R. McWhinnie Guest of Honor At Luncheon at Chateau

Bell Telephone Co. Employees Make Presentations to Retired Fellow Worker in Gesture of Esteem

An interesting event took place at the Huntingdon Chateau, on Wednesday, when a number of officials and employees of the Bell Telephone Co. entertained Mr. Roy McWhinnie as their guest of honour, at a luncheon. Seventeen members of the Company were present besides the guest of honour, most of whom were old associates of Mr. McWhinnie, but all of whom knew him well. The luncheon was quite informal, only men were present, and the spirit which pervaded the atmosphere was one of good fellowship throughout.

After the luncheon was over Mr. H. Bowen, District Plant Superintendent for the Bell Telephone Co., for the Montreal District, called the gathering to order. He said that the purpose of the get-together was to honour one of their old employees, who was now on the retired list through ill-health. He said that a number of those present had known Roy for a number of years and some of them could remember when he first began to work for the Company. One of those who had known Mr. McWhinnie since he started for the Company was sitting right at the table and he proposed to call on him for a few words. Mr. Bowen thereupon called on D. J. Rayside, Assistant General Manager of the Bell Telephone Company.

Mr. Rayside, in his remarks, spoke of the long years he had been acquainted with Mr. McWhinnie and recounted many of the little episodes which occurred in the life of the telephone man in the early days of the erection of new lines. He spoke very glowingly of the part that Mr. McWhinnie had played in erecting and maintaining the lines of the Company in the Huntingdon district. He said the Huntingdon district was one of the largest in the Company's system and the subscribers had much to thank the man who was the guest of honour, for. He was always willing to go and service a line or repair a broken service, at any time or anywhere on the exchange. He said that Mr. McWhinnie was a man in whom he had implicit trust, he always knew where he could reach him. Mr. McWhinnie was also one of very few who all through his years of service, had never had an enemy within the Company. He was always a hard worker and well liked by all who worked under him. Mr. Rayside expressed the hope that Mr. McWhinnie would be able to enjoy his retirement despite the fact that it was ill health which had caused it. At this point, Mr. Rayside made an announcement that he had a presentation to make to the guest of honour on behalf of the Company. The presentation consisted of a black leather wallet with

R. E. McWHINNIE

Mr. McWhinnie's name inscribed in gold lettering on the inside. The wallet contained an identification card showing that the wallet was a gift from the Bell Telephone Co. to Mr. Roy McWhinnie and the card was signed by the President of the Company, Mr. C. F. Sise. In making the presentation, Mr. Rayside said he hoped that the wallet would prove useful in holding the retirement allowance and quoted a story about such another instance. He said another member of the company was given a similar presentation on retirement, and this man could not read. When he got up to reply, he showed the wallet proudly and told what a nice gift it was for the president of the company to give him, and what is more, he said, he sends me the money to put in it.

Mr. Bowen then called on Mr. G. H. Brown, Plant Superintendent of the Bell Telephone Co., to address Mr. McWhinnie. Before Mr. Brown proceeded with his address, Mr. Bowen told the gathering that Mr. McWhinnie was a member of an organization which was one of the hardest to become a member of. He remarked that the requirements for membership were so exacting and the enquiries so strict that the member must absolutely be O.K. Mr. Brown then said that the organization to which Mr. Bowen referred was the Telephone Pioneers of America, not of the Bell Telephone Co., or of the United States, but of the whole of America. The organization took in all telephone companies throughout the continent. Mr. Brown said he was pleased to announce that Mr. McWhinnie had been made a life member of the Telephone Pioneers of America. One of the stipulations of the membership in this organization, was that the member must have completed twenty-one years or more of service with a company. Mr. McWhinnie has 37 years' service to his credit. On behalf of the Telephone Pioneers of America, Mr. Brown presented Mr. McWhinnie with a framed certificate of Life Membership.

Mr. Bowen introduced J. Wylie, Staff Assistant of the Bell Telephone Co. office in Montreal, who he said, was well acquainted with Mr. McWhinnie. In outlining the association of Mr. Wylie with Mr. McWhinnie, the speaker said that the former had worked under the latter when McWhinnie had first taken charge of a gang. Mr. Wylie went on to tell of his experiences under Mr. McWhinnie and paid great tribute to him for the part he had played in training the raw lad he was then. Mr. McWhinnie had taught him well and he felt that that training was responsible for his position today and he wanted to thank the guest of honour for his patience with him in the old days. As a token of the appreciation and respect which the rest of the fellow workers felt for the guest of honour, Mr. Wylie presented Mr. McWhinnie with a gold wrist watch in a case, with his name inscribed on the back of the watch.

Mr. McWhinnie in making reply to the various presentation addresses, said that he did feel there was much that he could say. He recounted some of the early days with the Company and remarked on the different experiences which those present had recalled. He said that his mother had told him when he started out to work to always attend to his work and leave those with whom he worked as he first met them. He had followed this rule and he believed he had done just that.

Mr. Rayside conveyed the best wishes of the General Manager of the Company, to Mr. McWhinnie, and also his regrets at not being able to be present on the occasion.

Those present at the gathering were as follows: D. J. Rayside, Asst. Gen. Manager; H. Bowen, Dist. Plant Supt.; G. H. Brown, Plant Supt.; J. Wylie, Staff Asst.; C. J. Kidney, member of general plant staff, all from Montreal; C. S. Campbell, Plant Superintendent for this section; Percy Campbell, Combination Man for Huntingdon; N. P. Gain, Plant Wire Chief for Huntingdon section; Nigel Bruce, Plant Wire Chief for North section; D. P. Griffiths, Plant Wire Chief for St. Lambert; W. Seward, Wire Chief for Valleyfield; S. Angel, Wire Chief for St. Lambert; C. A. Bradley, Toll Supt. for Montreal; J. E. St. Louis, Combination Man, Lachine; W. Johnson, Chief Clerk District Office and J. Winkle of the clerical staff.

A vote of thanks was offered to the press by Mr. Bowen, who said he deeply appreciated having a representative present.

Mr. McWhinnie received his retirement on July 15th of this year after 37 years with the Bell Telephone Company, most of which time has been spent in Huntingdon and Ormstown.

Local Filter Plant Checked

New Sand to be Purchased and Minor Repairs Made

At an adjourned meeting of the Huntingdon Town Council on Monday evening, a letter of application for a building permit was read from Mr. George Thursten. He proposes to build a house, 14 x 18 feet, on Lake Street, near the New York Central Railroad. The secretary was authorized to advise Mr. Thursten that the house may be built, provided that it is carried out according to the Town by-law. It is expected that the Council will meet the members of the Huntingdon Board of Trade in the near future, when a new building by-law will be prepared.

A letter was read from the Provincial Transport Company with regards to the new bus stop at Aubin's drug store, on Chateauguay street. The letter pointed out that the buses would not be parked at this terminal, but would only stop long enough for the passengers to enter and leave the vehicle. The letter also stated that these stops should not create undue congestion of traffic on Wednesday and Saturday evenings.

Board of Health Officials made a recent survey of the Huntingdon Filter Plant and reported that minor repairs were necessary in the old portion of the plant. The officials explained that the filter sand, which had been in use for so many years, was coated with a film of dirt. It was also explained to Mr. Munro, of the plant, that the sand could be washed, but would require many hours of labour and the expense would be as high, if not higher, than buying new sand. It was decided that the necessary sand would be purchased and the old sand removed. The inspectors also pointed out that many of the holes in the pipes under the sand were clogged, and that they could be cleaned when the old sand was removed.

In regard to children related to Lawrence Riel, of whom he is the guardian, it was agreeable to him to have the children enrolled in schools for correction. The boy will be placed in Huberdeau Boys' Trade School, while the girl will enter Laval des Rapides Girls' school.

It was decided that tenders would be called for to grade and gravel Church street. The bills, as read, were ordered paid.

R.C.A.F. Plane Crashes in River Near Dundee

A R.C.A.F. Avro-Anson twin-engine training plane dived into the St. Lawrence river about 2 miles off shore west of Hopkin's Point, Dundee, Que., while on a routine training flight. The accident happened Sept. 15th, around 10 a.m., and of the four occupants, only one succeeded in escaping from the plane, before it sank in about 60 feet of water.

Thursday afternoon a wrecking crew with a diver succeeded in raising the sunken machine. Two of the men's bodies were recovered, but the third was missing and was not found during the day.

Eye witnesses of the tragedy, on the Ontario side of the river, near Summerstown, put out in a small boat, and rescued the flier who had escaped going down with the plane, and who managed to keep afloat until his rescuers arrived. He was later taken to hospital, suffering from shock and exposure. Residents around Summerstown, claim that the plane was circling at a low altitude, apparently in difficulties, before making the fatal dive into the lake.

New Category Set For "A" Motorists

Non-essential Driving Will be Curtailed

Establishment of a new gasoline rationing category for all persons using a car for personal transportation and not for business, reducing the motor fuel available to them, will be effective October 1, Munitions Minister Howe recently announced.

The Minister said submarine attacks have caused "colossal damage to oil tankers, reserves of gasoline are about 20,000,000 gallons less than a year ago, and stocks of crude oil and unfinished products are about 40,000,000 gallons less.

Those to be moved into the new "AA" category are users of cars for other than essential purposes, and who can best do without a car if the gasoline supply situation continues to deteriorate, the Minister said.

Category "AA" will permit the purchase between October 1 and March 1, 1943, of 16 units for cars in class one—the lighter types—18 units for class 2—the medium size—and 20 units for class 3—the larger types.

In the present category "A," the driver is entitled to 60 units a year and in the six months from October 1 to March 31 could get 30 units, almost double the "A" allowance. In category "A" the driver with a class 2 car may receive 34 units every six months and 38 units in class 3.

Car-drivers who had already been moved from a higher to a lower category for gasoline rationing will not be moved into category "AA". The new category coupon book would not contain more coupons than the book of higher category which might be turned in. Notices will be mailed within the next few days to those being transferred to the new category.

"You must understand now, that when your coupon book is exhausted your motoring is finished until April 1 of next year," Mr. Howe said.

"No supplementary book can or will be provided. To do otherwise would make rationing meaningless Also, please keep in mind that the coupons you do not use are a valuable contribution toward solving Canada's gasoline problem."

One Day Fair at Havelock Proves Splendid Success

Fine Weather, Larger Number of Exhibits, Provide Stimulus For Interesting Exhibition

Havelock Fair was a great success in every respect. The fair was favoured with a large entry in all departments, the attendance was large and the weather dry, hot and sultry.

Upon entering the grounds on Wednesday morning, one was immediately struck with the idea that there must be a big exhibit, for everywhere you looked, people were busying themselves getting their exhibits arranged. Perhaps the one department that showed a most noticeable gain over last year, was that of the vegetables. The judge had a great time looking over the classes, for practically all classes had an unusually large number of entries. So impressive was that feature of the exhibit, that we took the trouble to count up the number of exhibits in several classes and here is what we found: Pumpkins 20, citron 6, hubbard squash 15, carrots 14, beets 9, mangels 7, parsnips 5, onions 11, tomatoes 12, hops 5, beans 10, red peppers 2, sweet peppers 5, sage 6, turnips 9; and what a lot of crowing we heard from Mr. C. E. Petch, about winning the turnip prize over his competitive friends, but it is all part of the fun and reward you get when you exhibit at the local fall fairs. It was really a fine vegetable exhibit.

The overflow of apple exhibits was shown along with the vegetables. Here, one was privileged to view the many hampers, boxes and crates of apples, to much better advantage than had they been exhibited along with the general apple exhibit in the building. Keen competition was shown in the many apple classes, and the exhibitors and growers present were quite pronounced in venting their expressions as to the judgments accorded by the experienced judge, Robert Reid. Mr. Reid had a heavy chore in judging all the entries shown, for so great was the number that even the exhibitors sometimes got mixed in sorting out their apples for the many plate entries. In one case, an exhibitor had a Melba mixed in with his Dutchess, which meant the judge had to cut the apple and enjoy eating it along with his assistants and onlookers. All through the fruit classes, entries were large, and the fruit appeared to be most excellent. The prize list will tell who the exhibitors were and the results attained.

Looking across the floor from apples, you saw, as usual, a beautiful exhibit of home made bread. Mrs. John Waddell was the champion baker, winning most of the first prize laurels. In the bread biscuit class, 11 entries were shown; Robin Hood Flour class drew 8 entries; F. K. McKough special, 5 entries; Society Class, 11 entries; graham bread, 4 entries and graham biscuits, 3. The judge scored the bread with great care, and in speaking to her about the judging, she said, "the nose is an awfully good judge of good bread."

Jams, jellies, syrup, preserves and canned vegetables and fruit, made a real good showing. The ladies who judged these exhibits worked many hours at that task but they report them excellent, especially the entries of maple syrup and maple sugar, for which the highlands of Huntingdon county are noted.

Fancy work, domestic manufacture, showed a slight falling off, although the judges were particularly taken with the excellence of the quilted quilts. Woollen blankets were nil, this they attribute to the fact that wool is not plentiful, and that exhibitors in past years who brought back their blankets year after year, had been told not to do so again, and took heed to the advice given. The fancy work was such as to bring forth many favourable comments by the onlookers.

Year by year, we see the showing of cut flowers at Havelock Fair grow in size and beauty, and this year's show was no exception to the rule. This feature at Havelock Fair, represents a lot of work, for in many cases the exhibitors have not running water with which to water their flowers throughout the season. May their efforts be so rewarded that they will keep on extending the inteerst in this division of the fair exhibit, for the flowers certainly make an appeal to everyone attending the fair.

Were any criticism to be offered about the fair, it could only be that there was a shortage of music. With the military band at Chateauguay Barracks, this lack might well have been taken care of and thus added so much more zip to the annual event.

Mr. George McKay had six young ladies selling War Savings Stamps throughout the day, and by nighttime they collected $150.50.

Livestock showing at Havelock Fair was well up to the standard. The showing of Ayrshire, Holstein, Jersey and Shorthorn cattle commanded the attention of practically every farmer attending the show. The classes were for the most

Many Will Mourn Passing of Former Howick Doctor

Dr. Shanks, Formerly of Howick, Died at His Home in Toronto, Thursday—Born in Huntingdon, Lived in Howick Many Years

At the appointed hour, the call comes to all of us that our life span has ended. This call came on Thursday, September 17th, to Dr. J. C. Shanks at his home in Toronto, who was in his ninetieth year.

The late Dr. Shanks was well known in Howick and throughout the Chateauguay Valley, and was closely associated with The Gleaner in the earlier days. He was born in Huntingdon on January 2nd, 1853, he attended Huntingdon Academy and graduated from there in 1869 and became a machinist in the Gillis & Boyd machine shops where he remained for three years. For two years he worked with the Gilbert's Machine Engine Company on the Lachine Canal, where James Howden was foreman and James King, chief draughtsman. These two men came from St. Louis de Gonzague. Dr. Shanks was with Howden when the side wheeler beam engine was installed in the "St. Francis." It was this boat that was built to compete with the "Bohemia," running between Cornwall, Port Lewis, Valleyfield and Montreal, on account of the high rates charged for freight. Alex Anderson, son of Laird Anderson, Huntingdon, was the main promoter. Dr. Shanks later matriculated before the board of examiners and became assistant with first engineer, Charles Scott, who came from St. Timothée, on a boat running between Montreal and Port Dalhousie, on Lake Ontario. In the following year he received a higher certificate and took charge as engineer on a tug boat on the St. Lawrence channel above Sorel, Que.

Later he purchased a drug store in Huntingdon and dispensed medicine two years under the late Dr. Alex. Cameron. He entered McGill College and matriculated in medicine in 1877. The first optional summer course was inaugurated by Dr. Osler in 1880 at the Montreal General Hospital. When Dr. Shanks graduated he settled in Howick in 1881. At that time there were no telephones, rural routes, autos, electric lights, paved highways nor church organs. Perhaps Dr. Shanks missed the latter as much as anything else, for as was well known, the Shanks family had always been intensely interested in music, for they were accomplished musicians.

On Christmas day 1883, he was united in marriage. During the many years Dr. and Mrs. Shanks lived in Howick they were prominently identified with all church, sporting and community welfare work. He was one of the founders of the Howick Curling Club. In Temperance he was one of the stalwarts and perhaps the part he played in same was one of the real reasons why the Howick Temperance Hall was erected.

He practiced medicine at Howick until 1932. Therefore, during his many years of faithful service, it can be truthfully said, he saw many come into the world, and knew the various families from one generation to another. It can be said he knew more about the health and heredity of families, much better than the families themselves, for he had cared for several generations.

He was a member of the District Medical Society; local health officer and physician for the Grand Trunk and later C.N.R. employees; examiner for the I.O.F. and many insurance companies. He was also a member of the McGill Graduate and Medico-Chirurgical Societies of Montreal.

Dr. and Mrs. Shanks were always prominently identified with the Howick Presbyterian Church and later the United Church. Upon retirement from Howick in 1932 the citizens of that community tendered Dr. and Mrs. Shanks a farewell party that will long be remembered as the largest and most outstanding party of its kind ever tendered any one in the Chateauguay Valley.

The late Dr. Shanks was responsible for the erection of the first power press to be installed in The Gleaner plant, in 1871. Throughout his many years of residence in Howick, Dr. Shank's weekly news letters appeared in The Gleaner and were a widely read feature.

Until the time of his death, the deceased had lived in Toronto, at the home of his son Major G. Shanks, I.M.S. The funeral service was held in the United Church, Howick, on Saturday, Sept. 19th, and interment took place in Riverfield Cemetery.

His name will live in the memories of the people of Chateauguay Valley for years to come and his work and devotion will serve as an everlasting memorial to the district he so faithfully served.

Veterans From Huntingdon, Howick, Beauharnois and Valleyfield Take Part

An event of particular interest to Valleyfield, took place at that point on Thursday evening. The object of the parade was to urge veterans of the First Great War to enlist again in Canada's Armed Forces. The slogan for the evening was: "Veterans! We Still Need You!" The route of the parade was quite long, and as follows: Across Canal to Dufferin Road, right on Dufferin Road to Whittaker, left on Whittaker to Blvd. du Havre, right on Blvd. du Havre to Grande Allee, left on Grande Allee to Chausse, left on Chausse to Victoria, right on Victoria to Nicholson, right on Nicholson to Salaberry, right on Salaberry to Jacques Cartier, to Sauve Park.

Enroute, the parade stopped at the Cenotaph on Salaberry Street, where Mayor Louis VI Major, took the salute. At Park Sauve, some two thousand people were present and addresses were given by the distinguished visitors. Gontran Saintonge, K.C., president of the Valleyfield Legion, thanked the recruiting officers for their visit and expressed the hope that many veterans of the 1914-18 war, would heed the appeal and join the armed forces immediately.

Mayor Major thanked the citizens for turning out in such large numbers, and assured the officials that Valleyfield would not lag behind in the campaign. The gathering was also addressed by Lt.-Col. W. G. E. Aird, joint chairman of the Finance Board, Valleyfield; Major Scott, Canadian Grenadier Guards; Rev. Father R. Paquin, padre at Valleyfield Camp and others. Among the groups could also be noticed G. H. Desbarats of D.I.L. and Major J. J. Telmosse, who represented the Valleyfield Training Centre.

The Gleaner Passes 79th Milestone

WITH this issue of The Gleaner another milestone has been passed in the life of this publication. We have passed the seventy-ninth year and enter upon the eightieth year of service to the Beauharnois district. From the inception of The Gleaner on Sept. 18, 1863, it has always maintained a policy of giving the best possible service to its readers, advertisers and to the community as a whole. Knowing this, loyal supporters of The Gleaner have come to look for its weekly appearance with eagerness, nor have they ever been failed. Seventy-nine years it has appeared with unceasing regularity, founded and published under the guidance of the same family. It is no wonder then, that we enter upon this eightieth year of publication with a feeling of great pride for a worthwhile accomplishment.

On September 18th, 1863, the late Robert Sellar, then a young man of 22, published the first issue of this newspaper under the name of "The Canadian Gleaner." The purpose of publishing this newspaper was to provide a political mouthpiece for the Liberal followers in opposition to those of Conservative adherence. Those responsible for bringing Robert Sellar to Huntingdon for the purpose above mentioned, were rather disgusted when they found he was so young. They jumped to the conclusion that he was too young to be the editor of the newspaper which was to voice their views and beliefs. Just how far off the mark was their judgment, was proved very conclusively in the years which followed. Mr. George Brown of the Toronto Globe, was the man who selected young Robert Sellar for the role he was to fill for the next fifty-six years, and proved beyond doubt that his faith was not misplaced. The late Robert Sellar was a journalist right from the start, and if a few of the gentlemen in those early days were a little disgusted, it was soon proved that their judgment erred.

This founder of The Huntingdon Gleaner, was made of the stuff that is needed to carry a newspaper through its pioneering stages: courage, determination, an ability to give and take, meet friend and enemy with a smile, face and publish the facts in a fearless manner, while at the same time always having the welfare of the community at heart. The Gleaner has stood for all these things throughout the years it has been published. Its policy is traditional throughout the entire area of its coverage, its policy is strictly maintained by its staff, who feel bound by the sacred ties of its founder. Many are the tributes which have been paid the Gleaner during its many years of service to the public, and these have not been restricted to the local district, they have come from far and wide. If we were to trace the life of the Gleaner from its very start and thoroughly describe each year of its existence, we could write a most interesting book of journalistic adventures. We could introduce the old time type of drama, pathos, thrills, excitement and humor, that would keep the reader in a state of high fettle throughout. In latter years, movie producers have made many feature length pictures on newspaper life, in most cases the theme of their story has been based on the weekly newspaper. The Gleaner could provide the theme for a story which would be a Box Office Hit No. 1, because it would be based on true facts.

Under the careful and able guidance of the late Robert Sellar, the Gleaner gradually carved its niche in the lives of the people in the Beauharnois district, to become an institution for the good of all, to be the means of distributing the news of the district and presenting the views of the people, to influencing in all manners of ways for the general good and improvement of the whole countryside. Many changes and additions have been made which have improved the appearance and output of this newspaper, and efforts are continuously being made to have The Gleaner the best of its class.

As each milestone is rounded, The Gleaner never settles back with a smile of contentment and a sigh of relief—That's one more year successfully completed. No, it tightens its harness, checks the weak spots, and prepares for a better job in the year to come. Each year is just another link in the experience of newspaper publishing, experience gained by which The Gleaner will benefit in future editions. When a reputation has been gained, it must be maintained, that is a harder job than can be imagined, one slip and it is lost.

These are troublesome times for all of us to face, it is probably one of the most trying that newspapers have ever experienced. It is the wartime assignment of the weekly newspaper to bolster and keep up the morale of the people at all times. When bad news has to be given, it is up to the newspaper to give it in such a manner that no panic is caused, and that the people accept it as a matter of course. It must keep the people posted on the constant changes which keep taking place and which affect the normal way of living. The Gleaner is doing its best to provide such service to the people in the Chateauguay Valley and at the same time keeping the standards of its past years always in mind. The present war is not the first that has been reported in the columns of The Gleaner, but it is the first one that has had such wide reaching effects, or required so much space to tell about it.

Several times over the past few years The Gleaner has won recognition for itself in newspaper contests, both of a Provincial and a Dominion-wide nature. These contests have placed The Gleaner in a high rank among its competitors, which were oftentimes serving much larger communities than that served by this newspaper.

In 1919, death claimed the life of the founder, at the age of 78 years. In following years The Gleaner was carried on under the direction of the sons of the late Robert Sellar, first by Leslie from 1919 to 1922; from his death in August 1922 until December, 1924, jointly by R. Watson Sellar and Adam L. Sellar, and from 1924 until now, Adam L. Sellar, the youngest son, has carried on the publication of this now well-known weekly newspaper.

Thus The Gleaner has been edited by father and sons for the space of seventy-nine years, which is quite unique in the history of Canadian publications. The Gleaner has always enjoyed the respect of its readers and advertisers as well as that of other publishers, and is proud of the fact.

The Gleaner at this time wishes to avail itself of the opportunity to thank the advertisers who have entrusted their business by way of advertising, in a regular way, or by way of special editions, to its columns; the subscribers who have continued to subscribe over the years and those who have more recently become members of the family of readers; the correspondents who have faithfully served through contributions of weekly happenings from their various districts and organizations and all others who have helped in any way toward its success.

Dieppe Casualty List

IN this issue of The Gleaner, there will be found pictures and descriptions of men of the Chateauguay Valley, who have been reported missing in the recent large scale raid on Dieppe. It has further been made public that the grand total of casualties as far as Canadians are concerned is 3,937. Of this number there are 40 dead, 41 wounded and 130 missing officers; 130 dead, 592 wounded and 3,004 missing men. It will be seen from this that the number of dead and wounded is very small, but the number of missing is very large. No doubt a large number of those reported missing will be prisoners of war, some may even find their way back in the course of time, others may never be seen again. If those missing are prisoners of war, we shall learn of their names as time goes on, and relief will be brought to many relatives who are in high hopes that the missing may still be alive.

The Canadians played a prominent part in this raid on Dieppe and formed the bulk of the raiding party. Their courage has been praised to the skies and the part they played will go down in history as another Vimy Ridge. But, now that the news has been made public and we start to compare notes and think what it all means, these points stand out in bold relief.

This raid lasted less than twenty-four hours, in fact it was given out as nine hours; look at the number of casualties in that time. We have no record of the loss in equipment, but that must also have been tremendous. Now, it has been argued that this was a hit and run raid, had it have been a full scale invasion force, the casualties would have been much less. The reason for the high casualties has been given that the raiding force had to land and then had to re-embark, which laid it open to two separate attacks on the beaches, where there was no shelter of any kind. Had this been an invasion force the one attack in the open would have sufficed and casualties would have been cut down.

This argument is all well and good, if we are going to attack, we must, and do expect casualties. But this raid also points out that the defences on the other side of the English Channel are not to be considered too easy. It points out the disadvantages of an invading force landing on the open beaches, and trying to rush the terrific gunfire of the defending garrisons.

From the results of this raid, it would seem that if an army is to be landed where it will do the most good, there is only one way to do it. Large numbers of the largest type planes must be used to transport troops over the coasts of enemy territory to predesignated spots further inland, then have the troops released in gliders and parachutes. This must be closely followed up by large numbers of planes carrying supplies, etc. The whole affair must carry with it the greatest element of surprise to catch the enemy off his guard if possible. With a territory as large as that occupied by the enemy, the chances of success are far greater than his would be if he tried the same tactics on England. In such an attack, the planes would have to scatter to avoid being brought down before reaching their objective, then converge as the objective was reached. It would seem that any frontal attack with mass troops would mean a terrific slaughter.

Gasoline — Abuse and Privilege

THE new gasoline ration goes into effect on October 1st, and many motorists will be allowed less gasoline than has been the case up to now. Munitions Minister Howe has issued an appeal to all motorists to lay up their cars during the winter months, if this is at all possible, and not to use the new ration allowance at all, if they can avoid it. The reason for this new adjustment of gasoline rationing is because of the "colossal" loss of tankers in the Battle of the Atlantic, as the announcement made by Mr. Howe. Mr. Howe, in his announcement, pointed out the seriousness of the gasoline shortage, and said that at one time the submarine situation became so grave that all tankers were held in port for twelve consecutive days. This ran the supplies at Halifax, so low, that there was no crude oil in storage at all.

A large number of the most patriotic people are doing whatever lies in their power to abide by the regulations of rationing and are not using their cars, except when absolutely necessary. These people are to be highly complimented and congratulated for doing their duty in a right and proper manner. But then again, there are a large number of people who are driving cars, whose object is not to see how much they can save of their coupons, but where it might be possible to scheme an extra supply. There are those people who still persist in driving their cars unnecessarily and believing that it is up to them to see that all their coupons are used up by the end of the period set. People are still driving miles and miles to dances, going out on pure joy rides with an aimless destination, driving at high speeds to the danger of people on the roads as well as to themselves, and so on. The people who are doing their best to live up to the regulations, have to suffer for those who are not.

There is supposed to be a check-up made on persons who are driving over forty miles per hour. One has only to take a glance at cars travelling along the highways and even through the Town of Huntingdon, to see what a large number are driving either over the forty mile limit or as close to it as they can get. Forty miles an hour is a ridiculous speed to be driving through the streets of Huntingdon at, and the town officials should see to it that this practice is stopped. Provincial officials should check up the drivers of the cars on the outside roads and highways. An example made of one or two, with a stiff penalty attached, would no doubt have the effect of bringing a good many people to their senses.

Those people who will not co-operate with their fellow citizens in trying to conserve gasoline, or persist in driving their cars for unnecessary pleasure, should be classed as saboteurs and treated as such. Why should fair-minded citizens go to work and do all they can to help save gasoline, while other "don't-give-a-care" people run their cars around to dances, burning up gasoline needlessly, and treat the whole affair as a huge joke, when told about. Surely there must be some way that the truth of the situation can be brought home to them.

There have been a number of persons who have been seeking further ways of obtaining gasoline and have made application in the States for the special ration allowed to tourists. When this is obtained, it allows for an additional number of gallons of gasoline. It is a simple matter to drive to Malone, fill up with gasoline and drive around on this extra ration. In this, they are taking advantage of a privilege extended by the States Government to bona-fide Canadian travellers, and abusing it by using the gasoline to serve their own selfish and greedy desires.

All these acts defeat the purpose of rationing, as well as discriminate against the patriotic citizen who is doing his best to help the situation. There is no name bad enough to call those drivers of automobiles who will not stop and think and try to save on gasoline and tires. The chances are that these same people are not doing anything to help bring victory. They certainly do not care how many men lose their lives in trying to bring the gasoline for their selfish pleasure, it does not matter even, that there is a war on at all. Self-denial is not in their vocabulary. You can hear them talking, everyday, "there's no shortage of gasoline, there's just as much now as there ever was. The Government is just trying to pull the wool over our eyes and make us think the gasoline is short. Who ever heard of bringing gasoline to Canada by sea, why Canada and the United States have their own gasoline. We have pipe lines from the States and lots of trains and trucks to bring it here."

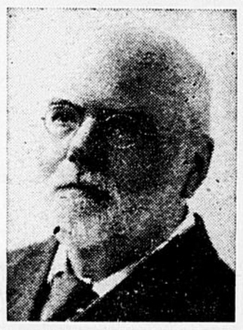

While we have such people operating cars, there will not be much saving of gasoline or tires, unless we clamp down on them in a drastic manner. With the gasoline shortage so acute, the regulations governing the rationing of same should be made more strict. Joy-riding should be prohibited entirely, a severe warning should be given for first offence and second offence should call for forfeiture of ration book and license for the duration. Until our regulations get real teeth in them, little heed will be paid to them by the type of people referred to in this article.

If the real patriotic people protest loud enough perhaps something can be done to remedy the situation and bring the "don't-give-a-care" type to their senses. Perhaps they can be made to realise there is a war on and that we are all in it, that we must fight with every form and type of weapon available. Perhaps they can be taught that they can afford to give up their senseless pleasures so that the men of the armed forces may have the tools of war with which to keep their country free for them. Perhaps they can be taught that if they don't want to take their places beside the men in the armed forces, they at least can do their part in helping on the home front.

The time is here for plain talking and this article is meant as a plain talk to those who just don't care, if the cap fits, then wear it. If you have a conscience at all, you will take this to heart and try to do something about it. If you haven't, then you will wait until drastic measures are taken against you.

Chronology — of — CHATEAUGUAY, BEAUHARNOIS and HUNTINGDON COUNTIES

From Manuscripts of The Late ROBERT SELLAR

MRS. ANDERSON—My father, James Tully, came from Roxburghshire and he came out in 1814 with the intention of taking up land. On landing at Quebec, however, he was engaged by a gentleman (Kirby) to take charge of his farm on the St. Fort road and subsequently was engaged by Lord Dalhousie to manage his. He got a lot in Leeds which he did not go to, being told the land was high and strong, and Lord Dalhousie gave him an order for a farm of 400 on Trout River in Elgin, but Geo. Elder had squatted on 200 acres. Brown, under pretence that he would get him a lot to make up for it, got the letter and never gave it back. My father engaged a man named Ridit Courner to make a clearance and put up a house for us. He came up on a Durham boat from Lachine to the mouth of the La Guerre, and then up in canoes to Ogilvies. We had a horse, implements, furniture, and 2 years' provisions. The roads were horrid, but from Ogilvie's to the T.N. there was no road, only a track. The horse could draw nothing over it, and my brother John led it Ogilvie sent 2 H sleds (single) to draw some of our stuff, but it was 20 months before we got all, and by that time part was damaged from lying in Ogil. sheds. We moved into Elgin on the 29th May 1822. Nesbit and others came with us. That year 32 families moved into Elgin. An old F.C. soldier Bombardier who lived with his wife and a negro named Sourie in Burnside place, made cedar raft for my father which could be drawn by ropes back and forth across the T. R. It was large enough to bear a horse. Black Wm. Souree and the father of Ogilvie were hired by McBain to help make potash. My mother's only brother Gabriel Buckham, a carpenter by trade but well educated in Edinburgh, who left Philadelphia on account of ill health, was the first land agent. He was subject to fits, and while coming home from Huntingdon one night took one and fell in a shallow puddle at Wm. Stephens and died. Jas. Brown came after him; he went home to Scotland and then Bowron. George Elder was a carpenter by trade and came from Glasgow. I think all his family were born in Scotland. He had been in the Elgin side 18 months before we came. The reason why the Americans did not take up land I think was because they would not take the oath of allegiance. Old Spencer took it and got a lot. The only two houses I can call to mind on the road to Huntingdon were those of Hartley and Barter. Geo. Wright and Page must have been there also. Stearns had the stove at Hol. Old Donnelly had 6 sons who bought out several American settlers. $400. was the usual price for a lot with any improvements. Ogilvie and Davidson were the only 2 families my mother visited for a long while. Old Mrs. Davidson was an Ogilvie and a real nice kind lady. Her father had a small factory in the outskirt of Dundee, and one day a boy in Kilts who could speak no English was found in the barn yard, and shifted as he could for some days. He had been bound apprentice for 7 years to a carpenter, but not liking his place had run away. Ogilvie told him if he liked to learn the stocking-weaving he might stay, which he did, and in 6 years had asked O's only daughter to marry him. When her father found it out he was enraged, and drove the young fellow off, but a correspondence was kept up and arrangements made for the wedding. On the day agreed, her mother sent her down to the brim to wash blankets, when D. appeared with the minister, who married them when she stepped back into the hut. Her father drove her away, but they might have got on, had it not been that D. was drafted for 7 years, and sent to the Cape, I think. She supported herself and child by spinning flax, her mother sending her as often as she could a plate of soup and preserves. The father never recognized her. On D's return, he went to Canada with the money he had saved, and is said to have made a living first by peddling and showing white mice. He started in a poor way at Dundee when he sent for his wife. I have been in their first house, the stove at one side and bed at the other. He was a mean proud man, dishonest and disliked, but everybody liked his wife, who was a real lady. He brought over Norman McDonald from Glengarry to be tutor to his boys. I would be 15 or 16 years old when Dunskin was hired to keep school. He went from house to house, we following, staying a week in each, from the head of the river down to Charles's and had completed 4 rounds, before the Mud Creek school was completed, which was in summer. Marshall's school was up before it and I attended church and S.S. there, but not day school. Dr. Matherson called couples in city and married them in coming up. I recollect his ing 3 couples in my father's in one baptizing 13 children and marrying evening. McWattie called from the door step, with people standing around. His wife had a livid liver mark on the right side of her face. Her hair concealed it on the forehead, but could not on cheek. She was a pretty woman.

Diabetes Death-Rate Grows

When the late Sir Frederick Banting discovered insulin just 20 years ago, it was commonly believed that diabetics had been given a new lease on life. But despite the marvellous benefit conferred on the human race by that great discovery, the death rate from diabetes has risen alarmingly in the last two decades — and is still going up.

This seeming contradiction is accounted for to only a slight degree by the fact that more people have been having medical examinations, and more doctors have been looking for symptoms of diabetes in their patients.

WEEK IN OTTAWA

The message that has been sent forth from the convention of the Congress of Labor which has been holding its session in the capital during the past week is a warning that labor must not for an instant rest on its oars in this deadly race whose goal is the liberty of the human race and in which defeat would mean enslavement. For all its grimness the warning had a cheering note because it was the voice not only of this great branch of trade unionism in Canada but also of its great affiliate the C.I.O. of the United States. It showed clearly that these great organizations were in spirit wholeheartedly behind an all out drive for victory. A distinguished guest at the conference, Philip Murray, president of the C.I.O. told delegates at the conference that strikes were now a "negligible factor" in the U.S. There was no place for stoppage of work in vital war industries in a struggle where the issues were the preservation "of all we own and all we cherish". Since December 23, 1941, when the leaders of both great labor organizations in the U.S., the C.I.O. and the American Federation of Labor, gave their pledge to President Roosevelt that there would be no strikes during the war, there had not been a single authorized strike. There had been a few localized disturbances arising from individual quarrels, which Mr. Murray claimed had been magnified out of all proportion in sections of the press, but in the past six months only one fifth of one per cent man hours of labor on war industry had been lost. America, he said "has its sleeves rolled up, and is producing at a

Preserves and Pickles

Grape Jelly

6 lbs. grapes (slip-skin)
3-4 cup water

Remove grapes from stems, wash, crush in large preserving kettle, and add water. Bring to boil and boil over moderate heat 8 to 10 minutes or until skins and pulp have separated and are tender. Drain overnight through a jelly bag or double cheesecloth (wrung out of hot water). Next day measure juice and add two thirds cup of sugar and one third cup of Crown Brand Corn Syrup to each cup of juice. (There should be approximately 6 cups of juice; this would require 4 cups sugar and 2 cups Crown Brand Corn Syrup). Combine and bring to boil, stirring only until sugar is dissolved. Let boil rapidly until two drops will come together and fall in a sheet from the side of a spoon (about 8 to 10 minutes). Remove from fire, skim, and pour into hot, sterilized glasses. Seal, and do not disturb for 24 hours. Label, and store in a dark, dry cool place. For 6 cups juice, the yield will be approximately 4 pints.

NOTE: Delicious Crab-Apple Jelly may be made, using the same proportion of sugar and Crown Brand Syrup. When cooking the apples, remove stem and blossom ends, wash, cut in pieces and add 1 cup of water to 1 pound of crabapples. (Do not remove skins or cores). Bring to a boil; boil 20 to 25 minutes or until soft. Let drain overnight and proceed as for Grape Jelly.

THE CAT AND MUSIC

Who does not derive pleasure from the contented purring of a cat? The cat language is musical. It is a combination of pleasant, soothing sounds. The tones are often caressing.

This association of the cat with musical sounds is not an original observation. As long ago as 1000 B.C. the Egyptians coupled the cat with music, and utilized a reproduction of the head and figure of the beloved animal in the decoration of musical instruments.

There are, of course, many more recent facts, anecdotes and stories associating the feline friend with the musical arts. In the familiar nursery rhyme, "The Cat and the Fiddle," the animal acquires the status of a virtuoso. Tschaikowsky in his ballet, "La Belle au Bois Dormant," included a dialogue between Puss-in-Boots and The White Cat.

Gautier is reported to have had a silver-gray Angora who would listen to music with deep satisfaction and would often go so far as to pick her way up and down the keys of the piano. Another author observed his cat had a particular penchant for "playing" the piano in the middle of the night.

There is a legend of a cat who furnished a composer with a musical theme because of its habit of running up and down the piano keyboard. One of Scarlatti's compositions is titled "The Cat's Fugue" and the story goes that a stroll on the keys by Scarlatti's cat gave him the subject of the fugue. The composer Sacchini is said to have told his friends he could only write when he was surrounded by cats; their presence inspired his gracious music.

Mlle. Dupuy, a celebrated harpist of the seventeenth century, believed her skill as a musician was due to her cat, who always sat beside her as she performed and manifested pleasure or annoyance at the quality of the performance.

Jenny Lind's son wrote that, as a child, his mother often sang to her cat. She would sit "in the window of the steward's room which looked out on the street . . . Here she sat and sang to the cat; and the people passing in the street used to listen and wonder."

DAHLIA'S WHATNOTS

Elizabeth of Siberia

Before reaching the town of Kamouicheff our heroine encountered one of the storms that sweep across that part of Russia before winter sets in. A tree was blown down across her path, and she ran for shelter into a forest. Ill-prepared for the tempest of wind and rain, she was soon wet through and bespattered with mud, while her shoes went to pieces in her struggles along the flooded road. In this plight she passed the night in the forest, suffering intensely from cold and fatigue. At daybreak she started out again and was given a ride by a peasant who took pity on her and drove her to the next town. There her forlorn appearance led some to conclude that she was a bad character. She made her way to the church and sat down on the steps only to be hooted by a mob of children. The noise drew the attention of a kind-hearted lady who brought the mayor to the scene. She answered his questions promptly and showed him her passport.

Upon this the lady invited her to her home, but her bare feet were so swollen that she could not even stand up. Excited to pity, the people brought a cart for her to ride in. She remained several days, and her hostess supplied her with shoes and other articles, as well as money. Thus recruited, she managed to walk about 200 miles in the direction of Ekaterinburg, a city on the Siberian frontier. She met with people who treated her well, others tried to take advantage of her unprotected condition, but invariably her simplicity and the noble purpose for which she was travelling disarmed the evil-disposed. In one instance, she stopped for the night at a house kept by a couple who were known to be robbers. Dishonest themselves, they did not believe she had told them the truth. After she was asleep they ransacked her pockets, but found her story of poverty was true. Then they pitied her, gave her a good breakfast and the night's lodging free, and even added some money to her purse instead of robbing it.

After many weeks' detention on the road, in consequence of the September snows having set in, she reached Ekaterinburg, distant from her home about 400 miles. She went at once to an inn and told her story to the landlady, stating that all her money was spent. The hostess advised her to call on a benevolent lady, named Madame Milin, who would probably assist her. Before doing so, Elizabeth, as usual, went to church to offer up prayers for her parents and thanksgiving for her own safety. It was a Sunday, when there was a large attendance. On coming out, a lady walked up to her, and quite politely, wished to know from where she had come. Elizabeth told her and said she wanted to seek out the charitable Madam Milin. Her questioner offered to show her that lady's house, but when they arrived and the door was opened by a maid Elizabeth discovered that her new friend was Madam Milin herself. She gave her a home during that whole winter, and went to the trouble to improve her education, teaching her herself.

When spring came Elizabeth prepared to pursue her journey. Her friend gave her money and got in touch with a merchant who was going to the great Russian fair at Nijini Novgorod, 600 miles further on, but yet only about halfway to the capital. They travelled by water, so that she was relieved of the fatigue and danger of walking on the road. Unfortunately while crossing the Ural Mountains, the merchant fell sick and had to remain behind.

Now Elizabeth faced rough passages in the cargo boats trading to Nijini. Once she was nearly drowned when the sweep of a great oar used to propel such boats, pitched her and two others overboard. She was rescued and reached Nijini Novgorod.

This was the first really large city that she had ever seen, and its effect was one of lonely depression. When she looked around at the crowds, each person intent upon his own business, she felt with the poet who said: "This—this is solitude." She was sick and faint after her tedious journey by water from Ekaterinburg, and knew not where to go for shelter. But following her habit of seeking comfort in prayer, she went to the nearest church and prayed before the altar. A nun noticed her fervent devotion and, when she rose to leave, gently spoke to her, and learned her story. She brought her to the neighbouring convent and presented her to the lady abbess. It was well that the latter invited her to stay as long as she liked for next day she was seized with fever and lay abed for many weeks. As she recovered, she showed her gratitude by helping as a lay sister. Here she made a vow that if she lived to succeed in her mission, she would take the veil.

From that place to St. Petersburg the roads chiefly ran across low level country and at that period were, when summer weather approached, almost impassable by the melting of snow and ice. It was thought best for her to continue on at the convent until the cold season set in.

What's in the Wind

Jeanne of Japan

An epic romance of the Japanese War struck the high spot in Montreal, when Phyllis Argall and W. R. Wills, both repatriated from Tokyo, were married by Canon C. P. S. Powles, also formerly of Tokyo, and a life-long friend of the bride.

In the Coffey Shop, at Windsor Hotel, last Thursday, in company of Helen Murphy of Montreal Herald and Sophie Elliott, author "Pioneer Women of North America", I heard from Mrs. Wills, some of the intimate and thrilling details of her life in Japan, as Editor of an English Anti-Nazi newspaper; her three-year courtship; arrest and imprisonment on December 8th; released and reunion with her fiance in June and arrival in New York after more than two months aboard the Swedish refugee ship.

If our cause requires a heroine to inspire us in this dark hour, in the story of Phyllis Argall we have all the ingredients of spice, suspense and background to stir the imagination and quicken our resolve for victory. It has everything plus escape. She is the Joan of Arc of Japan.

And we need to cherish and glamorize the virtues we advocate. Moral integrity, courage, steadfast faith that triumphs and ends in romance instead of death.

Not that Phyllis regards herself as filling this role. On the contrary, she is completely human and on the surface, just the usual happy bride. The serious expression in her pretty eyes that have a humorous slant, calm voice and general poise indicate that she is prepared, as in the past to meet any situation with intelligence and equanimity.

Wedding Bells

Arriving in Montreal, friendless, she received a welcome by Mrs. T. E. Murphy, Editorial Staff of Montreal Herald and Mrs. E. N. Little of Montreal Churchman. These newswomen when informed of the situation, immediately went to town on the project. Assisted in assembling a trousseau, contacted Consuls and other officials for various necessary papers, found a friendly clergyman to tie the knot with "Bud" Wills of Columbia Broadcasting Corporation on Sept. 3rd.

A wedding reception was held in the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Little with flowers, wedding cake, candles and silver ornaments. Later during dinner at the Windsor Hotel with an extended party of friends, while toasts were being given the bride's voice came over the radio on C.B.C. Her talk relating the exciting experiences in Japan had been recorded earlier in the day so that it could be released on the air at a good spot. A most unique touch for a wedding banquet!

Admiring the beautifully engraved wedding ring that was the only adornment on her slim hand Miss Elliott asked, "What is your husband like?"

"Oh, he's rather a dear, you know, even if not the handsome type", was the modest reply. More flattering details were added by Mrs. Murphy. Her diamond engagement ring, the bride informed us, was in the office safe awaiting a formal presentation at Christmas. It was added to the loot taken by the Japs who raided the premises on December 8th. W. R. Wills was Chief-of-staff on the Tokyo paper. It was a case of love at first sight.

The English and Americans in Tokyo were aware of the developing crisis and knew they should be gone. Everyone hated to take responsibility of starting a panic exit. They hung on, grimly sticking it out.

Heroine's Chrysalis

December 8th, she was taken to prison from her apartment, without an opportunity to communicate with any of her friends. In solitary confinement without being able to see or speak to anyone, it was not until January 27th she learned that Japan had entered the war from hints dropped by guards.

During six months in jail, Miss Argall was under constant observation. At any time while eating, dressing or resting there would be a seeing-eye glued to a peephole. She submitted also to daily oral examinations by the Intelligence Police. They produced photostat copies or translations of her letters, incoming and outgoing for two years. They tapped her telephone and knew when and where she had dinner with friends. The American Club which was considered safe, was wired for sound. Her favorite table and chesterfield had sound equipment that recorded every word said for benefit of secret police.

A refined type of torture was imposed when she was required to sleep on her back with a strong light glaring in her eyes. And so the weary nights and days without any conversation, without news of friends, only three books with which to gain relief from mental anxiety. Many pretexts were used to induce her to write notes or letters to friends. Once a note came to her purporting to be from Mr. Wills, advising her to make certain admissions. She declared it a forgery and refused to acknowledge it thereby defeating its purpose, viz: to gain a sample of her writing to be copied and used in similar notes, designed to trap her friends into making statements.

A GILBERT & SULLIVAN SCENE

In May the tragic drama turned on a note of comic relief. Phyllis Argall and other internees were given a trial in court on charge of espionage and anti-Japanese-Axis activities. Up to this time she had been unable to get any information as to the whereabouts of her fiance, whether alive or dead. June 3rd prisoners were brought up to receive sentence.

In travelling from prison to the court their faces were concealed from view by inverted straw baskets! Peering through the slits Phyllis noticed that one of the torsos wearing pants seemed to lurch in a clumsy manner. The basket rolled off revealing a bearded face. The embarrassed creature looked around slowly at the other figures in the group, at the same time rubbing the hair at the back of his head upwards as if in troubled apprehension.

Peals of hysterical laughter issued from beneath the tubular mask of another prisoner. The guard shook her violently and said, "This is no laughing matter."

But Phyllis had recognized Bud beyond any doubt by that characteristic gesture. He was in the habit of rumpling his back hair when some problem bothered him. In the diversion thus created Bud was able to whisper to Phyllis, "Are you leaving on the boat sailing the 13th?"

Miss Argall was released on suspended sentence and allowed to return to her apartment. As a special concession Bud and Phyllis were permitted five minutes conversation together. But it was decreed that Miss Argall would not be permitted to leave on the first refugee ship which was slated to carry only American citizens.

After a good deal of wire-pulling and persuasion during the next two weeks this order was changed at the last minute. As Phyllis Argall carried a Canadian passport she was permitted to sail on the first boat.

When Bud Wills caught sight of Phyllis entering the station waiting-room he leapt across the room in two jumps and swept her into his arms. Yes, he did. She told us so herself.

Phyllis Argall's first introduction to the Orient was as a missionary to Formosa. She is a graduate of Toronto University and a native of Canada. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. K. Argall now live in Dovercourt, Essex, England.

After a brief honeymoon in the United States Mrs. Wills returned to Montreal to make arrangements for a transfer of citizenship in order to continue her career as a writer and wife in her husband's native country. Mr. Wills has been appointed Columbia Broadcasting representative at St. Louis, Mo.

While in Montreal Phyllis Argall received from a Weekly newspaper a substantial cheque for a story, gave a broadcast over C.B.C., was contacted by "Life" and "Liberty" for the forthcoming issues, submitted to other interviews and got married! In New York a publisher asked them to write a book. "Bud says that I will have to write it", added Phyllis.

"Sure thing," chorused Murphy and I, "That's married life!"

It's as easy as that to make your telephone talks briefer

Please think before you telephone: "Do I have to make this call?"

And whenever you are on the telephone, ask yourself: "Am I keeping this talk as brief as I can?"

Yes, it will be hard at first to limit your telephone time to a fraction of what it used to be. But the war is changing a lot of habits . . . and the high-speed tempo of war business has put a heavy load on telephone equipment which cannot be further expanded.

The situation is sure to grow more urgent. You can help by confining yourself to essential calls . . . and by making them brief.

Huntingdon Locals

Recently, we had the pleasure of interviewing Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Fawcett, who returned on Wednesday after a week's vacation at Calgary, Alta., where they went to be present when their son, Sergeant-Pilot Andrew Fawcett, received his wings.

Mr. and Mrs. Fawcett left Toronto on September 4th, and arrived at Calgary four days later. While there, they stayed at the home of Mrs. R. Crooks, who was formerly Miss Ruby Biggar, of Huntingdon. They also met several other former Huntingdonians, amongst whom were Mrs. Blackwood, sister-in-law of Mrs. Elizabeth Hastings, of Huntingdon, Mrs. Harper, niece of Mr. Wm. Clyde, of Huntingdon, and Mr. William Finn, who was born at Port Lewis, and who is a brother of Mrs. Jas. Impara. Mr. Fawcett stated that these people were extremely hospitable and that, in fact, everybody they met were friendly. He stated that that was one great difference he noticed between Quebeckers and the people of Alberta.

While there, they made a trip to Banff National Park, and were greatly impressed with the wonders of that district. Their only disappointment was that of leaving, and they both want to return to that picturesque playland again.

The greatest event of the trip was at Calgary, when their son participated in the Wings Parade and was later awarded his Wings. Here they saw Britons, Canadians, Australians and Americans all training together. Andrew was the only Quebecker to receive his Wings there that day. He was in a group of 61 other members of the R.C.A.F., all of whom had trained with him at Calgary. 50 of this number were members of the R.A.F. and came from England, 6 were Canadians and 6 hailed from the United States. The other Canadians were from Ontario, Nova Scotia, Alberta and British Columbia.

Sgt.-Pilot Andrew Fawcett left for Calgary today, and upon his arrival there expects to be transferred to Regina. Both Mr. and Mrs. Fawcett would like to return with him and spend another week "out where a friend is a friend."

Missionary Meeting

Mrs. Choquette, of Wierdale, Sask., was the guest speaker at the home of Miss Frances Turner on Saturday evening, when St. Andrew's Young Women's Association entertained St. Andrew's Senior Missionary Society. Mrs. Choquette, who has been lecturing in Montreal for several months, spoke about missionary work across the Dominion.

The speaker, who will leave for Vancouver in the near future where she will resume her missionary work, lived in northern Saskatchewan for many years, and recounted her experiences in the drought area when it affected that Province. During the evening, Mrs. Arthur White rendered a solo, accompanied by Mrs. Wm. Smellie. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

The fire siren sounded at approximately 8 p.m., on Friday evening, the reason being that a car on Chateauguay street, caught fire through some unknown reason near the C. J. Kyle Garage. The damage caused was very slight and the fire was extinguished by chemicals obtained by C. McClatchie, from Braithwaite Bros', store. DISTRICT FARM NOTES

It is worthy of note that the Ormstown Calf Club has attained a place of honour, when three of their members as a team have not only won first place in the judging competitions held at L'Assomption for all clubs in the Montreal district, but two of those boys have put up the two highest individual scores in the entire competition. These two boys, Roland Glen of Brysonville, and David McCartney of Ormstown, are now eligible to compete early in October, for Provincial honors, and should they win this event, they will then compete in Ontario for Canadian honors. The Agronomist for the district, Mr. Clifford McGee, and the Club leaders, Messrs. J. D. Lang and Keith McCaig, are pleased with the progress of the members of this Club, and are looking forward to a very successful Club Show, which is to be held at the Ormstown Fair Grounds on Saturday, Sept. 26th, commencing at 10 a.m. It is hoped that the parents and friends will attend the Show in goodly numbers to encourage the young members. The Clydesdale Breeders' Club of the district have consented to hold their annual show on the same date and place, thus providing two shows of interest for spectators.

On Saturday, of this week there will be sold by public auction, the entire J. J. Alexander herd of 44 head of fully accredited Holstein cattle, of which 26 are registered animals.

The herd has been well known and favourably mentioned in this district for quite a number of years. From it came cows like Buttermaids Lady, at one time Canadian Champion on twice-a-day milking with 22,906 lbs. milk, 883 lbs. fat, testing 3.85% fat, and Gypsy Milk Maid producing 16,369 lbs. milk, testing 3.96 fat in a 305-day test.

The same blood is still in the herd, as well as descendents of Enid of Pleasant Valley and Iris of Pleasant Valley which produced 17,185 lbs. milk, 609 lbs. fat at 10 years old. Record of Performance Testing has of necessity been discontinued for some time, but the test is still good. The Borden Company paid Mr. Alexander for milk produced in July, 1942, on a test of 3.8% fat.

The herd includes springers, fresh cows, spring calves, bred and open heifers and a good young bull of Rag Apple Pabst breeding.

It is with a good deal of regret that Mr. J. J. Alexander has been obliged to give up the conduct of the farm due to ill health.

The Motion War pictures put on by the ladies of St. Paul's United Church last Friday night drew a goodly number in spite of the various attractions held the same evening, and was a success. The pictures shown were from the beginning of hostilities at the front until the present time. The pictures were very clear and made doubly interesting as so many of our Canadian lads are involved in these scenes to-day. During the course of the evening several of our young people sang popular war songs which were much enjoyed.

W.C.T.U. MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held in MacDougall Hall, Thursday afternoon, Sept. 3rd, Mrs. English presiding.

The Devotional Exercises were in charge of Mrs. Young.

Mrs. J. Orr requested that all donations of jams and jellies for the "Friendly Home" be left with her before Thanksgiving. The next regular meeting will also be Little White Ribboner's meeting and will be held Saturday afternoon, Oct. 3, in MacDougall Hall. Sick visiting committee Mrs. D. McCaig, Mrs. E. McCartney and Mrs. A. Rember. Plans were made for the visit of Miss Edna Grant on Tuesday. Miss Edna Grant, National Organizer of the W.C.T.U. who left her home in Ladner, B.C., last April for a tour of the Dominion, visited Ormstown Tuesday, Sept. 15th.

In the afternoon she addressed the pupils of the Ormstown High School and the keen attention given by the students was evidence of Miss Grant's ability to impart knowledge and inspire young people. In the evening a public meeting was held in MacDougall Hall, Mrs. A. K. English presiding, Rev. Payne and Rev. Pollock had charge of the Devotional period, after which Miss Grant gave a reading in a most captivating manner.

A group of young people from the various churches accompanied by Miss Eleanor Orr, rendered choruses, and afterwards Miss Grant led in a sing-song. Miss Bazin then introduced the speaker to the audience. Miss Grant said she was engaged in a most interesting work and yet a difficult work. Sent out by the Can. W.C.T.U. who are now on the line of Front Defence—an organized Motherhood who aim to educate young people, and challenge Christian people, who should be actively engaged in helping our young people. When at Ottawa, this summer she found the members were becoming worried over the drink situation - some $250,000,000 having been spent on liquor in Canada, this past year, and Parliamentary discussions were taking place on the question of restricting liquor from the standpoint of physical fitness and social welfare.

Visiting the Ottawa jail she found that nearly every woman in the jail was there on a charge of drunkenness.

In Prince Edward Island - the only province with Prohibition, 71% of the men enlisted were in Class A while in Quebec with Gov. Control only 30% were in class A. Besides, Prince Edward Island was first in Red Cross work, first to go over the top in the Victory Loan, and first in the number of enlistments, which shows that Prohibition at its worst, is better than Gov. Control at its best.

Even the Brewers are afraid that people are wakening up to the fact that liquor is a menace to health, happiness and clean living.

Rev. Taylor expressed his appreciation to all who helped in the program and his thanks to Miss Grant for her stirring challenge.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

INK FEEDS FIRES OF FREEDOM

"Remember this, that the fires of freedom will never burn out as long as they are fed with printer's ink," C. V. Charters of the Brampton Conservator (Ont.), managing director of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers' Association, said when he reported to the association's 23rd annual convention—its first in Saskatoon.

"A free press is the cornerstone of democracy," Mr. Charters said. "It has its biggest job to do in a war economy. It is challenged today as never before. To maintain a free press we must sustain it. A free press is too often viewed as a corporate national right. It is that, but it is also an individual responsibility. We must deserve our privileges and prove equal to our responsibilities. Let us banish our inhibitions, our fears, and exercise the power of the press to hasten victory and bring about a righteous and abiding peace."

Mr. Charters delivered his report to the 200 delegates gathered at The Bessborough, after words of welcome had been expressed by S. J. Dornan of the Alameda Dispatch as secretary and manager of the Saskatchewan division, Premier Patterson, whom he introduced, Mayor MacEachern of Saskatoon, and A. H. Bence, M.P.

Following the remarks of welcome, the convention heard Walter R. Legge of the Granby, Que., Leadermail, president of the association, who told of numerous activities undertaken by the officers and directors during the past year and the increasing place in the counsels of the nation which was being accorded the weekly press.

Theme of the present convention, he mentioned, is "Our part in hastening total victory," and he went on to mention that many sons and daughters, and employees of the members, were serving their country in uniform or otherwise. He suggested establishment of a roll of honour.

The president reminded the delegates of the inspiration given by the valiant and patriotic Belgian newspaper which was published under the noses of the Germans during the First Great War, with new men springing forward to carry on as soon as the enemy arrested and killed the editors and printers. He also pointed to the inspiring spirit with which the press of Great Britain had done its work in the past few years of upheaval.

"More than a million and a half readers look to us for leadership," Mr. Legge said. The people looked to their press for guidance and information. If some of the members could obtain refreshed faith and courage, the present convention was well worthwhile, he concluded.

Mr. Charters told of the rapid growth of the association in members and fee revenue since the central office was established seven years ago. In that period, he said the membership had doubled to the present total of 536 and fee revenue had trebled to last year's $10,651. The association should aim at 600 members to increase revenue to the point where it would maintain present services, he suggested.

Among the new problems faced by the individual publisher were reduced revenue, mounting costs, scarcity of help, he said. Publishers had to look for new sources of revenue and in this way they had to bring all their creative genius to bear. To counter the help problem, he suggested less free srvice—not including anything having to do with the war effort—and he mentioned that some publishers already were turning back the clock to the old practice of engaging women for mechanical work.

Mr. Charters suggested engaging people who were physically handicapped and thus unable to serve their country otherwise. They might not be as useful as skilled help, but it would be found necessary to take the best available.

He urged the members to take pride in their papers and their plants and to remember that anything reflecting discredit on their papers would also bring discredit to all others in the business. "There is a duty devolving on every member, and if anyone slips, the association suffers," he said.

The managing director referred to the generous news and editorial treatment of the weeklies of every war effort, sponsored by the Government or auxiliary services. In addition many publishers had given personal leadership to efforts in their own communities.

They had shown their willingness to support all sound programs for civic and social betterment, and had demonstrated their interest in youth and its problems, in education and recreation. Their treatment of religious matters and their constant protection of religious freedom for all sects and creeds had always been sympathetic.

The publishers had also given their sons and daughters, and many employees, to the country's service. "God grant that they may be spared to return to a land worthy of their sacrificing effort," he said.

"The weekly newspapers of Canada are more essential in the present emergency than ever before," Mr. Charters continued, "Their influence and prestige are increasing. They must be kept functioning.

"Simply because printing presses and processes aren't readily convertible to making munitions doesn't mean that printing hasn't a big war job to do. People—all kinds of them, everywhere—have to be told and taught things. Not merely that they can't have automobiles and tires and a lot of other things they're used to. They need to be told how to use what they have—that many familiar products are of necessity packed in a different way, that substitutes are being or will be made to replace articles not available, that employee loyalty and hard work are positive war-winning contributions, that buying should be more intelligent, and that savings are essential.

"It's the printing press job to inform people of these and other conditions imposed by the nation's tremendous productive effort. That is a big undertaking, and in proportion as printing accomplishes it, printing will be doing its war work."

Mr. Charters declared it was not too early to think and talk of the kind of peace the Canadian people wanted. Rural Canada could come nearer operating an impelling demand for the kind of peace it wanted than any other people in this war-torn world if they had leadership, and the rural press should and must provide that leadership, he said.

The task of the weeklies was to take on the job, through its editorials, news columns and pictures, of enlisting every reader in the battle to win the war, secure the peace and build a new world. They had to build in their readers a fighting spirit that would face all the news, bad and good, without becoming discouraged or falling prey to easy optimism. They had to encourage the citizens to "stop passing the buck," admit mistakes and apologize, instead of blaming others, and to pull their own weight for maximum production.

The weeklies had to create a kind of team spirit that set a pattern for the community, with every staff member taking part in bringing teamwork to local readers and leaders. They must play the news according to what would do most for the country instead of what would tickle the readers' fancy.

"Backed by constructive writing, this new play-up of the news will have far more reader interest than of old," Mr. Charters promised.

The weekly press must, he said, "Use its space to build on the home front the courage, unselfishness and faith in God we need for total strength; and keep before the public a picture of the new Canada our soldiers are fighting for on the battle front.

"Today, religion and democracy are being challenged as never before. Our papers enter the home and are read by the family and read again—not glanced at hurriedly and cast aside—but thoughtfully read by young and old. They are part and parcel of the life of the country. This being so, it is the duty of all weekly publishers to make it what a good Canadian family desires and requires: A clean, honest, informative publication, advocating and defending that which will make for the general and lasting welfare of the people."

TICKET-OF-LEAVE MEN RELIABLE

Toronto—Only two out of a total of 168 prisoners given ticket-of-leave from Ontario institutions to engage in war work—chiefly farming—gave the authorities any trouble. Provincial Secretary H. C. Nixon said recently that even this pair was returned without any fuss after leaving the jobs to which they had been assigned. "They simply couldn't stick to their jobs," he said.

Fire at Huntingdon Fair Grounds Tuesday

On Tuesday afternoon, around 5 o'clock, fire broke out at the sheep pens at the Huntingdon Fair Grounds. The fire, which is alleged to have been started by children smoking, completely destroyed the row of buildings on the west side of the grounds. An alarm was sent in to Mr. R. E. McWhinnie, about 5 o'clock, and was answered by the Huntingdon Fire Brigade within a few minutes. When the reels arrived, however, the fire had gained too much headway to be checked, with the result that the firemen, with the aid of the booster pump connected to the creek running near the grounds, saved other nearby buildings. The buildings were partially covered by insurance.

Rationing of Meats Studied

Ceiling Prices on Livestock Also Under Consideration

Donald Gordon, chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, in a statement on the existing "acute" shortage of beef, said the board was considering further action and added consumer rationing and allocation of supplies might be necessary to ensure fair distribution.

"The situation with respect to the supply of beef and other fresh meat in the domestic market may require further action by the board along lines similar to those already announced in the United States," said Mr. Gordon's statement, issued by the board.

"These would include allocation of supplies and consumer rationing. The board is also studying methods of establishing ceilings on the prices of livestock in addition to the present ceilings on the prices of meat. Cattle prices at present are substantially higher than the appropriate seasonal level and must be expected to decline this autumn."

The board chairman said the board was considering establishment of ceiling prices on livestock. He said it was believed the existing shortage could be overcome if it was realized cattle prices could not be expected to rise this season.

The board was examining "very carefully" the beef shortage situation in Canada and measures that might have to be taken.

Consumer rationing of meat involved serious problems but "under conditions of real deficiency of any product the only means to achieve fair distribution is by consumer rationing."

One Day Fair ...

part pretty well filled. The cattle appeared to be in good condition.

Horses held their position of importance at the show and Mr. D. E. Black, M.P., was present with his string of 8 driving horses. Unfortunately, the judging of the horses was delayed an hour in getting started, consequently many people were unable to wait sufficient time to see all the classes judged that they so wished to see.

The showing of pork was excellent. Many years ago large exhibits were made, but this year was by far the best for a long time. Judge James Hunter, found the entries to be fine in quality as well as numerous.

Judge Roy looked after the placing of the sheep, and as Havelock Fair provides for the judging of grades as well as purebreds, the showing of sheep was quite large. However, Judge Roy feels the grades should be dropped and extra classes created for the short wool breeds. This he believes would make for an even better showing, give the exhibitors a better chance, and at the same time cost the fair no more money in the way of prizes.

Poultry, like Huntingdon Fair was very scant.

One of the features of Havelock Fair that must never be overlooked, is the dining hall where the members of the United Church of Covy Hill and Zion, served a hot dinner. Havelock Fair is a great visiting centre and the dining hall is where the visiting gets well under way. It is to be hoped this feature of Havelock Fair may long be continued, and if such is the case, the Fair will always be a success and well patronized.

The prize list of awards will appear in other columns of this issue.

National Organizer Visits Chateauguay-Huntingdon Counties

Last week Miss Edna Grant, National organizer of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, visited Howick, Ormstown and Huntingdon, where she addressed public meetings and visited the High Schools and Young People's groups. Miss Grant left British Columbia last April for a tour of the Dominion, spending about a month in each province. This young woman is especially adapted for speaking to young people. The keenest attention was given by the students of the various High Schools to the demonstrations, and their enthusiasm, as the story in the demonstration grew, was in itself evidence of Miss Grant's ability to impart knowledge. We are sure that great good will come from all the contacts she has made, and that public spirit will be aroused against this curse upon our national life, in a way we have not hitherto noticed. A new Union was formed at Howick as a result of her visit.

At the Movies...

"All That Money Can Buy" Remarkable Screen Drama

Interweaving a striking commentary on Americanism with its whimsical story of a man who sold his soul to the devil and got it back again, "All That Money Can Buy," based on the Stephen Vincent Benet story, "The Devil and Daniel Webster," comes to the screen of the O'Connor Theatre next Sunday and Monday, Sept. 27 and 28, with the advance reputation of being one of the most memorable films of recent years.

Edward Arnold and Walter Huston share top honors in the RKO Radio picture version of Stephen Vincent Benet's remarkable story, with Anne Shirley and James Craig in the romantic leads and Jane Darwell, Simone Simon, Gene Lockhart and John Qualen in the other featured roles.

The action is laid in the 1840's in a New Hampshire community. Jabez Stone, a young and newly-married farmer, discouraged with his continued bad luck, unexpectedly encounters The Devil, locally known as Mr. Scratch. Mr. Scratch agrees to give Jabez everything that money can buy for the next seven years in return for his soul.

This is the beginning of the young farmer's financial progress. A protege of Mr. Scratch's, Belle, wins him away from his wife.

But as the seven-year period draws to an end, Jabez begins to worry about his bargain. In despair, he appeals to his wife, and she lays the case before Daniel Webster. Webster demands a jury trial and Mr. Scratch summons up the jury: Benedict Arnold, Simon Girty, Captain Kidd and others of their ilk—traitors, murderers, scoundrels, all. Webster makes an impassioned plea in behalf of Jabez and so moves the jurymen that they tear up the contract and acquit Jabez, who hastens to make amends for his past.

The side car, in which Ronald was riding, was torn away, the others being thrown from the machine, which was badly smashed. The three boys were taken to Barrie Memorial Hospital, where x-ray revealed sprains and bruises were the extent of the injuries, though some of the patients are still confined to the house. Norris had been called for military service, and was able to report next day.

Mother and Daughters Team up in Canadian Women's Army Corps

Two of the newest officers of the Canadian Women's Army Corps are a mother and her daughter, Lieutenant Madelaine H. Nation, (in civil life Mrs. A. F. Nation) and Lieutenant Barbara G. Nation, who were among the 57 cadets presented with their badges of rank by the Adjutant General, Major General H. F. G. Letson, at the recent C.W.A.C. graduation exercises at the Training Centre at Ste. Anne de Bellevue.

Formerly of Montreal, but now making their home in Vancouver the Nations took the 4 weeks Officers' Training Course together. Miss Nation joined the C.W.A.C. a year ago, and worked her way up to the rank of Corporal before being commissioned. She is a tall, slim girl of 21, with striking auburn hair and a blue-eyed twinkle. She went to college and then did some modelling for the Hudsons' Bay Company (largest department stores in the West) before becoming a girl soldier. She tops her mother by quite a few inches. Mrs. Nation is just a bit over the regulation 5 ft. required to join the C.W.A.C.

An energetic, small woman with plenty of character, Mrs. Nation is what is generally known as "excellent officer material." She was Commandant of the Vancouver Branch of the B. C. Womens' Service Corps, the first of the voluntary services to be organized in British Columbia and which afterwards was incorporated with the Red Cross.

Mrs. Nation has two nieces also in the C.W.A.C., one of them, Sgt. Sally Kilvert is stationed at Ste. Anne de Bellevue, and at the graduation exercises, had the honour of unfurling the Flag for the General Salute; the other C.W.A.C. Niece is Pte. Geraldine Hanson, of Kingston, Ont., who is on duty at the Canadian Legation in Washington. Altogether there are 12 members of Mrs. Nation's family in the uniformed services of the country, including her son, Lieutenant G. H. Nation, R.C.N.V.R., who is Staff Officer in Sydney, N.S.

The Nations are working overtime for the Nation, and loving every minute of it. Both mother and daughter are enthusiastic about their work in the corps. They were posted to their first jobs as officers at this time. Lieutenant Madelaine H. Nation will be on duty at M. D. No. 4 headquarters in Montreal, while daughter Barbara will be stationed in Ottawa.

THE BOMBER PRESS VISITS ENGLAND

(By Walter R. Legge in collaboration with C. V. Charters)

Being the first of a series of articles on Canadian Forces in England written especially for the weekly newspapers of Canada by their two representatives on a sponsored tour of England.

To pay a visit to England under present day conditions, it is first necessary to have government permission or invitation. In the case of the recent visit by Canadian editors, the trip was the result of a suggestion by General McNaughton that a party of Canadian Editors should be given an opportunity to see just how the Canadian forces were living and training overseas.

Two weekly editors were asked to become members of the party and the choice fell to C. V. Charters, managing director of the C.W.N.A., and Walter R. Legge, immediate past president of the association.

After brief preparation, the party assembled in Montreal, and prepared to leave for England by Bomber Ferry Command.

Preparation for the trip gives the first definite feeling that one is entering the war zone when the "briefing" takes place. This is a long and serious procedure involving a very complete check of your passports, life details and credentials. Following the clerical details, the prospective voyager is fitted with parachute harness.

This is a heavy and cumbersome affair which has to be fitted quite tightly and leaves the victim feeling that he is something like a trussed ox. After receiving full instructions on how to operate the parachute, measurements are taken for the flying suit which is necessary in most flights which are made at varying heights from 10,000 to 25,000 feet.

Next comes fitting and instructions in the use of an oxygen mask, also necessary at these great heights.

Baggage, which is limited to 40 pounds, is weighed in, and after some further details, the passengers are sent back to the hotel with instructions to await a call.

On comparing notes after this routine, we found that nearly every member of the party was told a different story as to when we might start. Some were told that there was no plane available while others were told to be ready at 8.30 the next morning, and others were instructed to expect a call sometime in the middle of the night.

This is probably part of the plan to keep movements as secret as possible. Actually the cars called for us at the hotel early the next morning.

The plane arranged for us was a large four-motored Liberator, which had been fitted with two long benches for us to sit on. Seven of our party had left a couple of days before, but other passengers with us made the party up to 13, a fact which did not seem to bother anyone.

Several in the party were going into the air for the first time and could not escape a feeling of trepidation. These big machines give a feeling of tremendous power and it did not seem strange to be far above the clouds in a few minutes.

The amount of room in the plane was surprising, and while there was not enough space for everyone to lie down, it was not really crowded. The noise is deafening, and prevents any lengthy conversation. There is really nothing to do but read, but it did not seem a long time before we were over Newfoundland. This is the real way to see just what the country is like, and the plane coming down to about 5,000 feet, we had a fine view of the country, and could really appreciate the amount of water in this island.

It is a country of inlets, bays, lakes and trees, making a beautiful sight from that height. Settlements are few and far between.

Four hours and a half after leaving Montreal, we were gently set down at a huge airport in Newfoundland. Here we were given a pass and taken to Eastbound Inn for dinner.

One interesting thing about Newfoundland is that it seems to be impossible to get anything but tinned milk.

The airport is so large that transportation is necessary to move around it very much, so that we really did not see much of it.

A railway train attracted our attention and the engine carried a message painted on its sides, "Britain Delivers the Goods."

After a stop of about four hours, the party embarked again, this time with only eleven passengers, as two who left Montreal were bound only for Newfoundland.

We settled as well as we could for a long tedious night as the plane steadily forged ahead at a high speed. Looking through the small windows we could see a breathtaking vista of a fleecy floor of clouds brilliantly illuminated by the moon.

The longest night comes to an end, and soon after a wonderful sunrise, views of Northern Ireland could be obtained through breaks in the clouds. The views of the Irish countryside, which looked like an old fashioned patchwork quilt will always remain as one of the most beautiful sights we have ever seen.

Soon we approached our destination and the pilot set the huge plane down with hardly a tremor.

Our formalities with the customs and immigration were expedited, and after breakfast that we had not enough time to finish, we started on the train journey to London, a journey which took longer than the trip from America. Everyone has to look after his own baggage these days on the English railroads, and space on the trains is at a premium. The first group of our party were forced to stand up for hours on this long trip, but we were more fortunate in that respect, although we had nothing to eat all day until late at night at London.

We have described the trip across the Atlantic in some detail, but until after our return to Canada when we can write at leisure, only the outline of our activities will be given.

It had been announced that w would have four days to rest up after our arrival, but we soon wondered just what they meant by "rest." Every moment seemed to be crowded with some appointment.

Saturday was taken up with registration, and application for ration cards, photos for our passes of which there were so many that Mr. Napier Moore claimed that he ha to buy a duffle bag to hold them.

Just before noon, we had a conference with the Canadian High Commissioner, the Hon. Vincent Massey at which he welcomed the editors. In the course of this informal discussion Mr. Massey remarked that there were too few Canadian resident correspondents, against 15 Australian and about 200 American.

For lunch we were taken to the Canadian Officers Club, which is near Canada House, and found Mrs. Vincent Massey behind a counter serving the meal.

The programme for Sunday was a full one. Starting out, the two representatives of the weekly press attended early services at St. Martin-in-the-fields. Then after a hurried breakfast, the whole party started off in cars to visit a farm which had won many medals as the best farm in Berkshire. This will be described in more detail in subsequent articles.

After a close study of this farm, we went on to Maidenhead, on the banks of the Thames for luncheo

Windsor Castle was the objective for the afternoon, and a couple of hours were spent in this historical place.

After the long journey back, some of the party were not too tired to go and listen to the orators in Hyde Park.

Monday was an even more exacting day. Lengthy visits were paid to Canadian Red Cross Headquarters, a Canadian Legion Hostel, the Salvation Army hostel on Southampton Row, the YM.C.A. hostel, on Leinster Court Road, the Knights of Columbus hostel on the same street, the Maple Leaf Club, the Union Jack Club, and the Beaver Club. Then we visited the Daily Telegraph, Reuters building and finished up late at night at the Daily Telegraph. In each of these places we went up and down stairs and through room after room so that most of us welcomed our beds.

On Tuesday, the High Commissioner gave luncheon for the members of the party which was a notable affair in that much valuable information was secured. After visits to various places in the afternoon, the day concluded with a visit to the Daily Express.

Wednesday morning was spent at the British Ministry of Information, and at noon we met Major General, the Hon. P. J. Montague who is senior officer of the Canadian Military Headquarters.

This conference lasted some time, after which detailed instructions concerning the forthcoming trip were given, and we prepared to really start work the next day.

The summary of our activities will continue in the next article and more detailed accounts of the various phases of our activities will follow later.

Why it is wise to BOVRIL-IZE

The best of beef GO-ZINTER BOVRIL and wise cooks know that when a little BOVRIL GO-ZINTER leftovers and thrifty cuts, the meal is much improved in taste and goodness by the BOVRIL she PUT-ZINTER them.

When one is cold and tired, a cup of delicious beefy BOVRIL proves a real BUCKER-UPPER that is also a real PALATE-TICKLER that stimulates the flow of gastric juices and so helps digestion.

All these novel words indicate how wise it is to BOVRILIZE, because BOVRIL not only has a deliciously beefy flavour, but is a stimulating pick-me-up without harmful reaction of any sort.

BOVRIL is "COMFORT IN A CUP"

Rally Day, 1942

Sunday, Sept. 27th

Rally Day has been long established in most of the Protestant Sunday Schools of Canada and the United States. It is now observed as the introduction to Christian Education Week as sponsored in Canada by The Religious Education Council of Canada and in the United States by The International Council of Religious Education. It is recognized further as an item in the general religious movement known as The Christian Education Advance—a four-year programme sponsored by the same bodies and designed to improve attendance and the quality of teaching in Church Schools.

There are approximately one million persons now enrolled in the Protestant Sunday Schools of Canada and some twenty-two million on the North American continent. But attendance is irregular and there are as many children and young people outside of the Church Schools as there are inside.

The Christian Education Advance may become the greatest evangelistic movement our country has known. We have buildings and equipment, publications and organizations. Now what is needed above all else is people. There is no age limit in Church Schools. Teaching materials are provided for every age from the nursery class to adults. Parents, teachers, boys and girls everywhere can make a good beginning of the autumn season on Rally Day by planning to attend Sunday School regularly. Indeed the whole family can share in the activities of the Church School. It is a patriotic service to Canada. Christian education can quicken the soul of our nation and build strong character and high purpose into the life of our Dominion. Teach a generation of youth to worship blood and soil and you can have a ruthless totalitarian state. Teach a generation of youth the Christian way of life and you can have a nation of free people, capable of making democracy succeed. Christian education takes the policeman off the street corner and puts him in the heart.

Within two years Canada has produced a navy with a strength two-thirds as great as the peace-time British Navy. We found materials and men for that. Can we produce the creative energy to find the answer to a moral and spiritual emergency? Unquestionably we can if we are willing to try and keep at it.

Young Canadians on corvettes and motor torpedo boats disregard the weather. They steer through storms and face dangers. If we are dead in earnest about Christian Education the weather need not keep us home. The rural mail gets through every day. The Trans-Canada air-lines make 95 per cent of their scheduled trips. Sunday weather is seldom worse than week-day weather. We can take it.

Teachers are needed. The best teachers can find opportunity in this continent-wide co-operative project. It is expert work to guide the thinking, conduct and faith of growing persons, but in doing this teachers themselves will grow. Their experience will be enriched, their fellowship will be deepened and they can pass on to coming generations what they have received. It is the duty of one generation to educate the next but it is far more than a duty. It is our biggest opportunity of building the Kingdom of God on earth.

speed never seen before". He urged Canadian labor "to produce and keep on producing and to refrain from strikes calculated to injure the production of your country". The world needed national and international unity among the allied countries, the fullest concord and cooperation among them and among all classes of their people if victory is to be won.

An interesting and encouraging statement made by the American Trade Union Leader was that his organization had asked the American Federation of Labor - and he felt sure there would be an agreement - that machinery should be set by the two bodies for the duration to ensure amicable settlements of differences between them so that no jurisdictional dispute should cause the loss of a single hour of labor in vital war industries. He said that there were over 2,000 industry council boards, composed of representatives of labor and management operating in large war plants all over the United States. These boards aimed at stimulating efficiency and speed in the production of war materials, and Mr. Murray's account of the progress in American production was good to hear.

Our own national selective service is setting up advisory boards in several industries which will have similar functions for entire industries and which will also aid in preventing any undue dislocation where curtailment of production of certain products is required. At the same time the setting up of boards in individual plants is sure to be encouraged in this country. In the whole range of economic warfare there has developed a spirit of close cooperation between Canada and the United States which will mean a great deal in the effective prosecution of the war.

The gasoline ration for private cars will be reduced as October 1st, and everybody depending on oil fuel for heating this coming winter will do so at his own risk. This has been the direct warning from the minister of munitions and supply. It is apparent that the vagueness of reports on submarine warfare on this side of the ocean while keeping vital information from the enemy has also brought complacency to many gasoline users, and Mr. Howe by his straight forward statement on the oil situation has sought to put an end to this dangerous frame of mind. A new AA category for motorists is introduced, and when coupons are finished there will be no more gas until April 1st. Motor cars for personal transportation are entirely "out" for the duration in Great Britain and Eire and their use has been sharply curtailed in Australia and New Zealand. The thing that is strange is that pleas like that addressed by Mr. Howe to private car owners are necessary. The facts are surely enough.

The capital has been stirred by the exploit of H.M.C.S. Assiniboine which sank the submarine somewhere in the Atlantic. There have been other successes held back for military reasons. Whatever may be the toll taken by the U Boats the gigantic battle of the seas is far from being one sided, and Canadians take off their hats to the part being played by their own boats and crews in the great and vital task of keeping open the sea lanes.

Large fodder crops have helped to clear the way to success for the new agricultural program of the government. It is an expanded two year plan with its major objectives an uninterrupted supply of bacon and cheese to Great Britain. The new bacon agreement with Britain will probably call for 675,000,000 pounds compared with 600,000,000 in the year ending October 31. When Canadians, after living up to the request that they refrain from using pork in the next few weeks, have an adequate supply for domestic consumption, beef will be released for the American market. These shipments across the border will release beef from American markets for shipment to Britain. The department urges the breeding of sows and will encourage the feeding of cattle until they are at least three years old, and an increase in the number of beef cattle.

betes, and Louis Dublin, statistician of the Metropolitan Insurance Company, warn that the rise in diabetic death is real. While insulin has saved the lives of most diabetics under, and prolonged the lives of those over 45, it neither cures nor prevents diabetes. Sooner or later diabtes becomes complicated with other diseases such as pneumonia, cancer, hardening of the arteries, etc. Those who suffer from the disease are especially susceptible to gangrene.

Diabetes increases as the standard of living rises and food becomes more abundant. Large amounts of food — especially sugar — burden the pancreas, the organ which normally secrets insulin to burn up and store carbohydrates in the body. If the pancreas of a person with an inherited tendency towards diabetes is too hard-pressed, it may slow down and stop producing insulin.

In 1918 and 1919, when sugar was scarce and high in price, the U.S. death rate from diabetes took a downward turn. But the trend of sugar consumption alone does not parallel the diabetic death-rate. According to Dr. Robert Loeb of Columbia, "When overnutrition is abolished in a community, the incidence of diabetes is decreased."

Authorities consider the present death-rate from diabetes needlessly high. They state that many sufferers can forstall a diabetic death by following a scientifically correct diet — and offer as proof the fact that diabetic laymen die of the disease four times as often as diabetic doctors. Out of every 20 diabetics over 40 years old, 17 were over-weight before the appearance of the disease.—Times-Review, Fort Erie.

Success of New Loan Vital to War Effort States G. H. Lash

Director of Public Information Tells Weekly Editors of Unparalleled Peril Our Country is Now Facing—Urges Full Measure of Means and Labor If We Want Victory—Women Needed

One of the outstanding addresses heard at the 23rd annual convention of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association held recently at Saskatoon, was given by G. H. Lash, Director of Public Information, Ottawa. It contained so much food for thought that we are publishing the address at length in order that our readers may realize more fully the unparalleled peril of our country and that we must be prepared to lend every support, both financially and physically, if victory is to be ours.

Mr. Lash said, "Although I have failed to master the art of public speaking and I quake inwardly every time I face an audience, I am willing to face this ordeal today for several reasons.

This may be the last occasion during the war when your association will be able to foregather in this fashion. It is not unreasonable, I think, to venture the prediction that if this war continues for another year, very definite limitations may have to be imposed on railway travel in Canada and national gatherings such as this will become impossible. Since that may very well be the case, I hope you will give me your permission to speak frankly and earnestly some thoughts which are in my mind.

UNPARALLELED PERIL

The unparalleled peril which this country of ours now faces must be evident to most thinking people. The record of the United Nations is an almost unbroken series of defeats and if we are to be honest with ourselves we must accept the terrifying fact that we can lose this war. It would be folly to be less frank with ourselves than that. Yet evidence is lacking to support a full belief that there has been an acceptance of the harsh, inescapable realities of our position, in our minds and heart. There have been outward manifestations of a willingness to assume responsibilities and restrictions which have been imposed by regulation or law. But these are only passive acceptances of duty and they are not good. This spirit nowhere approaches that tremendous upsurge of public conscience and public will; that vast, white-hot national acknowledgment that nothing counts except victory which we must have in Canada if we are even to deserve victory. Surely freedom can't just be something which men only appreciate when they don't have to fight for it.

If we search for the reason why Canada has not yet found its full moral strength in this war, we may discover it in our seeming inability to distinguish between government and country. This difficulty exists and is aggravated by our lack of an adequate popular unifying symbol. In the United States when it is considered undesirable or inexpedient to have the political head of the nation issue an appeal, the words can always be put into the mouth of Uncle Sam, a symbol around which men of all political allegiances can rally. But in Canada we have no such common rallying point —not even a flag—and we suffer as a consequence. Perhaps some day we shall learn to wear the long pants of our sovereignty with dignity and correct these things. We may even be allowed to call ourselves Canadians. But that day is not now.

What we must face today is that ominous forces are on the march and if we are to turn them aside, we must close our ranks. These forces are not seeking the downfall of some particular political party. They are seeking the utter destruction of a way of life, your way of life, my way of life. This is not just our government's war. It is your war. It is my war. It is the war of every man, woman and child in Canada who has the slightest understanding of the value of freedom.

In a democracy such as this, governments are but the true reflections of ourselves and of our active interest in public affairs. Sometimes we get better, but never worse governments than we deserve. But be they good or bad, we, the people, cannot dodge or escape our personal and civic responsibilities by withholding our support of government because we may disagree with its policies, deplore its acts or dislike its personnel. To shirk our duty in this way is a mark of bad citizenship and, in war time, of treason against the nation. Democracy has given us the remedy with which to cure the ills of government when they exist and if we are sincere in our complaint against government we can use that remedy. But let us be sure that we use it wisely and in good faith to the greatest good of the greatest number. Let us weigh the issues well before we act and not be influenced by the mouthings of those who wish to use us as pawns in the service of some selfish purpose.

Never has it been so necessary as now that we attain to the highest understanding and performance of the dignity and duty of citizenship. Our country stands in the path of immediate and dreadful peril and our country's needs demand that we shall serve her without thought of ourselves or of our interests. The role most of us are being asked to play is not heroic, but it is hard, and exacting. It will be proved soon whether our professions of patriotism are platitudes falling from our lips or prayers rising from our hearts. This role will express itself in many ways but I shall mention only two.

We have just seen parliament pass the heaviest budget in our history and through income taxes, compulsory loans and temporary confiscation of excess profits, demand that we contribute to the winning of the war, a far greater share of our wages and earnings than we had ever dreamed could happen here. But these sources of income, added to the increased sale and luxury taxes and the normal channels of revenue will produce not more than one half of the money which must be found to fight our share of the war in the next year.

MUST RAISE $1,200,000,000

Where must the rest of the money come from? It must come from your pocket and mine. It can be found nowhere else. Not only must all of us who have been buying bonds and certificates, maintain the volume of these purchases, we must increase them, despite the higher income taxes and the compulsory loans. To our numbers there must be added the hundreds of thousands of our fellow citizens who, so far, have bought no bonds at all. Within the past twelve calendar months this country has raised some $1,800,000,000 by sale of bonds and conversions. Less than one half of that sum was provided by the public. Within the next 12 months, the men and women of Canada—and that means you and me—must find somehow $1,200,000,000 to invest in bonds for freedom and that sum is over and above what we must contribute through compulsory loans.

Can we do it? The answer to that is simple. We can because we have the means.

NOT SACRIFICE

Sacrifices? Do not let us prostitute the nobility and the beauty of that word. Sacrifice is a reverent, God-given word reserved for the men and women who have made a freewill offering of their lives upon the altar of freedom; for the children of China who have died by thousands beneath their unprotected skies; for the hostages of France; for those who lie in the long common graves of Coventry and for the gaunt, grey figures searching the gutters of Athens for a scrap to eat. Who are we, in this lush and lavish land to prate of sacrifice because we may have to go without a new coat this winter; give up membership in a club or two; eat less expensive meals; cut down on our liquor; walk instead of ride to work; move to a cheaper appartment; humble our pride by taking in boarders; labor a little harder ourselves to save acquiring extra help? If these things be sacrifice then what is this hallowed thing which others are doing upon the battle fronts of the world where our fight is being fought so that this land may remain unspoiled?

The price tag upon freedom is for whatever sum the people who desire freedom want to set. In this country this year it is merely a voluntary willing reduction of our standard of living to the lowest level of the prewar depression years. Is that too high a price for Canadians to pay for freedom? In cold cash is it not as high as the tribute which the people of conquered France must pay this year to keep themselves in slavery.

The answer will be given in October. I hope and pray that to the glory of this nation, to the memory of our sons who have fallen and to the honor of those who still must die before this war is won, the people of Canada will say, no matter what the price of freedom be, we shall pay it.

MAN POWER PROBLEM

Equal in urgency to the financing of the war is our man power problem and when I speak of manpower I include womanpower also. Frankly, at the moment, there exist sharp, contrasting opinions upon the size of the pool available. But despite these differences of view, one fact emerges clearly and it is that no matter how large or small our reserves of manpower may be, they will have to be used with the utmost intelligence and discretion if our war labor requirements are to be met.

This is a country in which the right of each citizen to find labor worthy of his hire has long been recognized. That is a policy to which the government will adhere as long as it can but it can only be maintained if the full, free co-operation of the men and women of Canada in the prosecution of the war is forthcoming. Without such support the government will have no option but to apply measures less agreeable.

There is no gainsaying the fact that to provide the necessary measure of support, some of those who are now gainfully employed and some who are not, will be required to accept voluntarily some dislocations of home life and other inconveniences. This is inevitable, of course, if key men and women are to be placed in industries where their services are most badly needed, because it may require that they move to points some considerable distance from their normal places of residence. But is this asking any more of these men and women than is being asked of those men and women who enlist in the armed forces? In the case of women who are mothers of children of school age or under, the problem is further complicated but it, like all our industrial and economic problems, can be solved if those concerned develop a high sense of citizenship which, in wartime especially, entails a willingness for unselfish service in the best interests of the state.

Does such a high sense of citizenship prevail? I am sorry to say there is much evidence to indicate that it does not. Despite the prodigious feats which the workers of this country have performed—and do not let us belittle that fine effort —industry is plagued with absenteeism, unnecessarily large turn-overs in staff and other ills which a well developed sense of duty to the state in wartime would have prevented and which have caused our production figures in some industries to fall below what they might and should have been. Not in all instances has this condition been due to labour. We still have employers in this country who have failed to adjust their labour viewpoint to the modern trend and whose troubles, consequently, are entirely of their own making.

WOMEN DENOUNCED

It is regrettable but nevertheless true that within the category of those who are insensible of their wartime duty to the nation, are being added many women. This might be understandable if these women had been without those educational and cultural advantages which are supposed to develop a keen awarness of personal and public responsibility. It is not understandable and it is not forgiveable when, as is the lamentable fact, is most apparent among that class of women who by instinct and background, should appreciate most sincerely the honor and privilege most sincerely the honor and privilege of serving their country in any way an opportunity to do so affords. The women of whom I speak are those who when offered jobs in vital war industry, refuse to consider them unless they are jobs at which they will not soil their hands or in which they will be placed in authority over others. National Selective Service officers from whom I get this information, tell me that this condition is becoming more pronounced daily, especially in the highly industrialized sections of Eastern Canada. I am glad to say that they report an almost complete absence of such snobbery west of the Great Lakes.

PRAISES WEEKLY PRESS

These few and perhaps bitter facts I lay before you today because as editors of the best-read and most intimate newspapers from coast to coast, you can with your leadership help to correct them. I am not among those who expect the impossible but I have seen many evidences these past three years of your courage and your loyalty. Those who are inclined to smile at the home-spun news you publish, know little of the power you wield and of the respect there is for your opinions in the minds of your million and a half subscribers. It may surprise them—indeed it may surprise you—to know that many national movements of importance in this country since war broke out began in the weekly newspapers of Canada. Often yours was the first small voice crying in the wilderness of apathy, to keep on crying until other stronger, louder voices swelled it to a symphony. You have not always won the battles you began but you have battled well and vigorously and with honor to the fourth estate.

Do not, I beg of you, underestimate the prestige and the power of your leadership, or your opportunities to exercise it. Never did your fellow citizens need your guidance more than they need it now. Give it to them, then, in honest simple language that everyone can understand, with all the insight, courage and wisdom you can marshall. Nail these words to your masthead and keep them there until we have won this war.

No Canadian deserves victory who is unwilling to give to victory the same full measure of his means and labour which he will be forced to give to the enemy in defeat.

Railway Blood Donors Generous Contributors

Throughout the Canadian National Railways system workers in the motive power and car shops have been generous in their contributions of blood to the Red Cross. All shops have been organized on a systematic basis and the roll of honour includes men who have given as many as five blood donations. In the Montreal shops and stores twenty-four men give blood donations each week and during a six months period 290 of these men have given 615 donations. Of the total, 209 men have given two donations, and 116 have received Red Cross service buttons signifying that the holder has given three blood donations.

"Either we are going to inflict hardship on our people, who must use less fuel this winter, or some of our war factories will have to close down," he said.

BELGIAN CHILDREN DERIDE "MASTERS"

London.—Belgian school children are publishing secret anti-Nazi newspapers, it was disclosed here by one of them, Peter, 12, who has just escaped from Brussels to join his father, a Belgian officer. "We copy funny stories about the Germans in our newspaper, which our class has called 'Le Boche'," Peter said. "Only three childrn in our school are on the wrong side." Peter doubled his fist by way of explaining what happens if they don't keep quiet.

NOTICE

To Farmers in the Huntingdon Chateauguay and Beauharnois District.

The Ste. Martine Co-operative Agricultural Society wishes to notify the farmers in the district of Huntingdon, Chateauguay and Beauharnois, that ground limestone will be plentiful at the lime quarry at Caughnawaga any time after October 1st, 1942.

The price of the limestone this year will be $1.50 per ton, payable in cash at the quarry at Caughnawaga.

The Quebec Department of Agriculture will pay, as usual, the transportation charges for the hauling of the lime from the quarry to the farmer within a radius of 25 miles from the lime quarry, or, up to a maximum amount of $1.25 per ton for hauling the lime.

Farmers are urged to buy their lime NOW and avoid the fall rush and the fall rains.

Lime is easier to spread and gives better results when applied BEFORE ploughing.

Maple Leaf Grange Notes

Visitors from Fort Covington at the Maple Leaf Grange last week were Mr. A. G. Larabee, Chairman Pomona Executive, Mrs. Larabee, Mrs. Loney and Mrs. Margaret Storm. Ft. Covington Grange members hope to put on an entertaining programme at Maple Leaf in the near future and Mr. Larabee cordially invited all who could to attend the next session of Pomona Grange at Fort Covington in November.

The Junior Degree Team composed of eighteen young members, under the direction of Mrs. Cameron Stewart, put on the first and second degrees, initiating eight new members: Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Stark, Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Caza, Andrew McFarlane, Misses Helen McFarlane, Hattie Shearer and Gilberta Stark.

The Master, Fred Donnelly, praised the splendid work of the degree team which was seconded by hearty applause.

Salvage Collection

Mr. Donnelly read a long list of contributors to the Salvage Drive and estimated that there were now ten tons of scrap iron, rubber, paper and miscellaneous material ready for shipment. He requested that any person still having waste material to dispose of should get in touch with him as it is the intention of the Grange to maintain the service as long as necessary.

The Lecturer, Mrs. W. L. Carr, announced that the speakers invited for Booster Night include Captain Brace, Medical Officer at Chateauguay Barracks, Captain Stewart, Chaplain, Mrs. H. R. Clouston, President of Ladies' Auxiliary of the Veterans' Association at Huntingdon, Rev. Father Garnsey, of Burke, N.Y., Captain Cecile Bouchard, of C.W.A.C.

At Pomona Grange, Dickensen Centre, those attending from Maple Leaf Grange were: Master, Fred Donnelly; Lecturer, Mrs. W. L. Carr; Steward, Andrew Elder and Miss Hattie Coffey.

Officers elected for two years: Worthy Master, Jarvis, re-elected; Worthy Overseer, Fred Donnelly; Worthy Steward, E. Aiken; Lecturer, Madeline Fallon, Westville; Chaplain, Mrs. F. King, Malone; Gatekeeper, Mr. Jas. Tuggey; Ass't Steward and Lady Ass't, Mr. and Mrs. Bombard, Burke; Ceres, Mrs. W. L. Carr; Secretary, Flora, Pomona, re-elected; Mr. Fay Hapgood re-elected State Deputy; Mr. Fred Donnelly elected delegate to State Grange.

Resolution re passports. Letter from Clarence C. Culver.

Congressman reported that visas could be waived for a group visiting U.S. provided a letter listing the persons by name was received two weeks in advance from Canadian authorities. No other relaxation will be recognized. Restrictions now existing are those imposed by Canadian Government.

There were ten entries in the Bread Baking contest, Mrs. Brady of Malone taking first prize. A number of prizes donated by Malone merchants were distributed, every contestant receiving at least two. Interest was maintained at a high point through the clever manner in which Mrs. Slack, Chairman of Hospitality Committee, conducted the distribution.

Mrs. W. L. Carr representing Maple Leaf, drew along with the others, and received a white and brown hand-bag. Because she was from the "baby grange now growing by leaps and bounds" Mrs. Slack presented a cameo pin.

Mrs. Brady, as first on the list, will compete at the State Grange in Syracuse.

The State Chaplain gave a fine address on the place of the Grange in maintaining morale in war time.

A patriotic pageant by Westville Grange, songs and readings entertained the large audience from all parts of the country.

Newly elected officers will be installed at the next Pomona meeting to be held in November at Fort Covington.

Powerful Locomotives Haul Heavy Trains

New locomotives of the 6200 class added to Canadian National Railways motive power equipment during this year are proving successful in performing the tasks for which they were designed. Engines of the 6200 family repeatedly haul freight trains weighing more than 6,000 tons. They are especially useful in moving large consignments of munitions and supplies towards seaports.
