5,000 Acres of Tea Field Bogs In County May be Utilized For Manufacture of Peat-fuel

Growth at Ste. Barbe is Mainly Sphagnum Moss With Other Peat Bog Plants, Low Bush—Eastern Canada Supply Could Meet the Requirements of the American Continent For a Long Time to Come—Usefulness of Peat Moss

Resources of high grade peat moss that "could supply the American Continent with its requirements for a long time to come" are available in deposits in Eastern Canada, states a report by the Bureau of Mines, Ottawa, in which the results of recent investigations in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces are presented. One of the largest deposits, the Eel River bog in Northumberland County, New Brunswick, has been estimated to contain 21,000,000 tons of the material, a tonnage sufficient to supply the current demand of both Canada and the United States for more than 300 years.

Mr. H. A. Leverin, chemical engineer with the Department of Mines and Resources at Ottawa carried out investigations in eight sections of Quebec during the summer of 1940. In making his report, Mr. Leverin stated that time did not permit making a complete survey of the deposits of peat moss in the Province of Quebec. Only a few conveniently placed bogs were visited while travelling from Ottawa to the Maritime Provinces and back. Those deposits visited were mostly on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River, in Huntingdon County, at Ste. Barbe, Sherbrooke, Kamouraska and Temiscouata. Large deposits have been reported on the north shore of the St. Lawrence River and are said to contain a high grade peat moss.

Large Tea Field and Small Tea Field Bogs

These bogs are about two miles north of the town of Huntingdon in Huntingdon County. They are large bogs of over 5,000 acres. The growth is mainly sphagnum moss with other peat bog plants, low bush, Labrador tea and eriophorum. Since the building of the large drainage canal between Logan River to St. Louis River, which skirts both bogs, they have become very dry and the top moss has almost entirely disappeared. The small tamarac and spruce of 15 years ago have been succeeded by thick growths of birch and poplar.

About 300 acres of bog has been reclaimed by this drainage for agricultural land, and large crops of oats, barley and buckwheat are grown. The bogs may be utilized for the manufacture of peat-fuel.

Of the few deposits of peat moss in Quebec so far examined, some have proved to be large and of good quality peat moss. Their development for the production of processed peat moss has been greater in the Province of Quebec than in any other province in the Dominion. Four plants are in operation, one of them with the most modern equipment producing a non-dusting moss. The production for 1940 is estimated at 92,000 standard bales, which is below the average capacity owing to the unseasonable weather, which so delayed the drying that part of the season's cut had to be left to next year for further drying. The total amount of sods cut in Quebec in 1940 is estimated at 7,000 tons, calculated on an air-dried basis, which would correspond to about 140,000 standard bales.

Two Modern Plants Built

Although two modern plants were built in Canada in 1940, it is surprising, the report states, that a greater development has not taken place in the Canadian deposits of peat moss, the two main reasons suggested for this lack of development being the expectation of keen competition from European countries after the war and high freight rates. Owing to the war the importation of peat moss from Europe has ceased and an appreciable market has thus been opened up for Canadian export to the United States as well as for domestic consumption. Prices have been rising and conditions appear favorable for the Canadian industry to capture a market and to become well established before the end of hostilities so as to meet any likely competition from European exporters.

Use of peat moss in the United States has been increasing steadily, the imports into that country in 1938 amounting to 62,000 tons as compared with only 5,000 tons in 1924, and it is felt that this increase is likely to continue with a greater appreciation of the usefulness of the commodity. Most of the deposits in Eastern Canada described in the present and in an earlier report are situated near or on railways and good roads and many of them are within easy access of deep sea harbors. These latter should have an advantage over those in Europe for shipment by all-water route to markets on the Atlantic Coast and the Great Lakes without having to re-load.

Peat moss owes its usefulness to its high absorptive capacity, permanency of composition, and low conductivity of heat. It is an efficient soil conditioner and is used chiefly in horticulture and market gardening. Among its other uses are as a packing for fruit and vegetables; for keeping down the waste of foodstuffs through decay; and as an insulating material in the building trades. Sphagnum peat moss, especially when mixed with fibrous cotton-grass peat specially treated, makes an efficient surgical dressing.

JUMPS BORDER AT TROUT RIVER, GETS THIRD PRISON TERM

George Albert McGovern, 40, of Montreal, P.Q., was given his third two-year penitentiary sentence in federal court at Malone on Thursday afternoon — the longest term imposed during the session by Judge Grover Moscowitz.

McGovern pleaded guilty to illegal entry from Canada in the vicinity of Trout River, the same charge upon which he had been given two-year sentences in 1937 and 1939.

"If you keep this up you will be spending the remainder of your life in prison here," Judge Moscowitz told the defendant. "There is nothing I can do but sentence you to two years."

McGovern will serve the time in a federal penitentiary to be designated by the attorney general.

Mayoh's Rink Wins in Mixed Bowling Event

Valleyfield and Ormstown Well Represented At Huntingdon Bowling Tournament

On Saturday afternoon a most enjoyable mixed bowling tournament took place on the Huntingdon Bowling Green. Twenty-two bowlers from Valleyfield, seven from Ormstown and the balance of the 48 players who participated were from the Huntingdon Club. The ladies and men of the three clubs were drawn for mixed rinks and at 4 p.m. the first game was played. At supper time the entire party adjourned to the United Church where a delicious supper was served. Following the supper expressions of appreciation were voiced by visitors from Ormstown and Valleyfield. Mr. Mayoh, Valleyfield, extended an invitation to bowlers from Ormstown and Huntingdon to visit Valleyfield in the evenings when mixed tournaments might be arranged. The suggestion met with acceptance by members from both clubs.

During the evening two more games were played and at the end of the 32 ends of bowling it was found that the rink skipped by Mr. Chris. Mayoh, Valleyfield, had won all three games with a plus 19 score. The players of this rink were: Mrs. Proctor, Valleyfield, lead, Rev. T. Knowles, 2nd, and Mrs. A. Fawcett, Huntingdon 3rd with Mr. Mayoh as skip. The runners-up also won all three games and had a plus 18 score. This rink was skipped by Mr. W. Grant, Huntingdon, with Mrs. Presho, 3rd, S. Cooke, 2nd and Mrs. Ogden, lead; all three of Valleyfield. The consolation prize went to Mr. Gerald Potter, Valleyfield, who lost two games and won a tie game with Wm. Finlayson, Ormstown, in the first round. Mr. Potter's teammates were: Mr. J. Hunter, Ormstown, as 3rd, Mr. J. R. Fox 2nd and Mrs. J. Holmes, both of Huntingdon.

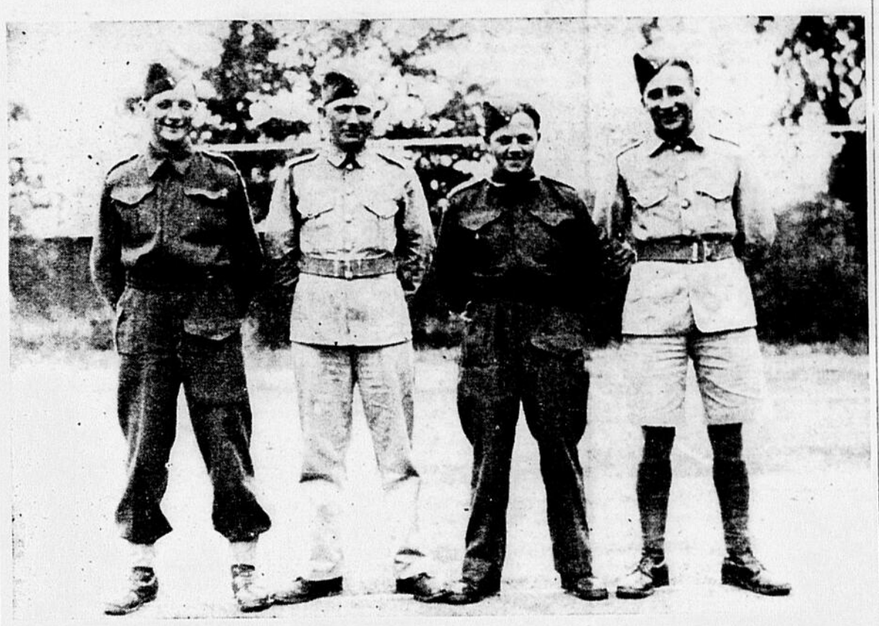

The teams and results in the tournament were as follows:

HOW TO SAVE ON GASOLINE AND OIL

Here are the 17 ways by which gasoline and oil can be saved, as offered by advisers of the Oil Controller, G. R. Cottrelle:

1. Reduce driving speed from 60 to 40 miles per hour on the open road.
2. Avoid "jackrabbit" starts.
3. Avoid useless or non-essential driving.
4. Turn off the motor of your car when not in use; do not leave it idling.

6. Don't strain your engine, change gears.
7. Keep carburetor cleaned and properly adjusted.
8. Tune up motor, timing, etc.
9. Keep spark plugs and valves clean.
10. Check cooling system—overheating wastes gasoline.
11. Maintain tires at right presssure.
12. Lubricate efficiently, worn engines waste gasoline.
13. Drive in groups to and from work, using cars on alternate days.
14. For golf, picnics and other outings, use one car instead of several.

STEPS TAKEN FOR RATIONING OIL AND GASOLINE

Following are the steps taken to meet the appeal of Oil Controller G. R. Cottrelle in regards to the rationing of gasoline and oil:

1. Prohibition of sales, distribution and delivery of gasoline from 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. week-days, and from 7 p.m. Saturday to 7 a.m. Monday for week-ends.

2. An increase of one cent a gallon in the price of gasoline and other "white" products of petroleum, including kerosene and distillates used in tractors, effective today.

3. Prohibition of the use of credit cards, putting gasoline and oil sales on the cash-and-carry basis, and restricting sales to private consumers to retail stations only.

Campaign Planned To Educate Public

4. Initiation of a national campaign urging users to cut down drastically on pleasure use of motor cars, and explaining 17 ways by which motor fuel may be conserved by care in driving and handling cars.

Regulations governing hours of sale, use of credit cards and restriction of private sales to licensed retailers became effective as soon as the necessary Order-in-Council was passed and published.

BLAST VICTIMS SAVED BY RECRUITS' BLOOD; AWARDED MEDALS

Twenty recruits attending the military camp at Valleyfield will be awarded special medals of appreciation for their voluntary donation of blood for transfusion purposes, saving the lives of two men recently critically injured in an explosion. The injured men were employees of Quebec Distillers Inc., and were badly burned in an explosion at the Valleyfield plant of the company. The 20 young recruits were given permission to come to Montreal and to give the transfusions.

The medals will be presented by officials of the Province of Quebec Safety League on Friday in the presence of Lieut.-Col. J. R. Duhault, officer commanding the camp, and other officers and men of the various regiments in Valleyfield.

Responsibility Of Leadership Needed Today

Rev. Lindley Addresses Brotherhood of St. Paul's United Church at Ormstown

The annual lawn social sponsored by the Brotherhood of St. Paul's United Church at Ormstown, and held on the manse lawn last Wednesday evening, was well attended. Mr. Adam McNeil, president of the Brotherhood, in his usual capable manner, acted as chairman of the evening.

The Ormstown Junior Boys' Band was in attendance, and the selections which they rendered did much to add appreciated variety to the program. Other numbers were a solo by Miss Elizabeth Stubbs, a duet by the Misses Betty and Hazel Taylor, solos by Mr. Mac Ruddock, recitations by Mr. George McArthur, a duet by the Misses Mary Winter and Eleanor Moe, and last but by no means least, an address by Rev. Lindley of Dundee.

Giving leadership to the world and how one can obtain it, may be termed the nucleus of the guest speaker's address. Rev. Lindley stressed the point that leadership of the right kind is needed in the world today as never before. The responsibility of attaining it was laid to the individual. "We realize that we have to get underneath . . . into the life, the heart of the individual, before we can hope to have this world or make it a decent place to live in."

There are some who argue that the world's trouble lies within our political governments, but Mr. Lindley is of the opinion, and in no uncertain terms, that our trouble lies in the fact that we have permitted the lower lights of God to become extinguished. They are still there but the manner in which we are applying them proves that we are letting them go out, maintained the guest speaker. To those who can be heard from time to time arguing that the world has too much religion, Mr. Lindley told his listeners to ask them if it was possible to have too much of the religion of Jesus Christ. He was of the opinion that such could not be possible. Indeed, he stated that he firmly believes that the solution of the world's problems lies in the extent in which we, as individuals, are prepared to accept and put into practice the teachings of the spirit of our Saviour. In conclusion, Rev. Lindley made an earnest plea for everyone to accept the spirit of Jesus Christ, and to put into practise his teachings.

Ormstown School Fair September 6th

Ormstown W.I. Gather At Dewittville—Public Speaking Contest Open To All Pupils

The regular monthly meeting of the Ormstown W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Ken Pearce, Dewittville, on July 9, with 30 members and eight visitors present. The roll call was answered by a suggestion for "favorite prizes for children."

Mrs. Rogers and Mrs. McIntyre moved and seconded respectively the motion authorizing the treasurer to forward $24.35, the proceeds of the card party given on June 26, to the Queen's Canadian Fund.

A talk on "Farm Grown Gas and Oil" was given by Mrs. Archie Marshall. Mrs. Pearce gave the last of her series on the course which she attended at Macdonald College. The subject was "Nourishing Meals at Moderate Cost." Mrs. Frank Martin gave a paper on the "Tourist Trade," while Mrs. George Murphy read an article entitled, "Do Rural People Use Enough Milk?"

The question of the garden party which is to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Elder was left over for further discussion until the next meeting.

Mrs. Stalker, convenor of School Fairs, brought the matter up for discussion. It was decided to hold the annual School Fair on September 6. The question of keeping the pupils amused during the judging period was also discussed. Mrs. Martin Fisher offered a $2.00 prize for a public speaking contest which is to be open to all pupils from grades one to eight. This kind offer was accepted.

Non-essential Use of Gasoline Reduced 50 Per Cent; Cottrelle Authorizes One-cent Raise

Voluntary Co-operation of Citizens Sought to Attain End—Credit Cards Banned, Retailing Right Restricted—120,000,000 Gallons a Year or $36,000,000 Would be Saved—Motorists Are Generally Wasteful of Gasoline

Oil Controller J. B. Cottrelle, at Ottawa, announced on Tuesday morning that the consumption of gas and oil will be rationed everywhere in Canada as soon as official notification has appeared in the Official Gazette. This new regulation will become law this evening.

Gas stations will close daily at 7 p.m and will not re-open, under any consideration whatsoever, until 7 a.m. the following morning. Sale of gas and oil on Sunday is also prohibited by the new law. Another item of interest which was announced at Ottawa on Tuesday was that which dealt with another increase in the sale of gas. Controller Cottrelle stated that gas would be raised one cent per gallon for either high or low test gasoline. These prices will also become effective tonight.

Transportation difficulties resulting from United States ships being pressed into war services, was given as one reason for making rationing a reality. There is no shortage of gasoline, it was stated at Ottawa.

Officials say that the gasoline problem in Canada has two main phases—transportation and foreign exchange. Britain's need for more oil tankers is increasing the transportation troubles.

Crude that used to come from South America by tanker is now coming in increasing extent from United States fields, where prices have been sharply raised. The result is that Canadians are now paying from 13 to 22 cents more a barrel.

To relieve tankers of the long haul to Montreal a pipeline connection with the United States is now projected and preliminary work has been done. It would cost around $8,000,000 but would free all oil tankers now coming to Montreal. It will be used cooperatively by all companies.

Gasoline-less Sundays and increase in gasoline prices are expected to have the desired effect in reducing consumption until such a time as transportation difficulties are overcome.

One garage operator in Huntingdon was reluctant about expressing opinions on the matter. He stated, however, that the new law would cause some confusion for the first few weeks but that people would just have to get used to it and make the necessary plans for night-less and Sunday-less gas times. Naturally, it was stated, the consumption will be greatly diminished, especially if motorists will head the timely suggestions made by Oil Controller Cottrelle.

Controller Cottrelle explained that consumption could be greatly reduced if motorists wanted to cooperate with the federal authorities on this matter. For example, instead of one man riding to work in his car, arrangements could be made to have at least four accompany him, depending on the type of car. Driving at reckless speed should also be curtailed. Motorists should not drive a car over forty miles per hour unless in case of emergencies. Driving at a high clip in second gear and leaving the car in motion while talking on the streets or with neighbours should also be abandoned. Using a car to go short distances should be abolished and citizens should walk to their destination or use the street cars, where such are available.

The Travel Bureau at Ottawa announced on Tuesday that American tourists who are spending the summer months in Canada would be immediately notified of the new developments in the gas and oil situation so that they will not encounter any difficulties should they desire to travel nights or Sundays. A special campaign will be made in the United States in an effort to retain the great influx of American tourists who visit the Dominion yearly, especially during the summer months.

Low Test gasoline in Canada sells at about 31 cents per gallon now and it will be increased to 32 cents as soon as the new regulation comes in effect. High test gas will sell at about 34 cents per gallon. No mention has yet been made whether increases would be made immediately in the price of oil.

It was announced that many oil tankers have been sunk during the past months by German submarines and the new regulation would help Canada to use some of the tankers at their disposal with the reduction in consumption of oil and gas. Tankers would be available for transportation of these commodities overseas instead of doing such work in Canada.

Experience in war savings campaigns, loan drives and campaigns for war charities indicates that Canadian patriotism will quickly respond to this need. With gasoline rationing now in force, motorists should make economy in driving the patriotic thing to do, and the desired results will come with much less trouble and expense than would be entailed in any other measure.

Most motorists will admit that they are wasteful of gasoline. They

Bathing By-law Not Observed At St. Anicet

Council Ask Co-operation of Provincial Authorities —Repairs Warranted on Leahy Road

The members of the St. Anicet Council passed a resolution at their regular monthly meeting on Monday, July 7th, asking the Provincial authorities to cooperate with the municipality in having by-law No. 93 more strictly observed in St. Anicet. There is a small group of persons who fail to obey the law despite the fact that signs are erected at different sections in the parish.

The account of Albert Leblanc, Valleyfield, amounting to $7 for legal advice in the Dineen-Leahy case was ordered transferred to the P. J. Dineen account.

Mr. Jean Bastien, road engineer will be asked to rebuild the fence as requested by Mr. Joseph Donahue. The resolution adopted at the last regular meeting in regards the agreement act on the Casey water course was resiliated due to certain legal technicalities which were not fulfilled.

The secretary-treasurer was authorized to notify Romeo St-Onge, special officer on the Casey watercourse, that no work should be done until such a time as the agreement has again been adopted.

The request of Mrs. Norman Kerr, who sought damages from the Council, was rejected. A circular letter issued by the Provincial authorities regarding pensions to the blind, needy mothers and old age pension was read. No alterations were made.

A letter from Ludger Codebecq, K.C., was read and tabled. The Minister of Public Roads will be asked to repair the Leahy road where some 1175 feet of gravelling is needed.

BEWARE OF POISON IVY, ESPECIALLY DURING VACATIONS

Poison ivy can give off its poison any time in the year, but during the present holiday season citizens are warned especially to beware as more come in contact with the plant.

The plant is recognized by the following indications: Each leaf is divided into three leaflets; the leaves are glossy looking, the edges vary from smooth to slightly notched appearance; the plant is generally found growing to a height of 12 to 15 inches. The poison is a milky oily sap, very slow to evaporate. Anyone coming in contact with the plant should immediately lather his whole body with good soap and hot water, rinse and repeat, according to hints provided by the Province of Quebec Safety League. Delayed treatment with various lotions may provide relief but not a cure, as the poison, if left on, has a chance to work into the skin and raise blisters.

A Premier Livestock Sale is Coming

MESSRS. R. R. Ness & Sons, Howick, are to stage another outstanding Ayrshire livestock sale on Saturday, August 2nd. For several years Burnside Farm has been the scene of Ayrshire cattle sales that have materially helped build up the good name of R. R. Ness & Sons, and in so doing gave the Chateauguay Valley prominence as a livestock breeding centre. This year, Messrs. Ness are cataloguing 40 animals for sale. The catalogue is now in the process of being printed and will be mailed out to potential buyers within a very few days time.

R. R. Ness & Sons have long been noted as showmen of superior Ayrshire cattle, this enviable reputation has been extended and they are now regarded as a firm who sponsor reduction livestock sales, not composed of the animals that are poor but made up of animals that will score a name for themselves and be of distinct credit to the prospective owners. These annual sales find around 40 head listed for sale, but one must bear in mind that amongst the Ness herds on their several farms they have approximately 300 head of cattle. It is natural that the annual crop of potential heifers and bulls bred from such outstanding livestock as is to be found in their stables, is of the finest type and with production qualities.

This annual sale affords an opportunity to our livestock men to acquire a good Ayrshire at a price they feel disposed to offer at the sale. Unfortunately for our farmers and the Chateauguay Valley at large, too many of the Ness quality Ayrshires have been purchased by outside buyers, but had a greater number been bought by district breeders our Chateauguay Valley herds might today be rated higher than is actually the case. That the dairyman is going to receive better prices for his dairy produce appears most certain. It is already recognized that labour is not going to be obtained with ease, but it costs no more to care for a good animal than an ordinary beast, so why not own the best you can afford and make the greatest amount of profit for the manual effort put forth to care for the animal. It is to be hoped much of the livestock offered at Burnside Sale on August 2nd will find new homes in the Chateauguay Valley. If such proves to be the case our community will quite likely gain more prestige as a livestock centre in the way of rearing quality Ayrshire cattle.

Mr. King is Right

THE furore over the shipment of a comparatively small amount of wheat to Japan leaves us a little cold. The matter was brought up in the House of Commons in order to embarrass the King Government by some of the very people who have been deploring political activities of Government in time of war.

Few people like Japan at this moment. But because there are good reasons why Britain and her Allies should not at the moment declare war on Japan, there are equally good reasons why Canada should not treat Japan in such a way as to cause her forthwith to declare war on us. After all, wheat can only be eaten; it is not a material which can be turned into guns. When more formidable enemies have been disposed of will be time enough for Canada actively to incite Japan to attack us.

Mr. King is Wrong

IN AN address to the annual meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, the Minister of National Defence urged the assembled industrialists to release men of military age from employment when they could be spared and replace them with women and older men. On the same day, the Prime Minister, speaking at a ceremony in Ottawa, made an appeal to young men to enlist now. Also on the same day, Joseph T. Thorson, K.C., was sworn in as Minister of National War Services, succeeding in that position Hon. J. G. Gardiner who will now devote his full time to the Department of Agriculture.

The three events are not unconnected. If the national registration of last year had been of real use, the Government would now have in its possession valuable data about every man of military age in Canada, from which it could decide whether he could best serve his country at the job he is now doing, at another job or in the King's uniform. National registration was the first important task of the Minister of National War Services.

It hardly seems fair to ask manufacturers engaged on war work to shoulder the difficult responsibility of deciding which of their workers should be sent into the fighting services and which should be retained. It would be obviously unwise to dismiss a highly-skilled worker, but what is an employer to decide about the semi-skilled workers who are improving in efficiency daily? Will scrapping the results of their months of training and starting afresh with a group of green hands assist the war effort? Decision on this point should be a matter of government policy?

Should an employer be asked to decide whether a young man should go who may perhaps have personal or family reasons for not going? Should not the government shoulder the responsibility of this decision? In other words, is not conscription the fairest means of filling the ranks? Many a young man, now in doubt, would like the question decided for him. When Ottawa dodges the issue, not too much blame can be attached to the young man.

A few weeks ago Mr. King told a group of United States newspaper women in Ottawa that there would be no 'coercion" of young men to fill the ranks of the active forces. What he may have meant—with due recognition of his political skill in phrasing sentences to conceal meaning—was that there would be no direct coercion of the young men by the government if employers would take over the task.

There are probably thousands of men in Canada over military age or otherwise ineligible for active service who would welcome the opportunity of doing full-time or part-time war work if this would release younger men for the army, navy or air force. If the younger men are to be taken from industry without impairing industrial efficiency, the new Minister of National War Services cannot too soon begin a recruiting drive among these older men. It might also be suggested that, before the Department of National Defence begins combing the factories for recruits, it should look carefully through the Government's own personnel records. Are all the civil service positions held by men ineligible for active service? Is the erection of the Montreal terminal so necessary to the conduct of the war that those employed on it could not be used more advantageously elsewhere? If the Government should embark on the St. Lawrence Seaway project, can it secure the necessary manpower without taking the recruits that Colonel Ralston wants?

These questions are asked, not to embarrass the Government, but to indicate the need of a co-ordinated policy for the government departments. A system of priorities has already been set up for several essential war materials. A system of priorities for our human resources would now seem to be in order.

Words

WORDS may mean much or little, everything or nothing. It depends entirely on whose words they are, or upon the person who utters them.

Take the words of Hitler, for instance. Do they mean anything to any person in any country outside of Germany? And, if the truth were known, how much do his words mean to thousands of people in his own country?

Here are some of Hitler's words uttered less than two short years ago, which illustrate the point, if any illustration is needed by the world at large.

Speaking before the German Parliament on September 1, 1939, Hitler said:

"Germany does not intend to export its doctrine to Russia. I see no reason that we ever again will take stand against one another. We both realize this, that every fight of our peoples against one another would be advantageous only for others. We, therefore, agree to conduct a pact which excludes for all the future any application of force between us . . . Any attempt of the West to alter this will fail. I would like to assure here that this political decision means a tremendous change for the future and that it will be conclusive."

In a broadcast to the German people on September 4th, just three days later, he uttered this statement:

"The non-aggression consultation pact with Soviet Russia gives us assurance of a policy of peaceful agreement with this greatest Empire of the East."

And still some other words that flowed from Hitler in an address to the people of Danzig on September 19, 1939:

"We have the will to carry on and to represent our interests alone, but we have found that the two greatest peoples of the earth can do better if they co-operate. We shall be extremely happy to tell the British that there is no desire for Germany to extend itself to the Ural Mountains. Now, Gentlemen of England, the German aims are very well defined and are limited. The nightmares of the British statesmen now can be calm because Germany has no intentions on the Ukrainian territory."

Perhaps it was because he had some of these words in mind when he broadcast to the world two Sundays ago, that Prime Minister Churchill referred to Hitler as a "Gutter-snipe." He might even have gone further and used the phrase of Kipling, a "Herring-gutted, gutter-snipe." — (Huron Expositor, Seaforth, Ont.)

Write the Boys

THE Canadian Troops in Britain are not idle. They are kept fit all the time by the most intense training. Few spare moments come to the troops over there except when on welcome leave. Their movements are restricted, too, and there are not so many welcome days now when the mails come in. During the uncertainty it is the privilege of ourselves to write often to the boys over there. They want the news of home, those home details that are not in the newspapers. Nothing is too small to tell them in letters and the more mail they get the less is the monotony of drilling and waiting felt. The day the mail is distributed is one of the soldier's happy days. They want lots of letters. The lack of information from home is the bugbear of the boys and they are interested in all that happens in the home district. We must keep writing to the units overseas and they more than ever appreciate cigarettes from Canada.—(Brandon Sun)

A Common Effort

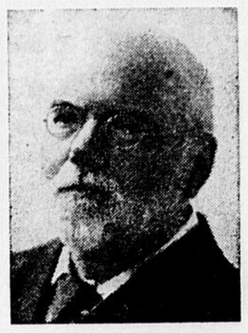

INTO our office come weekly newspapers from all over Canada—from the towns of British Columbia and from the towns of the Maritime Provinces. The reading of these gives a wonderful review of the activities of our great country. At the present time they are all ringing with news of great endeavours and great events in connection with the war —the Victory Loan, Recruiting, the Queen's Canadian Fund, Red Cross activities, War Funds, Salvage and many other activities. The same activities are taking place in Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and the Crown Colonies. How vast is the effort that is being made! Sometimes it is slow but how mighty is the preparation that is under way! Hitler may have had his victories in Europe, but can he crush all this? Some day—and perhaps soon—he will feel the impact of a mighty united empire that will crush HIM.—(Simcoe Reformer)

JAMES HAMILTON (Cont'd.)—Next day Hamilton went for the cow and sheep. On getting into the canoe, was afraid the latter would not follow, but when she saw the cow get into the water she plunged also. Afterwards Hamilton's brother got a two-year-old steer and he another, which made a team of oxen. The first horse he recollects is one bought by Hunter and he borrowed it one fall to take a grist (two bags, one slung on either side) to a small mill a few miles from Chateaugay, N.Y. The roads were bad and he recollected the horse walking along on slabs placed to cross a mudhole near Athelstan, the only horse he ever knew who could do so.

He and his brother had cut a stack of beaver hay at the lake, which they tried to bring in on two sleds, drawn by an ox to each, during sleighing, but they left most of it sticking to the branches. They did not go back for more. His brother, who was a baker, intended to settle beside him, but died in Montreal of cholera in 1832.

The burned axe Hamilton took out to the settlement at the lake where there was a blacksmith, but who had no forge. He heated the axe by a fire on a stump, but when used it flew into pieces. No axe was to be had nearer than Fort Covington or Montreal.

He helped the Caldwells to raise their shanty at Ogilvy's. In 1823 or 1824, Brown came as agent and lived at Hamilton's, bringing pork as a contribution to the larder, as did also the surveyor on Sundays or when engaged nearby.

Hinchinbrook was surveyed one year and Godmanchester the next, and lots were fast taken up. Hamilton and his brother got lots on the Godmanchester side. He got a lot on the river from a man named McKinlay, who got a lot farther back in Hinchinbrook. He gave him $10 for some corn and potatoes on the river bank, which paid for location ticket. Dr. Munro had a lot his brother desired, but he wanted $4.00 an acre, which it was not worth. Brown bought, from a Frenchman, 300 acres embracing Ewart's and Graham's lots, for 75 cents an acre. Hamilton was content and cheerful throughout all his struggles, his ambition being to get land of his own. His wife also made the best of matters, and they were very happy.

From Dewittville down there had been a side road but it was impassable in wet weather, as the bridge had been destroyed in 1813. From below the blockhouse the banks were fairly well settled by the French. Hamilton cut out a road from his lot up to Brown's line, who did the rest into the village. On his lots there were pine and cedar stumps, showing the lumbermen had gone over them before he came. He carried a grindstone on his back in from the lake. The usual way to get up from Montreal was to travel along the north shore and cross at McGee's. Much lumbering was going on before and after he came, especially from Dewittville.

HIRAM GENTLE—Born in 1799 in Vermont. Father, Andrew, was a native of Stirling, Scotland, and emigrated to the U.S. in 1784, where he married Annie Gale, who was born in Connecticut. He was a widower, having been married in Scotland. Not liking the U.S. government and being a strong Loyalist, he left Vermont, where he had been living and where I was born, in 1801 for Hemmingford, and took up a lot opposite Sweet, where he resided until 1809. (Had to leave, I think, on account of terms asked by owner, Woolryche, of Montreal.) In 1808 he prospected west and took up lot in Franklin, on which he died, and on which he put up a log house. Moved with family in March, 1809. There was one settler before him, Jacob Manning, who came in 1807. The Seigniory had surveyed the land in 1804, and in 1809 there was a considerable emigration from the U.S., and a great number of the lots on the same range were taken up. Gentle moved his possessions upon two sleds, made narrow for the purpose, and drawn by a single ox. He drove the foremost and the other followed. This was because of the narrowness of the road or track, which consisted merely of a zig-zag pathway from which the trees had been hewn. The road went to Barrett's and bent down to Stockwell's. The loft of the house had sawn boards got at the mill on the English River, and which were all taken afterwards, one by one, for coffins for the settlement. The floor was basswood slabs. There were three windows of six panes; thinks the glass was got in Montreal.

Andrew Gentle was a brewer by trade and was not a handy man and could not handle an axe well. He got along by turning in day's work with his oxen in exchange for chopping, etc. The first crop was corn. There was a primitive grist mill on the creek at Ames', with a wheel like a tub, the water striking against an arm. The ground stuff was carried upstairs and put into a bolt which was turned by hand. In summer, due to lack of water, nothing could be done. The mill was put up by the Seignior and run by Sherman, an American. Gentle had brought a malt mill with him, in which he would grind his corn roughly. Though sometimes short, he never got completely out of food. Not so his neighbors, however, who had sometimes to go to Rouse's Point with an ox or horse and bring back a bag or two of Indian meal in back of them, which cost $3.00 a bushel. There was no whiskey, and none was to be got until after the war. People lived happily. Fall wheat grew well and yielded 20 bushels; also potatoes. His father brought four cows with him when he moved in.

Americans Take Over Iceland But Canadians And British Still Have Much Work to do in the Atlantic—Possible Demand For Wheat

The capital of the Dominion is immeasurably pleased that the swelling tide of American intervention in the war of freedom is now lapping the shores of Iceland. What will result from the recent landing of marines and bluejackets in Iceland and the setting up of naval bases by the United States fleet on that North Atlantic island is not considered here as merely a matter of conjecture. Not only is the fan of hemispheric defence unfolded still further into the Atlantic, invading waters designated by the Nazis as a war zone, but it means the task of delivering war equipment from this continent to Europe will be made much easier and more effective. There will, of course, be plenty of work still for the British and the Canadian navy in the Atantic, particularly that of the British will be the major task, but a new and vigilant eye is trained on the sealanes of the North Atlantic and the people of Britain have received in practical form renewed assurance that the Americans intend to see that their material aid to Britain will be delivered to British shores. The attitude of the United States and the practical steps that country takes in assisting the cause of freedom, move forward under their own momentum. Neither the United Kingdom or Canada interferes. Canadians everywhere concur in the expectation of Prime Minister Churchill that "the British and United States naval forces may find it advantageous to assist each other in guarding the supply lines between Britain, Iceland and the United States." It remains, however, for the Americans to show what form their patrol and guard of the sealanes of the North Atlantic from their new vantage point in Iceland will assume. One thing is certain. The establishment of garrisons from the United States in Iceland makes the island more secure against possible Nazi attack. If Iceland were in the hands of the enemy it would be a very dangerous point of attack on the vital supply lines from North America to Britain.

In these days of suspense and anxiety there is not time for complacency. The eyes of all have to be set on the goal of victory, but in the days to come Canadians will undoubtedly feel justifiable satisfaction in the part that Canada has been playing in the gradual process of welding together in a common purpose the two great English speaking democracies on whose shoulders rests the future of the world.

TO PARODY a selection from Longfellow's "Hiawatha" it looks as though some of our City Fathers are nearing exhaustion. The municipal edict against "shorts" is apparently aimed against tennis players who seek freedom of action during the course of strenuous exercise. Alderman Eugene Thibault is reported to have stated, at Monday's session of the council: "If certain games cannot be played without being naked, we do not need those games." This was in reply to a comment by Alderman Ross that many girls would give up tennis.

Nobody will disagree with Alderman Thibault's statement but his remark is one of the reasons why the City is putting itself in an utterly absurd position. It is a glaring exaggeration, as stupid as it is untrue.

Dominion, provincial and municipal laws already provide necessary measures to prohibit obscene displays and surely tennis games played "naked" would come within this category. It is carrying the "love" phraseology of tennis a little too literally.

The writer has played tennis on the very large majority of tennis courts in this province and has always shown a preference for flannels. There is of course a time in life when one becomes more sensitive and possibly our aldermen are visualizing their own personal appearance should they grace the tennis courts in actual competition.

We would like to remind the aldermen that the morals of young people are safer on the tennis courts than possibly anywhere else. Tennis is a game which calls for concentration. It is a healthy, wholesome pastime and if the council would encourage tennis playing to the detriment of "street walking" something worthwhile would have been accomplished.

Mayor Joseph Labrecque dislikes the soubriquet of "Holy City" as applied to Sherbrooke by several Montreal newspapers. Why? It would be a splendid tribute to Sherbrooke if it could justify the use of

THE CHILDREN'S COLUMN

PRACTICAL KINDNESS

From a young lad comes this story:

One noon as I was coming to school with two girls whom I knew well, we heard a cat meowing as if he'd been in trouble. We stopped and called to him to see is he belonged to someone we knew, but he didn't belong to anyone around here. We kept on walking and he followed us.

One of the girls picked him up and we brought him to the school He was thin and looked sick. A while after he was in school we found a sore under his throat as if he had been shot. Our teacher told us to keep him and nurse him back to health. We named him "Tiger," for he was striped nearly like a real tiger. His sore is nearly well now. We're very proud of him now that he's getting well.

Every morning we say a prayer for the animals. It's like this:

"Our Father, help us to be kind, help us to put ourselves in the animal's place. Help us to do as we would be done by, to ease the burdens of the weary, to remember those in bonds as bound with them, to speak for those who cannot speak for themselves, and never to find our sports in the pains of animals or birds."

It is a very nice prayer. Sometimes when I am alone I say it to myself.

GAMES FOR CHILDREN:

"I Sell My Bat, I Sell My Ball"

A ring is formed with one child in the middle, who is called the "drummerman." Whatever this child does the others mimic, movng round as they do so, and singing the following words:—

"I sell my bat, I sell my ball,
I sell my spinning wheel and all;
And I'll do all that e'er I can
To follow the eyes of the drummer-man."

Anyone who does not at once imitate the "drummer-man" must pay a forfeit and take his place as "drummer-man."

Judge and Jury

The company should be seated in two lines facing each other, and one of the party should then be elected to act as judge. Each person has to remember who is sitting exactly opposite, because when the judge asks a question of anyone, it is not the person directly asked who has to reply, but the person opposite to the judge. For instance, if the judge, addressing one of the company asks: "Do you like apples?" the person spoken to must remain silent, while the person who is opposite to him must reply before the judge can count ten; the penalty on failing to do this or answering out of one's turn is a forfeit. A rule with regard to the answers is that the reply must not be less than two words in length, and must not contain the words: "Yes," "no," "black," white," or "grey." For the breaking of this rule a forfeit may also be claimed.

Dahlia's Whatnots

A saying comes to us from the Old Country which affirms that "No man can thin his own turnips." There, especially in the sheepraising districts, very many acres are sown in turnips. But one need only to thin a very short row in the vegetable garden in order to have a fellow feeling for the owner of the extensive turnip field. To pull that fine big plant which is flyhting its neighbor so manfully is almost as mentally painful as having a tooth pulled—oh, no, not an eye tooth, but a baby tooth, perhaps. And I said "mentally." But it's bad, bad. As for the hireling, he is apt to love the turnips no more than the sheep, and so carry on his thinning operation in a detached, cold-blooded way, which produces big turnips and plenty of them, and fat sheep, and cold cream!

Children resemble young growing things of the plant world, and it is a merciful dispensation which makes them look to their fathers and mothers like elegant specimen plants whom none other can touch, always precious and almost always precocious in their parents' eyes.

A rumor has been heard that a woman is to run in the approaching by-election in our county—nay, two women. A second woman frequently spoils the fun, and would in this case. It would be very much more interesting to see the first woman beat a man in a Quebec election. If the female candidate is decent and neither a Nazi nor a Communist, I vow I shall vote for her, irrespective of race, religion, or party. Because she is a woman? Because she is a woman—and because Quebec's Quebec. A few women M.L.A.'s could give help of inestimable value in waking up the province to the dawn of a better day, to the enlightenment of compulsory education and other agencies of reform.

For some time we heard it prophesied that Russia would not enter the war, but would stand back grimly gloating to see Britain and Germany wearing eath other down. Now the world stands almost awestricken as Germany and Russia strive and strain like two giants in a Herculean struggle.

Handmade articles, rugs, cloth, pottery, furniture, ship models, etc., have a particular fascination and value. While such art has never become as popular here as in European countries and has not attained any great reputation out of the country except with our nearest neighbors, the Americans, yet it is being developed more and more of late years. This is especially true of New Brunswick.

The additional cash income from the sale of such work is very welcome, and so is the money spent by American tourists who come looking for distinctive souvenirs.

About three years ago the weaving of rugs and hangings was started in the outlying homes of New Brunswick, where domestic wool supplies about 50 per cent of what is needed for the work.

Looms can be got for about $30, and much of the weaving can be done any place from blueprints supplied by the Provincial Government. From 400 to 500 girls are now working at this hand-weaving. Buying and selling organizations are needed and leadership is required in order to develop distinctive and artistic designs. Markets have been found in large departmental stores in Montreal and Toronto.

At St. Andrew's, Miss G. Helen Mowat of the Charlotte County Cottage Craft has guided the farm women to master the art of making hand-turned pottery from native clay, also embroidered handbags, and other articles.

At Moss Glen in the St. John area, Kjeld and Erica Deichmann, a young couple, have developed their own designs in pottery to a point where their product is said by art critics to be as fine as the best in Chinese art.

What is claimed to be the finest art gallery east of Montreal is the work of the Mount Allison Handicraft Guild at Sackville. This is an association of students who are defraying college expenses by marketing beaten metal-work, jewellery, wood carvings, pottery, and distinctive tweeds and homespuns. They do their own designing of patterns in native wool, the work being supervised by Miss Elizabeth MacLeod.

Madame Blanchard of Acadian descent, works at Caraquet, using designs handed down for generations in Acadian homes for the making of hooked rugs and homespuns. She also makes fine linen from flax grown by herself.

The Education Department sponsors a youth training plan for rural women. They learn weaving, the making of clothing, and related arts, being taught the artistic principles of design and color. Homespuns are sold to visitors in shops all over the province.

Similar work has been done on a more limited scale in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, and the hooked rugs of the Cape Breton women find a market in Boston and New York. If the war brings more tourists this summer it should encourage such handicrafts.

The bride, who entered the church with Mr. M. G. McIntyre, was given in marriage by her mother. She wore a gown of white net over taffeta with net veil held in place by a bandeau of orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Mrs. Irwin Orr, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a pink organdie dress and a shoulder length veil of pink tulle. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses.

Miss Beverley Barter, cousin of the groom, and Miss Audrey McIntyre, niece of the bride, as bridesmaids, were similarly gowned in blue organdie with matching tulle veil. They also carried Talisman roses. Mr. Ashton Taylor acted as best man for Mr. Barter. The ushers were Mr. Ivan Barter and Mr. Eric McIntyre. Mr. Anderson, the bride's mother, wore a gown of turquoise blue with beige accessories. Her corsage was of pink carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Kerr, after which Mr. and Mrs. Barter left on a short honeymoon and upon their return will reside at 5632 Bannantyne Ave., Verdun.

Hemmingford

On June the 29th, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Tobin and some friends motored to St. Johns, Que., and enjoyed a very pleasant day. The occasion was their 20th wedding anniversary.

On Dominion Day, Miss Monica Murray was pleased to have some of her friends gather to celebrate her 14th birthday. Supper was served on the lawn. The table was centred with a beautiful cake which all enjoyed. All left wishing Monica many more happy birthdays.

Guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Tobin were Mr. and Mrs. Adrian F. Murray and little daughter, Joan of L.I., New York, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Murray and family of Plattsburg, N.Y.

Teach Use Of Make-up

Schoolgirl Must Learn to Apply Powder Correctly

When your daughter begins to borrow your compact now and then and dabs on a bit of lipstick and maybe some rouge when you are not around, you might as well do something constructive about the cosmetic situation so far as she is concerned.

The real issue is not whether the high school girl should put make-up on her face, but whether she uses the right shades for her particular skin and gets them on correctly.

The average high school girl does not need rouge. Exercise and plenty of fresh air make for natural bloom on the cheeks. However, if your daughter is sallow and hates it, get a small pot of cream rouge which matches her natural blood tones. Teach her the importance of using it sparingly and applying it evenly.

Unless she is a true brunette with olive skin she will probably need a fairly light shade, and certainly a dry thin-looking powder, not a heavy, oily one.

A very young girl is most flattered by a rather dry indelible lipstick which will never look caked or excessively greasy. Teach her to wipe her lips, apply the lipstick, let it set, then remove the excess.

Heavy perfumes are not for the young and unsophisticated either. Light floral odors or, better still, toilet waters and scented colognes are much more suitable.

The Authoress of Black Beauty ...

MARSHALL SAUNDERS, C.B.E.

—o—

Come April 13 each year there is in the assignment book of Toronto newsrooms a story that's a "must." It's Marshall Saunders' birthday interview.

This year Miss Saunders' birthday fell on Easter Sunday, when she reached her eightieth milestone well and happy among her pets—a hundred-odd canaries, a pigeon, and a dog—there's always been a dog. Friends from far and near send greetings. Those who could called in person at her pretty home in Glengowan Road, Toronto.

Miss Saunders, Companion of the Order of the British Empire, who ranks among the honorary members of the Canadian Women's Press Club, has been a member since 1913. Toronto branch gatherings can count on her sunny presence if she can possibly be there among "her girls".)Press Club members are always "her girls," though her interests run in many directions, among them the Humane Society and the English Speaking Union which gave a party in honor of her eightieth birthday.

Notable Record

It's almost fifty years, forty-eight to be exact, since a young Canadian woman entered in a story-writing contest a simple tale of a little lop-eared mongrel dog she had known and loved at Meaford, Ont. Her entry, "Beautiful Joe," won the prize and since has sold more than 1,500,000 copies, a record that has been surpassed by the work of only one other woman writer, Harriet Beecher Stowe.

"Beautiful Joe" has been translated into many languages, including Esperanto. The latest version is Korean. Arrangements were under way for its translation to Polish when the war came to that unfortunate country. Miss Saunders is sure that the children of Poland will read it some day in their native tongue.

Miss Saunders says modestly, "I can't understand it," when an interviewer asked regarding its success. "I'm not vain or conceited about my writing and the wide appeal this book has shown is beyond me. Other people I know write perfectly charming books. But they don't sell like this one. I don't know the answer."

She has written in all some twenty-seven books, and promises to do one more—the story of her life.

Native of Halifax

A native of Halifax, Marshall Saunders' father, the Rev. Manning Saunders, a Baptist minister, was a great scholar. She learned Latin at his knee. A graduate of Acadia University, she attended school in Scotland and in France, and has travelled widely. Her childhood, she recalls, was extremely happy. Her parents set her an example of pity and regard for the unfortunate, and especially for the underprivileged of the animal world. Her love of birds and animals has been an outstanding characteristic of her life.

Household Hints

NEW DESK FROM OLD COMMODE

A twelve-year-old lad is now happy with a "new" desk which was until recently a dusty old commode tucked away in the attic. It had a rack across the back on which a "splasher cloth" had once been hung, one long drawer across the top, and two smaller ones on one side. A door, which took up the same amount of space as the drawers, was on the other side.

The first thing to be done in starting the old commode on its journey to become a desk, was to remove the splasher rack from the back, thereby leaving the desired flat top. Next, the door was taken off by unscrewing the hinges; then the floor boards were sawed out of this compartment, and presto! there was the knee space for the desk.

Some one, in a misguided attempt at beauty, had painted the whole thing pink, so the next task was to use paint remover judiciously and copiously. This resulted in the uncovering of a beautiful oak grain which needed nothing but a vigorous sandpapering and several coats of wax to give it the soft depth of finish which the lad wanted in his finished desk.

Its attractiveness was enhanced by the mellowness the wood of the original article had acquired through its many years, and the delightful old drawer handles and castors gave it a dignity that its modern young owner delights in.

EXCESSIVE HEAT AND LACK OF MOISTURE SLOWS CROP GROWTH

Growth of all grain and other crops has been retarded by excessive heat and lack of moisture, a telegraphic report of the Bank of Montreal shows. Corn and tomato plants are making slow progress and root crops are backward. Haying has commenced; in most districts the crop will be well below average. Pasturage is generally in only fair condition. Tobacco plants are making slow progress and have suffered damage from winds and heat. Orchards promise well. The yield of strawberries is light. More moisture is urgently needed in nearly all districts.

Chief Abel Watetch (centre) was also a private with the 195th and was guessed at Hill 70 in 1917. Mr. King joined the chiefs in smoking the pipe of peace after inspecting the all-Indian platoon of a Regina regiment. All recruits in this platoon come from the Peapot Reserve and are following the Great War example of their chiefs.

"'Ere," called Harry after her, "What are you running away like that for?"

"Well, seein' that there's nobody about but us two, I thought maybe you'd try to kiss me," giggled Lizzie over her shoulder.

"How could I, with this 'ere pig under me arm and the tub under t'other?"

"Well," faltered Lizzie, "I was afraid you was thinkin' of putting the pig down and the tub over it."

She: "In the street. I must have been carrying my umbrella carelessly, for he bumped his eye into it. And I said, 'Pardon me,' and he said, 'Don't mention it—I have another eye left'."

German Spies Not Greatest Worry, But People Who Do Not Mean Any Harm

Jig-Saw Puzzle of German Spies—Agents Depend Largely Upon Unpaid and Unwitting Helpers—Methods Not Dramatic—Ramifications Extend Far and Wide

By BERNARD NORMAN,
Famous Lecturer and Authority on International Affairs

An officer in the French counter-spy service once remarked to me: "Our greatest problem is not the German spy, but people who do not mean any harm."

He was right. I could quote dozens of confirmatory examples from my own experience. Some of the men reading these lines will remember the Battle of the Somme in 1916. The first idea was a surprise attack—by far the best form. Information continuously leaked over to the Germans, however. I was one of the plumbers deputed to trace the leak.

I went back to Amiens, the great railway centre. My disguise was very simple; no whiskers or grease paint. I was a British private soldier and I pretended to be half tight—a very easy disguise. For three weeks I hung about public houses frequented by French railwaymen.

It was all rather boring. Then one evening I met a Frenchman who turned out to be a signalman. Rubbing his hands, he announced to his friends at the bar: "Ah, my lads, the old Boche is going to get it in the neck now. Another 11 trainloads of ammunition up today—two trainloads of guns. Old Jerry is going to taste his own medicine."

That might be a flash in the pan, so I went back the next night and the next. When I arrested that man he nearly went through the roof.

"What!" he cried, "me helping the enemy! My dear sir, you never made a bigger mistake in your life—it's exactly the other way around. My friends at the bar were rather down in the mouth because of the knocks we've been taken at Verdun. I set myself to cheer them up—and I've done it. Helping the enemy indeed! I've been performing a valuable national service!"

German Among Friends

He was quite sincere. I never saw a man so taken back as that signalman, when during his trial I was able to prove that among his friends at the bar was a German agent, gratefully lapping up all the information he handed out. I never heard a man sob like it in my life—never want to hear a man sob like it again. But all the sobbing in the world could not save him and—far more important—all the sobbing in the world could not save the lives of thousands of British soldiers; lives which might have been saved if the Somme had been a surprise attack.

Instead, as some of my readers can confirm, the Germans knew everything we did, because men like that French signalman could not keep their mouths shut.

Here is one of our most serious problems of the war.

It is important to realize that everybody knows something which Hitler would like to know. The information may be gained at work, or from relatives, in factories or in the forces. It may only be fragmentary, but it is none the less important.

Many people help the German Secret Service merely because they do not know how it works. Perhaps they have been misled by the films—they are looking for a man with a face of a Conrad Veidt and a bevy of glamorous blondes.

German agents depend very largely upon their unpaid and unwitting helpers. Their methods are not dramatic, nor do they need to be. Each day may provide them with fragments for their jig-saw puzzles.

The ramifications of those puzzles extend far and wide. And that is the lesson for Canada.

NEW DAIRY PRODUCT

A new dairy product has been evolved in Britain from whey by research workers of the West of Scotland Agricultural College. It is similar in all respects to first-class buttermilk. Since bakers in Britain are prohibited from using milk or milk-powder, the new product, which can be made commercially with existing equipment, should be of particular value at the present time.—Dairy News Letter.

TRACTORS IN BRITAIN

There are now 90,000 tractors engaged in British agriculture. This is an advance of 70 per cent on pre-war resources, and represents the same number of tractors used in the Ukraine, the granary of the Soviet Union.

NEED SHADE

White pigs especially need shade, even if it is nothing more than a bit of straw supported by a canopy of poles. In addition, if a good ration is given to ensure thrift, and a post or two is wrapped with burlap kept soaked in oil, sunscald will be largely avoided.

Newfoundland Fishing Being Modernized

Quick Freezing and Other Changes Coming in—Reason For the Conversion—Raise Income

Long the mainstay of the Newfoundland economy the fishing industry is undergoing a process of streamlining. The tiers of flakes that decorate scores of fishing villages are scheduled for removal.

With the passing of salt cod as "kingfish" of the industry, one of the Island's most ancient industries will go, but in its place a huge fresh and frozen and far more remunerative industry is rising.

The government is trying to bring about the transition as quickly as possible, but it is a large order to uproot the livelihood and methods of generations and replace them by a brand new enterprise.

As yet the fresh and frozen industry has not assumed major proportions, but it is growing lustily and holds considerable promise.

Would Raise Income

Reasons for the conversion are:

(1) The salt codfish business is antiquated and its markets are far afield and poor. Return to fishermen and producers in the fresh and frozen business would be more than doubled. It is estimated that fresh and frozen fish of a given quantity would be valued at $1.4 million. The same quantity of fish would bring $542,125 if salted. The former product would thus yield $27,875 more than salt cod.

(2) Large new markets could be opened for Newfoundland fish if a modern industry were established. The U.S. offers an almost unlimited market for fish, and if a trade rapprochement can be effected in the near future fish from the Island colony might be distributed in one of the largest consumers in the world.

Quick Freezing

Quick freezing is relatively new, having been undertaken for the first time in 1930. This enterprise has made considerable headway in the U.S. because of the spread of electrical refrigeration units and chain store distribution of goods.

In its survey of Newfoundland fisheries the Dorr enquiry saw the need for modernizing the industry. It recommended the conversion of the fisheries from a primarily salt codfish industry into one processing by freezing, canning or other methods, its products. It also suggested wider utilization of by-products and waste.

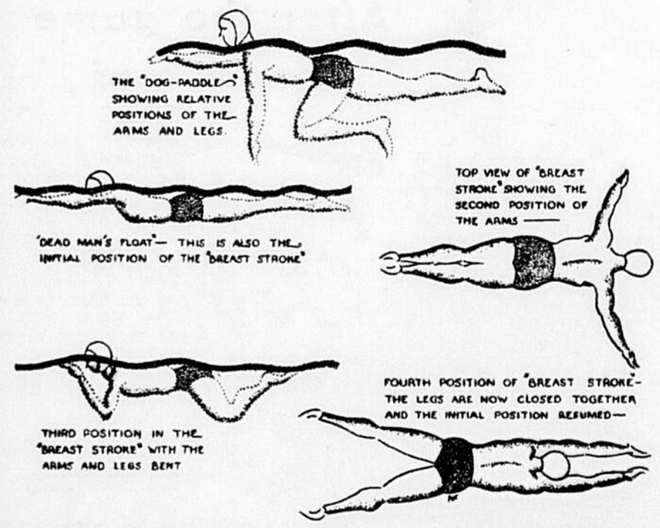

The report advocated calling in outside experts familiar with the problems facing the Newfoundland industry.

The possibilities of developing a herring meal industry were seen and mismanagement of American operators blamed for failure of previous efforts along this line.

The value of attractive packaging and distinctive labels were pointed out in the report as well as a comprehensive program of advertising.

Substantial strides were made by Newfoundland in 1940 in the processing of fresh and frozen fish. There was a marked increase in quantity of fish exported as fillets and iced fish. Halibut, herring and salmon were exported in much greater volume.

-- How To Swim --

Confidence—that simple word expresses the chief requisite of the beginner who desires to swim and until you realize that your body will not sink until you force it under, you will not be able to make progress. The simplest method of demonstrating this fact is to stand in shallow water, take a deep breath and then throw yourself face downward on the surface of the water, pushing off from the bottom with the feet. Keep the whole body stiff with the arms outstretched in front of you. Immediately you will find that you are floating face downward on the surface of the water and that you can stay in that position as long as you have sufficient air in your lungs. If you are learning in a swimming pool you can cover quite a distance by pushing off with your feet from the side of the pool and floating across the tank, but be sure and do it in the shallow end of the tank. If possible, have an experienced swimmer demonstrate this method of floating which is known as the Dead Man's Float, and then you will know just what happens to you as you float on the surface.

Another beneficial exercise to practise which will give you confidence is to take a deep breath, duck your head under water, open your eyes and look around. Stay under as long as you can hold your breath. If you are in the swimming pool you might grasp the railing at the side of the pool, take a deep breath and then stretch yourself out face downward in the water and keep your eyes open. This will give you the same feeling you will have when swimming. You can practise holding on to the railing with one hand, one finger, and finally you will have confidence to float without holding on at all.

This preliminary work may sound and appear to be monotonous but it is absolutely essential for the majority of beginners. Unlike dogs or other four-footed animals, man cannot swim as soon as he is thrown in the water simply carry out the same motions as when they are walking and their bodies lie low in the water with only their heads sticking out. Unfortunately, as far as swimming is concerned, man walks in an upright position on his two legs, and then when thrown into the water he has to learn an entirely new set of motions, using his arms and legs to propel his body, which is stretched flat in the water.

If you have carried out the preceding exercises you will have found that your body does not sink when you lie face down in the water but you cannot breathe in this position and as soon as you raise your head to breathe you will find that your body starts to sink, and to offset this you will have to make some movement with your hands or feet to keep the body afloat. This brings us to the simplest method of swimming.

The Dog Paddle is the method of swimming that seems to come naturally to most beginners. Lying face downward in the water, the feet and legs are moved as if you were walking on them. This allows the head to be lifted out of the water high enough to breathe. The speed gained by such a method of swimming is not very great but it serves the purpose of giving the beginner confidence in himself, showing that it is actually possible for him to keep afloat in the water and breathe at the same time.

The next simple stroke is the Breast Stroke, and this also allows the head to be lifted out of the water. This point is emphasized because in practically all other strokes the face is kept in the water and the head is only turned on its side while a breath is being taken. The Breast Stroke is started by lying flat on the surface with the arms stretched out in front of the head and the legs stiff. The next motion is to sweep the arms backward and slightly downward, with the palms of the hands turned outward and the hands brought up under the chin with the palms together and the knees spread outward. The arms are now pushed straight forward into the original position and the legs are kicked out sideways, finally being brought together. This final motion is very important as the water pushed out from between the legs gives quite an impetus to the body. The body is now allowed to glide in the stretched position and then the stroke started all over again. The breath is taken as the arms make their backward swing and is exhaled gradually during the rest of the stroke.

It it so happens that you are swimming quite a distance you will become tired and desire to rest. One of the easiest ways of accomplishing this is to float on your back, face upward, keeping the legs together and the arms stretched out beyond the head with the thumbs touching. Having attained this position, you will now have to find your balance. If your legs attempt to sink, bend the knees slightly and lean the head back a bit farther. Breathe with quick, shallow breaths and do not empty the lungs completely. If you do not succeed the first time keep practising and soon you will find that you can float without any effort whatsoever.

In this article we have dealt only with simple strokes, but the beginner who thoroughly masters these has confidence when in the water, and will be able to take care of himself. The more difficult and faster strokes can easily be learned when the swimmer no longer has a fear of keeping his face in the water or going beyond his depth.—Canadian Red Cross Junior.

Indeed it did one good just to pause for a moment and watch the sandwiches, cake and coffee disappear. One boy was heard to say, "Boy, isn't that cake good?" Such expression only serves to refill one with greater determination to help in every possible way to brighten the path of the lad who today is wearing the King's Uniform and who is preparing himself to help defend his native soil, and to assure those who come after him of the freedom and privileges which have been handed down to us by our forefathers.

Rev. Knowles, on behalf of the boys, expressed his sincere thanks to the Ormstown ladies for the splendid evening which they had provided. Rev. C. L. Taylor stated that the ladies of his congregation were only too pleased to help in such a worthy cause. Eight Seamen Charged With Illegal Entry

Formerly Engaged in Allied Shipping, Seamen Get Brief Sentences—Arrange Deportation

Eight seamen, formerly engaged in Allied shipping, who had left their boats in Canada and sought to reach the United States ports through Northern New York, were given sentences of from one to five days when they pleaded guilty to charges of illegal entry in violation of the U. S. immigration laws before Judge Grover Moscowitz in federal court at Malone, N.Y. on Monday morning.

Of the eight, two both of them Greeks, had survived torpedoing of their ships by Nazi submarines.

Sought New Berths

First to face the court were four Greeks apprehended about a month ago in the vicinity of Perry Mills.

They gave the names of Aristides Barias, 29, Vasilios Remandas, 33, George Raftopoulos, 29, and Fotios Gianniotis, 42.

The four had left their boats at Montreal, after the craft had been convoyed across the Atlantic, and had sought to reach New York to secure jobs on neutral vessels.

Each was sentenced to one day in the custody of the U.S. marshal and the immigration department will make arrangements meanwhile for their deportation.

Both Barias and Remandas are survivors of ships sunk last January by German U-boats.

West Indians Sentenced

James Scott, 43, and Edgar Josephs, 40, of Kingston, Jamaica, British West Indies, both seamen, were given terms of five days each on pleas of guilty to entering this country without reporting for inspection.

Henry George Alderton, 20, of England, who had experienced air raids in London, was given a sentence of one day. He was accused of entering the United States illegally from Canada in the vicinity of Fort Covington after leaving ship at a Canadian port.

Omaar Refail Gaston Alleyn, 29, of Belgium, who admitted deserting ship in Canada, was given one day in custody of the U.S. marshal.

James Randolph, 26, a Canadian, was given 15 days and a sentence of five days was imposed in the case of Parker Gardiner Moir, 18, of Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, both charged with illegal entry from Canada.

Contracts Are Placed For 2,000 Houses

Wartime Housing Will Alleviate Shortage Due To Abnormal Shifting of The Population—At Valleyfield

Wartime Housing Ltd., a Government company organized to alleviate housing shortages, has granted contracts for 2,000 houses and other accommodation in 10 Canadian centres from Halifax to Fort William, involving commitments of about $9,500,000, Munitions Minister Howe said on Thursday.

Supply problems in obtaining materials for the program are now being encountered, the Minister said in a statement.

Mr. Howe said a contract had just been let for 150 houses in Parry Sound and Nobel, Ont., while other extensive housing projects are being initiated in Kingston, Hamilton, Oshawa and Frankford in Ontario, Hull, Quebec and Valleyfield in Quebec, and Amherst, N.S.

"These projects, involving commitments by the company to date of approximately $9,500,000, are being undertaken to alleviate housing conditions where abnormal shifting of the population, owing to the development of war plants, has created a problem," Mr. Howe said.

"The provision of housing accommodation for munitions workers and those engaged on defence projects now is assuming substantial proportions, so much so, we are beginning to encounter supply problems in obtaining materials."

On the recommendation of its architectural staff, the company has decided to construct houses of three different types utilizing four styles of exterior finish, Mr. Howe said.

"In addition, a variety of color is being employed, and every effort is being made to avoid the appearance of regimentation in housing projects," Mr. Howe said.

In Halifax, 900 houses, 13 staff houses and two commissaries are being constructed by Wartime Housing.

Projects in other cities follow: Hamilton, 100 houses, one men's centre; Windsor, Ont., 300 houses; St. Catherines and Merritton, Ont., 175 houses each; Fort Erie, Ont., 234 houses; Welland, Ont., 100 houses, four staff houses; Fort William, Ont., 50 houses, two staff houses; Peterborough, Ont., 82 houses; Dundas, Ont., 46 houses.

OBITUARIES

The Late Theodule Galipeau

The late Theodule Galipeau was known to everyone in Huntingdon. The general public were always sympathetic to Theodule because of his encumbered ailment which he had endured from childhood. Suffering from attacks of epilespy as he did, made it very difficult for him to often perform the type of work he most liked, viz: working or operating machinery. Off and on throughout the past twenty odd years he worked at the Gleaner office, with Mr. D. L. Kelly, Dr. C. St. Onge, Dr. J. E. Caza, Mrs. Robert Sellar and to a lesser extent with many others. His late father, Daniel Galipeau, was a most proficient and skilled machinist employed by the Borden Milk Company. Theodule admired the workmanship of his father. He also admired the manner in which the Borden Company maintained the working environment of their plant, so it was little wonder he always strove to keep machinery clean, and the general surroundings of wherever he was working. Due, undoubtedly to his malady, he devoted the greater part of his time to out-of-door work. Working about gardens as he did he became more proficient at such than many others. For several years he has cared for the bowling green. This, he considered, must be given first consideration over all other jobs that might be demanding of his attention. Theodule was a strong, industrious worker and ever polite. He was scrupulously honest towards his employers as to money matters and as to hours of service accorded. His many employers all knew right well they need not worry about keeping a tab of his working hours for he always maintained a correct record.

Theodule was not all work and no play, but his pleasure was not so much given to sport as one might have expected, but it was to singing and reading. In regards to reading, he liked to read weekly newspapers. Seldom a week passed but that he would drop into the Gleaner office and get a Gleaner, La Gazette de Valleyfield and perhaps a number of other papers. Though Theodule appeared to have an over abundance of troubles throughout life, it can be truthfully said he enjoyed working, working with others and doing his level best to earn a living. The deceased was 39 years of age.

Theodule retired early on Thursday evening and he then complained of being indisposed. He was found dead in bed at about 5 a.m. on Friday. It is said that he died at about 10 p.m. on Thursday. He apparently suffered another severe attack of epilipsy from which he never recovered.

Theodule was married and leaves his widow and a family of five sons and one daughter. The funeral service was held from St. Joseph's Church on Monday morning. His sister, Mrs. Jackson and her husband of Maxville, Ont., another sister, Mrs. Galarneau of Chateauguay Basin were present.

The Late George H. Wisher

George H. Wisher, of Mooers, N.Y., passed away at his home in that village, Sunday June 29th, following an illness of about six weeks. Mr. Wisher, who was 85 years old, was most highly regarded throughout the section and his passing is mourned by a large circle of friends.

The deceased was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Wisher, of Champlain, and was born in that village in 1856. He is survived by his wife, the former Miss Eleanor Orr, and one son, William, who resides in Burlington, Vt.

Funeral services were held at Hemmingford at 2.30 p.m. Tuesday, July 1st, the Rev. W. C. Taylor, pastor of the Mooers Presbyterian Church, officiating. Four nephews: Willard, Leeward, Maxwell and Harold Orr, acted as pallbearers. Interment was in the Protestant Cemetery at Hemmingford.

A funeral service was held at 2 p.m. Tnursday at the chapel of Jos. C. Wray and Bro., Mountain street, Montreal, for Mrs. George W. Cook, who died at her home, 460 St. Francois Xavier street, Montreal on Tuesday, after a short illness. Mrs. Cook, formerly Christina Ann McBain, was 74. Her husband has been building superintendent for 37 years.

Dorn in Dundee, Que., she was the daughter of the late William and Margaret McBain, of Inverness, Scotland. She was a member of Erskine and American United Church and always displayed a keen interest in the work of the Church.

Besides her husband, she is survived by one son, Harry, a daughter, Mrs. Mervyn F. Devonport, a half-brother, Angus A. McRae, of Minneapolis, and two grandchildren, John and Ruth Devonport.

Burial was in Montreal Memorial Park.

The Late Mrs. Earl Humiston

Mrs. Earl Humiston, 30, died at 8 a.m. on Monday at her home in Chateaugay, N.Y. She had been ill since February.

Born in St. Antoine, Que., June 28, 1911, she was a daughter of Oscar and Alda Lefebvre Martin, her maiden name being Colombe Martin. She married Earl Humiston at St. Patrick's Church in Chateaugay, Dec. 18, 1930.

Surviving besides her husband and parents, are two children, Marie and Earl, all of Chateaugay. She also leaves two sisters, Mrs. Goldie Yelle, Malone, and Mrs. Clifton Yelle, Ellenburg Centre; two brothers, Rene Martin, Massena, and William Martin, Chateaugay; a niece, Shirley Yelle, of Malone, and two nephews, Gerald Yelle, of Ellenburg Center, and John Martin, of Chateaugay.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

St. Louis de Gonzague,
July 14th, 1941

To The Editor,
The Gleaner,
Huntingdon, Que.

Dear Sir:—

For the second time English-speaking people have brought to my attention the fact that French-Canadians in this locality, and it seems the general idea all over Canada, are not doing anything for the war. We may not be as demonstrative but we are as active as others in the Dominion. Some time ago an English-speaking lady solicited a contribution from me for the Canadian Red Cross Society. I told her that I was unable to make another donation as I had already made one a month or so before to Mr. Maurice Legault, who had sought contributions among the French-Canadians here. The lady in question seems to be making propaganda against the French-Canadians in regard to the war effort. I wish to inform this lady and the other English-speaking people that they have the wrong impression. Personally, I have donated to the Knights of Columbus, the Canadian Red Cross Society, who sought donations to help the soldiers, and I purchase War Savings Certificates every two months. Moreover, I was surprised to see that about fifty French-Canadians from St. Louis de Gonzague have made donations to the Red Cross and that they have received their membership cards from Montreal headquarters of this Society.

In one of its recent special editions, the Montreal Daily Herald showed what French-Canadians are doing in this war. Is it that we are not appreciated as we should be? I have arrived at a point where I ask myself if you English citizens of this parish have done as much for "La France"?

Yours truly,
O. DURANCEAU

Thinking Back ... and ... Looking Ahead

President Roosevelt Moved the United States Squarely Into the Battle of the Atlantic—Rumor Has it That A Base For the American Navy May be Established in Ireland—Soviet Union Can Muster Over 15,000,000 Men

By DONALD C. MACDONALD

LAST WEEK on the bleak shores of Iceland an historic and soul-stirring development of this second World War took place. United States Marines landed to mound guard over this sentinel isle of the vital North Atlantic shipping lanes. But the greatest significance does not lie in the mere fact that American men have pushed to this outpost of the Western Hemisphere, but rather, as L. S. B. Shapiro, Canadian columnist writing from Washington, has pointed out: "In the thunder of the week's most sensational story . . . we have missed the simplest yet the most dramatic and exhilarating angle . . . the fact that combat troops or the British Empire and the United States are standing shoulder to shoulder, guns monted, against the Nazi menace for the first time in this war."

3,900 Miles Nearer Europe

American reaction was one of resigned support. In a piece of its brilliant news reporting, Time Magazine stated succinctly what had happened and its implications for the American people.

"Early this week Franklin Roosevelt moved the U.S. squarely into the Battle of the Atlantic," Time declared. "In Reykjavik U.S. Naval forces had landed, and Iceland was in hand. From where they were, New York was 3,900 miles away, but Norway's Nazi-occupied Bergen was only 1,800 miles, Scotland's port of Glasgow only 1,600, and Berlin a mere 2,800 miles as the bomber flies. The Western Hemisphere had stretched once more. The President had taken another great step. . . . But most important of all, U.S. men had moved. They had set a precedent. They had started something it would be hard to stop."

Reporters asked Col. Frank Knox in his press interview whether the Navy had been given orders to shoot. Col. Knox is a canny man. He would not say yes. But he did not say no. It will be recalled that in his famous fire-side chat toward the close of May, President Roosevelt pointed significantly to the fact that the Nazi attack is never an outright invasion until the country has been weakened from within, and every stepping stone to its frontier has been brought under Nazi control. He warned that the security of America lay in retaining Allied control of those many island stepping stones between Europe and America. Chief among them is Iceland, from which, according to reports, Churchill had told Washington British troops would have to be withdrawn. The Americans are there.

Strategic American Outposts

This is not the end of an old adventure, but the beginning of a new one. "As Commander-in-Chief," Roosevelt said in his message to Congress, "I have . . . issued orders to the Navy that all necessary steps be taken to insure the safety of communications in the approaches between Iceland and the United States, as well as," be it noted, "on the seas between the United States and other strategic outposts." What are they? They may be the Azores, the Cape Verde Islands, even Dakar; international rumor has it that a base for the American Navy may be established in Ireland.

The President told reporters at Hyde Park during his holiday rest that he hoped the United States could stay out of war. "But he made it clear," Time Magazine adds, "that his hope was not to be confused with belief. In September, 1939, he had said, 'I hope that the United States will keep out of this war. I belief that it will.' Somewhere in the two years the belief had vanished."

Battle, Not Blitz

While the tide of events was gaining momentum hourly behind Hitler's back, the Nazi forces have found themselves facing eastward, but not moving eastward. The most significant feature of the titanic struggle on the eastern front is that it is not a blitz. It is a battle. The difference between the two is of extreme importance. The German High Command has never planned to fight a battle of position. Its aim has always been to strike with such power and surprise that a terrific momentum will be gained immediately and never lost, so that all is swept before it. Yet at the week-end, for the first time in this war the familiar communique of the first World War was announced in a revised form. It was "all quiet on the eastern front."

Never were the Germans more naive in their propagandic blurbs. In fact, "naive" is too kind a word; they were downright stupid, obviously false. For example, two of the reasons given for, first slowing down the German advance, and then halting it ("momentarily," said Berlin) were: bad weather, including a snowfall, and the necessity of clearing away such masses of wrecked and abandoned Russian war machines that the roads were blocked. Strange things happen wherever the Nazis are, but a snowfall in July will certainly be remembered as the most miraculous of all. As for the blocked roads, well, how can we disbelieve it? After all, didn't Propaganda Minister Goebbels declare in an address a month or so ago: "I always speak the truth"?

Seriously though, it does appear as though the Russian army has been able for the first time to work the "defence in depth" tactics, which have failed on every occasion earlier in this war. They have succeeded, it appears, for two reasons. First, the great area in which they have to manoeuvre. It is one thing, for example, for German mechanized divisions to rush across North-sition behind. But it is quite another venture to rush into the vast-nesses of Russia, where an advance of 150 or 200 miles does not bring you to the sea, but rather is only getting your nose into the country. The Germans have expended all the advantage of their first drive, with it the all-important element of surprise, in covering territories which Russia acquired as buffer states during the first two years of the war, ern France, or Yugloslavia, if they soon reach the sea an are able to halt for consolidation of their po-and now, just inside Russia proper, they have come up against the main Russian defences in the Stalin Line, and over the week-end they were forced to halt for a consolidation of their position. Another terrific Nazi thrust is imminent; it will likely have begun before this reaches print; but can it have the power of a secretly prepared and launched invasion?

The second reason for Russian success in, at least, halting the Germans is (as I stated in concluding last week's article) due to their number. The Germans have their formidable army of 150 divisions spread out over a front of nearly 2,000 miles. Facing them are not only a greater number of first line divisions, but back of these again, once they are mobilized and brought into the fight, are the unnumbered ranks of Russian manhood. I recall the figure quoted at the outset of the war: With complete mobilization the Soviet Union can muster over 15,000,000. Of course, the catch is that she has not the equipment perhaps not even the uniforms, available for anything like that figure.

But there they are. And from all accounts they are loyal to the regime. Meanwhile, Germany grinds out stories of her phenomenal victories. "They remind me of the story," the Russian Foreign Vice Commisar said last week, "of the hunter who shouted, 'I have caught a bear, but he won't let me go'."

WEEK AT OTTAWA

been much in the public eye in the past few days. The bacon board at Ottawa has been exercised over the bacon situation. They are determined that Canadian bacon producers will not fall down on their commitments to Britain. The British contract calls for the delivery of 425 million pounds of bacon before the end of October. More than half of this amount had been delivered by the end of June, but there is still a large part of the contract to be filled. One of the troubles has been that on account of rising prices across the border there has been an increase in hog exports to the United States. This has been particularly true in the far west. Hog grading in Canada shows an increase in the first six months of this year of about 25 per cent over the same months of 1940, but there isn't a production large enough to supply both the British and United States markets. An appeal was made some time ago to cut down domestic consumption of bacon and ham by half. Prices were raised on May first by $1.00, an increase assummed by the British government. There was a further increase of 75 cents on May 30th and a similar increase on June 24th, both of these price lifts being assumed by the Canadian government. Now there is the probability of another increase. There is a clear challenge to the whole bacon industry not to let the British food ministry down. A conference is now in session in Washington which may result in some "joint program by Canada, United States and Britain on the bacon situation.

Apple growers in the Annapolis Valley in Nova Scotia have been greatly encouraged after the economic troubles they have undergone since the war began, by the tentative sale of about 13,500,000 pounds of dried apples to the British food ministry. New methods of evaporation have produced types of dried fruits which have pleased the British palate. The order which will take care of about one million barrels of fresh apples or approximately two-thirds the year's crop will carry the industry for the year. On account of the need of conserving cargo space, the fresh fruit could not be imported by Britain in wartime.

At an international grain conference at Washington, called by the American government, representatives of the four great grain exporting countries, Canada, United States, Australia and Argentina are looking for light on the world wheat situation. The combined wheat surplus in the bins of the four countries is over 1,100,000,000 bushels and with new crops in the northern hemisphere promises to be still higher. It presents a dark picture. There is likely to be some speculation on the possible demand for wheat from Russia if stocks in the Ukraine are lost or destroyed in the war in any large measure. What these countries are seeking with the aid of British representatives is a common policy to alleviate the present glut on the markets and a joint approach to the great problem of relief in ravaged countries after the war is over.

The labor department is just now earnestly engaged in trying to find a peaceful and immediate solution to the coal mining disputes in Cape Breton which have resulted in the curtailment of coal production. It is claimed that results are promising. The department has also through a variety of agencies been explaining to the country at large the advantages which would accrue to the widespread adoption of the principle of wage adjustments to meet increased costs of living.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS . . .

this expression. It is certainly nothing to be ashamed of.

Rome is known as the "Holy City." Under the very shadows of the Vatican, the writer has seen tennis players wearing shorts. He has watched football games on Sunday when all players wore "shorts." He has taken part in these games.

Rome is not known as the "Holy City" because it banned "shorts." It is the centre of religious and educational life where men are taught to think intelligently and not arouse mischievious suspicions where no ill was intended.

We can sympathize with the aldermen in their objection to seeing ridicule poured upon our fair city. The cause should invariably be studied before the effect and the responsibility in this instance is very definitely one which must be shouldered by the City Fathers.

Tennis is too clean a game to be subjected to unworthy suspicion on the part of men who seek to introduce an element of immorality which does not exist. The "shorts" edict, and resulting explanations are a reflection on the integrity of tennis players.

We offer to take any, or all of the aldermen (the mayor included) to play tennis on any public tennis court in this province. We can play tennis "incognito" and make a mental note of any incidents which might even suggest immorality.

This would be followed up by a general visit in and around Sherbrooke where "life off the tennis courts" would be checked.

The long and short of it would most assuredly result in finding the instances of immorality among the "longs" would overwhelm the "shorts" by 2,845 to 1.

Of course there is immorality in Sherbrooke. There is in every community, but it is not found on the tennis courts even though some players do prefer "shorts."

The "shorts" law is a foolish one and the sooner it is rescinded, the better.

A Cupboard Under Wide Windows ...

This delightful painted cupboard is set under wide windows in the dining room in the home of Lottie Lehmann, the Metropolitan Opera singer. The cupboard is painted blue with the design in bright colors. The little chairs are in natural wood with perky peasant motifs painted on the backs with the seats covered in a printed cotton.

- Pleasant Homes -

By ELIZABETH MACRAE BOYKIN

PAINTED FURNITURE FOR INFORMAL ROOMS

Brightly Decorated Furniture in Pleasant Designs Suggest Ideas For Casual Rooms—Paint Your Own

WHAT a democratic world we live in—when peasant things are in vogue in smart places and hardly anybody anymore strives for elegance or grandeur. Especially for summer, simple painted furniture looks pleasant and fresh and comfortable to live with. Especially for this summer when we all seek to put our hands on earthy things, on reality, on robust designs for living. Most such things are equally liveable for the year around but summer seems to be the time we get inspired to take on such jobs.

Pennsylvania Dutch Influence

The world has invaded the quiet valleys of the Pennsylvania Dutch peoples to borrow many of their furnishing ideas. Their gay painted motifs enliven many a plain utilitarian piece of furniture and suggest charming ways to do over old furniture. Besides the possibility of a do-it-yourself paint job, several manufacturers have presented various types of Pennsylvania Dutch chests decorated with hearts and tulips, dough trough side tables with painted flower detail, chairs with painted sprays, plant stands with flower detail, open shelf cupboards with painted fruit medallions, along with wall racks, benches, corner cupboards. The favorite motifs include hearts, tulips, lilies, birds, stars, fruit, intricate penmanship scrolls, hex signs. With this furniture, use plaids and checks and stripes, printed calicos, chintzes and woven goods with documented designs, braided rugs and patch quilts, bright pottery, tinware and pewter and painted glass.

But all painted furniture needn't stem from Pennsylvania—California has given us a delightful and equally native idiom of painted decorations for simple homey furniture—their motifs being adaptations of the early Spanish and Mexican design sources and pleasant to paint on natural wood. Swiss and Tyrolean and Swedish themes are amusing for painted furniture too—it is particularly interesting to decorate your maple or pine or painted pieces with designs that reflect your own racial heritage.

The opera singer, Lotte Lehmann, has pleasant painted furniture in her dining room that recalls the charming gaiety of Austria in other days. The table, chairs and open-shelf cupboard are natural oak with jaunty painted medallions and sprays. A side chest under a window is painted blue with bright flowers while a small breakfast table and chairs are blue too with flower decoration and so is a grandfather clock. The doors of this room are covered with imaginative flowers and scrolls, while a natural wood screen has panels with painted figures in peasant costumes. The curtains and chair seats are in a printed cotton, the rug is a coarsely woven natural color and the walls are cream.

Flowers Growing Up the Wall

A neighbor of Lehmann's is musician Elizabeth Rethberg, whose old stone house wanders around on several levels. She has just finished fixing up a play room in her basement that has made still a different use of painted designs. Here the walls are white with stencilled flowers "growing" up from the baseboard. A carpenter-built cupboard with open shelves is painted bright blue with red moldings and holds a collection of interesting plates and pottery. The floor is bare for dancing, while at one end a round natural wood table and cane seated chairs made a genial spot for talking over coffee or beer.

It doesn't take a professional to achieve a creditable job of furniture painting. On the other hand, you can't expect to splash around carelessly and end up with anything nice. But if you're a careful workman and willing to follow instructions, you can embark on a painting spree with confidence.

QUEBEC CROP PROSPECTS ARE REDUCED IN JUNE

Crop prospects were considerably reduced by the dry cold weather experienced during the month of June according to the Provincial Department of Trade and Commerce. In districts where haying is under way, particularly in Montreal and Quebec, a decrease is reported varying from 20 to 50 per cent compared to last year.

Grain fields have suffered less than meadows and pastures but present indications point to a below normal crop. In some localities, what little pasturage is left has been burnt up and the cattle have been put to graze in meadows.

As farmers are getting fairly good prices for butter and cheese, they have been able to counteract the lack of fodder and to maintain dairy production at a high level by feeding the cattle increased rations of commercial mixtures.

The situation as regards agricultural pests, such as diseases, insects and weeds, remains normal and no serious trouble of this kind is anticipated.

HOW ELDERLY WOMAN ESCAPED BACKACHE

Many people think that backache is a trouble that comes naturally with advancing years, but this woman of 71 proves that it is not.

"I suffered for a long time from backache," she writes, "but put it down to my age (71). Reading your announcement, I thought I would try Kruschen Salts. I have been taking it for some time and have found great relief. I thought you would like to know it has done me a world of good."—(Mrs.) E.R.

When pains in the back are caused by inactive kidneys and failure of the digestive system to throw off poisonous impurities, Kruschen Salts will give real help in setting the matter right. Because Kruschen has a diuretic action which helps to flush your kidneys and liver. After that, your blood throws off all impurities; you get happy relief from pain.

BORDER CARDS TO BE ISSUED CANADIANS LIVING IN THE U.S.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service at Washington, D.C., announced simplified regulations to facilitate border crossings by citizens of Canada and Mexico who are permanent residents of the United States.

The new plan requires such aliens to carry only a border crossing card, obtainable at any U.S. Immigration Field Office.

Immigration visas and re-entry permits will no longer be necessary.

Border crossing cards are valid for visits up to six months and will be issued to any alien who shows that he has a legitimate purpose for his visit.

New Process, Keeping Apples Asleep All Winter, to be Tested by Sale in Spring

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

Apples from last year's crop, kept asleep by a new process so they remain as fresh as when picked, are coming on the market in May and June.

This will be the first commercial test of sleeping fruit. The apples are now in a state which literally slumbers the deepest sleep.

They have been stored [illegible] summer by four storage [illegible] York State, and also at C[illegible] versity, where this new p[illegible] been under development [illegible] four years by Dr. R. M. Smock, assistant professor of pomology.

The fruit was placed last fall in cool rooms, 40 degrees instead of the ordinary 32 degrees cold storage temperature. The rooms were tightly sealed and the oxygen of their air reduced to two per cent instead of the normal 20 per cent. At the same time the carbon dioxide was raised to five per cent, this gas coming from the fruit.

This atmosphere has been maintained steady ever since. The two per cent oxygen is just enough to keep the apples alive. They have to respire, or breathe, oxygen to live. The carbon dioxide and low oxygen puts them into deep sleep, like an anesthetic.

Slows Rate of Living

The effect is to literally slow down their rate of living, or of ageing and dying, so that they last for many months without detectable change, even in flavor.

McIntosh apples, picked in 1939 which are perfect ringers for fresh-picked apples, are on hand at Cornell. Cut one of these and there is not the slightest sign of browning about the core.

Such whiteness is amazing because in this species, even under the best of cold storage conditions, browning at the core begins about four months after picking.

At two years, however, there is a difference in flavor. It is slight, might escape notice sometimes, but it is sufficient so that no commercial plans are now under way to keep apples fresh for more than one season.

The freshness does last for a season, from one crop to the next. That in itself is a revolution for McIntosh apples.

These sleeping apples have another quality which breaks all records. After coming from the sleeping storage room, they will keep fresh in the home for three or four weeks. Usually apples at home keep well for only four or five days. These apples remain fresh because they are very slow in waking up.

Last year Prof. Smock had 3,000 bushels of the sleeping McIntoshes in his experimental storage at Cornell Agricultural College. In the spring, after McIntoshes had vanished from the market, he offered some of these to New York buyers.

These men were skeptical. They admitted the samples were apparently fresh apples. But they would not believe the fruit could keep long enough to be marketed. They bought a few sample lots at moderate prices.

In a few days Dr. Smock received a telegram from one buyer asking for all the McIntoshes. "Name your price," said this telegram.

Sell at High Figure

The Cornell supply was sold finally for a figure which was double that year's average McIntosh prices.

This year the four apple dealers and Cornell have stored about 30,000 bushels for the straight commercial test. One of the New York City dealers experimented privately.

As figured at Cornell, the sleeping storage costs about eight cents a bushel more than present commercial storage methods.

The idea for putting fruit to sleep originated as a theory of pure science in the Botany Department of Cambridge University, England. Because fruit respires, these scientists figured theoretically that reducing the oxygen and raising the carbon dioxide ought to work.

Dr. Smock has tested the theory on various fruits. It does not work for all. Learning why not, and whether something else may be substuted to get the same results, is likely to be one of the next important steps in agriculture, if the commercial tests of the Cornell apples succeed.—Malone Evening Telegram.

YOUTH KILLED AS TRUCKS COLLIDE NEAR VILLE DE LERY

Jean-Louis Giroux, 13, of Beauharnois, died in the Ste. Justine Hospital, Montreal, late on Tuesday as the result of a collision which occurred near Ville de Lery, Beauharnois County, on Monday afternoon, July 7.

Two trucks collided on the Valleyfield-Montreal road on Monday when one of them failed to stop due to the slippery roads. One of these vehicles was operated by Roland Charlebois, while Roland Montpetit, accompanied by his brother, Jean-Paul, was driving the other truck.

Two youths accompanied Charlebois. Young Giroux died at the hospital, while the condition of Jean-Paul Charlebois is reported as serious.

Provincial officer Roland Laberge of Chateauguay investigated the accident. The Montpetit brothers were returning from Montreal with a six-ton load of cement, and although their truck is a total loss, they escaped uninjured. Roland Charlebois was proceeding towards Caughnawaga when the accident happened.

Raise, Release Pheasants to Help Farmers

50,000 Pheasants Will be Released in Open Lands Of Province—Provide Profitable Side-line to Farmers

Private and organized pheasant shooting may soon be added to the Fall calendar of Quebec sportsmen.

Plans are at present under way for the propagation, stocking and release of these game birds by farmers and land owners through the formation, by a group of interested amateur breeders, of The Restoration and Game Breeders' Society, which is working in close co-operation with the Provincial Game and Fisheries authorities.

Among the aims and objects of the Society as set forth in its Charter is to encourage the breeding of exotic game and game birds under game management by farmers, land owners, private individuals, clubs and others, as well as to aid in the enforcement of the laws and regulations for the protection of fish and game in the Province of Quebec, to assist by various means the entry of sportsmen, tourists and others into the Province through the eventual betterment of hunting facilities; to encourage the establishment of private and public preserve and syndicated shoots of such game birds as the pheasant, quail, Chukar and Hungarian partridge, wild turkeys, etc., propagated and released under game management; to assist in educating the public in the value of the Province's game resources and the necessity for their protection and increase; to create a market for and to assist farmers, breeders and others in the distribution of propagated game and game birds under organized game management.

According to officials of the Society, it is hoped to raise and release some 50,000 pheasants in the fairly open lands of the Province shortly and thus provide a profitable side-line for the farmer.

CANADIAN PLOUGHS SOON DO THE JOB

SOON DO THE JOB

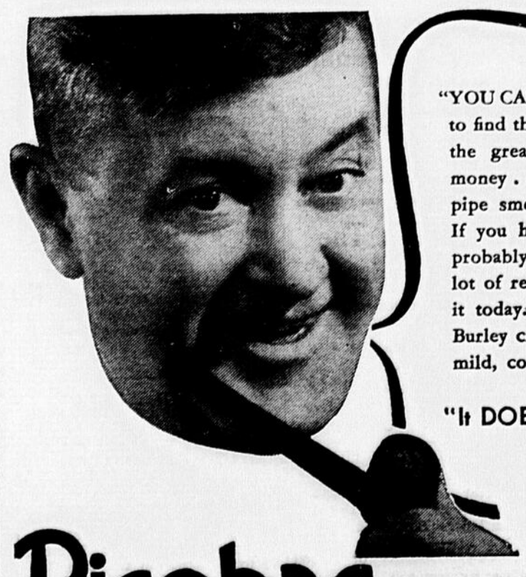

Large stretches of the Sussex Downs in England covered with coarse grass and studded with bramble, thorn, and gorse, which have not been cultivated for 1,700 years are now being opened up by Canadian tractor ploughs. Some experts whose advice was sought declared that the land was unploughable except at a prohibitive cost in labour and equipment but the East Sussex War Agricultural Committee tackled the job with Canadian ploughs which, despite the severe conditions, mastered the situation to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Prices Are Cut On Cattle Feed Assure Supply

Reduction of $3 a Ton—Increase Bacon Prices to Retain Shipment to the United Kingdom

The Wartime Prices and Trade Board announced on Monday that, effective immediately and for a limited period, the wholesale prices of bran, shorts and middlings will be reduced by $3 a ton throughout Canada. A further increase in Canadian bacon prices, raised three times in less than three months, may be necessary to retain in Canada the supplies required to ensure sufficient shipments to the United Kingdom, it was also learned a few days ago.

The reduction on the price of feeds will apply on both mixed and straight carlots, the board said.

The reduction announcement followed a meeting on Monday of representatives of the Canadian milling industry with the board and the agricultural Supplies Board.

The reduction in price was described by the board as "definitely an emergency measure to meet prevailing circumstances."

The statement added:

"It is understood that the Department of Agriculture in the exercise of its control over exports will ensure that adequate supplies of mill-feeds will be made available to Canadian users at these prices, but that all supplies of millfeeds not purchased at these new prices will be allowed export permits."

Last Friday the Wartime Prices and Trade Board and the Agriculture Department in a joint statement said that, effective July 15, the export of wheat millfeeds would be prohibited except under special licence, in a move intended to ensure that Canadian farmers may be able to get adequate supplies and thus maintain production of milk and other livestock products for Britain.

The last increase, raising export bacon prices 75 cents a hundredweight for grade A No. 1 Wiltshire sides to $18.60, was announced June 24. Like the other increases, it was designed to keep Canadian hogs from flowing across the border to markets which have been rising due to the American parity prices program.

Officials said it was "a matter of touch and go" whether the latest increase would hold the required hogs in Canada, and if it did not there seemed to be little choice but to raise the price again.

The Canadian Government bore the cost of the June 24 increase as it did a previous jump of 75 cents a hundredweight on May 30. An earlier boost of $1 a hundredweight on May 1 was carried by the United Kingdom Government.

More than half the 425,000,000 pounds of bacon being sent to Britain under contract for the year ending October 31, 1941, has been shipped, but to fill the remainder of the United Kingdom requirements the Canadian Bacon Board has encouraged Canadians to reduce their bacon consumption by one-half.

Exports of live hogs to the United States as a result of higher prices there totalled 18,751 head from January 1 to June 19, 1941, while practically no hogs were shipped in the same period last year. The bulk of the hogs, 14,491 head, were shipped from British Columbia. Only 2,026 went from Ontario.

Canadian production of hogs has increased but not to an extent to provide for the heavy British requirements and for United States exports as well, officials said. Gradings of hog carcasses in Canada in the period January 1 to June 19 totalled 2,804,000 head, an increase of 25 per cent. over the same period in 1940.

drive short distances when they might better walk. They drive at high speeds when there is no occasion to hurry, thus increasing gasoline consumption per mile. They make unnecessary trips by car.

Reference to the last edition of Canada Year Book and a little arithmetic will show that if every passenger car registered in Canada could get along with two gallons less a week, the annual saving in consumption would amount to 120,000,000 gallons, or more than 15% of normal peacetime requirements for all motor vehicles.

It should not be difficult for the average motorist to save this amount without having to buy a bicycle. Neighbors accustomed to drive to business daily could arrange to drive their cars alternate days, taking each other as passengers. The housewife whose husband leaves her the family car can plan to make one shopping trip to take place of three. The week-end pleasure driver can also cut his jaunt. Even those who use their cars mainly for business would find that they could make a considerable saving by planning their routes with economy in mind.

If all motorists pledged themselves to save two gallons weekly, they could buy war savings stamps and certificates with their savings, thereby helping their country to the extent of about $36,000,000. a year.

ed, will cause many favourable comments from the general public. The parade of the soldiers and the performance of the Military District Band is expected to render the population of Huntingdon that much more war conscious, if such is possible.

The unit is equipped with a flood-light system in the event that daylight may not prevail until the end of the manoeuvres.

The mobile unit demonstration which took place at Valleyfield on Tuesday evening was witnessed by many residents of that area. On Thursday, the unit will journey to Hemmingford for demonstrations in the afternoon and evening.

The mobile unit will leave Huntingdon at 12 o'clock noon (Standard Time) on Thursday. It will arrive at Ormstown at 12.30 and will remain there for 40 minutes, then proceed to Howick.

It will arrive at Howick at 1.40 p.m. (S.T.) and at Hemmingford at 5 p.m. (S.T.).

The unit has visited many camps and training centres during the past weeks and it is the intention of Military District No. 4 officials to have such demonstrations take place at many centres throughout their district.

1,600 Persons Visit Training Centre; View Demonstrations Of Actual Combat Exercises

Civilians Stream Into Chateauguay Military Basic Training Centre No. 41 at Huntingdon on Saturday And Sunday—Treated to Displays of Army Work—Soldiers Attend Church Services

Civilians streamed into barracks and camps all over Military District No. 4 on Saturday, taking advantage of Army Day and its "open house" policy to see for themselves the intricate training that a Canadian must undergo before he is ready to take a crack at Hitler.

The camps and military establishments of Montreal district, which includes half a dozen centres in Montreal and environs, were open to the public on Sunday as well as on Saturday. The program included sports events in some centres in which the participation of everyone was welcomed.

Besides general inspection tours of the training centres, the civilian was treated to displays of army work and actual combat exercises. Saturday's formal program at the Chateauguay Military Basic Training Centre No. 41 at Huntingdon included a general demonstration of army drills, operation of machine guns, use of gaskets and gas masks. Drills by the entire group of soldiers stationed at this training centre closed the activities for the day. Some 300 friends, relatives and others interested in the soldiers of Canada's modern army witnessed the proceedings during the afternoon.

The large gathering which streamed continuously through the quarters of the soldiers at the Chateauguay Training Centre on Sunday morning, afternoon and evening was estimated at more than 1,300 by officials of the camp.

Attend Church Services
The soldiers attended the regular church services on Sunday morning at Roman Catholic, United, Presbyterian and Anglican Churches. In the afternoon and evening the soldiers showed their guests about the camp, explaining the reasons for the different regulations which are in force in all these centres.

Army Day in Huntingdon gave many citizens the advantage of seeing the training centre, as many had not been privileged to do so since it was erected in the latter part of 1940. They thus obtained first hand information in regards to the great work the officer commanding and his staff at Centre No. 41 are accomplishing in this war against Hitlerism.

The same sort of routine was observed at St. Jerome, Joliette, Sorel and Farnham. Valleyfield held its Army Day yesterday, instead of Saturday and Sunday, as the recruiting convoy was available there on Saturday night.

At St. Jerome on Sunday morning, following mass, Mrs. Leon Mercier Gouin, wife of Senator Gouin, delivered a recruiting speech at the camp where the service was held in the open air.

Culture and Agriculture Should Mix.—
Mr. Sherrard, 5165 Decelles Ave., Montreal, and a talented American pianist, are prepared to give some concerts in the country districts during the summer. These violin and piano recitals will be offered in support of some patriotic fund or undertaking.

If there is any group now planning or wishing to sponsor a patriotic entertainment at which such music would be appreciated, they are invited to write direct to Mr. Sherrard, mentioning the date and other particulars.

Mr. Sherrard was one of the leading violinists in the large orchestra that played recently in the Montreal Music Festival under the famous conductor, Sir Thomas Beecham.

—o—

Good music has a wider appeal than many suppose. Children, it seems to me, are especially suceptible to its charms. Every opportunity should be seized to encourage this finer sense of hearing in the young because it can thus be maintained and cultivated as they grow up. Appreciation of music and other forms of art has a definite value in stimulating intellectual and spiritual development.

Physical characteristics are determined about 80 per cent by heredity and 20 per cent by environment. Intelligence is determined about 75 per cent by heredity and 25 per cent by environment. Muscular control and sharpness of senses are determined about fifty-fifty. Personality is determined about 30 per cent by heredity and 70 per cent by environment.

—o—

I take the above statement from "Stories About Twins" by Peter Hampton, Assistant Professor of Psychology in the University of Manitoba, appearing in Family Herald and Weekly Star.

—o—

Environment, or conditions that surround your life....occupation, friends, leisure pursuits, food, clothing, etc., is after all, I suppose, determined by intelligence. Personality is, therefore, developed or left dormant according to the degree of inherited intelligence. A low intelligence is satisfied with a poor environment. It's all a pretty big problem and I don't know how all those percentages are worked out.

—o—

What would they have to do with a discussion of music? Peter, a boy from the city, was listening to the radio while resting on the couch. "My, I do like that music," said he. At the end of the programme I learned that it was Montreal Symphony Orchestra playing on Mount Royal.

"I hate jazz," continued ten year old Peter. "My mother has records of the operas and she reads me the stories. And you know her friends come in and we listen to the broadcasts from Metropolitan Opera in the winter on Saturdays."

Peter plays the piano quite well. He is an extremely intelligent child in every way; very observant and curious about everything he encounters. He asks questions of any and everybody constantly but is not at all backward in exchanging information on an amazing variety of topics. He has had private tutors and attended a number of schools. He came to the farm for the first time equipped with a butterfly net, magnifying spy glass, sheath knife and odds and ends. He is interested in bugs of all descriptions and was fascinated with potato bugs. He has a definite artistic or scientific turn of mind and collects all sorts of odd knick-knacks that he finds lying about. Wants to know what they are for, etc.

Back to music again. We have two girls our selves that always listen to the Metropolitan Operas and Symphonies. Without any direction except the availability of radio programmes they have selected these as favorites.

I felt much more like loafing tonight than writing this column. But some restless sense of duty or urgency prevented me from following that inclination. By way of approval or encouragement I received a card in the mail from the Editor of Music and Home Features for Ottawa Citizen, Miss Isabel C. Armstrong. She writes: "Many thanks for the "Huntingdon Gleaner" with your story of Festival Concert, June 7th. Much interested. Mrs. Robson and Miss Herwig send you greetings. Continued success!"

This letter along with the one I received last week from Mrs. Sherrard proposing concerts in the country convinces me that there is a justifiable motive for writing all this down. I trust that some of the Entertainment Committees that are so short of good talent for their programmes will take advantage of this opportunity.

"The Farm Woman's Opportunity" is the title of a timely article in Ontario Milk Producer.

"Thrift and industry have always been rural virtues...Thrift used to mean saving. Now it means a wise use of resources. The old adage was "You cannot eat your cake and have it." The modern version is "You must eat your cake to have it." Cake is made to be eaten, not kept until mouldy; clothes are made to be worn, not to be consumed by moths; houses are made to be lived in, not closed up for state occasions; and money is made to be spent, not hoarded. And I commend this new thrift to our rural people, the wise use of goods for the production of more goods and for the enrichment of life."

Dr. J. B. Reynolds believes that women should lead in providing enrichment and beautification of rural life. It is more important for them to do this than to take the part of actual producers. "Their great opportunity is to lead in the wise spending of the farm income. To lead in beautification and social enrichment through the home, the school and the church.

"I believe it is the business of the women, with their finer idealism, to add beauty and richness to rural life by their discovery of its higher values," concludes Dr. Reynolds.
