Landslide Victory For Roosevelt in National Elections

Former President Ahead in United States with Approximately 523 Electoral Votes

A Roosevelt and Garner, president and vice-president, landslide, sweeping the tremendous New Deal sweep of 1932 was indicated early this morning by partial returns from yesterday's United States election. President Roosevelt was strongly favored for re-election, and it was the earnest desire of most Canadians that such should take place, therefore in one sense we feel that we have secured a victory.

Democratic Chairman James Farley commented that "it is an overwhelming vote of confidence" for the President.

Early returns indicated another overwhelming Democratic majority in the Senate, but the count was still too slim to disclose anything conclusive about the fight for the House of Representatives.

The Democrats had 47 carryovers in the Senate and quickly elected eight more from the South and two elsewhere. Forty-nine is a majority.

Viewing the steadily mounting returns, such pro-Landon papers as the New York American and Kansas City Star conceded the Republican bid had been defeated. The Star foresaw a landslide for the President.

Starting off with a powerful nucleus in the solid South, which alone commands 146 electoral votes, Roosevelt won a steadily increasing lead in territory generally conceded to the Republicans.

The preacher of "the more abundant life" even humiliated the Republican nominee by taking a slim lead in his own state of Kansas and surprised by repeating that performance in traditionally Republican Massachusetts.

Such southern Democratic fortresses as Alabama, Georgia, the Carolinas, Virginia and Tennessee set the New Deal ball rolling with returns favoring the President by mountainous majorities.

New York and its big block of 47 electoral votes swung into his column from the start. With half the state's precincts reported, the President had 1,560,763 votes and Landon 911,900.

In Ohio, where 26 electoral ballots were at stake, the New Deal had a lead of almost 2 to 1 while Texas' 23 electoral votes were salted away when a quarter of the state's counties accorded Roosevelt an almost 10-to-1 margin.

The Pennsylvania trend was the big surprise. No Democrat has received its 36 electoral votes in 80 years, yet 2,054 of the state's 8,010 precincts showed Roosevelt leading 697,737 votes to Landon's 447,900.

The Union party candidacy of William Lemke and the bids of the other minor parties were making small inroads into the vote pile, believed to be near the predicted record-breaking total of 50,000,000.

As traditionally Democratic as New England has been, G. O. P. the South was solid again for the New Deal. There, the trend was decisive on first returns.

Up through the industrial east, where the Republicans warned "the New Deal means regimentation of labor," the President rolled up a mounting lead.

Into the agricultural west, some of Republican argument against reciprocal trading in general and the Canadian-American trade treaty in particular, the Democratic lead piled up.

President Roosevelt, receiving returns at his Hyde Park, N. Y., home, chuckled and said:

"It looks as if we are going to have one of the largest sweeps ever heard of in the history of the United States."

At the Governor's mansion in Topeka, Landon smiled despite the adverse tide of the vote. He reserved comment.

New Sheriff Is Citizen of This County

Former Mayor Sainte-Barbe J. B. DeRepentigny Now Occupies Post

Among recent political appointments and changes which have taken place in the district one of the most popular will undoubtedly be the naming to the post of Sheriff for the District of Beauharnois, of J. B. DeRepentigny, of Sainte-Barbe.

Mr. DeRepentigny was born at Sainte-Barbe and to his recent appointment owned and operated a farm there. His first charge in public life was as warden of the parish, a post which he held for three years. He was a member of the School board for six years, a post which time he was chairman. A member of the Municipal Council for three years, he was further Mayor of the Parish for seven years. He has been fifteen years either as Secretary or President of the Parish Mutual Fire Insurance Company, the position of President which he still holds.

The new sheriff is still held in high esteem in his parish. A staunch Conservative all his life, political candidates always found in him an unwavering ally. He took part in political affairs of his parish for many years, and his organizing abilities becoming well-known by political organizations he was moved to a wider sphere, and for the past ten years he has taken an active part in campaigns at Chateauguy, Beauharnois, and Beauharnois. On many occasions he has spoken for Dr. J. C. Moore, ex-M.P., Hon. M. B. Fisher, Dr. Larocque, John A. Sullivan, Delpha Sauvé, M.L.A., and others. Mr. DeRepentigny himself was a candidate at the Conservative convention which first chose Hon. Mr. Fisher, but he retired in the new Provincial Treasurer's favour. He has recently had charge of Federal relief works along the lakeshore.

This is the first time that the district sheriff has been chosen from Huntingdon county.

Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse Prevost, accompanied by their four children, left Henrysburg, Monday morning for Worcester, Mass., where they will join in unique double anniversary tomorrow. Mr. and Mrs. Prevost are to celebrate their golden wedding there, while on the same day Mr. Prevost's aged father and mother will have reached the 75th milestone of their married life. The occasion will be marked by a party, which will be attended by 11 children, 51 grandchildren, as well as offspring to the fifth generation.

Arson Case Revealed at Hinchinbrooke

Fortunately For Anderson Family Fire Burned Itself Out

A clear case of attempted arson was revealed at the home of Alex. Anderson, Ridge road, Hinchinbrooke, last Thursday morning when members of the family came downstairs early to find that some person had attempted to destroy their home.

Going into the living room they found the remains of a piece of burlap which had been wound around a stick, lying on a wooden chair. The fire-stick had apparently been lit after having been saturated with some oil or kerosene. The stick burned itself out without causing any serious damage. The case was reported to the Hinchinbrooke mayor and Mr. R. E. Cogliand, in Huntingdon, who immediately communicated with Hon. M. B. Fisher, at Quebec. That night a provincial detective arrived to conduct an investigation. A cursory inspection showed that the window had been opened and the lighted stick thrown inside. Previous to this, oil had apparently been thrown on the floor, and it splashed against the wall. Fortunately for the occupants of the house, the stick landed on a wooden chair and burned itself out, partly due to the fact that the closed window prevented a draught. The end of a burnt match was found outside the window. On the floor the detective found a piece of a newspaper, and this the officer used in making the search for the accused pyromaniac.

The detective learned of possible suspects, and in the home of one of them found the part of the newspaper which fitted into that found on the floor of the Anderson home. Reports state that the accused admitted his guilt. The victim refused to sue, and the case, and it was the decision of the Crown Prosecutor.

District Entries Place High In Finals Egg Laying Contest

Entries of Taylor Bros., Ormstown, in the fourteenth Quebec Western Egg Laying Contest conducted at the Dominion Experimental Station, Lennoxville, made a name for themselves and in one way were the feature of the entire show. During the last three weeks of the contest their pen of Barred Plymouth Rocks moved up from fifth to third place in the standings. In the previous contest a pen from the same breeder did the same thing moving up from fourth to second place.

Taylor Bros. pen of Barred Plymouth Rocks received 300 lbs. of Monarch Egg Laying Mash offered by the Maple Leaf Milling Co. Ltd., for their third place prize.

Armistice Observance In Huntingdon to be Of Unusual Formality

Armored Car, Montreal Troops, War Vets, Scouts, Will Take Part in Parade Saluting Base on Square

All committees are active in connection with the Armistice Day celebration and deposition of Huntingdon Borderers' Colours which will take place in Huntingdon, Wednesday, November 11th, when it is predicted that more than three thousand persons will be gathered to witness the imposing ceremonies.

The events of the day will get away to a start from the Huntingdon County Building at ten o'clock when the parade will start. It will proceed along King street, down Bouchette, Chateauguy, back Dalhousie to the monument. The Huntingdon Town Council has declared a holiday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and requests the townspeople to display flags and banners patriotically along the route of the parade.

The charter for the new firm, being applied for and granted, last week, is capitalized at $20,000. The president of the new road construction company is Zoltique Perron, proprietor of the Perron Garage, Valleyfield. Jack Wilson, C.E., of Huntingdon, is vice-president and general superintendent. R. E. Cogliand, of Huntingdon, is secretary-treasurer. Two directors are required to complete the board. These are Leo-Georges Perron, of Valleyfield, and E. G. Cogliand, of Huntingdon.

The officials of the new firm are already working to secure a number of contracts, and feel sure that by early spring they will have a thoroughly organized unit, prepared to do all kinds of road construction. The superintendent, Jack Wilson, is in charge of the reconstruction of Prince St., Huntingdon, and from the work he has done there it is safe to assume that the new company will handle contracts with speed and ability.

The Week at Ottawa

Manufacturing Shows Largest Gains in Employment this Year According to Recent Dominion Survey

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Manufacturing is the industry which has shown the largest gain in employment in 1936, according to a survey published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Those who fear that freer trade policies damage domestic industry should take heart from the fact that on January 1st the United States admitted a move characterized by one Ottawa expert as the greatest single reduction ever made in the Canadian tariff, that important tariff reductions to Japan were also made on the same day, and that on May 1st the duties on British textiles were cut. Also on gasoline, farm implements and other commodities.

Yet the index of employment in Canadian manufacturing since January 1st has steadily improved. There were on October 1st, 62,800 more persons employed in Canadian factories than at the first of the year. General employment in Canadian industries on October 1st was 471,691 larger than on the same date in 1935. The survey, maintained by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, does not include agriculture, but it reflects what is going on in agriculture, because when the farmer has money to buy things, all other industries show an improvement.

Alberta has again appealed in vain to Ottawa and the Bank of Canada for assistance. Views on the matter are sharply divided. Here at Ottawa there is a tendency to ask whether any other reply could be expected, in view of what has been done to past loans. Some western people take quite the opposite view and regard the whole business as a conspiracy on the part of the "Big Interests" to undermine Social Credit. You pay your money and you take your choice. The federal government has no authority to loan money, but with conditions different it is quite conceivable that they might be prepared to advance the money without authority and take a chance on parliament confirming it. You will recall they were able to launch a big drought relief scheme without any legislative authority. Also a nation wide house repair scheme. But Premier Aberhart made a good deal out of the statement that banks created money by a stroke of the pen, and some of the sceptics in the East are asking now why he doesn't employ a similar method to meet his maturing loans. It is a rather sorry spectacle all around and one doubts whether it is doing either the federal or the provincial government any good. The tough part is that it is the innocent bystander in most cases who pays the rap for these economic and political "contingents."

Rugby Team Scores Heavy Victory Here

Academy Defeats Argos Team in First Tilt This Season

J. B. DEREPENTIGNY Former Mayor of Sainte-Barbe and prominent county politician who has been named Sheriff for the District of Beauharnois.

Behind a powerful ground and aerial attack and an impressive defensive screen the Huntingdon Academy Senior rugby team swept to a convincing 22-0 triumph over the Argos Varsity squad of Westmount in the first game of the season here, Saturday afternoon.

Although the weather was ideal only a small crowd of students and fans were on hand to watch the local school score an impressive victory. The Academy started the game cautiously, kicking on first and second downs and using close compact plays during the first part of the game but the play was wide open in the first half and the spectators were treated to a fine display of forward passes and end run plays.

In the last quarter, however, the school really started to go places with its forward passing. From center field, Mons Duke threw a long pass to Allen Helm, who was uncovered on the right side of the field for a touchdown, and then he shot a short one just over the line to Hayter who was camped on his own twenty yard line and the latter raced the length of the field for the second touchdown. Neither of these were converted.

The first score of the game came after a few minutes of play in the first quarter when Helm attempted placement kick wide of the posts, but counted for one point when Lindsay was caught behind the line with the ball. In the second quarter a recovered onside kick from center field gave the Academy possession on Argos 25 yard line and put them in scoring position again. Following this up, Charlie Grant carried the ball on a smash through the left side of the line and Helm reeled off yards on left end run to bring the ball to the Argos 10 yard line. From that spot Griffith bucked it over for the touch, Helm's placement kick for the convert was blocked.

In the closing minutes of the first quarter both teams began to drag their plays into the open and forward passes became so numerous that the field looked like the scene of a dirigible convention. Argos intercepted a forward thrown by Helm and then Wilmut, Argos quarter, threw a long wide pass for a gain of twenty yards. On the next play Duke intercepted her pass and Argos pass and he threw one to Hayter, which was completed just as the whistle blew.

Griffith snared a short pass from Duke to start off the second half then George Lefebvre and Helm combined on a sweep around the right end for a gain of twelve yards. Duke tore off distance straight (Continued on page 4)

Howick Man With Dairy Commission

P. McArthur was President Association Montreal Milk Producers

According to an announcement in the Quebec Official Gazette, Peter D. McArthur of Howick, President of the Montreal Milk Producers' Association, has been appointed to the Quebec Dairy Commission. He is to replace R. G. Davidson, M.P., of Stanstead, retired.

Commencing the first of November, the price of milk testing 3.5% with the usual 3c differential, f.o.b. Montreal will be $2.09 a hundred pounds. It is understood that this price is to stand until June 1st 1937.

At time of writing there is no further announcement with regard to directorate of the Montreal Milk Producers' Association or any changes that may be necessitated owing to the appointment of the President to an official position. There will no doubt be a meeting in the near future.

In the appointment of Mr. McArthur to the Dairy Commission, producers feel that they have secured a specially good representative, and one who thoroughly understands their problems. Congratulations are extended Mr. McArthur upon his appointment.

At the October meeting of the Frontier Ministerial Association on Tuesday, the 26th, the members of the Association paid tribute to one of their number, the Rev. A. F. Pollock, minister of St. Paul's United Church, Ormstown, by presenting him with a copy of "Poems of Faith and Consolation" by Joseph Morris and St. Clair Adams. The recipient is celebrating the fortieth anniversary of his entrance into the ministry, and the book of religious verse was a slight token of the esteem and affection in which he is held by his brethren ministers. The Rev. A. B. Moore made the presentation as President of the Association, which met at Huntingdon by kind invitation of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Miller.

The address of the afternoon was delivered by Mr. Pollock, who, after thanking the members for their thoughtfulness went on to speak of the impressions that have remained, opinions formed, and lessons learned during his long ministry.

The speaker began his public life as a school teacher but later decided to enter the ministry of the Congregational Church, a course, he remarked, which was definitely shaped while engaged in teaching. ## Ladies United Church Talk Mission Work

President Presbyterial At Annual Thankoffering In Huntingdon

Wednesday afternoon the Huntingdon United Church Women's Missionary Society held its Autumn Thank Offering meeting. Four ladies from Montreal Presbyterial were present. Mrs. Scott, the President, expressed her pleasure in making this, her first visit here, and meeting some of her co-workers who have so many beauties of nature to look upon, and be thankful for.

Mrs. Scott's address was based on the late board meeting which gave a world vision and showed there was work for every one. Their motto was "The World for Christ". The delegates from near and far vividly portrayed different fields and the changing conditions. The future is ours and we have work to do abroad and at home where so many have come from foreign lands. We may be weak, but in the early days of Christianity the Church numbered only 12—now it is about 500 millions.

Mrs. Gordon Miller's subject was "The development of members" and she spoke briefly.

Mrs. Patterson is an old favorite and is still interested in "supply work." A frequent question with her is "What do you do with your spare time?" She gave a picture of the Children's Home at Lachine, which she visited recently, and saw such great changes in the 26 children, all now so healthy and happy. Then she spoke of a packed Sunday School in the Church of All Nations where she ventured to say not one suffered from lack of underwear, thanks in part to W.M.S. supplies. Her closing challenge was "What are we offering for Love of God?" The final address was delayed till after refreshments, as they had not yet arrived. When they came, Mrs. Smith, "Mother of young folks, in Church spoke to them. Her topic was "Their importance, and the importance of the W.M.S." The offering was $88.

Remembrance Day

ARMISTICE DAY is slowly but surely changing its emphasis. At the beginning it was a wild and unrestrained outburst of joy that the awful tragedy of the war was over. There was no other thought in mind but relief. For more than four years the world had lived on the edge of a volcano whose belching flames devoured thousands. There was no security, all was anxiety and anguish. Little wonder then that there was a frenzy of rejoicing when the agony was ended. That spirit of rejoicing carried on for a number of years after the first Armistice, until the notes of peace faded into victory, victory into pride, and pride into boasting, and boasting into a sort of self-assurance today that such a major catastrophe will not recur. In these later years we have reason to worry about victory and peace. We are not so sure now that it was a famous victory, and we do know that it did not usher in the reign of peace. The debate about who won the war was eagerly contested but there seemed to be no certain answer. The increase of armaments of all kinds, the self-defense consciousness now pervading all countries, the conquest of Ethiopia by Italy, the Chinese and Japanese engagements, and more recently the civil insurrection in Spain, together with other rumblings of discontent and the failure of conferences make us shaky in our convictions about peace.

Today the main thought that stirs us on Armistice Day is remembrance. We are thinking almost exclusively of the men who gave their all in the Great War. Here, in Huntingdon, we are sharing their memory with those who helped defend our country during the Penian raids of 1866-70. The commemoration resolves itself into a tribute to those who fell upon the field of battle, and to those who served. It is always right to pay tribute to worthy sacrifice no matter what the circumstances which provoked it. "Greater love hath no man than this that he should lay down his life for his friends." If men ever cease to pay homage to heroism and dauntless courage it will be a sorry day for the race. We need to keep always before our youth those high ideals of bravery and sacrifice which have written the noblest epics of all literature. Whether in peace or war, let us continue to honor the gallant deeds of those who lift our humanity out of dullness and throne it upon the heights. At least Canada must never forget what her sons and daughters did in the awful catastrophe of 1914-18.

Let us also be mindful of the fact that our lot might have been different today had the issues of the conflict been decided against us. Whilst we refrain from frantic boast and foolish word we can never forget our escape from consequence that one does not like to contemplate. Horrible and wicked as we all hold war to be, there are even worse things, and one is to stand securely aloof when our brothers are engaged in a death struggle for what they believe is just and right. Because our comrades did this very thing whilst hating war with all their souls, we remember them on Armistice Day with proud appreciation and humble gratitude.

A Modernized Constitution

CANADA'S written constitution is the British North America Act. Every law that is passed in Canada is passed in virtue of that Imperial statute and must conform to it. A constitution written for the 1867 Canada and little amended since might have met the needs of the 1936 Canada if it had been written in broad enough terms. But the B.N.A. Act was not so written, says the Financial Post in an editorial last week. The editorial further states: "It got down to details. It attempted to divide up responsibility and authority between the Dominion and the provinces. It divided it up according to the wisdom and vision of men who had never heard of wireless, of motor cars, of advanced social legislation, of state regulation of business, who did not envision an all-pervading government or group of governments. They did not know that their far-flung Dominion would contract in terms of speed of travel and communication. They did not know and could not foresee how its several parts would be tied together with complex, interwoven strands of commercial and national development.

"The Canada that the B.N.A. Act was written for is not the same Canada that the B.N.A. Act applies to today. Troubles have arisen and have never been finally faced. These difficulties are varied in scope. One is outstanding above all others. It is the fact that the indefinite nature of the assignment of certain governmental functions had led to competition to govern, which means competition to tax and to spend. Each government seeks to go the limit in asserting its powers; but there is not enough tax money or borrowing power to go around. We have ten governments chartering companies; 10 governments dealing with insurance; 10 assisting and controlling agriculture and the development of other natural resources; 10 worrying about problems of road, rail and air transportation.

"Each of our 10 governments claims many of the attributes of a sovereign power. The effect is vexatious confusion and the effect is also waste. Privy Council decisions, needed to delimit jurisdiction, are costly but that cost is as nothing compared with the cost of leaving the credit structure of Canadian provinces menaced by a combination of excessive powers and inadequate revenues. And this menace remains and will remain even if the Privy Council brought down a new decision every week for 10 years. Experience has demonstrated that small local governments provide the most efficient and economic administration of certain phases of community life. Experience has also demonstrated that in many of the governmental features of modern life nation-wide, centralized control is necessary. The alternative is duplication of effort and duplication of taxes. This much we have seen clearly to date. Now a new trend has set in, a much more sinister one; the use of provincial powers to set up what are virtually exclusive trading areas. By putting barriers at international boundary lines the world has succeeded in reducing world trade by two-thirds, bringing nations to their knees and our social system close to the breaking point. We are moving in Canada toward the same thing as between provinces. It would quickly destroy our nationhood and our standards of living.

"Canada's constitution must be modernized to centralize those governmental functions which can best be done by a central authority. It must be revised to provide the provinces and municipalities with adequate revenue sources to perform their essential functions. It must be revised to make it certain that the free flow of trade, capital and ideas from province to province shall not be hampered. In the revision, the most difficult problem will be to deal with jealously guarded local powers; to stop short of that degree of centralization that might lead to Fascist dictatorship; to protect the rights and interests of minorities."

In closing the article the Financial Post states that constitutional reform is long overdue, that we have made a fetish of political compromises that were needed in 1867, but that today interfere with the welfare and desires of the people as a whole.

Saturday Is Poppy Day

POIGNANT reminder of those days of glory and of grieving, Poppy Day comes on Saturday this week, to prompt the citizens of this country in the duties they have inherited from the past generation. To present-day youth, the deep-red petals of the poppy may not carry the same significance they bore to the youth of eighteen years ago. The symbolism of sacrifice with which the poppy has become charged is something to which the present generation succeeds only through the wistful memories of the ageing men who fought their country's battles, who suffered privations, endured long agonies and finally triumphed amid surroundings carpeted with poppies. To wear this humble emblem on Poppy Day and Remembrance Day is to proclaim that amid all the confusion through which this country is striving valiantly to penetrate, and now is penetrating, the heart and mind are nevertheless attuned to a sense of homage due to those men whose peace inspired 600,000 Canadians to offer themselves for service between 1914 and 1918; of that number more than 60,000 found graves in France and Belgium. Of that number there was more than the average from the Counties of Chateaugay, Huntingdon, and Beauharnois. And so it is over their graves that the poppy blows in perennial bloom.

The numbered dead were not strangers. They were young Canadians, filled even as the youth of today is filled, with the joy of living. Among the number there was your father, or mother, your brother or sister, your son or your daughter, and maybe a cousin, an uncle, a close friend. Filled also with the same joy of living were the 170,000 men who in 1936 bear upon their bodies the marks and scars of war—the disabled ex-service men who suffered disablement on behalf of Canada. To manifest that proud recognition of their place in this country, to mark that tribute which is their due, Poppy Day has been set aside in order that all may join in recalling the Great Sorrow.

The emblems distributed throughout Canada by the Canadian Legion's vast volunteer organization, and in Huntingdon and Ormstown, by the Boy Scout Troops, are the product of disabled veterans, men striving to maintain themselves in the Veterans Shops administered by the Dominion Government. To purchase a poppy is a small thing. For every citizen to do so is a big thing. Let us all wear a poppy on Poppy Day, Saturday, and next Wednesday, Remembrance Day.

Is It Protection?

INVESTMENT dealers in Quebec and elsewhere, as well as corporations within the province considering financing through the medium of bonds, are greatly perturbed over the terms of Bill No. 5 of the current session of the Quebec Legislature, while we ordinary 'country hicks' feel that we are to get some protection against all kinds of attempts to get our money tied up in investments of a doubtful nature.

One of the briefest pieces of investment legislation on record, the bill is entitled "An Act to Protect People's Savings and Prevent Overcapitalization." It reads: "Notwithstanding any general law or special act to the contrary, every issue of bonds, debentures or debenture-stock, for industrial or commercial purposes, must be limited to the amount representing the real value of the immovable property existing and affected by the hypothecation given to guarantee the issue." The explanatory note says that the object of the bill is to restrict the issue of bonds, debentures or debenture-stock to an amount representing the real value of the property existing and affected by the mortgage guaranteeing the issue. Investment concerns see great difficulty in determining the "real value."

This piece of legislation prohibits financing by bonds secured by assets other than immovable, that is fixed assets such as real estate, plants and equipment. It will no doubt create difficulties in the case of a Quebec company deciding to finance with bonds or debentures secured partly by immovables in Quebec and partly by immovables located elsewhere. It is also possible that the bill may be interpreted to mean that bonds of companies outside the province cannot be sold in Quebec unless the security conforms to this bill. Hitherto, the terms "bond," "debentures," and "debenture-stock," have been rather loosely applied to securities. On more than one occasion public financing has been carried out in the province, with the security offered designated as bond or debenture secured more by a promise to pay than anything else. Then again there are many cases where companies have issued "collateral trust" bonds or debentures, secured by stocks and bonds. In a case like this this Bill No. 5 would prohibit Quebec companies and investment trusts from issuing such securities.

The new Bill was put forward by the Government with a view to protecting the investor, and since needing it, the investor will be deeply appreciative, even if the investment dealers and others feel that the Government has gone to extremes.

TEMPLE TO GIRL'S MEMORY

Love of a maharajah for his young sister, who died of tuberculosis in Switzerland, will result in the construction of a $250,000 temple in London. Yuvrani, wife of the rajah of Kotla, in India, died after many doctors had tried to save her life. The Maharajah of Tripur, her brother, six years her elder, received the news in London and immediately vowed to build a temple in her memory. He has promised Hindu priests, who have long desired a temple in London, that he will provide the greater portion of the necessary funds. The remainder will be subscribed by the husband and Hindu princes.

RING APPETIZER FOR THIEF

When Joseph Shalopski stole a ring in Glasgow, Scotland, and was arrested he swallowed the hoop of gold. Placed in jail he started to consume his cell. He swallowed several bolts, a spring, the lens from his glasses and pieces of metal from the cell furnishings. An X-ray revealed them in his stomach. Shalopski was sentenced to 12 months in prison, and the articles recovered.

SPEEDERS HIT SHOP

In Yonkers, N.Y., Herman Bruggerman has a grocery store on a sharp turn of a well travelled street. In the last nine years, drivers of nine autos speeding too fast to make the turn safely, have skidded into Bruggerman's store, crashing plateglass windows and mashing things up generally. A tenth car recently crashed into another parked in front of the store. Now Grocer Bruggerman has asked the city to build a barricade or set a row of stout oak posts along that side of the store to protect it from wild drivers.

HITCHHIKER BLIND

In the hope of getting a radio audition, Russell Darbo, blind student at the university of California, hitchhiked to New York in 33 days but failed to get a tryout. Now he is on the way back. On several days when no one picked him up, he made 30 miles on foot led by his faithful shepherd dog. Though a discouraging experience, the young man looks upon it all as a part of his education.

FAIRY TALES RECORDED

In what is declared to be the greatest fairy-tale movement in history men in the Irish Free State are gathering the tales on dictaphone records for preservation in a museum in Dublin. In lonely cottages on the bogland of Connemara and Donegal, in little mountain farms in Clare and Kerry and on wild coastal islands, old men and women are reciting in quavering tones the folk stories which their forefathers handed down. Their only audience is a man who holds a dictaphone, recording every syllable. For nine months, aided by grants from the Rockefeller Foundation, the Irish Folklore Institute and from the Free State Government has been collecting Irish folklore. The work will require five years.

HUMAN TEST TUBES

Three men—"human guinea pigs"—who are the furthest of medical science are travelling round the world permitting themselves to become the victims of one disease after another, have arrived in Houston, Texas. They are George Richards, London, Eng.; Frank Fielding, Los Angeles, Calif.; and Maurice Walton, of Marseilles. They are employed by the Vienna Institute of Medical Research. So far they have been roaming the world for eight years searching for new diseases to contract, covering 92,046 miles through 81 different countries. They have four more years to go before they can claim the $125,000 which they have been promised as a reward. Originally, there were 97 of them dropped out one by one until only the doughty Englishman, Frenchman and American were left. The experimenters endeavor to prove that proper diet can overcome germs to which they expose themselves.

KISS CHAIN LETTERS

A woman living in London is believed to have started the chain of "kiss letters" which are now plaguing Vienna. Many men are receiving these letters daily. They are asked to send similar letters with a kiss within 48 hours to any young woman they like. Here is a copy of one of these letters: "This kiss-chain was started two years ago in London and must not be interrupted by you if you do not wish to challenge fate. Pass on this kiss, which is sent you by a young woman among your acquaintance, to ten girls you like, explaining to them that they each have to write similar letters to ten young men. Thus the whole of mankind shall kiss each other. World peace will, consequently, be a matter of course."

DAM CHANGES CLIMATE

Airplane pilots who fly over the lake produced by Boulder dam declare this water is slowly changing the climate of southern Nevada and southeastern California, unusually dry and hot heretofore. The water is cooling the air for miles around, this mass of cooler air spreading out like an open umbrella. A temperature test made recently showed when the thermometer registered 115 degrees at Las Vegas nearby, it was 105 over the lake and at a height of 12,000 feet, 50 degrees.

MARRIAGE FAILS TWICE

Five years after Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Cullen, St. Louis, were married in 1927, they decided they could get along together no longer and were divorced. The next year, 1933, they decided they could not live apart and so were remarried. A few weeks ago, they again reached the parting of the ways and have been divorced a second time.

WOMAN CAN'T SWIM, ONLY FLOAT

Because she cannot sink while in the water unless weighed down, Mrs. Rebecca Parker of Glen Innes, Australia, has arrived in Sydney for examination by specialists. According to certificates signed by doctors at Glen Innes she possess unique buoyancy, due to the extraordinary low specific gravity of her body. At Balmoral Baths, Mrs. Parker reclined on her back and arm crooked comfortably. She cannot remain in a perpendicular position; her legs float to the surface. It is reported from Tasmania that her claim that she cannot sink in water is not without precedent. James Harrison, of Wynyard, for years has been unable to sink without weights, and once enjoyed a sleep while floating.

PAYS TO TRAIN HENS

Going out to her poultry yard, Mrs. Ardella Peaslee, West Laurens, N.Y., found part of her flock missing. She had her suspicions as to who stole the hens and, in company with a policeman, visited the suspected poultry house where she pointed out five of her hens without the roost. The officer wanted more proof they were her fowls. "All right, just watch them," said Mrs. Peaslee. "Come, Susie, come," she called. Down from the roost came Susie followed by the four other hens she had pointed out. Now the neighbor has to explain.

STEAL BABY IN PARK

While two older brothers were giving Harry Browne, 20 months old, a ride in his baby buggy in a Detroit park, a man and woman snatched the baby from the mother's arms. When they returned their baby brother was gone. Later a message came to the mother, "Please forgive me for taking your baby," it read. "You cannot understand how it is to be without one. You have so many, you won't miss him."

397 IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

Since the establishment of the electric chair at Sing Sing prison, in 1891, 397 human lives have been snuffed out in it, five of them women. Every one of these victims has paid the supreme penalty for murder. 240 of them since Lewis E. Lawes has served as warden of the prison. Lawes is a bitter opponent of capital punishment.

MAGISTRATE TO TRY HIMSELF

Mr. Edward Taylor, magistrate at Baltimore, Maryland, (U.S.A.), has received a police summons to appear before himself in his own court. The magistrate, who presides over the Traffic Court, was "given a ticket" for failing to give the correct signals and causing a traffic mix-up which resulted in an accident.

Huntingdon

The annual Huntingdon Badminton Club dance held Friday evening in the Chateau was a successful event. Net proceeds from the affair amounted to $100.88. Music was supplied by Al Bernier and his Orchestra. The Chateau management held a Halloween party Saturday night when music was supplied by the same band. There was an unusually good attendance. Mrs. W. E. Lefebvre returned Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Phil Connors to Lowell, Mass., where she will visit relatives and friends.

She was only a DRESSING-TABLE BEAUTY

SHE SPENT a lot of time and money on her face. She knew the tricks of make-up, and sought the flattery of soft lights wherever she went. But day after anxious day, she watched the growing defeat of her youth. In those frightening signs of age that women know only too well: Rebellious wrinkles that refused to be covered up. Dull eyes. A sallow skin. Why had this happened to her? So young in years, so eager for life!

Lipstick and powder are grand beautifiers. But they were intended to assist glowing health—not to replace it. If she had only known that a poorly balanced diet, over a period of years, can affect how people look and feel. For instance, meals low in "bulk" may develop common constipation. Continued neglect of this condition causes discomfort, may lead to headaches, loss of appetite, listlessness. Fortunately, a delicious cereal supplies the "bulk" you need for regular habits.

Scientific tests show that the "bulk" in Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is both safe and effective. It absorbs moisture within the body, forms a soft mass, gently cleanses the system.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Stubborn cases may require ALL-BRAN oftener. If not relieved this way, consult your doctor. You may serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal, with milk or cream, or cook into tempting muffins, breads, waffles, etc. Isn't this natural laxative food better than taking pills and drugs?

ALL-BRAN is not a "cure-all"—but it does correct constipation due to insufficient "bulk." Guaranteed by the Kellogg Company. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Serve ALL-BRAN regularly for regularity

Protect Your Hard-Earned Savings

THROUGHOUT Canada, life insurance policyholders and beneficiaries should realize the menace to their own and the national welfare that lies in extreme and unjust legislation.

These policyholders represent 50 per cent. of the electors—federal and provincial. Through the institution of life insurance, they have so pooled their resources that their collective interest can withstand attacks that would bring financial disaster to the individual.

Despite war, epidemic, panic and depression, life insurance has met every policy obligation promptly and in full.

Despite the financial disturbance of the past six years, it has distributed, and continues to distribute, to its policyholders and beneficiaries, over $500,000 every working day.

Seventy-five per cent. of this money has been, and continues to be, paid to living policyholders; the balance to beneficiaries.

Life insurance is the greatest co-operative business in Canada. No one doubts its strength and stability. No one questions the prudent and intelligent direction of its affairs.

It is the guardian of the hard-earned savings of 3,500,000 men and women in all walks of life.

Today there are forces in Canada that menace the welfare of these people. These forces would penalize their savings and impair their investments through legislation which cancels public and private debts—regardless of the debtor's ability to pay—and which tends to destroy the ownership of public and private property.

The interests of life insurance policyholders and beneficiaries—as of all other citizens whose savings are invested in one form or another in Canada—demand that promises to pay be observed, when the debtor is able to pay; that hard-earned savings which safeguard the homes and families of the Dominion be protected from unjust legislation.

Fenians Never Expected Fighting Near Huntingdon

Thought Thousands of Supporters Would Join at Border for Victorious March on Montreal

The first and final instalment in the series of stories dealing with the Fenian Raids is printed below. The last two instalments described the action of 1866 and the series of events which led up to the critical battle of Trout River on May 28th, 1870, and gave an account of the action in that battle to some extent. This week's story finishes a vivid description of what took place on the battlefield that day and also gives many other amusing and interesting sidelights on the story. The Fenians were frustrated and bewildered at the reception they got at the Trout River border. They did not expect it. Read about it in this instalment.

The respectable American people around, of course, lived in terror with such a lawless band beside them, and as a precaution the storekeepers hid away their goods and shut their stores. Work along both sides of the lines was completely suspended. The Fenians, however, committed no very serious outrage. One of them went to an American hotel for bread and milk. While the woman went to get it, she fellow walked off with a silver watch that hung on the wall. Her roosts suffered also, in one instance a sitting hen being taken off its nest by these heroic warriors. Their demands for provisions were invariably complied with. To their officers must be ascribed the credit of keeping their men from robbing wholesale.

One of them, Cal. Thompson, was particularly active in preventing any outrage. He came from Albany where he held a Government position. He said he would not have come with the Fenians, had it not been that he would have been accused of cowardice, for he had belonged to the Society for several years. He had served in the American war. He was born in Scotland, of Irish parents, and had in his company some seven Glasgow Irishmen. He was the most active and capable of all the Fenian leaders. Others of the officers were sad scamps. Both at Malone and Trout River they asked that no wispy be furnished their men under any consideration, but they took care not to exempt themselves.

Fenian Campaign Ideas Vague

The ideas of almost all the Fenians as to the course they were to pursue in Canada were very hazy. They said on leaving home they did not expect to have any real fighting until near Montreal. It was possible, they thought, they might have a brush at Huntingdon, but the decisive fight would take place within sight of Montreal. Their advent on the border, they were led to believe, would be a signal for thousands of their countrymen to rally to their standard, and they laid great stress on what they expected from their friends in Montreal. With Montreal in their possession, the accession of the rest of the Province would speedily follow. They displayed the grossest ignorance of the sentiments of the people of Canada, and entertained the most extravagant expectations imaginable. Thursday, the day before the fight, they spent in drilling; a party, under Thompson, going down to Holbrook's to destroy the telegraph. Being Ascension day, when church time came, they all attended the Catholic church, crowding it to its utmost capacity.

In the afternoon there was more drilling and looting about, while travelers were allowed to pass their camp. About dark, the raiding party returned from Canada. That evening, they received numerous accessions, and the hurrah with which they hailed each new arrival was kept up till midnight. They were boastful, and vaped about what they would do when they met the "damned red-coats." Among the arrivals was Brigadier-General Starr, who slept at Mr. Leahy's. Next morning (Friday) a council of war was held to consider the propriety of an immediate advance into Canada. Many were against it until they received more reinforcements, and the Council finally broke up without any agreement.

Those who were for advance decided to go at once, and those who were against it stayed. At seven o'clock those for the invasion started. They numbered about 180, very many of them received 50 rounds, and many took sixty before leaving the camp. After they had left, small bodies followed them, until altogether 220 passed to the front. Many who were against a movement, on seeing that it would go on in spite of them, fell in with it. They halted on a field of John Donnelly's on the line between him and Patrick Solon, when Gen. Starr at once began to make preparation to throw up the breastwork. No one but a military man could have made such a judicious choice for their first position on Canadian soil. They had no idea that an advance was already on the way from Huntingdon, or that the 69th had arrived. They thought all our troops were still in Huntingdon, and supposed

ONE mother wanted her boys' rooms to be different. They had long outgrown the childish furnishings, but the family home would not permit them to have separate rooms. The mother set about decorating the room. A peasant motif provided color, originality and convenience. The room had an awkward corner that had been a handicap in placing the furniture originally. The housewife capitalized on this and built bunks on either side, bringing the heads of the beds together at the corner. Drawers underneath carried bed bedding and heavy clothing, such as sweaters, golf socks, etc.

Covering the Floor The floor was covered in a composition material that looked like tile. The walls were painted an off-shade of white. At the head of each bed book shelves were put in. The mother purchased one new chair for the room, in a dark blue which blended with the red, orange, yellow, blue and green of the peasant decorations. A low chest, which

He was indignant at the day's proceedings, muttering about how they could have expected to do anything when they had in their ranks so many of the scum of New York. He evidently had a great conceit of his own judgment, and having a good deal, frequently being checked by the active Captain McDermid, who went on nailing and packing the boxes with much expertise. No direct reference was made by any of them to the fight, but we understood their excuse was that they had not a right leader and that our force was overwhelming, they asserting that we had two regiments of cavalry, artillery, and engineers, in addition to the Volunteers—the cavalry and artillery being as mythical as their own bravery. The boxes seemed to contain mostly clothing. There were quite a number of small flat boxes filled with cartridges.

Several of the Fenians however, were stout, able fellows, and looked well in their uniform. It consists of a green jacket with yellow trimmings, light blue pants, a black belt, and a small blue cloth cap similar to that worn by the U. S. troops. Taking them as a whole, we cannot say that they were either better or worse than the same number of lads taken up at random in Griffin town. We only saw one who had full-bird plainly stamped on his face. A marshal from Malone had just seized their boxes and barrels, but had been informed he would require force to take them away. He was therefore quietly waiting until a detachment of U. S. troops from Malone came in. Fourteen of them, commanded by a lieutenant, did so an hour or so afterwards, when they were put in charge of the whole. The Fenians left the camp that night. Having now given as correct and impartial a statement of the encounter as in our power, we would pause to make some comment upon it. Many amateur military critics blame Col. Bagot for not flanking the Fenians. They say he should have sent a division up through Elgin, with instructions to come out and cross Trout River just at the Line, and there post themselves between the enemy and his retreat, so that almost every man of them might have been captured. Those who speak thus forget, 1st, such a movement would have taken at least two hours to execute; 2nd, that Col. Bagot did not know where the enemy was posted until he was before him; 3rd, that the Fenians had only taken up their position an hour before Col. Bagot came up. As the gallant Colonel is not a prophet and did not know where the Fenians were going to fight, or even that they meant to fight at all, until he came in sight of him, he would be hard to hold the coasts, send back the detachment and wait for a couple of hours, in order to execute the movement his critics say he should have done. The sure result would have been either that no Fenian would have been found on this side of 45 when the advance took place, or that they would have surmised the manoeuvre and prepared for it. We make no pretensions to military knowledge, and look at the matter merely in a common sense light, and doing so we consider that no man could have acted better under the circumstances than Col. Bagot. To his rapidity of movement is solely due the important result of having driven back the Fenians in a most demoralized state and without bloodshed.

The Fenians held a strong position and might have coped with ten times their number successfully—might have made the fields that lay in front of their barricade a very valley of death, where our Volunteers would have fallen in vain, causing to rise one wail of sorrow throughout this part of the county, and that all this we have happily escaped is altogether due to Col. Bagot's admirable conduct. As for the Fenians, no expression we can use can sufficiently convey our contempt for their conduct in running away from a strong position with a safe and certain retreat, without even waiting to fire an effective volley. So general is this opinion by all who have viewed the ground, that an American, not over favorable to Canada, said to us, "Why, if the Fenians ever trouble you again, just send up a body of old women in red coats and they will drive them away for you." No better proof of the rottenness of their cause than the figure they cut on Friday could be given. They intended to conquer Canada and failed even to conquer the first Volunteer Battalion that met them.

They intended to send in three columns, one by way of Fort Covington, another by Trout River, and another by St. Albans, who were to unite near Montreal, their plan including the destruction of the Victoria Cornwall canal and the Victoria Bridge. Compare this programme with their performance, and it will be seen they have made a worse hand of it than Smith O'Brien did in the widow's cabbage yard.

People say the Fenians will never try it again. We do not coincide in this view. The word Fenian may die out, but the principle that it represents will only crop out in a new form. As our readers know, we have contended for years that Fenianism is but a transference of the religious and national feud of Ireland to America, and that the only effectual way to save us from its consequences is to make the American Government do its duty as international law requires, and to hold it strictly responsible for every act of its citizens, whether native or naturalized. Had our Government taken a proper stand four years ago on this subject, all the loss and trouble we have endured since would have been saved.

Start by cleaning under the loose edges thoroughly, then secure it with tacks, very close together, everywhere it is loose. Small holes may be filled with "filler," smoothing it flush with the linoleum, using either a putty knife or a damp brush.

To Mend Large Holes For a large hole, a square of linoleum larger than the spot may be cut, laid over the place and marked with a pencil. All the damaged part is cut out completely. If the space is carefully cut to fit, the patch will slip in snugly and can be tacked down smoothly, both on the patch-edge and the main body edge with rows of tacks.

Any crack or tight should be filled with putty. After the filler dries, the linoleum is scrubbed and rinsed. When dry, two coats of good quality paint may be applied, the first well dried before the second is put on. The final application should be a good quality floor varnish.

The patches will be not noticeable, and it will be easy to keep clean.

Blunted Needles If you should blunt your machine needle and have no other on hand to replace it, stitch for a few inches through fine sandpaper. It will sharpen the point beautifully.

What's in the Wind

A FAVORITE IN-DOOR SPORT

At the moment both Federal and Provincial Governments are producing schemes to aid agriculture. They involve revolutionary (possibly unsuspected) principles of far-reaching importance.

On October 30th the Quebec Legislature adopted a Bill establishing new farm credit facilities. It is under the operation of the "Quebec Farm Credit Bureau."

It is, of course, too soon and indeed impossible to predict the outcome of this new legislation. Some interesting speculations may be allowable.

It must be fairly evident that all persons at present holding mortgages on farms will be compelled to lower the interest to 2 1/2% or the loans will be discharged and advantage taken of the Government's offer of low interest and favorable plan for repayment of principal.

Farms that are not now sufficiently financed may blossom forth in new barns, machinery, houses and even new owners.

The Quebec Farm Credit Bureau is very likely to become the centre of a great experiment in State Capitalism. A hundred and thirty-five thousand farmers owing money to a 135,000 individuals are in the hands of fate at the worst.

We see the hand of the Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Rioux. If credit is good medicine for banks it should be just as helpful to farmers.

The scheme lately announced by the National Employment Commission by which the banks are to loan to householders and owners of other property a sum not exceeding $2,000 for a period of one year at 6 1/2% plus is also available to farmers.

Now, aren't the banks being just too good and kind to lend credit at only a little over 6% repayable monthly in advance, as usual? Don't believe for a minute that there will be any money involved in all these transactions.

Some Algebra student will have to work out the amount of the final loss and who pays it.

Interest at 6% in twelve instalments, commencing next month. In plain English, if you haven't already got the money to repair your house, how and where are you going to get it from to repay the bank?

In this case there is reason to fear the Employment Commission has laboured mightily to bring forth a mouse. They are passing the bunk to the bank!

Love's Labor Lost

The Federal Department of Labor also has elaborate plans under way to assist the unemployed and agriculture at one clip. A news item from Halifax on October 27th states that Humphrey Mitchell, Director of Labor Transfer, suggests that Nova Scotia youths be placed on farms for six months or a year to learn agriculture, and then go to farms of their own, with government assistance.

Hump! Hump! We think he should also meet the great majority of farmers who have spent a lifetime at the job and still don't know much about it. Not many, in the East, as yet, have had the benefit of government assistance.

Another item from Victoria on the same date, informs us that the Province of British Columbia will co-operate (but without enthusiasm) in the new scheme to put youths over 16 years, and unemployed, on farms.

Farmer "A" is shipping milk to Montreal at $2.09 a hundred lbs. He employs two boys under the above scheme. He gets $10.00 bonus from the Government for board. I am not sure whether he pays the $7.50 wages or the Government does. But if the farmer does pay them he has two men for $15.00 a month less $10.00 allowed for board, which isn't supposed to cost him anything. Net expense $5.00 for two men.

Farmer "B", his neighbor, is also shipping milk at the same price. He has two hired men in his employ already and pays them $15.00 a month each. With board at $5.00, his net expense for labor is $40.00.

Any Grade III pupil can see that Farmer "A" is shortly going to bank more money than Farmer "B" or what is worse, undersell him in the market.

Two young men from St-Isidore were returning from a hunting trip when one of these, certain of having unloaded his gun aimed at a young boy they met and fired. Unfortunately the bullet hit the young boy in the stomach. He was removed to the St-Joseph hospital at Lachine. His condition is not considered serious. The victim is the son of Mr. Alexander Pitre of St-Isidore.

Fenian Raid Volunteer Coat Took Honours For Best Costume

About forty of the members of the Presbyterian Young People's Society made merry at a Halloween party at the home of E. E. Wells on Thursday night. A prize had been offered for the best costume, and as there were on such a varied character, especially those worn by the girls, the work of the judges was most puzzling. They finally decided the matter by a drawing of numbered slips, the choice falling on Miss Creswell, as Lady Teasle, and Miss Cottingham, as Ennie Smolitz. There were fewer boys in costume to choose from, but the same rule was followed, the lucky number falling to Evan Watson, dressed as a Canadian Volunteer in the Fenian Raid, wearing a historical red coat over 70 years old. A number of games were played including stunts, after which lunch was served, chicken salad, rolls, doughnuts, pumpkin pie and coffee.

Armistice Observance in Huntingdon

The celebration Wednesday will bring a final resting-place to the Borderers' Colours which have been tossed about since their presentation by Prince Arthur in 1870. For many years they were looked after by members of the 50th battalion who were officers during the time of the Fenian Raids. In June, 1920, according to a report in the Gleaner, there was a question of having the colours deposited in a church. But apparently nothing came of it. The next time that the colours were spoken of was at the time of the Huntingdon Centenary in 1925, when Veterans marched in the parade with their flags. They were apparently not after the same of it. Building, and when found this summer were much the worse for wear and tear. They have been restored to their almost original beauty and will remain as a lasting memorial to those who valiantly offered service in defense of our country at that time.

Large Brain Sign Of Powerful Intellect

There is still a considerable difference of opinion among scientists as to whether the size of a man's brain has a direct relation to his intellectual capacity or not. In general, however, it is the common belief that the person with the largest brain is also the most powerful intellect.

Obedience To The Right

One way to know is to obey. Even our primary conceptions of moral duty depend for their vigor and clearness upon our practical attitude toward duty. Nothing so clears them as doing what we know to be right and eschewing what we know to be wrong. That brings us to a solidity and simplicity of convictions which we can reach neither by observing men's experience nor by logical reasoning. It keeps us in touch with reality, and dissipates the vapors which otherwise becloud the mind. Other processes may bring us to conclusions which we cannot deny, but which have no power over our lives; this gives us conclusions which act upon us as motives and helps to further right action. For, as George Elliot says, "the finest reward of doing right is the power to go forward to right action which is more difficult."

All of which is flattering to the man who wears a 7 1/2 hat or larger, though it must be admitted that some mighty smart men never wore bigger than a 6 1/2 hat. Mere size is not enough to account for the brilliancy of some of the world's best brains, in all probability.

Nevertheless, it is too bad that there are no records, traditions, or relics to tell us more about this Aleutian Indian with that great brain case.

There is a story concerning a clergyman who, at dinner, had to listen to a talkative young man who had much to say on Darwin.

"I can't see," bawled the youth, "what difference it would make to me if my grandmother was an ape."

"No," skirished the clergyman, "I can't see that it would. But it must have made a great difference to your grandmother."

Successful Roast Chicken Supper Kensington Hall

The annual roast chicken supper was served by the ladies of Kensington Hall on Thursday evening, October 29th, to a large number of people. The stewards and ladies of the congregation had made previous arrangements to dispense with the usual program and give the entire hall, dining-room upstairs and main floor below to the setting of tables which they did, so that 90 could be seated at one time. The result was gratifying, so much so that the guests were served from 5.00 to 8.30 p.m. without any crowding as was usual. The W.A. had a booth of useful and fancy articles and made many sales, while the Mission Band added to their funds by selling home-made candy. The proceeds of the supper amounted to $105.

At the close of the address, Rev. J. H. Woodside of Athelstan, moved a hearty vote of thanks to the speaker for this splendid address, the resolution being seconded by Rev. T. F. Duncan.

The Devotional Service was conducted by the President and was beautifully fitted to the occasion. Mr. Moore was assisted by Psalm of Love from the 1st epistle to the Corinthians, and Rev. J. H. Lynn who read an appropriate poem. Two hymns were used in the worship, one being sung, and the other being spoken in unison as a prayer.

Feeling reference was made to the recent passing of Dr. S. P. Ross, Professor-emeritus of the United Theological College, Montreal. All stood while Mr. Moore gave thanks to God for the influence of this great Christian and scholar.

Two visiting ministers were welcomed at the meeting, Dr. Maclean of Huntingdon Presbyterian Church and the Rev. Mr. Hatcher, rector of the Anglican Church. Both gentlemen expressed their appreciation of the address, by Mr. Pollock and thanked the Association, especially Dr. and Mrs. Millar, for inviting

Winter Feeding Farm Live Stock

The long winter season affects farm livestock very much. It is a time when special care is necessary in order to keep young animals growing, and mature ones in productive condition. No sane farmer has a blanket taken off his bed when winter sets in. The fat on the animal represents a blanket and every effort should be made to keep that blanket on. No greater mistake can be made in wintering livestock than to allow them to lose their flesh early in winter. This means that the animal must be properly fed in early winter.

The young animal will be expected to make considerable growth during the winter and if it does it will need the kind of materials out of which muscle and bone are made. This will require a legume hay. It is very poor economy to feed enough timothy hay to furnish the needed amount of protein. In fact it is hard to do this without bringing on trouble with digestive organs.

Some farmers seem to think that winter is the time for the animal to rest so far as making growth is concerned. No greater mistake can be made. Animals have just so long to grow and at a certain age growth ceases. If we want large animals no time must be lost during the growing period. A considerable part of the body of the animal is water, hence it should have all the water it will drink and that water should not be ice cold. The farmer who has a lot of live stock of all kinds to winter has a lot to do and he should do a lot of thinking also.

"I don't see why having your car overhauled should be such a depressing experience."

"You don't, eh? Well, it was overhauled by a motor-cycle cop."

Chapter 22

Hugh had barely turned away from the telephone after talking with Val about Kate's continued absence when he received a call from Winifred asking him to come right over.

He found her in a highly nervous state, unable to sit still. She asked him about the investigation into Bret's death. Winifred asked, "Why hadn't he made an arrest at the theatre? After all, it must have been some one in their crowd. What about a motive?"

Hugh answered her questions as best he could. Obviously Kellogg did not know who killed either Leslie or Bret. Certainly the prosecutor was not letting the grass grow under his feet, but to uncover sufficient evidence to hold a person for murder—for double murder probably, in this case—was not the work of a moment. Meanwhile they were all he suspected, under police surveillance.

But what did Bret mean when he said both he and Kellogg knew who killed Leslie? Winifred asked, walking the floor. "He was about to say something about money when Kellogg's men gagged him. Did he mean some one had bought Kellogg off?"

Hugh shrugged. "You know as much about it as I do," he declared. "Frankly, I think Bret was talking through his hat. He was angry, and he wanted to say something biting, something that would make Kellogg pause and perhaps treat him with greater deference. There is a possibility, of course, that Bret suspected some one. But Walter Kellogg has been in public life a good many years. Winifred, and he's never been known to stray from the straight and narrow. But through all this Hugh was thinking that this was not what Winifred had asked him to come here to hear. For some reason she was having difficulty bringing her Christmas was in the offing now. Everywhere you saw his cheery harbingers. No shop window was without its urgent suggestions for gifts. It was impossible to deny the happy expectancy with which the whole world seemed to have been infected—and yet, for the second time in her life, Val was utterly untouched by the Christmas spirit. It had been like that the Christmas after her father was killed. Try as she would, she could not feel anything but the pain of increasing loneliness.

Walking homeward from the elevated, she found herself thinking of the day she had come to New York to buy her greater happiness and years ago it seemed to her now. There had been something stable in her life then—a home, Aunt Mahala, Robert—Robert kissing her goodbye at the station, but not yet, saving sorrow for the future. Val had completely innocent and therefore completely helpless in a world that has no patience with innocence."

She had thought Robert loved her then, but for herself she loved her so deeply that nothing could ever change him. Perhaps that in itself had been evidence of her innocence—an innocence that could not then have conceived the possibility that the time would come when Aunt Mahala would turn her out of her home and Robert would no longer want to marry her because he saw no prospect of marrying a fortune as well.

But Robert and Aunt Mahala were of a strangely remote past. As far as it was possible, she had put them out of her mind to begin afresh here in New York. Though already marred by tragedy, it had seemed a bright and beckoning adventure ahead of her then. New things to do, new things to see, new people to know—and Hugh, suddenly and inexplicably, in love with her. Knowing now that what she had felt for Robert had not been love. Knowing happiness and real happiness for the first time in over two years. Happy in Hugh's love... happy in Kate's motherly affection... seeing life a sweet and lovely thing stretching out endlessly before her.

And now Hugh—in love with Winifred—had gone out of her life as suddenly as he had entered it, and Kate was hiding somewhere with the memory of a man she had tried to stop loving—and never had.

Violet heard Val's key slipping into the lock and came hurrying from the kitchen. She put a finger to her lips and uttered a prolonged "Shhhhh." She took Val's coat and hat and without waiting to put them away moved moved breathlessly along the hall, motioning for Val to follow. Before Kate's bedroom door she stopped, very quietly turned the knob and pushed the door open.

Kate was lying across her bed, fully dressed, a light cover over her legs, sleeping soundly.

Chapter 23

"Tell you what we'll do, Val. We'll get a Christmas tree and create it and hang up our stockings Christmas eve and have a swell old time. How about it?"

Smiling, Val tried to put a little enthusiasm into her voice. "Great. I'd love that, Kate." But her voice was flat and her eyes belied her words.

Kate plunged a thermometer into the syrupy mixture in the small pot. "I've an idea this is about

"That, Val," Guy said, "is hardly cricket."

But Leeze slipped her arm through Val's and made a face at Guy. "What you don't know about women would fill a library," she told him.

"What about that dance?" Guy suddenly demanded. He forced Leeze into a chair. "Stay there until I tell you to get up, you." And then he held out his arms to Val and after one swift glance at Kate she moved toward him and presently they were lost from view.

Leeze hitched her chair forward, brushed her golden hair back with her hands. "I suppose Val told you what we fought about?" she said to Kate.

Discreetly, Kate replied, "Val told us practically nothing. What little we learned came from Guy."

"It was all my fault," Leeze said. "Guy was to meet me and Cran at Pete's place and he was hours late, and then at last he walked in with Val and I was set for battle. She's lovely, isn't she—Val?" And not waiting even for Kate's half nod, "I'm pretty touchy about Guy and I got the idea in my thick head Guy was that way about her." She smiled. "Silly, wasn't it?"

Across the floor Kate saw Val and Guy swing out of the slowly revolving mass. Guy was holding Val needlessly close and his head was down, his lips moving in an earnest monologue. Val was wishing now she had politely declined Guy's casual bid and left him to Leeze. She should have known, but—intending that Guy would somehow manage to be disagreeable before this dance had ended.

Once before—driving to Pete's place that night—he had grown mildly sentimental. She had laughed at him then, but now she resented what she saw as an absurd attempt to create in her mind the fantastic notion that he was in love with her—had been in love with her since that first night.

Trying to josh him out of this mood, Val had made the mistake of saying to him, "Mind now, or I'll tell Leeze what a cheater you are."

With all the gravity of which he was capable, Guy said, "Leeze is a kid, Val. Not in years, but—intending that she should fall in love with a man doesn't fall in love with a youngster he plays around with. He wants—" blance of interest she had seen there for days, but Guy's uncalculated remark brought Kate's head around sharply. "I think, Guy," she told him quietly, "that about concludes your contribution to the evening's entertainment. Sorry you have to rush away, of course, but—"

"Come along, Leeze," Guy caught Leeze's arm and pulled her to her feet, protesting but making no effort to hold back. In a moment she looked back and winked. "Good-bye. Sorry the cave-man had to get nasty..."

"You wouldn't believe it," Kate told Val when they had gone. "but I can remember when that boy was almost human. I can't understand a bright child like Leeze putting up with his churlishness."

Nor could Val, but she had dismissed both Guy and Leeze from her mind, holding her thoughts to the only person she had come to know these last months whose memory remained unsullied. Cran, in New York, and but for Guy she would have seen him tonight.

Kate and Val had just crawled out of the taxi, loaded with bundles and struggling with the small tree, when the young man pacing the sidewalk before the apartments suddenly quickened his pace as he came toward them.

"Merry Christmas! Make a hand with that junk?"

It was Cran. He had been there since 8 o'clock. The maid said she didn't know when you would be back, but I decided to wait."

Kate said, "Well, you didn't wait in vain, my young gallant. You can come up and help us decorate, and after the job's done, I'll leave you and Val to sit up and wait for Santa Claus... I suppose you know how to decorate?"

"Me?" Cran said. "I'm practically the best in the business."

Val didn't say anything. She just looked at Cran and grinned as if he had said the most amusing thing imaginable.

Joyous Youth Programme At Winter Fair

The 15th annual Royal Winter Fair will be formally opened on November 18th by the Dominion Minister of Agriculture, the Honourable James G. Gardiner. This is the tribute of the official head of agriculture in Canada to the special aim of the Royal Fair this year to demonstrate the economic importance of agriculture in a prosperous Dominion and to emphasize the place of youth as the country's future farmers.

The comprehensive title, "Youth in Agriculture," more than a slogan is an expression of the spirit that will animate the whole of this year's Fair. Numerous boys' and girls' contests are to be featured, including an oratorical contest for youths—the "voice of youth" speaking for youth.

Arrangements have been made for all students at the Ontario Agricultural Colleges of Guelph, Kemptville, and Ridgeway to attend the Fair. In addition, an extensive plan is being completed under the Provincial Department of Agriculture to bring into Toronto one of the eight Fair days groups of young farm people, and with the co-operation of the Department of Education, pupils of collegiate institutes and high schools within bus-ride distance, roughly outlined by a circle around Niagara Falls, Oranville, Lindsay and Cobourg. Over 1,500 country boys are to be "on parade" in the arena during the opening of the Horse Show.

To stress the "future farmer" idea, a group of 50 students from the Ontario Agricultural College, natty uniforms, under a superintendent, will act in the cattle barn as model livestockmen. By directing special attention to scrupulous cleanliness and hygiene in the stalls it is hoped to make the magnificent cattle barns still more attractive to a larger number of the general public. Comparatively few visitors to the nightly Horse Show are aware that they are within a step of 2,000 head of the finest cattle the Dominion can produce and within five minutes' stroll of 10,000 head of other livestock and poultry.

Throughout the whole Fair the aim will be by means of bright banners, placards and other decoration, all bearing the legend "Youth in Agriculture" to inspire a tone of festivity and joyous youthfulness.

Entries received this week at the Executive Offices in Bay Street, while not yet completely listed, are believed to constitute a record in the 15-year history of the Fair. All departments share in the increase, horses, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry, fruit, vegetables, grain and dairy products.

Gordon F. Perry is this year's president of the Royal Winter Fair and as chairman of the Horse Show Administrative Committee, F. C. Fletcher is vice-president.

His Excellency the Governor General is to attend the Fair and Viscount Cobham, who is Lord Lieutenant of the county and ancient city of Worcester, England, will judge the hursters and jumpers. A British Army officers' team is to compete for the International Trophy against officers-riders from Chile.

'SALADA' TEA

is delicious

The Irish Free State, the United States and Canada. The Horse Show, which is now among the leading three on this continent, will be brightened and made still snappier through the efforts of the committee to compress the items in the programme by holding elimination contests and other means. They have succeeded in reducing by fully five hours, the total eight-day programme without omitting anything interesting.

The Royal Winter Fair dates are Nov. 18-26 inclusive.

A donkey had been very stubborn and the man, exasperated, had gone into a chemist's for something to make it go. The chemist gave it something and before they could recover their wits the donkey was out of sight.

"How much did you give it?" asked the man.

"Four drops," answered the chemist.

"Well, give me eight drops; I've got to catch it."

LOANS for HOME IMPROVEMENT

Under the new provisions in respect to the Dominion Housing Act

The Bank of Montreal is co-operating in the plan announced by the Dominion Government for assisting home owners who wish to renovate, modernize or otherwise improve their homes, and it is now prepared to make loans to property owners under the new provisions of the Dominion Housing Act. Briefly, the provisions regarding home improvement loans are:

- Maximum loan on one property — $2,000.
- Discount—Charge equal to $3.25 per $100.00 of the face value of the note, for one year, payable in advance. Repayment by monthly instalments.
- Loans to be used solely for improving and repairing existing property, and not for building on vacant land. Improvements include all such work as new plumbing, remodeling of rooms, installation of furnace, painting, roofing, etc. Fixtures, which are not removable attachments or appliances, are considered improvements.
- No endorsers are required.
- Loans made to owners only. Properties on which loans may be made include: private homes, duplexes, small apartment houses, farm-houses and combination store and dwelling houses.
- Standing of taxes, mortgage payments, etc., to be acceptable to the lending institution.

If you wish to obtain funds to repair, improve or modernize your property, we would be very glad to have you call and discuss your requirements with us.

More Unexplained Deficits Found In Duplessis Probe

Hope to Convert Debt of Province Held Out by Martin B. Fisher

An unexplained deficit of $56,000 was discovered in administration funds for the Montreal Public House, members of the Public Accounts Committee were told Wednesday by Provincial Auditor Edgar Veziua.

Opening time for resumption of the hearing by the Quebec Public Accounts Committee found only spectators, police and newspapermen in the committee room.

The committee was jammed with men and women, seeking standing room in the chamber where the legislative committee has been holding its hearings.

Before calling names from the list of witnesses, Chairman Tache read a telegram from Oscar Bériau, a director of domestic arts for the province, who said that he was visiting in Boston at present.

Mr. and Mrs. John Stewart and Margaret of Valleyfield spent Sunday at Riverhurst Farm.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Carmichael, Stewart and Irene, celebrated with Mr. and Mrs. Bert Fisher of Burlington, their thirtieth wedding anniversary, Saturday, returning on Sunday.

Mr. Maurice Wilson of Oshanan, Alta., returned home after spending the past month with his sister, Mrs. Andrew MacFarlane.

Mr. Sydney Voce of Montreal, spent the week-end at the home of Mr. John Gruer.

in one concrete measure the powers of the Government to borrow. Monies voted by the Legislature were diverted from the purposes to which they had been assigned.

These were some of the facts given by the Public Accounts Committee on the work of probing into expenditure of public funds was resumed.

Information of a revealing nature as to the bookkeeping system of the Province of Quebec, and upon different interpretations put upon it, took up most of the time of the committee.

Mr. Bouchard and Veziua clashed as regards the $45,000 which had been appropriated to pay indemnities of members of the Legislature.

The Premier contended there were three forms of debt. One was put on the hand in his neighbor's pocket; another was to take the interest personally, and a third was to divert public funds voted for a special item.

The regular monthly meeting of St. Andrew's United Women's Missionary Society was held in the Church, Hall on Thursday, Oct. 29th.

Mr. and Mrs. John Stewart and Margaret of Valleyfield spent Sunday at Riverhurst Farm.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Carmichael, Stewart and Irene, celebrated with Mr. and Mrs. Bert Fisher of Burlington, their thirtieth wedding anniversary, Saturday, returning on Sunday.

Robson

Mrs. T. E. Cleland and son Tom spent Saturday in Montreal. Miss Delia Cleland has returned home after spending the past four months at Dixie, Que.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Turnbull and family, also Miss Clarice Turnbull of Plattsburg, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Sweet.

Several from here attended the funeral of the late Mr. Albert Rogers at Hemmingford on Thursday afternoon. The community extends its sympathy to Mrs. W. D. Sample, bereaved daughter of the deceased.

Miss Evelyn Sample of Plattsburg is spending a few days at her home here, as Mrs. Sample is staying with Mrs. Rogers at Roxham.

Our district school was closed on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday owing to the death of Miss Sample's fiancée, Mr. Rogers.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Gosling motored to Montreal on Sunday and met Mr. Gosling's brother of England.

About ninety friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Barr on Friday evening. A few hours were spent in cards and dancing. Lunch was served by the ladies.

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Cleland, Tom and Mrs. M. Robson called on friends in Champlain on Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jackson and family of Plattsburg, were Sunday guests of her mother, Mrs. Robt. Blair.

R. E. COGLAND Of Huntingdon, Secretary-Treasurer of the new road construction firm, Valley Paving Company.

Huntingdon Council

A regular session of the Town Council was held Monday evening. Members all present, except Ald. Lalonde. Mayor Faubert presiding.

The following accounts were presented for payment: A. McArthur, $24.96; Braithwaite Bros., $46.39; Pringle, Stark & Co., $20.10; Bell Telephone Co., $9.99; R. Rodrigue, $3.75; A. Lefebvre, $12.50; Pressure Pipe Co. of Canada, $62.40; Lawrence Riel, $38.50; Adrien Lefebvre, $12.50; W. A. Hunter, $84.92; John Macrow, $30.50; Johnson Sales Co., $92.06.

It was moved by Ald. Hunter and seconded by Ald. Kelly that the accounts as read be paid.

Mr. W. McLean asked for permission to move a building along Chateaugay St. Mr. McLean was asked to submit a letter to the town agreeing to be responsible for damages.

Mr. J. A. Ross complained in regard to the drainage at the corner of Lake and Hunter Streets. This matter was left in the hands of the Road Committee.

It was moved by Ald. Hunter and seconded by Ald. McCormick, that the matter of plowing the streets in the winter insofar as relates to hydrants be left in the hands of the Fire Committee, and also the plowing of the snow fences.

Dr. Clouston asked that the Town render assistance in the preparations for the 11th inst. The Council agreed to render any assistance possible.

FORMER ATHLETE ALMOST A CRIPPLE

Now "Right as Rain" After Taking Kruschen

Read this letter from an athlete, telling how he obtained relief from rheumatic pains.

"My knees were so stiff with a kind of rheumatoid trouble that I could only rise from a chair with pain and difficulty. This had been growing worse and worse for about two years. It was all the more galling because in my young days I had played for two counties at football and held a college record for the 100 and 220 yards. Naturally I tried all sorts of embrocation, but with absolutely no perceptible effect.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are frequently due to deposits of uric acid in the muscles and joints. Kruschen helps to stimulate the excretory organs to healthy regular activity, and so enables them to eliminate this excess acid from the system.

Hinchinbrooke Council

Met on Monday, Nov. 2nd, with the members all present. Mayor Wilson presiding.

Moved by Councillors Hampson and Ross that the following bills be paid: E. W. Wood, $3.00; Joseph Sloan, $4.70; R. Tannahill, $3.80; the Gleaner, $3.53; J. H. Gowen, $2.90; County Rate, $1468.84; E. Martin, $2; H. Wilson, $7.50; City Gas & Electric Co., $37.68.

Moved by Councillors Crutchfield and Hamilton that the Secretary advertise in the Gleaner for tenders for four trees on the roadside west of D and K Mcintosh's barn.

Moved by Councillors Oliver and Ross that Mr. S. Todd be given $10 per month until such time as his penance is received.

Moved by Councillors Murphy and Ross that Mrs. G. Douglas be given $10 per month from the 1st of November, 1936, until the 1st of May, 1937, and that Mrs. Chester Hampson be given $3 for the month of November as aid.

Huntingdon Pulse Normal Again After Hallowe'en Fever

Witches, spooks and ghosts walked the streets on Saturday night and townspeople are breathing a sigh of relief that Hallowe'en is over for one more year.

The town council was not taking any chances on the waning popularity of rough house tactics, however, as they hired five men to watch the machines that were being used in construction work on Prince Street.

On Friday night, Oct. 30th, the Fertile Creek C.C. met for a euchre and dance. Contesters for the evening were Mrs. Clusholm and Donald, also Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Pro. The cards were played at thirteen tables. Prize-winners were: Mrs. James Whyte and Mr. Arthur Kerr.

On Friday evening the Howick United M. P. S. entertained the Siloeki C. G. I. T. group at a Hallowe'en party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold McKell. A very pleasant evening was spent in playing games and dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Buchanan and two children, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Allen and family spent Sunday the guests of Mrs. Sophia Buchanan.

A delegation was appointed to meet Hon. M. B. Fisher, to discuss the matter of widening the Swamp Road.

The report of the Valuers was accepted, re lots Nos. 91-94.

Wants Factory in Beauharnois Jail

The old Beauharnois jail, unused for the past 30 years, would make an excellent site for a manufacturing plant which would bring revenue to the municipality.

While in Quebec during the week the mayor said, he interviewed Delpha Saune, M.L.A., for Beauharnois, asking him to give the building, free of charge, to the municipality.

Prince Arthur Pays Visit Here Sixty-Six Years Ago

Borderers Presented With Colours at Square on Historic Occasion

Sixty-six years ago, Tuesday, June 1st, 1870, Prince Arthur, now the Duke of Connaught, visited Huntingdon. The Prince came to this district to look over the scene of the battle of Trout River which was such a decisive victory in the Fenian wars and to present the colours to the local Borderers who had played such an important part in that victory.

Latest a great deal of interest has been stirred up in those colours. They were recently found by Mr. Clark Boyd in a vault at the County Building, Huntingdon, and were given to the president of the board of trade, Mr. Walter Brown, Mr. Brown, in conjunction with Mr. M. R. Primeau, scoutmaster, and the local scout troop, succeeded in raising sufficient money to have the colours repaired and sufficient interest to have them placed in the spot where the public would be able to see them. They have been repaired to look like new and on the occasion of a special Armistice Day celebration here on November 11th, they are to be placed in the Anglican church.

The enthusiasm with which the colours were first received seems to have waned during the past 66 years but the new effort to give them a permanent resting place indicates that the people of Huntingdon are now anxious to give them the treatment they deserve.

The day the colours were received was one of the most memorable in the history of this district. The Prince, mounted on a dark bay horse, accompanied by General Lindsay and his staff, rode onto the square in front of the Academy where the troops who had taken part in the Battle of Trout River were drawn up. After a review of the men, General Lindsay made a speech, in which he congratulated

The Annual Autumn Thank-Offering meeting of the United Church Women's Missionary Society was held Wednesday, Oct. 28th, in Munro Hall with a good attendance. A special Thanksgiving program was followed in which all present participated. Comforters were tied for the Fall bazaar. Donations for the bazaar were asked to be handed in at an early date in order that they may be forwarded to the supply agency early in December. As this was an all-day meeting dinner was served at noon.

The Lend-a-Hand Mission Circle met Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Allan Mack. Miss Hattie Shearer had charge of the meeting. Sewing was done for work allocation and a pleasant afternoon was enjoyed. The hostess served refreshments.

Mrs. Mabel Carrigan spent the past week with her daughter, Mrs. Hesselton at her home in Saranac Lake, N.Y.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Barwick of St. Lambert were week-end guests at the home of his brother, Mr. E. Barwick. Mrs. Barwick, Sr. was also their guest last week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Chapman, daughter Ruth and Master Royce McCaffery spent the week-end with friends in Dunham.

Matrimonial

Macnaughton-Holtzhouse
The marriage took place on Saturday afternoon, October 17th, at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Leitz Pa., of Helen Elizabeth, daughter of the late H. Holtzhouse and of Mrs. Holtzhouse, to Mr. D. Cameron Macnaughton, of Philadelphia, son of the late Angus Macnaughton and of Mrs. Macnaughton of Westmount, Que. The Rev. O. O. Leitch officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. D. G. Witmyer, and was attended by her sister, Mrs. Lloyd Kaufman and Miss Joan Shively, a niece, who was flower girl. Mr. Paul Badort, of Philadelphia, was best man. The bride was attired in blue flat crepe, with white accessories and wore a corsage of white gardenias and lilacs-of-the-valley. The bridesmaid and flower girl wore blue and the bride's mother was in plum color.

Mr. and Mrs. Macnaughton left later on a motor trip to the Southern States. On their return they will reside at the Way-Linn Manor Apartments, Lansdowne, Philadelphia.

Visitor—"So you have triplets for them yet?"
Willie—"Yes, but I don't think any minister would christen them by the names father calls them."

St. Anicet Parish

Mr. and Mrs. Evangeliste Quenneville recently spent a few days in Montreal with relatives.

Mr. Guy Quenneville of Montreal spent the week-end with his parents.

Mr. Fred Langevin has bought the Sandy Caza point. The last few weeks men have been working to improve the shore line in preparation for building.

The government trucks are spreading gravel on the streets of the village.

Work has been carried on lately on the C.N.R. track, replacing old rails from White's Station. 33 men were at work and 7 men from this parish were employed.

Mr. and Mrs. Davignon and family of Buffalo, N.Y., spent a few days in the parish, guests of Mrs. Jos. Dancusa.

Mr. Frank Dancusa, Mrs. Smith from St. Regis Falls, also Mr. and Mrs. Ladleur from Buffalo, N.Y., were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. Dancusa.

Mr. Wilfrid Carriere, son of Mr. Nap Carriere was married to Miss Gabrielle Richer, daughter of Mr. Philias Richer, last Wednesday morning. In the evening a reception was given in honour of the newly married couple in Faubert's Hall. They were the recipients of many beautiful gifts.

Powercourt

Parents and friends gathered at the Powercourt School on Friday evening to enjoy a Halloween party which was given by the teacher, Miss McDougall and the pupils. One of the interesting features was a costume parade in which prizes were given, which were won as follows: 1st, Yvette Cusson, dressed as a Pirate; 2nd, Irene McHardy, who represented a witch; 3rd, Watson Rowat, as a Chinaman. The teacher and children are to be congratulated on the success of the party.

Mrs. Amos Myatt and son Eldon have been spending a few days at Burke, N.Y. with Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Myatt.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Farquhar of Constable, N.Y. spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. L. McClatchie.

The many friends of Mr. J. S. Dunning will be sorry to hear of his death at the Cornwall Hospital recently after undergoing an operation. Mr. Dunning spent the summer months with friends here.

Halloween passed off very quietly. A few witches and ghosts called at some of the homes and played a few tricks. Some cars mysteriously disappeared and some people were looking for farm implements which had walked off.

Mr. and Mrs. Perrett of Montreal spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Henry White.

Mrs. Wm. Myatt, Mrs. Russell Myatt and the Misses Grace Carrigan and Cheta Ross spent a day last week at Catspaug, N.Y.

Golden Wedding of Hastie Couple

Mr. and Mrs. William Hastie

Former Ormstown Residents Feted By Relatives And Friends

With their six children and seven of their ten grandchildren present for the occasion, Mr. and Mrs. William Hastie, among the first settlers in the Trochu, Alta. district, recently celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding.

Members of the family, Mrs. W. H. Stewart, Miss Jean Hastie, Mr. Norman Hastie, Mr. Earle Hastie, and Mr. Orval Hastie, all of Trochu and Mrs. Walter Jardine of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, were present at a family dinner arranged at their farm home just west of Trochu, and later in the evening more than 100 old friends gathered at their honor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Christie.

Among the guests were Mrs. Mary Hastie from Ormstown, widow of the late Henry Hastie, brother of William, who is nearing her 80th birthday, also Mr. and Mrs. G. McCreary who celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary two years ago.

On behalf of the members of the family, Dr. J. B. Snyder presented to the guests of honor two lovely Chesterfield chairs, and Rev. H. Young made them the recipients of a handsome gift from their friends and neighbors.

Mr. Christie was chairman for a most enjoyable program of music and recitations to which the following contributed: Mr. and Mrs. A. Rothfield, Miss Hobbs, Mr. D. Nicol, Mr. H. Lloyd, Miss Maguire, Mr. D. Light, Miss Daisy Stewart, Miss Lois Bye, and Mr. H. Durant.

A very special feature of the entertainment was a vocal solo given by Mrs. Hastie herself.

Mr. Hastie, who is 75 next month and his wife who is 73, are both extremely active and healthy, and take a keen interest in community affairs.

For the past two summers they have accompanied a group of young people on camping expeditions to Pine Lake, where each morning Mrs. Hastie enjoyed a dip with the girls.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hastie were born near Ormstown, Que. where they were married in 1886.

In 1906, they moved from Montreal taking up residence in Olds, Alberta, and a year later went to make their home in Trochu.

Huntingdon, The Town Of Opportunity

H'don Academy Grade XI Student Writes Essay On Subject

The following is a composition, written by Miss Jean Coulter, Grade XI student of the local Academy, dealing in an interesting and humorous way with the opportunities in Huntingdon for any young person ambitious enough to take advantage of them. This subject was one of several suggested by the teacher. Other very good compositions were handed in on "Saturday night in Huntingdon", "Huntingdon 100 Years from Now", and "The Charm of Huntingdon". Compositions written by students will appear in this paper from time to time.

Huntingdon—Town of Opportunity
Here it is! Around every corner, behind every closed door, opportunity lies in wait for us. In the air, on the ground, inside or out, up front street or down back street, it is always present.

Ways of obtaining work may be had—if one has patience to wait a space of time. Streets always require cleaning. Restaurants need waitresses—after the old ones leave. Garages, five in all, are always changing help. Here there is seldom much pay, but plenty of experience. The town Chinaman is badly in need of a partner; anyone interested in chopsticks, starched collars and Chinese jackets could become very happy here.

Chances for money-making are sometimes found. On windy days, when ladies' little hats go sailing, the capturer should receive at least a nickel for his thoughtfulness. Once in a long time, a fifty-cent piece will edge its way through a hole in someone's pocket, to the pavement, and the lucky finder is fifty-cents richer than formerly.

Opportunities for showing off one's new fall suit, in Huntingdon are most available on Wednesday and Saturday nights. Just one stroll down front street, and all of Huntingdon, Dundee and St. Agnes know the colour is blue, the buttons are silver, it was bought in —, and did not cost very much.

Poor health is easily remedied in town, for there are five doctors in the vicinity. Teeth are quickly replaced, or refilled at either of the two houses of horror, that is, on condition that one is rich at the time of need.

Taking everything into consideration, Huntingdon certainly has opportunities for every walk of life. If one wishes to search, he shall surely find. When he finds an opportunity worthwhile, we wish him luck.

Teacher—"Can anyone tell me what happened after Napoleon mustered his army?"
Pupil—"Yes, sir, he peppered the enemy and took the citadel by assault."
Teacher—"Sit down, my lad. I'll have no sauce from you."

Obituary

The late Albert Rodgers
It is with a feeling of regret that we report the death of the late John Warden, Cameron Baker and Albert Rodgers of Roxham Road, Que., which occurred at midnight Monday, Oct. 26, 1936.

Mr. Rodgers was in his eighty-third year. He was born in Huntingdon, Que., and lived the greater part of his life there, having moved to Roxham fifteen years ago, when he retired from his farm home.

Since that time he led a quiet and peaceful life, ever ready to lend a helping hand to anyone in need. We might say he lived a life of true, sincere, and practical Christianity.

During the last five years of ill health, his wife Emma was his constant companion and administered to his every need. His daughter and grand-children have also been faithful in caring for his comfort, and at the last he was surrounded by them all, who were so near and dear to him.

Those left to mourn are: his widow, Mrs. Emma Rodgers, one daughter, Mrs. Walter D. Sample, Hemmingford, Que., one sister, Mrs. Jennie Wilson, Hemmingford, six grand-daughters, Mrs. Harold McNaughton, Mrs. Phyllis Sample, Hemmingford, Mrs. Jos. Ferras, Mrs. Clarence Gale, Miss Evelyn Sample, Plattsburg, N.Y. Two grandsons, Messrs. Wilmer and Melboure Sample, Hemmingford.

Funeral services were held Thursday, October 29th, at St. Andrews United Church, Hemmingford. His pastor, Rev. Victor Rose, officiated.

The choir sang very sweetly his favorite hymns, "Jesus, Lover of my Soul," "Asleep in Jesus," and "The Old Rugged Cross," which was sung as a duet by Mrs. T. E. Clelland and Mrs. Sam Gray.

Messrs. Harold McNaughton, Herbert McNaughton, Clarence Gale, Jos. Ferras, Wilmer and Melboure Sample bore his body to the grave, where he was committed tenderly to that last sleep.

A profusion of flowers adorned the casket, gifts of the family and grandchildren. To them we extend our heartfelt sympathy.

NEWS from AROUND the WORLD

Over One Million on Direct Relief in Canada

RECORDS show over one million persons are on direct relief in Canada, according to figures just published by the Dominion Department of Labor. The statistics show that last December the total stood at 1,212,262; rose to 1,398,410 in March, and then dropped to 1,063,546 in July. These are people receiving direct relief, and does not include anyone employed in the various relief projects.

In publishing these figures, however, it must be emphasized that in the summer months many persons are taken for seasonal work, so that a drop from December to July figures is not as significant as may appear. At the same time every municipality throughout the Dominion is making strenuous efforts to pare the relief roll as far as possible.

When the subject was debated in Montreal recently one of the aldermen suggested that a number of capable men should be taken from among the unemployed and employed as traffic policemen or directors during rush hours.

Money Worries in Alberta

ALBERTA finds itself in an awkward financial position. A bond issue of $11,250,000 fell due on the 1st of November, but in the Provincial treasury sinking fund there was only $366,000 and the Province tried to borrow $884,000 from the Dominion Government.

Honourable Charles Dunning found that he lacked authority to advance money to the Province except for relief purposes.

Alberta then endeavoured to borrow from the Bank of Canada but the application for a loan was refused.

Last April the Province of Alberta defaulted on an issue of $3,200,000; the principal has not been paid but the interest has been met since then.

Quebec Inquiry and Provincial News

IN the Province of Quebec a searching investigation is being made into the expenditure of public funds. Some curious irregularities are being exposed.

Fifteen thousand people packed the Forum in Montreal in a service of Christian Witness. Ministers representing every Protestant denomination participated and His Excellency The Governor-General read the lesson. The Salvation Army band led the choir of 2,000 voices drawn from Protestant Churches in Montreal.

Several disturbances have been caused in Montreal by bands of young men said to be students who have conducted anti-communist activities.

Honourable Howard Ferguson and the League

HONOURABLE Howard Ferguson, former Prime Minister of Ontario and then Canadian High Commissioner in London, recently described the League of Nations as "a poor old lame duck which could have been wiped out long ago if Great Britain had not been sitting at its bed-side holding its hand." Ferguson thinks that the trouble with the League is that too many "little postage stamp countries" belong to the League and that their votes are as effective as those of the powerful nations.

Parliament Reassembles in London

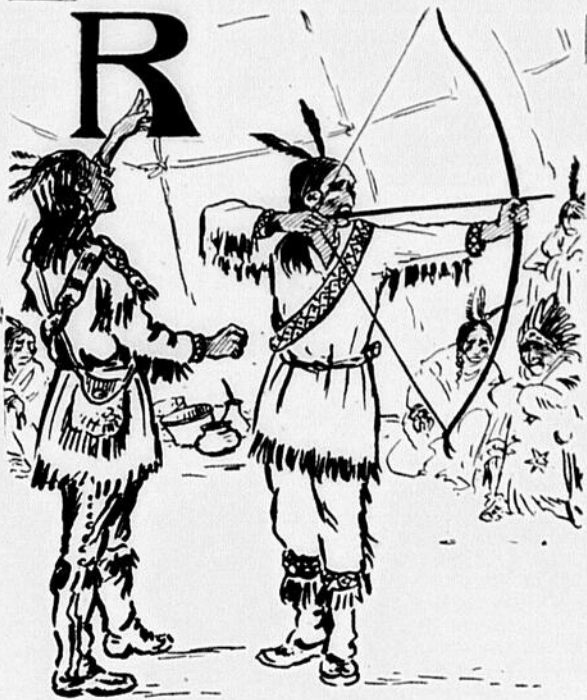

PARLIAMENT reassembled in London to debate the Spanish situation. Defending the government's policy Right Honourable Anthony Eden, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs said that Britain would adhere to its policy of non-intervention which, he contended, enjoys the support of the mass of British people.

The first task of European statesmen, said Mr. Eden is to prevent the Spanish civil war from spreading to other countries. He defended the non-intervention which, he contended, enjoys the support of the mass of British people.

The first task of European statesmen, said Mr. Eden is to prevent the Spanish civil war from spreading to other countries. He defended the non-intervention pact stating that it was working despite great difficulties.

Meanwhile the Spanish rebels have been repulsed in various engagements with the Government forces. The attack upon Catalonia was beaten back and the movement against Madrid was checked. The loyalists are said to have received reinforcements of a number of airplanes (said to be from the United States) and tanks. In the British House of Commons it was stated that the police would take every step within their power to halt the "mischievous activities" of Fascists in the east end of London.

A Royal Commission has been sent to Palestine to investigate the Arab unrest and the Anti-Jewish risings and to recommend a solution.

PARSLEY'S PARAGRAPHS

ANECDOTES FORECASTS
MEMORIES CRITICISMS

By AL. PARSLEY

Hockey is fast crowding football off the sports pages and out of the consciousness of the fans. The wheel of sports turns. "Round and round she goes and where she stops, nobody knows" as Major Edward Bowes said in his halcyon days of the amateur hour.

Long before the boys in the smaller towns are praying fervently for cold weather, frozen ponds and streams, or enough of a drop in the thermometer to make a clean sheet of skating ice in the covered municipal rink, the lordly pros are out practicing, and their schedules are ready to commence.

Shortly after these lines are written and read the National Hockey League schedule will have opened. Maroons and Boston Bruins are touring the Maritime Provinces, there showing the boys and girls in the east just what pro hockey is as played in the major leagues, looks like.

This is a hockey season of great come-backs. In Montreal, Cecil Hart returns to Canadiens as manager after three years in the limbo of the forgotten. In Boston, Art Ross is at the helm of the Bruins once more. Howie Morenz has returned to Canadiens following two years in foreign parts, with Chicago Blackhawks and New York Rangers, and Alex Connell becomes a visiting fireman once more with Montreal Maroons. Connell sought and got leave of absence from an Ottawa fire-hall, where he fills an executive job as secretary of the department, to man the goal-net he held down so adequately in Montreal Maroons great Stanley Cup triumph of the season 1934-35.

No hockey season could start so auspiciously without a negative, jarring note. Out in the West Eddie Shore threatens to stay on the farm unless Art Ross and Boston Bruins can come up with some sort of a contract which names a salary figure commensurate with the Shore ideas of what is right by little Eddie.

And in Montreal, R. J. "Hooly" Smith, a persistent hold-out from the Maroons, was handed his outright release and given free rein to go and make himself a deal anywhere he could.

Directors of the Maroons and Smith reached a positive impasse on salary arguments and when Smith refused to be placated he drafted a sympathetic ear from Art Ross, of the Bruins.

The old maestro of Boston has always been ready to recognize talent. At that he has never been slow to pick up Montreal discards. Babe Siebert and Nels Stewart found their way to Boston when Maroons broke up the famous three S. line—Stewart-Siebert-Smith. Smith stayed longer with Maroons than any of the Boston boys. Nels Stewart, who has been back in Montreal but in the other camp—Canadians.

There are many amusing tales told of hold-outs. One which tickles this operator and others who have heard same, is about Nels Stewart. When Big Sam was a hold-out a few years ago with Maroons the front office at the Montreal Forum couldn't do much about his case. So it was suggested that Stewart call on one of the directors, incidentally a wealthy brewer. Nels made the call and they haggled for nearly an hour without compromise either way. Stewart in pleading his case told how he was a big drawing card, had many followers both at home and in other rinks around the circuit, which made him a big box-office attraction. He saw no reason why his long and faithful service with the club shouldn't be taken into account when new contracts were considered.

Right in the middle of Stewart's plea the conversation was interrupted by a telephone call. While the club director spoke Stewart gazed about the office. On one wall he saw a fine photograph of a prize team of perchons, of the pedigreed stock bred by the brewer and employed in its huge delivery service.

Figuring to arouse sympathy Stewart brought up this point when the brewer magnate hung up. "Those are fine horses," said Nels. "They are well liked by the public and I guess appreciated by you folks, too, for the long and faithful service they give. What do you do with them when they are too old for further work?"

"Shoot them," replied the wealthy club director and brewer laconically. So Nels Stewart signed the offered contract.

Frank "King Clancy who holds the long service medal for the National Hockey League gets no kick out of golf and plenty of ribbing from his team-mates. When Toronto Maple Leafs recently held a golf tournament at Preston in conjunction with the players of their farm club, the Syracuse Stars, Clancy took 172 for 18 holes.

So Charlie Conacher suggested he'd do better with a hockey stick. Charlie ruefully admitted he could not have done much worse.

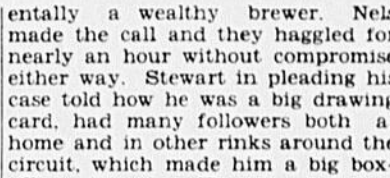

There are many good golfers in the National Hockey League. Charlie Conacher is the big siege-gunner. He drives consistently 250 to 300 yards and has been known to lift the pellet from the tee 325 yards. "I said that Chuck hits 'em so hard at times the face of the ball is flattened from the terrific impact of club meeting ball.

Aurel Jollat, little wizard of the left lanes with Canadians, is a very steady player and a very studious one. He has a library of golf literature and has studied the game under most of the masters.

One of the finest hockey and golfing brother acts is that of the Jacksons of Toronto Maple Leafs. Harvey shoots consistently in the 70's and brother Art can slap them around 18 holes in the low 80's.

New York Rangers will present an odd "kid line" for the start of the season. They are all right-hand shots. Mac and Neil Colville and Alex Shibicki. Time was when the southerly shooters were a dime a dozen and hockey scouts had to scan the hinterlands to gather in right-handers. Times have changed.

Hockey records and other data on sports will be gladly furnished by Al Parsley to readers of this column. Write enclosing stamped addressed envelope to The Gleaner.

The Clue of the Missing Chocolates

By HUGH HOME

Part 3
Dick sat beside his friend in silence; for once his happy-go-lucky nature was subdued by the tale he had just heard. What was behind it all? Certainly more than the mere gift of a box of chocolates. Well it was all over now as far as they were concerned; why they would probably never hear any more of them or their gifts. With those consoling thoughts he pulled himself together as the car stopped in front of the house.

On entering the hall they heard the faint ringing of a bell, then a voice called out from the study. "Hello, Bob! You're just in time, here's a call for you."

"O Kay Dad!" answered Bob. "It's probably some of the people we met on the boat," he continued as he hastened to the study and seating himself on the corner of the desk lifted the receiver to his ear. The smile his friend chatted with Mr. Bently.

"Hello! Bob Bently speaking—oh, hello, Mr. Thiem. Yes we delivered your parcel about half an hour ago. No, it was no trouble at all. All right, well see you when you come to town. Good-bye."

Bob slowly replaced the receiver on the hook with a half serious smile, then nodded to Dick. "Yes, that was our friend, Thiem. Well, come on, guy, let's go to bed. I'm all in."

It was about two o'clock in the morning when Bob awoke with a start, every sense alert while a feeling of panic swept over him. He couldn't tell why.

With an impatient movement he was about to turn on the light of the small bed lamp when a slight rustling sound came from the adjoining room. It was a sound which caused his heart to thud against his ribs. For a moment he remained motionless, his ears strained to catch the faintest sound. Ah, there it was again. Slipping quietly out of bed he tip-toed to the door leading to Dick's room. Slowly turning the handle he gently pushed against the door, which to his dismay squeaked loudly. Scarcely had he time to act when the door was slammed back in his face, with a force that sent him reeling, while to his ears came the sound of a lock shooting into place. Regaining his balance he hurried himself against the door but to no purpose; made of solid oak it resisted all efforts.

Suddenly he thought of the window; with a dash he reached it and as he leaned out he beheld the dark form of a man descending a ladder from Dick's room.

Without stopping to think of the consequences Bob climbed out and dropped to the ground some fifteen feet below. As he landed he drew the breath out of his body. It threw him forward on his face. But in a second he was up and with a spring dove for the burglar who had just reached the ground. For a moment he thought he had his man when suddenly he received a heavy blow on the head that knocked him over and a mist formed before his eyes. It was minutes before he regained himself and looking round the ladder remained, a silent witness of what had happened.

With aching head he leaned against it, then slowly mounting the rungs and with a feeling of dread he slipped into Dick's room.

What had happened? Fumbling in the dark he turned on the switch. There in bed lay Dick, his feet and hands securely tied by a sheet, his mouth and eyes sealed by long strips of adhesive tape.

Hastily Bob tore at the knotted sheet and was soon rewarded by seeing Dick sit up and begin the painful task of removing the tape.

"What happened, Dick?" Bob cried, as the other tore off the last remaining strip. "Are you hurt?"

"No, I don't think so," replied Dick shakily. "The first thing that happened was I woke up to find this confounded tape being stuck on. Then when I started to struggle I was trussed up like a bally chicken. But say! Look at this room. It looks as though a cyclone had hit it."

The friends regarded each other blankly; already a sinister atmosphere seemed to enfold the old brown stone house. (To be continued)

The Stewpot

The past tense of eat is ate but you don't have to always eat to get ate, for there are many kinds of ate. For example, if you chose a man as a candid-ate for parliament you nomin-ate him, and if he doesn't win you re-ate him to the clues given below what kind of "ates" have we in this puzzle.

The "Ate" that stops.
The "Ate" that points out.
The "Ate" that every sea captain must know.
The "Ate" that pauses.

Brother (doing a cross-word puzzle)—"Give me a word of a motor starting with 'T'."
Sister (fed up)—"Don't be absurd, they all start with gas."

Sister Susie Says
White Hands are Beautiful Hands
Smooth and white, how lovely they are when they refer to a pair of hands. Beautiful hands are smooth and white and now that the summer tan is wearing off your hands and when you proffer one of them may it bespeak your personality.

A bleach at this time of year is often necessary and one you can use freely and with safety is composed of a tablespoonful each of peroxide and two of rosewater. Shake together and sponge over the hands each night, allowing the lotion to dry into the skin.

As soon as the tan has disappeared change over to hand cream or lotion. There are several good inexpensive ones on the market and in the winter the hands deserve a little rubbed in nightly.

If you find your hands inclined to redness try this little practise. Keep a bottle of sweet almond oil handy, and once or twice during the day, after you have washed your hands, massage in a little of the oil which has been mixed with lemon juice. The proportions should be a teaspoon full of strained lemon juice to three teaspoonful of oil. This makes a splendid whiteners and at the same time "feeds" the skin.

Lemon is really a wonderful thing for the hands. Always when lemons are being used, retain the skin and rub over the hands with the white pith. Follow by rinsing the hands in cold or just slightly warm water.

For Chapped Hands
When chapped hands appear a honey pack is a wonderful thing. Add just five drops of liquor honey to five drops of glycerine. Add sufficient oatmeal to form a stiff paste stirring well to give the oatmeal a becoming lumpy. Last thing at night wash the hands with a good soap and just before they are quite dry rub in the paste working it well in. This quantity is just enough for one treatment. Then the hands are slipped into a pair of old gloves and the pack left on till morning.

Charlie Chipmunk's ADVENTURES

"Now, dreams," said Lady Cow, running into the nursery and sitting on her seven silk petticoats all once. "I want you to go quietly to bed and not make a noise until morning. You'll find a present under your pillows, Katie, are you going to be good?"

"Yes, if you please Dear Mother, thank you," said Katie. So Lady Cow kissed them all good night and went to put on her dress. But Katie wasn't ready for bed.

"Come on," cried, "let's get into our nightgowns and then I'll tell you about the trick I'm going to play on the party people!"

"Tell now," said Miss Buffles, when they were all sitting up in their four cosy cots, eating a spongecake rabbit.

"Wait till a visitor comes," laughed Katie and in a few minutes the doorbell rang, and Katie ran to the window with her pretty watering can. "Come here," she giggled and Charlie and Willie and Miss Buffles jumped up and put their heads out of the window.

There below was Lord and Lady Lion standing on the doorstep, all dressed in their best. With a squeal of delight Naughty Katie pushed the watering can out of the window and began to pour Molasses on to the poor Lions who roared with rage, and Lady Lion began to cry for her new Bonnet. She was covered with Molasses, and Lord Lion kicked the door, and knocked down poor Gerty Goat who came running to let them in.

"Pretend we're sleeping," said Charlie and they all jumped into their beds again and giggled under the blankets, then lay as quiet as mice when Lady Cow came in.

"The pretty dears," she whispered, then went out and the door bell rang again. Up jumped Katie, and the others followed her to the window, trying not to laugh out loud. This time she filled the watering can with sugar and then poured it over the window and what a fright Mr. and Mrs. Timid Tiger got!

"It's snowing! let us in!" they cried and the children began to laugh for Katie was filling up the can with little Potatoes and did not see her father come into the room with a big sack.

In a minute Charlie and Miss Buffles were running out of the room, down the stairs and out of the house in their nightgowns.

"Why are you going home so early?" Charlie asked, as he saw Willie on the hill. "And we're never going back to Katie Cow's again—she's too fond of getting into trouble!"

The Twinkling Trees
Mr. Ostrich, the Schoolmaster, stood at the door one morning watching all the children coming down the road to school.

Willie Wolf came first, walking between Miss Buffles and Charlie, and as they came nearer and nearer they walked slower and slower. At last they stood quite still while the other children ran past them into the school.

"Let's not go to the silly old school this morning," said naughty Willie, and the little East Wind carried his voice to Mr. Ostrich, who shook his fist at Willie Wolf.

"Come to school at once, Sir!" he shouted. Then his spectacles fell off his nose and his eyes nearly popped out of his head with rage, for the three mischief just turned and ran away as fast as their legs could carry them.

"Come back, you rascals!" cried poor Mr. Ostrich, big tears dropping down his long nose. "You'll catch it tomorrow!"

Wiping his eyes with his beautiful feathery wing he went into his classroom, and was so cross with the children that they wished they had run away too.

Where are we going? squealed Charlie, holding on tight to his darling Miss Buffles, and panting for breath.

"To the Twinkling Trees Woods," said Willie, showing his gums in a merry laugh. "Nobody will look for us there. Hurry up."

"We can't run as fast as you," said Miss Buffles, a little crossly, for her fat legs were getting tired. "Take us on your back or we'll go right home, Willie Wolf."

So Willie sat down, his pink tongue hanging out and Charlie and Miss Buffles climbed up on his broad furry back and off they went, like the wind, through the lovely Fairy Glade, through the Far Away Woods, past the Candy House where Lady All Alone lived till they came to the Twinkling Trees Woods.

"Pretty, pretty trees," said Miss Buffles, clapping her hands, and jumping off Willie Wolf's back.

Now the trees were called Twinkling Trees because their branches were covered with tiny lanterns that shed a golden light in the day time and a silver light at night.

"Watch me climb up and bring down some of those lanterns," laughed Charlie. "They'll do for Halloween!"

In another minute he was climbing one of the Twinkling Trees, but he had just got up a little way when he fell down to the ground. He was very angry.

"Somebody pushed me," he squealed, and Miss Buffles and Willie laughed.

"You're foolish," said Willie, "there's nobody here but us."

"Try again, Charlie," said Miss Buffles and choosing a different tree started to climb. But he fell down again and was just going to cry when somebody started to sing this little song in a gentle voice that was like bells tinkling.

"Listen to me, if you please! Keep away from the Twinkling Trees. They belong to Mr. Gnome. Don't you think you should go home?"

The children looked at each other and began to giggle. Then they looked up and down and all about but nobody was to be seen.

"We won't go home," said Miss Buffles crossly. The Twinkling Trees began to dance and somebody laughed. Then a tiny man dressed in a red suit with bells on his red cap came running over the grass singing:

"Come with me, I'm Mr. Gnome. You shall see my darling home."

He was so small and so kind that the children followed him till they came to a pretty stream where a silver ship was waiting.

This ship just carries good people," said Mr. Gnome, as the children stepped on board. "It won't sail with naughty girls and boys."

How pleased the three friends were when the dear little ship sailed quickly across to the other side of the stream. And there in a lovely garden filled with Baby Rosebuds was a tiny house made of leaves and moss. The roof was covered with Robin Red-breasts, all sleeping in the warm sunshine.

Mr. Gnome ran in front, singing this song: "You must spend the day with me, I'll give you dinner, ice cream for tea, Pray step inside my nice leaf house. Built by clever Mister Mouse."

I want you to stay as long as you can. Then I'll send for the Magic Man. He'll take you home in the Pink Balloon. I know you'll all come back again soon."

Hobbies
The Balance Penny
This is a simple trick that every boy in the party will be doing before the party is ended so don't show it to them too early. Hold up the middle finger of your left hand, balance on the top of it a cigarette card and place a penny on the top of that. See that the coin is dead centre over your finger. What is required to be done is to take the card away without capsizing or even moving the penny. All sorts of futile attempts will be made. Here is the way it is done. With the thumb and middle finger of the right hand give the edge of the card a sharp flick. Away flies the card and the penny stays in position.

Happiness is that single and glorious thing, which is the very Light and Sun of the whole animated universe, and where she is not, it were better that nothing should be. Without her, Wisdom is but a shadow, and Virtue a name; she is their sovereign mistress.

HOB BLES CONJURING

Here are a few conjuring tricks that add to the enjoyment of any party and to the popularity of any boy who can do them. These tricks are not very hard to do but should be practised a few times before being presented in public. Here is the first one.

The Vanishing Gloves
Your success with this trick depends to a great extent upon your entrance. It should be brisk and business like. For that reason "vanishing gloves" is an excellent opening trick.

When you come into the room or on to your stage make an introductory speech and begin pulling off your gloves. They immediately disappear. Presto!

This trick simple as it is insures the instant attention of your audience. To perform it, it is necessary to have a pair of loose fitting gloves, white preferable. To the front of the gloves, nearest the wrist sew a piece of thin elastic. At the free end of each piece make a loop and pass over a large safety pin which is fastened to the inside of your coat sleeve.

These pins should be fastened so that the gloves vanish at least two or three inches up the coat sleeve, well out of sight.

Missionary to China Talks To Ormstown Gathering

The Autumn Thankoffering meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Paul's United Church, was held in McDougall Hall, Ormstown, Friday evening, Oct. 30th. Rev. Bruce Copeland addressed the meeting, his subject was Changing Conditions in China, such as he has seen in fourteen years of work in that country as a missionary. Notable among the many respects in which China has progressed is the place which women now occupy in public life doing excellent work in all branches. These are the products of education. Chinese women having been to school and university now are living in the world instead of in the courtyard, said Mr. Copeland, who declared they were physically stronger and taller than those of a previous generation. All this is the result of education in which missionary work takes the lead. The President, Mrs. A. F. Pollock presided. The devotional period was in charge of Miss Bazin; dedicatory prayer by Mrs. G. T. Sadler. Mrs. T. S. Ormond sang a solo and Rev. A. F. Pollock closed the meeting with prayer.

On Wednesday evening in Carleton Hall a very successful Euchre was held by the Rebekahs. The prize winners were: Mrs. G. Brunet, Mrs. J. Lepage, Mrs. Harry Bradley, Mr. H. McAdam, Mr. Clarence Palmer, Mr. Warren Sadler. Lunch was served at the close. Mr. and Mrs. T. McNeil and Mr. and Mrs. Dickson of Montreal were week-end visitors in Ormstown. Miss Bernice McCartney of Montreal was home for the week-end. This item was taken from the Carleton County Vidette, Carleton, Minn. The Vidette has this week received the wedding of the marriage of Dr. John Sangster Darby and Miss Barbara Campbell Robertson, which took place in the Los Angeles Congregational Church.

THE FARMERS' PLOT

According to the increasing demands of the Agricultural Industry, the modern farmer should be possessed of all the attributes of an expert in chemistry, botany, horticulture, bacteriology, meteorology, genetics, domestic and political economy, surveying, engineering, manufacturing, trading, accounting and labouring, with a distinct gift of prophecy. In this invidious position he has to summon science to his aid. In turn, agricultural science itself is young and is only now beginning to appreciate the fact that the help the farmer needs most is ultimately economic—to help increase the marketable values of all agricultural products. Both the older farmers and scientists of today have seen many changes of methods and adaptations. To the youth of Canada there can be only one way of successful farming, namely the scientific preparation of crops, livestock, and dairy products for market; hence the idea of the inception of boys' and girls' farm clubs for the inculcation of proper methods of production.

The production of the bacon hog is an important economic factor in modern farming. The market demand is continuous, and to help efforts being made to keep abreast of the stringent requirements of the market, the Live Stock Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has issued an illustrated 16-page pamphlet entitled "A Study of the Dressed Hog." This publication is an elementary study of the carcass of the pig in relation to its commercial value. While it will doubtless prove of interest to farmers generally, it is particularly recommended as a reference for the use of members of Boys' and Girls' Swine Clubs in Canada. For the young farmers and farmerettes, the publication will be found to be invaluable, setting forth as it does every detail necessary to be known about a dressed hog relative to the value of the various types in the market as bacon, ham, and other products. The publication may be obtained free on application to the Publicity and Extension Branch.
