EIGHTIETH YEAR

Effective July 1, Compulsory School Attendance Becomes Law

No Monthly Fees For Children From 6 to 14,
No Fees For Poor Children Over Age 14

Quebec province now has a compulsory school attendance law. Major General Sir Eugene Fliset, Lieutenant Governor of the Province, gave the Royal Assent to the measure Wednesday morning, May 26, objective of ardent advocates of education, for the past half century and more, and the bill which Hon. Hector Perrier, Provincial Secretary, laid before the Legislature Assembly early in the session is now the law of the province, and there is no gap in the galaxy of the provinces of Canada in respect to the principle that each child shall be given an opportunity to learn at least the rudiments of literacy and the better fit into his future state of citizenship.

The bill received third reading by the Legislative Council at a morning sitting, and was thus eligible for Royal sanction during the afternoon.

The law takes effect with the advent of the new school year, which is July 1.

Not one of the Legislative Councils registered a vote against the bill when third reading was given to the measure in the council. Three members, Sir Thomas Chapais, L. A. Giroux and Pierre Bertrand, refused to register their votes, while two other opposition members, Hon. Alphonse Raymond and J. L. Barbeau, voted for third reading.

Those who voted for were: Hon. Philippe Brail, G. A. Simard, Mederic Martin, P. R. Durembay, Raoul Grothe, Gustave Lemieux, Elysee Theriault, Frank Connors, Gordon Hyde, Wilfrid Bovey, and Felix Mesier—13 and none registered against.

Sir Thomas Chapais explained that he had not voted against second reading under the circumstances, not thinking it proper to do so. He had given his opinion clearly and frankly on the bill, and asked that the bill be adopted in third reading on division, as was usually the case. Mr. Giroux said he was also willing to have the third reading on division. He believed the law could not be applied, and was immature and inopportune.

Mr. Brail, Government leader, said the bill was a matter of importance, the most important of the session and of many other sessions, and that it was important that there be a vote registered so that it would be known who was for or against.

Mr. Bertrand said that the measure was not just because it did not give the necessary assistance to the poor. Mr. Brail said that the bill was quite clear that there would be no monthly fees for children aged from 6 to 14, and no fees for children of the poor over the age of 14.

Mr. Durembay said that the Council of Public Education stood as a guarantee as to the education to be given, and confidence should be placed in this body. The bishops of the province and heads of normal schools were members of it, and could be counted upon as regards moral and doctrinal matters.

RATTLESNAKE PEN

Hitler's main hopes of forestalling an invasion of Europe have been staked upon his fleet of U-boats. He has always believed that if he could sufficiently hamper the movement of men and materials from the New World to the Old he might be able to sit behind his fortifications and hold out against the United Nations until they had bled themselves white in an effort to muster a great army transported across thousands of miles of ocean. Shown here is one of the few photographs made of the famous bomb-proof U-boat pens the Germans have built in an effort to escape the might of our air force. A sub-commander stands on his bridge as the craft noses into its berth. The roofs are constructed of steel and concrete many feet thick. The scene is from "Invasion of Europe", the latest National Film Board release in the World in Action Series. The new documentary film weighs the chances of invasion at various points along the continent's great coastline.

NEW APPOINTMENT

C. R. DEY

The Canadian Bank of Commerce announces the appointment of Mr. C. R. Dey as Superintendent of Quebec Branches, succeeding Mr. G. Gordon Laird, who is retiring after a long and distinguished career in Canadian banking.

Mr. Dey was born in Aberdeen, Scotland; joined the Bank in 1907 and following his early training successively filled the positions of Inspector at Montreal and Head Office, Vice-President of the Canadian Bank of Commerce (California) Ltd. at San Francisco, Manager of the Victory Square Branch, Vancouver, B.C., and Assistant Manager of the Montreal Branch.

Former Glenelg Resident Nurse in Tunisia

The following item comes to us as being of interest to the people of the district due to the fact that, Lieut. Helen Elva Grant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Grant, formerly resided with her parents in Glenelg, and her mother, Mrs. Grant, was formerly Miss Ethel McKee of Orms-town, while Mr. Grant lived at the home of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Donnelly, at Elgin, Mr. and Mrs. Grant now reside at Berkeley.

The item referred to is as follows: Two weeks ago word was received that Lieut. Helen Elva Grant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Grant, 3335 Kenmore, Berkeley, was among the first 25 nurses to arrive in Tunisia in the transport group. She will be on hospital planes taking trips to the front lines to carry back the injured to base hospitals.

This is very dangerous work and transport planes are accompanied by fighter planes. The nurses in this group in all probability will work in overalls, and be subject to all kinds of hardships.

Lieut. Grant, a graduate of Berkeley High, started her training as a nurse at Harper hospital and completed it at Ford hospital. She was on the staff there for some time. Shortly before leaving for the service she was a private nurse for the Edsel Ford.

Lieut. Grant is a member of Harland Rebekah Lodge 395 of Berkeley and is the only one of its members engaged in war service.

She stood at the head of her class in training for transport duty.

INSTALL ARTIFICIAL SMOKE DEFENCE

What The C.C.F. Plans To Do With Canada

"Oh... That Mine Adversary Had Written A Book!"

ARTICLE NO. 1

This is the first in a series of articles reprinted from "The Canadian Statesman", Bowmanville, Ont. We believe our readers will be interested in these articles as they appear each week and that they will gain much knowledge of the C.C.F. Party, which is trying its best to invade this province and win the people over to its platform. It will be well to study the matter and be ready for the attack when it comes.

The editor of The Canadian Statesman occasionally wears a trifle with the people in business who condemn the socialists and other opponents of free enterprise in sweeping generalities. It isn't enough to thrust something aside with some blanket statement, such as, "Oh, that's socialist," or "That's just radical doctrine." A lot of people do not know quite what they mean except that they regard "socialism," "radicalism" as rather vague but rather terrifying "isms."

Free enterprise — the system whereby all of us who work for a living strive to obtain a modest competence — suffers a good deal from the fact that it has not troubled to familiarize itself with the case and the policy of the socialists. It is only when we understand the other fellow's policy that we can find out what there is in it that is sound, unsound or unhealthy.

The socialists have developed a literature and a political movement (the C.C.F.); a good deal of their literature is just propaganda and nothing more. In this propaganda it is their habit to single out some isolated instance of business malpractice and to misrepresent it as characteristic of the hated "capitalism" as a whole. Practically the whole of business rises up in wrath against the very same things that the socialists single out. Business steadily moves forward ethically to the elimination of the business pirate, but the socialists carefully do not say so.

Politically in Canada the scene offers much of high interest. Sooner or later the Liberal Government of Canada will fall; that is the lot of all governments at some time or other. When the Mackenzie King government falls, some other government must necessarily take over the reins.

Canadians have but two choices before them of late for this alternative government. The Progressive Conservative Party and (b) the C.C.F. Mr. Bracken, the new leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, has made it perfectly clear that he stands for the preservation of free enterprise as the best system for setting Canadians constructively to work after the war. This, of course, does not mean the banning of government-spending enterprises to bridge the post-war gap while business is occupied in changing over from producing war materials to producing peace-time goods. Nor does it mean a barrier against government spending to ensure full employment in all circumstances. Quite the contrary. It means that thousands of employers are better than just one employer—the State. Thus we know within measurable limits where the Progressive Conservative Party stands.

But where does the C.C.F. stand? What is its policy? Questioning himself thus the editor was reminded of the lamentation of Job: "Oh that mine adversary had written a book!" This, of course, prompted the editor to ask: "Is there such a book?" Pursuit of the answer to this question led inevitably to the literature of socialism in Canada as advocated by and for the C.C.F.

The C.C.F. stands for socialism and proposes at socialism in Canada. There can be no dispute about this. Recently when The Ottawa Journal twitted the C.C.F. with seeking to avoid socialist label, David Lewis, the national secretary of the C.C.F. wrote a fairly warm letter to the editor of the paper, insisting that socialism was part of his party's national constitution.

What, then, does this modern, stream-lined socialism for Canada consist of? You can find it where the editor found it, in a book called "Social Planning for Canada" (Thos. Nelson and Sons, Toronto, $3.75). It was published by the Research Council of the League for Social Reconstruction, a body regarded more or less as the brain trust of the C.C.F. That research council consisted of seven socialists, several of them college professors. The leading political luminary in this galaxy is Professor Frank Scott of McGill University, who is national chairman of the C.C.F. This book was published in 1935.

Later, in 1938, a second book was published by the League for Social Reconstruction, more or less purporting to bring the socialistic outline up to date. Its real purpose would seem to have been, however, to soft-pedal some of the bluntness and unguardedness and to smooth over some of the more naive declarations in the earlier work. The editor proposes to review this literature in a series of seven articles so that our readers may take a real look at what socialism aims at in Canada and determine for themselves whether they really want that sort of thing.

Studying seriously these socialistic books, the editor was quite surprised to encounter something that closely touched his own business — and the business of every newspaper and the business of every citizen in Canada. The socialists would destroy press freedom, inevitably. The editor proposes to get this particular matter off his chest in the next article.

BLIND ACTOR'S TRIUMPH

One of the principal parts in the new film "The Silver Fleet" (that of a villainous Gestapo chief), is played by Mr. Edmond Knight. Blinded in the attack on the "Bismarck," Mr. Knight is the first professional sightless actor, on either stage or screen, to have played the part of a sighted person. It is a truly wonderful performance.

"The Silver Fleet" is a British tribute to the silent struggle of the Dutch against their Nazi oppressors, with Mr. Ralph Richardson in the leading part as a patriotic ship owner.

Lachute Spring Fair To Open June 9th

For many years Lachute Spring Fair has enjoyed a high reputation among the agricultural shows of this Province. The directors have been busy at work with details for this year's show, which opens on Wednesday, June 9. This year the four-day program is being re-established, instead of three days as in latter years, and from all reports, each day will be crowded with interesting events, with horse racing taking a prominent part.

In addition to a number of vaudeville performers in front of the grandstand there will be the Great Sims Midway, complete with Ferris wheel, merry-go-round, loop-o-plane and "The Whip," a proven thriller, all amid bright lights and big tents including game concessions to furnish fun for the crowds.

"The Why And How of Rationing"

A Review by the Bank Of Nova Scotia

Best rationing may often be the best method of distributing goods made scarce by war conditions has come to be widely accepted on this continent over the past years. Says the Monthly Review of the Bank of Nova Scotia. The lesson has been driven home, it is pointed out, by experience of the unfairness of "first-come-first-served" as a method of distribution. That method allocates goods to those people most leashed or most patient, most favoured by the distributor, or most determined to fill their own cellars in obedience to the latest rumour. Another alternative rationing plan would favour those with the longest purses, as well as set up all the objectionable repercussions which have led the belligerent nations to accept, in varying degree, policies of price and income control.

Rationing, however, is not a panacea for all the difficulties and inequities of wartime shortages. Some of the problems to be faced in rationing effectively may be solved with relative ease, others only at the cost of great administrative difficulty and achieving no more than rough justice to consumers. First are the problems concerned with supply—for the cake must not only be cut up, it must also reach the table. Goods like fruits, vegetables, meat, eggs, and meat are inherently hard to ration because control of supply is difficult. Second, there are the difficulties which arise from differences in consumers' needs and consumption habits. Commodities normally consumed in fairly equal quantities, for which individual needs do not differ greatly, which have few substitutes, and whose supply is large enough to give all an adequate share, present relatively minor problems. However, the more widely goods are distributed, the more difficult it is to control supply. It is the likelihood of many special claims being submitted which will be difficult to classify and adjudicate.

The Review points out that these difficulties are probably greater on this continent than in Britain because a negligible supply of the food supply is imported, because patterns of consumption vary more than in a dense, homogeneous population like that of Britain, and because distance creates problems of transport and distribution. On the other hand, there are advantages to coming late to rationing for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. In its price-control and rationing programs, it has already built up research facilities and an extensive control administration. Moreover, it is possible to borrow and adapt the methods used by other countries and to avoid the difficulties they encountered. Finally, "courage may be derived from the words of a commentator on British food control: 'Most striking, perhaps, is the number of things generally considered administratively impracticable which, when attempted, have proved extraordinarily successful.'"

Various methods of rationing are discussed in the Review, the two basic types being permits and coupons. The permit system, which restricts buying rights to those whose needs are proven most vital and urgent, has been used chiefly for consumers' durable goods in most countries. Coupon systems are suited to goods which must be distributed to all, or to broad groups, in fairly uniform amounts, and at relatively frequent intervals. Canada has so far had experience only with one type—that which entitles a consumer to a specified amount of a commodity in a given period. Tea and coffee, however, are in a joint ration—device by which consumers' choice may be taken into account, preventing the issue of coupons for a product to those who consume little or none of it, and unnecessary curtailment of the consumption of heavier users. The meat ration is somewhat similar, for the grouping of meats according to bone content allows consumers to obtain a fairly equal amount of edible meat, for each coupon and permits freedom of choice among varieties. The points system, first used for clothing in Europe, and recently introduced into the United States for processed foods, and for meats, cheese and fats, allows large groups of commodities to be distributed with freedom of choice among the items. Each product within the group is given a point value, and the total number of points which may be spent is limited. In the United States, for instance, 48 points may be spent on processed foods every month, and they are represented by 12 coupons (3 each of 4-point, 5-point, 2-point, and 1-point value). The system is a convenient way of extending rationing to additional goods without increasing the number of coupons.

English River Rifle Club Retains St. Lawrence Trophy For Second Year

G. W. F. Barwick Wins Highest Individual Average Award For Second Time—A. A. Allen Bid For Second Place—Both Men Members of English River Club

The second annual banquet and presentation of awards of the Montreal and District Sporting Rifle Association was held in the Queen's Hotel, Montreal, on Friday evening, May 22nd. Mr. Keith L. Woolley, President, was in charge of the program.

Mr. Keith Morris, office manager of the Association, department of C.S.L. and supervisor of the Dominion Marksmen Association, was the principal speaker. He outlined briefly, plans of the organization for developing interest in shooting and stressed the need for good planning within the organization, because of the shortage and difficulty in obtaining ammunition for practice and competition.

In his presidential address, Mr. Woolley reported on the successful season of the clubs within the association and paid tribute to the officials and team captains, who had served faithfully during the past year. He stressed the need of all clubs to promote a plan to enlarge their membership and to utilize experienced members and available ammunition in teaching new members the art of shooting. This, he pointed out, was particularly vital within the organization of the C.P.C. He also paid tribute to the progress made by the Ladies' Rifle Club of the Montreal Tramways Co. "It was the intention," he said, "to endeavour to train all its 1500 C.P.C. members in the art of handling firearms."

The awards presented were as follows: St. Lawrence Sugar Trophy, won for the second consecutive year by the English River Rifle Club, Riverfield, Que., under Captain E. Carson, who received the trophy from Mr. Keith Morris, in the absence of Mr. M. Johnston.

Individual prizes to leaders in the Red and Blue Divisions were won by the English River Club (Red) and the No. 34 Police Club (Blue). Presentations were made by A. Crawford, Vice-President of the Association to the Red Division and by A. Whitman, Secretary, to the Blue Division.

The award for the highest individual average was won for the second time by G. W. F. Barwick, of the English River Club, with an average of 99.9-8x bulls. This award was presented by Mr. Woolley.

The second highest award was presented by Y. Lazier, Treasurer of the Association, to A. Miranda, whose score was 99.7-8x bulls. A. A. Allen of the English River Club, bid for individual second place, but the ruling of the Association is that two individual prizes cannot go to the same club. Awards for the most improved average throughout the season were won by J. E. Sutton of No. 26 C.P.C. and Stanley Russell of the Canadian Vickers, who received their awards from Captain E. A. Levesque, who was one of the originators of the Association, three years ago.

The President's Cup, which is held for one year by the team showing the best sportsmanship in the season, was won by No. 34 C.P.C., of which Mr. Woolley made the presentation.

During the evening a letter was read from D. E. Blair, Honorary President, who was unable to be present, in which he expressed his tribute to the progress and growth of the Association, with special emphasis on the part which training of ladies in rifle shooting has played during the past season. Letters were read from M. M. Johnston and T. R. McLaghen, who were also unable to be present.

At the head table were: Keith L. Woolley, President, and Mrs. Woolley; Captain and Mrs. E. A. Levesque; Kenneth Morris; A. Crawford, Vice-President, and Mrs. Crawford; and A. Whitman, Secretary. Approximately 85 members and their wives, of whom 17 were from the English River Rifle Club, attended the banquet.

The English River Rifle Club Championship Team was comprised of the following men: E. G. Carson, Captain; G. W. F. Barwick, A. A. Allen, G. Roy, Roy Carson, Roy Angell and K. L. Nash.

A troupe of variety artists from the Canadian Legion gave much pleasure and added greatly to the enjoyment of the occasion.

TROPHY WON FOR SECOND CONSECUTIVE YEAR

The reproduction above is of the trophy won by the English River Rifle Club, Riverfield, Que. for second consecutive year, and awarded to members of the Montreal and District Sporting Rifle Association. The trophy was presented by the St. Lawrence Sugar Refineries Ltd. for annual competition among the clubs of the Association, and is known as the St. Lawrence Sugar Trophy. The presentation was made to Captain E. Carson, of the English River Rifle Club by Kenneth Morris in the absence of M. M. Johnston. The trophy is awarded for the Championship of Quebec.

2,000,000 British Children Have Never Seen an Orange

War Has Denied Children in Great Britain Many of the Joys and Privileges Experienced By Children of Canada

London.—Bananas, grapefruit and bright lights have become things of a mythical world to British children who were babes in arms when the war started. They have become subjects to think, talk and wonder about, but not to see—at least until after the war.

Just how rare and mystical tropical fruits are in the minds of children was portrayed when two boys in a London hospital thought a bunch of bananas was a new type of medicine. They had to be shown how to peel them and it was only after lengthy encouragement that they reluctantly consented to taste the "medicine."

There are nearly 2,000,000 boys and girls between the ages of five and seven in Britain who have heard about oranges and lemons, but what they look like, let alone taste, is virtually unknown to them.

In a representative section of children in a London County Council school at West Kensington none of a class of 40 could remember having seen shop windows lit up at night the unshaded beams of car lights grapefruit or Brazil nuts.

Student and Teacher Employment During Summer Vacation

Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Minister of Labour, today appealed to school teachers and to students—university, college, high school and lower school—to engage at farm work or other useful employment during the long summer vacation this year. "Farmers will be in most urgent need of all the help they can get, all through the summer," the Minister said. "Other important war industries are also short of workers. Therefore, the Government confidently hopes that teachers and students will not regard the closing down of the schools for the summer as a holiday this year, but rather that they will consider the time as giving them an opportunity to aid directly in solving Canada's wartime labour problems. The nation will need all the help these people can give."

Hon. Mr. Mitchell also pointed out that, in view of labour shortages, farmers will have to exercise a good deal of patience when some teachers, students and others first begin work in agriculture. "With the shortage of fully qualified workers, all industries have had to take inexperienced people. Industrial plants have shown considerable patience and ingenuity in training workers who were new to the job. In order to develop the labour required from the materials available, it will be necessary that farmers do the same. Last year many farmers showed a good deal of patience in initiating persons not accustomed to farming. It is to be hoped and expected that all farmers will this year give evidence of the same spirit."

At the same time as he made these statements, Mr. Mitchell pointed out that National Selective Service is giving attention to helping in absorbing into employment all teachers and students. Plans in effect will utilize the services of the Employment and Selective Services Offices and are being carried out in cooperation with the Governments of the Provinces and the Canadian Teachers Federation.

Students in medical and dental courses will continue their studies throughout the summer, while those in pure science courses are permitted to continue at some universities during the holidays, if they wish. This is part of the programme to speed up the graduation of students in these courses, as their services after graduation are urgently needed. Under-graduates in pure and applied science, other than those continuing their studies, are being directed wherever possible to summer employment of an essential nature which will at the same time be of assistance to the students in their technical training. Employment and Selective Service Offices have received information from the War-time Bureau of Technical Personnel at Ottawa, as to suitable types of employment, and each university has appointed a senior staff member as consultant to these Offices in doubtful cases, help they can get.

Other students, whether university or high school or lower school, will be induced to accept employment in agriculture where possible, or work in other industries of high priority where they do not go into agriculture.

Arrangements have been made to locate officials of local Employment and Selective Service Offices at universities and colleges for a limited period before the end of the academic term to advise and direct students to summer employment. Special arrangements have been made under the Dominion-Provincial Farm Labour Committees established to direct the farm labour programme in each Province, to recruit students for farm employment during the summer vacation. For example, it is expected that the Ontario Farm Service Force, financed under the Dominion-Provincial farm labour agreement, will place thousands of students on farms this summer. Several of the Provinces, through their Departments of Education, have permitted students to leave school before the end of the term if they have secured a certain minimum standing. To work on farms, some Provinces are adjusting the dates of the holiday period so that the holiday will coincide with the time of peak demand for seasonal farm help.

Contributions For the Hospital

SINCE the drive started for funds for The Huntingdon County Hospital, the response has been very gratifying. $4,850 has been received as reported at a meeting on Friday. This amount represents almost a quarter of the objective, so that it bids fair to be well subscribed by the time the hospital is ready for opening.

The Finance Committee for the drive is very anxious to have all pledge cards returned as quickly as possible and wishes to impress upon those who feel they cannot afford a large sum, that small contributions are as welcome as larger ones. If your circumstances do not permit of a large contribution, it will be known that your intentions are good and that you are just as willing to support the project. Everyone in Huntingdon County should take an interest in this project and support it to the limit of their ability, for it is never known when the facilities of a hospital may be needed by any one of us.

As pointed out in previous articles on the Hospital Fund, contributions can be made on a deferred payment or instalment system. A down payment of so much and then a sum each month or each quarter until the amount pledged is paid up. Such a method provides an easy way for people to make a contribution out of income, without pinching themselves too much by making a lump sum contribution. It may even be possible to make an increased contribution under such a system.

The drive has got away to a good start, so let us all get behind it and see that it is made a success, as other drives in the past have been made successes.

Prime Minister Churchill said it is intended to have no drones among the people of England in after the war plans. This is going to be tough on the idle rich.

Will the Ceilings Crash?

AT the moment there is considerable apprehension as to whether the bugbear, inflation, will be warded off. Much has been done to avoid inflation during the war and prevent if possible the depression period which naturally follows after a war. All methods for warding off this period have been used, among which and the most predominant are, price ceilings and wage ceilings, the prevention of spending money on unnecessary articles and the introduction of compulsory savings.

In the instituting of price ceilings, subsidies have been granted to certain manufacturers in order to keep prices to the consumer at a certain level in conformity to the wage freezing law. Added to this a cost-of-living bonus has been granted to wage earners to stabilize the cost-of-living increases which came about before the freezing orders were made. The wage freezing law prevents wages from being increased except by means of the cost-of-living bonus set by the government or by special permission to a special board in control.

Certain factors are forever creeping into the situation, such as the lowering of production and increase in demand, or a shortage of labor, or demands for higher rates of pay from workers on the farm and in industries. All these factors have the tendency to upset the price levels to which certain items are frozen or placed under a ceiling. When inflation control was first brought into being, the increase in the cost of living was first studied and it was found to have risen by so many points. Each point was calculated on the basis in cash of 25c. This is re-computed by government statisticians at certain periods throughout the year and it is determined how much or how little the cost of living has changed. If it has changed a whole point or more the cost-of-living index is raised or lowered accordingly by the amount of whole points of change. In this way and by means of the subsidies, the prices are controlled in relation to the levels of wages and salaries.

Recently, much has been heard of increases in wages to different workers in various sections of the country. In some instances wage increases have been granted by means of the cost-of-living bonus. But still this has not met the workers' demands. At the moment, the War Labour Board is sitting to hear disputes in connection with the wage structure, and at the conclusion will give its judgment on the matters before it.

In the meantime, the agitation for wage increases continues, and those in authority of the ceilings are apprehensive that the demands will be met and the whole price ceiling structure will crash in ruins.

Since the institution of the pay-as-you-go income tax plan and the revised schedule of earnings on which such income tax should be paid, the wages of the workers have decreased by the amount of the tax and according to the status of the person. The scale is such that the more a person earns the greater the amount of the deductions. Thus any amount earned by working longer hours, is almost entirely eaten up by the extra deductions. Part of the deductions is called savings and will be returned to the person after the war, and this is known as compulsory savings. In many plants there is an honor war savings deduction plan, through which the workers buy War Savings Certificates in a payroll deduction basis. This is also deducted from their wages in addition to the tax.

All these deductions are being taken from the wages which are fixed at a certain level, regardless of whether that wage was sufficient for the cost of living or not. To supplement this somewhat, an order was made whereby it was compulsory for all employers to pay the cost-of-living bonus, instead of just a certain few. Those who had been paying the cost-of-living bonus previous to the new order, were paying it on a basis of the points designated up to that time. But when all employers were ordered to pay the bonus, those coming in at that time were only expected to pay 60c per week, because wages had been or were supposed to have been, increased in accordance to cost of living standards at that time. Meanwhile those who had been paying cost-of-living bonus previous to the new order, increased the rate to $4.25 in accordance to the cost-of-living index set at 17 points.

At the sitting of the War Labor Board, this point has been raised by many representatives submitting briefs. Since the bonus is regarded as a special war indemnity, workers cannot understand why the amount is not uniform for all. When this bonus was first announced labor accepted it in lieu of increased basic wage rates. Its misunderstanding has caused much discussion among workers and is partly the cause of requests for increased rates of pay. Donald Gordon, head of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, has said that if stabilization cannot be continued the price ceiling will have to be abandoned.

One of the reasons for freezing prices and wages, was to keep prices within controllable bounds and to prevent great spending by the workers and try to divert extra money available into savings for the post war period. When increased demand for goods prevails, higher prices come into force and inflation is the result. Co-operation on the part of all is the only way in which inflation can be controlled and prices kept within reasonable bounds.

On the other side of the picture is the fact that if wages are increased, the goods produced by the workers granted the increase, will have to be advanced in price, or the government will have to subsidize the industry in order to keep the price to ceiling levels. If the government continues to subsidize this and that, it will mean that more in taxation will have to be obtained from the people in order to meet the increased expenditure. If this is not done, then more goods will have to be produced and sold in the same time, in order to meet the increased cost in the manufacture of same.

The test of the price ceilings and inflation control is at hand, both the employer and the employee have legitimate arguments and the government has to decide the case to the amicable agreement of all parties, while still trying to control inflation and price ceilings at decided levels. If cost increases the expense of production beyond reason, it will mean that the government will either have to subsidize industry or allow it to increase its prices to the consumer. If the commodity comes outside the list of those controlled, it can be raised anyway, but such a raise will have its effect by causing the cost of living to be increased by that much. Thus it would seem that the crossroads have been reached and much will depend upon the outcome of the discussions now going on with the War Labor Board, as to whether the ceilings will hold, or crash.

Compulsory Education Bill Passed

AFTER a battle of over half a century compulsory education will come into effect on July 1st, in Quebec Province. It should prove a boon to the children now coming forward to become pupils, in that they will receive a proper education, that has been denied many others before them. Lack of education to a number of persons in this province has presented them with a serious handicap in present day conditions and the handicap is one they did not rightly deserve.

However, the bill was given Royal Assent on Wednesday of the past week and the Act will come into force on July 1st of this year. From that date it will be compulsory for parents to send their children to school, from the age of six years until they are fourteen, and the tuition for that period will be free. For the period after that time fees will be paid, but if it is proved that parents are unable to pay, the child will be allowed to continue without payment.

Although it may not be realized at this time, the passing of this bill is one of the greatest pieces of legislation this province has ever witnessed. It marks a progressive step that will be to the benefit of all children of school age, both at this time and in their after life. Such a piece of legislation should have been brought into effect long before this, as it would have helped the province generally and saved many controversies.

Restoration of Agriculture

NOT long ago, Mr. P. C. Armstrong of the N.C.P.R., in Montreal, told an audience that a leading economist had calculated that, in Canada, wages to farm workers were only 24% of wages to industrial employees, and that Canada compared very badly, in this respect, with Australia, where rural wages are 33% of urban wages, and Britain, where farm wages are 48% than city wages.

The trouble has been that agriculture in Canada has had too little return to enable the farmer to pay wages in competition with other and more favoured industries, and we see the consequence now, in our inability to persuade competent workers to leave the city for the farm—even when increased food production is the biggest of national needs.

The trouble is that agriculture has been neglected in our national plans. It does not seem able to pay full wages—even to the independent farmer. It does not seem able to make such a return on capital that the farmer can pay even reasonable interest, on reasonable amounts of borrowing.

Of course, the answer is not either to push farm wages lower, or for the farmer not to be able to borrow what capital he needs. Neither cheap labour nor debt relief will cure the trouble. The cure should come now, for it is becoming quite clear that the biggest post-war problem is to find food enough to go around, and, as this becomes realized, we may see a return to optimism, and the first signs of the restoration of agriculture to the position of a solvent industry.

1831 Walter Barr came. Out by George Caldwell's there was quite a settlement of Americans. The year I came there arrived an American, Henry Denis, a blacksmith by trade. At that time there was not a dollar in cash on the American side, and we were better off, for potash and lumber brought money. He had got in debt, and came to make enough to pay it off. A man Dank, who lived on it, hired him, and for pay let him make 3 bbls. of ashes, which he took to Montreal and sold, and returned to the States to pay his debts with the proceeds. He never came back. During his stay of 6 months, he was active in arousing a religious interest. He was a local preacher and a clever man. He preached at John Ongles, and the house may yet be seen on George Caldwell's. There formed a class. He did the same at Page's and at some place on the Pine Plains. All three were large classes. On his leaving (Dr.) John Armstrong took charge of the class. Denis, I consider, the founder of Methodism in this part. His daughter is married to Lincoln of Fort Covington, and I believe he became a regular preacher after his returning to the States. When old Mr. Armstrong came he did little else but go about preaching and exhorting. It would be in 1832, I think that a building that served as chapel and school was built on McNair's lot. The foundation can still be seen. I only knew of Armstrong marrying two couples, but he baptized many, myself and Bill Carr among them. In 1831 I went as deck hand on the steamer Swan, that plied between Lachine and the Cascades, and the following year on the Brougham, a new boat. The first steamer on the route was the St. Lawrence. Capt. McAllister, who died of the cholera in 1832, I do not know when he started. We generally made only one trip a day, but if there were tows, we went twice to the Cascades. I served in Somerville's Company in 1838. It was a mistake our going back on the Ridge, but you could not tell the land then for the trees, and we had plenty on the high land when they were starving on the river.

Armstrong went with one of his sons to Ontario, but did not like the change and returned and died in McVe's house and was buried in the Ormstown Methodist burying ground where his wife lies among her relatives.

We went to Belfast to get passage but the ship we spoke for could not take us and sailed with over 700. We stayed in Belfast three weeks waiting for a vessel. The Fletcher or Westport came over and took us on. She had 417. McCaffrey, near Dewittville, was not on board her. The Captain was a kindly man and on a fine afternoon would take out his fiddle and set us dancing. On nearing the banks we struck shoal of mackerel. The captain said he never saw the like. We dipped them up in pails. The long boat was filled with them and every empty barrel. The captain must have sold them well when we got to port. We had all we could use. There was sickness on board from the start. One man died of fever, but it did not spread. Then smallpox appeared and it was awful among the children. There was no quarantine time and we sailed into Quebec three weeks and three days, the fastest voyage then heard of. 13 had died.

JOHN WOODROW: We belonged to County Down and landed at Quebec on the 10th of June 1830. Several immigrant ships came in with ours, and the steamer we took to Montreal had 1100 on her; so thick we could not lie down. McCaffrey was on board, but did not come in same ship. He settled beside us. In Lake St. Peter she (I think she was called the Richelieu) ran aground and we lay there half a day. Six or seven children were smothered. On arriving at Montreal complaint was laid with the Mayor, and I believe the license was taken from the captain. My father meant to go to the Gore, where he knew the Andersons and Wilsons, also the Kellys, for we all came from the same place. We stayed overnight with John Todd, at the Portage who was a kind man to the immigrants. He told my father the Gore was a poor stony place, and that he should take up good clay land. There was a carpenter, George Stuart McKay at Todd's at the time, and he said he had three lots with 20 acres cut and burned and if we would take one, he would let us have part of the clearance and help to put up a shanty for our work. Todd told my father the offer was a good one, and we took it. There was not a stick cut on our lot, but we logged part of the burned over piece and planted 12 or 14 bushels of potatoes. We bought them from Sangster, and I carried them on my back. 1 1/2 bushels at a time and sowed some oats. That fall we dug 340 bushels of the finest potatoes I ever saw. We have no such crops now. I could show you a ridge where you would say there never was a plow, but when we came you would only see a stone peeping here and there. On one year there was oats as high as Billy Finn, and he was the tallest man in the settlement, 6ft. 3 in. We sheltered ourselves until we got a shanty up by helmslock boughs. The country was heavily timbered, particularly south of us where there was great black ash and elm. I remember father standing in middle of our lot once and asking me "Will we ever get clear this far back?" Today there is not cordwood on it. John Hamilton, John Hughes, Smith and Robt. Walsh were before us. Hughes had to take his child to Ste. Martine to be baptised. Hamilton was North of Ireland. There were 15 or 16 families on the Outarde from there. There was no road, nor for 10 years after, just a blazed track along the river. There was no use for a road, for we had no wagons or horses. The second year I came I carried 1 1/2 bushels of rye to Henderson's mill at Trout River, because the Huntingdon mill had been ruined by the flood. It was a great freshet, and farmers all along town fished out good three inch pine plank. It was easier carrying the bag back, for they took great toll in those days. We generally went to Morney's or Huntingdon with grist.

THE FARMER'S WIFE

Strange as it may seem, it is only a few years ago during the drought-depression which swept the prairie provinces that the poultry flock was often about the only money returns on the farm, and it was stretched to the limit to keep the family in food and clothing. There is not the least doubt that in those days the farm wife was the most important member of the family. It was her enterprise that saved the day.

We are glad to see that the farm wife is being recognized. She is cook and mother, the keeper of the dairy herd and the farm poultry flock, and in a good many instances she is riding the tractor or truck and taking the place of a hired man who can't be found for love or money. She is a mighty important cog in the war being carried on on the Canada food front.—Lethbridge Herald.

WEEK AT OTTAWA

A changeover was already beginning to take place in industry. In the case of some items of war implement manufacture, expansion had already slowed down. In some cases the peak of production had been reached. The manufacture of ships, aircraft, etc., was expanding and needing more manpower. In many cases, however, industry would be aiming only at replacement and maintenance. The first fever of production had died away. He believed that some men released from industry which had slackened its tempo might be absorbed in the armed forces as well as helping other branches of industry. Agriculture had about 1,000,000 men, industry 900,000 and the armed forces 700,000. The figure for the armed forces was not unduly high for a nation of 11 1/2 million people. He pointed out that the armed forces in Canada had "played the game" with agriculture, base metal and coal mining, granting postponement of service and leaves of absence for men who were needed in primary production. The program and policy of the navy and air force are also being placed before parliament and the people.

Manpower has been the centre of administrative attention recently. The proclamation of a state of national emergency in the case of coal production and the drastic measures to increase skilled manpower for the coal pits, have placed that industry in a unique position, but the demands for labor for farming, and base metal mining continue at constant pressure. New occupations have been placed on the non-essential lists of industry and those engaged, if of military age and not fit for military service have been ordered to report for work in high priority industries. The suggestion has been advanced in the house that to relieve the farmer of some of his difficulties a minimum and maximum wage for farm labor should be set by the government, and that possibly some form of subsidy should be granted so that the farmer might be relieved of some of the increasing cost of production and some of the difference in ways between some industries and farming might be bridged.

Wartime Information Board
During two days of last week a discussion took place on the expenses of the Wartime Information Board. The main point of contention was whether the board's expenses should be investigated by the standing committee on public accounts as suggested by the opposition in the house or by the wartime expenditures committee which will be set up by the Prime Minister. During the debate it was brought out that Canada's expenditures for the board and its predecessor for the last fiscal year was $1,600,000 while British expenditures for similar work was $38,000,000 and American $48,000,000. By a vote of the house it was decided to place the inquiry on the wartime information board's expenses in the hands of the wartime expenditures committee.

The addition of meats to the list of rationed foods in this country is not a cheering move. It isn't going to be a particularly easy thing to administer, for rationing of foods grown on and distributed from the farms of Canada is quite another matter from rationing foods imported such as sugar, tea and coffee. It is however a measure made imperative by war, and while it means some added sacrifice, the armor of self discipline is becoming less cumbersome, and less uncomfortable. As the response to the fourth victory loan showed, the people of Canada are settling down grimly but with growing determination to win the war.

Borrowing for War Farming

Farmers all over Canada—grain growers, stock raisers, dairymen, fruit growers, vegetable gardeners, poultrymen—all kinds of farmers—are forcing production, fighting hard early and late to supply the enormous quantities of products demanded in the greatest of all wars.

In this "survival war" food plays a tremendous part, and the farmer is the dependable supplier, to whom armed forces and civilians alike must look. The extra demands on farm production mean extra financing. The Bank of Montreal, ready always to co-operate with agriculture, is making special efforts at this time to help the farmer produce food for Canada and the United Nations.

THE ARMY BEHIND THE ARMY

THE FARMERS OF CANADA

From the soldier's happy viewpoint a most important man in the army is "Cooky" and a most important man on the Home Front is the farmer.

Wars are fought for food and for the lands that produce them. Without good food and plenty of it we cannot hope to win this war.

All hats are off to the services and, in turn, the services salute the farmers of Quebec. They have done an excellent job. That they may keep it up; that they may utilize to the full all existing electrical equipment is the sincere hope of The Shawinigan Water & Power Co. and, to aid them to that end, Shawinigan supplies low cost electrical service and urges every farmer in Canada to keep his electrical equipment in tip-top shape.

Children's Corner ...

THE MINIATURE KANGAROO

One midsummer day out west, a man working in a hayfield turned over a forkful of alfalfa in a wind-row. Imagine his surprise when up jumped a plump little mouse-like creature, bobbing and bouncing like the proverbial bug on a hot griddle. When he succeeded in getting his hands on it, he thought it must be a pocket edition of the wild kangaroo, so much did it resemble that unusual animal.

As a matter of fact, this mouse is sometimes called the kangaroo mouse. But he really belongs to the jumping mouse family, of which there are several species, most of them found in this country. They are related to the jerboas of the old world.

He has various names by which he is known, such as the deer mouse, jumping field mouse, or white-footed mouse. All of these names describe him in a way. His back and tail are fawn color like the deer. He has white feet. His kangaroo characteristics are his long, strong hind legs, nearly two inches in length, which, with his tail, give him extraordinary jumping power. His forelegs, which he uses as paws like a squirrel, are only about half an inch long. His tail is exceedingly long stretching out a full six inches, twice the length of his body. The jumping mouse has pockets but not for carrying the babies as kangaroos do. His are jaw pockets—his market baskets when he sallies forth at night in search of grain, berries, or small wood insects.

He stores away food but no one knows when he eats it. For, like the bear or skunk, he hibernates in a dormant state. During nearly half the year he is snugly tucked away somewhere in a hole in the ground, a hollow tree, or perhaps a woodpile. He has even been known to cuddle down in a songbird's abandoned nest. He loves the meadows or thickets along the edge of the woods. Here in May or June the little family of five or six mice are born.

During the summer these odd little jumping mice are often seen in meadows or fields. And in the haying season may be disturbed by the cutting of the hay. When frightened they often make one or two jumps, then remain motionless. They are remarkable jumpers too, often making leaps several times the lengths of their bodies. They are harmless, inoffensive little fellows and make nice pets for people not afraid of mice. They are clean, gentle, and dainty in their personal habits. They are easily tamed but one should remember never to pick them up by the tail as this frightens them badly. For food, give them seeds and grain.

Brush top with melted fat. Bake in moderate oven (375° F.) 25 minutes. If necessary, place under broiler to brown. Cut into squares. Serves 3 to 4.

3/4 cup diced celery
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1/4 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons ketchup
Crush cereal slightly; add milk and egg. Add remaining ingredients in order given; mix well. Pack into greased 8x4x3-inch loaf pan. Bake in moderate oven (375° F.) 1 hour. Makes 12 slices.

DAHLIA'S WHATNOTS

LAURA BRIDGMAN (continued): Charles Dickens in his novel "Nicholas Nickleby" describes the cruel ill-usage of boarding-school boys by the heads of these institutions. His description was so true to life that it is said that more than one such schoolmaster threatened him with bodily punishment. His novel roused public sentiment so that this evil system was done away with. Is not the fact a strikingly interesting one that during his American tour he became acquainted with Laura Bridgman and her generous-hearted instructor, Dr. Howe? That he, Dickens, whose own kind heart had agonized over the miserable lot of those English schoolboys had thrilled to the unstinted devotion of a teacher to a helpless child confided in his care?

I find it hard to decide whether I admire pupil or teacher more, whether the little girl's determined ambition to learn or the teacher's resolute persistence in satisfying that ambition is more worthy of praise. Such a relationship reflects the central truth of our Christian faith—that's the relief we have in this world. And it traces one's faith in humanity to think how often a Howe or a Dickens has towered above the common herd, championing the weak, the battling against the wrong and harmful, whether in a system of education, or a lack of education, or some other form of handicap or menace.

Dr. Howe first became acquainted with Laura Bridgman in 1837 when she was nearly eight years old. With her parents' consent she was taken to the Boston institution where Dr. Howe undertook her training. The first experiments were made by taking articles in common use such as knives, forks, spoons, and keys, and passing upon them labels with their names printed in raised letters. These she felt very carefully and soon discovered that the crooked lines of the label "spoon" differed as much from the crooked lines of the label "key" as the spoon differed from the key in shape. Then they put similar labels into her hands. The first sign of understanding by her was that she laid the label "key" on the key, and the label "spoon" on the spoon. Then separate letters were given her on detached bits of paper. They were thrown together and a sign was made to her to arrange them, which she did. "The poor child," said Dr. Howe, "had sat in mute amazement, and patiently waited everything her teacher did. But now the truth began to flash upon her; she perceived that there was a way by which she herself could make up a sign for anything that was in her own mind. It was no longer a dog or a parrot; it was an immortal spirit, capable of using upon a new link of union with other spirits. I could almost fix upon the moment when this truth dawned upon her mind and spread its light to her countenance. I saw that the great obstacle was overcome, and that henceforward nothing but patient and persevering, but plain and straightforward efforts were to be used."

Well might Charles Dickens say of Dr. Howe: "Throughout his life the recollection of that moment will be to him a source of pure, unfeigned happiness; nor will it shine least brightly on the evening of his days of noble usefulness." Once again, who can decide whether teacher or pupil was more keenly interested in the mounting light of dawning intelligence filtered through the clouds which obscured Laura Bridgman's mind and hid from her the world and its people?

Plan Classes For Brides

From all over the world Hollanders have volunteered or were called up to fight for the liberation of the occupied motherland. Many of them while being in Canada or in England have married Canadian or English girls. After the war these girls expect to follow their Dutch husbands to Holland and already preparations are made in London to render this complete change in their lives as easy as possible. The Netherlands Government promoted that classes be organized to teach the young housewives the fundamentals of the Dutch language and above all—the fundamentals of Dutch cooking. For in due time it may prove to be even more important if she can make her husband a good dish of "snert" (heavy green pea soup) or a stew called Hulsot (a hotch-potch of carrots, potatoes and meat and onions), than to be able to call him "darling" or "honey" in Dutch or to ask "Where have you been all this time?"

Short Dresses For Brides Attendants

June—traditional month of weddings—is near. At long last, the almost overlooked father of the bride gets a break! No longer need he anxiously contemplate the mounting cost of getting daughter married. The War-time Prices and Trade Board has decided to curtail elaborate wedding attire for the duration.

The Board, not wishing to blunt unduly Cupid's arrow, points out that the bride may still step altarswards in full-length gown of cream or white. BUT—costumes of the bride's mother, bridesmaids or flower girls must conform to Board Regulations; for them, no "long skirts." This is to conserve materials. Custom or home dressmakers are advised that Administrator's Order A-474, governing manufacture of women's, misses' and children's wear, eliminates all fussy detail, overall tucking, shirring or pleating. "Minor trimming" is defined by the order.

Weekly Tips For Meat Rationing

"Canadian farmers are largely on the 'honor-system' so far as meat rationing goes," said Mr. P. S. Grisdale, Deputy Foods Administrator, in a Farm Forum broadcast the other day. Mr. Grisdale, himself an Alberta farmer, continued: "We are asking farmers voluntarily to reduce their meat consumption by at least one-fifth. That is about the average reduction which will be imposed on those who have to buy all their meat by coupons at the store."

Other points of interest to the farmer were brought out during this broadcast.

If a farm family buys all its meat at the store, ration coupons will have to be used in the ordinary way.

Farmers who kill livestock for their own use must register with their local ration board. They may do this by mail.

At the end of each month they must send in to the local ration board one coupon for each two pounds of meat killed and consumed at home. Two pounds of meat bought at the store would cost two coupons. Their other coupons may be used to buy meat at the store, in order to provide variety.

If a farmer sells part of the meat he kills to another farmer he must collect coupons to cover half the amount of meat he sells; if, for example he sells 10 pounds of meat to another farmer he will collect five valid coupons which he will forward with his own coupons to the local ration board at the end of the month. Stamped, addressed envelopes may be obtained from the ration board for this purpose.

$4,850 Raised for Hospital

The Huntingdon County Hospital pledges and cash subscriptions are coming in remarkably well. At the meeting on Friday evening it was reported that $4,850 had been received. People have been inquiring about endowment fund subscriptions, and such a fund is to be set up, because it is generally understood all hospitals eventually require such funds and then again such funds are usually supported through legacies. Families and societies have also made inquiries as to whether the Hospital Board would be open to receiving gifts in the form of, say, a furnished room in whole or in part, or other essential hospital equipment. Naturally, such gifts will be more than welcomed.

Some folks feel they would like to make donations to the hospital but would prefer not having their contributions acknowledged through the press; people so inclined are invited to inform the person to whom they pay their contribution, and their requests will be abided by accordingly.

The Young People's Society, of Dundee, have presented a home talent play "Finner's Fortune" before several audiences with marked success. These young people wish to present the play in the High School Auditorium as a Hospital benefit. The play will be presented tomorrow, Thursday, June 3rd, at 7:30 p.m. The programme will be augmented through the generous co-operation of local musical artists.

School Band Entertains

$27.17 was realized for the Huntingdon High School Boys' Band on Friday evening, when a series of films, sponsored by the Montreal branch of General Motors, were screened in the auditorium of the High School. Between films, the Boys' Band entertained the audience with musical selections.

The first film, "Singing Wheels," depicted the importance of motor trucks in the world of today. Although motor trucking is not a recent industry, it is much younger than many others, and the people of this continent depend on trucks for their food, their clothes and practically everything that is of importance. To keep the wheels of industry rolling, it is necessary to keep the wheels of trucks singing.

"Let's go Fishing" was interesting, as it showed the world's champion fly-caster in action. Besides being instructive to amateur anglers, it was amusing to see his fishing contrasted with that of the ordinary fisherman.

"Victory is Our Business" showed the highlights of this country's war effort. "For the want of a nail, the horse was lost; for the want of the horse, the rider was lost; for the want of the rider, the battle was lost" may have been true of wars of yester-years, but today, with everything depending on machinery of different kinds, and with the best of skilled labor to manufacture planes, guns, trucks, tanks and precision instruments, peace and victory depend on more modern things, and motor trucks are playing an ever-greater part in modern warfare.

The entertainment was under the direction of Mr. John Dixon, former Huntingdon High School student, who is now manager of the Montreal Branch of General Motors.

Mrs. H. T. Porter, of Curling, New-Foundland, accompanied by her son, Mr. H. H. Porter, visited her daughter, Mrs. Frank L. Barrett, Bouchette street, last week. Mrs. Porter is at present receiving treatment at the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal.

Pictures Taken of School

Inspector Poyart, of the Quebec Department of Education, visited Huntingdon on Monday for the purpose of making a regular inspection of the High School. He was accompanied by a Government photographer who is taking colored moving pictures of practically all the High Schools of the Province, which will be screened at the various institutes during the school season of 1943-44, under the sponsorship of the National Film Library, Department of Education.

Moving pictures were taken of the grounds and buildings of the High School, as well as inside pictures of the classrooms. The gymnasium was taken, and the school also was screened to show the local rural students eating their dinner in that department.

Although pictures of almost every High School in the Province have been taken, they will not be shown for the purpose of depicting contrast in the different schools, but will be shown to show the different types of schools and also the conditions that prevail in each.

Howick, Ormstown, Valleyfield and Huntingdon High Schools were filmed this week. The films, which are in technical color, will be available to the schools next year.

Mrs. Adam L. Sellar has returned home from Ottawa, where she spent the past week visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Watson Sellar.

Rain Retards Spring Work

The extremely wet weather experienced in this district during the past weeks has caused much comment. Very few farmers have started their seeding, and the land in most parts is much to wet. Wells and cisterns are full and although a late and very hot summer is anticipated, there apparently won't be any shortage of water. Victory gardeners have also been held up to an extent. Apple trees have been in bloom for a full week, and growers are looking forward to a good crop. People who are fortunate enough to live in the Franklin-Hemmingford district, or those who have had occasion to be in that part recently, can see it at its best, as far as beauty goes, as

Brooklet

The play "Fuller's Fortune," sponsored by the Y.P.S. of Dundee was presented in Herdman Hall, on Tuesday evening of the past week, under the auspices of the Women's Association of the Rennie United Church, and was well attended. The play was most entertaining and all characters ably took their parts. Proceeds amounted to $38.50.

The annual meeting of the Brooklet W.C.T.U. was held at the home of Mrs. G. A. Rennie on Thursday afternoon, May 20th. The meeting was in charge of the Pres. Mrs. W. J. Maitheir, and opened with devotional exercises. Reports of the year's work were given and that of the Flower Mission showed that a great many had been remembered throughout the year. Mrs. Walter Elliott and Mrs. Bert Rennie were appointed as delegates to the County Convention, which is to be held in Ormstown, on Friday, June 4th. Officers for the coming year were elected and are as follows: Honorary Pres. Mrs. Ernest Rosevear; Pres. Mrs. W. J. Maitheir; 1st vice-pres. Mrs. Bert Rennie; 2nd vice-pres. Mrs. Walter Elliott; Corresponding and Recording Secretary, Mrs. W. J. McCracken; Treasurer, Mrs. Murdoch Rosevear. At the close of the meeting, supper was served by the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Clarke and daughter Anita, have moved to their new home in Huntingdon. The best wishes of the community go with them. Mr. Clarke has operated a store at Cooke's Lines for the past eight years.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Maitheir and their family and Mrs. Archie Maitheir and Mark, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Shattuck, of Burke, N.Y., on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Elliott, Fred Elliott and Master Norman Elder visited on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Arthur, Boyd Settlement.

Mrs. Florence Wilson was home for the week-end and was accompanied by her friend, Miss Olive McCartney, of Huntingdon. Mrs. McCartney and son Lester, were guests at the same home on Sunday.

The thousands of fruit trees are a mass of blooms. The water level at Lake St. Francis is high and, although the nights are cool, people have been taking a dip in the Chateaugay river and Lake St. Francis for the past three weeks. The weather has been a long time in coming, but when it does make its 1943 debut, most people believe it will stay for a good long time.

As Monday was the United States Memorial Day, Chateaugay Barracks Band visited their American neighbours and aided in the service, which began at 2 p.m.

C.A. (B) T.C. No. 41 held a "Stag Party" last evening, the proceeds from same to be devoted towards the building of a swimming pool for the soldiers in camp. At the present time work is being done on the building of the pool. The soldiers supported the Stag Party with their presence and in the selling of tickets to civilians. The ticket sales were larger than was first anticipated and this is believed due to the fact that the proceeds are for the pool which the soldiers anticipate seeing completed at an early date. The soldiers worked hard in the Drill Hall to make everyone have a real good time. Three boxing bouts and two wrestling matches were put on. Harry Roy of Huntingdon High School is being coached in boxing by Tommy Osborne of the Barracks and appearing in the boxing ring for the first time last evening managed to win his fight. The boys gave Harry a grand applause. All the boxing bouts were spirited. The wrestling is of course a great show of bluffing and horse-play, but for all that they certainly gave the audience lots of laughs.

The treasure hunt for $10 was won by Cpl. Nichols, $50 Victory Bond went to a Mr. Brunet in Huntingdon and likewise the $10 War Saving Certificate. The $25 War Saving Certificate was won by Lieut. Shaughnessy.

Car Owners Lose Tires And Tubes by Theft

Ormstown Resident Recovers Car Minus Wheels—Two Wheels Stolen From Huntingdon Car—Motorists Warned to be on Alert

Tire thieves are again active in the Chateaugay Valley. On Friday evening, May 21st, Mr. Raymond Graham left his 1941 Ford car parked at the rear of his home at Ormstown Station, and in the morning it was missing. As the ignition keys were left in the vehicle, the thieves had little trouble in making away with it, and it is believed that the car was stolen before 1 a.m. Saturday. Why they took only one tire and tube is a mystery, as the car was not in the lane at that time.

Notifying the proper authorities, the car was found, minus wheels, tires and tubes, a short distance west of Chateaugay on Saturday afternoon. It was towed to near-by la-prairie, where Mr. Graham later identified it.

It is believed that the culprits were professional tire thieves, as a new overcoat and a large assortment of fishing tackle that were in the car, were not molested.

A second theft of this nature occurred some time between 10:30 p.m. Sunday and 4:30 Monday morning, when thieves stole the front wheels, tires and tubes from a 1930 Ford car owned by Mr. Jas. Anderson. Mr. Anderson, who lives on a farm west of Huntingdon on the Malone-Montreal highway, stated that he left his car in the garage, which is near the house, at 10:30 Sunday evening. In the morning, both front wheels were gone and the car was resting on two wooden blocks.

The thieves entered the garage by breaking a window at the rear of the building. Why they took only one front wheel is a mystery, as the rear ones were in much better condition. An attempt was made to steal the spare tire, but it was locked to the body of the car. Provincial Police were notified and are in investigation.

Although everyone hopes that eventually all tire thieves will be rounded up and given what's coming to them, one must do more than sit back and hope that the thieves will stop their career. Every motorist, if he has not already done so, should take down the serial numbers of his tires, and keep one or more copies in a safe place, but definitely not in his car.

They were accompanied by the piano by Mrs. Ruth Merkle. Mrs. Anderson welcomed the guest speaker, Mrs. Stanley Ruddock. Mrs. Ruddock's address was very inspiring and many good lessons could be learned from it. She took for her text "For the Time has come for the Judgment to begin at the House of God" and was found in first Peter. Mrs. Ruddock's text and with noble and high ideas expressed the need for more concentrated lives. At the close of Mrs. Ruddock's address, Mr. Hatcher led in prayer followed by the National Anthem. Among those present were Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Flynn and daughter, of Port Covington, Rev. H. Lindley and Mrs. Lindley and Mrs. Seveligny, of Valleyfield. Mrs. Smallman was the recipient of many good wishes and a beautiful gift of roses and other flowers. Replying to the query if she felt well despite being 90 years young, she said, "Yes, I feel fine, and I'm thankful to be as well as I am." She is about the house every day and takes a keen interest in her friends and surroundings. Asked if there was anything in the days of long ago concerning the town and its doings that she particularly remembered, she replied that she recollected one incident that took place over 70 years ago that she never forgot. The Rev. Donald Ross, the first pastor of the Dundee Presbyterian Church, had just come in 1868, to take charge of the congregation and on a certain occasion paid a visit to Mrs. Smallman's family. In the course of the conversation the Reverend gentleman asked her mother: "What are the people of Dundee like?" Quickly she replied, "They're the best in Quebec or Ontario." To Mrs. Smallman the greatest single change in living conditions, past and present, has been the advent of electric power. "My," she says, "it's wonderful."

Mrs. Smallman's husband died in 1931, but she still resides on the old homestead with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Smallman.

Obituary

The Late Mr. Charles W. Potter

A prominent and esteemed resident of Covey Hill, in the person of Mr. C. W. Potter, was removed by death on Friday afternoon, May 21. He passed away as a painful shock to his family and neighbours, for though he had fallen somewhat in strength, he was still able to be about up till the Wednesday before his death. He was 84 years and 9 months of age.

The funeral service was held on Sunday afternoon, at Wesley United Church, of which the deceased was a member. His pastor, Rev. J. McLean Beaton, based his comforting message on the 14th chapter of St. John's Gospel.

The hymns chosen were the 23rd Psalm, "Does Jesus Care?" and "Forever With the Lord." The pall-bearers were Thomas and George Gowdy, William D. Hamill and Henry Stewart. Interment was made in the adjoining churchyard where Mr. Potter's parents and other relatives are buried.

There were beautiful floral tributes from Havelock Council, the congregation of Wesley Church, the family, Mrs. Allen and the Wymans, Mrs. MacDiarmid, and other friends.

At the service, which was very largely attended, there were present: Mrs. W. B. Wymann and Miss Wymann of Woburn, Mass., and Mrs. Wm. Orr of St. Lambert, and friends from Huntingdon, Franklin, Moores, Ellenburg and other places.

Surviving Mr. Potter are his widow, the former Miss M. Idella Blair; his son Wellington, of Covey Hill; a sister, Mrs. Allen, aged 94, of Woburn, Mass.; a brother, Edward Potter, aged 87, of Eau Claire, Wis., and a granddaughter.

Mr. Potter came of North of Ireland pioneer stock, being one of the large family of sons and daughters of the late Thomas and Margaret Potter, representatives of that fine old-time Methodist element which stabilized community life by its religious and temperance trend.

Charles Wesley Potter was born and spent his life on the farm homestead where he breathed his last. He was educated at Covey Hill and at Huntingdon Academy.

For over 22 years he served his township in the capacity of Secretary-Treasurer, Municipal Council and School Board.

His character and habits of life furnished an example of principles in which the present generation too often shows a deficiency. Temperate, industrious, frugal, and devotedly loyal to family ties, he was efficient, faithful, and honorable in the discharge of public duties.

The Late Mrs. Robert Wilson

The funeral service was held on Friday, May 28th, at the late residence, 68 Jean Baptiste St., Valleyfield, Que., of Clara Handley, beloved wife of Robert Wilson, who passed away on Wednesday, May 26th, at her home in Valleyfield, where she has resided for many years.

She leaves to mourn her passing, besides her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Allan D. Cuthbert, of Montreal, and Mrs. Gladys Read, of Valleyfield, one son, Capt. John R. Wilson, R.C.A.S.C. Overseas; three granddaughters, Barbara and Judith Read, of Valleyfield, and Carol Ann Wilson, of Montreal. Two nephews, John and William Handley, of Kingston, Ont.

On Friday a sale was negotiated whereby Mr. Norman Brooks, secretary-treasurer of the School Municipality of the Township of Franklin, purchased the former Cecil Barr property for the sum of $5500, for the purpose of converting it into a Consolidated School. The property consists of two acres of land, and a main building that measures 60 feet square. The late Judson McNeil was a former owner of the property.

Victory Garden Spade Work

So your garden is dug up and has had its tonic of fertilizer; it is hoed, raked and ready for seeds! Here is the advice given in the Dominion Department of Agriculture's pamphlet, The Wartime Garden:

Sow or plant crops in long rows. Take into consideration the amount of shade cast by taller growing plants. Tall plants such as corn, staked tomatoes and pole beans should be planted to the north side of the garden.

Good seed can be obtained from the local seedsmen but beware of thick sowing! It wastes seed and increases the labor of thinning. Sow only enough seed to ensure a good stand of plants. To make a straight stretch a line of string or cord tightly to mark the row and make the drill or trench even in depth.

Large seeds, such as beans, peas, etc., should be placed individually at specified distances. Small seeds, such as carrots, lettuce, etc., can be sown by tearing off a corner of the envelope, holding the packet horizontally and gently tapping it with the finger as it moves along the drill. Press the soil firmly over the drill after the seed has been sown. The Wartime Garden tells what depth to cover various plants. Carrots, chard, etc., one-half inch, peas and beans two inches.

Here's a tip: To mark rows of such low germinating seeds as carrots and beets, plant an occasional radish seed in the row. This will come up quickly and act as a marker.

To extend the season of such crops as beans, peas and corn, two or three sowings may be made at intervals of 10 days to insure successive crops. This also applies to lettuce, carrots, beets and spinach.

While the new station figures largely in the picture unfolded to the newspapermen's inspection, Mr. Brown explained that what had been seen within the period of the inspection is only a portion of the work represented by the Montreal Terminal. Numerous grade crossings have been eliminated removing crossing dangers and facilitating the movement of trains, yards have been extended, coach yard accommodation developed and the vast network of tracks within the metropolitan area coordinated so as to provide for faster handling of freight and imperative need for the quick movement of wartime supplies.

The new station will replace Bonaventure located on a site used as a railway terminal since 1847, in which year the Montreal and Lake Shore Railway was built. It became the second completed line in Canada. First, was the Chaplain and St. Lawrence in 1836, and both of these historic pioneer roads are now included in the composition of the Canadian National Railways.

The new station possesses many advantages; it is centrally located, its entrances and exits face the four cardinal points of the compass. On entering the station the traveller finds himself in a concourse 350 feet in length by 104 feet in width and within that space he can arrange for tickets, reservations, baggage, send a telegram, telephone, make inquiries, obtain a meal, purchase a smoke and a magazine, visit the barber, talk to the druggist and, if needs be, arrange for a bath, either shower or tub.

Mrs. Traveller will find all these things, too, and for her special benefit there is a Quiet Room in charge of the Railway Medical Department, and nearby a Nursery where the children may be left while mother makes her necessary travel arrangements.

"Accomplish" Aid occupies a prominent place and there are special rooms where travelling members of the Navy, Army and Air Force can have their warrants checked and receive information and instruction. Special quarters are to be operated by the Canadian Legion War Services and set apart for the exclusive use of travelling members of the armed forces. They will find a spot in which to store kit while exploring Montreal, and a place in which to get a snack below this contains the power room and escalators from the main concourse, each entrance being plainly marked with large signs.

The platforms are of the high level type giving easy access to the car vestibules. They are so designed that in relation to stairs and escalators, travellers may reach the train passenger accommodation with the minimum of walking. The rail, express and baggage will be removed to a lower level by tractor drawn lorries using easy grade ramps.

All train operations over the approaches and within the station area will be by electric locomotion.

Below the track level is a complete hive of railway activity, all express, baggage and mail facilities being grouped in a vast structure which provides for assembling and sorting in space away from the public. This area also contains a complete garage and repair shop. Yet another level below this contains the power room and the channels for distributing necessary services, power, heat, water and drainage.

The Review summarizes ration regulations in Canada, and discusses their enforcement. In conclusion, it says that experience has shown that it is rash indeed to predict that the limits of rationing have been reached. However, as long as self-restraint in buying predominates, methods less drastic than rationing can often obtain a fairly equitable distribution even when supplies are quite short."

Gov't. to Stamp Meat to Eliminate Black Market

Kenneth W. Taylor, foods administrator, said at a press conference that a system of stamping meat to be introduced shortly by the Prices Board is designed to help eliminate a black market under the meat rationing system which started May 27.

He said in a few weeks meat on sale in Canadian butcher stores will be stamped and it probably would be correct to assume that meat which had not been stamped when it reached the retailer had come from a black market.

Meat now being marketed in Canada is sufficient to meet the ration requirement, Mr. Taylor said.

F. S. Grisdale, deputy foods administrator, said an increase in beef cattle runs was to be expected in coming weeks, thus enlarging meat supplies.

The meat rationing will increase the weekly circulation of ration coupons from 24,000,000—covering

Canadian purchases of tea and coffee, sugar and butter—to 48,000,000, if all Canadians make use of these coupons.

Under the system of stamping meat, the slaughterer will be required to place his stamp on any meat killed by him and to be marketed. Carcasses will be stamped in several places with this stamp giving the Prices Board name and the slaughterer's number.

"I am sure that at least 97 percent of retailers are honest men and their first care will be to see that the meat they purchase is stamped," said Mr. Taylor. "The stamp will be of the tattoo type, making a lasting mark."

"The customer buying in the retail store will probably be able to see the stamp mark on meat being purchased, but if there is any doubt he or she can inquire."

"The prospects are that the stamps will be available for distribution to slaughterers about June 15."

KILLED IN ACTION

Word has been received that Sergeant-Bombardier William Heyer Bowden, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Bowden, of Sutton, Que., formerly of Huntingdon, was killed in action during the raid on Duisburg, Germany, on May 15th. Official confirmation of this was received by Mr. Bowden on Thursday through the International Red Cross.

"Bill," as he was known to his many friends in this district, enlisted with the Royal Canadian Air Force in August, 1941, and graduated as a bombardier in October, 1942. He was a graduate of Huntingdon High School, where he was commanding officer of the High School Cadet Corps during the 1940-41 school term. He took an active part in all sports, and was president of the 1940-41 graduating class. His twin brother, Donald, is also serving with the R.C.A.F. overseas.

TUCK-IN ENVELOPE GIVES LONG SERVICE

Returning to Vancouver from which point it had started on April 2, 1935, a tuck-in envelope used by the Canadian National Railways for inter-departmental correspondence, recently terminated a record in service. These envelopes have been in use for 10 years and space for readdressing and are serviceable as long as space remains for a new address. This particular envelope in eight years service travelled many thousands of miles and amongst other places, reached Prince Rupert, Edmonton, Winnipeg, Belleville, Toronto, Montreal, Hamilton, London and Quebec.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

"Military Medicine"

This is the last article in this series by Capt. W. D. Brace.

TO SUM UP

Soldiers of today are being cared for as never before. They are benefiting from the results of the astounding progress of medical science since the First Great War.

That progress is seen in the great efficiency of the nutrition problem and in the care of medical and surgical cases.

Throughout the services, men are assured of meals that will keep their health up to exacting army standards, and prepare them for the days of long battles and consuming tasks.

Spectacular results are being obtained in the treatment of the acute infections—pneumonia, spinal meningitis, gonorrhea and streptococcal diseases—with the sulfonamide drugs.

Surgical procedure is of a high standard. The loss of wounded men in the Navy in the South Seas is less than one per cent. In the First Great War more than seven percent of the wounded died of their wounds. Twenty-five years ago wounds were sewn up, dressings made, followed by infection. Today wounds are treated by a strip of vaseline gauze being placed in wound, then covered with plaster of Paris and left on until healed.

In the First Great War the mortality rate for abdominal wounds was 80 per cent; today it is below five per cent.

Week at Ottawa ...

ation to the business of beating the forces of tyranny.

Much of the work of parliament during the past week has revolved about the army and its administration. Army estimates were being considered and this brought a myriad of questions from all parts of the house. Special emphasis was laid on the need of an ample reservoir of recruits to reinforce the troops overseas. For strategic reasons it was impossible for the minister of defence, Col. Ralston to give exact numbers of men available for shipment overseas. That would be giving the kind of information the enemy would like to get, particularly with operations looming on the European continent. It was shown, however, that army reserves were quite large and growing, although, enlistments in the last few months had been rather disappointing. In the last four months there were only 34,535 volunteers, while total voluntary enlistments from the beginning have been about 470,000. It was brought out in the discussions that a new system of grading men on enlistment and men already in the army has been adopted. There is not the same rigid adherence to medical categories. The capability of a man for special duties is now being given careful consideration. This will mean more effective use of available manpower.

The entire house was of accord on the need of giving men, who go abroad to fight for their country, reasonable protection against the loss of their homes and property by legal action when they are away. Members of parliament had received a number of complaints from soldiers' wives who had been evicted from their homes, while their husbands were in the service. There had been cases also of the cancellation of insurance policies. This was claimed, was unjust particularly where the men had given up jobs which had been giving them an income which enabled them to keep up payments on all obligations they had incurred. The suggestion was made that Canada might follow the example of New Zealand which allows a special weekly grant to all its fighting men to take care of his obligations and insurances.

Russian advances in treatment are amazing. Plasma transfusions have saved countless lives.

Thrombin a whitish fluid which coagulates blood and stops bleeding is now being used in many of their hospitals.

Sulfa drugs and tetanus serum have reduced danger of infections. Nerve grafting from corpses to living persons has been developed by surgeon H. S. Vishinsky. Gaping wounds are healed by covering them with the treated peritoneum—the inner lining of the visceral cavity of an animal.

In use of antitoxin for gas gangrene—the bacterial infection that causes a wound to fester—Russia claims to be well ahead of other nations. The Russian vaccine has reduced the fatality rate to about one and a half per cent as against about 50 per cent in the last war.

Typhus vaccine has been produced in large quantities. A new technique by which blood for transfusion is taken directly from dead casualties is a closely guarded secret.

The Russians have made great progress since the last war. Then they had only 24,000 doctors in the whole country. Today she has over 169,000 physicians—a sevenfold increase since 1914.

We may, all of us humbly recognize that there is something providential in the fact that some of these discoveries should come to the knowledge of mankind at the very moment when the most hateful plague—the plague of war with its wounds, epidemics, its violent threats to life and health is upon the world.

Scouting Around

This week Pte. Tommy Black will be back again to give you that promised second lecture on first aid, and practice ambulance. He was unable to be present last week on account of business which took him to Montreal. Don't forget to have your notebook and pencil handy this Thursday night because he will interest you no end with his wide knowledge of practical first aid, which he has acquired first hand. If the weather is just right, the entire meeting will be held outdoors, from start to finish.

Congratulations! Wolf Patrol, Under the leadership of George Goodfellow, the Wolves have been doing magnificently and have managed to top all the other patrols by capturing the proficiency competition of last month. They will be presented with their prize this week. Short Beattie's Foxes fell short of winning the contest by only four points, whilst David Irving's Stags were able to keep close to the Fox Patrol with one point behind. The winners of April's contest, the Beavers with Jimmy Bickford in charge, placed last.

Results are as follows: Wolf 57, Fox 52, Stag 52, Beaver 51.

Here is more news on the badge passing stage. First of all, let me welcome Romeo Loberge into the 2nd Class Badge Ranks. Good going Romeo, keep up this fine work. Smith, of the Boy Scouts Association, Southern District, that any of the Scouts from Huntingdon Troop wishing to go to Camp Tamaracota are perfectly welcome to camp with the Woodlands Troop at their site at their site. Your Scoutmaster is in a position to tell you about the camp fee and date.

More news next week fellows, so till then, I'll be seeing you around—Chief.

keep their economic position intact. The United States had also a Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act which might well be studied. There was also a low premium kind of insurance available for the American armed forces. In reply to these suggestions, Col. Ralston explained that all the provinces had been taking steps to give economic relief to the fighting men, their families.

A study of these measures was being carried out by a committee at Ottawa. There was need of greater uniformity, and while questions between debtor and creditor came within the jurisdiction of the provinces, the federal government must assume a large measure of responsibility. Col. Ralston promised that all the suggestions advanced by members of parliament would be carefully considered by the committee.

The Raid on Dieppe has long since past and is becoming merged and obscured in the changing picture of the war. It remains in its importance, however, as an "indispensable" episode to the invasion of Europe. With army estimates before it, the house has witnessed sharp exchanges across the floor on whether it should be considered a success or a failure and on its results. Quoting from Saunders' "Combined Operations" the official record of the raid, Col. Ralston stated to the house his conviction that while losses had been heavy, the raid had gained its strategic objectives, through obtaining information of the disposition of enemy defences and through the testing of our own equipment in attack and of landing technique. This had been the first time the three armed forces, the army, navy and air force had been given an opportunity to co-operate on a fairly large scale.

Suggestions have been made in the house by members from British Columbia that men trained under the compulsory training plan might be sent to the Aleutian Islands to join with the Americans in the attack on its results. Kiska. It was established that these men could be sent there without in any way contravening the terms on which they were drafted. The government was also asked to give a clear explanation of the policy in relation to the war with Japan. Col. Ralston answered that Canada would put everything it had into the fight to beat Japan just as it would in the case of Germany. This was not two wars. It was one war.

The report that has been issued on health insurance by the advisory committee on social security shows that the preparations for the introduction of a measure on health insurance is drawing appreciably closer. It is not at all certain that it will be placed before parliament this session. It likely will be held over until next session, but there is no question it is coming. The draft bill that has been studied by the committee of the commons is said to be "the most modern in existence." In all probability before it is introduced a Dominion-Provincial conference will be held to ensure full co-operation of all the governments which will be closely concerned with the administration of the measure. It will be brought into operation through parallel provincial statutes.

Considerable interest is shown here in the suggestion advanced by Canadian delegates to the food conference at Virginia Hot Springs that all nations should reduce tariff walls on agricultural products as part of a general plan for freer trade after the war. The Objects of the conference to make abundant food available at reasonable prices to low income groups, the Canadian delegation contended could only be achieved through the abolition or reduction of tariffs combined with financial and economic measures to maintain employment.

Put War Prisoners In Forests, Mines And on Farms

Labor Minister Mitchell in a statement to the House of Commons on a Government proposal to use prisoners of war in certain types of work, said that woodcutting, mining and selected types of agriculture are likely to be the first jobs in which prisoners will be employed.

"Projects providing suitable employment, and for which camp facilities are available or can be supplied with little added cost, will receive favorable consideration at the outset," Mr. Mitchell said.

In an Order-in-Council tabled in the Commons, recently provision was made for the employment of prisoners of war under the jurisdiction of the Labor Department.

"Use of prisoners of war is being made in England on labor projects with satisfactory results, but almost all prisoners of war interned in this country are of German nationality, and the extent to which German prisoners may be successfully employed can only be determined from experience gained in the work projects initially undertaken," Mr. Mitchell said.

The conditions of work, rate of pay and provision for the welfare of the prisoners would conform to the Geneva prisoners of war convention of 1939 and would follow the British practice.

"Appointments of officers to have charge of the administration of this matter will be made at an early date and every effort will be made to expedite the initiation of labor projects," he said.

An enjoyable birthday party was given for little Dorothy Manning at her home, when six of her little friends enjoyed the afternoon.

The monthly meeting of the W.C.T.U. was entertained at the home of Mrs. H. Blair, Thursday, May 27th. The work hour was spent piecing quilt blocks. The devotion period was in charge of the President, assisted by Mrs. Y. Y. Duncan, at the Organ. There were 14 members and visitors present. All arrangements were made for the County Convention, which is to be held in Ormstown, June 4th. A very pleasant time was spent at the close of which tea was served by Mrs. Blair and her two daughters.

Judge: "Too old! Why, I could give you ten years."

Friend (hastily): "Now, now, judge, don't start talking shop."

FARM NOTES

Legume Hay For Dairy Cows
(Experimental Farms News)

The immediate need of protein supplements for livestock emphasizes the advisability of every farmer doing all he can to grow his own supply. This is particularly true in the case of the dairy farmer as the dairy cow is able to make good use of the proteins from a wide variety of sources, including coarse roughages.

The first of these sources that comes to mind is legume hay. Alfalfa hay contains over 14 1/2 per cent crude protein; red clover, nearly 12 per cent; mixed alfalfa and timothy hay, more than 11 per cent; clover and mixed grass hay, over 9 per cent; timothy hay, over 6 per cent; and corn silage only about 2 per cent. This emphasizes the importance of an abundance of early-cut, well-cured legume hay in providing home-grown protein.

As a general rule, one pound of hay and three pounds of silage for every hundred pounds live weight of cow plus one pound of meal mixture for every three or four pounds of milk produced is recommended in feeding dry cattle. On this basis, a 1200-pound cow giving 10 pounds of milk would receive 12 pounds of alfalfa hay, 36 pounds of silage, and 10 pounds of a 15 per cent protein meal mixture. This is a sound recommendation for normal times, especially in good corn country, where a silage is available, and where the necessary grains, particularly protein supplements, are available to balance such a ration. However, under present conditions more emphasis should be placed on larger proportions of good legume hay.

For instance, a ration of 18 pounds of alfalfa hay, 30 pounds of corn silage, and 7 1/2 pounds of meal, made up of equal parts oats, barley and wheat, would supply the same nutrients. Similarly, a alfalfa hay ration of 24 pounds alfalfa hay, 24 pounds corn silage, and only 5 pounds of the same meal mixture would step up the protein and maintain the total digestible nutrients at a satisfactory level.

These results can only be secured with relatively high quality, early-cut, well-cured alfalfa or clover hay. Any seedling down being planned for this year should be done with as large a percentage of alfalfa and clover as possible.

On the basis of an average crop of two tons of legume hay and 12 tons corn silage per acre, the ration of 12 pounds of hay and 36 pounds of silage would require approximately 6.25 acres of hay and 3.3 acres of corn for each 10 cows to be fed. Similarly, the ration of 18 pounds of hay and 30 pounds of silage would require 10 acres of hay and 2.5 acres of corn, and the fifty-fifty ration would require 12.5 acres of hay and 2 acres of corn.

The second ration could probably be produced with the least amount of labour and the most satisfactory results.

LONDON IN WARTIME

(Article No. 2) By Walter R. Legge

We arrived in London late in the evening after an all-day train journey. There was no moon that night. London in the black-out is really black. There were army automobiles to meet us and we had a sudden and complete introduction to being driven through the blackness at what seemed to us to be about thirty miles an hour, and on the wrong side of the street.

Our car narrowly missed a pedestrian who was crossing the street by dodging across the street in the middle of a block. If he had been hit

CARNIVAL COLUMN

The Legion is at present endeavoring to secure proper recognition benefits and relief for R.C.A.F. men who have lost their health and lives in serving Canada at home. Many grave injustices have occurred. The Legion insists that the "Insurance Principle" should be restored to these men whose service has been faithfully performed in Canada. The men in our Active Forces should be on an equal footing no matter where they may be called upon to serve.

Overseas Cigarettes Welcomed

Henri Asselin, in a letter received this week, gives an interesting glimpse of the broadening influence our boys are able to enjoy while abroad. In part, he wrote: "This is an attempt to convey to you some of the gratitude and pleasure your present has caused me to feel. But I cannot press either of these emotions adequately to you and to the other lady members of your splendid organization. Being Secretary, it follows that your off hours are rationed, but I am sure you enjoy the work although it requires unselfishness and efficiency."

I will write you a commentary on England and on my reactions to it in my next letter. In general, the country resembles that of British Columbia, only it is much prettier than England, and England's resemblance to British Columbia ends with the scenery, not the climate.

I am fond of going to plays in London, such as "Billie Holiday" and "The man who came to dinner," also ballet, any amount of symphonies, concerts and piano recitals. I also like books, anything from Reader's Digest and Esquire to Aldous Huxley.

But I firmly believe that without cigarettes, no longer is life livable and food, clothing and shelter become meaningless things.

This is why, my dear Mrs. Brown, I am so grateful to you and to your co-workers. Tell the dear hearts that I wish them the best of everything because they have sent me that which is so necessary over here, in the Army, CIGARETTES. Gratefully and sincerely yours, Henri Asselin.

Acknowledgments for receipt of parcels of cigarettes were also received this week from Pte. L. A. McEwen, Cpl. Geo. Small, Dvr. Ernest Roy, Cpl. Stevenson, Bdr. A. B. Elder, E. R. Cappiello, Pte. Wilfrid Roy, Emile Baines, Sig. Winter, Bdr. Arthur Furey. Letters were received from A. J. Douglas, Pte. George Hood.

Exhibit of Photographs
The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion, Chateauguay-Huntingdon, No. 1, requests the loan of photographs of men or women from this district serving in forces of British Empire and Allies. Number, name, rank, any decorations, address and birth date should accompany the photo. The address of sender should be plainly printed on back to facilitate return after the Dominion Day Carnival.

These photographs are to be used in a window display on Chateauguay Street.

Photographs will be returned after the Carnival and everyone concerned is urged to loan pictures to make the exhibit as complete as possible. Mail or deliver photographs to W. E. McNair, Huntingdon.

cellent free entertainment, as there always has been a much better fortune on all kinds of subjects. One of the most popular just now is "Monolulu" who waves a number of flags in the air, and talks about what the negroes have done to help the world. He wears a colorful costume to add to the show. Later, when we queried a Cabinet Minister about these orators, some of whom appear to preach almost treason, he declared that "Every building needs a good ventilating system."

There are still providing good shows, but on account of the black-out, the curtains go up at about half-past five or six o'clock for the evening performance. Prices for orchestra seats, or "stalls" as they are called over the top of the stalls, but about half the price is for taxes. A large proportion of the audience is in uniform—probably men on leave.

Although only automobiles for military use are authorized, many are used, there are many on the streets. Some of them are driven by gas which is carried in huge fabric bags which cover the roof of the car, and are about four feet high when inflated. We were told that one filling of gas will take the car about a hundred miles and costs about six dollars.

Meatless Tuesdays

The regulation prohibiting the serving of meat dishes in public eating places on Tuesdays is not restricted to rationed meats. No meats of any kind may be served.

Consumer Meat In Lockers

Before June 30 all consumers (including farmers) who store meat in lockers must declare in writing to the nearest Branch of the Ration Administration, the quantity of rationed meat they have in storage over and above 8 lbs. per person in the household. Declarations must be accompanied by sufficient Coupons from the ration books of the locker holder and his household, to cover the quantity of declared meat at the rate of 1 Coupon for each 2 lbs. of meat in regulation rationed groups.

The number of Coupons to be detached by the locker holder need not exceed more than 50% of the total meat Coupons in the possession of himself and his household. Locker users may retain for retail purchasing one of each similarly numbered pair of Coupons.

Kosher Meat

The same regulations governing the rationing of other meats apply also to kosher meats.

Commercial Quota Users

Quota users who have already registered on Form RB 117, and who have been allotted a Quota Reference number, need not re-register for meat.

Most quota users will have received a tentative quota for meat, and therefore are in a position to issue meat ration checks. Any quota user who has not received a tentative quota for meat, or who needs a supplementary authorization, should get in touch with the nearest branch of the Ration Administration.

Small Arms Ammunition Now Restricted To:-

(a) Licensed trappers, police officers and others officially engaged in the protection of life and property. Applications to purchase must be made to suppliers on special forms (RB-203) already in regular suppliers' hands. These forms require the applicant to declare his right to purchase and the use to which the ammunition is to be put.

(b) Rifle, revolver, or gun clubs and defence units other than those authorized under the Militia Act. Authority must be secured by written application to the Director of Small Arms Ammunition, Victoria Bldg., Ottawa.

(c) Prospectors; those who rely on the shooting of wild life for food; and persons requiring ammunition to protect live stock.

Applications must be made to the Local Ration Board on special forms (RB-202) already in their hands. Applications must be approved by the Local Ration Board before purchase from regular supplier can be made.

Persons other than the above who feel a supply of small arms ammunition is essential, should make written application to a Branch of the Ration Administration, giving full details.

Rationed Commodities for Temporary Help

Applications by rural residents for additional rations for temporary helpers or labourers, such as harvesters, ironers, sheep shearers, etc., should be made to Local Ration Boards. Applications must state the specific nature of the extra work and estimate:

- The number of workers.
- The number of days they will be employed.
- The total number of meals to be served.

Applications for less than 12 meals will not be considered.

After receiving numerous enquiries from wives, relatives and friends of soldiers overseas, Headquarters stated that no such arrangement exists and none is contemplated at present.

A relatively small number of men return from overseas each year. Some return for instructional duty, some on short duty and others for discharge owing to medical reasons. Only a very small number are granted compassionate leave.

What Must be Done to Stamp Out Social Diseases

Social diseases will never be stamped out if treatment is given only to those who submit willingly to it. The law must be enforced and it applies to anyone who has become infected in the last four years or even before that, where pregnant women are concerned.

Any person, to whom the law applies, who refuses or neglects to be treated must be reported on form M.V. II, within a delay of twenty days, and the name and address of such person must be given to the Director of the Division of Venereal Diseases, so that the necessary means can be taken to have him, or her, submit to treatment.

In an effort to help negligent or ignorant victims of social diseases, to prevent new infections and thus protect the public in general, the Ministry of Health and Social Welfare has organized a social service which covers all the Province and whose activities consist in the following:

1. Surveillance in infected persons who refuse to submit to treatment;
2. Tracing the sources of infection and contacts, that is to say, persons whom a patient may have infected or by whom he has been contaminated.

The epidemiological investigation is carried on discreetly and its results are strictly confidential. Doctors are asked to assist in this work by obtaining and supplying all necessary information, whenever they encounter a new case and are not certain that the person responsible for the contamination is undergoing treatment.

Unreserved co-operation between the medical profession, the Division of Venereal Diseases and the public in general is necessary if social diseases are to be controlled and it is hoped this co-operation will be forthcoming. The Director of the aforementioned Division and his assistants are always ready to help doctors to enforce the law, or when difficulties arise with regard to treatments and the interpretation of serological reactions. Legal and other forms, propaganda publications and reproductions of articles published in medical journals will be supplied upon request. Address: 89 Notre Dame St. East, Montreal.
