children. Are the preachers the only ones who are looking out for our youth?

"I am not worried about the children of this generation. They are probably much wiser than many of their elders. Give children all of the light and all of the information there is. We have just had a war with twenty million dead. Civilization need not be so proud of the grown ups. For God's sake close no door of knowledge to their youthful minds.

SCORES BRYAN

"Mr. Bryan spoke some days ago about the wisdom of the jury system. But who is excluding the jury from this court room for fear they will hear something. We came here ready for a duel to the death. But does the opposition mean to strap our defendant to the board and is the opposition alone to have a sword? Are our weapons to be taken from us?

"The truth is no coward. It does not need the protection of the law, or the forces of Government. It does not need the protection of even Mr. Bryan.

"We are ready to tell the truth as we understand it and we don't fear all of the truth that they can tell. We believe we stand with progress.

"Over there is the fear. We defy it."

Malone's short whirlwind argument was the big surprise of the trial, and the lawyers on both sides congratulated him on his efforts. The judge then questioned Darrow as to his views.

Judge Raulston asked Darrow whether the doctrine of evolution was consistent with Genesis.

"To say God created man out of dust is simply a figure of speech," Darrow replied.

"Genesis says nothing about the process.

"Is it your opinion that God created by a process of growth and didn't manufacture man like a carpenter would a table? and do you recognize a God behind it all?"

DARROW'S BELIEF

"I don't personally, but most of those on our side claim to," Darrow answered.

"You think man and beast had a common origin?"

"Life began in a low form of cell. There is no such thing as species. That is all nonsense. There are differences. They came about by some process no one is certain of. Man is the highest product of it."

"Where does man become endowed with reason?" the court asked.

"Many lower animals have reason to some extent, but man to a far greater degree."

"How about immortality?"

"Evolution concerns the organism of man and doesn't concern the hereafter. That is for theology."

"Do animals have immortality?"

"John Wesley said they did. The Indians thought they did. I don't pretend to know."

Arthur Garfield Hays, of the defense, interrupted.

"Don't you think, your honor, that your very questions show the necessity of evidence in this case?"

Judge Raulston declined to reply and Attorney-General Stewart closed the argument for the State.

"I am not an evolutionist," he said, "I don't believe man came from the same cell as a monkey. I believe man has developed from a more primitive stage, but I do not believe he has descended from a lower order of animals."

"It would be prostitution of the courts of Tennessee to throw the doors of the court open to the scientific witnesses."

As the preceding speakers had made a field day of it, Stewart leaped over the fence and ran at large for a few minutes.

"I regret that the greatest criminal lawyer in the country has gone so far astray," Stewart said of Darrow's agnosticism.

"Great God," exclaimed Stewart, "what could not a mentality like that have done had it aligned itself with the forces of right instead of those which sink their fangs into the bosom of Christianity?" This brought the fireworks to an end far away from the quiet, timid, technical argument which was begun in the morning by William J. Bryan, jr. He clung strictly to the law in the case and was forgotten in the great mob scene that followed.

MONKEY REFUSES TO POSE WITH ACTOR DRESSED AS BRYAN

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., July 17. — (U.N.) — A monkey actor belonging to a comedy troupe objected to posing with a comedian disguised as Wm. J. Bryan and ran amuck on busy Hollywood boulevard.

Downing Bryan with a rush, the simian climbed a tree, pattered his protest at the actor and then leaped from the tree on top of seven year old Paul Stall. The monkey sank his teeth into the boy's arm.

He then climbed the tree again and was not quieted until the actor took off his "Bryan" disguise.

The boy was taken to a hospital where his wounds were cauterized.

FIGHT FOR CHILD WON BY LAWYER

U. S. Immigration Authorities Recommend Deportation For Mrs. Cooke

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., July 17.—(A. P.)—The immigration authorities here yesterday recommended to Washington that Shirley Cooke, five year old daughter of J. Henry Cooke, a barrister of Toronto, and Mrs. Hilda Betty Cooke be deported to Ontario from San Francisco after she and her mother had been tried on charges laid by the father, who recently was given custody of the child in divorce proceedings. The case of the mother, who is charged with having brought the child here without having their passports properly vised, is still being investigated.

If the Department of Labor Acts favorably on the recommendation, it means that the child will be returned to the father. He recently sought a divorce through the Federal Parliament at Ottawa but was unsuccessful, although winning custody of the child. Mrs. Cooke thereupon fled with the little one and had been traced here by the father.

Mrs. Cooke won a point in the Supreme Court, however, when that tribunal yesterday denied Cooke's petition to restrain the District Court of Appeals from hearing a proceeding brought by Mrs. Cooke in behalf of her efforts to retain custody of little Shirley. Mrs. Cooke's appeal to the District Court was in the nature of a petition for a writ of prohibition to restrain the Superior Court from hearing a habeas corpus action instituted by her husband to regain possession of the child. The District Court is now empowered to proceed with this hearing.

Rush for Books On Evolution Result of Trial

CHICAGO, July 17 — (U. N.) — Even as the cynics predicted— they are clamoring for books on evolution at the public library.

Darwin's heavy tomes gathered dust on the shelves before Tennessee decided that they did not constitute propef material for the young.

But now the dust has gone, and librarians are struggling to provide sufficient material to meet an excited public taste. A list of 20 volumes of evolution has been compiled hastily and the books arranged in a separate case.

A large placard "evolution—pro—contra" guides the curious to the shelves where views on man's origin are displayed.

FORD MAKES BEST OFFER FOR SHIPS

Other Bidders Resent U.S. Government Action in Reo-pening Matter

WASHINGTON, July 17—(U. N.)—Henry Ford's bid for 200 Government vessels was the highest acceptable offer, it was revealed when the seals were unfastened here Thursday and immediately a protest was set up by two unsuccessful applicants under the original advertisement.

The Ford bid was $1,706,000. A check for $175,000 was enclosed. An offer of $2,444,000 from the Ocean Power Company was ruled out because no check was submitted with the offer.

The Boston Iron and Metal Company, of Baltimore, whose bid of $1,370,000 was rejected recently by the Shipping Board filed a protest, claiming that its offer opened on June 30 should be recognized. The company complained that it was improper for the board to announce bids and then carry on negotiations with other bidders, in which position it was joined by the Waterside Salvage Corporation of New York.

The Boston company's bid was recommended by Admiral Leigh Palmer, president of the Emergency Fleet Corporation but the board refused it and ordered further negotiations, which brought forward the bid from Ford, opened Thursday. Original bids were closed June 30.

Palmer will study the new bids opened Thursday and will submit his recommendations to the Shipping Board next week. While the Ford bid was highest, some consideration may induce recommendation of another. Palmer has not announced his position on the complaint of the Boston Iron and Metal Company.

Ford announced that he would retain some of the hulls, if his bid was accepted, installing Diesel engines, and would use them in salt water trade. He indicated, when the prospect of purchasing Government vessels was first suggested, that he desired refrigerator vessels for South American trade, taking cars on the down trip and bringing back a fruit cargo.

MONTREAL'S SUMMER PLAYGROUNDS

Cartierville

THE cool river sweeps along between green, shady, quiet banks. The city, with heat shimmering from its pavements, seems a hundred miles away. Here are places to laze... to picnic... to swim... places, close at hand, where it's even cool enough to dance on the hottest summer day... all within half an hour from the city.

* * *

Montreal has dozens of summer playgrounds within easy reach. Some are popular; others, equally lovely, little known. No Montrealer need go far for a day in the open, a breath of fresh country air. Rolling meadows, cool groves, rippling brooks are but a few minutes from Montreal.

This is one of the services rendered by the Tramways. The country is made available to every person in Montreal. A rapid, regular service is given for only a few cents fare.

HEAVY HAY CROP BEING CUT HERE

District Farmers Seeking Markets to Dispose of Big Surplus

POTATO YIELD OFF

Apples to Yield 60 Per Cent of Five Year Average

By the end of the month a hay crop heavier than the average, cleaner and of better quality than that harvested last year in this vicinity, will have been cut and stored away. Local dealers have no estimates for the crop in the Province of Quebec, but are united in the opinion that it will be especially heavy. A bumper harvest coming on top of the heavy stocks of hay cut last summer, which many farmers still have on hand, presents the problem of securing a market, a local dealer stated this morning. It is felt, however, that American buyers may bid for the surplus. While it is still too early for returns from the hay harvest in the United States, reports received from there predict a shortage across the southern boundary. This would prove beneficial to Quebec, by obliging dealers to come here for their balance required.

The reason the hay is cleaner than last year is because the weather was not favorable to the growth of clover, but favored the timothy, it is said. While heavy rains might injure the crop in this section of the country, some farmers have all the hay harvested, and would not be affected. Others are well on with the reaping.

REDUCED POTATO CROP.

The potato crop in the Province of Quebec will be 10 per cent. less than in 1924, estimates the Department of Agriculture of the Dominion Government. Cool weather has somewhat retarded growth, it is reported, and where the potatoes are not sprayed the potato bugs are making merry. Tomatoes in this province received a severe set-back from frost injury in early June and are making a slow recovery.

The following summary of the fruit crop prospects in this section has been compiled by the Department of Agriculture.

The present commercial apple crop prospects for Quebec promise a yield of 90 per cent of 1924 or 64,057 barrels. This is equivalent to 60 per cent of a five years' average commercial crop.

Rougemont. — Spraying and dusting have been well done in this district and apple trees generally are free from scab, although the Apple Curculio is doing damage in some orchards. The total apple crop in this district is estimated at 150 per cent of last year, with McIntosh and Fameuse 110 per cent, Wealthy 120 per cent, Russets, Wolf River and Alexander 125 per cent. Small fruits such as strawberries and raspberries show 50 per cent heavier than last year.

Abbotsford. — Severe May frosts followed by heavy June drop have reduced the apple prospects considerably and present indications are for a crop 40 per cent of last year. Early varieties such as Alexander, Wolf River promise 80 per cent, Wealthy, Duchess and Transparent 35 per cent, while McIntosh and Fameuse indicate 40 per cent and Golden Russets 75 per cent of last year. Strawberries and raspberries are showing prospects for a good crop which is estimated at 30 per cent better than 1924.

St. Hilaire. — The weather during the past month has been favorable for tree growth and a good crop of apples is expected. Wealthy, McIntosh and Fameuse are estimated at 50 per cent better than the crop last year, while Transparent and Duchess are likewise heavy. Orchards in this section have been well sprayed with the result that there is very little fungus or insect pests. Small fruits are very plentiful with strawberries 120 per cent of last year.

Chateauguay. — Although most varieties had a good showing of bloom, the prospects now are so favorable as at first expected, with McIntosh very light and Fameuse 40 per cent, Wealthy 75 per cent and other varieties 70 per cent. The total yield indicates a crop 50 per cent of last year. Apple scab is not much in evidence at the present time, although Cigar Case Bearer, Green Aphis and Measuring Worm are reported in some orchards.

St. Joseph du Lac. — Apple trees throughout this district are not usually a very heavy set of fruit. This is attributed to the severe frosts in May which were followed by a heavy June drop. Both McIntosh and Fameuse indicate a light crop while 75 per cent of last year's yield would be a good estimate for Yellow Transparent, Duchess, Alexander and Scarlet Pippins. The strawberry crops is only fair, being 60 per cent of last year. This condition is due to the cold frosty weather during the month of May.

Oka. — The apple crop was favored with good weather during blossom time and the set appears to be heavy for most varieties except McIntosh and Fameuse. The total yield promises a crop 175 per cent of last year. Apple scab and insect pests seem to be well controlled by the spraying methods which have been applied very thoroughly this season by most growers.

Hemmingford and Covey Hill. — A good strawberry crop is expected in this district, while raspberries promise 75 per cent of 1924. Cherries and plums are almost a failure on account of severe May frosts. The apple crop in these districts does not appear to exceed 80 per cent of last year's production. There was a heavy June drop on all varieties which left McIntosh 100 per cent, Fameuse 50 per cent, Wealthy 35 per cent of last year. Early varieties such as Alexander, Wolf River, Duchess and Yellow Transparent are light.

JAPANESE RELISH OYSTERS VERY MUCH

The Japanese are said to be virtually free from goitre. They are very fond of oysters, and besides oysters they are said to eat probably more salt-water fish per capita than any other nation. That is said to be one reason why they are virtually free from goiter.

Many scientists indorse the theory that oysters and other shellfish can prevent or cure simple goitre. Our Middle West is sometimes known as the Great Goitre Belt. Recent investigations show that the prevalence of simple goitre is due in a large measure to lack of iodine in drinking water. Analysis of large numbers of sea foods has shown that oysters, clams and lobsters are unusually high in iodine content. Weight for weight they have more than 200 times as much iodine as milk, eggs or beefsteak. Shrimp have 100 times and salt-water crabs 50 times as much; marine fishes have the same amount, while fresh-water fishes, much lower in iodine, have about the same amount of iodine per bulk as meat.

NOVEL DISCOVERY OF 'BREATHING' STEAMER

CAPE TOWN, July. (By Mail).—Dr. Pole Evans, Chief of the Botiny Division, states that the astonishing discovery has been made that a steamer breathes when encountering rough seas. He declares that this amazing fact had come to light as the result of the installation of self-recovering instruments in the cold storage chambers of the Windsor Castle. The experiments had proved that the steamer undergoes certain respiratory movements, resulting in a considerable leakage of gas from the cold storage chamber containing fruit.

CAMP OOLAHWAN PROVES POPULAR

Place Restriction on Visitors —Must Arrange Trip Before Going Out

If anything, Camp Oolahwan is proving too popular this year. Not only did girls bombard the Central "Y" for registration in such numbers that almost forty were disappointed at not being able to secure accommodation in the first few weeks, but the camp itself has suffered a regular siege of visitors. One day recently, 125 friends and relations descended upon Oolahwan without warning to visit the girls. The consequent cry of despair from the harassed camp officers was enough to waken pity in the stoniest heart. They say it is impossible for them to give the necessary attention to visitors and that the daily camp activities are threatened with extinction unless the public will "have a heart."

This state of affairs has obliged the authorities to request that no one visit Oolahwan during the camping season without making special arrangements at the Central "Y" on Dorchester street. Further, it is asked that no men will apply for permission to visit the camp, which is exclusively for girls.

The five new bungalows have proved a great success, and the girls are enthusiastic over their comfort and protection in wet weather. These are almost entirely open to the air and screened in. The bungalows were the gift of a friend and were not paid for out of Federation funds. Another friend provided a new surface for the tennis court, while the Junior Girls Clubs donated a pontoon and springboard for diving. Swimming has been very popular, and several girls have taken the tests for the Royal Life Saving Society's certificate.

Evening is made merry to the tune of the fine ukelele orchestra organized by camp talent, and there is no limit to the amount and variety of fun that fills the days. The five mile path around the lake is much patronized for hikes through the pine bush, which has never been so luxuriant in the memory of the oldest camper. Wild life appears in the form of deer, which have been espied drinking at the lake, and the woods are filled with birds and chipmunks. Mystery hunts through the bush are very popular, with camp officers to supervise and lead the hunt, and basketball, baseball, tennis, boating, swimming, marshmallow roasts, concerts, dramatics and masquerade parties make a holiday at Oolahwan one to be remembered for a long time.

ADDRESSES LIONS CLUB

That service clubs like the Rotary, the Kiwanis and the Lions should be more active and more in the forefront in community service, was the trend of the argument laid before the Lions Club at their luncheon yesterday by J. W. C. Taylor, international vice-president of the Kiwanis Club. Service clubs, he pointed out, were not satisfied nowadays with raising money to give to charities, but sought to find and eradicate the causes of social distress.

ELECTED AT VERDUN

H. L. Barnewall was elected chairman of the Verdun Protestant School Board to succeed H. J. Garritty, who has held the position for several years. H. J. Barr was elected a member of the board to fill the vacancy created by the retirement of William Jennings, who is now a resident of Valois. H. L. Barnewall, H. J. Garritty and H. J. Barr form the new board.

FISHHOOKS OF GREAT AGE FOUND IN FRANCE

In France several caves have been found in which men are believed to have lived about 200,000 years ago. There are rude drawings scratched or chiseled on stone walls and, what is more important to scientifically inclined anglers, in these caves were found what are probably the oldest fishhooks so far known to have been used by man. Frankly speaking, the things are not fishhooks at all, but they served the purpose.

These first known hooks consist of a stone ground down into the shape of a small banana with a ridge cut in the middle, the string or whatever was used for a line having been tied around the stone in this ridge. Cavemen of ages ago took this banana-shaped stone and covered it with meat. Then they kindly allowed a fish to swallow the whole thing.

Then the fishermen would give a pull on the string, or whatever it was. The "hook" would straighten our horizontally and therefore refuse to come out of the water without the fish, so, when the fisherman hauled in the fish, with the hook caught in his gullet, would keep the crude fishhook company.

Around the lakes of Switzerland scientists have found various kinds of hooks considerably later than those crude relics from France. Many of the Swiss hooks are of bronze, some having barbs, but the really ancient ones being barbless and consisting of two hooks at right angles to each other.

In 46 states children below 14 years of age cannot work in factories. Twenty years ago only thirteen states had such a law.

MONTREAL NORTH SEEKS AUTONOMY

Plans to Pay Its Way Soon and Be Rid of Guardianship

The hopes of the council and residents of Montreal North were raised slightly last evening when Mayor Pichet, in council assembly, told his colleagues and an audience of inhabitants that it would not be long before the municipality would be able to pay its own way and would be relieved of the present situation under control of the Metropolitan Commission as an aided municipality.

But the statement that evoked the most applause because of its practical value was that announcing that the town would soon open Pie IX Boulevard northward through the corporation, where it is interrupted for some four-fifths of a mile and would employ men out of work from the municipality.

The mayor announced that a private assembly before the meeting with H. A. Terreault, chief engineer of Montreal and appointed director of public works and manager of Montreal North by the Metropolitan Commission, had been abortive of results.

The caucus had been arranged after the mayor and council had protested to the commission that it had no power over its chief of police, fire and public works, Ubald Villeneuve.

The commission has full power over the municipality's finances and consequently over its employes, the council learned, and until the town could pay its way the condition would remain unaltered. In the meantime the town would seek to arrange with the commission to collect some $100,000 in tax arrears to help put them on their feet.

C.N.R. STAFF PICNIC

Accountants Arrange Seventh Annual Outing for Saturday

The seventh annual picnic of the employes of the accounting department of the Canadian National Railways will be held tomorrow at King Edward Park where an interesting program of sports and games has been arranged for. Boats will leave the Pie IX Boulevard pier at 9.30 a.m., 10.15 a.m., and 2 p.m., returning at 3 p.m., 6.15 p.m., and 8 p.m.

A ladies baseball game between the "Dryads" and the "Nymphs," scheduled for 1.30 p.m., will be a feature of the day, while children's races will occupy the morning and grown peoples' events in the afternon.

The Paramount orchestra of Wood Hall, Verdun, will be in attendance and admission to the rustic dance hall will be free. Souvenirs and ice cream will be distributed to the children after the sports. All events, except a 220 yard dash, will be confined to accounting department employes, their wives and families.

DROWNING VICTIM IS BORNE TO GRAVE

The funeral of Martin Kiely who was accidentally drowned while canoeing at St. Eustache last Sunday took place this morning from his late home, 748 de l'Epee avenue, Outremont, to St. Michael's Church, where requiem mass was sung and from there to Cote de Neiges Cemetery.

Mass was sung by the Rev. Father Gough, curate of St. Michael's. He also officiated at the graveside.

The three boys who were in the canoe with Kiely when he lost his life were present. They were Theodore Britt, Leslie Hopper and Percy Russell.

The chief mourners were his mother, three sisters and young brother, Anthony Kiely, his uncle Martin Kiely and cousin John Cullen.

Amongst those present from the Canadian Pacific Railway were he was employed were J. Harry Smith, Alfred Newman, M. A. Hargadon, Allan Dawson, Henry Woolman, Gerald Cagney, Henry Waugh and John M. Black of the Montreal Standard.

Many wreaths were received by the family, including a large wreath from employes of the publicity department, Canadian Pacific Railway.

BELGIANS OBSERVE NATIONAL HOLIDAY

Belgium's loyal sons and daughters, residing in Montreal will show their love for their native land next Tuesday. Among other ceremonies will be a rally at the consular office, Tuesday morning.

On July 21, 95 years ago, Belgium gained her independence and ceased to be a part of Holland. The anniversary of this day is observed as a national holiday in Belgium, and Belgian colonists all over the world likewise meet to celebrate their country's natal day.

In Montreal, where the Belgian colony numbers 6,000, an invitation has been extended to all his compatriots by J. Van Rickstael, consul, to attend a reception at Room 503, 698 St. Catherine street west, at 11 o'clock.

TEACHERS' PARTY TO TOUR CANADA

Expect 160 in Group Which Will Start Out from Toronto

One hundred and forty teachers, drawn from the Maritime Provinces, Quebec and Western Ontario have booked to date for the Canadian Federation of Teachers' tour across Canada, conducted by Dr. Sinclair Laird, Dean of the School for Teachers, Macdonald College, which starts mid-day on Monday from Toronto. By Monday, it is believed the numbers will have swelled to 160 arrangements having been made to include in the party a number of people interested in education, though not members of the teaching profession.

Arrangements for the tour are in the hands of the Canadian Pacific General passenger agent, George Walton. In addition to standard sleepers, observation and dining cars, the train will be equipped with a baggage car provided with special dressing rooms and wardrobe accommodation for ladies and gentlemen; facilities for music and a dark room for photography. A prize is being offered to the teachers by the company for the best photograph taken on tour.

Leaving Toronto shortly after midday on Monday, the party will proceed to Port Arthur and Fort William, thence to Winnipeg, Regina, Moose Jaw, and Calgary with brief halts at each. From Calgary the party will proceed to Banff, where a day and a night will be spent. Lake Louise will be next visited and an automobile drive will be taken to Morraine Lake.

After ample opportunities for viewing the scenery of the Rockies the party will reach Vancouver on July 27 and will devote the next four days to exploring the Pacific coast city and also Victoria.

Leaving Vancouver the party will visit Nelson, B. C., proceed by steamer to Kootenay, entrain for Lake Windermere, and motor to Banff, where another day will be spent. The return to Toronto will be made via Edmonton, Saskatoon, Kenora, Fort William thence by steamer to Sault Ste. Marie and Port McNicholl. Toronto will be reached on August 10.

HOLIDAYS AND PAY

Presbyterians Discuss Conditions Under Which Ministers Work

The questions of how much a minister should be paid for pulpit supplying, and how many holidays he should receive annually, came up for discussion at the meeting of the Presbytery of the continuing Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon.

The Rev. A. S. Reid, clerk of Presbytery, said it was necessary to establish a standard rate. He thought that $25 a Sunday was not too much for a man who was dependent on preaching for a livelihood.

In the case of laymen, who made their living other ways than preaching, J. G. Pelton declared that if the travelling expenses were paid, he thought that would be enough.

He also declared that the matter of holidays was being ridden to death, while Robert Blair, elder of St. Andrew's East, expressed the opinion that two weeks' holidays for a minister was sufficient and that if he wanted extra time, he should pay for it.

MANY MOURNERS

Funeral Services Held for Late Mme. Clement Robillard

The funeral of Madame Clement Robillard, wife of the Hon. Clement Robillard, member of the Legislative Council, took place yesterday from her home, 1008 St. Hubert street to the Church of St. Louis de France. Madame Robillard died last Monday. A large number of relatives and friends followed the hearse to the cemetery. Spiritual bouquets were received from both friends and relatives and the floral tributes were numerous.

Officiating at the church service were Mgr. J. A. Belanger, parish priest, Rev. J. V. Pelletier, who chanted the Mass, assisted by Rev. Napoleon Roy and Rev. Georges Dufresne. The choir of St. Louis de France under the direction of Alex. Clark, sang the Mass of Perosini and Gounod's Requiem.

The chief mourners were Hon. Clement Robillard, R. Portelance, son-in-law of the deceased; Paul R., Jean R. and Gustave R. Portelance, grandsons; Alfred and Hormidas Belanger, brothers; and 25 nephews.

TO GIVE ORPHANS OUTING.

Tots in the Montefiore Orphans Home are to be given an outing to St. Jerome by the members of Ivanhoe Lodge, No. 5, Knights of Pythias, on Sunday, August 2. There will be a baseball game, races for children and adults, automobile rides, refreshments and a distribution of prizes and gifts. Friends of the orphans are being invited to co-operate with the Pythians in giving the children a holiday to be remembered.

NATURAL WIFE SUES FOR COMPENSATION

Asks $3,000 for Death of Common-Law Husband

Whether a common law wife has any rights under the Workmen's Compensation Act of this Province was a problem laid before Mr. Justice Delorimier in the Superior Court yesterday afternoon. The question arose when a woman with several children asked permission to sue a local construction firm for $3,000 compensation for the death of her "husband," who was killed on June 22, 1914.

The company paid her $50 a month from the date of the accident until July 2, 1925, when the payments suddenly stopped. She immediately issued a writ for $3,000 and the company pleaded yesterday that in the first place they were not responsible for the accident, and, secondly, that the lady had never been married to the deceased. Although there is no dispute as to the paternity of the children, the company also maintain that as they are illegitimate they cannot take action through their natural-mother unless she is appointed their tutrix by the Superior Court.

The matter has been taken under advisement, and if His Lordship decides in favor of the construction company, the mother will have to drop her personal claim and must withdraw her children's action to take it anew when she has been appointed tutrix.

TO ATTEND UNVEILING.

At the unveiling of the monument to Louis Hemon author of "Marie Chapdelaine," the famous novel of French-Canadian life, which takes place at Brest this month, Canada will be represented by Dr. Victor Morin, president of the Montreal Historical Society, who sails on the Cunard liner Antonia for Cherbourg Saturday. After the ceremony at Brest, Dr. Morin will proceed to Neuville-sur-Vaune, in Champagne, to arrange for the erection of a memorial tablet in the village church to Paul Comedy, Sieur de Maisonneuve, founder of Montreal. Dr. Morin is returning to Montreal on the Antonia, sailing August 7, in order to take part in the convention of the Order of Foresters, of which society he is the ex-supreme chief.

TAX EXEMPTION REVISION ASKED

Resolution Passed by Labor Council Will Go to Aldermen

PARK PROTEST

Council Resents Granting of Playing Space to Private Clubs

Protest against the encroachment of private tennis and other clubs on public parks in the city designed for use of the whole population was made by Montreal Trades and Labor Council last night. A resolution will be forwarded to the city authorities. The council asked for a civic revision of tax exemption.

Action was taken by the council on the recommendation of its executive. It was at the request, it was stated, of a member of the organization known as the "King's Daughters." The circumstances were explained by John T. Foster, President of the Council. It appeared that for the past two or three years this organization had been granted the use of a section of Mount Royal Park for the purpose of a creche. The creche rendered valuable service to the public, particularly to the poorer sections of the population. Last year, a permit had been granted to the Mount Royal Tennis Club to erect a tennis court on part of the ground previously allotted for the purposes of the creche. A protest was made. This year another court had been made, still further encroaching on the ground used for the creche, and protests to a civic official had brought forth a reply that the club was not interfering with the work of the creche.

"If it is a fact that there is operating on a portion of Mount Royal Park, a private club with private privileges and operated for members of the club only, we are justified in protesting. The parks belong to the people. There can be no comparison between a creche operating for the benefit of all and a private club operating for a private class," Mr. Foster declared.

OTHER PARKS TOO

While the indictment was principally levelled against a private tennis club on Mount Royal park, the resolution of protest by the Council stated that the same thing was happening in other parks, such as Lafontaine Park, apparently without authorization, with the result that public parks were being steadily encroached upon. Delegates pointed out that in Lafontaine Park, tennis was played in the North East portion. There was a creche in the centre. Between the creche and the tennis courts the children played, and the rest was given over to baseball. He was of the opinion that baseball in the parks was more dangerous to children than tennis, and he emphasized the need for safe places for the children to play. Critics condemned utterly all private clubs for games in public parks.

Alderman Schubert queried the desirability of giving permits in public parks to organizations at all.

President Foster said the council had taken up the matter because it had a right to express the opinion of organized labor on such a vital matter to the workers as the use of public parks. The King's Daughters organization was not encroaching on Mount Royal Park, the Mount Royal Tenis Club was doing that, and the King's Daughters had asked the council to co-operate in bringing a protest forward. The Mount Royal Club was an organization of a different character composed of people of some leisure. How they used that leisure was their own business provided they did not in so doing encroach for their private purposes on the property belonging to the people. "Let them be sports enough to get a private ground and pay for it,—not take part of a public park and lock it up."

TAX EXEMPTION

The council demanded action from the city concerning the number of institutions exempt from municipal taxation. In view of the fact that "the revenue of the city of Montreal is more and more restricted in consideration of urgent improvements which are daily manifest, and that the number of institutions exempted from municipal taxes is getting greater every day," the council unanimously passed a resolution asking the City Council of Montreal to proceed with a complete revision of all institutions benefitting from exemption from municipal taxation.

Delegate Foucher, fur workers, declared he would have the Trades and Labor Council go further and make specific recommendations as to what institutions should be exempt. Alphetus Mathieu pointed out that it was the principle with which the council was concerning itself. It would be time enough to come forward with suggestions when the council took up the work of revision.

Delegate Bellemare said he had attended the meeting of the City Council at which the Knights of Columbus at Maisonneuve had been granted exemption from municipal taxation. Mayor Duquette and several aldermen had opposed the action, pointing out that L'Alliance Nationale had to pay taxes, and that if one had to pay, the other should also. Another delegate held that all institutions should pay and that no privilege and no favoritism should be shown.

RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE

The council elected the following committee, to serve as a committee on resolutions and prepare resolutions for presentation to the forthcoming Trades and Labor Congress of Canada: Joe Pelletier, Bookbinders' Union; H. A. Spence, Machinists' Union, and Alphetus Mathieu, assisted ex-officio by the corresponding secretary of the council, Gus Francq, and the president, John T. Foster. To this committee has been referred the drafting of a resolution concerning the situation of the Home Bank depositors, sponsored by the Machinists' Union and a number of other resolutions. They will be submitted to the Trades and Labor Council for discussion and adoption before being forwarded to Ottawa for the congress meeting. Among the resolutions to be drafted is one concerning the recent judgment and appeal in the Archambault-Jacques case, which centred round the inclusion of a fair wage clause in a Government contract. "The finding in this case left it to organized labor to state what the fair wage should be. If this judgment stands, then we may just as well say we have no fair wage clause," was the stand taken by delegates to the council.

RELIEF FUNDS NEEDED

A telegram signed by Tom Moore and P. Draper, president and secretary of the Trades and Labor Congress, advising that relief funds for the miners at Glace Bay were still urgently needed and urging a continuation of every effort on their behalf was received by the council. H. S. Spence, reporting for the committee on miners' relief, stated that $417.60 had been collected by the committee through appeals sent out to unions. Of this $300 had been sent and a further $100 is being sent to-day. The Montreal Trades and Labor Council's contribution was $100. Several hundred dollars had in addition been forwarded by individual unions, Mr. Spence reported.

The Upholsterers' Union, Local 78, was given the moral support of the council in a strike in a north end establishment in the city involving 40 men and six women. Cause of the trouble was stated to be refusal of the men to work in a basement which they considered unhealthy. A request for speakers to address the strikers was complied with, Alderman Schubert, H. A. Spence and others engaging to address the upholsterers.

The United States consumes 50 per cent more diamonds and precious stones than all the rest of the world.

Appointed

Philippe Caisse, who was appointed Clerk of the Peace at Montreal by the Provincial Government last Wednesday. Mr. Caisse is a graduate of the University of Ottawa and the University of Montreal. At the latter he received his degree as lawyer with distinction in 1917. The same year he was admitted to the Bar of the Province of Quebec. In 1918 he went into partnership with L. A. Pratt, K.C., but since 1921 he has practised alone. He is a member of the Junior Bar, the Young Liberals and the Reform Club.

PLAN SAFETY ZONE IN ACCIDENT AREA

Joint Playground to Keep Children from Streets is Proposed

A new playground to be conducted by the Playgrounds Committee of the Montreal Park and Playgrounds Association, jointly with the Safety League, was suggested at a meeting of the association yesterday, held in the M.A.A.A. headquarters on Peel street, and plans were discussed in this connection with a view to organizing one at the earliest moment. The idea behind the new venture is that the playground be situated near a spot where accidents to children playing on the streets have been rife in the past and it is anticipated that the opening of the playground will show a material falling off in child casualties for that area.

An appeal made by St. Henri citizens for a new playground for children in that ward, who can only find their recreation on the public thoroughfare, must wait owing to lack of funds, it being pointed out that in addition to the amount which will be provided by the Federated Charities, it will be necessary to raise an additional $1,130 to square the new budget.

Secretary-supervisor William Bowie, reported on the increased support and interest of the public with regard to the playgrounds and stated that he is in receipt of many letters from outlying communities asking for details concerning the organization work involved in the establishment of summer playgrounds for children.

It is expected that three showers will be in operation in the playgrounds before the present season is over. They will run at scheduled periods during the day and are expected to prove an additional attraction to the children. The showers are being donated by the Kiwanis Club, Iverley Settlement and the association, respectively.

An excellent report was turned in on the work of the handicraft department and enconiums were paid to Dr. W. G. Kennedy, in charge of publicity whose radio talks twice a week greatly assisted the campaign for public support and interest.

On July 27 at 7 p.m. the Baldwin Park will be opened and Mr. Bowie stated that already the citizens in that district have co-operated loyally and have shown intense interest in the work. Special attractions will be arranged for on the opening night. Rosemount and Cote St. Paul Parks are proving to be very successful, hundreds of children using these open spaces daily.

VETERANS FAVOR PRINCIPLE OF UNITY

At a meeting of the Veterans' Civil Service Guild last night in Stanley Hall, a resolution was passed approving of the principle of unity of all the veteran organizations in Canada, and calling for a general meeting of the members to vote on the question of the Guildd joining the Canadian section of the British Empire Service League. Four delegates gave their reports of the War Veterans' conference recently held at Ottawa, attended by Lord Haig.

Major W. J. Gerrard, one of the delegates, pointed out, that Canada is the only part of the British Empire that has not a section of the league, an organization which "can be the strongest link in the British Empire to stand for, and ensure world peace."

The subject of employment of civilians in the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment was discussed at the meeting. It was said that at the conference many of the delegates were dissatisfied with the way many returned men had been dismissed, while civilians had been retained.

It was decided unanimously that the Guild turn out as a unit in the veterans' parade for Lord Haig on July 26.

"SPONGING" CUR WAY.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE says that the Overseas Dominions have a direct interest in maintaining the navy precisely as has the Mother Country. He adds that, having such an interest, they should "chip in" toward its support.

We should dearly like to know which of these propositions the "spongers" controvert. Australia and New Zealand at all events will not pretend that they have no need of a navy. They admit their need in very practical fashion by trying to maintain little navies of their own —which, however, are carefully dovetailed into the Imperial Navy with which they must cooperate to be of any real use.

What are Australia and New Zealand afraid of? The answer is easy—Asiatic penetration. Why is not Canada afraid of the same thing? The answer again is easy—We expect to hide behind the American Navy.

Some people may think that that is a contemptible attitude. We may belong to that company. But that it is our attitude is no secret. This recent disposition to take our foreign policy from Washington crops up everywhere. In the "white paper" that has just been issued containing the despatches exchanged between the British and Canadian Governments over the Geneva Protocol, we are reminded that the Canadian Government, in declining to recommend Parliamentary adhesion to the Protocol, said:

> "Among the grounds for this conclusion is consideration of the effect of non-participation of the United States upon attempts to enforce the sanctions, and particularly so in the case of a contiguous country like Canada."

"Looking to Washington" has become a favorite pastime among the official representatives of this country. There were reasons enough in plenty why we should not adhere to the aforesaid Protocol without picturing ourselves as shivering in the shadow of American greatness. But we are so little ashamed of it that we put it proudly in our official correspondence.

* * * *

If anyone imagines that the "little navy" people—the very little navy people—do not depend upon the American Navy to protect us, let him try to think what they would or could say if there were no American Navy. Suppose that nowhere on the Pacific between British Columbia and Asia there rode any armed vessel of a "white race" save our own. Would we then feel free to treat the Asiatic as a pariah if we believed that Great Britain had found it too heavy a task to maintain a navy that could police the far-away Pacific? Suppose there were nothing to prevent Japan from sending a modern armada over to discuss amendments to the "gentlemen's agreement" while Victoria and Vancouver lay under the guns of her warships! We would be about as helpless and humiliated as Shanghai is today.

Great Britain would not then have to appeal to us to "chip in" toward the maintenance of a Pacific squadron. Our fear would be that the British Islanders might not be willing to help us keep a powerful enough navy to meet all Asia in the Pacific. The North Sea is one place and the Pacific is another. And the curious thing is that we were willing to contribute three battle-cruisers to strengthen the defences in the North Sea, while we are not willing to contribute three row-boats to keep watch and ward in Pacific waters which wash our own coasts.

Why? There is only one answer. We knew in 1912 that the British Navy had to be strong enough to keep the line in the North Sea or it would not be kept. The American Navy would not fight there. But we know now that any Asiatic attack on Canada from the Pacific would be resisted by the full force of the two greatest navies in the world. So why worry? The British taxpayer is far more heavily burdened than we are. Unemployment is a far more serious menace there than here. We are riding on another man's ticket — on the tickets of two other men, indeed. But—if we are ashamed—the shame is not sharp enough to cut down into our pockets.

* * * *

There is something to be said on the other side. We are very badly off financially. We cannot pay our way as it is. It is easy to say that we might tax ourselves up to the British standard; but, if we did, we would dangerously inflame the wound of the exodus. Canada cannot afford to be a much dearer place to live in than the United States.

We are building the Esquimalt dry-dock. If it is properly done, it may serve as a subsidiary Singapore. In other commercial ways, we are of value to the Empire. Bankruptcy and separation would be poor services to render to the British Commonwealth of Nations. No one is pressing Canada to do the impossible.

But at least a better spirit might be shown. We could tell the truth and say that we think it bad policy for the British Empire to be tied up to Continental European politics as the Ramsay Macdonald Protocol proposed, without adding that we find ourselves — apparently without chagrin—dominated in such matters by Washington. We might spare something for the British Navy to show that we recognize an obligation. We might treat suggestions from the Home Government as coming from a friend and not from an enemy. We might act more like a contented and permanent member of the British family, and less like a shallow-pated youngster who is always mumbling threats to "run away from home."

MEN FOR THE HARVEST.

CANADA, in joyous expectation of a bumper harvest, is taking stock of her man-power for the handling of the millions of bushels that are now ripening. Careful estimates of the crop indicate that at least 60,000 harvesters will be required to get the wheat from the ears to the elevators and of this number about three-quarters must be recruited in Ontario and the East. Two thousand harvest hands are also being brought from Central Europe and arrangements are being made to secure work for these men under contracts that will extend beyond the time of harvest, so that the new settlers will not become a charge on the Dominion, but will have work during the critical period of their settlement here — their first winter.

The proposition thus made for these new settlers is a step in the right direction. In the past men have been brought from Europe during harvest time to earn high wages during the short season and in too many cases to drift back to the large cities after the crop had been gathered, there to become a public charge, or to eke out a hand-to-mouth existence under most trying weather conditions. These men have proved a bad advertisement for Canada. They have written home about the appalling conditions, and advised fellow-townsmen to stay away from the Dominion. One dissatisfied settler can undo all the good that the best laid plans of the authorities have prepared for months.

It is to be hoped that of the 45,000 men who go West some at least will fit into the new life there and settle permanently on the soil. The greatness of this country has been built up by the men who were raised on the farms. Farm life in the West is not a bed of roses. It is not a life for those reared in silk and lavender. It is a life that calls for strong men and only to the strong will it yield its rewards. Life on the prairies must be subject to many disappointments, to many sacrifices and to many annoyances. So was the life of the pioneer who broke virgin soil in this country and hewed out his farm and own destiny in comparative solitude. The life on the prairies is not a life for the slacker or the weakling.

Yet there is a great deal of rubbish written in English newspapers about the "brutalizing hardness of life on the prairies." To the man or woman whose intellectual food is summed up in the dance hall, the movies and the gossip of neighbors, the life must be a disappointment, but there is nothing brutalizing in the close communing with Nature, in admiration for the Great Silences, and the Romance of the West. It is often a battle of the survival of the fittest and strength, courage and grit are the great requirements for success. Sir Arthur Curie, in an interview in London yesterday, tried to correct some of the misapprehensions that exist in England about life in the West, which are so persistent that they would appear to be fostered by jealous rivals. It will be well for our Immigration Department to combat these slanders by evidence from the men who have made good —the Dunnings, the Greenwoods and the thousands of others of successful achievement. They can have no more powerful weapon in their hands than the contentment of the new settlers who are coming for the harvest. Having brought them in as immigrants, we must see to it that they are colonized, given encouragement and helped to establish themselves in the land they have chosen.

DANGER IN MOROCCO.

IT is impossible to ignore the implication contained in the fact that hard upon the announcement of the departure of Marshal Petain for Morocco in a special capacity to assure, under the best possible conditions, the utilization of the reinforcements sent, comes the semi-official announcement that a Franco-Spanish delegation is en route to meet Abd-El-Krim, the Riffian leader, to discuss terms of peace.

The French Government has made no secret of its realization of the gravity of the situation in Morocco and of its desire to bring the campaign to a speedy end. Only those acquainted with the character of the littoral can appreciate the handicaps of a campaign in this country, with every conceivable condition against effective transportation facilities and every natural advantage on the side of an enemy skilled in guerilla fighting. Moreover, there appears to be some ground for belief that the Riffians are benefiting by the help of experienced German soldiers of fortune, who have thrown in their lot with Abd-El-Krim for the sake of excitement.

God, the Great Giver, can open the whole universe to our gaze in the narrow space of a single lane.—Rabindranath Tagore.

Soviet Suggestions.

Pravda (Moscow): The sword of British policy is directed not only against the Union of Socialist Soviet republics, but just as much against France; for it tends not only to extend the British influence in the Levant and the Far East, but also to make Britain an arbiter upon the Continent and to substitute British hegemony for the former hegemony of France.

The Riff and the Rhine.

Liberal (Madrid): France is asking Britain to guarantee the frontier of the Rhine with her fleet, as an essential element in the security of the Republic and of Britain as well. Now the Riff stands in the same relation to the security of the French colonial empire as the Rhine does to the security of Britain. Why should France refuse to do in Africa what Britain is now undertaking in Europe?

Industry and Armament.

Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung (Berlin): Swedish workmen are not the kind of people to let others tread on their toes. Their reluctance to spend money on defence is explained solely by their inability as yet to appreciate how real international dangers may become, and particularly by their failure to see whatever threatens their country from abroad threatens the common people as well as the Government.

Sweden Becomes Pacifist.

Stockholms-Tidningen: The greater part of our army is doomed to disappear. The rest will be too weak in its organization to incorporate the live defensive force of the country, and consequently unable to make use of this force in case of need. Military training will evidently decline and not even be given to all who are liable to and fitted for military service. The saving of expense will be trifling compared to the weakening of our defense.

Belgian Dismay.

De Standaard (Brussels): Belgium does not wage colonial wars; she does not loan money to small satellites in Europe to promote a policy of doubtful peace. She has borrowed money, to be sure, but only to support her war-pauperized population and restore her ruined industries. Unhappily her close alliance with France has blinded the Americans to the fact that Belgium is an independent country, and makes them place her on the same level with the French. This is one more bitter fruit of our disastrous pro-French policy and of the mistaken treaty we have made with Paris.

The Pact of Security.

Narodni Politika (Prague): There can be no doubt that Germany intends to delay the pourparlers until it is possible to predict with certainty the success or failure of Bolsherist conspiracies in Asia and elsewhere. She will then order her conduct accordingly. Should Moscow suffer a check, she will turn her face towards the West; should Moscow prevail, she will contrive somehow to render the western deliberations abortive and turn to the East. It is of the utmost importance that other states should keep a strict eye on the oscillations of German politics and watch with care the game being played by the Reich in the negotiations for a guarantee pact.

The Disorders in China.

Nichi Nichi (Tokyo): The hysterical character of the Chinese people and the fact that the present national Government is utterly powerless will make it extremely difficult to quiet down the present disturbances. The Chinese merchants will not find themselves in circumstances to resist such a movement, should they lose their means of sustenance, and should their homes be disturbed by students. In these circumstances, it is apparent that very energetic action will be needed to quell the riot. At first it was Japan alone that was involved in the strike, but now it assumes an international aspect. The solution must be effected by the joint efforts of all the Powers concerned.

Britain's Economic Theory.

Raymond Recouly in Le Figaro (Paris): The necessity of re-establishing economic prosperity in Europe and the world in general is an intangible theory much favored by a majority of the British people. That business may pick up again, the Englishman believes that it is essential that every single country should recover its stability, and that Europe and the world at large should return to their pre-war condition. But is it a fact that they can return? Can Britain, in particular, whose great economic prosperity was in reality fragile and artificial in character, over-industrialized, over-peopled, ever find again those numberless markets which the war lost for her so effectively? Nothing, in point of fact, is so fraught with doubt.

Peace or Cataclysm.

Henry de Jouvenel in Le Matin (Paris): It seems that the German Government is wavering between the hope of being once more able to carry the war outside her own boundaries and the fear of permanently establishing Communism within her own territory. Will the prospect of revenge be so alluring that she will for that reason accept the prospect of revolution? Will the desperate state of mind of her Nationalists once again drive her to lose her common sense? We cannot say. But it is in any case perfectly certain that the German nation cannot much longer remain a sort of No Man's Land between Europe and Asia. Either she becomes a member of the League of Nations or she becomes the European instrument of Panslavism. Which will she choose? It is the question which M. Briand and Mr. Chamberlain have put to her in asking her to sign the pact: Peace or cataclysm?

The Moroccan Danger.

Henry Bidou in Le Journal (Paris): Where does the danger lie? In the accumulation of prestige by Abd-El-Krim next winter, if he has not been severely punished this summer. It was in the winter of 1924-1925 that the Berber leader, strengthened by his victory over Spain, his proximity, his active intervention, his military equipment, boasting (without reason no doubt) of help he was receiving from certain quarters in Europe, succeeded in detaching the Beni Zerouel tribes from our side. It is in the winter of 1925-1926 that he will endeavor to detach from their loyalty to the Sultan the tribes which are behind our lines. He will tell them that it took him three years to chase the Spaniards out, and that in three years more he will chase the Frenchmen out as well. He will tell them, as he has told them already, that he is Britain's man and one cannot help regretting that our ally has not denied this imposture with greater emphasis. It is evident that if the campaign of 1926 should open under these conditions the situation would be very serious.

Unforgot.

O, many years ago I thought
This life was love of beauty,
And that was many years ago,
Before I met with duty.

And now, when work will let me turn
A moment from my trying,
I take an old wish from my heart
And smile at it, through sighing.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A great many interesting letters received by the Editor of The Star are too long for publication. Our correspondents would do well to study brevity.

LAWLESS MOTORISTS

The Editor, Montreal Daily Star:

Sir,—The daily slaughter of the innocent and law-abiding pedestrian is becoming a blight on the cities of Montreal and Westmount. One traverses a street crossing now with fear and trembling,—then utters a prayer of thankfulness—when the other side of the street is safely reached. The average motorist has no respect for street crossings not supervised by a traffic policeman (in Westmount traffic policemen are very scarce), and the only sane manner to create respect will be to jail a few reckless motorists and cancel their license. The street crossings must be made safe for the humble taxpayer, who wishes to retain the use of his legs and remain alive. The Coroner's Court can work wonders by returning a few "criminally liable" charges against lawless motorists. PUBLIC WELFARE.

DISABLED SOLDIERS' NEWS STANDS.

The Editor, Montreal Daily Star:

Sir,—The cartoon in the issue of your paper for Tuesday, July 14, and the very commendable editorial which appeared a few days ago, should be a warning to the people of Montreal of the dangers of (in the future) electing aldermen who will stoop to anything low and despicable to further their political or selfish ends. There is existent, however, a feature of the principle you are defending that is not revealed either in the editorial or the cartoon and of which I believe the Montreal public should be informed. It is that these aldermen, in addition to their attempt to deprive industrious people who have built up individually a means of livelihood by serving the public, are trying to destroy the Disabled Soldiers' News Agency. Although many people patronize the stands of this agency operated by ex-soldiers apparently very few know that this method of providing employment for these men exists only by reason of the money that has been provided by an officer who has been decorated for services rendered to his country in the face of the enemy, and who is liable to suffer a serious loss if this attempt is permitted to succeed. Can any of these aldermen have their names placed on a roll made up of men like this? Disabled soldiers earn a decent living on the streets of Montreal because the disabled Soldiers' News Agency exists. If it is destroyed, there will soon be no room for these men, who in all probability will be forced to join the ranks of others similarly situated, hopelessly searching for a means of earning their daily bread. I write this from the foundation of first-hand knowledge, and from the light of what I know to be true.

Montreal. WILLIAM HOEY.

"LOSE A MINUTE, SAVE A LIFE!"

The Editor, Montreal Daily Star:

Sir,—Automobile accidents continue to happen in the streets of Montreal and the toll of human life taken each year is quite a heavy one. What can we do to ensure a greater degree of safety? As it has been my job to pilot a taxi for quite a few years perhaps you will allow me to state my views. The idea is to make every man (and also every woman) who drives a motor car a careful driver. One point towards doing that would be to give more publicity to the accidents that do happen. Exact details should be brought direct to the public's notice, for the public are the automobile drivers. As our safety experts tell us, it doesn't matter how the accident happens, the "other fellow" is never one hundred per cent. to blame. You always contribute so much. I happened to see a child picked up recently after it had been knocked down by an automobile, and I could not help thinking that if the driving public of Montreal could have seen that poor little tot as it was carried off to the doctor's office there would be quite a few people who would never touch a wheel again and a whole lot more who would certainly drive more carefully. Another point I want to make is, the duty of impressing upon the mothers the necessity of watching their children more closely. The movies could help in the good work. A little money could be spent on flashing a few slogans on the screen, or even on a picture or so showing how easy it is to be careless. What about jay walkers? Well, let "jays" look after themselves, for they are supposed to have brains; but the little children need somebody to guide them. So let us make every week a safety week and let everybody get this slogan off by heart: "Lose a minute; save a life!"

Montreal. A. E. LEAVITT.

IMMIGRATION ANNOYANCES

The Editor, Montreal Daily Star:

Sir,—I wonder if Canadians contemplating a holiday to the Old Country by third class are aware of the rod which the Canadian Immigration authorities hold in pickle for them, so their return may be made as unpleasant as possible? I refer to the amazing fact that Canadians returning third class are treated exactly the same as emigrants proceeding to Canada for the first time. This involves a long wait at the steamship office in England to pass the medical officer. Then, lest one has contracted an incurable disease in the few minutes between the steamship office and the ship's gangway, one must be pawed at the gangway by another member of the medical profession, before being allowed to proceed on board. This is in full view of the public, while the first and second class passengers are ushered on board without any examination, and a beautiful awning provided lest they catch cold. This examination, while very annoying to a man, is a positive insult to a woman. The next item is the vaccination inspection, which is made a few days before reaching port. At Father Point, the third class passengers are again herded together for half an hour or more while the medical officer comes aboard and receives his report. Finally, the weary traveller is dumped off at Quebec, where there is a wait of an hour or more, until the Immigration authorities are reluctantly compelled to allow him to proceed on his way. The amusing side of the thing is that before leaving Canada a passport must be secured from the Canadian Government. This is an open sesame anywhere in the British Isles, but, apparently is not sufficient to bring one back to the country where it was issued. What I want to know is why these restrictions are necessary for Canadians travelling third class and not for those travelling second or first. At a time like this when Canada needs all her population, it is hardly the logical thing to treat Canadians who have spent years in the country, as if it were a compliment to allow them back to their homes after spending a few weeks in the Old Land.

MAL DE MER.

THE PASSING HOUR

Anything for an Excuse.—"Bobby," said the teacher, sternly, "do you know that you have broken a commandment by stealing James' apple?" "Well," explained Bobby, "I might just as well break one and have the apple as break another and only covet it."

Hostess — But why haven't you brought your wife?

Professor—Dear, dear! How careless of me—and I tied a knot in my handkerchief, too.

Chivalry has been described by a cynic as the noble quality in a man that makes him considerate of any woman who is beautiful and isn't married to him.

Diner: "I want some raw oysters. They must not be too large or too small, not too salty, and not too soft. They must be cold and I'm in a hurry for them."

Waiter: "Yes, sir. Will you have them with or without pearls."

"Isn't radio wonderful?" said the first man. "Only last night I heard the wife singing in America, and mine is only a crystal set."

"Oh, that's nothing," replied his companion; "this morning I heard my wife stirring her tea in China," and mine is only a tea set."

"How's the food here?" asked the new boarder at the dinner table.

"Well, we have chicken every morning," said an old boarder.

"Chicken every morning! And how is it served?"

"In the shell."

The dejected defendant was leaving the Court when a friend asked him why he had lost his case. "Because," he replied, "my lawyer, like necessity, knows no law."

English Visitor (hazy as to the working of prohibition)—Do you have to see a doctor before you get a drink here?

Native—No, after.

MARK OVER.

"There is no reason to suspect," said a Zurich magistrate recently, "that two men will run in opposite directions when a motorist sounds his horn." Not if the motorist's eye is in.

Quite as it Should Be.—A member of one of the theatrical clubs tells of a stranded but still haughty leading man who was obliged to put up at a dilapidated country hotel.

He glanced frowningly about the office, reluctantly signed the register, and took the key from the proprietor.

"Is there water in my room?" he demanded.

"There was," replied the proprietor, "but I had the roof repaired."

Mr. Higgs (returning home): "Well, my dear, I don't have to worry any more about going into bankruptcy. I'm there."

Dulcie: "Tom fell at my feet the moment he saw me!" Dorothy: "Stumbled over them, I suppose?"

"I hear that the DeJoneses have bought a two-seater."

"Yes, I've seen the nursemaid pushing it with the twins inside."

First stude—After all, we go to college to study.

Second—Yes, after all.

"Spike, dear," pouted the bootlegger's wife, "it's getting awful hot here in town. Haven't you decided where we will spend the summer?"

"Not yet," said her fond husband. "Dat all depends on Louie. Dey pinched him yesterday."

"But," demanded his storm and strife, "what has Louie's arrest got to do with where we spend our summer?"

"It's got plenty to do!" was the reply of the family breadwinner. "If he stands pat we spend the summer wit your Uncle Henry, but if he squawks we spend it wit Uncle Sam."

The Sunday school girls of a certain church put flowers in front of the pulpit each Sunday.

One was asked by an elderly person what they did with the flowers after the service.

"Oh, we take them to people who are sick after the sermon," was the innocent reply.

Lift Boy (to fat old lady): "Going up, mum?" Old Lady: "Yes, but sakes alive, a little boy like you can't pull me up in that thing!"

When James A. Garfield was president of Hiram College, a man brought his son to be entered. He wanted the boy to take a course shorter than the regular one.

"My son can never take all those studies," said the father. "He wants to get through more quickly. Can't you arrange it for him?"

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Garfield. "He can take a short course, it all depends on what you want to make of him. When God wants to make an oak, He takes a hundred years, but He takes only two months to make a squash."

Jinks (at a party): "I don't see what's the matter with that pretty woman over there. She was awfully flirty a little while ago, and now she won't have anything to do with me."

Stranger: "I have just come in. She's my wife."

NOT AN ATHLETE.

Two Irishmen were discussing athletics. Said Pat: "Did ye ever meet me brother Michael? He's a broth of a bhoy at runnin'. He won a gould medal at Kilkenny last wake in the half-mile race."

Said Mike, racking his brains for some family exploit to better Pat's effort: "Well, shure that's fine about yer brother, but did I iver tell ye about me Uncle Dinnis? . . . It's a great man he is."

"I don't remember iver hearin' of him," replied Pat.

"Well, then," said Mike, "he's got a gould medal for a five-mile race, wan for a tin-mile race, a set o' carvers for a cyclin' race, a silver medal for swimmin', two cups for wrestlin', and badges for boxin', rowin', and a gould medal for hurlin'."

"Bedad, he must be a wonderful athlate, indade," acknowledged Pat admiringly.

"Shure, an' he's no athlate at all," chuckled Mike, "he kapes a pawnshop."—From "Sporting and Dramatic Yarns."

"Is it true that you proposed to Alice and she rejected you?"

"Not exactly rejected. She said that when she felt like making a fool of herself she'd let me know."

A PROVISIONAL ARRANGEMENT

The luncheon basket.

Dora: "There goes Flossie. They say she's engaged to young Nelson. I wonder what the outcome will be?"

Daphne: "It's not the outcome she's interested in, it's the income!"

Said the stern young woman teacher: "Tommy, if you cannot behave yourself I shall have to take your name."

Outside Tommy confided to a chum: "My teacher has threatened to marry me if I don't look out."

EVEREADY SAFETY SUGGESTION NO 2

Find your Camp after dark with an Eveready

WHEN fish are biting best at sundown the temptation is to stay just a little longer. Then comes the paddle or tramp home with a load of fish, tackle and lunch basket. It is sure to be tough going if you are not equipped with a powerful Eveready flashlight to light up the way. One stumble over a log or against a rock may mean a broken leg, spoiling your whole vacation. Why take a chance? You need a light for night use around the camp; why not take the safest and most convenient light made. No matches or oil to start fires. Just press the switch and the light flashes on. Take extra batteries to ensure plenty of light. Go to electrical, hardware, sporting goods, drug stores and garages for Eveready flashlights and batteries.

ENDORSES CHOICE OF MACPHAIL AS WAR HISTORIAN

N.S. General Believes Wartime Failures Should Be Recorded

HELP IN FUTURE

Canadian Opinion Insisted on Quick Despatch of Contingent

HALIFAX, July 17. — "There is no copy of Sir Andrew Macphail's history in Nova Scotia," said General H. L. S. Foster, of Kentville, N.S., in an interview to-day. "But I have read the review of the history as published in the press and am looking forward with a great deal of pleasure to reading this history of the war, which seems to have been so ably dealt with by Sir Andrew Macphail.

"The Government was most fortunate in securing the services of Sir Andrew Macphail to prepare and write the history of Canada's great effort during these trying years.

"It is well," continued General Foster, "that a record of the mistakes and failures of the Government and the Canadian people should be kept, and read by all throughout Canada, if these errors are to be obviated when the time for further trial comes to test the youth and manhood of our country.

CALLS IT EMINENTLY FAIR

"I hope steps will be taken to place this history in every library and school throughout the length and breadth of the land as everyone who reads that record of the Canadian forces during those trying years will thrill with pleasure for their splendid achievement, and our leaders and future governments will take to heart the lessons taught in this history — to safeguard the training and equipping of our people to meet any criticism that may arise in the future.

"Sir Andrew's history is eminently fair and very readable, judging from the review. My only regret is that Canada did not have the advantage of such a book at an earlier date.

"Sir Andrew can undoubtedly substantiate every fact he has used. His statements are backed up by records and he has apparently given deep thought to his material and its preparation."

A TORONTO COMMENT.

TORONTO, July 17 — The Toronto Star publishes the following on Sir Andrew Macphail's official story:

"As one reads Sir Andrew Macphail's story of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, the getting of it together, its experiences in England, its doings in the war, it becomes evident that no two men could possibly have been more widely different in thought and feeling than Sir Sam Hughes and Sir Andrew Macphail.

"After his experiences at the time of the South African war Sir Sam Hughes had a score to settle with men of the British regular army class. He would show them. As Minister of Militia he considered himself Minister of War for Canada, and he aimed to put in the field a Canadian army, armed, equipped, served by this country, and defiantly different from that which the War Office would ask and expect. He wanted no interference from regular officers. The equipment they objected to instantly became to him important and imperatively necessary. He proposed to be Canadian through and through.

"Sir Andrew Macphail crossed the ocean not to defy, but to deify. When he put on the uniform of a medical officer he was in the army and he accepted all that that implied. He was in an ordered world and knew his inferiors and all his superiors by their uniforms. Of war this country knew nothing; England, everything. One almost gathers that he would feel that no backwoods Canadian could ask a finer end than to die in an amateur hospital managed by a duchess.

"The blunders and errors of Sir Sam Hughes were probably numerous enough. The list of them which Sir Andrew charges up against him, however, contains many that were not all his own, but were shared in by the whole people of Canada.

EXTRAORDINARY STATEMENT.

"Some of them were due to the war excitement in which all shared. Sir Andrew seems to have forgotten the state of the public mind at the time when Sir Sam was getting the first contingent ready for sailing. He says in his book that Valcartier was a mistake, that the time was spent in organizing and not in training; that the expeditionary force was sent to Salisbury Plains in the belief that it was a trained force; that this was the best camp in England, but that it rained there incessantly. Then Sir Andrew suggests that it would have been better to have kept the expeditionary force in Canada "until the worst of the English winter had passed." Could any more extraordinary statement be made than that! Who could have said, and been listened to, that it would be wiser to avoid the worst of an English winter by keeping the expeditionary force in Canada to face the worst of a Canadian winter?

"Who that recalls the state of the public mind in Canada in the fall of 1914 would say that Sir Sam Hughes was blamable for not keeping the first expeditionary force in Canada until the spring of the next year? It could not have been done. It is absurd to suggest that it could have been done. The whole dominion was on its tip-toes to see the expeditionary force off. The force itself was almost in a state of explosion because of the 'delays' that had occurred. The fear that the war would be over before they got there was a universal fear, and officers and men who could not get into the first contingent wept and refused to believe there would be a second contingent.

"When Sir Andrew remarks that people said the war would quickly end without saying how it would end he forgets the delusion that was then in everyone's mind, that with France standing firm, the British navy and the Russian steam roller would make a quick end of the impudent Germans.

"This was but ten years ago. Few can have forgotten the state of affairs at that time and the hopes, fears and excitements that surged this way and that. No doubt Sir Sam Hughes made serious blunders, but it was a time for blundering and everyone was at it, here and everywhere else. No doubt Sir Sam antagonized military authorities in England by his attitude, tone and methods, but surely the official historian for Canada should not so readily take it for granted that everything produced in Canada for war purposes and discarded in England was necessarily discarded. Some of it may have been rejected merely because it was unfamiliar, different — just as cowboys of the Strathcona Horse in South Africa were kept rustling in camp while cavalry riding masters were trying to teach them how to ride horses."

PREMIER VENIOT GIVES POWER COSTS

Contends Big Saving Made in Riparian Rights Settlement

GAGETOWN, N. B., July 17 — (Star Special.) — Hon. Dr. J. E. Hetherington, Provincial Secretary Treasurer, acting Minister of Lands and Mines and George H. King, of Chipman, son of Senator G. G. King and brother of Hon. Dr. J. H. King, who have been the representatives of Queens County in the legislature, were renominated yesterday as Liberal candidates for the approaching provincial general elections at the convention of the Government party in Queens County.

Premier Veniot was the principal speaker and he dealt exhaustively with the Government's project for the development of Grand Falls and the Opposition leader's attitude in respect to the project.

He read the official estimates of construction at Grand Falls in detail, showing a total of $7,903,217 for initial work for the ultimate installation of a 75,000 horse power plant but with only two units of 25,000 horse power each at the outset, and he pointed out that the cost of the main dam, intake, forebay, tunnel and storage dams, amounting to $1,638,000 were the only items upon which the commission and the Government were subject to estimates of engineers. When tenders close on July 30th., he said, it would be possible to find out how accurate the estimates were. He contended that on the item of flowage, and riparian rights, and damages a saving of half a million dollars or more had been made through the advantageous settlements that had been effected for the acquiring of all rights necessary on the American side.

The premier asserted that information as to the costs of transmission lines, which Hon. J. B. M. Baxter, the Opposition leader, had contended had not been given, was given when, consulting engineer, H. G. Acres, appeared before the members of the Legislature and he quoted from the figures then given. The Premier said that Dr. Baxter had shifted his position as to the Grand Falls project five times since he assumed the Opposition Leadership.

He also dealt at considerable length on the enforcement of the prohibition Act, contending that more liquor was sold through licensed vendors when Rev. W. D. Wilson, nominee of the New Brunswick Temperance Alliance, was chief inspector than since and asked what the Alliance had to say in respect to Dr. Baxter's proposal to amend the Prohibition Act by eliminating the section which provides that there shall be no appeal from Magistrates convictions on questions of fact.

SQUARE SHOULDERS AID TO HEALTH

Correct Poise in Walking Obviates Need of Other Exercise

LONDON, July —(By Mail).— Be your own drill master. Walk with "head erect, shoulders square, etc." and you will not need a course of physical culture to enable you to avoid many ills which come down on the person who walks with a drooping figure.

Such is the dictum of Lord Dawson of Penn, principal physician to King Edward and King George and regarded as England's leading doctor.

Addressing a gathering of health students, Lord Dawson lamented the present-day habit of walking with bent shoulders and heads protruding far in advance of the feet. He deplored that in the minds of many physical education was still associated with the drab routine of the drill master, whereas it comprehended not only body but also mind and spirit and meant harmony between mind and matter, with mind leading.

It is far too common," he said, "to find children born with chests that are too long and too narrow. They could not naturally expand their chests and are forced to breathe imperfectly with an overuse of the diaphragm. The result was that they could not aerate their lungs adequately. They grow feebly and subsequently the muscles of the abdomen become lax.

"The wall of the abdomen protrudes, the organs drop, and later in life, there is another of those too familiar figures of people, with rather shallow frames who never seem to be able to stand upright, and whose stomachs are distinctive by their 'bow-window' pattern. These epople are really seriously handicapped; their power of breathing is not good; their range of activity is limited; they become fatigued easily and are subject to catarrhs and other impediments of health."

Lord Dawson contended here was no reason why this evil could not to a large extent be remedied. If taken in hand early in life, these people could have their chests made functionally efficient, they could be made to breathe correctly and most of the afflictions of their adult life could be prevented.

It was curious; commented the doctor, that although the men and women of today, particularly women, were superior to their forbears in respect of the strength of their muscles, the tautness of their figures, and independence of artifical support, had not been a corresponding improvement in posture, and that the majority of the population continued to walk with their shoulders forward instead of square. This defect still marred the perfection of beauty in people today.

WHENCE AND HOW DID COMPASS ORIGINATE?

From a hard black material, which is an oxide of iron, known as "Magnesestone," because it was found in a district called Magnesia, was made the crude instrument which was the father of our modern compass.

While on the slopes of Mount Ida, in Asia Minor, more than 2,000 years ago, a shepherd found that the iron-shod end of his staff was clinging to a stone. He also found many pieces of this strange stone scattered on the ground.

No use was made of the mineral for many centuries. At last, however, a Chinese found that a piece of this stone, hung on a thread, always pointed to the north and south. It is said that the word magnet is derived from the same source.

Glass etching was discovered by a Bohemian glass cutter when a drop of nitric acid fell on his spectacles. He was astonished to find that the acid corroded the glass.

Wouldn't Pose

When a camera man asked this giant moose to pose for his picture at Kineo, Me., the moose turned and plunged into Moosehead Lake and swam for the other shore.

Bevy of Birthdays Stir Lardner Menage; Deef and Dumb Dog, Pete, Had To Be Exchanged For Voluble Purp; Living Pretty Close These Days.

By RING LARDNER

To the editor:

This is the time of yr. when all the conversation in our neighborhood is in regards to flowers and how is your delphineums coming along and etc. and for a man like I that don't know a azalea from a 3 toed sleuth about all as I can do is set around with my mouth shut and wished it was football season. Once in a wile I have got to pretend like I was interested and listen to what is being said as otherwise I would not know whether to say how terrible or ain't that grand.

Like for inst. I was talking to Oscar Shaw one day or rather he was talking to me and when he got through I said fine, but come to find out afterwards what he had told me was that he had went to the flower show and boughten $50.00 worth sweet pea seeds and planted them and not one sweet pea had come up.

TOUGH LUCK GIFTS.

This was quite a set back because when you come to think of it $50.00 worth of sweet pea seeds is several sweet pea seeds and I suppose if they was shook out of their packages and laid end to end they would probably be enough of them to reach from the Presidio to Grant's tomb so me saying fine to Oscar was like as if you would of went in a telegraph office the 5 of last November and wired hearty congratulations to J. W. Davis collect. But as I say I ain't no expert on flowers and seeds and etc. though ½ the people I am introduced to calls me Gardner.

Since the last time I give you the home news we have had 4 or 5 birthdays in the family including I and the madam but her and I don't brag no more about our birthdays but a birthday is a big event in the life of the kiddies and they can't think of nothing else for a mo. before and after same.

As I may of said before the question of buying xmas and birthday presents has become a serious question around out little nest not only on aect. of they being such a bevy to buy for but also it seems like they was a curse or blight on our presents the same like on Oscar's sweet pea seeds.

For example a yr. ago last xmas we invested in a radio as the kiddies had been squawking for one ever since they was put on the market and when we got it all set up and connected why we couldn't even hear static let alone Schenectady. The parrot we bought didn't say boo for a entire mo. Every bicycle we have ordered has been shy a couple pedals or wheels or something and the books has all had whole pages tore out of them and the games has been short 3 or 4 cards or men.

Well we had a long argument in regards to what should we buy for little David on the occasion of him being 6 yrs. old and finely decided on a dog though all the dogs we ever had wos nothing but a misery to us but anyways we plunged on a wire haired fox terrier and David was tickled to death with same and named him Pete but he may as well of left him annonymous as it soon developed that the little canine creature was absolutely stone deef and dumb.

So poor David hadn't no sooner than began to love his new pet when same had to be took back to town and exchanged for another one which can both hear and talk but won't never be as high in his master's esteem as Pete was. Personly I have wished more than once since the substitute come that either he was dumb or myself was deef.

LUNCH IN N. Y.

Incidently David may not get his degree from kindergarten this June on acct. of being laid up with whooping cough which his brothers claim he catched from the co-eds who insist on kissing him all the time.

"Not all the time," said Modest David when this theory was promulgated.

Speaking about birthdays, another mouth to feed has recently been added to a already numerous array in the person of a calf which has been christened Kate in honor of a friend of ours on acct. of both of them looking so silly.

The master of the house has been sticking pretty close to home as it seems to be cheaper but I did go into old N. Y. one day to tend a luncheon that Ray Long give in honor of Michael Arlen author of the Green hat who I had heard somebody say he was the swellest dresser in the world and I wanted to get a look at him but he was completely showed up from a scenic standpoint by O. O. McIntyre who his friends call him Odd and no wonder and they say he gets his clothes made in Paris by Suzanne Lenglen and Irv Cobb says that when Odd is going to have a new suit made he orders material that was intended for fancy vests and has coat and pants made out of it and then selects the vest from assorted college pennants.

Amongst the Great Neck items in the papers recently was a item in regards to Ed Wynn buying a $250,000 home and the item went on to say that this made Ed a neighbor of Tommy Meighan and I. Well it makes Ed a neighbor of Tommy all right but the home he bought is 2 and a ½ miles further from me than the home he had and maybe that is why he bought it, but any way when people asks me after this if I don't live pretty close to Ed Wynn I will half to tell them I live pretty close but not to Ed Wynn.

LORD LONSDALE AND COSTER DISAGREE

Unusual Occurrence in Horse Show Ring at Olympia

LONDON—(By Mail).—There was an extraordinary incident at Olympia during the coster carnival, when a blow is said to have been aimed at Lord Lonsdale, the judge for the event, by a coster who disagreed with the verdict.

The coster was obviously in an angry mood. He raised an arm in a menacing manner, and appeared to strike Lord Lonsdale on the chest.

Lord Lonsdale was well able to defend himself however and took the coster by the back of the neck.

Two police inspectors hurried into the judging ring, followed by police constables. The inspectors separated the coster from his wife, who had appeared hurriedly on the scene, and the audience rose to its feet in excitement, but the incident was quickly ended by the police, who removed the coster.

LAPPS NOW POSSESS TOO MANY REINDEER

LEULA, Sweden, — A census taken this spring in Sweden's northernmost department disclosed that the nomadic Lapps possess 183,625 reindeer. The animals have increased 57 per cent since 1921, when the last census showed 116,970. The present reindeer population is greater than is consistent with the amount of pasturage available.

Iceland women soon will have a chance to wear their furs. The temperature rose to 72 there during a recent heat wave.

PLANS MOVE IN STRIKE DEADLOCK

New Nova Scotia Premier Believes Time is Now Opportune

HALIFAX, N.S., July 17.—(C.P.) —Hon. E. N. Rhodes, who yesterday assumed the Premiership of Nova Scotia, stated last night that it is his intention to go to Cape Breton at the earliest possible moment, consistent with the immediate demands devolving upon the Government in assuming office, and to enable the Ministers to function in their several departments.

The new Premier said it was opportune that he was able, at this early moment, to hold conferences with the heads of the British Empire Steel Corporation and expressed the hope that the problem could be approached by both the men and the company, in a conciliatory spirit, unfettered by prejudices, as well as bitterness, naturally engendered by the prolonged strike.

Premier Rhodes said he had wired John W. McLeod, President of the United Mine Workers of America, District 26, last night, advising him of the conference he had held with the corporation officials here, and expressing the hope that the U.M.W. would join in an earnest endeavor to see that negotiations could be resumed.

SAYS CANADA NOT POPULAR IN INDIA

Returned Missionary Urges Government to Recognize Indians Here

HALIFAX, N.S., July 17.—(C.P.) —"The name Canada is not a popular one in India," declared Rev. Gordon P. Barss, a Baptist missionary to India, now visiting at his former home in Dartmouth, in addressing a luncheon club here yesterday.

"I have, on different occasions, had natives of that country turn on their heels and walk away when they learned I was a Canadian," said Mr. Barss.

The reason, he explained, was largely because Canada has refused to grant citizenship to Indians, who have come here.

"If only," said Mr. Barss, "the Government of Canada could extend to those 1,200 Indians in British Columbia, the privileges of citizenship, it would do much to bring India in closer touch with the empire."

R.C.M.P. SEEKS DOPE PEDDLERS

"Mounties" Search for Narcotic Sellers in London, Ontario

LONDON, Ont., July 16. — (Star Special.)—Two members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, from the Toronto depot, are here endeavoring to apprehend members of an alleged dope ring, believed to be operating in London and vicinity. The "Mounties," who came to the city originally on another mission, uncovered traces of dope peddling while here, and they remained to follow the clues.

No arrests have been made, but progress is reported in the investigation, and it is believed that members of the alleged dope ring may be landed in custody. The "Mounties," themselves, are maintaining a close secrecy on their operations, but they are known to have visited several places in the vicinity of London, from which it was hoped that information might be obtained.

It is understood that members of the ring of dope peddlers are not all located in London. Those alleged to be here are thought to be in the nature of agents of an organization, which may extend throughout the province and into Quebec.

The first trace of local illicit sale of narcotics was picked up in a town near London. Clues obtained there lead to the city. Investigations were centred here, and further information, which bore out the first clues, was obtained.

The probe at present is said to have covered considerably more than a week and much more time may be necessary before tangible results are obtained.

Investigations into alleged distribution of drugs, contrary to the narcotics and drugs act, are at all times special duties of the R. C. M. P.

Free From Mosquitoes ✕ Free From Flies ✱ Black Flag Kills Every Single One

BLACK FLAG strangles flies, mosquitoes and roaches. Not one escapes—for BLACK FLAG contains a secret vegetable ingredient that bugs breathe and die. It is the surest killer of insects ever discovered. But it is absolutely harmless to humans and animals.

BLACK FLAG also kills ants, moths, dog fleas, bedbugs, plant lice and chicken lice. It will rid your home of every kind of insect pest.

Ordinary insecticides kill, at best, only 6 out of every 10 bugs. The four which get away breed hundreds which return. But BLACK FLAG doesn't let one get away. It kills 10 out of every 10 bugs.

BLACK FLAG is made in both powder and liquid. Both are equally deadly for all kinds of bugs, with these three exceptions—always use the powder only to kill dog fleas and lice. Never use any liquid on furs; use the powder to make them mothproof.

And it is the surest killer of roaches ever made. Not one escapes.

Many people use both powder and liquid, preferring the liquid to kill flies, mosquitoes and moths—the powder to kill roaches, ants, bedbugs, dog fleas, plant lice, chicken lice.

Black Flag costs less. Powder, 20c, 50c and $1.00. Liquid, half pints 35c; pints 60c; quarts, $1.10; gallons, $3.25. At drug, grocery, hardware and department stores. Buy BLACK FLAG today.

BED BUGS

To kill bed bugs — Gasoline applied plentifully to every crack where it is possible for a bug to get will kill them. Will not soil bedding, or rust spring. The gasoline can be put on with a brush. Two applications a week between spring and fall will keep the worst infected old house free of these pests.

TO "THE ROUGHNECK."

It is with great pleasure that I read your letter on Italy, and hope you will continue to write from time to time, so that all those, who like myself love to travel, but have never had an opportunity, can to some extent picture the beautiful places of the world that you have visited, through your tales of them.

I also read your first letter, and it gives me great pleasure to note that you are apparently on the road to recovery and hope you will continue to improve. "DREAMER."

FOR QUICKSILVER'S PAL

You certainly are a "poor fish" if you have the idea that all girls are little gold diggers. I would very much like to know what part of the city you live in if the girls are all the same as you describe them to be. I might say that if you look the right way and in the right place you would find your Ideal very soon.

If boys would not boast so much about the "dough" they have, and be a lot more sensible with their money, girls would like them much better. It does not cost much to dress snappily these days.

Let me ask you one question, Quicksilver's Pal, would you take a girl out to some public place dressed in the fashions of last year or a couple of years ago?

Sleep on this tonight, old dear, and pleasant dreams. A STENOG.

HE DOESN'T CALL

All readers will agree with me when I say that no matter how long we will dodge advice and help from others, we will at one time feel as though we were cornered and would welcome a bit of friendly advice. In such a predicament do I now find myself.

A little while ago I met a certain fellow that I took a fancy to. From what I judge—perhaps I was a poor judge—he liked me, too. We were together quite often and I treated him very nicely. We never had any quarrels and when last I spoke to him we were the best of friends. That afternoon he had called me twice and had asked me out. The weather not being agreeable he told me he would call again later on, but I am still waiting for his call. Not having heard from him for a while, I thought it was only fair that I should find out the trouble, so I called his house and his mother told me he was not well. I called later to find out how he was getting on and his mother told me that he was up and about again, and still I have not heard from him, so I am giving him up as hopeless.

Still, Miss Currie, I cannot help thinking about him. Perhaps it is not because I care for him, but I feel hurt that I should be treated that way. I think I was too nice to him, though I am not sorry that I was. I think that the saying, "Treat them rough and they will come back for more," is right, because in nine cases out of ten, when a girl treats them rough they like her, and when she is too nice to them and acts like a lady, they just "leave her flat."

I thought that at last I had found someone different, someone that could be a real pal, someone that I really cared to spend my time with, but like all dreams this one faded away, and to think that I do not even know the reason.

If I sometimes meet him, should I demand an explanation or should I just ignore him? Please, Miss Currie, help me. DONALDA.

Ans.—I should certainly ask for an explanation. If it is not satisfactory I would never ask again.

TO QUICKSILVER'S PAL.

In your article on "A Mirror to Girls," you practically wish to broadcast to all young men your unfortunate experience of girls.

Granted that you have not had the best, but why judge all the others by the few whom you have met? You will say that they are not to be found, but they really are. I have heard lots of girls say, "Oh, I wish I had a fellow with a car and pots of money." If their wish would come true I am sure they would not like him at all.

What does it matter if you do wear a last year's straw hat, or whether you have a car or take the girl home in a street car instead of a taxi, it is the boy that really matters first. I should say that the girl who contemptuously runs down the street car is not worth bothering about. The boy was quite right to take the girl home in a street car and if she turns up her nose she is only showing herself in her true light, and saving the boy taking her out again. I know some boys who go to college and in the summer vacation they take a position in order to earn their college fees for the ensuing year, and I admire them. They are the kind of men we want in the world—men who can endure hardships in order to better themselves.

I am sorry, "Quicksilver's Pal," that you have not found your ideal as yet, because I am sure there will be one for you just the same as there is for most of the other boys, only some find them sooner than others, but what is worth having is worth waiting for, and when you do find her you will value her more, and wish you had not been so foolish as not to see her before.

I really do not think that a girl would marry just because a fellow was a "swell dancer." Personally I do not like the type of girl who uses such an expression. One of the girls in our office breezes around telling every one what a wonderful time Billy gave her the previous night. In a couple of days she has forgotten all about him, but then this girl is only showing us what she is (not worth much). Another girl, is much quieter, very pretty and has a nice friend. She does not tell everyone what he gives her, etc., but you can tell by the way she speaks that they are very fond of each other. Needless to say no one can help liking this girl, she is so gentle and sincere. So you see, "Quicksilver's Pal," they are to be found. Just keep wondering "Where my Sweetie's hiding," and you will be sure to find her hiding perhaps under some rose petal waiting for you.

You must not think that I am an old maid giving you a lecture, because I am not in the least. I am known in our office as the Jazz Baby, so I think that that speaks for itself.

Now you will smile, Miss Currie, when I ask you if you think I am under weight, weighing 119 lbs., being 5' 6" tall. I do not think that your age really matters, but in case it does I am almost eighteen years old. YEARNING JAZZ BABY.

Ans.—Yes. You should be about 130 lbs.

HER HUSBAND AND HER 'FRIEND.'

We will call the first male in question "A." "A.", a few years older than I, not very good looking, well-built, healthy, doesn't drink. He is in love with me, I can hardly get him away for one evening. He is a "stay in the house," never takes me anywhere, but is as good as gold and I could stake my life on him (he's an old reliable) and sometimes I say such saucy things to him it's awful, and still he seems to like me better all the time. He makes good money and is so kind. But so slow. I like to dance and enjoy a show too, but he is so dead just read, read, read, every night, Sunday and holiday. Now, Miss Currie, he is my beloved husband. Now there is "B." He is a big, strong, good-looking, clean-living, jolly fellow and such eyes! I have known him for three years. He likes going out and enjoys a good dance and is such a real good sport and such a wonderful friend, tells me where he goes and what he buys and the price, who he hears from and to whom he writes, etc., and he says he is crazy about me. I can find only one fault and that is he is encouraging another man's wife. Now "A." and "B." never met. "B." knows I am married and always has known it, but "A." doesn't know about "B." and "A." is terribly jealous. I shut my eyes to think of what would happen if "A." found out. And I can't discourage "B." he is so persistent and still wants to see me as usual.

Now Miss Currie, I have a dear wee girl four years old and I find I think more of "the other man" than her father so you see it must stop but he says he is never going to marry and will just be my friend. How can it go on any more under the same conditions? Husbands if you don't take the wife around as you used to, some other fellow will. WAKE-'EM-UP.

Ans:—You would better tell your husband all about it and get him to interview "B.". Don't you think you are a silly little woman to jeopardize your future and that of your child, just to gratify your vanity? That is all it really amounts to, you know, and if your husband is so good and kind, he will understand and forgive you and help you to get rid of your infatuation for "B." The world is full of men like "B." — bachelors who are too selfish to marry and who dangle after married women because it's safer. Wake up, yourself, and you will realize that "B." isn't worth one of your good, kind husband's fingers.

OLD LONDON.

I'm so glad you are in sympathy with us Londoners in little Old Quebec. Can I chip in with a few remarks now the time looks ripe? Old St. Paul's. I used to work on photographs in a high window overlooking the dome and its pigeon boarders. I also watched kind folks scatter crumbs to the happy birds at lunch time, just as I watched kind folks throw nuts to the tame squirrels in the Park in dear Old Boston. I wonder if you have watched a thunderstorm break over London? One night I stood on the highest point in Waterloo Park where you can see Old St. Paul's quite clearly, I watched the lightning break through the banks of clouds and light up the city as only lightning can. That was a few years ago, but well I remember I was the only one visible in the Park. It was a grand and beautiful sight as wonderful as a storm at sea, but somehow the lightning seems different over water.

I watched the long strings reach from the sky to the earth, blue and violet, then the fierce growls and reverberations seems in danger of crumbling the old city. How I love it, and each time I get a letter telling me of the swells on Rotten Row and at Peter Robinson's, I ache to see it all again, especially to go a-marketing on Saturday night. What a lot for a penny? The jolly old butchers were like poets selling their joints of juicy beef. The jokes used to roll out one a minute and everybody would be roaring laughing, and the money rolled in, too, in those days. Quick sales, small profits. I was given one shilling and I went to market as a small girl and filled my bag with 6 lbs. for 2d (two pence) of potatoes, and I got New Zealand mutton 1½d (3c) a lb. nice, rich flanks, my bag full to feed a family of six and for a shilling. Not these days. Then did you jump on a bus at the Angel, Islington and take a ride to Hampstead, with its rolling hills, cosy seats, beautiful trees, and its free music? What about the Serpentine, Hyde Park, Kensington Gardens, Regent Park, Richmond, Kew Gardens, the Queen's gift to the people? The Regatta on the Thames and the tinkling of the mandolin under the Japanese lanterns on the House boats from Richmond to Henley.—Don't you feel lonesome so far away, but did you not find it hard for poor people to make a living? Little Old Quebec is also lovely, and I made it my home for many years.—The beautiful road from St. Jerome to Mount Laurier cannot be equalled only perhaps by Torquay in Devonshire. Yes, Sweet Nell of Old Drury I shake hands with you in spirit. Don't you think it's nice to read and get acquainted with old neighbors through the "Star"? It's like one large family. They come from everywhere, and are of every nationality. Especially I like to see letters from our Chinese friends, such splendid English, also from the French girls, Miss Currie welcomes everyone, no favorites. A wonderful page. I could fill a book with memories of Old London.

Someday, somewhere we may meet, in the meantime cheerio Londoners INTERESTED MILKMAID.

Ed. Note:—Thank you. Nothing would please me more than to have you say that writers to this page are like "one large family."

"Happy among Strangers," I read your piece and also "Irish Eyes." I am very sorry for you I. E. I know just how you feel over here, alone in a big city like Montreal, but you must cheer up. Smile, and the world will smile with you. When I first came over here, I. E. I was like you, always down in the dumps, but I soon found it was of no avail to be always "blue" so I tried, and now no one could be more in the "pink" than myself. But of course, I did not come over quite alone. My dear little sister (the best pal I've got) accompanied me and we both are striving, for we look to the saying of "Never venture, never win." We go by this and consequently we have got a "tidy bit" saved up to give mother a good time. Dear old mother that has worked and strived for us since we were "tots." Having lost father twelve years ago, we owe everything to her (our best pal). "Happy among Strangers," I am glad you like it over here and like you, I too, have met many nice people in Canada. Yes, very nice. I hope a few more of the "New Ones" will say likewise; and moreover, that they also enjoy Miss Currie's Page as we do. I like to read letters from "Diana," "Man in the Corner," "Ora Pro Nobis," "Erin," and, oh! a lot more that write. I hope, Irish Eyes, you will "cheep up," and, like me, whenever you are feeling "blue" just sing that little chorus over to yourself.

Pack all your troubles in your old kit-bag
And smile, smile, smile,
While you've a lucifer to light your fag,
Smile boys, it's the style;
What's the use of worrying. It never was worth while,
So pack all your troubles in your old kit-bag

Write again Sweet Nell of Old Drury. I love to read of anyone from home and London. Maybe you will remember me signing myself Lover of Erin though exile from England, Miss Currie. It did not appeal to me, so have changed it to simply NELLIE GRAY.

FOR QUICKSILVER'S PAL."

You have said, "I intend to bring the mirror before the eyes of every girl, so they can see for themselves, as I and scores of other young men see them." You are quite sure of yourself aren't you? Because you think that, you needn't add that scores think the same. I will admit that was rather a dry remark that girl made but I'll also admit I'd say the same thing myself. I've often said, "I like that boy, he's a swell dancer," "I love the way such a fellow wears his hair," "I do love wide trousers on Jack but they look like a string of misery on John." Now what's wrong in saying that? It's only expressing one's opinion. But for instance if you saw a girl walking along the street with a shabby dress or hat on, etc. Would you not make some remark? Of course you would. Why not. It's only natural. But even though you did make that remark I'm sure you wouldn't think any the less of the girl. Now would you? I know that I would not. My lands! I like a decent boy or girl whether they possess an old straw hat of a new one. And I'm sure the girl who made that remark would agree with me. If you are working your way through college, you are a clever boy but why be so death on the girls for a silly remark like that? And then again you say: "how selfish girls are" and what "poor fishes" men are to spend money on them. My! what a fine specimen of manhood you are to make a hasty remark like that, for I'm sure that any real decent girl would not put any man aside because he had no money and especially when he had spent a good deal of it on her. You will have to admit and agree with me, that when a young man takes a girl out for an evening its fifty-fifty on the pleasure they have, and you'll always find that usually they have both enjoyed themselves immensely. Is that not so? And let me leave with you a thought to bear in mind that you'll have a mighty long search for that "Holy Grail" if you don't get over that mean attitude towards the girls. "A LITTLE BIT OF SCOTCH."

FLEAS AND GRAND OPERA.

About two years ago during my memorable stay in the Ukraine district of Russia, I was involved, as I think I told you, in a series of harrowing experiences, the like of which one would hardly judge to exist outside of a cheap novel. You have heard, from time to time, of the terrors existing in Russia under the Bolshevik regime, and I could easily, by merely speaking the truth of my own experience, add to these sorry accounts.

But as I write, with a magnificent vista before me of the mountains and pine forests glowing wine-red in the evening sun — with the contented song of the birds and the whispering of the trees to charm my ears — my mind refuses to dwell upon sordid horrors, and they would make rather heavy reading, I fancy, so I am going to resolutely ignore the darker moments of my sojourn and dwell upon the lighter side. Indeed, since my experiences were published professionally, since my return, I am not sure just what I can tell here without infringing copyright, etc. However, you are impatient, so let us go to Russia—to Odessa — and amusing trivialities.

Odessa, by way of preface, is a very large city, ordinarily very prosperous, and boasts one of the finest opera theatres in the world — a city of fine broad streets, imposing building, spacious parks, beautiful, multi-domed churches and a commanding sea front, perched high above the harbor. But it is necessary to picture an Odessa of horrors, ruined building, spies and military law—of suspicion, fear, sufferings and want, in order to follow me correctly.

The story begins with a shirt. I was music-starved and desperate. The opera house was open nightly, dispensing excellent opera to Communist and Bourgeoisie alike. Money was necessary and I had none—hence the shirt. It was a really good shirt, one of a dwindling supply, (thanks to an appetitic for opera) and it was donned over the shirt I was wearing. Sallying forth I made my way to a familiar spot where I knew I should find my man. He was one of a class of men (agents they are called) who act as intermediaries between buyer and seller in illegal trading of all kinds—trading with foreigners being at that time forbidden.

This man had shifty eyes and a furtive manner and, as soon as he was sure that my approach was a signal for trade, shambled off into a maze of streets, whereupon I followed him at a short distance. Through a bewildering maze he would lead me, peering right and left and doubling his tracks in a melodramatic manner that was most amusing. It must be explained however, that the risks were great, in spite of the apparent triviality of the procedure. The Bolsheviki do not care to feed and house prisoners and death is a convenient penalty, under martial law.) Finally he would disappear into a squalid house into which I would be spirited, and in a locked back room, the bargaining would commence. A shirt of good, English quality was a great prize, in a land of paper clothes, and the haggling would be long and fierce. An agreement being reached, the extra shirt would be doffed and a huge bundle of greasy bills in denominations of no less than 100,000 roubles each would be counted out. I received 75,000,000 roubles for my last white broadcloth! (roughly, then, about 90 cents.)

To the opera!—minus a shirt, plus seventy-five million roubles and full of joyful anticipation. Was ever music so dearly bought! More dark whisperings with an agent lurking in the shadows near the entrance, purchased for me a ticket. Theoretically all men are equal in a Communist state, so that all seats in the theatre were the same price, and that low, though, alas! for Communist theories, speculators invariably bought up the tickets and re-sold them at hold-up prices.

Inside the once-beautiful theatre one was numbed and horrified at the spectacle presented. The pitiful attempt at elevation of the Russian proletariat by according him the privileges of the cultured class, had its pathetic sequel in the slashed cushions, broken mirrors and other vandalism. In the boxes, beautiful mouldings had been ripped away wantonly, chandeliers were broken, and obscene drawings covered the walls. Hurrying to my box I found that two young Red soldiers and a girl companion occupied the front portion and I had to sit behind them. They were, all three, indescribably dirty, long-haired and uncouth, while the soldiers who were the merest of gawky boys, wore their enormous greatcoats of compressed paper and fibre and in true Russian manner bore the stuffy heat and dirt without apparent discomfort.

Once the opera had commenced I was oblivious to all else but the stage and orchestra. And here it must be said that the artists were magnificent. Laboring under enormous difficulties, with very little pay, if any, they worked splendidly, night after night, out of sheer love for their art, and gave excellent renderings of often difficult operas.

On this first night the opera had barely run through the first act when I noticed that my fellow occupants appeared to be writhing and fidgeting continually, but it was quite some time before the horrible truth dawned upon me. And to see the stage, I was compelled to lean forward, almost touching them! Years of clean-living, fostered by a careful, if not fastidious, upbringing, together with an intense horror of vermin almost drove me away with a sickening revulsion of feeling. My first impulse was to run away as fast and as far as possible. At that perilous moment the orchestra struck up the "Harlequin's Serenade" from "Pagliacci" and I had the vivid feeling that Harlequin was serenading me—enticing me to stay with his seductive music. To my distorted mind the box was full of fleas, lurking watchfully and leering at me mockingly, hideously, added to which the stuffy atmosphere, the sickening smell and my fidgety companions almost suffocating me with their nearness, imbued me with an overpowering desire to flee the place forever. And all the while, the music, the singing and the colorful stage enticed and tempted me to stay, to say nothing of a natural reluctance to abandon such a dearly-earned reward.

Pagliacci won. Gradually, my immediate surroundings faded, my companions were no longer and fleas were forgotten. I was alone in a beautiful land of make-believe, charmed and thrilled as the age-old tragedy of love, jealousy and hate unfolded itself before me, rising in a breath-taking musical crescendo to its thrilling heart-breaking climax.

Men have endured great things and made great sacrifices for their religion, their country, their loved ones and their own existence, but who has risked, night after night, certain imprisonment, sold his very shirt and endured such exquisite horrors as related, just for the love of music and art—Though truly it all seems very amusing in retrospect.

* * *

I really must be less selfish in my requirements on Miss Currie's space, so will conclude the above interesting, if not elevating, little incident, with the promise of more very soon. I was disappointed at not hearing from "Hidden Garden" but very gratified at the kindly response from "Fae," "Grandpa," "Fern-Glade" and "Plain Brunette" and wish to thank them for their sympathy and good wishes concerning my health. To you also, Miss Currie, my thanks are due, and I may add that my health is so splendidly improved that I expect to return to the sphere of normal activity in the very near future.

ANSWERS TO THURSDAY'S QUESTIONS

1—"Squamous" means "scaly; covered with or consisting of scales."

2—The expression "Black Friday" has two meanings. It may be used for any Friday on which some public calamity has occurred,—as (in Great Britain) for the day on which Prince Charles Edward Stewart advanced to Derby (December 6, 1745) and the day of a financial panic (May 11, 1866), and as (in the United States) for the days on which financial panics took place in New York (September 24, 1869, and September 19, 1873). The term is also used as a name for Good Friday, because of the black vestments worn by the clergy on that day.

How to Keep Well
By Dr. W. A. Evans

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit, or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations, and where a stamped, addressed envelope is enclosed. Dr. Evans will not make a diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

CLOTHES FOR HOT WEATHER.

In 1897 Dr. Sambon, an English epidemiologist of great renown, said: "It is not climate per se, but parasitism that killed the white man in the tropics." A little over ten years later, when Dr. Sambon visited the Canal Zone, Dr. Gorgas showed him the records of the Americans there, in comparison with that of the French, saying: "Here is a proof that you were right."

Man is the only animal that can adjust himself to climatic conditions, as they are found from the equator to the Arctic circle. He is able to thrive on the equator, on the Arctic circle, and all in between! Something that no other animal has done.

This ability he has not always had. Records of prehistoric man show that it is only within fairly recent centuries that he has been able to live at all in regions much north of Belgium or England. The growth of human intelligence has made it possible to move apart the parallels of latitude which bound the habitations of man.

The variation in the pigment of his skin has been one factor, and that is not the result of intelligence. More important factors have been the knowledge of clothes and the mastery over insects.

The present opinion is that Sambon was not wholly right.

The effect of light and heat are important in fixing the health of the people in hot climates and in hot weather, though they do not cause as many deaths nor as much definite disease as do flies, mosquitoes and other insects and parasites.

The question of comfort in hot weather is largely a matter of clothing. The most comfortable kinds, other things being equal, are the very loosely woven, very light weight and light colored cotton fabrics. Looseness is another factor contributing to comfort. Corsets, garters, bands and belts are all sources of discomfort.

The Dayton, O., health bulletin says: "The clothing should be of light texture and light in color. Light clothing reflects the sun's heat and does not retain the body heat as much as dark clothing."

Unquestionably, the ideal summer garment is the fig leaf which was adopted at the beginning of the second period of life as it was in the Garden of Eden.

Circulating air, coming in direct contact with the skin, is the most effective cooling agent at ordinary atmospheric temperatures. Stokers in the hold of vessels and deep-in-the-ground miners have found by experience that the naked torso method is the most effective plan in very hot atmospheres. Where one is willing to sport a deeply tanned skin, the naked torso method is best for hot sunshine exposure.

However, white men who do inside work in the tropics and who are not burned very dark insist that when one goes into the sunlight the head must be protected by a sunproof helmet and the spine by a spine pad. When the naked torso method is not feasible the best plan is to wear very little clothing, and that worn to be loose in fit, light in color, light in weight and of a very open weave.

COLD BATH.

B. writes:

1. Is a cold bath, taken every night before retiring, detrimental to one's health?

2. If so, how often can one bathe without its being injurious to the health?

Reply.

1. No, assuming you react well and do not have bath itch.

2. Once or twice a day in hot weather is not too much.

Miss G. writes:

1. Are crossed eyes hereditary?

2. If not, what causes this condition?

3. How can it be cured?

Reply.

1. No.

2. Eye strain, lack of balance between the strength of different groups of eyeball muscles.

3. Wearing proper glasses cures some cases. Exercising the eyeball muscles may help.

Most cases require operation.

The operation required is a simple one. It should not be delayed lest vision in the crossed eye be lost.

Single Flower

A single flower flattened on the summit of the hat crown is one of the novelties for fall. It is often shaded, and is most effective when carried out in a lighter or darker shade of velvet than the material of which the hat is made, and the hat should be velvet or felt.

PASS UNDER THE ROD

(For J. V. L.)

(This little song poem was written by Mrs. Dana, and set to music by Mrs. Sue I. Scott.)

I saw a young bride in her beauty and pride,
Bedecked in her snowy array;
The bright flush of joy mounted high on her cheek,
And the future looked blooming and gay.
And with woman's devotion she gave her fond heart
At the shrine of idolatrous love;
And she anchored her hopes to the perishing earth,
By the chain which her tenderness wove;
But I saw when those heart strings were bleeding and torn,
And the chain had been severed in two.
She had changed her white robes for the sables of grief,
And her bloom for the paleness of woe.
But the Healer was pouring the balm on her heart,
And wiping the tears from her eyes;
He strengthened the chain He had broken in twain,
And fastened it firm to the skies:
There had whispered a voice, the voice of her God:
"I love thee, I love thee,—Pass under the rod."

I saw the young mother in tenderness bend
O'er the couch of her slumbering boy;
And she kissed the soft lips as they murmured her name,
While the dreamer lay smiling in joy.
O sweet as the rosebud encircled in dew,
When its fragrance is flung on the air;
So fresh and so bright to the mother he seemed,
As he lay in his innocence there.
But I saw when she gazed on the same lovely form,
Pale as marble, and silent and cold,
But paler and colder, her beautiful boy—
But the tale of her sorrow was told.
But the Healer was there, who had stricken her heart,
And taken her treasure away.
To allure to heaven, He had planned it on high,
And the mourner will sweetly obey.
There had whispered a voice—'Twas the voice of her God:
"I love thee, I love thee—Pass under the rod."

I looked on a father and mother who leaned
On the arms of a dear, gifted son,
And the star in the future grew bright to their gaze,
As they saw the proud place he had won.
And the fast coming evening of life promised fair,
And its pathway grew smooth to their feet,
And the starlight of love glimmered bright at the end,
And the whispers of fancy were sweet.
And I saw them again, bending low o'er his grave
Where their hearts' dearest hope had been laid.
And their star had gone down in the darkness of night,
And the joy of their bosom had fled.
But the Healer was there, and His arms were around,
And He led them with tenderest care.
And He showed them a star in the bright upper world;
'Twas their star shining brilliantly there.
They each heard a voice, 'Twas the voice of their God,
"I love thee, I love thee—Pass under the rod."

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

WHY GRUBBY GOPHER ISN'T LOVED.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

To have no friends is sad, indeed,
But is the price that's paid for greed.
—Old Mother Nature.

"Grubby Gopher," said Digger the Badger, "has the meanest disposition of any one of my acquaintance. I suppose you know what a mean disposition is, Peter Rabbit."

"Oh, yes," replied Peter, but really he looked a little doubtful. "Yes, indeed, I know what a mean disposition is."

"Well, what is it?" demanded Digger.

"It's — it's — being cross," said Peter.

"It's worse than being cross," replied Digger. "It's being mean and cross and ugly all the time. I've seen Grubby Gopher a great many times, but never have I seen him pleasant. Why that fellow would quarrel with himself if he could. I have quite a temper of my own, Peter Rabbit, but there isn't any meanness with it. At least, I don't think there is. But Grubby Gopher is just spoiling for a fight all the time. You wouldn't like Grubby, and what is more, he wouldn't care whether you liked him or not. He hasn't any friends. At least if he has any I don't know who they are. Everybody hates him out there, and the worst of it is he doesn't seem to care. My, that fellow certainly can spoil the looks of a piece of land about as quickly as any one I know of. I guess it is a good thing for him that he rarely comes out excepting at night. Then Hooty the Owl is always watching for him. Hooty is one of Grubby's worst enemies."

"What does he do with all that he stuffs into his pockets?" asked Peter.

"Oh, he takes it home and stores it away," said Digger.

"Does he sleep all winter," Peter inquired.

"No," said Digger; "no, he goes right on digging just the same, only it's underneath the snow. He's a good worker, I'll have to say that for him, but if you should meet him unexpectedly he would show you four as ugly looking teeth as you have seen in a long time, and I am quite sure you wouldn't want to have anything more to do with him. Farmers out there don't like Grubby at all. He eats their grain, and cuts the tender young shoots off their trees, and takes their potatoes, and just doesn't care how much damage he does. You know I told you he has a mean disposition."

He loves to live alone, does Grubby.

"Has he got a long tail?" asked Peter. Peter is always interested in tails. You know what a funny little apology for a tail he has. It's just like mother's powder puff.

"His tail isn't very big," replied Digger, "but it's very handy. He uses it much as Miner the Mole uses his. They both have to go backward in their tunnels sometimes, and those tails, which are almost naked, feel the way for them. Yes, indeed, Grubby's tail is very handy. He likes to live alone, does Grubby. Yes, sir, that fellow likes to live alone. I guess it is just as well, because you know people with mean dispositions are hard to get along with. He doesn't show himself any oftener than he has to, and that is very seldom. But I will say one thing for him, and that is he is clean. Yes, sir, he's cleaner than a good many people I know. He keeps his burrow clean, and he always airs it out. So even if he does have a mean disposition and is ugly to look at and nobody has a good word for him, he really has at least one good point. I never bothered Grubby much. Give me Seek-Seek to Ground Squirrel every time in preference to Grubby Gopher.

A SONG OF CONTENT.

How many million stars must shine,
Which only God can see,
Yet in the sky His hand has hung,
Ten thousand stars for me.

How many blossoms bloom and fade,
Which only God can see,
Yet there's my field of buttercups,
And there my daisies blow.

How many wing paths through the blue,
Lure swallows up and down,
Yet there's my little garden walk,
And your's the road to town.

How many treacherous voices wooed
Unhappy feet to roam,
Yet God has taught my willing ear
The sound of love and home.

How many lips have kissed and clung,
Since Eve was Adam's bride,
But God has given me you dear girl,
And I am satisfied.

BEAUTIFUL FACES.

Beautiful faces are those that wear,
It matters little if dark or fair—
Whole-souled honesty printed there.

Beautiful eyes are those that show,
Like crystal panes where earth fires glow,
Beautiful thoughts that burn below.

Beautiful lips are those whose words
Leap from the heart like songs of birds,
Yet those whose utterance prudence girds.

Beautiful hands are those that do
Work that is honest and brave and true,
Moment by moment the long day through.

Beautiful lives are those that bless,
Silent rivers of happiness,
Whose hidden fountains few may guess.

THE WILD COLONIAL BOY
(Requested.)

Here's of the wild Colonial Boy.
Jack Dolan was his name
He was born in Ireland's sunny lands
At a place called Castle of Maine.
He was his mother's only son,
His father's pride and joy,
And dearly did those parents love
Their Wild Colonial Boy.

2.

It was at the age of sixteen years,
Unto Australia's far-off lands.
He was inclined to roam,
He robbed those wealthy squires,
And their firms he did destroy—
A terror to Australia was
The Wild Colonial Boy.

3.

It was at the age of eighteen years,
He began this wild career,
With a heart that knew no danger
And a spirit that feared no fear.
He robbed the rich, he helped the poor
He stabbed George Mackleroy,
Who pleading, gave what gold he had To the Wild Colonial Boy.

4.

One morning on those prairies then,
As Jack he rode along,
And listening to those mocking birds
Which sing their lofty songs,
When a mounted trop rode after him
Kelly, Davis and Fitzroy,
They all rode out to capture him,—
That Wild Colonial Boy.

5.

"Surrender now, Jack Dolan, then
You see we are three to one.
Surrender in the King's name
You are a plundering son."
Jack drew a pistol from his side
He waved it upon high
"I'll fight but not surrender" cried
That Wild Colonial Boy.

6.

He fired a shot at Kelly then
Which brought him to the ground.
He next returned to Davis
And another he brought down.
When a bullet pierced his proud young heart
From the pistol of Fitzroy
Now that was how they captured him,
That Wild Colonial Boy.

MY DAILY PRAYER.

I do not ask that either wealth or fame
Shall be my portion down life's troubled way;
I only ask that there be given me
The needful strength for work from day to day.
Just strength, that with the morning's fresh, sweet dawn
I may arise, and fully rested be,
Renewed in mind and body so that I may do
The waiting way's work cheerily;
The strength to meet the fretting little cares
And trials, so prone to vex, with sunny smile,
And grace to say the gentle, kindly word
To those I love; and patient be the while;
The grace to let the hasty, angry tone
Go by unheeded, and ever be
So strong that in confusion and distress
I may be helpful, yet go quietly.

"MANY HAPPY RETURNS OF THE DAY."

Merry words, merry words, ye come bursting around,
Telling all that affection can say;
'Tis the music of heart-chords that dwells in the sound
"Many happy returns of the day."
The red cheek of the child is more rich in its glow,
And the bright eye more swift in its ray,
When the mates hail his birth in their holiday mirth
And drink "Happy returns of the day"
When his mates hail his birth in their holiday mirth
And drink "Happy returns of the day."

But if 'midst the greetings there's one that we miss,
And that one was the dearest of all,
'Tis then we feel lone in a moment like this,
When our loudly hail'd birthday shall fall.
What would we not give if the hours could restore,
The dear form that is far away,
If the voice of that lov'd one could wish us once more
"Many happy returns of the day."
If the voice of that lov'd one could wish us once more
"Many happy returns of the day."

The old man may smile while he listens and feels.
He hath little time longer to stay,
Still he loveth to hear from the lips that are dear.
"Many happy returns of the day."
Then a garland, a bumper, a dance and a feast.
Let the natal tide come when it may.
Be it autumn or spring a gay chorus we'll sing,
"Many happy returns of the day."
Be it autumn or spring a gay chorus we'll sing,
"Many happy returns of the day."

MOTHER, HOME AND HEAVEN

There are three words that sweetly blend,
That on the heart are graven.
A precious, soothing balm they lend
They're Mother, Home, and Heaven.
They twine a wreath of beauteous flowers
Which placed on memory's urn,
Will e'en the longest, gloomiest hours
To golden sunlight turn.

They build an altar where each day
Love's offerings is renewed
And peace illumes with genial ray
Life's darkened solitude.
If from our side the first has fled,
And home is but a name,
Let's strive the narrow path to tread
That we the last may gain.

NO LONGER need evenings be spoiled or sleep ruined by mosquitoes.

Flit spray clears the house in a few minutes of mosquitoes and disease-bearing flies. It is clean, easy and safe to use.

Kills Household Insects

Flit spray also destroys bed bugs, roaches, ants, and insect eggs. The cracks and crevices where insects hide and breed are readily reached by Flit spray. Spraying Flit on garments kills moths and their larvae which eat holes. Extensive tests showed that Flit did not stain or injure the most delicate fabrics.

A Scientific General Insecticide

Flit is the result of exhaustive research by expert entomologists and chemists. More than 70 formulas were tested on various household insects before Flit was finally perfected. Flit is a 100% effective insecticide containing no inactive (inert) ingredients.

Home Ownership

Many of the luxuries of our day enrich life, but when they are gained at the sacrifice of owning your home the price is too great. The question of home ownership goes deeper than the welfare of the individual. The home is the foundation of our national and individual well being.

A CHARACTER HOME—10 large rooms, English billiard room, sleeping porch, sun parlor, 2 fireplaces, 3 tiled bathrooms, heated garage. BARGAIN. Occupying one of the finest corners in Eastern Westmount, completed within a few years ago for private owner by C. J. Brown, contractor, unique in every detail of design and finish, every conceivable modern convenience. Tapestry brick exterior, cut stone trimmings, slate roof. Charming exterior, colonial entrance hall with handsome mahogany staircase; living room across entire front of house with large central bay window and open fireplace; large dining room, beautifully panelled; sun parlor, with Moravian tile floor; butler's pantry, with china sink, and bright and conveniently planned kitchen, cold storage pantry, rear gallery. FIRST FLOOR—Main bedroom across front of house with spacious clothes cupboards, beautiful tiled private bathroom, equipped with finest of porcelain fittings; 2 other large bedrooms with clothes cupboards in each; very fine library with open fireplace and built-in bookcases; linen cupboard and large tiled service bathroom off hall; sleeping porch in rear. SECOND FLOOR—3 large family bedrooms, servant's bedroom, all with spacious clothes cupboards; large tiled bathroom. Basement is particularly high and bright with beautifully finished English billiard room in front; usual storage cupboards, cold storage larder, wine vault, laundry, furnace room, etc. Attractive garden grounds, fireproof heated garage in rear. Too large for owner, will accept smaller house in part payment. Excellent value, offers near $40,000

OWNER LEAVING CITY—Must sell "Upper Level Home," 10 large rooms, 3 bathrooms, 2 fireplaces, solid brick heated garage—it is seldom we have for sale such a well built and highly desirable family home as this. It would not be offered now but for the fact the owner has suddenly been called out of town. Conveniently situated near Roslyn School, built about 10 years and does not show a single settlement crack. Pressed brick exterior, steel frame, one of the best planned houses on our list. Ideal for entertaining. GROUND FLOOR—Tiled vestibule, reception hall with cloak room, living room 16' x 18' with fireplace, library, 13' x 16' with open fireplace, built-in bookcases and oak beamed ceiling, dining room 16' x 16', with built-in china cabinets; these three rooms en suite, with sliding doors between; butler's pantry, very bright kitchen, large cold pantry, maid's room with bathroom adjoining. FIRST FLOOR—Main bedrooms 16' x 17'6", with exceptionally large clothes cupboards; 4 other extra large bedrooms with spacious cupboards in each, beautifully tiled private bathroom communicating with two main bedrooms, tiled service bathroom, two linen and one housemaid's cupboard off hall, sleeping porch in rear. Newly decorated throughout. Electrical fixtures, roller blinds, gas generator, linoleum, etc., included. Side driveway, heated garage, garden yard. Excellent value at $22,500

A MODEL HOME—Occupying one of the finest sites in Eastern Westmount, 8 large rooms, 2 tiled bathrooms—Situated amid exclusive surroundings, above Sherbrooke and not on hill, recently completed under supervision of well-known architect. Tapestry brick exterior, slate roof, imposing entrance, large reception hall, living room, 14' x 17', the large windows of which overlook beautiful surrounding lawns, open fireplace in this room; very bright dining room, butler's pantry, kitchen, 4 extra large family bedrooms and servants' bedroom, all with spacious clothes cupboards; 2 beautifully equipped tiled bathrooms with finest of porcelain fittings, open bathroom communicates with hall and main bedroom, main rooms finished in walnut, quartered oak flooring, beautiful garden grounds, side driveway. Radiant heat for $18,500

TIMELY TURF TOPICS

MEXICO CITY, Mexico, July 16.—The land containing the race track at Tijuana, Mex., has been leased to Coffroth by the Mexican Federal Government for a period of ten years.

Signing of the long-term lease, which calls for payment of $1,175,000 in gold to the Mexican Government by the race track operators, would appear to settle, perhaps for all times, the long legal battle over the property between Coffroth and Jerome A. Bassity.

The breeding of Caractus, winner of the $20,000 Chicago Derby, has a special interest for Canadians, for the reason that he was sired by the well-known stallion Great Britain. Great Britain was brought from Kentucky by his Canadian owner, George M. Hendrie, in the summer of 1924 and sent to Woodbine Park, where he joined the thoroughbred sires being used for the improvement of the light horse breeding industry in Ontario.

Great Britain is now at Simcoe, Ont., in charge of Dr. A. C. Burt.

FORT ERIE, Ont., July 17.—Duchess, the swift-running daughter of Simon Square-Duquesa, carried the black and gold silks of the Seagram Stable to an easy triumph in the twenty-sixth running of the Canadian Derby, the feature of the closing day program of the Niagara Racing Association. Taking the lead from Tamarind in the first quarter, Kennedy rated her in front for the remainder of the mile and a quarter journey and she crossed the line nearly three lengths in advance of J. C. Fletcher's Fairbank, the high weight of the field of seven. J. K. L. Ross' Cambridge was third three lengths behind Fairbank and just a half length before Forecast 2nd. Ten thousand persons saw the event.

We are positive the evolution theory is all wet. Judging by the number of male bipeds who stretch their necks ogling silk clad ankles on the corners, a giraffe, not a monkey, must be blamed for it all.

Retirement Of "Iron Man" McGinnity

At the age of 54, Joe McGinnity, the original "Iron Man" of the major leagues, has finally retired from active work in the pitcher's box. McGinnity began to attract attention as a professional more than twenty-five years ago and he has been using his salary wing, also his head, ever since. The "Iron Man" became a minor league star as a member of the Baltimores after that club had been cut out of the National League circuit in 1898. Ned Hanlon, then managing the Brooklyns, signed McGinnity a year later and was handsomely rewarded. The "Iron Man" shared the pitching burden with Bill Kennedy, Frank Kitson, Jay Hughes and Jimmy McJames in 1900 when the Brooklyns won their second straight pennant.

McGinnity, really the star boxman of the 1900 champions, used a "raise ball" a greater part of the time. His underhand or "submarine" delivery was copied many years later by the noted Carl Mays. But McGinnity also shifted to the "side arm" or "overhand" method of shooting his curves and speeders to opposing hitters.

HAD NERVES OF STEEL.

Under fire, the "Iron Man" was as cold as ice. He had nerves of steel and unlimited stamina. Furthermore, he was a fighter and a driver, qualities that appealed to John McGraw, who signed him in 1903 to pitch for the Giants. McGinnity, together with Mathewson, Wiltse and others, pitched the Giants into their first National League championship under McGraw in 1904. Depeating in 1905, the Giants won the world series with the Athletics, four games out of five, McGinnity recording one of the victories.

After receiving his release from McGraw, McGinnity became the manager, pitcher and part owner of the Newark Internationals. But he soon became discusted with a losing venture and went out West to seek his fortune.

The "Iron Man" was a typical rolling stone. He tried his arm with one minor league team after another,—so many of them that it became hard to keep track of his whereabouts. But he continued to pitch with much of his old cunning until Father Time called him out of the game forever.

DIDN'T HAVE TO REST.

McGinnity was a horse for work, always ready to answer the call of his manager. He once told me that a first-class pitcher needed only two days of rest between games and invariably he practiced what he preached. In perfect physical condition at all times, the "Iron Man" frequently worked out of his turn with winning results. Yet his salary when he pitched for the Brooklyns and Giants didn't exceed $5,000.

Discussing the methods of some of our modern boxmen, McGinnity used to laugh at their inability to pitch more than one or two games a week. He showed contempt for big, husky fellows who insisted on resting four or five days after a fairly strenuous game.

"Four pitchers used in rotation are enough," the "Iron Man" argued. The more games a man pitches the more effective he must be. Carrying as many as ten pitchers means lack of practice for all of them."

AMATEUR BASEBALL

The Hires, of Montreal, is open for engagements, with any team at the age of 16-18. Any night in the week and week-end. For information address Capt. P. Newman, 2537 Ontario street. Clairval 2981W.

The Shamrock Baseball Club would like to arrange out of town games on Sundays with teams, the age limit being 19 years of age. The Shamrocks are now leaders of the Spalding League with no defeats.

Anyone wishing to give a game, please communicate with Manager H. Wheller, 412 St. Antoine street, or phone Uptown 2020.

The Crescent baseball team defeated the Longueuil Baseball team by the score of 7 to 4. The feature of the game was the fine pitching of Pat McColl of the Crescents, who only allowed 2 hits, and the hitting of Collins and McColl, who got 3 hits each.

Score by innings:—

Crescents	030 002 020—	7	10 3
Longueuil	002 100 100—	4	2 2

SPORT CORRESPONDENCE

TICKETS FOR DAVIS CUP GAMES.

Sporting Editor, Montreal Star:

Sir,—Some days ago I noticed in your paper an article on the coming Davis Cup games to be held on the Mount Royal Tennis Club's grounds, wherein it was stated the sale of tickets for these games were to be open for club members for first few days and then the general public were to have a chance at what were left.

I don't think this is a fair deal.

There are thousands of people who want to see these games and it is impossible for all these people to be members of the tennis club in question, and can't see why all the members of other clubs in the city should be barred from going and narrow it down to just a select few.

The tickets should be put on sale the same as any other entertainment and if any members of the Mount Royal Club want to go, let them take their chance with the rest of the public.

J. T. B.

There may be some sort of beautiful moral connected with Charlie Weinert, who gave up Broadway's gay revels for fighting, only to be knocked flatter than a planked shad, but we seem unable to discover it.

NOW AND THEN

In view of the renewed activity in cycling the following from the Montreal Star of 1898 seems of interest:

The Windsor Hotel was the scene of some important bicycle legislation during the last two days. This morning Messrs. Beament, president C.W.A., accompanied by Mr. Louis Rubenstein, the vice-president, arrived from Toronto, where the last meeting of the Executive had been held. This meeting, it appears, was a good deal more stormy than would have been imagined from the telegraphic reports and it also appears that Toronto, when it found out how foolishly it had behaved, brought forward another offer. President Beament, however, considered himself bound to Montreal and Messrs. Rubenstein and Donly stood up nobly for this city. Shortly after President Beament arrived here he met Mr. Rattray, the chief consul for the district, and Mr. Dandurand, the manager of the Queen's Park track, and it took but a very short time for these gentlemen to make the final arrangements (which irrevocably secure the world's bicycle meet) for Montreal, should the International Cycling Union award it to Canada.

Yesterday President Powers, of the Eastern Baseball League, who represents the interests of "Jimmy" Michael, was also at the Windsor Hotel, and had a lengthy interview with Mr. Dandurand, the subject thereof being the probability of Michael coming to race here. Mr. Dandurand drove Mr. Powers out to the Queen's Park track, which the latter considered was as fast if not faster than any in America. Preliminary arrangements were then made, subject to approval from headquarters for two days' racing during the first or second week of September at Queen's Park. The first day, Taylor, the French flyer, is to meet McCarthy and McLeod in a thirty-mile race, each of the Canadians taking fifteen miles of this, and the next day will be devoted to a twenty-five mile race between Michael and Linton. For this race they will carry with them not less than sixty pacemakers, divided in twelve "quints," of which each man will use six. The program will be further filled out with smaller events, including a couple of amateur races each day.

The race between Taylor and the Canadians will probably be held at night by electric light. The guarantee, which will have to be given by Queen's Park Association in addition to the high percentage of gate receipts that they will have to pay, will amount to something over three thousand dollars.

The races were held at Queen's Park, which was controlled by W. H. Dandurand and was situated north of Lasalle Road at about the place where one changes from the Wellington street cars to those going to the Insane Asylum.

NOTES OF MONTREAL CITY & DIST. SENIOR AM. BALL LEAGUE

This Saturday should see another battle when North Branch meet M. A. A. A. in the second game of the day.

The first one will see Columbus play C. P. R.

C. P. R. won their first game last week-end when they downed Central "Y."

In Morriseau, McCauley and Alec Wilson the railway boys have been strengthened. They should be heard from now on.

Columbus played a tie game with Excelsiors over the week-end.

That game was one of the best seen locally this year. The stands were in an uproar when the X's tied it up in the last half of the ninth.

Another sweet party is billed for this week-end.

July 18:—
Columbus vs. C .P. R. at 2 o'clock.
M. A. A. A. vs. N. B. Y. at 4 o'clock.
June 19:—
Nationals vs. Excelsiors.
Montefiores vs. Columbus.

The Shamrock grounds are drawing the crowds. A number 55 street car takes you directly there.

In order to give the fans protection from being hit by foul balls the league has put up new wire netting.

City and District Amateur Baseball is progressing rapidly and the public are beginning to appreciate the brand of baseball being furnished by the Montreal City and District Baseball League.

The Montfies catcher is called "Count" Fleischman. He acts like a Prince.

Hutchison, M. A. A. A. catcher, can play anywhere, especially shortstop.

Neil Ellard, Excelsior's backstop, is one of the best in the city.

Carr, of N. B. Y., is another shortstop converted to a catcher.

The game between Montfiores and N. B. Y. which was played on Saturday will be replayed later in the season.

Columbus-Excelsiors tie game last week-end will also be replayed.

The replay dates will be set by the league executive.

Everything in the league is fine and all teams are pulling together, playing baseball only in the league and are out to make the league a success.

Twilight ball draws the crowds, especially at Atwater Park. A game there tonight. Another on Friday.

Don't forget this week-end at the Shamrock grounds.

The home of Montreal's only Amateur Baseball League.

A No. 55 car takes you there.

It seems to us that Mr. Ben Johnson is running unusual risks in showing up some of his American League players by sanctioning games between 16-year-old teams in his parks.

Mr. Kearns is accused of trying to steal a Boston heavyweight by the name of Maloney. It isn't likely that this is true. Mr. Kearns is at least a good judge of fighters.

SOFT BALL NOTES

Two fast and interesting games were played in the Griffintown Soft Ball League. In the first game, The Galleryite team defeated the Edgarite Club by the score of 18-7. The all-around playing of Norton was the feature of the game.

Score by innings:	R.	H.	E.
Galleryites . . . .344 132 10x—18	14	6
Edgarites . . . .201 101 002— 7	9	6

Batteries: Campbell and Berry; Fagan, S. Edgar and Maher.

In the second game the pitching of B. Nelson of the Healyite team was the feature.

Score by inninga:	R.	H.	H.
Scottites . . . .000 040 110— 6	7	5
Healyites . . . .005 421 010—13	12	4

Batteries: Bleakney and L. Bracken; Nelson and Tucker.

Two soft ball leagues have been organized this season amongst members of the Canadian National Recreation Club and each has proven very successful. One league is for the ladies' and the other for the men. In the Ladies' League there are six teams, and while for many of the players this is their first season at the game, the standard of play has been excellent and the individuals have shown improvement with each successive contest.

At the present time the team from the Money Order Department of the Canadian National Express is leading with three wins, followed closely by the teams from Overcharges and Passenger Audit Offices.

The standing of the Ladies' League follows:

	Won	Lost
Express	3	0
Overcharges	2	0
Passenger Audit	2	1
McGill Street	2	2
A. F. A.	0	3
Car Accounts	0	4

The Men's League consists of eight teams and the boys from the McGill street headquarters are setting the pace. They are getting lots of competition and the teams on their heels, Overcharges, Car Accounts, Auditor Freight Accounts and Agencies have offered stiff opposition. While it is probable that McGill street will win the first series, probabilities for the second half of the league season point to even closer competition.

The standing of the Men's League follows:

	Won	Lost
McGill Street	4	0
Overcharges	3	1
Car Accounts	2	1
A. F. A. No. 1	2	1
Agencies	2	1
Standards	1	3
Stationers	0	3
A. F. A. No. 2	0	4

At the "Sons of David" semi-annual meeting which was held at their leader's house, on July 10, the Sons decided to have a junior club carry on the Sons of David name in the younger set, so have now a junior club which was previously known as the Young Stars and will be henceforth known as the "Sons of David" juniors. They have a membership of 20 and combined with their intermediates have a full membership of 50 members, run only by boys. The Sons were organized to create a good and clean sportsmanship name for Jewish boys and to be able to face the world like their English friends in sports. Any team of soft ball who would like to see real sportsmanship in Jewish clubs would kindly get in touch with Sporting Manager, Moe Elmoh for Intermediate, between 16-18, or Sporting Manager Sam Horowitz for juniors, between 13-15. Kindly phone Belair 0439W for any information.

After pitching for 35 years, Joe McGinnity, the iron man, has quit. It is presumed he will now strike out for himself.

The Thoughts Of Horses

By JAMES P. SINNOTT

Damon Runyon wrote an interesting story the other day in answer to the querry of one of his readers who wanted to know if horses can think. Damon told of his experiences with a cavalry mount that he used to ride in the Civil or rather the Spanish-American War.

It seems to me that if any horse thinks it must be the polo pony. Of all the horses that have come under my observation the polo pony seems the most intelligent.

The finest specimens in the world are the mounts used in international matches. They seem to take as keen an interest in the game as their riders.

Whether the job is riding off an opponent or following the ball down the field after a drive the high class polo pony knows his business and seems to indicate to the onlooker that he is as keenly alive to the situation as the player astride him.

Somehow or other during the last international matches at Meadow Brook it seemed to me that when the British players were hopelessly beaten the reaction was shown in the drooping spirit of their mounts as much as in the attitude of the players.

When, in a scrimmage before the goal, a pony kicks the ball through the posts it is of course deemed an accident, a bit of luck. And yet the very rule which provides that such a goal shall be counted indicates that for the purposes of the game the pony and rider are one.

I like to think the pony deliberately kicks the ball through now and then. He must know that the object of the game is to send the ball between those posts.

That is what he runs up and down and across the field to help his rider accomplish. So with the ball lying there a few feet from the goal, why shouldn't the pony deliberately kick it through?

Of course there is another possible theory. The pony takes many a blow from these balls as they fly from the mallets of the players. Maybe the kicks of the ponies are merely in re tallation.

Tom Mix's Tony is probably as well known a horse as there is in the world. Tom has another horse called Buster, that doesn't get as much publicity, but is almost Tony's equal.

Buster can do nearly anything Tony can do, while Tom is astride him. But when Tom gets off Buster's back, Buster likes to run away, and will if Mix moves ten feet from him.

Maybe Buster doesn't think, but it is strange that despite all efforts to break him of this habit, he persists in it, and is cunning enough not to make his move for freedom until Mix is far enough away not to be able to catch him.

Mix can make Tony do nearly anything by just whistling or calling to him.

Tony knows all about the camera and apparently likes it. Buster won't pay attention unless Tom is in the saddle.

I said in the beginning that to my way of thinking, the polo pony is the smartest of all horses. The cow pony runs him a close second.

The very characterization of thoroughbred should indicate, I suppose, that any horse can think, that the thoroughbred can.

The business of the thoroughbred, however, is almost entirely devoted to racing, and he is not called upon to display anything but speed and stamina.

Some attribute great intelligence to the mighty Man-o-War. It has been said that he would have won the only race of his career that he lost, when Upset beat him at Saratoga, if Johnny Loftus had just sat still, and let him run. But that is probably a bit far-fetched.

The man best qualified to express an opinion as to whether or not race horses think is probably Tod Sloan. Tod had an uncanny faculty for handling the most vicious of horses. He could make sulkers run for him. He could enter the stalls of so-called man-eaters with impunity.

Tod, however, had better be careful of expressing an opinion until the monkey case is over in Dayton, Tenn. If old Bill Bryan wins down there and Tod should say that horses think, old Bill may try to throw him in the hoosegow.

RENE PLAYED TENNIS BUT PAPA LACOSTE WARNED HIM TO BE WORLD BEATER

PARIS, July 16. — (By Minott Saunders, United Press Staff Correspondent.) —When Rene Lacoste, Wimbledon champion, goes to America to contest for the world's championship, he will carry with him a parental command to bring the championship back home with him.

It is this command which guides him in all his playing.

Papa Lacoste, a wealthy merchant, told Rene one evening:

"You are growing up now, and it is time you gave a thought to the future."

The boy replied that he had not given the matter much thought, and could decide only after he had done his military service.

"But you know I am interested in sports," he added, "and my friends tell me that I am a good tennis player."

"Very well," answered Papa Lacoste; "play tennis if you wish, but if you put in your time at it, my son, mind that you become world champion."

Nothing pains a fisherman so poignantly as the seven-pounder that got away. Nothing pains the listener so poignantly as the story of how the seven-pounder got away.

MURDER VISION TURNS OUT TRUE

Boy Found in Cab With Hole in His Temple

PARIS.—(By Mail.)—There has been a sensational development in the mystery of Philip Daudet, the fourteen-year-old son of the French Royalist leader, who was found dying in a taxicab more than a year ago.

It will be recalled that the boy had been fraternising with anarchists. The judical authorities found that young Daudet had committed suicide, but the father was not satisfied, and for eighteen months has been carrying on a campaign to prove that his son was murdered with the complicity of the police.

Leon Daudet at last obtained permission to have the case reopened, and has been confronted with various people implicated in the case. Subsequently Leon Daudet and Le Flaoutter were confronted.

A NEW TALE.

Le Flaoutter is notorious as a bookseller who has been prosecu

THE SEVEN SEAS FIND JUSTICE IN ADMIRALTY COURT

Why Sailors of Every Flag Take Their Troubles There

600 WRITS IN 1924

Umpires Disputes Between Foreigners in Many Instances

LONDON, July—(By Mail).—The symbol of Justice at the Old Bailey is much more dramatic than at the Admiralty Court.

Outside the Old Bailey there is the blind-folded, robed figure, with a sword in one hand and scales in the other: inside there is the shining sword above the judge's head.

At the Admiralty Court, above the judge's head, is an anchor.

Yet this little anchor is known throughout the world as a symbol of swift, painstaking, incorruptible impartiality to which men of all nations turn their eyes whenever, upon any of the Seven Seas, trouble or dispute comes upon a ship.

WAITING FOR JUSTICE.

Last year 600 writs were issued in the Admiralty Court (the quiet sister of the Divorce Court in the Strand), of which about a third were for actions between two foreign vessels, and ought, in nature, to have been tried in a foreign court. At least a hundred more of these actions were between a British and a foreign vessel, so that half of the cases tried beneath the little anchor in our Law Courts might have been tried in foreign cities.

The fame of British justice as dispensed at the Admiralty Court has so spread abroad that shipowners will wait months, if necessary, for the arrival of their ship in England in order to have their case tried here.

Think what a tribute to British justice this is! An Italian ship on the High Seas became disabled and called for assistance. A German ship answered. A conversation was carried on in very broken English.

"What will you charge for towing me to the Azores?" asked the Italian captain. "I'll be content to leave that to the Admiralty Court," said the German captain. And so it was agreed.

He did not need even to say "the English Admiralty Court." Both knew that it was only the English Court that could be meant.

BEGUN IN AMERICA.

The other day there was a case which promises to be a classic example of how England acts as umpire of the seas.

A Spanish steamer, Reina Victoria Eugenia, her master's name (it is worth giving for the sound of it) Amadeo Rodriquez Aparicio, came into collision with a Norwegian steamer, Terrier, her master's name Harald Andersen. The Spanish ship was insured in France.

The collision happened in the River Plate. Yet the case was tried in the Strand! It is hard to calculate the amount of arrangement it meant to bring together the witnesses in such a case in London.

But in this case something happened more than the painstaking administration of justice which helps to explain why our Admiralty Court is sought by foreigners. Knowing the inconvenience to foreign witnesses of being detained in England, the judge put this case above one in which only English ships were concerned in order that the issue might be decided as quickly as possible.

Then there was a case in which an Italian and an American ship collided in the St. Lawrence. The case was actually begun in the American Courts, but was brought over here.

There was another in which a Spanish and an Italian ship collided near Suez and came to settle the quarrel in London. And so on from all over the world.

What is it that brings them here? The first thing is absolute impartiality. Men who go down to the sea in ships sometimes come upon cities where Justice is not blind-folded, and where she has false weights in her balance. Too often they say they have come to London because they had found that justice could be bought in some foreign port—and they did not choose to buy.

WHERE £1,000,000 HAS NO WEIGHT.

A Greek who had had some unfortunate experiences in other courts found himself brought before the Admiralty Court. In accordance with procedure, both parties had deposited security. The case went against the Greek, and he said to his solicitor: "What a pity we did not deposit a bigger security, then we would have won!" It was explained to him that if he had deposited a million pounds it would have had no influence on the verdict.

But in addition to absolute impartiality, there is a certainty of sound judgment based on complete examination of every relevant fact. The English—though we often forget it—are a seafaring people. We are known throughout the world as a seafaring people, and we are trusted to give a true decision on seafaring questions.

Besides the judge in the Admiralty Court sit two of the Elder Brethren of Trinity House. They are there to help him on questions of navigation. For four hundred years Trinity House has been repository of England's knowledge of the sea. These two Elder Brethren has been masters of ships and have had wide experience. They are there to bring to every case all the accumulated sea knowledge and sea sagacity of the English people.

There are few visitors to this court. Across the way, hundreds flock to the divorce cases; but a spectator in the Admiralty Court can have three benches to himself.

MEN WHO KNOW THEIR SUBJECT.

Yet it is profoundly interesting to see the weather-beaten countenances of the witnesses, and to hear their confident answers as of men who know their subject and know their mind, to listen to the talk of port and starboard, ahead and astern, and watch the steady, slow march of the evidence before the spectacled lord who sits as judge and the two quietly attentive Brethren.

Outside the court the waiting witnesses pace up and down the corridor with the even step of men pacing a deck, and among the Englishmen there is pride that they find themselves in a building to which sailors of all the world look with admiration and respect.

Paradoxical Three Hour Sitting Filled with Delight And Disappointments

There had always been a fuzzy-sounding spot in my wireless set which only appeared when B.B.C. stations had gone to bed. Expert friends told me that it was the "carrier-wave" of an American broadcasting station, but I had never been able to do any good with it. I had made one serious effort which resulted in distinct music, but towards 1 a.m. a bored voice said, "That's all the testing tonight. The Cardiff station is closing down." It was only engineers in Wales making belated adjustments, writes "A Wireless Innocent" in the London Daily Mail.

Last night, however, I met the fuzzy spot once more, gave the set all the "juice" I could wring out of the accumulators, and, as usual, it grew fuzzier. Then, by accident, I turned the lights of the valves slightly lower and heard the "plonk" of a banjo.

I know how Columbus must have felt. Really thrilled, I tuned more carefully and lost it again. Patience brought it back, and then came a woolly voice with a heavy cold which said, "This is WGY, Schenectady, New York State."

That was the beginning of a three-hours' sitting packed with delight and bitter disappointments. I had not the remotest idea how I had picked up these very faint and distant signals and fumbled round the controls trying to build them up. Some little touch did the trick, and I was able to plug in the loudspeaker and fill the room with slow jazz music and with, "This is WGY, Schenectady."

The call was repeated very much more often than in this country. With nearly 500 broadcasting stations in North America, each announces itself at every possible opportunity so that listeners shall know where they are.

The trouble about the session was that I could not keep my fingers away from the set. A slight touch to coax just a shade more power out of the performance plunged the whole thing into a chaos of fuzz and atmospherics. Then I would spend ten minutes in outer darkness, together with other lost wireless souls who were oscillating on the same wave-lengths.

I could hear their howls of torment clamouring through the ether just on the border-line of Heaven—and Schenectady. Other listeners were clearly turning knobs, bent on the same errand as myself.

I heard the whoops of one seeker merge into a blissful silence and knew that he had either found WGY or had gone to bed. It was nearly 3 a.m., and I must have discovered (and lost) the United States eight or nine times since midnight, so I finished.

The most difficult task came later on. People who claim to be your friends ought to accept your word.

FLESH OF LIZARD EATEN AS DELICACY

The Iguana belongs to the class or family of the thick-tongued lizards. Its tongue is short and is covered with a sticky secretion, always moist. These reptiles are found from Patagonia to British Columbia. They are characterized by their peculiar teeth, which are round at the root and are blade-shaped, with saw-tooth edges at the tips. Under fear or irritation they are almost equal to the chameleon in being able to change color instantly.

The iguana is timid and not able to defend himself except by climbing a tree, blending with the surroundings and keeping still. The natives consider the meat a great delicacy. They capture this creature by slipping a noose around its neck as it sits on the branch of a tree.

Some species like the water. One of this class called marine lizard is found only in the Galapagos Islands, very near the shore or in the water, where they swim well by means of their flattened tails, the motion being somewhat like an eel's for they do not use their semi-web feet but hold them close to their sides. They can remain submerged for a surprisingly long-time. When frightened they will not enter the water and if thrown in will return to the point whence they started.

TOXIN ANTI-TOXIN NEW MEDICINAL FIND

Toxin anti-toxin, the new British discovery which will prevent diphtheria, and also, it is claimed, influenza, whooping cough, and other diseases, was described by Sir Alfred Rice-Oxley, the eminent physician, as "a serious thing for doctors, but a great thing for the public."

"Its greatest importance," said Sir Alfred, "lies in the fact that it gives immunity for a longish time. If we can prevent the contraction of disease, we have obviously discovered something even more important than a cure.

"The serum at present is largely used for the prevention of diphtheria, but we hope to be able to use it soon for other diseases. Many doctors already use toxin anti-toxin for influenza. I do not think the public take advantage of it as much as they ought to as a guard against influenza."

CRUTCHES ON CASTERS FOR DOG TO HELP CURE INJURY

Paralyzed in the hind limbs as the result of being struck by an automobile, "Sport," a pet dog owned by a Wisconsin man, was pronounced incurable and preparations were made to chloroform him. But an inventive veterinarian heard of the case, designed a roller cage in which "Sport" could push himself about with his forelegs and now the dog is said to be well on the road to recovery. Strips of scrap iron were bent and bolted to form the support, which, when completed, resembled the frame for a small kennel. "Sport's" injured members were held from the floor by means of bandages passed under his body and over the top loops of the cage, where they were tied with strings. The dog was taught to use the contraption by placing him in it before he was given his food, and he would then push himself along to his dish. Now he has learned to bark until he is put into his wheel chair and manages to travel a considerable distance each day. The gradual exercise and protection to the injured limbs are working what is expected to be a complete cure.

CONNECTING PHONES TO AMPLIFIER

There is a right and a wrong way to connect phones to an amplifier. If they are incorrectly connected they become demagnetized and soon lose their sensitivity.

The simplest way to find which is the best connection, is to plug the phones in at the last step of amplification and tune the receiver to the loudest possible signal; then remove the phone caps and lift one edge of the diaphragm with the finger until it clears the edge of the shell. When the phones are connected in one direction, you will observe a stronger puff than when the connections are reversed. When the connections are so placed as to obtain the greatest pull on the diaphragm, put a mark on the phone terminal that was connected to the plate of the tube. Thereafter always connect the marked terminal to the plate.

WHEELBARROW BENCH FOR LAWN IS EASILY MOVED.

Benches for the lawn or garden are useful and ornamental but cannot be moved easily from place to place as needed. This limitation has been overcome in a seat which an Englishwoman has invented. It combines the features of a bench and a wheelbarrow and may be trundled about as easily as the latter article by means of two long extension handles and a wheel at the other end which form part of the support.

MACHINE MAKES CHANGE AND ADMITS PERSONS TO TRAINS

Patrons of an elevated railway in an eastern city have been testing a fare-collecting apparatus at the station gates installed to do the work of a human cashier. It automatically retains ten cents from a deposit of a quarter or a fifty-cent piece, returning the correct change and, at the same time, releasing the catch on the turnstile to permit entrance to the trains. Dimes—the regular fare—also are accepted, but the machine will not handle paper money, pennies or nickels. It is believed that the device will be of aid in rush hours as passengers with the exact fare, or coins which the contrivance will change, can pass through quickly.

NOVEL "ONE-BOY" SEESAW

Most playground seesaws require two persons to operate them. Finding this feature objectionable, a schoolboy with an inventive turn of mind devised a seesaw equipped with a movable counterweight, which enabled him to operate it alone. The counterweight consists of a wooden box placed near one end, and two lengths of 1 by 2-in. wood, attached to the box and to a pair of handles, which are pivoted on the seesaw within easy reach of the operator. The distance from the box to the centre of the seesaw should be about the same as that from the centre to the seat on the other end. A quantity of sand, approximately equal in weight to that of the one using the seesaw is put in the box and then by moving the box back and forth the balance can be readily changed, causing the seesaw to work just as if two persons were operating it. The counterweight end of the seesaw is boarded in as shown to confine the movement of the sand box.

LAND SWIMMING RACK TEACHES RIGHT STROKES.

With the aid of a machine invented in England, beginners are said to be able to learn the right swimming strokes in two lessons. The pupil lies prone on a cushion and his hands and feet are strapped to special pads. When the instructor turns a crank, the student's extremities are automatically made to perform the correct swimming motions as the rests to which they are attached are moved in the proper order by a chain-gear arrangement.

ACID-PROOF TABLE TOP.

For chemical laboratories, battery service stations, and other places where acids are handled, an acid-proof coating on the table tops is almost a necessity. The following two solutions are used for this purpose. The first consists of iron sulphate, 4 parts; copper sulphate, 4 parts; potassium permanganate, 8 parts, and water 100 parts. The second solution consists of anilin, 12 parts; hydrochloric acid, 18 parts; water, 100 parts.

Two coats of the first solution are applied hot with a brush and allowed to dry; any dried coating that has not soaked in is then rubbed off. The surface is then given two coats of the second solution and later a thin coat of raw linseed oil is rubbed on with a cloth. If the table top is painted or varnished, it should be scraped down so that the solutions will penetrate the wood. In cases where this method was used on some old laboratory tables the result was highly satisfactory. The surface turns ebony-black a few hours after the coating has been applied.

ELECTRIC LIGHTER FOR WATER HEATER.

Many houses have a gas water heater in the basement for summer use. To light it it is necessary to go downstairs and this is rather unhandy. With the apparatus shown in the lustration, it is possible to turn on the gas and ignite it with an electric spark. The valve in the gas line is provided with a coil spring, which shuts off the gas automatically. It is opened by means of a length of furnace chain, wound on a spool that is attached to the valve as indicated. The chain is run over pulleys, through the wall into the room above, the end being fitted with a ring; a plate on the wall holds the chain up in the same manner as a furnace-damper control. These fixtures can be purchased at any hardware store. Two dry cells are connected in series to a Ford ignition coil, which can be obtained at a garage. One side of the coil is grounded on the stove and the other wire terminates about ⅛ in. from the burner, directly above the gas holes so that after the gas has been turned on, a spark jumping this gap will immediately ignite it.

MANICURE SET ON NECK RIBBON HOLDS TOOLS IN HANDLE

A manicure set so small it can be hung on a ribbon worn around the neck carried all the various instruments in a hollow tube which forms the handle for the articles when in use. Resembling a fountain pen, the compact set is small enough to be carried in a purse or pocket. The parts are protected against loss or rust and injury by a closely fitting cap.

COLORING BRASS GRAY

To color brass gray, first clean the surface off with alcohol, polish it to an even finish, making sure that all grease and finger marks are removed, then immerse the work in a solution of arsenic chloride (poison), 1 oz., and water, 1 pt., until the desired shade is obtained. Wash in clean warm water, dry in boxwood sawdust, and warm and lacquer with a thin pale solution of bleached shellac in methyl alcohol, using a broad camel's-hair brush.

SINISTER SLEEP NOT OFTEN FATAL

Popular Name "Sleepy Sickness" Not Same as African Malady

Encephalitis lethargica, which recently claimed a distinguished patient in the person of Lord Milner, is by no means as fatal as it is often supposed. Indeed, the death-rate throughout a series of epidemics has shown a steady tendency to decrease. While in the year 1919-1920 there were 615 deaths out of 1,273 cases reported, the mortality during the epidemic of early last year was only about 20 per cent.

The use of the popular name of "sleepy sickness" for encephalitis is condemned by medical authorities because it leads to confusion with the dreaded sleeping sickness of Africa. Sleeping sickness, which is nearly always fatal, is a malady of quite a different nature, and is due to a microbe called trypanosome introduced into the blood by the bite of the tse-tse fly.

In spite of the research work of recent years encephalitis lethargica must still be classed among those diseases which are only imperfectly understood. Curative treatment is necessarily experimental, for owing to ignorance of the true cause no definite remedy can be prescribed.

In its early stages the malady bears a strong resemblance to influenza or nasal catarrh, and there is a danger of mild cases passing unrecognized, writes a doctor in the London Daily Mail. As the more severe cases develop, however, the symptoms become unmistakable. A rise in temperature is accompanied by great weakness, much difficulty in speech, double vision—or perhaps temporary blindness—and sometimes partial paralysis. It is to paralysis of the nervous centres governing the breathing organs that death is due when it occurs.

Lassitude and lethargy may manifest themselves at the outset, but they do not usually appear until after a lapse of two or three weeks.

In some of the worst cases there is not sleepiness, but acute insomnia, often in association with nervous convulsions or even insanity.

Encephalitis lethargica is compulsorily notifiable to the local health authorities, and every precaution is wisely taken to prevent it from spreading, but it is by no means a highly infectious malady, and there is very little danger of one person communicating it to another.

Undoubtedly one of the worst features of encephalitis is the terrible after-effects that it sometimes produces in children and young adults—intellectual dullness, complete change or moral character, lying, theft, a form of nervous paralysis, and insanity, occasionally of a homicidal nature.

Two years may elapse before these dreaded symptoms make their appearance, and if the original malady has been forgotten, or gone undetected, there is a danger of the unfortunate victim being branded with the stigma of crime or lunacy.

It is, of course, impossible to deal effectively with this sinister disease without a full knowledge of the cause, and this knowledge scientists in all parts of the world are working hard to supply.

COLDSTREAM GUARDS ORIGINATED IN 1659

The Coldstream Guards, a regiment in the Household Brigade or Foot Guards, had their origin in 1659, when—following the death of Oliver Cromwell—George Monk raised a regiment of 6,000 foot guards at Coldstream, Berwickshire, Scotland. This regiment (known as "Monk's Regiment") set out under Gen. Monk on New Year's Day, 1660, to march to London, which they reached unopposed five weeks later. It was owing to Gen. Monk that the British monarchy, in the person of Charles II, was restored.

King Charles created Gen. Monk Duke of Albemarle, and Monk's regiment, under the name of the "Coldstream Guards," was subsequently included in Charles II's Brigade of Guards. The Coldstream Guards is the second oldest regiment in the British army.

Fate of Men of Sixty-five Not Very Promising if We Believe Chart of Life

"The Ruthless Record" of a chart of life is published in pamphlet form by Mr. Richard Morris, formerly M.P. for North Battersea. Forewords are contributed by Mr. Lloyd George and Sir Robert Horne.

The illustration represents the fate of any batch of one hundred average men at the age of sixty-five.

It is a sorry story. At the age of twenty-five all were healthy, and of good mental capacity. Ten years later five have died, ten have become wealthy, ten are in good circumstances, forty have moderate resources, and thirty-five have not improved.

The curtain is lifted twenty years later. Twenty are now dead, one is very rich, three are in good circumstances. Forty-six are still working for a living, thirty are more or less dependent on their children or relatives or charity.

The closing scene is at sixty-five. Thirty-six of the original hundred are now dead. Of those remaining, one is still rich, four are wealthy (one of those who lost everything before forty-five has regained his hold and becomes wealthy).

Six are still self-supporting, but are compelled to work for a living. The other fifty-three are dependent on Children, relatives, or charity.

QUEBEC LIQUOR COMMISSION

Illicit Liquor a Menace to Health

Intoxicating beverages made in secret and against the law contain deadly poisons

WHEN prohibitory laws were established in this country, there followed a deplorable development in the clandestine manufacture of alcoholic liquors. These drinks are a danger to the public health, against which the population should be warned.

Heretofore the authorities prosecuted without mercy those who violated the law in the secret manufacture of intoxicating beverages. The penalties imposed, however, do not suffice to keep the public on guard against this social peril. It is incumbent upon the proper authorities to realize that the consumption of such spirits causes not only offences against law and morals but actual loss of life.

To manufacture or sell illicit liquor is to attempt the life of one's fellow-citizens. It has been amply demonstrated that alcohols distilled under unlawful conditions are often poisonous. Bootleggers or outlaw manufacturers cannot properly safeguard their processes, and the products which they distribute to consumers by means of traffickers no less culpable than the distillers themselves have brought tragic consequences. In some cases the unfortunate users of these spirits have lost their reason or have been injured for life; others have died. Victims are found both in town and country.

In the United States and in all countries where laws of strict prohibition are in force, every day sees cases of violent deaths recorded as the result of absorbing these dangerous beverages.

The operation of the Quebec Liquor Law is so strict and it is carried on with such solicitude for the public health that the makers of clandestine liquors have been prosecuted and severe penalties exacted. Their number is steadily declining, but the people in the cities as well as the country should extend a helping hand to the officers of the Quebec Liquor Commission to drive out of our province these actual poisoners.

It is a wise precaution to refuse to drink any alcoholic liquor which does not carry the label of the Quebec Liquor Commission, or which was not purchased at one of its stores. It will tend to protect life and health, and to emphasize at the same time the danger of using illicit alcohols.

THE public appreciates the care with which the Liquor Commission regulates the distribution and guarantees the absolute purity of its products. All spirits offered for sale must undergo a rigid analysis (even the best-known brands) before being stocked by the liquor stores. Each genuine bottle is wrapped in special paper containing red and blue threads.

Illicit liquors are often wrapped and labelled so as to deceive the purchaser. The public should be on guard against using such clandestine beverages, thereby exposing themselves to criminal prosecution and the actual danger of poisoning.

CANADA'S LADY STARS OF TRACK AND FIELD PASSED THROUGH HERE

Attired smartly in pure white sweater coats with the crest of the Maple Leaf, representing the Dominion of Canada, placed conspicuously on the front, ten of Canada's premier girl athletes dismounted from their private car at the Windsor Station this morning after completing the first leg of their journey to England, where they will represent Canada in the big International ladies' athletic meet at Stamford Bridge next month.

The girls are accompanied by Miss Alexandria Gibb of Toronto, who will manage the team in the competitions abroad, and a number of admirers who will accompany the team to Quebec, where they take the steamer Mont Royal for England this afternoon.

It was a happy party of young ladies that paraded up the platform of the station led by Miss Gibb, who carried the flag of Canada'ss championship hockey team, which won the world honors at the Olympic games in France. The emblem was presented to the team by P. J. Mulqueen, chairman of the 1924 Canadian Olympic Committee.

The party was met by President W. E. Findlay of the A. A. U. of C., secretary Dr. A. S. Lamb of the same body; Mrs. Gordon Findlay, who will chaperone the party, and Gordon Findlay.

CHAPERONE PRESENTED

When the presenting of Mrs. Findlay to the team had been done the whole party was complete, and a fine looking team it was, with the outstanding feature that co-operation will reign while the young ladies are on the trip.

The team was surrounded by many local admirers also, and not one on the crowded station platform failed to take an active interest in the team. The girls received good wishes by the score.

When the team was complete the members assembled for the first time to have their photograph taken by The Star photographer, and were then taken to an uptown restaurant for breakfast, where the adventures of the send-off at Toronto and their journey here were related. Miss Gibb, Mrs. Findlay, Dr. Lamb and W. E. Findlay held an informal conference following the lunching and plans were completely laid out for the entire trip.

The girls related the scenes at Union Station in Toronto, where a huge crowd gave them a great send-off. They were showered with presents by their friends and as one newspaperman who is accompanying the team to Quebec put it, they were given everything but the City Hall. The trip is highly thought of by the business men of the Queen City, and the girls state that they were royally treated by their employers as to receiving extended holidays and financial assistance. The three Hamilton girls on the team received a grant from the Hamilton city council to help defray expenses, while the Toronto girls were equally fortunate.

"CANDY KIDS"

The manager of the team, Miss Gibb, said that she was in a quandary as to how to dispose of the immense amount of candy received by the girls, as she did not think it beneficial to them while in training.

Miss Gibb reported that the girls did exceptionally well in the trials at Toronto. She was disappointed that Miss Rosa Grosse, the fleet Toronto runner, was not on the team, but said that she had every confidence in the girls on the team, and felt sure that they would carry off many hohors.

Miss Inez Bramley who was chosen for the term is the only athlete not taking the trip and her place is being taken by Hazel Conacher, who was to be a reserve. Miss Genet Allen, who will be the only reserve of the team, was not in the party but will follow later.

COMPLETE TEAM.

The complete team which left Montreal this morning is as follows: Miss Alexandrine Gibb, manager, Toronto; Mrs. Gordon Findlay, Montreal, chaperone; Molly Trunnell, Velma Springsted, Gertrude Wood, Kathleen Flanagan, Myrtle Cook, Grace Conacher, Josie Dyment, Clara Ballard, Jean Godson and Tony Conacher.

Miss Clara Ballard is the Montreal girl on the team while Miss Tony and Grace Conacher who live in Toronto at present are representing Victoria, B.C. their permanent home and the only representatives of the West.

The relay team which will compete against the European teams will be composed of Grace Conacher, Myrtle Cook, Rosa Dyment and Kathleen Flanagan. Kathleen Flanagan is the new member of the team which set a world's record at the Toronto Exhibition last year. She is taking the place of Rosa Grosse, who is not taking the trip.

Upon returning to their special car Mrs. Findlay was presented with a white sweater coat by the team, Miss Myrtle Cook making the presentation on behalf of the other members.

Upon arriving in England the team will be met by Miss Cartwright, of McGill and Alfred Shrubb who will coach the team on foreign soil.

SOME ADVICE.

Before entering their coach for the last time in Canada, the girls were addressed first by President Findlay, of the A.A.U. and secondly by the Secretary, Dr. A. S. Lamb. Mr. Findlay impressed on the young ladies that they were going to England to represent Canada, not for the main reason of bringing back as many honors as they could win, but to show the European athletes the spirit with which athletics are fostered in Canada. Mr. Findlay went on to say that no matter whether the team won or lost he hoped that they would keep in the best physical condition possible and do their best in the events.

Dr. A. S. Lamb in a few words spoke of the motive of the trip and congratulated the young ladies who had been successful in making a place on the team, which he felt sure would bring back many honors to Canada. He wished them success and said that they would be welcomed back to Canada with the same feelings toward them that they are being sent, regardless of what honors they won or lost."

The team immediately gave three hearty cheers for Dr. Lamb, following with the same for Mr. Findlay.

As the train left the station the huge and curious crowd cheered the athletes to the echo until the train was out of sight.

POSTPONED BOUTS SET FOR THIS EVENING

The rain which caused so much trouble in the city earlier in the day was again to blame for a misunderstanding at a professional wrestling show at Poupart Park. George Deslongchamps, local heavyweight champion believed the show would be cancelled on account of rain, and so left the park at eight o'clock. By 8:30 o'clock the stands were crowded so Promoter Harris decided to proceed with the show. The knowledge caused a near riot amongst the fans. Secretary Ferguson of the Boxing Commission ordered a refund of the gate money, or that the show be put on tonight. Harris issued rain checks for the show tonight, and ran off what bouts he could last night.

In the first bout of the evening, Lebrun, a Swiss mat star, defeated Jack Nockel, a Winnipeg boy, two falls out of three. George Walker, claimant to the Dominion heavyweight title defeated the tough Mike Nester, two falls within twenty-three minutes.

Count Zarynoff and George Deslongchamps who were to be principals in the show, were then discovered missing, but it is announced that they will be on hand for the struggle this evening.

CARTIERVILLE BOATING CLUB NOTES

The war canoes have been practising hard all the week. This also applies to the boys in the small boats. That success will be theirs is the wish of the followers of the club.

A new trophy has been presented to the junior four by the resident members of the club. This will be known as the "Stacks Trophy." On behalf of the directors, executive and members we thank all who kindly donated towards this trophy and congratulate the members on their magnificent spirit. We will look for a win from the junior four and give them our best wishes.

The dance on Wednesday was a huge success. Something unusual happened at the club on Tuesday. A "Sewing Bee" was held to sew up the new buns for the war canoe. The president presided, Rad supplied the music, and Harry Armstrong, the tea and ices. To the young ladies we extend our thanks and a hearty welcome to the club at all times.

This week by special request we page Bill Ross and Bob Costello. These two old faithful and loyal members have not been seen at the club this year, as Saturday's regatta would not be a Cartierville Home Day without Bill and Bob. We hope that they will show up and cheer the boys on. Bill 'phone Bob, and Bob 'phone Bill.

We were glad to see Leo and Bert show up.

Tennis has become very popular at the club. Last Sunday matches were played against a local club and resulted in an easy win for the paddlers. It is rumored that Hyam intends to enter in the Davis Cup games. His game certainly was wonderful to watch, also the clean ducks and new hose. The umpires were Oscar and the Notary.

We look forward to the best turnout Saturday of the club members and their friends we have ever had. To those members who do not come regularly we would especially ask them to make an effort to come out Saturday.

We were all glad to see "Art," the genial secretary of the club, at Lachine last Saturday, and now that he has recovered from his sickness we look forward to more regular attendance.

We understand that our popular vice-president has a regular inspection to see whether his boat is still afloat or not. Somebody suggests that he engage an expert diver, "Notarie faites attention."

On behalf of the directors, executive and members in general we are asked to thank those loyal members, Messrs. Valiquette, Hamelin and Leclerc, who have so kindly placed at the disposal of the club their speed boats for Saturday's regatta.

We wish to announce to all members that it is quite possible that one of our popular past presidents will officiate at the old club game "Atta-a-boy" the night of the regatta.

VICTORIA, July 17. — In British Columbia lawn tennis championship doubles matches played here yesterday, Leroy Rennie and E. A. Purkiss, Toronto, defeated Hockins and Temple, Victoria, 6-3, 6-3, and E. C. Sasselman, of Edmonton, and Walter Martin, Regina, defeated Goodday and Berill, Victoria, 6-4, 6-2, in the men's doubles.

PRESIDENT OF AMATEUR ATHLETIC UNION WRITES "BON VOYAGE" LETTER TO GIRL ATHLETES FOR ENGLAND

Following is the "Bon Voyage" letter addressed to each member of the ladies' athletic party, which started on its way to England today:—

W. E. Findlay.

Montreal, Que., July 15, 1925.

For the first time in the history of track and field athletics in Canada a team of feminine athletes is representing Canada in Great Britain, and much depends upon the results of this venture.

You, and each member of the team, I am sure, will appreciate that the whole matter of girls and women engaging in athletics is on trial, and that we are only at present in the initial stages of a development which may have far reaching results one way or the other.

There are just one or two points that I would like to draw to your attention, and which I hope you will accept in the friendly spirit in which this is written.

We feel confident that you will in your conduct, both on and off the field, reflect credit on Canada and therefore it is unnecessary for me to say anything in this respect. You will appreciate the importance of this when you realize that each and every one of the team individually and collectively are representative of the best we have in feminine athletics in this country, and that not only the results of the competitions, but every movement in connection with the trip, has a bearing on the results and of the future of other similar ventures in connection with girls' athletics.

It is not for me, as a layman, to make any criticisms or suggestions which should be left to the medical profession, and that is a feature that will be taken up in its proper place and time, and is of extreme importance.

In regard to the competitions, while we naturally hope that you will be successful in your efforts, it would be well for you to keep in mind that winning in sports that are indulged in as a recreation should not be the sole object of anyone. A good loser is very often more to be respected than a poor winner. To win is a laudable ambition, but to lose well is a virtue.

I want to take this opportunity to say that upon your return home you will be more enthusiastic than ever in athletics, and there is a danger of your being exploited by persons whose only object is personal profit and gate receipts, and the result would be detrimental to yourself and all others engaged in feminine sport.

If feminine athletics are to be developed, as we hope they will, very careful consideration and attention must be given to the conditions under which competitions are held and the people in charge of them. We are hoping that a strong Canadian women's organization will come into existence which will have full control, as your own sex are the only proper persons to guide and control feminine athletic activities.

Wishing you one and all a pleasant and successful trip.

Yours very truly,

W. E. FINDLAY, President.

LOCAL COMMITTEE AWAITS ARRIVAL IN U. S. OF BRITISH LADY NET STARS BEFORE GOING TOO FAR WITH RECEPTION ARRANGEMENTS—MEETING HELD

At a meeting of the local Davis Cup Committee and the committee appointed to receive the English lady tennis players, who are to arrive in New York tomorrow, details in connection with the arranging of the important tennis fixtures were discussed.

Regarding the visit of the outstanding British lady players, including Kitty McKane and Joan Fry, R. P. Jellett, who as president of the Mount Royal Tennis Club, where both events will take place, presides at such meetings, announced following the conference, that it was decided that nothing definite could be arranged until the ladies could be communicated with. As they are due to arrive tomorrow, Mr. Jellett will immediately get in touch with them and find out whether they want singles or doubles matches among themselves, or whether they would like to include local players in the game. As soon as the ladies reach this side of the water, something definite can be found out concerning their plans and an announcement made.

Fights Tonight

St. Pierre, who meets Ted Gordon at the Verdun A.C. open-air boxing and wrestling entertainment tonight.

Physical Director Of M.A.A. Goes

Mel Blake, physical director and coach of the track and field athletes of the M. A.A.A., has tendered his resignation to take effect August 1st. Blake is a former West End Y. M. C. A. man from Toronto and last year was invited to Montreal by the Wheelers.

He took full charge of the gymnasium and made good. He piloted the senior basketball team to championship and this summer looked after the track athletes. The gymnasts are especially sorry to see the former Torontolan leave the association for his attractive program was always a relax after a day's work.

VERDUN BOUTS TONIGHT, WEATHER PERMITTING

Weather permitting the Verdun A.C.'s show will surpass the last boxing tournament held by this club at Rheaume Park. All boxers have notified the promoter—Jimmy Hutchings—that they will be on hand, so that in order to run through the sixteen bouts, boxing and wrestling. The first bout will be staged at 8.15 sharp and will bring two 80-lb. flashes together.

Following is the programme:

Boxing—80 lbs., O'Connell vs Hanley; 108 lbs., Connolly vs Diano; 112 lbs., Leitham vs. J. Diano; 118 lbs., St. Pierre vs. Gordon and White vs Champagne; 126 lbs., Bryant vs. D. O'Connell and Lirizin vs. O'Connors; 130 lbs., Starks vs. Walker; 135 lbs., Bowden vs. Steffano.

Wrestling: 175 lbs.—Stockton vs. Coleman; 158 lbs., G. Stockton vs. Masson; 135 lbs., McCoy vs. McLean.

The lacrosse team will atage an exhibition game early in the evening, so that the gates will be open at seven o'clock.

Get-away Day At Kempton Tomorrow

For the second time in a number of years, racing was suspended locally yesterday afternoon.

Over at Laprairie, where the Kempton Park meeting is being held, the storm which swept over this portion of the country reached greater proportions than most places hereabouts. Trees were uprooted and the road to the track blocked. The track itself was like a canal and generally, it was impossible to continue, so the trains on their way out were stopped and a day was cut off the Kempton meet. Today the same card as yesterday is being run.

The Kempton which with the exception of what the elements did yesterday, has been very successful from a weather point of view and also from the angle of racing and attendance, concludes tomorrow afternoon. A good holiday crowd is expected to attend as it will be the last racing for five days, as Mount Royal race track, the next place where horses will do their stuff will not start until a week from tomorrow.

A good card has been arranged for get-away day at Kempton, and doubtless more than the "dyed in the wool" race fan will, if the weather is good, take advantage of a good afternoon's racing in a spot far enough out of the city to make it a change for the better.

ROSEMOUNT RECREATIVE CLUB.

A large and appreciative number of members and friends were present at the usual weekly whist drive and dance held last night in their club rooms, on Masson street, Rosemount, the president, W. G. Watkins presented the prizes to the following:

Ladies—1, Mrs. P. Culmer; 2, Mrs. Harwood; 3, Mrs. J. Riddle; 4, Miss Morrison; 5, Mrs. J. Scott.

Gentlemen—1, C. E. Chaissen; 2, S. Poppee; 3, J. Hillen; 4, J. Singer; 5, L. M. Watkins.

McGILL PURCHASED GRAND TRUNK CLUB'S FOUR-OARED SHELL.

The McGill University Rowing Club have purchased a "four" shell from the Grand Trunk Rowing Club. Coach Molmans intends to try to whip his raw recruits into rowing shape in time to try out the newly-bought shell in the meet at St. Catharines in two weeks time.

The shell purchased from the Grand Trunk Club is an old one, and will have to be repaired. At present it is at the Grand Trunk quarters. Coach Molmans' men are light and are practically green at the game, but he hopes to do well at the St. Catharines' meet if he can get the boys into good condition. He is teaching them to row in the Belgian style, being a quick snap stroke.

POLYPHONTES WON NEWMARKET ECLIPSE STAKES AT 11 TO 4

NEWMARKET, Eng., July 17.—Sol Joel's Polyphontes won the Eclipse Stakes for 1,500 pounds sterling, run here today. Polyphontes is by Polymelus, out of St. Josephine.

The Aga Khan's Zamboo was second and another of his horses Diophon was third. Thirteen ran.

The betting was Polyphontes 11 to 4 against; Zambo 9 to 2 against and Diophon 9 to 2 against.

Polyphontes won by a neck and two lengths separated Zambo and Diophon.

AMATEUR BASEBALL MANAGER SUSPENDED; SECOND TIME SINCE 1914

Manager B. Ross, of the Freedman Co. Baseball Club of the Spalding Industrial League, has been suspended by the executive head of the Spalding Athletic League. This decision has been reached after a written report had been received from the official umpire, who handled the Aird-Freedman game, which took place a few days ago, in which he reported Manager Ross for his uncalled actions in connection with the calling off of the said game on account of darkness.

President Champain Provencher said to The Star that he did not see any other alternative under the present circumstances than to suspend Manager Ross, for the next two games. Managers as well as other players must respect the officials in charge of their contests, added Mr. Provencher, as they are the representatives of the executive head of their organization.

This is the second player suspended in the Spalding Athletic League, since 1914. That year a player named Davis, of the Montefiore League, was suspended for a season for assault on an official arbitrator.

Secretary Gerald O'Neill, of the Spalding Baseball League, will notify today, the manager of the Freedman Co. team, of his suspension.

J. O. Anderson Sees France As Net Centre

NEW YORK, July 17.—(By Henry L. Farrell, United Press Staff Correspondent.)—"France is the coming nation on the court and probably will be a Davis Cup winner in a few years," James O. Anderson, captain of the Australian Davis Cup team, said here today. Anderson has just arrived from London, where he played in the British national championship tournament at Wimbledon and saw the French team sweep most every event in the field.

Rene Lacoste and Jean Borotra, it will be recalled, were the finalists and Lacoste won the title. They won the men's doubles and Borotra and Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen won the mixed doubles after she had won the women's singles championship.

"Lacoste has improved his game most amazingly," Anderson said. "They tell me the fellow keeps an index in which he has notes about the weaknesses and the strong points in the other fellow's game. He certainly takes his tennis seriously and he has a good game.

"He told me that he had learned most of his tennis in this country and that his experience in Davis Cup matches had developed him. He looks to me like one of the very best players on the courts. Borotra is also playing much better but he wasn't in shape to do his best at Wimbledon. Jacques Brugnon is also an improved player.

"Mlle. Lenglen has always been so perfect that it is difficult to imagine any improvement that she might accomplish in her game, but she looked more perfect than ever this year at Wimbledon. She wasn't tested for one single minute and there were some very good players in the tournament."

Anderson would not express an opinion about a match between Mlle. Lenglen and Miss Helen Wills, the American champion, but he admitted he "should like very much to see it."

Miss Elizabeth Ryan, the former California girl, who is back here for the first time in 13 years, was also lavish in her praise of the French girl's game. Miss Ryan, next to Mlle. Lenglen, has won more prizes and trophies than any tennis player in Europe and she is an intimate friend of the champion.

"She played better this year than I have ever seen her," Miss Ryan said. "Perhaps it was because she may have felt better, as her game always has been almost perfect."

Miss Ryan said she might not be able to make a trip to California. "There is nothing doing out there now, is there?" she said when asked if she intended to go to the coast.

She intends to enter the leading tournaments in the east and to play in the national championships.

CHICAGO, July 17.—Sammy Mandell, Rockford, Ill., and Solly Zeman, New York, lightweight champion contenders, meet tonight in 10 rounds at East Chicago.

Pal Moore and Harold Smith, 118 poundars, also will go 10 rounds.

Fishing was conceived by an irresponsible citizen seeking to reach new high levels in the art of exaggeration.

NOTES OF THE PRO. BOXERS AND WRESTLERS

THE following letter has been received about a well-known local athlete:

Philadelphia, Pa., July 11, 1925.

Sports Editor, Star:

Sir,—Arthur Giroux, the famous French - Canadian strong man, made his debut on the Philadelphia platform before the American Continental Weight-Lifters Association, whom he dazzled with his remarkable feats of strength.

To the great credit of the gigantic strong man let it be said that he performed his feats of strength exactly as the rules called for and under official ruling.

He performed a wonderful left arm military press with the feet together and body erect with 138 lbs., and a two hands military press with the feet together and body erect of 245 lbs. easily. His greatest feat with a two arm jerk taken to the shoulders in two movements, and jerked aloft, with a poundage of 338 lbs. He convinced the spectators that this poundage was well within his ability as he jerked it three times before he locked his arms.

The American Continental Weight Lifters' Association only allow the best lifters to perform, and they must perform with all weights weighed by reliable scales, and inspectors. This Giroux did, and won the admiration of all present. Enthusiasts came from all over the states to see the Montrealer perform.

Giroux leaves for New York this week to negotiate with other famous American and German lifters, and performs his great feats again on Saturday eve., July 18th in Jersey City.

A match is now under way to match Giroux with the wonderful German lifter Karl Morkl. If successful the match will take place in Philadelphia before the A. C. W. L. A. on the five title lifts.

George F. Jowett, President of the A. C. W. L. A. is the American manager for Giroux and is willing to back Giroux against any living man on strength lifts.

So far Canadian lifters have been a credit to the country they have come from, and we would welcome a match between Giroux and Delamarre and think it a chance for the Lac Douchette lifter to prove his goods. A purse will be given by the A.C.W.L.A. if the match can be arranged.

Giroux succeeded in surpassing the great Arthur Saxons' mighty one hand military press record of 126 lbs. feet together and body erect with his lift of 138 lbs., and beat the great A. Nordquest's lift in the two hands dead lift, standing erect, with feet together and back straight with 620 lbs.

JOHN BRADFORD,
American Continental Weight Lifters' Association.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 17.—The California Athletic Commission has decided to amend the Marquis of Queensbury rules to the extent of allowing a boxer knocked out of the ring 20 seconds instead of 10 to crawl back through the ropes and resume a fighting posture.

Commissioner Hanlon explained: "In some cases it would be impossible for a boxer knocked out of the ring to get back within 10 seconds. If he is still physically able to continue, it does not seem fair to rule him as knocked out. Twenty seconds will allow him sufficient time."

WEST NEW YORK, N. J., July 17.—In one of the most spectacular fights ever witnessed hereabouts, Joey Ross, of Hoboken, knocked out Jimmy Russo, flyweight contender from Grand Rapids, Mich., in less than two minutes of fighting of the first round of a scheduled ten-round bout last night. Ross weighed 112 pounds and Russo 110.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 17.—Harry Greb, Pittsburgh, middleweight champion of the world, defeated Maxie Rosenbloom, New York middleweight, in a ten-round no-decision bout here last night.

Greb led all the way, carrying the fight to Rosenbloom, shooting both hands to the head and body at will. Greb knocked Rosenbloom down for a count of seven in the seventh round.

WILLS HOPE ITS TRUE.

PARIS, July 17. — (A. P.) — When shown New York dispatches today stating that Jack Dempsey had signed for a match with him, Harry Wills, American negro heavyweight, who is in Europe for a brief vacation said:

"I hope the story is true, but I have heard nothing myself directly. Everything is in the hands of Paddy Mullins, who is fully empowered to sign for me, but I have had no word from him yet."

INVITATION QUOIT MEET AT MAISONNEUVE

The committee in charge of arranging competitions for the Royal Quoiting Club of Maisonneuve, will tomorrow afternoon, Saturday, hold an invitation tournament on their pitch at the Maisonneuve Athletic Ground, Notre Dame street east, commencing at 2.30 o'clock.

Members of quoiting clubs on the island of Montreal and suburbs are invited to compete in the event, which will be composed of friendly games. This competition is being held to further the tossing game in the East End and a large number of members of other clubs in the city are expected to show their skill with the quoits tomorrow.

An individual competition, similar to the one held for East End players, but this time open to members of clubs on the island, will be held on Saturday, July 25. Valuable prizes will be given to the various winners.

The competition for the G. O. Gagnon Trophy open to all Canada, will be played on Saturday, August 1. The cup is a handsome silver one and keen competition is expected before the winner is declared in the Canadian event. Medals will be presented to the various winners.

Someone has discovered July is the silliest month in the year. . . This explains the stories you've been reading lately about Marathon golfers.

INTER-CLUB DINGHY REGATTA WILL BE HELD ON LAKE ST. LOUIS ON SATURDAY

TORONTO, KINGSTON AND MONTREAL CREWS WILL SAIL FOR THE CURRIE CUP OVER POINTE CLAIRE COURSE

The annual dingny regatta between the Royal Canadian Yacht Club of Toronto, the Kingston Yacht Club and the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club, will be sailed on Lake St. Louis tomorrow.

This regatta originated in 1922 when crews from the R.C.Y.C., the K.Y.C., the R. St. L.Y.C., and the Pointe Claire Yacht Club sailed on local waters for a cup presented by Rear-Commodore J. A. Currie of the R. St. L.Y.C.

Four races were sailed and the Toronto crews, namely, Bill Walker and Bonner, Walter Windeyer and Townsend were victorious and took the cup back to Toronto with them. A return series was sailed in Toronto later in the year and once more the R. C. Y. C. crews won out. The R.C.Y.C. then put the Currie Cup up as a trophy for annual competition between two crews from each of the three clubs, Pointe Claire dropping out of the competition. A series was held in 1923 in each of the three cities, Toronto, Kingston and Montreal, and on total points the R.C.Y.C. just nosed out the K.Y.C. In 1924 it was decided to have only one series a year and to alternate between th three clubs. Toronto were hosts last year and won out and this year the race will be held on Lake St. Louis.

Each club will be represented by two crews and they will use six standard 14 ft. Aykroyd dinghies provided by the R. St. L.Y.C. The dinghies will be paired so as to make each pair as evenly matched as possible, taking into consideration the condition of hull and sails and then the boats to be used by the different clubs will be determined by drawing.

Three races will be sailed and the crews change boats after each race, so that each club sails each pair of dinghies, thus equalizing to a great extent any difference there may be in the speed of the boats.

The first race will start at 1:30 p.m. over a special triangular course to be laid off Pointe Claire and every effort will be made to get the races started on time so the three races can be sailed during the afternoon.

The judges will be H. J. McAdie, who will act as officer of the day, and with him will be J. Cowan, chairman of the sailing committee of the Pointe Claire Y.C. and one more to represent the visiting clubs.

The Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club will be represented by T. C. Darling, skipper, and Norman Duggan, and Alec Shearwood, skipper, and Ernie Manhire. The local crews have been sailing steadily all season and their chances in Saturday's series should be good.

Further details regarding the races will be published in Saturday's Star.

The R. St. L. Y. C. launch will be at the disposal of members and their friends and if there are a sufficient number who wish to see the races; the launch will go up to Pointe Claire, leaving Dorval at about 2:45.

D. & E. CLASSES WILL ALSO RACE.

Another event scheduled for Saturday is a race for the D. and E. classes of the Pointe Claire Yacht Club, this being the third of the series for the Pointe Claire Challenge Cup, Geraldine is now leading with Suzette second, and the others close behind and a good race is expected as competition is keen for the P. C. Cup. The course will be a special one, round a triangle formed by the starting buoy at Pointe Claire, the Chateauguay Buoy and the Black Channel Buoy, off Thomson's Point. This will keep the bigger boats away from the dinghies so that no confusion should result.

Many Entries For Races At The Island

Entries for the Junior Provincial Swimming and Diving Championships are starting to come in fast now. There should be a record number on hand, as St. Helen's Island on Saturday, as mostly all the local clubs have promised to be represented. The entries received last night are as follows::

Diving event — Douglas Patterson, North Branch "Y"; Fred Coleman, Verdun 500 S.C.; Jos. Watt, Verdun 500 S.C.; Ross Miller, Verdun 500 S.C.; Alf. Gross, Montreal S.C.; A. Gonnet, Montreal S.C.; Robt. Stevenson, Montreal S.C.

100 and 440 yards, speed races—Alf. Gross, Montreal S.C.

Breast and back stroke events—Lorne McMullen, Montreal S.C.

NOTES OF THE HARNESS TURF

TOLEDO, Ohio, July 17.—Sam Williams, driven by Walter Cox, was the winner of the 16th Renewal of the Matron stake for three-year-old trotters—foals of 1922—here yesterday.

The world's champion, Single G., performed true to form in the free-for-all pace, and had no trouble in taking the event in straight heats. Peter Fellows, a rank outsider in the betting, won the Fort Miami 2.11 trot, purse $3,000, beating Crawford, Tommy Murphy's Favorite, in the last two heats, after Murphy had won the first.

Harry Greb's ringing declaration that he will fight anybody any time is very radical. . . . It is likely to cause his expulsion from the boxers' union.

50-YEAR OLD MEXICAN NET STAR GIVES ALONSO FIGHT IN DAVIS CUP PLAY

MEXICO CITY, July 17.—(U.N.) — Spain easily won the first of the Davis Cup singles matches Thursday afternoon. Manuel Alonso brilliantly outplayed the 50-year-old Mexican player, Claude M. Butlin, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2.

Senor Flaquer, for Spain, defeated Ignacio de la Borbolla, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4.

Further matches will be played Saturday.

PROGRAM OF THE EAST END INDEPENDENTS

Guybourg have now been declared champions of the first half of the Montreal Independent League. The schedule has been broken up into two parts with the winners of each section to meet in a final play off at the end of the season.

Guybourg copped the honors when they defeated the snappy St. Arsene team headed by Oscar Major. The second half of the schedule will commence next Saturday, when Lachine meet St. Jerome, at Guyboro Park at 2 o'clock, while Hochelaga battle with Longueuil.

St. Arsene would not operate during the second half of the schedule and for the present five teams will make up the loop. It is the intention of President X. Narbonne to add another team to make a total of six or drop one of the clubs and make it a four team loop.

Several clubs have made applications to join the loop and there is a possibility that the group will grow to eight. In the meantime the press is investigating as the wishes no weak clubs in the circuit.

The dropping out of St. Arsene set twelve or more players on the market and the remaining teams expect to bolster up with the former Saints.

SPOOL COTTON PEOPLE HAD FINE FIELD DAY

The employes of the Canadian Spool Cotton Co., together with their families, held their annual sports at Tetreaultville. The results of the various events were as follows:

Girls' race, under 17 years—1st, N. Attenborough; 2nd, N. Shaw; 3rd, S. Young.

Girls' race, over 17 years—1st, G. Jacobs; 2nd, I. Current; 3rd, R. Cole.

Boys' race, under 19 years—1st, L. Barnett; 2nd, D. Coubrough; 3rd, J. Stevenson.

Girls' relay race, 5 a team—Boxmaking department.

Young men's potato race, under 20 years—1st, R. Laplerre; 2nd, D. Coubrough; 3rd, I. Young.

Married women's race—1st, Mrs. Moss; 2nd, Mrs. Jacks; 3rd, Mrs. Gartside.

Men's championship race—1st, C. Lariverre; 2nd, S. Parker; 3rd, J. Symington.

Girls' 3-legged race—1st, Miss Caroline; 2nd, I. Current; 3rd, E. Petit; 4th, E. McCaughan.

Men's relay race, 5 a team—Football team.

Married women's peanut race—1st, Mrs. Whitehead; 2nd, Mrs. McCormack; 3rd, Mrs. Clements.

Girls' sack race—1st, Miss McCartney; 2nd, Miss Jacobs; 3rd, Miss Petit.

Children's race—1st, Master Young; 2nd, Master Maher.

Men's handicap race, over 40 years—1st, P. St. Arneault; 2nd, J. Stevenson; 3rd, J. Hill.

Men's race, 30 to 40 years—1st, H. Fuller; 2nd, J. Carruthers; 3rd, J. Proctor.

At the conclusion of the program the prizes were distributed by Mrs. H. Roy Horton. The smaller children were not forgotten in this distribution, as they each were presented with toys.

Following the principal part of the program, an Intermediate League Football game was played between the company's team and the Sunnyside Football Club, which resulted in a draw of one goal each.

In the evening a most enjoyable dance was held in the company's dance hall, and altogether the day was thoroughly enjoyed by all those who attended.

UNITED STATES TO LOSE LONGWOOD BOWL

BOSTON, Mass., July 17.—(Star Special.)—For the first time in 33 years of competition the Longwood Bowl, one of the most prized trophies in American lawn tennis, will pass into the custody of a foreigner. That was settled yesterday afternoon when the last of the American hopes, Fritz Mercur, Frank L. Luce, Jr.; Arnold Jones and Dr. Carl Fischer, were eliminated respectively by Gerald L. Patterson, of Australia; Zeuzo Shimizu, of Japan; John B. Hawkes, of Australia; and Takeichi Harada, of Japan.

The forethought of those who made the draw has given us a pair of international, though non-American, contests in the semi-finals this afternoon. Hawkes and Harada will meet in a match which may swing either way, and Patterson will play Shimizu, a match in which the big Australian must be regarded as the favorite.

BROOKLINE, Mass., July 17.—Gerald L. Patterson, Australia, yesterday defeated Fritz Mercur, Bethlehem, Pa., last year's winner of the Longwood bowl singles tournament, in the fifth round of competition in the 33rd annual tournament at Chestnut Hill. The Australian won in straight sets, 7-5, 7-5, 6-3.

J. B. Hawkes, another member of the Australian Davis Cup team, also reached the semi-finals by defeating Arnold Jones, of Providence, R.I., in straight sets. The scores were 6-4, 6-3, 6-4.

In London they broadcast golf matches. . . . And on those occasions it matters not whether you duck when some one yells "fore!"

Pirates Have Succumbed To The Braves

NEW YORK, July 17.—(U.N.)—After hanging on to top honors through two series with the heaviest competition in the league, the Pirates have been knocked into second place by the weakest team in the National circuit.

A miserable defeat by the Boston Braves Thursday ended the Pirates' stay in first place and returned that office to the Giants.

But Pittsburgh's defeat was not even honorable. The game at Boston, where the Pirates also lost Wednesday, was loosely played, each side making four errors and lasted 10 innings, until Genewich scored on a single by Hood, rookie second baseman. The game ended, 9 to 8.

Meantime the Giants again won over the Cardinals, 7 to 5, Wayland Dean pitching all the way and allowing only seven hits.

The Phillies jumped two steps in the league standing Thursday, going from sixth into fourth place by virtue of Clarence Mitchell's 3 to 0 shut out of the Cubs. The Dodgers aided the Phillies by defeating the Reds, 5 to 2.

The Athletics were still three points ahead of the Senators after Thursday's games. Philadelphia continued its successful invasion of the West by winning another contest from the White Sox, this time by a score of 12 to 5. The Senators still found it difficult to defeat the Tigers, but managed it after 10 innings, winning, 2 to 1.

Outstanding in the day's left-handed records was the accomplishment of the Red Sox in making eight errors in their game with the Browns, a game which the St. Louis team took, 11 to 6.

The Yankees lost another game, the Indians making up for the result on Wednesday by winning, 17 to 9.

CRAIG CAMPBELL'S SOCCER NEWS AND GOSSIP

MONTREAL LEAGUE.
SECTION A.

C.N.R. vs. Vickers—R. Walker.
Nomads vs. Lachine—T. Buchan.
Printers vs. Calvin-Verdun—D. C. Grundle.
Highlanders vs. C.P.R.—E. French.

SECTION B.

Blue Bonnets vs. Windsor Hotel—S. C. Burgess.
Corinthians vs. S.O.E.—F. W. Wainwright.
Emard vs. National Breweries—H. S. Lyons.
Imperial Tobacco vs. Rosemount—J. Conlin.

INTERMEDIATE LEAGUE.
SECTION "A."

Sunnyside vs. Imp. Oil Refineries at Tetreaultville—G. Harrison.
Wood Hall vs. Fairmount at Verdun—J. Smallshaw.
Park Extension vs. Gurney at Park Extension—T. J. Callinan.
Can. Spool vs. Montreal South at Maisonneuve—L. H. Christie.

SECTION "B."

Mt. Royal Hotel vs. Nat. Brick at Rockland Park—E. H. Croucher.
Victoria vs. Maisonneuve at Alexandra Park—P. F. Conlen.
4th Divisional Train vs. Swiss Soccer Club at Maisonneuve—J. H. Miller.
Moco (Valleyfield) vs. Calvary Brotherhood at Valleyfield—A. M. Jack.
Iberville vs. Greenfield Park Ex-Service Men at 14th Ave. and Masson St.—J. Southern.

The full band of the Royal Highlanders in their gorgeous uniforms of red and gold will be at the Stadium tomorrow to play stirring tunes, and therefore, although four games are down for play tomorrow in "A" Section of the Montreal League, the leading attraction will be seen on McGill Stadium, where Royal Highlanders clash with C.P.R. The fact that C.P.R. are practically out of the running for league honors, having had so many points deducted through playing three professionals, does not in any way detract from the interest. Highlanders, who can be styled as the mystery team of the season, considering their ability, drew a good game with Sons of Scotland last Saturday, and on Wednesday beat Canadian National, 4—0, in a Players' Benefit Cup game, and while allowing that the latter event lacked something of league value, it nevertheless showed Highlanders in a trim equal to anything in their section. All this goes to show that C.P.R. will face a team fully capable of beating them, and the Angus people are quite aware of what awaits them. I have no hesitation in saying that this should turn out to be one of the best league games of the season. McGill Stadium, 3:30.

Canadian National and Canadian Vickers appear at Alexandra Park. Both won their games last week, the former beating Lachine away, a worthy victory, and the latter downing Nomads at Longue Pointe. This game is well worth the support of Point people, and support means so much, for it is the presence of spectators that bring out the best in players.

Printers and Calvin-Verdun meet on Rosemount's ground. Iberville and Masson, and it is extremely difficult to hazard even a small guess as to the outcome. Printers came a wallop last Saturday, being trimmed 4—1 by St. Paul Town. But this sort of thing can be changed, and will, if the committee can help it, and they are having a very good try. Calvin-Verdun have not been blessed with too much good fortune this season, the Verdun end, in an official sense, being almost non-existent. They found C.P.R. too good, as others have before them, but on even chances ought to at least divide the points with Printers.

Nomads entertain Lachine at Beaumont Avenue ground, and this is a game full of possibilities for good play, and if Lachine have their best team out, they should win.

The "B" Section and the Intermediate League have a good list of games to play. National Breweries will have to be very careful of Emard, or the latter may surprise.

Maisonneuve will take a bunch of supporters with them to the Point, where they play the undefeated Victorias.

There was intense disappointment in Maisonneuve last evening at the inability to see the Canadian Spool play Imperial Oil for the Gagnon Cup, as the afternoon's "slight shower" had left the pitch one series of lakes, lakelets and cascades. One glance was sufficient for the referee to say that a match was entirely out of the question.

All the notables that promised to attend arrived on the scene and shared in the disappointment, including Hon. Nap. Seguin, Governor of Bordeaux Gaol; Walter Reed, M.P.P.; Judge Monet, Alderman Lalonde, Alderman Vallaincourt, etc.

It was arranged to play the game next Tuesday.

The league game between Molsons and Thistles has been postponed owing to the former going away on their annual picnic.

Arthur Fairclough, manager of Leeds United, F.C., of the English First Division, has been in Montreal the last few days, and visited his son's grave. Young Fairclough was accidentally killed about three years ago. The Leeds United manager witnessed the Carsteel-Ulster United game last Saturday, and while pleased with the play, smiled as he said he didn't think his club would require any of the men engaged. Well, a grain of truth is worth a ton of flattery. Mr. Fairclough sails from New York for home tomorrow.

The Intermediate League Discipline Committee met last evening in the Army and Navy Club Rooms, and handed out one very severe sentence, Davis, of Mount Royal Hotel, being suspended for the rest of the season for striking Referee Henderson.

Burgess, Montreal South, cannot play until after August 1. The cases of Dunlop and Ewen, of 4th Divisional Train, were left over until next Thursday, meanwhile both can play.

Wood Hall vs. Fairmount at Verdun—Rosemount defeated Iberville in the Gagnon Cup by 4—0.

Only two games were played last evening in the Mid-Week League owing to the state of the grounds.

Eatonians turned up with 7 men, and after waiting until 7 o'clock, the referee awarded the game to Canadian Railroader. Games that were played:

M.A.A.A., 5; Rosemount B'hood., 0.
C.P. Rec., 1; Glen Yards, 2.

Carsteel enter the second Connaught Cup game with Ulster United, tomorrow, with a goal in hand. Toronto people have talked of this particular meeting all week, and many league games are being called off so as to allow players and officials to witness what is expected to be an historic match. In fact, Hamilton have "closed down" for the day.

Montrealers had ample evidence last Saturday that Carsteel were the better side, and by a good margin on the play. Ulster freely admit it themselves, but what is worrying the local supporters is the fact that Carsteel have only one goal. Is this sufficient when boarding the "lion in his lair"? That, no one knows, as yet. But that blessed hope, which always springs eternal within us is plainly in evidence.

The Carsteel "luck" in the matter of being free from injuries, came to an end when McAdam fell and injured his arm. While he will make the trip, Jacks goes along with the team, to take the outside right position if "Pete" is unable to play. No other changes are expected, though Robb, Johnson and Cunningham also travel with the team. They feel justly confident of taking the series, and travelling west to meet the prairie champions in the grand finals, and they have our very best wishes in this.

Ulster will very likely rearrange their team, Watt going left, and Williams centre; Johnson falling back to his old position, left-back, with Rankin crossing over to the right. In other ranks there may not be any change.

That it will be a dour battle leaves little doubts. The stakes are high, and all Toronto soccerdom will turn out to witness the struggle between the two best teams in Canada, and possible Connaught winners.

Carsteel's probable line-up is:—Robertson, Smith, Houlson, Buchanan, Thompson, McKean, McAdam or Jacks, Brown, MacLaine, McKenzie and Sanford.

Reserves: Robb, Johnson and Cunningham.

The team leave this evening from Windsor Station, but a large number of supporters are going over the Canadian National.

ST. GABRIEL QUOIT CLUB STARTS ITS SEASON

The above newly formed club, operating in Point St. Charles, on Charlevoix street, started active operations against the St. Lawrence Club, invited to oppose them in their opening game.

St. Gabriel presented a formidable line up with the result that a defeat was handed out to the visitors. During the play, marked enthusiasm was shown especially when the more experienced players hooked up. The St. Lawrence Club were treated royally and a return game is being arranged. Scores follow:—

Robins vs. Shamrocks at Fletcher's Field, Diamond No. 2 at 2 o'clock.

Bantam League.

Dodger vs. St. Gabriel, on the latter club's grounds.

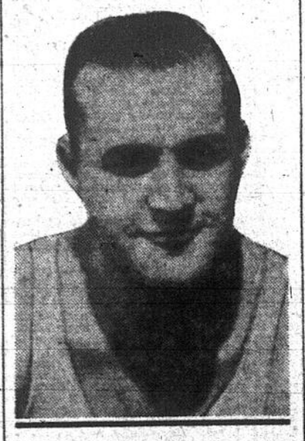
In a Bantam League fixture Tecumsah defeated Dodgers by a score of 12 to 4. Keough twirled a good game for the winners, striking out ten of his opponents.

Senior Spalding League.

Mutual Life and Citizen Ins. Co., will meet Eamon Co. at Fletcher's Field tonight at 6:30 o'clock.

There ought to be an interesting hookup between the popularity of the rabbit ball and the appointment of Rabbit Maranville as manager of the Cubs. . . . Will the advanced class in wise-cracking take this one home and do a little earnest night work over it, please?

Elder Barlow



President Cartierville Boat Club, which will hold the Eastern Division Canoe Championship this year.

Jack Kearns Gets On His High Horse

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 17.—(U.P.)—Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, wrathfully denounced the heavyweight today for signing to box for Tex Rickard in New York, and said that any matches Dempsey made must have his manager's O. K.

"Just let Dempsey know that until our contract expires I am going to approve or disapprove, as the case may be, of any matches he tries to make for himself," Kearns said.

"It's all right with me if the champion arranges a bout or two for himself, but I am the one man who knows Dempsey's value, and I am going to see that he doesn't fight a couple of bums for nothing."

NORTH BRANCH PLAY M.A.A.A.

Today at 6:15 the Excelsior play Central "Y" at Atwater Park.

Tomorrow at 2 o'clock at the Shamrock grounds the Montreal City and District Senior Amateur Baseball League will furnish another sterling doubleheader that is sure to satisfy the large league following.

The first game brings together the Columbus ball team and the C.P.R. The Knights, in their last two starts, have beaten the Monts, and tied with the X's. They have been greatly strengthened, and in Rene Fournier they have one of the best hurlers in the city. C.P.R. won their first game last week-end, and are out to show that it was no fluke.

The second and feature game brings into action two of the best teams in the city, the North Branch "Y" team, who have yet to lose a game, and the M.A.A.A. ball team, second to them in the standing. Both squads are out for action, and the large number of fans who are coming to the Shamrock grounds are in for plenty of thrilling baseball.

The next day, July 19, will see Excelsiors meet Nationals at 2, while the Montefiore play Columbus. This bill is certain to draw another record crowd to the Shamrock grounds.

Batteries—Colombus; Ryan and Byrne, C.P.R.—Holland and McCauley.

M.A.A.A.—Drysdale, Chalmers and Hutchison.

N.B. "Y"—Eckstein and Carr.

DREXEL PARK, STADIUM, Brooklyn, N.Y., July 17.—(U. N.)—A sudden downpour of rain interrupted the fight between Pete Sarmiento and Jack Sharkey at the end of the third round of their scheduled 12 round bout here last night.

During the first three rounds it was apparent, however, that the man who stopped Phil Rosenberg, world's bantam-weight champion, in Cleveland recently, was finding a more formidable opponent in Sharkey.

Both Sharkey and Sarmiento scaled at 122 pounds.

THE DAILY ROUND

By COLONEL CLICK

The First Putt—Cyril Tolley, former British Amateur Champion

Never rush the first putt of the day, I recommend the taking of at least three times as much time on the first green as on any other one on the course. Have a good look at the line and the texture of the grass to determine the force necessary. In looking at the ball, select one specific point. You must confine your gaze to that one point, be it pimple, recess, or dimple, and keep your gaze on that one little mark at the back of the ball.

A RULE WORTH KNOWING.

How far back can a player go to drop a ball that has been lifted from a water hazard, supposing that by walking back several yards he can improve his chances for playing his next stroke over the hazard?

The rules prescribe no limit to the distance a player may go back to drop, so long as he keeps the point where the ball crossed the margin of the hazard between himself and the hole.

THE MARKER THAT MOVED.

A Chicago golfer was having his troubles with a slice and on practically every tee shot found himself prospecting the rough to the right of the fairway. Finally the wear and tear on his nerves began to tell. A good long tee shot wound up in dense rough, and when he came up his caddie was threshing about looking for the ball without success. His patience exhausted he asked rather sharply, "Caddie, why in —— didn't you mark the ball?"

"I did, sir."

"What did you mark it by?"

"I marked it by a bird sitting on a weed, but he flew away."

HOLLAND AND FRANCE START EUROPEAN DAVIS CUP FINAL TOMORROW

NOORDWIJK, Holland, July 17. —The lawn tennis teams of France and Holland open play here tomorrow in the final round of the European zone competition for the Davis Cup. Holland won her way into the final by defeating India, while France disposed of Great Britain in the semi-final round.

The winner of the meeting here will come against the victor in the United States zone to decide which shall have the right to challenge the United States, holder of the cup.

ST. ETIENNE AT KENSINGTON

The strong St. Etienne team from the northeast part of the city will be seen in action Saturday afternoon at Atwater Park, the guests of Kensington. The following players will be seen on the St. Etienne line-up: G. Guimond, c.; E. Brunet, p; C. Hande, 1st base; A. Charrette, 2nd b; V. Lamarre, s.s.; E. Legare, 3rd b; Dinelle, Gilbert, Labreche, fielders, with Beauvais and Bourregard, subs. Kensington will have their hands full to put down these boys, so the fans may be sure of seeing a fine game, which will start at 2 o'clock, weather permitting. Don't forget Atwater Park, Kensington's home for Saturday afternoons.

Lachine Locks Quoiters Want to Meet Others

The Lachine Locks Quoit Club desire to arrange a series of home and home games with the several clubs in Montreal and vicinity, such clubs as Montrealers, Royals, of Maisonneuve, North Enders, St. Lawrence, the C. N. R., and Ormstown. This would make a very interesting schedule.

The Lachine Club would also like to arrange a friendly game of two players from any of the above clubs or any unattached players, Payne and Manhire will represent Lachine, and the game to be 61 points.

Our object in view is to encourage and develop the grand old game of quoits and to bring it back to the standard it once enjoyed.

Address all communications to the Secretary, Dombrico Hotel, Lachine.

The greatest need of the Athletics seems to be a schedule which does not expire by July 1.

PITCHES NO-HIT GAME BUT LOSES

"Doc" Gross, pitching for the Benedicts in the Senior Spalding Montefiore Baseball League, turned in a no-hit game.

Owing to a couple of errors and wild throws by his teammates, the Y.M.H.A., who won the game, were able to push two runners across the plate, whilst his team-mates, although they touched Erhlick for six hits, could not bunch them, except in the last inning, when a double by Levitt and a single by Block scored their only run.

What made Gross's performance on the mound all the more startling was the fact that he did not allow any of his offerings to be hit out of the infield. His three outfielders combined, had no put-outs or assists for the day.

Erhlick, for the winners, also turned in a nice game and although touched for six hits, kept them scattered. Zackon at third for the winners, also put up a creditable performance.

New High Creations Locally—Wall St. Strong—Wholesale Grocery Merger

LOCAL LIST GAVE STRONG DISPLAY; FEW NEW HIGHS

Stock prices were strong on the Montreal Stock Exchange this morning, many issues scoring substantial advances which in some cases carried the prices into new high territory. The Asbestos issues were again in active leadership, though not as prominent as yesterday, and tended to rally from last night's closing levels. The common opened with an overnight recovery of 2 points at 70, rose to 72 then reacted to 68, unchanged. The preferred sold up to 102⅛ and closed at 101½, a net recovery of 3 points.

Consolidated Smelters was also one of the features, being practically as active as Asbestos and further distinguishing itself by advancing to the new high of 98⅜ after opening at 96. The final sale was at 96, up 2¾. Dominion Textile scored an advance to a new peak, being up ½ at 81¼ and Canadian Converters rose sharply to the new high of 50½, a gain of 2½ points. This is the highest level touched by Converters since September, 1923, and earlier in that year it touched a high of 103.

Paper stocks were again featured by strength in Price Brothers, which advanced 3½ points to the new high of 48½. The previous record high since the stock was split up in 1921 was attained in 1922 when it sold at 47¾. Wayagamack was another strong paper stock, gaining 2 to 48. Spanish River and Laurentide were unchanged. While Howard Smith preferred reacted a point from the high attained yesterday after several days of steadily rising price levels.

Montreal Power touched 193, within ½ of the record high, later reacting to 192¾, up ¼. Brazilian was firmer at 57¼, up ⅜, and Winnipeg Electric was slightly easier at 49⅜ after opening at 49½. Other features included Atlantic Sugar up ¾, Bell Telephone up 1½, B. C. Fishing up 1, Cement up ½, Canners up ½, and Shawinigan unchanged.

Total number of listed shares traded in was 7,481, as compared with 7,447 yesterday morning.

OFFER TO CONSTRUCT 250-TON PAPER MILL

WINNIPEG, Man., July 17. — (Star Special.)—Assurance that they were prepared to go ahead immediately with the construction of a $5,000,000 paper mill of 250 tons daily capacity in the Greater Winnipeg district, if the Dominion Government entered into a contract providing pulpwood and water power rights, were made last night by George M. Seaman, of the Seaman Paper Company, Chicago, and E. W. Backus, of the Backus-Brooks interests in Canada and the United States, who appeared in person at a public meeeting at which were gathered over 600 business men. Their project was approved by a standing vote. The Oxford Paper Company, of New York, was associated with the two above-mentioned companies, in the offer to construct the mill.

"My only intention is to build as quickly as possible a 250-ton mill that will not manufacture pulpwood for sale, but will manufacture newsprint entirely," said Mr. Seaman, while Mr. Backus declared, "Mr. Seaman has committed himself to erecting a mill in Greater Winnipeg, and I am going to stick by him in that determination."

Pulpwood manufacture in this province is complicated by rival manufacturing interests, since the Government has just granted the Spanish River Company a thousand square mile timber berth for a hundred ton mill in Manitoba.

Who's Who in the Street

George M. McKee, whose appointment as president of Port Alfred Pulp and Paper was ratified at the corporation's annual meeting yesterday, has been associated with the Canadian pulp and paper industry since 1912, his connection commencing with the organization of Donnacona Paper Company, of which he remained managing director until 1922, when he left for Ogdensburg for the organization of the Algonquin Paper Company of which he is president. Prior to 1912 Mr. McKee was connected with the same industry in the United States for 15 years.

MERGER OF FINANCIAL CONCERNS EFFECTED

A further important step in the broadening out of the scope of operations of the Manufacturers' Finance Corporation, has been made by the taking over of the Bankers Discount Corporation, Limited, of Montreal, on a share for share basis. The latter company is capitalized at $500,000, 8 per cent preferred stock, of which $216,000 is paid up. This will give the Manufacturers' Finance Corporation a paid-up capital of $1,250,000, making it the largest independent finance company operating in Canada. Senator Wood, of Johnsburgh, Vt. president of the Brattleboro Trust Company, and chairman of the Blue Sky Committee, will be added to the Board of Directors of the Manufacturers' Finance Corporation. The company has declared their sixth half-yearly dividend at the rate of 8 per cent.

The directors of the company include: President, Hon. J. A. McDonald, Shediac, N.B. vice-president Nova Scotia Trust Co.; vice-president, J. A. Cameron, K.C., Toronto, formerly Master in Chambers, Osgoode Hall, Toronto; secretary treasurer, Wm. M. McDonald, Toronto, secretary-treasurer, Amherst Pianos, Ltd; directors: Hon. P. E. Blondin, Montreal, Post Master General of Canada 1918-1921; Hon. G. D. Robertson, Ottawa, former Minister of Labor; Hon. H. H. Stevens, Vancouver, former Minister of Trade and Commerce; Lieut.-Col. Boyd Anderson, Moncton, N.B.; Col. D. R. Street, Ottawa, director and secretary of the Ottawa Electric Co.; Lieut.-Col. John A. Cooper, Toronto, past-president of the Canadian Press Association; Col. Robert Starke, Montreal, president Starke-Scybold, Limited; William Duff, M.P., director Nova Scotia Trust Co.; Chas. B. Howard, president and managing director B. C. Howard Co., Ltd., Sherbrooke; D. A. Morrison, Amherst, N.S., president J. L. Wilson & Co., Amherst.

It is understood that additional mergers will be consummated in the near future, which will increase this company's paid-up capital to about $2,000,000.

HIGHER RANGES FOR MANY ISSUES IN WALL STREET

NEW YORK, July 17. — (Special to Star from Our Own Wall Street Correspondent).—Wall Street was still in optimistic mood this morning and bought stocks on the opening of the market. The demand for United States Steel common and Southern Railway was particularly good. Southern Railway started ¾ higher at 100⅛, a new peak price for all time. Steel common in the meanwhile was bid up to 118⅝, the best quotation for it on the current movement. The strength of those two representative issues stimulated the buying of shares generally, and new highs for the year were registered by a number of issues.

A feature of the early trading was the buying of the oil stocks. That long dormant became quite active, large transactions appearing on the tape. One block of 7,000 shares of Marland was sold in the first two minutes, the price gaining half a point. Independent Oil and Gas, Phillips, Texas, and Standard of New Jersey advanced. Sinclair Consolidated was exceptionally active at rising prices with sales around 22⅝.

Fools continued to bid specialties up. Foundation Company advanced 2 points on the first sale. General Electric gained 2½ to 289. Utilities were also strong. Havana Electric was bid up 1½ points and Standard Gas and Electric one point.

Buying of Kennecott was the feature of the copper group. Most of the other coppers were steady around previous closing levels.

Southern Railway opened up about a point higher at the record top of 100⅝. Oils changed hands in large volume, one block of 7,000 shares of Marland common appearing on the tape in the first few minutes of trading. Foundation Company showed an initial gain of 2 points and American Waterworks 1.

Prices forged steadily upward despite a heavy volume of profit taking in some of the recent strong spots. General Electric quickly moved up 3 points; Foundation Company 2 and American Waterworks common, Havana Electric, Savage Arms, Burroughs adding. Machine and Fairbanks Morse sold a point or more higher before the end of the first half hour.

U. S. Steel common crossed 118 to the highest prices since last spring on buying influenced by the publication of a favorable second quarter earnings report by the Republic Steel Company. Interest in the rails was divided between Southern Railways which extended its early gain by moving up to 101½ and Frisco common, which touched a new peak at 85⅝. Chandler moved heavy.

Operations for the rise went steadily ahead throughout the forenoon despite the appearance of scattered short selling, under which Maxwell "B" certificates, Chrysler and Virginia Carolina Chemical yielded 3 to 3½ points. At the same time public utilities encountered extensive profit-taking which forced North American down 2 points.

Sustained buying of the oil shares or indications of favorable second quarter earnings and the strong tone of the Southern and southwestern rails enabled the general market to press forward.

Pivotal industrials followed the leadership of U. S. Steel and American Can, the latter achieving a new peak price of 203½. Sloss-Sheffield Steel mounted 3½ points to a new high for the year at 71¼ and U. S. Cast Iron Pipe spurted up 3½ points before noon. Manhattan Elevated issues were actively bought on a court decision against a modified lease to the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. Call money renewed at 3½ per cent.

U.S. Steel crossed 119 in the early afternoon. Advances halted and reactions of slight proportions were general. Features up to 1:30 included:—

C.P.R., 142⅝; Cast Iron Pipe, 158 to 163½ to 162¼; Am. Can., 202 to 203½ to 202½; Smelting, 106 to ⅝ to ½; Baldwin, 115¼ to 116⅜ to 115⅝ to 114½; Beth. Steel "B," 43½ to 42⅝ to 43¼ to 43; Chrysler, 112¼ to 108½; Gen. Can., 87 to 89 to 82⅜; Chandler, 34 to 33 to 34 to 31⅝; Elec. Power, 39⅜ to ⅛ to ¼; Gen. Motors, 86¼ to 85⅞; Gen. Electric, 287 to 289⅜ to 287½; Gulf State Steel, 83¾ to 84¼ to 83⅜; Int. Paper, 67⅜ to 66⅛; Mack Truck, 185½ to 186⅜ to ¼; Nor. American, 58⅛ to 56⅜ to 57; Pan-American B, 77½ to 76⅝ to 77½ to 77; So. Railway, 100⅜ to 101⅝ to 100¼; Rubber, 64 to 62½; Steel, com., 118⅝ to 119¼ to 118½.

MORE COMPANIES FORMED

New companies to the number of 83, with authorized capital of $23,091,000 were reported to The Monetary Times during the week ended July 11, 1925, compared with 54 companies with $12,209,800 capital the previous week, and with 51 companies with $13,608,800 capital the corresponding week of last year.

FIRE LOSSES ARE LOWER

Fire losses in Canada during the week ended July 15 are estimated by The Monetary Times at $386,400, compared with $568,100 the previous week, and with $1,031,700 the corresponding week of last year.

Topics of the Street

The local stock market appeared to be throwing off the unsettling influence of the Asbestos merger disappointment much more quickly than the majority of people anticipated. Some of the leaders which were adversely affected yesterday made prompt rallies, while a few worked into new high price ground.

As for the Asbestos issues, they acted somewhat feverishly, as was natural following the striking reaction of seventeen points yesterday. The Street continued to feel that there is still hope of another get-to-gether on the merger proposition, but just how this could be done or when it might occur remained purely speculative. The great need of rounding up the scattered elements of the industry and putting them into compact and profitable shape seems to be the chief basis of hope that the scheme will not be allowed to drop.

Following yesterday's rally of two points from the low to 68 at the close, Asbestos common opened at 70 this morning, and within a short time touched 72. Further liquidation ensued on this strong spot, and a reaction of four points followed. This put the price back even with yesterday's close. The preferred was steadier, opening at 102 to 1½, compared with 98½ at the close yesterday, but later reacting to 101, closing at ½.

With few unimportant exceptions the general tone was firm to buoyant. Smelters, Price Bros., Converters and Wayagamack furnished the bulk of the new high at 98⅜.

Dominion Textile rallied to its former high at 81 and then created a new one at 81¼. Converters moved to a new high for the year at 89½, up 2½, and Price Bros. worked up to 48½, a gain of 3½. Wayagamack moved up to 48, a new high on the recent movement, but comparing with the previous high for the year of 52 in February.

The market for the utilities was also strong. Brazilian rallying to 57¼, after having been unsettled by yesterday's events. Power rallied to 193 and Shawinigan was firm at the peak price of 155.

Strength was also displayed by Cement at 103, Atlantic Sugar 32, Bell Telephone 138½, and Dominion Canners at 106½.

The newsprint group was steady, with Abitibi at 67, Laurentide 79 and Spanish River 102¾. Prices of B.C. Fish at 47 and Winnipeg Electric at 49½ were fractionally easier.

Public participation in the New York stock market again has been invited by the attractive sight of rising prices and Wall Street gossip suggests that should the present bullish enthusiasm continue, it is likely that next week will see a resumption of "two million share days," which were common and actually expected in the giant post-election boom.

Yesterday, under the leadership of American Can, which surged to new record highs above the 200 mark, the market advanced in virtually every group and a buoyant undertone was strong enough to resist attempts at depression by profit-taking. The further easing of call money to 3½ per cent also facilitated buying and helped to add to the volume of trading.

In practically every section of the list earnings statements were bullish, and indications point to the possibility of further record averages on the part of the industrials.

Even in the oil stocks, which in the past had held more than their share of fluctuations substantial improvement in second earnings statements is expected.

For many oil companies net may be larger than any other quarter in their histories, and it would not be surprising if in one or more instances the present dividend rate for the full year will be earned or nearly earned in the second quarter.

A factor of decided importance in the current big oil earnings is that they don't include any appreciation of inventories, with the result that inventories of crude and refined oils are still carried at cost or at market prices of the start of 1925. Since that time prices for crude oil have become $1 to $1.25 a barrel, and on gasoline as much as $2 a barrel, higher than they are being carried on the books.

Among the important companies soon to make public quarterly statements are Phillips, California Petroleum, Marland, Tidewater and Skelly. These should give an accurate guage of the entire industry, although the large Standard Oil units, Texas Company, Sinclair, Humble and others do not make quarterly statements. That practically every company will end the year with the best profits on record is the general belief in Wall Street.

GROCERY MERGER OF WHOLESALERS ON IN ONTARIO

TORONTO, July 17.—(Star Special).—A merger that will take in twenty-seven wholesale grocery houses in Ontario and at least three in the city of Toronto: Eby Blaine & Co., Medland Bros., and the Thomas Kinnear Company, is in process of organization which the promoters expect will be perfected within a couple of weeks. The amount of capital involved will be from $4,000,000 to $6,500,000.

The new concern is really the formation of a new company. Marlan, Woolnough, of Niagara Falls, and J. Simpson, wholesale grocery of Guelph, have been interested, local merchants say, in perfecting the details of the organization which is being directed by the Continental Commercial Securities Company, of Chicago, one of the subsidiary concerns of Chicago's strongest banking institutions.

It is understood that the local members entering this merger are to receive cash for their stock of goods up to at least 50 per cent., and to take stock or mortgage bonds for the balance. The equipment, such as buildings, etc., will be taken over and stock issued for the price agreed upon.

H. D. Whitehouse, secretary-treasurer of the Continental Commercial Securities Co., of Chicago, is in the city looking over conditions and will make a thorough survey of the whole Ontario field. Speaking of the proposed merger today, Mr. Whitehouse said their company was merely advancing the money for the consummation of the new organization, rendered necessary by an accumulation of conditions that would have to be overcome if business was to be continued at a profit. Under the new organization there will be no overlapping of salesmanship and travellers will be very greatly reduced in number.

Freight rates being high, under the new system great waste and much money will be saved, it is anticipated, by shipments which will be sent from the nearest centres to the merchants, while lower rates be secured for car load lots from more distant points. The buying, which will be done in very large quantities, will also show a material saving, which will be employed in the reduced prices to the consumer in order to meet the competition of the chain stores and buying syndicates.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 17.—Revival of inquiry for oil company liens marked today's early bond trading. With substantially increased earnings shown by the first of the large petroleum producers to report results of second quarter operations, buying of various issues was encouraged. Skelly's 6½'s and other convertibles following the upward trend of stocks. Virginia Carolina Chemical 7's responded to the announcement that a cash distribution would be made on this issue out of proceeds derived from the sale of subsidiary shares. Influenced by the rise in Frisco common to a new high record, bonds of this company were active, leading a moderate advance in the medium priced rails. Foreign and U. S. Government obligations showed little change.

SMELTERS NEW PEAK PRICE

TORONTO, July 17.—Led by Consolidated Smelters and Canada Bread common, the market on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning took a general swing upward. Smelters was run up to the new peak of 98¾, and though it eased from this mark, the noon close at 97½, was an advance of 2¾ points. Bread common gained 3½ points to 43½; Bread "B" pfd. a ½ at 90½, and Brazilian ⅝ at 57¼. B. C. Fishing and Atlantic Sugar experienced moderately heavy trading, the former advancing ⅝ and sugar a ¾. Trading was the heaviest of any session for some time.

Little Change Shown In Wholesale Trade

Reports to Bradstreet's do not denote very much change in the condition of wholesale lines of merchandise, for which considering the season of the year, travellers on the road are meeting with a fairly good demand. The outlook on the growing crops at the present moment is very encouraging and is causing an optimistic feeling in trade generally. The latest estimate is now 365,000,000 bushels with reports from the grain growing districts that prospects are the best, and that no damage of any sort has so far made its appearance. Canadian and American visible wheat supply show a decrease of over two million bushels. The growing apple crop is good, estimaters placing it at 95 per cent of last year's crop. Falling off in the demand for dairy produce and lower offers over the cable curtailed sales this week.

An easier feeling developed in the refined sugar market and prices were reduced 10 cents per hundred pounds, notwithstanding the heavy exports of this commodity to the European markets. There is more activity reported in the boot and shoe trade. The iron and steel market is on the quiet side, but the hardware trade is fairly active. Reports on the outlook for western trade show improvement and the prospects for fall trade is very encouraging. City retail trade is fairly busy. Collections are looking better.

MORE BUOYANCY AROUND CLOSING IN WALL STREET

WALL ST., 1:30 p.m.—Week end profit taking competed with new buying in the afternoon when the general movement became quite irregular. Merchandise and gas shares were conspicuously strong. Punta Alegre Sugar fell 2 to 35, the year's lowest. International Shoe, Fairbanks-Morse, People's Gas, American Sumatra Tobacco and Montgomery Ward were lifted 2 to 3 points, the last mentioned crossing 60 for a new high level for the year. Heavy selling of Wheeling and Lake Erie 1st pfd. depressed it nearly three points.

Buoyancy was resumed in the last hour, Steel touching 119¼, and Am. Can, 204¼ by 2:30 p.m. Other features at that time included: Am. Can, 204¼; Anaconda, 43; Baldwin, 114⅝; Beth. Steel B, 43; Cast Iron, 163⅜; Gen. Elec., 289½; Int. Paper, 67; Gen. Motors, 86; Mack Truck, 188¾; Steel, 119¼; Alcohol, 87½; Rubber, 63¼.

Near the close leaders were: C.P.R., 142; Cast Iron Pipe, 163; Am. Can., 204; Baldwin, 115; Beth Steel "B," 43; Gen. Motors, 85⅝; Gen. Electric, 289⅝; Gulf State Steel, 84; Int. Paper, 66⅛; Alcohol, 88; Mack Truck, 187½; Pan-American B, 70⅝; Republic Iron, 48⅝; Southern Railway, 100⅛; Studebaker, 48½; Rubber, 62¾; Steel, com., 119¼. Money, p.c.

BRAZILIAN ROSE IN LATE TRADE; MARKET STRONG

Trading continued fairly active on the local market this afternoon and the general price trend was still upwards. Brazilian Traction advanced to the new high of 58. Price Brothers rose another 1½ points to the record peak of 50, making a total gain of 5 points on the whole day's trading. Smelters, this morning's active and strong performer, fell back 1½ points to 96⅛ after resuming at 97¼.

The Asbestos issues were appreciably firmer. The common rallied 2½ points to 70½, and the preferred 3 points to 104½, the latter having recovered a total of 6 points today. Atlantic Sugar was another firmer feature with a gain of a point to 33, and Canadian Car preferred appeared in board lot at 79½, up one. B. C. Fishing reacted 1⅝ to 46⅜.

C.P.R. TRAFFIC RECEIPTS

C.P.R. traffic receipts for the second week of July were $3,314,000, an increase of $34,000 compared with a year ago. For the first week of July there was a decrease of $130,000.

OCCUPATION ARMY TO BE WITHDRAWN

Belgium Agrees to Quit Ruhr With France, and Britain

BRUSSELS, July 17.—(U.P.)—The Belgian Government has agreed with the French and British for the early evacuation of Dusseldorf, Duisburg and Ruhrort, simultaneous with the evacuation of other places in the Ruhr.

PARIS, July 17.—(U. P.)—The Foreign Office announced today that France would evacuate the Ruhr completely by the end of July.

The evacuation process is already progressing, and some of the troops which Paris announced yesterday would be forwarded to the Riffian zone are being gleaned from the occupation troops.

BALDWIN MINE ENQUIRY

TORONTO, July 17.—The new board of directors of the Baldwin Gold Mining Co., Ltd., have finished an enquiry as to the purposes for which a sum of $36,088, designated on the books as "head office expenses" were appropriated. It transpires that the moneys went to the Tanner-Gates interests, who were recently active in the administration of the mine, but the new management is of the opinion that the charges made for salaries and commissions were excessive. Messrs. Tanner and Gates are no longer officers of the company, having been succeeded by F. S. Short as president; Lawrence C. deWolfe, as vice-president, and Arthur Aicken as treasurer. The new management has paid all the outstanding obligations of the company and will now turn its attention to the further development of the property.

AUSTRALIAN BONDS IN N.Y.

NEW YORK, July 17.—(United Press) J. P. Morgan and Company, bankers today announced the purchase of $75,000,000 worth of gold bonds from the Commonwealth of Australia. They are 30-year five per cent bonds and will be offered publicly Monday, July 20. Simultaneously, an offer of £5,000,000 of Australian Government bonds were made in the London market.

GOUDREAU GOLD MINES

GOUDREAU, July 17.—(Star Special)—Encouraging progress is being made in the arrangements to bring the Goudreau Gold Mines to a producing basis. The absence of convincing information with respect to average gold content of the vein as shown in the underground workings is a factor which has not induced enthusiasm in mining circles with regard to the enterprise.

STANDARD MINING EXCHANGE

TORONTO, July 17.—With transactions amounting to 76,450 shares, trading in the Standard Mining Exchange was more active than yesterday. Teck Hughes opened one point higher but declined to 158. Canada Lorrain was two points higher at 32. Lorrain was fractionally higher at 13¼, while McKinley Darragh was slightly lower at 29½. Mining Corporation advanced six points to 260.

RETURNS VERDICT IN LAKE TRAGEDY

St. Thomas Jury Decides Drowning of Eight Was Accidental

ST. THOMAS, Ont., July 17.—(C. P.)—After being out two hours and forty-five minutes, the jury empanelled by Coroner Dr. D. L. Ewin to enquire into the Swan boat tragedy on Lake Pinafore, on the evening of July 6, when seven children and a woman were drowned, returned a verdict early this morning of accidental drowning, exonerating William Stoner, owner of the boat and park concessionaire, of any charge of negligence.

In their verdict the jury said there was no evidence submitted to show that the weight of the load carried on the fatal trip was in excess of that on previous occasions.

Storm-Dazed Prisoner Picks Innocent Man As Man Who Stole

M. Mazamba and Z. Mackitim, two Russian boys, who were charged in court yesterday with selling $2,000 worth of stolen goods to peddlers, are convinced today that the weather man got busy on their especial behalf, and that the thunderstorm was specially sent to deliver them from their prosecutors.

A peddler had testified that he bought from these boys, articles produced as part of the stolen property. He said he bought them from "the accused."

"Show me the accused," Albert Goodstone, counsel for the defence, asked.

The peddler turned to look for the accused, but as he did so the lights went out, the court room was plunged in inky darkness, and a terrific burst of thunder rent the air.

When the lights came on again and the rolling thunder had subsided, the witness turned to his task once more, and picked out a perfectly innocent officer of the court as "the accused."

The case was at once dismissed.

SHENANDOAH BACK IN N.J. HANGAR

LAKEHURST, N.J., July 17.—(U.P.)—After being out all night and most of the morning in severe storms, which delayed its return from Virginia Capes, the United States Navy dirigible, Shenandoah, returned to its station here today, landed and was housed in its hangar shortly before noon.

J. P. MORGAN TAKES AUSTRALIAN LOAN

NEW YORK, July 17.—(A. P.)—Flotation of a $75,000,000 loan for the Commonwealth of Australia, was announced today by J. P. Morgan and Company. Public offering of 30 year five per cent. gold bonds will be made in the New York market next Monday at a price of 90½. Simultaneous offering of five million pounds of the same bonds will be made in London.

CLAIM FRENCHMAN CHAINED HIS WIFE

Paris Citizens Hear Faint Cries in Tower Room

TWO ARRESTED

Imprisoned Woman Daughter of Former Chief of Police

PARIS, July 17—(U. P.)—Accused of keeping his wealthy wife chained up for two years in her chateau near Chatenay, Charles Soler, head of a Paris manufacturing company, and a close friend of a former president of the Republic, is under arrest, together with his "secretary," Mlle. Berthe de la Planque.

The affair, which came to light as a result of citizens of Chatenay hearing faint cries coming from a tower room of the chateau, has given Paris society, in which both Soler and his wife are prominent, a big scandal.

Emaciated until she resembled a "living skeleton," Mme. Soler, who is a daughter of a former chief of the Paris police, survived the imprisonment and still had strength enough to make heard her cry:

"Help! Help me! They are killing me little by little!"

Advised by anonymous letter, the Paris police went from Versailles in a surprise sally against the chateau, burst in doors, sawed their way through bars and bolts and chains and freed Mme. Soler.

The woman told them that her husband had forced her to sign a will in his favor, and then had imprisoned her, to die. She had been fed occasionally upon a skimpy diet of milk and eggs.

Mlle. De la Planque had been brought from Paris ostensibly to act as Soler's secretary, but actually, the police charge, as a guard for the prisoner.

Confronted with these facts Soler declared his wife was insane. She was taken to a hospital in a critical condition, but three doctors declared her rational.

When Soler was first taken into custody, the police concealed his identity, styling him simply "Charles S." In this they took a leaf from the note-book of English law which recently concealed the identity of an Indian potentate behind the pseudonym, "Mr. A."

Mlle. De la Planque they called "Berthe D."

Soler was once noted as an explorer and author. He is 67.

BENSON COPYRIGHTS GO TO CAMBRIDGE

LONDON, July 16.—(Star Special Cable, by J. E. Poole, Staff Correspondent.) — Doctor A. C. Benson, author, essayist, joint-editor with Lord Esher of the letters of Queen Victoria, left an estate of £112,440, and bequeathed the copyright of all his literary work to Masters and Fellows, of Magdalen College, Cambridge.

SEEK NEW POWER LINE AT FARNHAM

QUEBEC, July 17.—(Star Special)—Permission to construct a transmission line between Iberville and Farnham is sought in a petition presented to the Public Service Commission.

The volts to be authorized, according to the petition, will reach a total of 48,000.

'ACIDITY TEST' BARS CANADIAN FLOUR

Greek Regulation Has Serious Effect on Export Trade

OTTAWA, July 17.—(Star Special by Own Correspondent).—A regulation adopted by the Government of Greece has the effect of practically excluding Canadian flour and American flour from that country and efforts are being made by the Department of Trade and Commerce, in conjunction with the interests affected, to get it straightened out. The Trade Commissioner at Milan, Italy, has gone to Athens with this object in view. Greece wants to import wheat and do its own milling, but without going to the extent of imposing a prohibitive duty has adopted a so-called "acidity test" which neither Canadian nor American flour can readily stand. In its strict application it would seriously cut into flour exports from this country.

The volume of export business is very large, considering the size of Greece. In the 12 months of the last fiscal year a total of 11,029,277 barrels were sent from Canada to that country, the value being $70,638,692. The effect of the new regulation is consequently calculated to be serious and accounts for efforts to secure a modification.

Other external negotiations are being initiated with South Africa. Some time ago it completely changed its fiscal policy and adopted one which wipes out the preference Canada has shared. A system of favored nation treatment has taken its place and a new arrangement will be sought whereby Canada will be able to retain in substance the privileges it has previously had.

Following a tentative agreement with Spain steps are being taken for a permanent one. By the recent arrangement the Spanish intermediate tariff is available to this country on a number of products. An equality with the United States is being sought.

ALGARSSON PARTY AT SPITZBERGEN

LONDON, July 17.—(A. P.)—The correspondent of the Morning Post at Oslo, Norway, reports that the Arctic expedition under Grettir Algarsson, young British Columbian explorer, has arrived at Green Harbor, Spitzbergen, from Belfast, intending to go as far north as possible. Ice conditions are very favorable.

THREE KILLED IN AIRPLANE CRASH

CHALON SUR SAONE, France, July 17.—(A. P.)—Three aviators were killed today in a mid-air collision of two training planes at an aviation school here. The accident occured when a student flier cut across the route of an instructor's machine, ramming it amidships.

WILL ALLOW JACK DEMPSEY'S FIGHTS

NEW YORK, July 17.—(A. P.)—Jack Dempsey, heavyweight boxing champion, today visited the New York State Athletic Commission and said, after the conference, that he had made peace and that the commissioners had agreed to two or three bouts before he meets the negro, Harry Wills.

BANK TO REWARD MANAGER AND WIFE

Mrs. Rodgers Exceedingly Sorry She Had to Shoot Bandit

MAKES REPORT

No Further Details in Official Statement to Head Office

INGERSOLL, Ont., July 17.—(Star Special).— Mrs. William Ross Rodger wife of the manager of the Imperial Bank at St. David's, who saved the life of her husband on Wednesday morning by shooting Mat Kolidee, in the apartment over the bank, was informed yesterday at her mother's home, Mrs. Muterer, near Ingersoll, that Kolidee had died from the bullet fired by her.

"Mrs. Rodger feels exceedingly bad to know the man has died," said Mrs. Muterer to The Star. "She simply says she could do nothing else but shoot, for he would have killed her husband."

Mrs. Rodger has already been congratulated in a letter from an official of the Imperial Bank, in Toronto, adding, she would later hear from the bank. This, probably, means with regard to some monetary recognition for her act.

Manager Rodger was today out of town on business. He is reported to be suffering from severe headaches as a result of the blows inflicted on his head by the bandit with the handle of his revolver. He has had medical attention in Ingersoll and several stitches were required to close the wounds.

Two children, Mary and Gwendelyn, who were in the apartment during the fight and shooting, do not wish to hear any more about it.

W. G. Moore, chief inspector of the Imperial Bank, stated today that they had received a written report from Manager Rodger, written from St. David's following the shooting. "It is just the same as was in the telegram last night," said Mr. Moore. "He said the attempted hold-up had taken place, he had had a scrap and the man was shot by his wife. He has been given an indifinite holiday."

Mr. Moore stated that some recognition will be made to Mr. and Mrs. Rodger by the Imperial Bank irrespective of the reward offered by the Canadian Bankers' Association. Nothing will be done in this regard until a meeting of the directors of the bank next week.

MACMILLAN SAYS REPAIRS UNDER WAY

Expects to Fit New Propellor and Sail Today

HALIFAX, N. S., July 17 — (C. P.) —Donald MacMillan, who has been delayed in his voyage to the Arctic by a broken propeller on his auxiliary craft Bowdoin, hopes to be able to continue north today, according to a message from Hopedale, Labrador, picked up here last night by an amateur radio operator. The damaged propeller, said the message, has been removed and it was hoped the replacement would be made today.

The message was sent from Hopedale, where the Bowdoin returned after meeting with the accident in Baffin Bay, and was as follows:

"By putting empty casks under stern of Bowdoin and unloading barrels of gasoline, have at last succeeded in removing broken propeller. Tomorrow we hope to put on new one and we should be ready to leave for Greenland tomorrow. With good weather we should be across inside three days and on Greenland in about five. My crew continue to be the best I have ever handled. Very happy body of men."

SHIPPING NEWS

ATHENIA SAILED THIS MORNING

Week-end Sailings Show Eastbound Passenger Rush Has Ended

WORLD TONNAGE

Fewer Ships Being Built Than at Any Time Since War

Week-end liner traffic in the port commenced this morning with the sailing of the Anchor Donaldson liner Athenia, Captain James Black commanding, for Glasgow direct.

The Athenia carries 100 cabin and 125 third class passengers including a number of holiday makers from Canada and the United States. The constant passage of citizens from south of the border to Europe via Montreal and the St. Lawrence has been one of the gratifying features of a season in which passenger traffic has not reached the proportions that were expected earlier in the year.

The Athenia will be followed tomorrow morning by the White Star Liner Doric which sails at daybreak, and the Cunarder Antonia, sailing a few hours later. The total number of passengers on all three ships does not exceed 900, less than was carried on one outgoing ship three weeks ago, showing that the eastbound rush of traffic has ceased. The latest westbound lists are not augmented by those tourists and holiday makers who sailed from Canada earlier in the season. With these and the harvesters due here next month westbound sailing should show a considerable increase.

Among the Montrealers on the Athenia are Miss H. MacLeod, Miss Muriel Elmsley, W. E. Cooper, and Richard Wolfe. Others on board include Mrs. Lionel Johnson, Grand Rapids, Michigan; William Ritchie, accompanied by Mrs. Ritchie and daughter, W. H. and Mrs. MacLeod, of Donaldson Brother, Glasgow, and W. A. Turnbull, director of the Donaldson line, together with Mrs. Turnbull and two sons; and A. L. Sherman, well known United States publisher.

LESS SHIPBUILDING.

Lloyds' Register of Shipping figures for ships under construction during the last three months does not make very pleasant reading for they show that the tonnage is less than at any time since the war. There has been a falling off in the construction of steamships but an increase in that of motorships so that motorships now represent 47.7 per cent of the world's shipbuilding as compared with 42 per cent for the preceding three months.

An increase in tonnage for the last quarter is shown in the shipyards of the United States, Italy, Japan, and some of the smaller nations but this increase is more than offset by the decrease registered in Great Britain, Ireland, Germany, France, Holland, and Denmark.

On March 31, Great Britain and Ireland had ships with a tonnage of 1,165,468 on the stocks; the figure for June 30 only 1,093,587 tons. Germany shows a decrease from 420,860 to 407,366 tons; Italy an increase from 164,623 to 212,798 tons, and the United States an increase from 81,728 to 92,001 tons. The world figures for tonnage under construction on March 31, were 2,896,910; and June 30, 2,369,881.

The previous lowest mark set was 2,377,000 tons at the end of September, 1923, the figures for June 30 last year being 2,616,000 tons. Great Britain thus shows a decrease from 58 to 46 per cent of total tonnage building.

MOTORSHIP INCREASE.

The outstanding feature of actual construction has been the great increase in number of motorships and tankers being built. Although Great Britain's total figures have decreased she was building motorships with a tonnage of 399,070 at the end of June compared with 359,920 tons at the end of March.

The other countries of the world are also building more motorships, the total tonnage under construction at the end of March being 1,021,631, and at the end of June, 1,120,912.

Future prospects according to the Register, do not look any too bright. Work on 76,000 tons in England was ordered to be suspended and the launchings for the past three months exceeded new orders by 171,000 tons. In spite of this Great Britain is constructing more tankers now than ever before.

TWO SPECIAL PARTIES.

Two special parties sailing for England by the St. Lawrence tomorrow are the ten girl athletes who will represent Canada at the International games in London next month, and the delegation of Indian chiefs from British Columbia who will visit the King during their stay in the "Old Country." The first party will sail on the Canadian Pacific liner Montroyal from Quebec, and the second on the Cunard liner Antonia from Montreal.

There has been a distinct lull in grain charters during the last three days both from Canadian and United States ports, but inquiries for Montreal business is now reported.

The North Atlantic ice patrol has finished its operations for the season.

SAILS AT MIDNIGHT.

The White Star liner Homeric will sail for Cherbourg and Southampton from New York at midnight tonight with a passenger list of 750, including 350 tourists in her third class accommodation.

Among her passengers are Dr. George Morgan Ward, president of Rollings College, Winter Park, Florida, and Mrs. Ward; Dr. Raymond F. C. Kieb, head of Matteawan State Hospital, Beacon, N. Y., and Mrs. Kieb; General John H. Rice, who served as chief of ordnance of the American Expeditionary Forces; Professor Robert Schuyler of Columbia University; Edward L. Rossiter, treasurer of the New York Central Railroad Company; William H. McIntyre, president of the San Antonio & Arkansas Pass Railway; Jackson S. Elliott, assistant general manager of the Associated Press, and Charles Smith, chief of the Berlin Bureau of the Associated Press.

WHERE NAME DOES COUNT FOR MUCH

Recent Discovery of Unknown Rembrandt Illustrates Point

LONDON.—(By Mail.) — A few days ago considerable excitement was caused in art circles by the discovery of a hitherto unknown Rembrandt in the possession of Mr. Reyre, of the Ver Meer Gallery. The picture had been submitted to several well-known experts, who refused to see it in anything but a comparatively worthless school copy of Rembrandt's auto-portrait at Dresden, but revised their judgment when the picture was submitted to them a second time, after having passed through the cleaner's hands.

In this case there was some reason for their change of opinion, as the true quality of the picture had been hidden under a layer of later repainting. But there are other cases of finds or reputed finds, where the question of authenticity or otherwise means just the difference between a small fortune and a comparatively worthless piece of painted canvas. The quality of the picture is not affected by the question of authorship; and yet the same picture may be worth thousands if acknowledged to be by the master and a few pounds if suspected to be by a pupil. Everything depends on the name.

Not many years ago a small early Rembrandt of a Scriptural subject was sold by public auction at Robinson and Fisher's for 12½ gns. It was in good condition and required only a little surface cleaning. This cleaning revealed the signature of Rembrandt and the date —and the picture was immediately sold to a Munich dealer at a hundred times the price paid for it by the original purchaser.

The now famous portrait of Miss Lindley by Gainsborough, which came from a public-house at Worthing, was hawked by its owner the length of Bond Street. It had no name and none of the dealers felt inclined to make the most modest offer for it. Yet when it appeared at Christie's as an authenticated Gainsborough it was bought by the late Charles Wertheimer for 9,000 gns.

Quite recently a Dutch picture found in the attic of a bank clerk at Manchester was recognized as the work of Carel Fabritius and was sold at Christie's for 6,000 gns. It is now in our National Gallery. Another unrecorded early Rembrandt, representing "Saskia as Deborah," was sold at Christie's not long ago for 6,000 gns. It had not been "expertized" by the German Lamas, but it inspired confidence in some English connoisseurs. Presumably it was an original Rembrandt, but a picture of the same quality attributed to one of the master's pupils would scarcely realize a tenth of that price.

One of the greatest surprises at Christie's of recent years was the Carpaccio which sold for 33,000 gns. The picture had long borne the label "Durer," an obviously absurd attribution. It was a fine work, but without the acumen of Mr. A. Martin, Christie's picture expert, who recognized it as a Carpaccio, it would, in the absence of a definite name, never have realized anything like the sensational price at which it found a purchaser.

REDS MENACE TO BRITISH WORKERS

Home Secretary Utters Warning at Derbyshire Meeting

LONDON—(By Mail).—Sir William Joynson-Hicks, the Home Secretary, speaking at a Unionist demonstration at Chatsworth House, Derbyshire, dealt with the methods of the Communists of England, with particular reference to the minority movement.

He made a strong appeal to trade unionists to resist "this hideous grub, which is eating into the heart of the oak."

A desperate attempt, he declared, was being made today, in conjunction with the people of a country which was not our country, and in conjunction with the ideals of a community which was not our community, to force upon us, by what was known as the National Minority Movement, a scheme of policy and a Constitution utterly foreign to the British nation.

Describing the condition of Soviet Russia today, he observed, "I am responsible as Home Secretary to see that we do not allow ourselves to be conducted by devious methods into the same state as Russia."

He added that the National Minority Movement, after receiving at the last election the worst beating that any political party had had in this country, was now working inside the trade unions to do by persuasion, by efforts from within, what it had been unable to do with the people outside.

CONCENTRATING ON BRITAIN.

The Red International, the great Moscow organization, realized that Great Britain was the centre of individualism throughout the world, and they knew that unless they could capture the trade unionists of Great Britain, Bolshevism and Communism were bound to die in a few years; so they had started a Red International Bureau in London, to be worked in close connection with the trade unionists here.

They were working among trade unionists and among the miners and trying to consolidate the working classes of Great Britain into a single army of labor for a decisive struggle with capitalism.

There was to be no friendship between employers and employed; no friendship between Capital and Labor, but a definite downright attack upon capitalism by means of class warfare.

Sir William referred to the position held by Messrs. Tom Mann and Politt in the movement and said that, though he would not go so far as to say they had received money from Moscow, he could say quite definitely that he was convinced the movement was being financed from Moscow.

MONEY FROM RUSSIA.

He added:

When I say this, it will interest you to know that my predecessor at the Home Office, Mr. Arthur Henderson, the Labor Home Secretary, said in the House of Commons that he was equally convinced of the fact. Money is coming over here to capture the honest trade unions of this country, to seduce the trade union movement from that great policy of industrial progress which has built up our Empire.

I want to speak quite seriously to trade union leaders and trade union members here. There is an effort being made within your body to transform you into an engine in the class struggle, to do away with and to defeat your great trade union leaders. Already the attack has begun.

Mr. MacDonald, Mr. Thomas, and Mr. Clynes are anathema to these Red trade unionists who are seeking to destroy the best interests of trade unionism in this country. It is my duty to warn the trade unionists of this country of what is being done in their name throughout their great organization.

It was a very serious matter for the trade unionist who wanted to vote, say, Labor, for him to find that his policy and his leaders were being scouted by a body financed by foreign gold and definitely leading to a foreign policy. The whole future of trade unionism in this country was at stake.

Week by week reports were sent from this minority movement in England to their paymasters in Moscow to illustrate that they were getting value for their money.

Sir William pointed out that the Communists were also now making inroads into the co-operative movement.

CABINET'S ACTION.

Referring to the steps taken by the Home Office to exclude foreign Communists who might try to enter Britain to attend the recent Communist conference at Glasgow, Sir William said that the Cabinet with one voice, without any hesitation, authorized him to take such steps. He declared:

If they attempt to come here, we will prevent them, and, if we catch them here, we will turn them out. We will turn them out not merely in the name of the Cabinet, not merely by authority of the Home Secretary, but also in the name and by the authority of the people of this country.

WOMAN BITTEN IN ARM BY VIPER

A Monmouthshire woman, Mrs. Preston, of Argoed, has been severely bitten on the arm by a viper.

Her son-in-law, who had found the snake near the house, was taking it from a glass jar to destroy it when it suddenly darted at her, and struck her arm with its fangs.

She had to be attended by a doctor.

ISLAM'S CHALLENGE TO WESTERN WORLD

First Mecca Pilgrimage Under Auspices of Wahabis

LONDON (By Mail):—The first days of July have seen the consummation of the supreme rites of the first Meccan pilgrimage held under Wahabi auspices for more than 100 years. A century ago the mere fact of the Hedjaz being in the throes of war doubtless served to deter would be pilgrims from adventuring their lives in that country, but in this twentieth century we are confronted by a political situation which makes the pilgrimage of 1925 not so much an act of Islamic worship as an emblem of Islam's challenge to the domination of the Western world. Such, at any rate, is the view of Shaukat Ali and his Indian Khilafat Committee, and, while Egypt sulks impotently in her tents over the lost opportunity of shaping the destinies of Islam, the Mohammedan community of India takes the lead in acclaiming Ibn Saud as the heir to Turkey's ecclesiastical hegemony. Religion, as always, is made the handmaid of politics, and it must be admitted that Shaukat Ali has made clever use of the weapon ready to his hand.

It will be remembered that Shaukat Ali himself was originally to have been the leader of the Khilafat Committee's deputation to the Hedjaz, and that he was refused a passport for Jeddah by the Government of India, apparently on the ground that he was an undesirable person. The remaining members of the mission visited the Hedjaz and found King Ali and his Government unwilling to accept their dictation in matters relating to the internal administration of the country. Naturally enough on their return they reported adversely on the Sherifian Government to their committee, and the committee apparently decided to signalize their acceptance of Ibn Saud as the new master of the Hedjaz by organizing or encouraging an Indian pilgrimage.

THE KHILAFAT PILGRIMS.

Against this, it would seem, the Government of India resolutly sets its face, seeking to discourage pilgrims from the journey by representing the dangers inherent therein, the unsuitability of the proposed landing place at Rabigh, and the lack of food in the Hedjaz. To clinch matters it announced that, while on religious grounds it could not forbid the pilgrimage, it would on no account accept any responsibility whatever for the pilgrims or their safety. Shaukat Ali called its bluff, and would seem to have won, for at the last moment it appears that strenuous measures were concerted to cater for the physical and medical requirements of the pilgrim shiploads which cleared the port of Bombay in spite of all warnings. The shipping companies were advised to ship as much food as possible with the pilgrims; Ibn Saud and King Ali were warned of their coming, and of the expectation of His Majesty's Government that pilgrims embarked at British ports will be properly treated; and, last but not least, actual contact is established between the British Government and the Wahabi Sultan by the despatch from Aden of a pilgrim officer, accompanied by an Indian doctor, with a suitable staff.

The wheel has, in truth, turned full circle, for those who are conversant with Arab affairs may remember that less than a year ago Mr. Austen Chamberlain's predecessor replied somewhat testily to a question on the same lines that, if all the facts relating to British relations with Nejd were disclosed to the House he was certain the House would not be desirous of re-establishing them. It is difficult to understand what Mr. Ramsay MacDonald meant by such a statement. It was just that attitude, blindly persisted in for five years, and particularly through the period of the Kowait Conference of 1923-24, that has made Ibn Saud master of Mecca and much else. And Mr. Chamberlain is to be congratulated on having cut adrift from a policy which could bring nothing in its train but the alienation from ourselves of the sympathies of the one man who is master of the situation in Arabia.

PRODUCTION SECOND TO SALESMANSHIP

British Industry Said to Lack Advertising, Says Industrialist

LONDON.—(By Mail.)—Speaking at the Bradford Publicity Club, Colonel F. V. Willey, president of the Federation of British Industries, referred to the backwardness of British industry in advertising as compared with America.

Discussing the relative merits of advertising, Colonel Willey said there would be little argument that the Press undoubtedly offered the most fertile means of advertising. In American newspapers of up to 60 pages, two-thirds of the space was filled with advertisements. In Britain, however, there was insufficiency of pluck among distributors, who were inclined to look at the initial outlay instead of contemplating the increased profits resulting from the expansion of distribution induced by advertising.

Britain's industrial problem today is not one of production, but one of salesmanship. Salesmanship, however, would be difficult without the assistance of publicity. Referring to the F.B.I. "Buy British Goods" campaign, he said that if people realised the full significance of this effort, employment would be greatly increased.

IS QUITE CONTENT TO OBEY ORDERS

Hindenberg Believes He Was Called to Presidency by Diety

FEUDALISM BACK

Country Satisfied With the Symbol of the Old Regime

BERLIN, (By Mail) — Reichspresident von Hinderburg sees life with the simplicity of a soldier. Orders are issued; orders are obeyed. He has been three days in office, and for three days he has been obeying orders. Not because he is weak. Not because he is old. Not because this grizzled warrior is an Alice in the Wonderland of German politics. He obeys orders because he decided the Reichspresident shou'd obey rather than issue orders.

He will continue to obey orders. He reserves only the right to judge for himself of these orders conform with his duty as he sees it. Such a combination of strength and submission has been seen rarely in so exalted a position; conscious strength and conscious, voluntary submission.

You reach out into the daily life of the man to appreciate his peculiar political role. At seventy-eight he still looks the soldier. He is in bed before 10 at night; awake at 7 the next morning. No official luncheon will deprive him of his afternoon nap. He is a paragon of moderation in food and drink. He is blessed with a phlegmatic temperament. He is rarely angry, rarely moved. His mind is as much of a machine as his body. He is planted, set, almost rigid. When he mounts a platform you see a statue; the incorporation of all the old Prussian virtues.

Too little emphasis is placed upon these characteristics, although they decide the immediate course of Germany. They dispel the fears and hopes of romanticists, who see in his coming the revival of royalism. Or those who picture him the heavy-handed dictator. Or those who see in him the pliable tool of intrigue.

The German Reichspresident has an entirely different task than the American President. His capacity is advisory rather than executive. He is not the leader of a victorious party, but above all parties. During his term of office, political fortunes may swing through a complete circle. He must remain stationary. In the last analysis he is not unlike a constitutional monarch. He is a figure-head. Such was the precedent set by President Ebert and von Hindenburg has shown he wil! follow it faithfully.

Field Marshal von Hindenburg's first act as President was to put himself completely in the hands of Chancellor Luther. His speeches, if not written by the Chancellor, were certainly submitted to Herr Luther and corrections made. The new President had little advice to offer. Politics is not his forte and he does not purpose learning a new profession at the age of seventy-eight. He is going to bed at nine every night except in a breath-taking crisis and then he wil! try to manage it somehow.

He did not seek the post. Twice he refused it. Only when it was made clear to him that he was the symbol sought by the German people did he accept the nomination. He intends to remain a symbol. As he sees it, God has willed that he should occupy the Presidential chair so that Germany shall become strong again. He does not relish the task. He loathes it. But he is obeying orders from God, Chancellor Luther, and the Deutsch National.

WAR OF WORDS

About the name of von Hindenburg a war of words has raged for the last few weeks. Will he bring back the monarchy? At his inauguration he made clear he would not. That ended the war, at least temporarily. But what was forgotten was this: Germany does not need two symbols. One is sufficient. Except for the fact that his term ends in seven years, instead of continuing until his death, he might as well be a King.

Except that it makes a convenient head-line, the issue is not whether the Republic stay or the monarchy returns, but whether Hohenzollern traditions return or that of the new Germany stay. Monarchy is a sentimental issue: Feudalism is not.

"Ordnung" has always been the Prussian idol. We call it law and order. It is essentially the same, as alike as "Verboten" and "Keep off the Grass." Von Hindenburg is the living statue to Ordnung.

The war left Germany neurotic. The nervous wreck does not need another wreck to worship. Germany did not want von Ludendorff, because that scowling soldier was always on edge. He sputtered, fumed and then made himself absurd by engaging in the Munich beer putsch. Von Hindenburg retired to Hanover and remained discreetly quite. He was a disappointed but not a bitter man. His calmness aroused the worship of the entire nation. Here was a sanctuary of peace, a miracle man, who could go to bed at 9 and get up at 7, piously resigned to fate, while others roared and raged. This was Ordnung.

Foreign Minister Stresemann recently remarked that Ordnung was coming back to the country, and expressed his gratification.

"We like that good old Prussian spirit," he said. "Things are done, and done well. Recently I was in Munich and the contrast was vivid. I had to catch a train in ten minutes. The Bavarian chauffeur was not in the car. The policemen said leisurely he would probably turn up. There was the greatest confusion and we made the train by half a minute. That would never happen in Prussia."

IDEAL FEUDAL SYSTEM

The ideal of Germany is the ideal feudal system, where every citizen has his set task, exalted or humble, where orders are issued and obeyed, where class distinctions are rigid, but even the humblest are well fed and content. It is the heritage of the Kaiser's paternalistic system. The revolution has not altered it.

Von Hindenburg is the ideal head for this ideal system. There are no excursions, or alarums in his vicinity There are no half tones. Life is reduced to its simplest terms—the working feudalism. Feudalism in the army, in the country, and in the factory. The peasant tips his hat to the minister, the minister to the administrator of the estate, the administrator to the landed gentry and the landed gentry bows to Von Hindenburg. Everybody is happy, for everybody is classified.

This system explains why many Germans referred contemptuously to President Ebert as a "saddler." Ebert, they reasoned, could not be a good President. He was an upstart. Humble origin is an exploited virtue in America, but a political vice here. This mentality is a manifestation of feudalism.

Von Hindenburg himself cannot conceive of any other system. The Socialist Republic to him is a madhouse. It is unclassified, led by curious little fellows who are professional writers. To him a ruler may be chosen by the people, but is ordained by God.

So that when dealing, with basic facts, the issue during the term of the nef Reichpresident is: Will the old feudal system return? I venture the prediction it will, because there is nothing to take its place. The Socialists had their day and failed. The Communists had a brief hour, and failed.

Certainly a substantial portion of the German people want the old system back. Even many of those who voted for Wilhelm Marx, now convinced that the Republican form remains that the Hohenzollerns are not to be reinstated for many years to come at least, long for the re-establishment of the system of society under the Kaiser.

RETURN IS EASY

Germany is an industrial machine, augmented by an agricultural one. Her industrialists and big landowners necessarily dominate the country. In no way did the Republican revolution affect their power. Therefore, the return to feudalism is comparatively easy.

BIRTHS.

BEATTIE—On July 10, 1925, at 309 St. Ferdinand to Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Beattie, born Anneda Legrefley; a daughter.

BYFORD—On July 15, 1925, to Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Byford, a daughter.

HYLANDS — On July 13, 1925, at the Montreal Maternity Hospital, to Mr. and Mrs. William Hylands (nee Mary Hedge Livock), a daughter.

PEACE—On July 16, 1925, at the Medical Arts Hospital, to Mr. and Mrs. John Peace (nee Chrissie Matheson), 29 Brooke Avenue, Westmount; a son.

PRINGLE—To Mr. and Mrs. James Pringle, at 2166 Church avenue, on July 16, 1925, a son.

ROSEN—At Valleyfield, Que., on July 15, 1925, to Mr. and Mrs. A. Rosen; a son.

TROSSMAN—To Dr. and Mrs. Trossman, of 4662 Park avenue, July 9th, a son.

WOOD—On July 15, 1925, to Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Wood (nee Miss B. Ritson), a daughter, at Montreal Maternity Hospital. 167 3

MARRIAGES.

McCLOSKY-CORMIER—On July 16, 1925, at Archbishop's Palace, by Canon A. Harbour, Mary Florence Cormier, of Highwood, Illinois, to Michael William McClosky, of New Richmond, Que.

SUCHE—DRISCOLL—On July 16, 1925, at St. Thomas Aquinas Church, by the Rev. Fr. Reid, Mary Heiline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Driscoll, Kingston, Ont., to Clement V. Suche, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Suche, Yorks., England. Kingston papers please copy.

SILVER WEDDING.

BAYLISS—DAVIES — At St. Paul's Church, Bedminster, Eng., on July the 15th, 1900, Betsy Davies, to William Jesse Bayliss. Present address, 702 Garnier street, Montreal.

DEATHS IN THE CITY.

ANDERSON—At 831 Atwater Avenue, on the 16th instant, Mary Jane Cannion, widow of the late J. H. Anderson, in her 67th year. Funeral from Feron's Chapel, 636 Dorchester St. West, Saturday, the 18th, at 8 a.m., to St Anthony's Church, thence to Cote des Neiges Cemetery. St. Louis, Mo.; Springfield, Ohio; Yonkers, N.Y., and New York City papers please copy. 169 2

BURKE—"Asleep in Jesus." At 214 Oxford Ave., Montreal, on July 16, 1925, James E. Burke, of Hemmingford, Que., dearly beloved husband of the late Eliza Jane Allen, aged 80 years. Service at the above address, Thursday, 8 p.m., thence via G.T.R. to Hemmingford, and funeral service from his late residence, "Riverside," Hemmingford, Que., Saturday, at 2 p.m. Interment at Trinity Church, Havelock, Que. 167 2

CARTER—On July 16th, 1925, Sarah Smith, beloved wife of Edward Carter, 136 Clandeboye Avenue, Westmount. Funeral private on Saturday at 2.30 p.m. 167 3

DARLING—Passed on at his summer residence, Hudson Heights, July 16th, 1925, George Darling, in his 59th year. Funeral from the Chapel of Joseph C. Wray and Bro., 290 Mountain St., 2 p.m., Friday, to Mount Royal Cemetery. 168 2

LOYNACHAN — At the Homeopathic Hospital, July 16, 1925, Ellen M. McGregor, beloved wife of the late Duncan Loynachan, died in her 71st year. Funeral notice later.

LOYNACHAN — At the Homeopathic Hospital, July 16th, 1925, Ellen Margaret McGregor, widow of Duncan Loynachan, aged 71 years. Funeral from the Chapel of Jos. C. Wray & Bro., 290 Mountain St., 12.30 noon, Monday. Burial at St. Andrews East, Que.

MORIN—In Montreal, on July 17th, 1925, at the age of 33, Mrs. Lucien Morin (nee Elaine Bernard). Funeral will leave Mr. Morin's residence, 703 St. Urbain, at 8 a.m., Monday, the 20th inst., and service will take place at St. George Parish Church, at 8.30 a.m. Relatives and friends are respectfully invited to attend.

RACINE—Madeleine, aged six, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Racine, died yesterday. Private funeral this afternoon.

ROSS — Suddenly, at Notre Dame de Portage, Que., on the 13th instant, Jane Evans, in her 89th year, widow of the late John H. Ross, and beloved mother of C. Gilbert Ross, Jeannie Ross, Mrs. S. S. Boxer, Mrs. Thomas Allan and Mrs. N. Dickson. Funeral private. 166 4

RONDEAU—In Montreal, on July 15th, 1925, at the age of 76 years and 10 months, Ulysse Rondeau, husband of Aglace Galipeau. Funeral will leave 122 Drolet St., Saturday, 18th, at 6.45, to St. Louis de France Church. Service at Cote des Neiges Cemetery. Relatives and friends are respectfully invited to attend. 167 2

DEATHS OUTSIDE CITY.

STOCKWELL—At Salem, Oregon, July 13, Annabel Gunn, dearly beloved wife of Dr. Herman K. Stockwell. Interment at Danville, Que., after arrival of train.

IN MEMORIAM.

COOPER—In sad, but fond remembrance of our dear little Johnny, who was accidentally killed on July 17, 1923. Too dearly loved to be forgotten. Mother, father, sister and brother.

HOWDEN—In loving memory of my dear Mother, died July 17th, 1920. Her memory ever dear to me. Inserted by her loving daughter, Polly.

MACDONELL—In loving memory of my dear son, Lieut. Edward Charles Macdonell, died July 31, 1921. Gone but not forgotten. Mother.

REID—In ever loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Elizabeth Ann Robinson, who entered into rest, July 17, 1924. As time goes by we miss her more. Inserted by her Husband and Daughter.

SIM—In loving memory of Robert Stanley Sim who departed this life July 17th, 1923. Gone but not forgotten. Inserted by Mother, Father, Brothers and Sisters.

WARD—In loving memory of our dear mother, who died July 17, 1917. Edna and Hazel.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

JONES—Mrs. Daniel Jones and family wish to thank relatives and friends for kindness and floral offerings in their recent sad bereavement.

ROWE—Mr. and Mrs. G. Rowe and family wish to thank all friends for kindness and sympathy shown them, also beautiful floral tributes received by them in their recent sad bereavement.

SMITH—Mrs. Joseph Edward Smith wishes to thank her many friends, also staff and employes of the Bell Telephone Co for their kindness, sympathy and floral offering in her recent sad bereavement.

NEXT NAVAL WAR WILL BE COSTLY AND INDECISIVE

Well Known Sailor Member of British Commons Gives View

GIANT SUBMARINES

Three Types of Cruisers in Armament of the Future

(By Lt.-Commander the Hon. J. M. Kenworthy, R.N., M.P.)

No people wants another naval war, and only the English and the Americans could afford the luxury. At the same time, Great Britain is spending £60,000,000 as an insurance against it, and the United States about £70,000,000, apart from their respective Air Forces, which will be expected to play a considerable part.

England is not only America's principal debtor, but the only debtor who is paying up. These payments will continue for 58 years under present arrangements, so America is not likely to quarrel with us, and certainly not we with them. Remains Japan, impoverished by the recent earthquake, and with the power of ruling caste of genro, or elder statesmen, declining. The democracy of Japan is gradually winning political power, and its interests are commercial, and not Imperial.

France and Italy have considerable navies, but they are not building battleships, and would appear to be concentrating on submarines. Italy is badly off for naval bases, apart from the Mediterranean. Russia is out of the picture as a naval Power, though she might play her part in another world struggle.

OCEAN WARFARE.

The late war was not an ocean campaign in the historical meaning of the term. Owing to the geographical position of Germany it was possible to hem her naval forces into the North Sea. Her scattered cruisers were eventually rounded up or interned, and all her outlying naval bases fell or were blockaded. When the submarine campaign developed and the German naval staff, rather late in the day, recognized the potentialities of the submarine as a commerce raider, they had no ports outside the North Sea on which to base these raiders. It would have been a different story if Germany had had two or three well-defended naval dockyards in the Atlantic or the Pacific on which her submarines could have been based for rest and refitment. But if, through the madness of people, the inefficiency of statesmen, and the failure of the League of Nations, another naval war should come, we cannot expect to be so fortunate.

The only possible naval campaigns we need to prepare for are in the Atlantic in opposition to our good friends the Americans, or on the Pacific against our ancient ally Japan. I must repeat that both are improbable, but where navies exist they must be prepared for war.

Owing to the very great distances involved in either campaign, it will be doubtful if the battle-fleets will ever sight each other. They will be the forces in reserve to prevent bombardments of coast towns or raids on territory.

INVASION IMPRACTICABLE.

But while the great distances in Atlantic or Pacific naval warfare would make a meeting of the battle fleets and decisive results unlikely, they make invasion of the countries engaged almost impossible.

The science of logistics, or the art of supplying and feeding a military force overseas has become very complicated. A modern army cannot move without very considerable motor transport; it requires tanks and armoured cars, much heavy artillery, and unlimited ammunition. The scale of modern warfare has scrapped all the old calculations. To supply an army operating only 400 miles overseas one tion of shipping per soldier a year is required.

The only country which could possibly supply the shipping required for the maintenance of a large overseas army, and yet maintain its necessary ocean-borne trade, is the British Empire. Neither Japanese nor American sources could cope with the problem. Therefore either of the campaigns we have in view, and, in fact, for that matter, the slightly more probable, but still very unlikely, naval war between Japan and America, would resolve itself into a longdrawn-out attack and defence of commerce. The only exceptions would be an attack on Jamaica in an Anglo-American war or an invasion of the Philippines in a Japanese-American campaign.

Now, a battle fleet can defend commerce within a certain distance of its bases, and to a certain degree. In the old days it was our custom to send ships of the line to escort the Levant convoys home from the Mediterranean. But battleships must keep together or they are liable to be taken in detail and defeated by superior forces. And battleships cruising at sea are costly and vulnerable. They must be accompanied by aircraft and destroyers, and therefore their radius of action is not very great; and also the size of the single convoys must be very limited, owing to market requirements and the possibility of handling the ships and turning them round quickly in our commercial docks. The brunt of the defensive work will fall on cruisers of various types, and the duty of attacking commerce and of bringing pressure to bear on the enemy by these means will fall upon this type of craft.

The old warfare was two-dimensional, that is, the warships moved on the surface of the sea, and could proceed north or south, east or west. They could not dive and they could not fly. Naval warfare is now three-dimensional. We have to consider surface cruisers, submarine cruisers and aerial cruisers.

The surface cruisers will range from the battle cruiser, which is really a fast battleship which has lost something in protection, to the so-called light cruiser, a vessel of 10,000 tons, costing three to five million pounds, with a speed of 30 to 38 knots, and armed with eight or nine 8 in. guns of great range and power.

It will be possible for these vessels to engage at very long range, for not only has the shooting distance of the guns increased enormously, but by the devise of listing, or tilting over of a ship by the flooding of her protective torpedo budges, an even greater range can be obtained. It will be possible to shoot at a target which is not visible even from the masthead. The spotting and control of fire will be done by aeroplanes. This means that every cruiser must carry one of two aeroplanes.

A squadron engaging an enemy will use one or two of her aeroplanes for spotting purposes, and the remainder as fighters to drive down the enemy's aircraft. We may expect the use of poison and tear gas in special shells, and the wide use of smoke clouds as cover of either attack or withdrawal.

AERIAL CRUISERS.

The Zeppelin is an ideal cruiser for observation purposes but is of little use for attack, except as a means of carrying torpedo-carrying aeroplanes. She is very vulnerable to attack herself, though for scouting purposes, provided she can be guarded against aerial attack, she is equal to half a dozen cruisers.

The modern seaplane is developing fast and is increasing in range of action, and in a few years' time any ship that floats within 400 miles of a seaplane base may expect the most terrible form of attack by torpedoes launched from swooping aeroplanes and seaplanes. The convoys will have to be guarded by cruisers carrying fighting aeroplanes for the purpose of meeting this menace if passing within 400 miles of enemy territory.

But the ideal vessel for both the attack and the defence of commerce is the large ocean-going submarine. She has a radius of action greater than the surface ship, and the power of submersion before superior forces, either in the air or on the surface. For her purpose the torpedo is the secondary weapon, the heavy, long-range being primary. Once out on the ocean track, she will be hard to cope with, and especially dangerous when working in company with and supported by cruisers and dirigibles.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE FUTURE.

The few German submarines that escaped from the North Sea in the later days of the war were lone and unsupported. They had no bases to go to, and were comparatively weakly armed and of primitive design. Your modern submarine cruiser will be heavily armed, and capable, in company with three or four consorts, of engaging with success a modern light cruiser. The defence against her is first to reduce her oversea bases and blockade her into her home ports, if it can be done, and to use aircraft for wide scouting and for attack upon her where possible; a careful patrolling of the most fruitful cruising grounds by smaller submarines, submerged, and ready to torpedo their larger sister if seen on the surface, and the strong guarding of the convoys by heavily-armed cruisers.

If the above premises are correct, it would appear that the battleship is losing its relative importance, and that great attention must be paid in the future to the three types of cruisers—aerial, submarine and surface. Also that the question of suitable bases abroad must be very carefully studied; and, finally, that the next naval war will be long drawn-out, costly, and probably indecisive, and must be avoided at all costs.

Commodore Paul Jones' Unheralded Visit to Lloyds, London

The Cumberland Packet, a weekly newspaper, published in Whitehaven, Eng., in November, 1786, just three years after the signing of the Paris treaty of peace between the Colonies and England, contains an interesting account of an unheralded visit of Commodore Paul Jones, "the young tiger of the sea," to the Underwriters' 'Change at Lloyd's, London. Commodore Jones was on a peaceful mission this time, however. The Packet's London letter of that time says:

"Last Wednesday appeared on the Underwriters' 'Change at Lloyd's no less a personage than the celebrated 'Paul Jones'; no stranger to the Cumberland coast and Whitehaven, but a most attractive stranger and object of much interest at Lloyd's. He came on the peaceful errand of listing on the boards for underwriting, certain cargoes for American destination, in which he has personal interests.

"No one noticed him until he had to sign the Owner's Register, which he did in a bold, round hand. No sooner had he done so than his identity was made out among the throng on the floor; when there was a rush about him amounting to almost a mobbing. All introduced themselves to him and he was indeed most affable and agreeable."

The Cumberland Packet went on to tell how royally the erstwhile conqueror of the Drake and Serapis was welcomed by the officials of Lloyd's, then continues: "It is gossiped that while at luncheon the chairman of the board remarked to the commodore that his relations to British commerce had most materially changed during recent years, and to this he replied: 'Oh, no, not so much that, as it is a resumption of the more pleasant relations of many years ago.'"

The letter concluded with this undoubtful compliment. "The impression made upon all who had the privilege of seeing and conversing with him was most pleasant, and it is a common remark that it is much better to have him here seeking insurance on cargoes of his own than at sea seeking cargoes insured by others."

Man 151 Years Old, Takes First Holiday for Last Hundred Years

GENEVA—A despatch from Belgrade to the Tribune de Geneve states that when the Orient express from Constantinople arrived at Belgrade the other day a small bent man stepped out at the station, and, like all travellers, had to show his passport. The official was astonished to read that the old man, a Kurd named Zaire Effendi, was born in Constantinople in 1774, and was therefor 151 years of age.

The passport further revealed the fact that the Kurd had been married twenty-seven times, his last wife dying at the age of eighty-seven, and that his eldest daughter died at the age of ninety.

CHEERFUL.

Zaire Effendi, who has retained his mental faculties, cheerfully explained that he was taking a holiday, the first for the last hundred years, "as he was suffering slightly from rheumatism." He said he was on a visit to his great-granddaughter.

The Kurd is the father of more than a hundred children, and when asked for the number of his descendants replied: "You cannot count the grains of sand in the desert."

When some doubt was expressed by the official concerning his real age, the Kurd became indignant. "Have I not myself marked my age down year by year in my Koran, and is it not officially stamped in my passport?" he asked: "Why do you doubt?"

He has worked at a dozen humble trades in different parts of Turkey, and for the last thirty years has been night watchman on the quay at Stamboul.

BIG REVOLUTION IN SHIP PROPULSION

Serious Position of British Shipbuilders, Says Lord Bearsted

FUTURE OF COAL

Economical Ship Holds Its Own—Oil Displacing Coal

BY LORD BEARSTED.

LONDON, July (By Mail).—In the year 1912, being extremely anxious to give British engineers an opportunity of participating in—or, as I hoped—leading the development in the propulsion of ships, I founded a company called the Flower Motor Ship Co., with a capital of £1,000,000 sterling, in order that contracts could be placed with British firms willing to accept the responsibility of designing Diesel engines upon lines which were then comparativaly little developed. So keen was the interest aroused in this movement that in less than a week the entire capital was subscribed privately, and that without the issue of any prospectus. The orders and their responsibilities were accepted by Messrs. Swan, Hunter and Wigham Richardson for two boats, and by Messrs. Armstrong, Whitworth, and Co. for one boat. Although, owing to the war, great delay occurred in the delivery of the vessels, they were put on the water, and during their all-too-brief existence—for all three were torpedoed and sunk by the Germans—they established the incomparable superiority of the motor ship over the steamer as a money-making proposition.

This superiority was incontestably proved by an arbitration that was held. The shipowners, well aware of the greater value of motor-boats as contrasted with steamers, claimed from the Government a higher rate of charter than was at the time being paid in respect of steamers. Mr. William Walton acted as umpire, and, after careful consideration, awarded 12s 6d per ton per month to the motor ships, as against 10s per ton for the steamers—that is to say, a rate of approximately 25 per cent more. That this ratio was correct is curiously illustrated by what has happened very recently in the case of a ship built by Messrs. Fairfield, with Sulzer engines, those builders gave the owners an option of delivering a vessel of smaller tonnage than was required for a steamer, or of guaranteeing to them a greater passenger capacity of 25 per cent, if the same dimensions were adopted for the motor ship for the steamer.

From the experimental engines built by Messrs. Swan, Hunter and Wigham Richardson in their Nepture Works a design of immense interest has been evolved, and that great firm—builders, it will be remembered, of the Mauretania—have now perfected a two-cycle, double-acting engines, which possesses noteworthy advantages. Its weight is guaranteed to be no more than that of a steam engine and boilers of similar h.p. capacity, but the space occupied is no more than that of the steam engine; and the whole space occupied by the boilers is rendered available for cargo. The economy of fuel in the double-acting type of Diesel engines, whether of the two-cycle or the four-cycle description, is amazing, and I am indebted to Sir George Hunter for the following figures:

Steam engine, coal consumption, 41 tons a day;
Diesel engine, oil consumption, 10½ tons a day for all purposes.

GREAT BRITAIN LAGGING.

These results compare most favorably with those of figures put forward by the numerous interests who damn with faint praise the progress of the internal combustion engine.

The serious position that threatens British shipbuilders has been so clearly elucidated by the publication of the shipbuilding returns in Lloyd's Register for the quarter ended March 31 last to make it incumbent that something must be done to remedy the state of affairs. Those figures show us that on the Continent 650,000 tons of motor shipping was under construction during that period, while only 350,000 tons was being built in Great Britain—a figure no more than almost equal to that of Germany alone. To their credit, be it said, all British shipowners have not been so supine in this matter as others; thus we find that Lord Kylsant, chairman of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., in an address to the London Chamber of Commerce on the 13th inst., made the following declaration:

Thirty years ago, South Wales steam coal was delivered at the ports at under 10s per ton! it was now over 25s per ton. A further development was silently taking place in the advent of the motor ship with internal combustion engines. His own shipping companies had no fewer than thirty motor ships, and would shortly launch the largest motor ship in the world.

I have long since retired from business. The motor shipping company which I constituted for the purpose of stimulating British interest in the internal combustion engine was liquidated at the close of the war, because only 3s 6d per share had been paid up—this sum having sufficed to pay for the three vessels that the company had constructed—and the liability of 16s 6d per share was so large as to render it unfair to the shareholders to keep the company in being; moreover, it had been foreseen—as proved to be the case—that it would be impossible to enter into new contracts for shipping during the period of inflation in prices which prevailed for some years after the end of the war. The work, must, therefore, be carried on by others. In numerous trades open without any preference or favor to the whole world, it is the most economical ship that will hold its own, and if the Germans should continue the building of this type of tonnage greatly in excess of its creation by British owners the result will be inevitable—they will secure a practical monopoly in many fields where hitherto the British flag has been predominant.

THE DISPLACEMENT OF COAL.

But, the danger being exposed, I am hopeful that it will be counteracted. Estimates show that already oil-burning ships and those using internal combustion engines have created a consumption of oil which displaces fully the equivalent of 60,000,000 tons of coal per annum; and this is an economic factor of the very deepest importance. I do not look upon it as an unmixed evil that we are unable to export coal in the quantities that we once did; it is far more in the national interests that cheap fuel, upon which the bulk of our manufacturing interests was created, should be used for the purpose of manufacturing at home rather than exported as a raw material to enable our competitors so to employ it.

I foresee the possibility, by means of the cheapening of freights rendered possible by the utilization of the internal combustion engine, of being able to import foodstuffs from many of our Colonies which steam transport would have ruled out as fields for supply for the home markets. Many of these will become customers for our manufactured goods, and by the very fact of being able to take cargo out will cheapen the transport of foodstuffs home. And here it must be remembered that, although the pioneer ship was Swedish and unhappily, not British, a vessel equipped with the internal combustion engine has delivered wheat from Columbia to London—verifying a prediction that I made many years ago.

Enough has been said to indicate the imperative necessity of our tackling the situation with vigor and thoroughness, and to reveal the extent to which other nations are appreciating the revolution that has been effected in the propulsion of ships. It may be added, however, that it is surely a significant fact that, as recorded in the "Motorship" (New York) of this month, fourteen vessels have already been selected for the Government programme of conversion from steam to Diesel power. And, as is well known, that extremely successful Danish company, the East Asiatic Company Ltd. — whose chairman, Etatsraad Anderson, is a genius—have nothing but motor ships in their service. They were the first to realize how obsolete the steamer has become.

His Daughter's Voice

Georgia's poet-laureate, appointed to this honor by the governor, finds entertainment in listening to his daughter's voice by radio. He's Frank L. Stanton, 68-year-old author of such popular pieces as "Mighty Lak a Rose," and "Just a Wearyin' for You." His daughter, Marcelle Stanton Megahee, is a mezzo-soprano, and sings from Station WSB, at Atlanta. Stanton is shown above, listening in. At right is his daughter.

Dickens Chair Sold, Relic Which Stood in Office of "Household Words"

An armchair, similar in appearance to "The Empty Chair," and formerly in the office of "Household Words," was among articles intimately associated with Charles Dickens, sold recently by Messrs. Hodgson.

A writing-table from Gad's Hill Place was also sold, photographs of the articles being inscribed: "Mrs. Hulkes, with Mamie Dickens' best love." The articles sold for £110.

A letter from Dickens to Mrs. Hulkes sending her the remainder of the proofs of the "Tale of Two Cities," with a first issue copy of the first edition, was sold for £28.

"Not half a dozen of my oldest and most trusty literary friends have seen it," wrote the novelist. "It is a real pleasure to me to entrust you with the catastrophe, and to ask you to keep a grim and inflexible silence on the subject until it is published."

THEFT IS CHARGED.

Charged with the theft of $160 E. H. Hurd was released this morning by Judge Monet on personal bail of $200 pending the hearing which is set for July 24.

WHAT ENGLAND HAS TAUGHT THE WORLD

Clothes, Cricket, Football, Puttees and Golf

LONDON, July —(By Mail).—During the war I was watching some French soldiers in puttees kicking a football about. "There are two things," said my companion, "that England has put all over the world—football and puttees." And that led us to think of other things in which our lead had been universally followed. I remember that we mentioned Boy Scouts, the Salvation Army, and the Sam Browne belt, writes Archibald Marshall in the London Daily Mail.

A nation's predominance is shown as much in the little things in which its lead is followed as in the big things—perhaps more. What other nation's example has been followed in so many respects as England's? We have given to the world most of its games and sports. Lawn tennis began in England; so did Bridge. Golf is a Scottish game in its origins, but it had been played in Scotland for centuries before it began to spread everywhere, and it did that when England took it up.

We have never made a universal game of cricket, which seems to belong only to people in our own temperament and is hardly played even in Scotland, Ireland, or Wales.

In the matter of men's clothes we exercise an unassailable example. In the Italian seaside town from which I am writing the young men are going about in recognizable varieties of the Norfolk jacket though I must admit that their remarkable coiffures seem to owe more inspiration to the Zulu. The higher you go in the social scale the nearer you get to the English pattern, so that a well-dressed foreigner is hardly distinguishable from an English gentleman.

One outstanding characteristic of the Englishman abroad is that wherever he settles himself he runs his life on English lines, with no more than a flavor of the country in which he takes up his residence. Not only that, but if he settles in any place in sufficient numbers he draws the natives of his own sort into his ways.

In France, Italy, before the war in Germany and Austria, and to a lesser degree in other countries, English colonies have flourished in a way that no other nation has ever approached. Germans were to be found in great numbers and are now returning to France and Italy; but they were always a race apart and are so more than ever now. Even the Americans don't "put it over" as the English do.

You have only to imagine a group of any other nation whatever settling themselves, let us say, in Brighton or Llandudno, as we have settled in Cannes or Bordighera, with their own clubs to which we should be proud to be invited, their own games, in which we should join, and their own national habits, to see that there is no other side to the picture at all. We can do what no other nation can do in this respect, and take it as quite a natural thing that we should do it.

DRIED PEAS USED TO IMITATE RAINDROPS

The rain machine is one of the oldest props of the theatre, says Walter De Leon, in the Saturday Evening Post, but your up-to-date stage carpenter, electrician and property man, he says, if given sufficient time, money and encouragement, will ultimately produce practically any effect that can be desired. For the making of rain, a wooden drum two feet in diameter and 18 inches wide, lined with tin or sheet iron, is set in a frame and equipped with a handle to revolve it on its own axis. Several handfuls of hard, dried, wrinkled peas are tossed into the interior of this drum. Naturally they roll and clutter at the bottom of the drum. As it is revolved, gravity continues to roll the little peas toward the lowest point. The faster the drum is rotated, the further, harder, faster and noisier the little peas tumble about, and the sound that results from their contact with the metal lining is the most perfect yet devised for reproducing the rustle and pelting of falling rain.

The intensity of off-stage precipitation is directly proportional to the speed at which the peas are agitated. For a real hard rain—falling on a tin roof, for example—small shot are used instead of dehydrated vegetables.

PRINCE PAYS VISIT TO VICTORIA FALLS ON ZAMBESI RIVER

Ball Given in Evening by Governor Differed Little from Similar Function in English Country Home—In Address He Approves Scheme to Colonize Open Spaces of Rhodesia

LIVINGSTONE, Rhodesia, July 18.—(By G. Ward Price, Special Correspondent of the Montreal Star and the North American Newspaper Alliance with His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Copyright, 1925.)—Looking across an undulating green expanse of forest from the royal train an hour before daybreak, the Prince of Wales caught his first glimpse of one of the greatest wonders of the world, the Victoria Falls.

At first, five miles away, it was no more than a great white wall of spray a mile long, looking like the smoke of an intense shrapnel barrage. Then as the train stopped for a moment at a signal box, the dull thunder of distant waters could be heard. Finally we steamed out onto the highest bridge in the world, crossing the Zambesi just below the spot where the river takes its tremendous leap. On one side we had a momentary view of the falls between two precipices. On the other side there was a straight drop of 400 feet beneath us, to where the Zambesi swirled along its cavernous channel in angry foaming eddies.

It was not yet day when he drove out from the station to get a closer view. A great honeycolored half-moon hung low among the stars as a setting for our visit. On the curtain of spray that hangs like a permanent pillar of cloud over the thundering abyss gleamed a lunar halo, wan and pale like the ghost of a lost rainbow doomed to haunt this gloomy chasm.

As if apprised of the royal visit, the Zambesi was flowing in volume quite exceptional for this time of year. On account of the swift current, we could not reach Livingstone Island, at the very edge of the Falls, where their discoverer craned over the 400 foot sheer drop down which the river plunges. The Prince made a little speech recalling the memory of Livingstone and Rhodes.

"There is much to appeal to the imagination here," he said, "in a country called after Cecil Rhodes and in a capital bearing the name of Livingstone. Both were heroes of romance as well as makers of history. One was a missionary of empire, the other a missionary of the gospel."

IN HAUNTS OF THE HIPPO.

For grandeur and beauty of scenery, this was certainly beyond comparison the most memorable day of the Prince's entire tour. He walked the whole breadth of these stupendous falls. Then by motorboat and canoe he went up the broad blue Zambesi, hippopotamus haunted, to a luncheon under the towering palms of a romantic tropical island in midstream. He saw what Livingstone described as "scenes so lovely that they must have been gazed upon by angels in their flight."

The early morning glimpse of the falls by moonlight gave no conception of their hugeness and tremendous might. Here is power enough to supply all South Africa, roaring over the endge of a vast abyss as a supreme example of nature's prodigality.

The water of the falls leap in one unbroken plunge down the face of a sheer precipice higher than the cross of St. Paul's Cathedral. Their breadth of a mile and a quarter is greater than that of the Hudson river.

VALLEY OF DEATH.

As the final chapter of our sight-seeing expedition, we steamed in a luxurious train through what Livingstone sixty years ago named the "Valley of Death," because 600 of his carriers died there from fever. Today it is a health resort. Elderly tourists now stay at a hotel of Riviera quality, close by the edge of the thundering canon which in their boyhood was a place known only through mysterious rumors reaching the outside world from awe-struck natives.

Except for the black faces and scarlet-gold liveries of the servants, the ball which the Governor of Northern Rhodesia, Sir Herbert Stanley, gave here in the evening, differed in no way from similar functions on a summer evening in the grounds of any great country home in England. Two tennis courts had been walled in with a palisade of native grasses, and covered with a thatched roof, to provide the scene for the festivities. On one of the courts a dance floor had been laid, while the other served as reception hall and supper room.

PRINCE APPROVES PLAN.

In another of his happy little addresses, the Prince gave his approval to a new scheme for colonizing the unsettled portions of Rhodesia. "I hope," he said, "that with the co-operation of the home Government, all encouragement and assistance will be given to men and women from the overcrowded British Isles to come here and make their homes in this healthy and beautiful country, with all that it offers in health, wealth and happiness to those who come prepared to work."

Rhodesia is starving for men. She has a territory about as large as Italy and France put together, but the white population, although all picked British stock, numbers only 36,000 against 800,000 blacks, whose labor is an economic necessity. In the territory known as Northern Rhodesia 5,000 Britons administer, trade with, and live among nearly a million blacks.

The Prince was glad to learn that steps are being taken to increase Rhodesia's white population by drawing settlers from a class outside the limited number of Britishers who can bring out the $15,000 or $20,000 which is necessary to start in independent business. Sir John Chancellor, Governor of Southern Rhodesia, said that he had good reason to hope for Imperial approval of a new plan under which emigrants to Rhodesia will be selected by the Overseas Development Board of the Colonial Office in London, and families who have an initial capital of $1,500 will have an equal sum given them through the Imperial and Rhodesian Governments. When they arrive, they will be placed with capable farmers for a year's apprenticeship, to learn local conditions. At the end of the year, they will take up farms for themselves, getting good farm land on easy conditions of deferred payment, while their own capital will be augmented as necessary by the Government, to enable them to make a sound start.

At a district agricultural show in Salisbury, the Prince met a number of experienced Rhodesian farmers who declared that the new scheme offers a good chance to hard workers who come prepared to dispense for a few years with comforts and amusements, in hopes of finding themselves at the end of that period soundly established on their own property in one of the finest countries for whites outside or England or America.

REGATTA IS NOVELTY.

During the royal visit here, Chief Yeta, paramount ruler of the Barotses of Rhodesia, met the Prince under more picturesque conditions than any other native indaba of the tour. The scene was like a mid-African Henley. A great clearing had been made in the thick bush lining the bank of a smooth shining reach of the broad Zambesi. Under the shade of the over-hanging trees a cool encampment of grass huts had been erected.

Here the Barotse chieftain, in a uniform covered with many pounds of gold lace, arrived in a state barge driven by forty muscular half-naked paddlers, who stood upright and danced jerkily with their shoulders between strokes, while the chieftain sat under a huge egg-shaped white awning amidships.

After speeches and a luncheon under awnings of thatch, the Barotses, who had travelled 300 miles down the river to greet the Prince held a native regatta. They raced their long narrow canoes, and speared a straw hippopotamus in keen imitation of real hunting, paddling away hastily from the supposedly wounded struggling giant.

The Prince hesitated in taking a turn up the river in one of the narrow dug-out canoes. Its five rowers, though standing erect, seemed to have no difficulty in keeping their balance, but as soon as the Prince sat down in the middle, his least movement set the craft rolling like a log. His staff, especially the naval members, looked on apprehensively. The Prince, as he pushed off, noted their anxiety, and called back cheerfully: "You'd better turn out the guard; I may fall in any minute."

POISONING CASE ROUSES FRANCE

Woman Accused of Killing Three Children and Two Women

NIMES, France, July—(By Mail).—In the cemetery of St. Gilles, between here and Arles, five bodies are to be exhumed in an attempt to throw light upon the most terrible poisoning case known in France in the last 75 years.

The bodies are those of three women and two men whom Antoinette Scieri, 43, the mother of three children, is accused of having poisoned while acting as an apparently devoted nurse.

She is also charged with the murder of a sixth person, Mme. Gouan, who died after Scieri's arrest, and with the attempted murder of a woman named Mme. Mermand, who is expected to die at any moment.

Scieri, who is a dark-complexioned, black-haired woman, has confessed to the poisoning of three of the dead and has accused Rosalie Gire, a stout woman of 40, of being her accomplice.

This Mme. Gire resolutely denies.

HOW THEY DIED.

How the patients of Scieri died one after another is shown by the following details of the deaths of those she is accused of having murdered:—

M. Lachapelle, an elderly grocer, died on December 24. Mme Lachapelle, his wife, died on December 25. Believed at the time to have been poisoned by eating starlings.

Mme. Douard, 58, living wretchedly on an allowance of less than 10s. a month, died on February 18.

M. Rossignol, a carter, with whom Scieri lived as his wife, died on March 14. Believed at the time to have been poisoned by mussels.

Mlle. Marie Martin, 65, with whom Scieri lodged at the time, died on March 30. She and her sister, Mme. Boyer, are stated to have drunk coffee with Scieri and Mme. Boyer was very ill but recovered.

Mme. Gouan, 60, wife of a farmer, died on April 10 after eating eels.

Scieri, who while in prison at Nimes is wearing the deep mourning which she has worn since the death of Rossignol, has apparently confessed to the three crimes to ensure the safety of the little three-year-old daughter of herself and her poisoned lover. After her arrest she expressed fears that Gire might poison the child.

She stated that she had poisoned the two Lachapelles and her lover and that Mme. Gire had assisted her. The other woman was then arrested and stands charged equally with Scieri.

Scieri, who has adopted a cynical attitude regarding her victims, is deeply concerned about her child, for when being taken from the room of M. Gouy, examining magistrate, she made a plea, wrung from her heart: "Take me to the scaffold if you will, but look after my child."

DARE NOT SAVE HIM.

She states that she poisoned the Lachapelles for the sum of 800 francs (less than £9) which they had in the house and her lover because he was cruel to her. Since her arrest she has expressed remorse for the death of Rossignol.

"When I had fetched the doctor I wanted to suggest that Rossignol should be given a glass of milk, which would counteract the poison, but I dare not," she said.

It is alleged that she used a poison a chemical product, pyralion, used as an insecticide for protecting the vines.

On Saturday Scieri will be confronted with a shopkeeper from whom she is alleged to have bought half a lemonade bottle full of pyralion, containing enough arsenic to kill 300 people.

Scieri is the wife of an Italian named Salmon, who served in the Italian Army in the war and would not return to her on account of her misconduct. She had by him two children, a boy of 16 and a girl of 14, who live with their grand-parents at Vendres Herault.

The expression, "swan song," designates a last or dying work, as of a poet or composer; in allusion to the song a swan is fabled to sing when dying. The expression is many centuries old. In the Phaedo, written by Plato, in ancient Athens, Socrates is represented as saying: "You think that upon the score of fore-knowledge and divining, I am inferiorly inferior to the swans. When they perceive approaching death they sing more merrily than before, because of the joy they have in going to the God they serve."

OUR LONDON LETTER

By MADGE

LONDON, July 2.—(Special by Staff Correspondent).—Many ladies from Canada and Newfoundland were presented at the courts held by the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace on Thursday and Friday of last week.

At Thursday's court, Miss Jean Baldwin, grand-daughter of the late Mr. F. W. Newman and of Mrs. Newman, formerly of Montreal, was presented by Mrs. Houghton.

Miss Baldwin wore a gown of white chiffon, with fine white lace inset, over peach satin. The train was of white chiffon, embroidered with silver butterflies over peach satin, and she carried a fan shaped bouquet of tulle and lilies.

Mrs. Herbert T. Goodland, wife of Colonel Goodland, of Edmonton, wore an apple-green satin gown cut en princesse, with a flounce of heavy gold Venetian lace; the train was of gold lame embroidered with gold, pearls and diamante.

Miss Frances Mulock, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Moss, and grand-daughter of Sir William Mulock, of Toronto, was presented by her mother. Mrs. Moss wore a blue and silver brocade gown with a brilliant diamante ornament, holding the drapery on the hip; manteau de cour of silver lace. Miss Mulock's dress was of green lace and chiffon with train to match, mounted on fine silver tissue.

Miss Anna Hees, of Toronto; Miss Kathleen Rosamund, eldest daughter of Mrs. Alex. Rosamond, of Almonte, Ont.; Miss Margaret Stairs, daughter of Mrs. John F. Stairs, of Montreal, and Mrs. Edward Sullivan, of Toronto, were presented by Mrs. L. S. Amery, wife of the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

The Misses Kathleen and Natalie Sullivan, of Toronto, were presented by their mother, Mrs. Edward Sullivan.

At Friday's court Mrs. G. Howard Ferguson, wife of the Premier of Ontario, wore a gown of white georgette covered with finely embroidered leaves, intersected by large pearl motifs, and with a pointed flounce of embroidered silver tissue. The train of white georgette was similarly embroidered.

Miss Rachel Allan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh A. Allan, of Montreal, wore an original gown of flame chiffon patterned in a novel gold design and further enriched with diamante embroidery. Splendor was also imparted by the gold train embroidered with multi-colored jewels.

Miss Annabella Murray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Murray, of Montreal, wore a dress of silver lace embroidered in crystal and pearls, over pale blue satin beaute. The train was of silver lace lined with pale blue chiffon and she carried a large blue and silver fan.

Miss Nanette Kennedy, of Montreal, had an ivory georgette presentation gown embroidered in silver and diamante and a silver tissue train lined with pale pink and trimmed with heavy silver lace.

Miss Mildred Bennett, of Calgary, looked well in white chiffon, embroidered with pearls and silver over shell pink tissue, with a train to match.

Mrs. Arthur N. Martin, of Calgary, wore a dress of pink and silver brocade, with a train of silver lame lined with pink chiffon, and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Marguerite Bennett, daughter of the Hon. J. R. Bennett, Colonial Secretary of Newfoundland, wore a white chiffon gown, embroidered with pearls and silver over shell pink tissue, with a train to match.

Miss Elizabeth Dawes, of Montreal, a gown of white marocain, heavily embroidered with diamante over silver tissue.

Mrs. A. H. W. Landon, of Montreal, a gown of pale reseda georgette, embroidered with silver beads and a train of embroidered georgette.

Mrs. D. J. Davies, of St. John's, Newfoundland, a dress of beige georgette, trimmed with gold embroidery, manteau de cour of gerogette to match, lined with pale pink georgette.

Mrs. T. J. MacIntyre, of Toronto, a gown of white Brussels lace, embroidered in diamante and crystal, with a diamond cluster at the low waist line; a train of apple-green moire, draped with silver lace, and a large white ostrich fan.

Mrs. Lyman R. Avery, of Ottawa, wore a gown of gold lace over pale pink georgette with gold-beaded girdle, train of gold lace lined with pink georgette, hair bandeau of gold lace and pink rosebuds, and she carried a Victorian posy of roses, sweet peas, lily-of-the-valley and forget-me-nots.

Other Canadian ladies presented at Friday's court were: Miss G. Doble, of Montreal; Miss Constance Dawes, of Montreal; Mrs. Gilbert MacIntyre, of South Perth; Mrs. A. E. Godfrey, of Vancouver; Miss Laura Aitken, of Newcastle, N.B., and Mrs. A. W. Tolmie, wife of Mr. A. W. Tolmie, Canadian Exhibition Commissioner, Ottawa.

Judging by the large number present, I am sure every Canadian in London attended the reception given by the High Commissioner for Canada and Mrs. Larkin in the new Canadian building, Trafalgar Square, on Dominion Day. Mrs. Larkin, in a beautiful gown of beige lace, brown furs, and brown and beige hat with paradise plumes shading from beige to brown, carried a bouquet of shaded sweet peas. Miss Aileen Larkin, who looked charming in a cream lace and chiffon gown and cream hat with a pink rose on one side, assisted her parents in receiving. They stood in the marble hall receiving for over an hour. Well over 1,500 guests were present.

The band of H. M. Grenadier Guards played in the main hall, and a most interesting program of music was provided by Canadian artistes in the spacious office of the High Commissioner. Those who contributed were: Mr. Earle Spicer (baritone); Miss Evelyn Tierney, Miss Gladys Chester, Chief Os-Ke-Non-Ton, Mohawk singer; Mr. Walton Brown and Mr. Gerald Moore, pianist.

Mrs. Baldwin was in black and white foulard and wore a black straw hat trimmed with lace and white ostrich feathers. The American Ambassador brought Mrs. Houghton, who was in deep soft red and wore a black hat. The Marquis of Aberdeen and Temair was there with Lady Aberdeen, who was dressed in black and moss-green with ecru lace. Lord and Lady Cheylesmore were present. Lady Cheylesmore in a mauve silk dress and hat to match. The Hon. Mrs. Douglas Vickers, with a blue and white printed foulard gown, wore a black hat.

Mary Countess of Minto, the wife of a former Governor-General of Canada, was dressed in black, the gown having much lace about it, and into the front of which was pinned a diamond brooch in the form of a maple leaf. Lady Terrington was wearing a frock of cream filet and blue georgette with a big brimmed hat trimmed with flowers, and Lady Struthers a lace gown and brown plumed hat.

The French Ambassador, the German Ambassador, and the Belgian Ambassador were present, and High Commissioners and Agents-General of other Dominions with their ladies.

Among others present were:—The Marquis and Marchioness of Lansdowne, the Marquis and Marchioness of Donegall, the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, the Dowager Countess of Minto, the Earl and Countess of Minto, the Earl and Countess of Haddington, Viscount and Viscountess Lee, of Fareham, Lord and Lady Beaverbrook, Viscount and Viscountess Chelmsford, Lady Strathcona and Mount Royal, Lord and Lady Riddell, Lord Richard Nevill, Major the Right Hon. Edward and Lady Dorothy Wood, Lady Violet Henderson, Captain the Hon. Arthur and Mrs. Howard, the Bishop of Willesden and Mrs. Perrin, the Hon. John Nivinson, Sir Duncan and Lady Orr Lewis, Major-General Charles and Mrs. MacDougall, Sir Frederick and Lady Lewis, Sir Hardman and Lady Lever, Commander and the Hon. Mrs. Kitson, Sir Clement and Lady Kinloch Cooke, Sir Thomas Lipton, Sir Philip and Lady Cunliffe-Lister, Sir Godfrey and Lady Lagden, Sir William and Lady Joynson-Hicks, the Right Hon. L. S. and Mrs. Amery, Lieut.-Colonel Innes, Brig.-General Garnet Hughes, Sir Samuel and Lady Maud Hoare, Sir Hamar and Lady Greenwood, Lady and Miss Gage, Major-General Sir John and Lady Hanbury-Williams, the Right Hon. David, Dame Margaret and Miss Lloyd George, the Hon. Dame Margaret Greville, Sir Percy Girouard, Lieut.-Colonel and Mrs. Hamilton Gault, the Master of Elibank and the Hon. Mrs. Gideon Murray, Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Fleet, Sir Warren and Lady Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Max Colyer Ferguson, Sir William and Lady Davies, Sir Woodman and Lady Burbridge, Sir Arthur and Lady Griffith Boscawen, Colonel W. A. Bishop, V.C.; Sir Harry Brittain, M.P., and Lady Brittain, Lord and Lady Richard Cavendish, Lady Elizabeth Byng, Lady Mary Byng, Lady Drummond, the Hon. G. H. Ferguson and Mrs. Ferguson, Col. Badgerow, Madame de Sola, Miss de Sola and the Messrs. de Sola, Mrs. Cooper Smith, Dr. and Mrs. Cameron Stewart, Mrs. Obed-Smith, Miss Obed-Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Allingham, Miss Allingham, Mr. and Mrs. McCann, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Poole, Dr. and Mrs. McNally, Mrs. M. A. Jamieson, Mrs. Warrington, Mrs. J. S. McKinnon, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Nixon, Mrs. Loughter Ball, Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. Reid Hyde, Mr. and Mrs. C. Urquhart, Mr. and Mrs. Septimus Warwick, Mrs. L. S. Avery, Mrs. W. A. Tolmie, Mr. and Mrs. Dring, Mr. Nugent Clougher.

Mr. B. M. and the Hon. Mrs. Hallward have arrived in London from Montreal.

At the weekly At Home held by Mrs. Amery, wife of the Colonial Secretary, the Canadians present included: the Marchioness of Donegall, Mrs. Lambert, Miss L. de Sola, Mrs. E. B. Smith, Mrs. R. W. Harris, Miss Chipman, O.B.E.; Mr. and Mrs. Dinnick, Mrs. William Hendrie, Mrs. Algernon Wolverton, Mrs. Alan Sullivan, Misses Sullivan, Miss A. M. Lees, Mr. and Mrs. de Jardin, and Mr. and Mrs. Percival F. Ridout.

Lady Violet Astor's dance in Carlton House terrace was preceded by a dinner party, guests at which included Mary Countess of Minto, Lord and Lady Minto, and Lord and Lady Astor. Newman's Band played for the dance, and the rooms were decorated with pink roses and delphinums. The entertainment was in the nature of a farewell party, for the host and hostess sailed for Canada on the Empress of Scotland last Saturday, en route to Australia for the Imperial Press Conference. They expect to be away for six months.

Miss Alix Cavendish, second daughter of Lord Richard and Lady Moyra Cavendish, and niece of the Duke of Devonshire, died on Monday after a long illness. She was twenty-three years old.

Sir Campbell Stuart and Mrs. Ernest Stuart entertained to luncheon at 3 Bryanston Square on Tuesday, the American Ambassador and Mrs. Houghton, the Premier of Ontario and Mrs. Ferguson, the President of the Board of Trade and Lady Cunliffe-Lister, Viscount and Viscountess Burnham, Lord and Lady Invernairn, Lord Stonehaven, Sir Robert and Lady Falconer, Colonel and Mrs. Edward M. House and Lady Drummond.

LIGHTNING CREATES HAVOC IN CHURCH

TOLEDO.—During a terrible thunderstorm the church of St. Martin village was struck, part of the tower was demolished and the great clock was hurled to the ground.

Lightning then entered the church by the choir window, and circled round the altar of St. Martin, but without damaging it.

In the nave the paving stones were thrown up into the air. Some stained glass windows were broken.

Thunder crashes had almost the effect of an earthquake shock in the houses of the village.

Life and Character Reading

JULY 17

The sign governing this date is Cancer. It is shown on the Zodiac as the Crab, and is the head sign of the Water Triplicity. The governing planet is the Moon and the combination of these two makes a very complex nature which it is difficult for the individual born under them to overcome. The birthstone is a black onyx, and the astral colors are russet brown and green.

The attention of children born on this date should be turned in babyhood to the contemplation of the true, sweet, the tender and harmonious. They should not be taken to funerals, nor made to spend much time with people who are very ill.

The faults of people of this date are laziness, selfishness, jealousy, vanity and love of money for money's sake.

There are many things in this world which money can buy, but it cannot buy the advice and knowledge which one may gather by a few moments daily with the Star Want Ads.
